ANNUAL MEETING OF THE MAYNOOTH UNION,

Some four years ago the ecclesiastical graduates of old Maynooth organized what is known as the "Maynooth Union," and the 4th annual assembly of the members of that body took place at the end of June last.

The "Weekly Freeman" devotes eight long columns to a report of the proceedings and an appreciation of the institution. We would gladly, had we space, reproduce the whole account of that important and impressive event; but we are obliged to confine ourselves to a few extracts, and still fewer comments.

We have no need to tell our readers that Maynooth has been, for long generations, the training school of the Irish priesthood, and any body of its former students that might be convened could not but constitute one of the most enlightened, sacred and patriotic assemblies in the land. In order to better understand the "Union," we take the following from the "Freeman":

"The objects of the Union, according to the intention of its founders, were principally two. It was meant, perhaps, primarily, as a centre of social intercourse, where old friends, long separated, might be brought together, where the generation of ecclesiastics that is passing away should mingle with those in their prime as well as with those who are just beginning to appear, and all should communicate to one another some of the spirit that characterises the period of life to which they have attained, when worldly thoughts and cares might be broken off for a little while, and one might grow young again, were it but for half a day, by revisiting the scenes in which were passed the brightest and happiest period of one's life."

"The Union was intended also as a centre of education—on a small scale it is true, but still not without importance. It is a portion of the rules that each meeting opens with a High Mass, and it was hoped that, as in the College, this ceremony would be conducted, both as to ritual and music, in strict accordance with ecclesiastical ideals and requirements. It could not fail to make an impression for good on missionary priests, who, by the very nature of their office, are removed as a rule, from personal experience of what may be done in this respect. Anyone can supply himself with theory out of a book; it is by seeing and hearing that vivid impressions are made. This is true in art, above all things; and ritual and music are some of the highest forms of art."

Then comes a statement, in general, of the proceedings prior to an elaborate report of the sermons, addresses and various papers read.

"After the High Mass came the academic proceedings, and here it was hoped that difficulties would be explained and some light might be given; that the students would share the fruits of their reflections with neighbors who might not have had equal opportunities, and might receive from others equally blessed with themselves, either pleasant instruction or the comforting hope of progress in the near or distant future. And it was suggested that there should be free speech for all—a freedom limited only by the bounds of Christian courtesy, of true motherly love and filial reverence for the authority of the Church."

"A most interesting item of the day's proceedings took place immediately before the first paper was read. Father Nagle, one of the Dunboyne students, rose to thank the Union, in the name of the students, for the gift of books in English literature made last year to the Divisional Libraries. I hope the address is fully reported; to the present writer it was the most touching thing he ever heard at any meeting of the Union. In the words of Father Nagle: "If the members of the Union had realized how crying was the need they contributed to relieve, and how eager was the students' desire to have it removed, they would not wonder at our being effusive in our thanks. . . . As the result of the donation a great need has been partially supplied; and it would be difficult to over-estimate the benefits that follow to the Irish priesthood of the future." The need is but "partially" removed as yet; may the day soon dawn when it will completely disappear."

the Church." Its scope was to point out the evolution of the laborer, from slave to serf, then to tenant or workman, till we see what we see all over the world to-day. Father Finlay touched on the effect of the French Revolution on the condition of the laboring classes, on the rise of machinery, on the remedies proposed by the Socialists for the evils thus caused to the workingman, on other suggested remedies, profit-sharing, as in M Harmel's factories, and co-operation as developed in Italy, Germany, Belgium, England, and here at home. We were thus brought to the precise measures which the lecturer wished to recommend. As a result of the little which has been already accomplished £400,000 have been placed in the pockets of the Irish workmen; English capitalists have cast grudging eyes on this source of profit; if we do not take up the movement they will. Nay, they are already doing it. And the result must be a total loss of our industrial independence, without which it is vain to struggle over the preservation of Irish Nationality. If we lose the direction of our own industries we shall never more be anything but veriest drudges, working for the ruling Anglo-Saxon race."

