Life in a Hun Prison

"THE Canadians required more men to guard them, did less work, and caused more worry and trouble than any other prisoners," said Lieut. J. Beverley Robinson, R.A.F., two and a half years a prisoner of war, escaping on his second attempt, being the only Canadian officer who succeeded in doing so.

"The Germans tried more to break the spirit of the Canadians than of any other prisoners but they didn't do it. Our men stuck it, and when they get a chance they go back at the Germans with interest," asserted Lieut. Robinson.

"Never have I read a single line which exaggerated the treatment of the prisoners of war by the Germans. I have found a disposition on the part of some to make light of the stories of cruelty which have been told. Do not make light of them, for they are all true. There are worse stories than any you have heard yet. If you are inclined to make light of imprisonment, then try to think what it means to live for months or years in the unsanitary, pestilential camps in Germany, where every possible effort was made to heap insult and indescribable cruelty upon the men. Think what it means to work twelve or fourteen hours a day in the salt mines, to be tied up to posts in zero weather, to be hung up by the wrists, or even only to wash your clothing in ice-cold water.

"I have seen even German Red Cross workers spit in bowls of soup which they brought into the trains, then throw it into the faces of allied officers. I have seen wounded soldiers dragged to the doors of the cars and there spat upon and jeered by the people."

Lieut. Robinson was taken a prisoner when flying in a fog, and he was forced to make a landing in territory captured by the Germans. His machine was seriously crippled by German bullets, so close was he forced to fly to the ground.

"A short time after landing I saw an individual approaching me," he narrated. "He was pointing a large horse pistol. I never saw anything like it—one of those archaic weapons seen in castles. I walked up to him, and started cursing as hard as I could. It worked well. The average German soldier is accustomed to having his orders shouted at him. I was certainly shouting. He dropped the muzzle and stood there open mouthed. But suddenly I noticed his clothes and the double eagle on the buttons. Then another came on a horse, the most magnificent black charger I have ever seen. He was a German military policeman, and the scales fell from my eyes immediately.

"When I was captured arrangements were being made by my squadron to drop on Prince Rupprecht larger bombs than had ever been dropped. This, strange as it may seem, was known to the German staff officer who examined me, and he said that arrangements had been made to give our flyers a warm reception. Well, I got information back to the squadron by writing a postcard to my mother, saying: 'Please tell that the man of evil habits has changed his address.'"

He told of the conditions in a series of camps in which he was confined, referring especially to Strohan, which had formerly been used as a punishment centre for Russian prisoners. It was a camp totally lacking in sanitation, with a madman for a commandant, and a record for bayoneting prisoners. With two other officers he escaped from this camp on a dark, windy, rainy night. After three nights he was recaptured and sent to Postmunden, recognized as one of the worst camps in Germany. He was captured at the point of a shotgun in the hands of a German farmer, following discovery by his wife.

Postmunden was commanded by Charles Niemeyer, "Milwaukee Bill," who, the lieutenant believed, will be one of the first of the German officers to be demanded by the allies when the day of reckoning comes. Niemeyer lost no chance to be insulting to the prisoners, and for a long time refused to allow them to fit up shower baths for their use, because he wanted them as kennels for his dogs, which continued to occupy them.

So bad were conditions that it was decided an attempt must be made to get news to England, so the prisoners started to tunnel to freedom.

It Isn't Your Town—It's You

If you want to live in the kind of a town

Like the kind of a town you like.

You needn't slip your clothes in a grip

And start on a long, long hike.

You'll only find what you left behind.

For there's nothing that's really new.

It's a knock at at yourself when you knock your town—

It isn't your town—it's you!

Real towns aren't made by men afraid

Lest somebody else get ahead.

When everyone works and nobody shirks

You can raise a town from the dead.

And if while you make your personal stake

Your neighbor can make one, too.

Your town will be what you want to see;

It isn't your town—it's you!

G. D. Ellyson.

Under trying conditions they tunneled for nine months, and were successful in securing the escape of 29 officers (he was not present), ten of whom crossed the frontier to safety. They dug from an unusual cellar in the prison through 60 yards of earth, using crude air tubes of tin to keep the workers alive.