"Father Finlay's paper called forth three very serious criticisms—from the Bishop of Clonfert, the Bishop of Raphoe, and Canon O'Mahony. The points made were chiefly these. The co-operative movement distracts the nation just now from what should be its principal aim, the distribution of rich tracts of land among the inhabitants of congested districts, and the rooting of the farmers in the soil by a measure of compulsory sale of the landlord's interest. Moreover, it is to be feared that increased profits on the farmers' part would be made the occasion of varying the rent; and, further, it was argued that the co-operative purchase of supplies meant a serious loss to the local shopkeepers, a loss which we could not contemplate unmoved."

"Father Delany, S.J., and later Father Finlay himself, replied to those criticisms. Father Finlay was understood to say that the Co-operative Society have made up their minds that co-operative stores could not be made a success. They had failed in England, and must fail here as well. As for the claims of the congested districts and land purchase generally, he did not unfairly argue that the leaders of his movement were quite in sympathy with the endeavorers of others who are devoting themselves to these questions. Why should not both movements go on simultaneously? As for the rent difficulty, Father Finlay showed that not in it, but the remuneration in prices, is the real source of the tenant's distress. It is easy to say rent when produce is plentiful and prices high. This is the aim of the leaders of the co-operative movement. Moreover, products thus obtained are due to farmers' own skill and capital, and have a right in law to be exempted from rent. He did not add what seems to the present writer not unreasonable, that landlords have a right that the opportunities supplied by land should not be neglected. If, therefore, the co-operative movement is a reasonable means of raising the value of land in Ireland—reasonably within the capacity of Irish tenants—it might seem not so very unjust for a landlord to complain that he derived no benefit from this source of fertility. He has a right to complain of a tenant who spends his time in idleness, may we all not be idle in Ireland, if we do not adopt the means of production and of exchange which have been so efficacious in other countries?"

At the afternoon session an experiment was tried for the first time at these meetings, the audience dividing itself into three sections, at each of which important papers were read. The present writer remained in the Aula Maxima to hear Dr. O'Riordan and Father Yorke, so that he could testify to, or discuss what took place at the other sections, when Dr. Coghlan read his paper on the "Origin of Man's Body," and Father R. Walsh, O.P., his paper on "The Universality of the Deluge."

"Dr. O'Riordan's paper calls for no comment, though it promises to be the source of a powerful organization. It resulted in the formation of the nucleus of a committee for the promotion of a body which might do for Ireland what has been done for England by the Catholic Truth Society. It appeared to be the unanimous feeling of the audience that the new body should be independent of any such organization already existing; but that we should be able to make liberal use, by purchase, of the publications of these societies, supplying from our own resources material and intellectual, whatever may be necessary for our local wants. The new society is as yet but in the very first stage of its existence. It bids fair to grow and flourish and cover the land. May it go on and prosper."

When winter comes the vital forces of nature are low, and the tree stands like a solitary monument to the dead summer. In the winter of life, active men experience a similar lowering of vitality. In some the effect is startling. They loose their grip on life. They seem like monuments of a buried past. At this crisis there is need of a medicine which will nourish and build up the body, and increase its vital power. Such a medicine is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It enriches the blood, purifies it, carries off the clogging waste of the system, increases the nutrition of the body, and produces a sound, healthy condition with abundant vital power and physical energy. David Duggins, Esq., of Jones, Ohio Co., Ky. writes: "When I began taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery I think I had nervous or general debility of three years' duration. I took three bottles of the 'Discovery.' During the time I was taking it my sleep became more refreshing and I gained fifteen pounds weight, and also gained strength every day. It has been six months since I took the medicine and I still have reasonable health. I am willing to have you publish this, and also my former letter, if you wish to, and if it proves to be of benefit to any afflicted person I will feel well repaid." There is no alcohol or other intoxicant in "Golden Medical Discovery," neither opium or other narcotic drugs. The dealer who offers a substitute for the "Discovery" is seeking to profit himself, not to help you. Insist on having "Golden Medical Discovery." Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser is sent free, on receipt of stamps to cover cost of customs and mailing only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for edition in paper cover, or 50 stamps for cloth binding. SELF-RELIANCE.

As there is a difference in food so is there a difference in thought.

All this is equally true of ideas. Some are exhilarating, stimulant in their nature, uplifting, making us optimistic, hopeful, ready for any fortune that may befall.

SLEEP REQUIRED.

A proper amount of sleep at night-time is a question about which there has been a great deal of controversy.

BREATH OF PROMISE.

As a rule it seems to be the height of folly for a girl to apply to the courts in case of a breach of promise.

A shop girl in London this week got £70 in an action for breach of promise from her faithless swain.

Green Peas.—After shelling the peas, wash half the pods in cold water, cover to half their depth with cold water and simmer closely covered for three-fourths of an hour; drain and use the liquid to cook the peas in.

Who can doubt that these merciful men obtained the mercy from God so ardently desired and that they are to be immeasurably blessed in consequence?

VALUE OF FRESH AIR. — Admit sunlight at least a part of the day in as many of the rooms as is possible, especially in the sitting-room, dining-room, and kitchen, says an American journal.

DEATH IN HEADACHE POWDERS. The daily papers of the United States have of late contained reports of deaths in various cities attributed to self-administration of unknown remedies, says the Medical Record.

SURELY SOME LEGISLATION is called for. The daily papers of the United States have of late contained reports of deaths in various cities attributed to self-administration of unknown remedies, says the Medical Record.

SERVING VEGETABLES.—Not all the new methods in cooking vegetables are an improvement on the old ones, by any means, but many are decidedly so, while others are equally as good, and well worthy of adoption for the sake of variety.

Green Peas.—After shelling the peas, wash half the pods in cold water, cover to half their depth with cold water and simmer closely covered for three-fourths of an hour; drain and use the liquid to cook the peas in.

String Beans.—String beans should be covered with cold water as soon as gathered, and not be allowed to stand after they are cut up. Sufficient cooking is the exception rather than the rule.

Baked Beets.—Care should be taken in dressing beets, not to break the skins, as it detracts from their flavor as well as color.

She Had Nearly Every Complaint Common to Her Sex, and Felt She Must Die, but Her Health Now is Perfect—Story of Her Recovery.

Some of the best doctors are found in hospitals. They are called upon to treat many different diseases, and they undoubtedly do great good to suffering humanity.

Baked Onions.—Pare even-sized onions, cover with cold water and slowly bring to a boil, drain, add fresh boiling water and boil slowly until they begin to be tender; drain, set closely together in a granite baking pan, season with salt and pepper; fill to one third their depth with white stock or milk.

Fried Onions.—Pare, and cut crosswise in slices half an inch thick, cover with sweet milk and set aside for 15 minutes.

Corn Pudding.—Grate enough young corn to make three cupsful; season with salt, pepper, one heaping teaspoonful of sugar and a tablespoonful of melted butter.

Baked Tomatoes.—Choose even-sized, solid, smooth tomatoes, cut a circle from the stem end and carefully remove the seeds.

Creamed Turnips.—Pare, slice

Some cough mixtures smother the cough. But the next breeze fans it into life again.

Better put the cough out. That is, better go deeper and smother the fires of inflammation. Troches cannot do this. Neither can plain cod-liver oil.

But Scott's Emulsion can. The glycerine soothes and makes comfortable; the hypophosphites give power and stability to the nerves; and the oil feeds and strengthens the weakened tissues.

Heat one cupful of milk, rub one tablespoonful each of butter and flour to a smooth paste and season with salt and pepper, add, by degrees three tablespoonfuls of the hot milk and stir smooth, pour it into the hot milk and stir constantly until it thickens and is smooth.

ANTI-CATHOLIC ADVERTISEMENTS.

The "Catholic Columbian," in its last issue brings a case of great importance to the attention of its readers.

"That notorious reviler of the Catholic Church and all persons and things connected with it, Dr. James M. King, who is a preacher of pronounced A. P. A. proclivities, has recently published a characteristic work, and is now engaged in advertising it as extensively as possible.

"A leading New York Magazine (McClure's) was persuaded to accept a page advertisement of this anti-Catholic work for its June issue. The character of the advertisement was particularly offensive to the Catholic patrons of that magazine.

"If similar tactics were employed in other cases when insults are offered, often unconsciously, by non-Catholic publishers to our Faith and Church, in many instances, the same gratifying results would doubtless follow.

"We quote this item, not that it immediately applies to Canada, but because it furnishes a most striking argument in favor of the proper support of Catholic papers.