Lieut. Robinson escaped from a temporary camp. He stocked up with essentials, in the hope of being able to jump from the train on a journey which he knew would pass along the Dutch frontier. As he was suspected, he was searched for an hour before being allowed to board the train. Yet, in spite of that hour's search, he took with him two compasses, a map, a flashlight, some forbidden German money and a civilian cap. He didn't get a chance to jump from the train, as the trip was made by day, but the evening of his arrival at the latest camp Lieut. Robinson, with an officer named Milne, made their escape over a high retaining wall, while a third officer detained the German guard with an argument on the value of Zeppelin air rafts.

The Optimistic Chickadee.

A walk through the woods on a nice winter day reveals many wonderful things to the person who believes that Dame Nature closes up her shop during cold weather. You probably will hear the chickadees before you see 'em, because they sing and are merry even though cold winds blow and food is scarce. "Chick-a-dee-dee" or "fee-bee" they sing as they scratch in the leaves of yesteryear in the fence corners. The chickadee, or black capped titmouse, is optimism's trademark.

The chickadee is too well known to warrant a description for those who have lived in the country; ultra-civilized folks will recognize chickadees as a flock of sparrowlike birds, each with a black sealskin cap and a black patch on the throat and chin. If you will listen they will sing, not merely when the spirit moves, but all of the time: "Chick-a-dee-dee; fee-bee; she-day-day-day." Translated into English this means:

"Look at that poor frozen turnip with his mackinaw coat and earlaps and red nose; wonder what he'll do when it gets cold." Some times, too, they have a scolding chuckle, but fear not; it soon blows over, like the sputtering of a busy housewife, and in a moment they are singing again. The song of a flock of chickadees requires no "claque."

These birds do little traveling, being content to pass unnoticed among our summer birds, knowing that they will again take the centre of the stage when cold days drive the tender ones to the Southland. Winter would be drearier than ever without these little citizens of fence corners, hedge room and woodlot singing and scratching and making the best of bad days and biting winds.

Moral: Consider the chickadee and worry not.

Munitions Versus Hairdressing.

A Strange Duel

Aviators Met in Midair, But Could Only Smile.

Capt. D. R. MacLaren, D.S.O., M.C. (with bar), D.F.C., of Vancouver, has fifty-seven Hun machines to his credit. He has had many and varied experiences in the air, but perhaps the one which tickles him most is one in which he did not get the Hun. "One morning in July," he says, "I was up about fifteen thousand feet when I spotted a D.F.W., one of the big two-seater photographic machines. I tow me at about ten thousand feet. I was in fine position and came on him from the east, diving over his top plane. I turned my gun on him as I passed over. I could hear the trigger motor rattling, but there were no shots. I felt in the chute, and found that my belts were broken. I passed down below him, and wondered that I got no shot from him. I took a look at him, and rose again, coming alongside where I could have a good look at him. There I saw the observer perched up, looking over at me. I waved to him, and he waved back to me and wiggled his gun about, as much as to say he had gun trouble, too, so we parted."

Perhaps his most exciting few moments were when he went up south-east of Le Cateau on Oct. 18th as squadron commander in charge of eight planes. They were attacked by about thirty Huns. They had been out balloon strafing and had got one and attacked another, which was pulled down. Just at this time they were caught by the Huns, who swooped upon them from the west, where they were not expected. The Huns had a fine position in the sun, but, foolishly, about eight of them dived through the British formation. Two of the Fokkers crashed into one another and went down, and another was shot down in flames.

Capt. MacLaren climbed up into the sun and got two himself, one of them the leader of the Hun flight. Then the rest of the Huns swooped in to take part in the fight. The place was just swarming with them. The fight started at seven thousand feet and continued down to about two thousand. Lieut. Sanderson got another of the Huns, and then on a favorable wind the British machines were able to extricate themselves and get back over their lines.