Not long since the "Sennine Belgique," quoted an able article, from the pen of an Oblate priest, in which the encouragement—direct or indirect—of a pure anti-Catholic publication, are set down as sins that cannot be too much magnified in the eyes of the faithful. Yet, we have daily and hourly numbered examples of leading Catholics, of men of education and pronounced patriots, and prominent church supporters, giving their patronage to the very press that ridicules them, belittles their nationality and heaps insults on their religion.

A grain of sand in the eye causes excruciating agony. A grain of pepper in place of the grain of sand intensifies the torment. The pain is not confined to the organs affected. The whole body feels the shock of that little irritating particle.

LETTER FROM ROME

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

Rome, July 2, 1899.

Nearly every day, since the creation of the new Cardinals, has seen a Cardinal take possession of his titular church. The Sacred College of Cardinals is divided into two general classes, one class of which comprises the Cardinal-Bishops, who are Bishops of the suburban dioceses of Rome.

Notes of Irish News.

FROM OUR EXCHANGES.

TO PROTECT WORKINGMEN.—At a meeting of the Belfast Catholic Association in St. Mary's Hall, recently, Rev. A. Macaulay, P.P., St. Brigid's, in the chair, the following resolution was unanimously passed.

WHITE GLOVES.—Mr. Justice Andrews arrived from Dublin last week, at Drogheda, to open the Commission of Assize.

believe that every Roman found himself in duty bound to go and kneel at the Tomb of Peter. And bound they are, for the presence of St. Peter and St. Paul's sacred bodies in Rome, as St. John Chrysostom says, had made Rome the most illustrious of cities.

The ceremonies were held at the Altar of the Confession. The organs and choirs were placed at either side of this Altar, and from them issued forth the greatest music heard in St. Peter's this year.

Dr. Croke to whom "True Witness" refers in the "True Witness" is a layman and a native of Halifax, N. S.

SPIRITED REMARKS.—At a demonstration of the people of Cavan, Fermanagh and Leitrim, held last week William O'Brien said—

"We are told that we must not be too extreme for fear of offending the loyalist farmers of the North, and what a glorious thing it would be if the Protestant and Catholic farmers of the North would unite on this subject."

KILKENNY COLLIERIES.—At a meeting of the Athy Town Commissioners, the following resolution was adopted—

"That we, the Athy Town Commissioners, respectfully request the Government to give a grant in aid of the construction of a line of railway from the Kilkenny coalfields to Athy."

WHAT IRELAND PAYS.—A House of Commons return shows that Ireland's contribution to an aggregate of £121,410 received as Crown revenue in the year ending the 31st of March, 1899, is the highest received from any one part of the United Kingdom.

How to Spend Millions. Continued from Page Nine. ry out great industrial and commercial enterprises which result in cheapened production or more opportunities for labor."

J. Pierpont Morgan, who has endowed hospitals, filled museums and built churches says:—"When one looks about and sees the misery and suffering caused by sickness among those who have not themselves the means to relieve it he cannot help feeling that to alleviate a little of it is the duty of those who have been fortunate or successful."

Now Mr. Russell Sage, a generous millionaire, in practice, seems to disagree with Mr. Carnegie on the one hand, and to clash with Mr. Morgan's ideas—at least in theory. He says:—

first chapel and residence in 1763, Rev. John H. O'Rourke, is the present rector of the novitiate at Frederick.

"I do not see how it is a disgrace for a man to die rich. If it is, I am afraid that Mr. Carnegie will die disgraced. My own opinion is that a man may better employ his money in productive enterprises that give employment and benefit the community than to give it away. Suppose I gave away all that I own to thousands of poor people in this city to-day. Next week it would be all gone and they would be back here for more. But by using it in business enterprises which I represent it gives steady work to hundreds of honest workmen, who don't want any charity beyond what they can earn."

After all it seems to us that, what a millionaire says, or thinks must be less important than what he does. Consequently we prefer the silent, unostentatious and unobtrusive, as well as unceasing generosity of Canada's Lord Strathcona, to all the lengthy dissertations of those multi-millionaires, who cannot do a kind deed without accompanying it with an essay on the duties of the rich.