Lieut. Arthur Allen, of Toronto, was with a flight commanded by Capt. MacLaren when he became separated from his companions. This was near Gouy, east of the St. Quentin canal. The line had been held up, and word came that the enemy was concentrating in a wood. Capt. MacLaren was sent up with five Sopwith camels to escort seven light bombing machines. They successfully dodged through the anti-aircraft barrage and were attacked by five Fokkers. The British climbed into a mist bank and drove off the German planes, shooting one of them down in flames. The bombers got in some good bursts from two hundred feet, the 25-pounder bombs bursting among the troops with considerable effect.

Lieut. Allen gives an idea of some of the peculiar things which have happened during the war. When he landed, the Germans knew he belonged to the 46th Squadron, as they could see it on the machine. But the officer who interrogated him told him he knew the name of his squadron commander, and that his flight commander was Capt. MacLaren. This German officer, who spoke English well, added that he had on one occasion put on a British R.A.F. uniform and had flown a British machine over into the British lines, and had actually attended a lecture in a British airdrome without being detected.

Flying men agree that this is quite possible, and that airmen turn up miles from home with some excuse and are entertained at strange airdromes where nobody knows them. "They might wander all over the mess," a flying officer said.

Flirts With Sudden Death.

James Drysdale, driver for a Lethbridge fruit firm, was delivering bananas a few days ago when what he thought to be a ripe banana dropped down his neck. He reached and retrieved a yellow-and-green snake three feet long, which he held in his hand while he examined it thoroughly. It was a copperhead, whose bite is instant death. That the snake was numb with cold was probably his salvation.

Crew Was "Flu"-struck.

The Gloucester schooner Athlete, Captain Berhan, succeeded in making a Cape Breton, N.S., port with her entire company victims of the influenza. One of the crew died on the passage from Gloucester, which was made under heavy handicaps.

FACTS ABOUT RUSSIA

(Saturday Evening Post).
While the rest of the world complained that trustworthy information about Russia was not obtainable, because everything coming out of that country was distorted one way or the other, Socialists collected a great deal of authentic Russian information for the guidance of their recent international convention at Berne. They went to the Bolsheviks themselves for the information, and having digested it they denounced the Bolshevik rule. Though suppressing every Russian publication not friendly to them the Bolsheviks are great publicity artists on their own side. They have their official and semi-official newspapers and various government organs covering particular fields. It was from the files of these publications that the Socialists compiled their report, taking nothing from non-Bolshevik sources, and giving the authority for their statements in each case.
The Socialists were not interested in what the Bolsheviks did to the bourgeoisie and they paid no attention to that, their general idea being the more anybody does to the bourgeoisie, or property owning class, the better. They were not interested in reports of Bolshevik terrorism, massacres, and so on, for they allow that much disorder of that sort will usually accompany a revolution. They confined their attention solely to the result of Bolshevism upon the very class in whose exclusive interests it professes to rule—namely, upon the proletariat, or urban wage earners. Socialists condemned Bolshevism because they found, out of its own mouth, that it was destroying the very class it is supposed to benefit at the expense of all the rest of society.

The Bolsheviks' own reports showed that the population of Petrograd had declined about two-thirds, only about 80,000 inhabitants being left out of about 2,400,000. Population of Moscow had declined about 60 per cent. In one group of Petrograd factories the number of workmen had fallen from 277,000 to 120,000. Moscow metal workers' unions had lost 123,000 members out of 183,000. Chemical workers' unions had lost three-fourths of their members. Other such instances are cited from Bolshevik reports.

City wage earners have been disappearing into the highly paid army, drifting out to the villages, turning peddler and petty speculator. Output of a large group of textile factories had declined three-quarters.

Not only has the number of workers greatly decreased, but output per man has fallen. The Petrograd Soviet reported that the state had advanced 96,000,000 rubles to the famous Putiloff works—of which 66,000,000 rubles had been expended in wages, while total output of the works in the same period was valued at only 15,000,000 rubles. From various reports it seemed that the total factory output equalled only about half the sum drawn from the state treasury; hence an official complaint that the Government has been obliged to print paper money at the rate of 200,000,000 rubles a day, and that the value of its rubles in the interior of the country has fallen 95 per cent.

Last November the central executive committee declared that the food shortage in Moscow was largely due to loafing and plundering. In December a Government organ complained that the mass of new industrial officials appeared only twice a month—to draw their salaries. As to an enormous increase in the number of such officials five districts in one province now show 495 officials where formerly in twelve districts there were only 275.

No wonder Kautsky declared: "The great argument for Socialism is that it is more efficient than the capitalist system, but the Bolsheviks are undermining this argument."
Of course they still say that though it worked most disastrously in Russia it would work beautifully some other place—any place where it has never been tried. But there is its own report of itself in the only place where it ever has been tried. For Bolshevism, aside from its red terror—that is, on the economic side—is nothing else than orthodox Marxian Socialism put into literal practice.

Old Warships Put to Good Use.

In the days before the war, one of the features of Ryde, Isle of Wight, was the fleet of obsolete warships which rode mournfully at anchor to the west of the pier. There was a curious air of desolation about them with their gunboats gray showing rust everywhere, their truncated masts, cleared decks, and blackened brasses. As the ferry steamed out of Portsmouth, some four miles away across the Solent, they had a warlike appearance enough, but the nearer one came to them the more one saw that their fighting days were over.

But were they? May there not have been amongst them some of the old cruisers which joined in the now famous run for Zeebrugge the other night? Perhaps they are Ryde boats which now lie gloriously at the bottom of the sea, blocking the way to the "nests of Bruges."

BABY'S HEALTH IN THE SPRING

The Spring is a time of anxiety to mothers who have little ones in the home. Conditions make it necessary to keep the baby indoors. He is often confined to overheated badly ventilated rooms and catches colds which rack his whole system. To guard against this a box of Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in the house and an occasional dose given the baby to keep his stomach and bowels working regularly. This will prevent colds, constipation or colic and keep baby well. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CUPID'S QUEER PRANK.

A Wedding Blunder That Furnished a Curious Climax.
The other evening we were talking to Mr. Bransby Williams, the delightful impersonator of Dickens' characters, and he told us this story:
The scene was a London parish, and the period recent. The vicar was sitting in his study one morning when in burst the verger in a great state of excitement.
"Mr. —" (mentioning the curate's name) "wants you at once, sir," he exclaimed. "He has married two couples and married the two men to the wrong women, and he does not know what to do!"
"Have they signed the register?" inquired the clergyman.
"No," was the verger's response. "Then they can be married again."
"Then they can be married again," said the vicar. "Tell Mr. — I will be at the church in a minute or two to perform the ceremony."
In due course the incumbent made his way to the church and found the parties gathered at the entrance.
Before he could say anything one of the bridegrooms approached and said: "We have been talking it over, sir, and we have made up our minds to remain as we are."
"And they did so."—Pearson's Weekly.

SWITZERLAND.

Little Country Has Been Most Useful of Neutrals.

The war has perhaps brought no greater contrasts than those afforded by the crowds that entered Switzerland before the outbreak of hostilities and those that now cross its borders. There is no longer any steady stream of tourists. In their place, exchanged French and British wounded soldiers cross the frontiers from Germany and proceed to the mountain and lake resorts as "paying guests" of the republic. Thousands of civilian refugees from the devastated war zone enter country in order to seek repatriation and rehabilitation on the beloved soil of France. Others there are, German subjects, who as spies have entered only to abuse the hospitality of Switzerland by means of their international plottings; and still others, forming a small but significant group, who have found the fatherland intolerable and the welcome opportunity of raising their protests in tolerant Switzerland.
Whatever the difficulties in entering Switzerland may be to-day, they were comparatively trifling in pre-war days, when tourists were welcomed with open arms. Swiss regulations for foreign traffic, though always more or less formal, inconvenienced the passenger by train, however, less than the passenger by motor car. The holder of the "passavant descriptif" or the trip-tique was subject to certain perfunctory requirements which the holder of a "rundreise" railway ticket escaped. Entering by road by Basel, for instance, meant the satisfying of two sets of officials, the customs men and the gendarmes. The traveller had to submit to certain inflexible formalities which always appeared to be more or less superfluous to the object of them, whatever they appeared to be to the officials. If he were tactful, however, roadmender and official en route who might take it into his head to question the tourist's right to use the pass. The arrival at Brigue alone brought any real relief, for, from that point on, Switzerland seemed to stretch itself out along a lovely valley, inviting the tourist to the delights of travelling by road in Switzerland.

It is the peculiar characteristic of Switzerland that, after crossing its frontiers, one never appears to have wholly left the neighboring countries behind. The northern "gates" seem to introduce one to a modified Germany; at Geneva one is still in a French-speaking country; whilst the impression one receives upon entering from the south, of still being upon Italian soil, is at first difficult to shake off. The character of the scenery serves only to heighten the illusion. Ethnographically as well as physically, the soil of Switzerland seems to invite the various peoples of the earth to make of the country a place of rendezvous where international differences can be forgotten. Time alone will show, however, whether "international" Switzerland will be the unrestricted playground of the nations in the future as in the past.

THE PERFECT SPELLER.

Test Him by Having Him Write This Jumble From Dictation.

One occasionally comes across a superior person who tells you he can easily spell any word ever printed in a dictionary. If ever you meet this type of man just ask somebody to dictate the following jumble to him and see how many mistakes he will make:
"Antinous, a disappointed, desiccated physicist, was peeling potatoes in an embarrassing and harassing way. His idiosyncrasy and privilege was to eat mayonnaise and mussels while he did not fail to display the invaluable qualities of patience, politeness, and that useful air of taking everything for granted. The faithful observance of such a course probably served to accelerate the precise processes of examination and the sealing of the car by such antiquated methods as a die and a mallet. Then one was free or, rather, measurably free to tour Switzerland. The chances are that the dourtonier would follow up the parting salute with a significant caution not to exceed that elastic thing, the Swiss speed limit. For one could never be quite sure, in passing leisurely and carefully through the winding street of a Swiss village, that some local functionary might not rush out and, volens volens, arrest and fine one, for the heinous offence of speeding.

Entering Switzerland by road over the Simplon Pass from Italy, the speed question becomes one fraught with all kinds of penalties for the incautious traveller. His pace upon the winding pass must not exceed ten kilometres per hour, and at corners not more than three. In addition, he was forbidden to give any signal, except with the regulation motor-horn; on meeting horse traffic and pedestrians, he must take the outside edge; nor could he cross the pass unless he had previously sent full details concerning the car, its occupants, and the hour and date of setting out for Switzerland, to the customs station at Gondo. The possession of the final permit from the authorities, moreover, was by no means an unqualified blessing. Four hours only were permitted for the passage from Gondo to the end of the mountain route at Brigue, and the precious document must be shown to every

GERMAN OFFICIAL PROBE INTO THE KILLING OF CAPT. FRYATT

Allied Agents Present at Investigation by Republican Government.

Berlin, Tuesday, Cable—An investigation into the case of Captain Charles Fryatt, of the British mercantile marine, who was executed by the Germans in 1916, after his conviction by a German court-martial of having attempted to ram the German submarine U-33 with his vessel, was begun today by a national court-martial. Representatives of various governments attended, and a large number of witnesses, including Captain Danzer, of the U-33, appeared for examination.

The investigation committee is composed of Professor Schuecking, chairman; Prince Schoenaich-Carolath, Privy Councillor; Herr Eckert, of the Foreign Office; Col. von Franzosky and Major Richter, of the War Ministry, and Captain Vanselow, of the navy. The Foreign governments represented were Great Britain, France, Norway and Holland, which is represented by Chevalier Van Rappard, the minister here.

At the opening of the investigation Attorney Rochel, for the commission, gave a description of the Fryatt case. According to this report, the British steamer Brussels, under command of Captain Fryatt, encountered the submarine U-33, under command of Lieut. Captain Teuffor, on March 28, 1916, eight miles west of the Maas lightship, off the coast of Holland. It was alleged that Captain Fryatt attempted to ram the submarine. Captain Fryatt and the Brussels were captured by the Germans in June, 1916. The captain was first ordered confined at Ruhleben. Later he was brought before a court-martial at Bruges, found guilty and executed.

Statements made by Captain Fryatt and several British officers at the court-martial were then read. Fryatt maintained that he tried to get away from the submarine. German officers testified, however, that the log of the Brussels contained this entry: "When I saw him, I steered directly for him."

British and American notes of protest against the decision of the court-martial were read. The attorney explained that Great Britain had complained that the United States had not been permitted legal representation at the court-martial, although the United States was then in charge of the British interests in Germany. The German Government, however, would permit the defendant to have only one attorney, who was present in the person of Major Naumann, of Bruges. Attorney Rochel then read this excerpt from the testimony at the court-martial:

"The first witness Danzer, testified that the U-33 sighted a steamer while about to submerge, and signalled it to stop instantly, on pain of a shot from a submarine. The Brussels, however, he said, evidently had seen the submarine first, and made directly for it, getting up steam as it advanced. Danzer said he tried to get the submarine out of the way without submerging again. It was impossible to discharge a torpedo, because the steamer was only 150 yards away. Another officer gave the order to submerge, and the U-boat sank thirty-five feet in two minutes. The crew, it was testified, saw the shadow of the British ship crash down."

BRITAIN BOOMS OVERSEAS TRADE

New Department Has Big Plans Perfected

For Consular Service, Commercial Attaches.

London Cable — The new department of overseas trade is ready with a plan for the reform of the consular service and the establishment of commercial attaches. It is proposed to spend at least £1,000,000 annually on the consular service and nearly £250,000 on the commercial attaches.

Several associations of British manufacturers intend to take advantage of this new activity on the part of the Government. The largest of these represents directly, or through allied organizations, nearly 20,000 firms, with a capital of £4,000,000,000. The director of this federation said:

"We shall spend this year a third of our income and another £20,000 from our reserve on the development of British overseas trade. Our first commissioner has been stationed in Greece. We have another commissioner in Madrid, and a third will tour South Africa and report on the possibilities. We have invited eight leading Brazilians to tour England this summer."

"One of our representatives is in Siberia in the British Government commercial mission, and another has gone to Holland to investigate the offer made by the Dutch to form a corporation to encourage British trade. If we go on as we have begun we shall cover the world with British trade commissions. They will not be selling agents or commercial travellers, but they will have a freer hand than the consular or commercial attaches, and their reports will reach British manufacturers the day after they come to hand."

Envoys to Peace Table at Important Meetings.

All Empire Delegates to Hold Conference.

Paris Cable — (Cable from Leon Trepanier)—The Canadian Ministers have been engaged in attendance at important meetings, especially that section of the Supreme Economic Commission which is considering the disposition of pre-war contracts. The proposed labor convention has also been under consideration by the British Empire delegations, and interesting questions have been raised and discussed respecting its return to the covenant of the League of Nations.

It is probable that full meeting of all the British Empire delegations will be held in the near future for the purpose of reaching a definite conclusion upon the questions raised. It is anticipated that a meeting of the Plenary Conference will be held on Monday, next, but the subject for discussion have not yet been announced.

Sir Robert Borden proceeds to London on Thursday, to confer with Sir Edward Kemp and Sir George Perley, as well as with members of the British Government, respecting demobilization and other important subjects. While in London he will attend the McGill dinner on Friday, and unveil a beautiful memorial, the gift of Major and Mrs. Astor, which is to be erected in the cemetery on the grounds of Cliveden consecrated to this purpose.

Hon. Mr. Doherty has been made a member of the International Law Union, recently organized as one of the results of the deliberations on the League of Nations. The union will have its seat in Paris, and its membership is confined to forty persons. JOB OVERSEAS.

British Labor Ministry Doing Utmost for Soldiers

London cable: (By mail)—The Ministry of Labor states that the Ministry, which is acting in close co-operation with the committee recently appointed by the secretary for the colonies, has, since January, included the overseas appointment bureau which deals with the placing in training or appointments overseas of ex-officers and men of suitable professional and business qualifications.

The Ministry is aware that, in view of the need for repatriating the various expeditionary forces, little or no shipping will be available for any other persons desiring to proceed overseas before the autumn, and requests that it is impossible to effect any special facilities in this respect at the present time.

It is intended that full information with regard to openings overseas for employment exchanges, in addition to the use of these official channels, there is every desire to encourage the work of private organizations, which are endeavoring to obtain information as to openings overseas for ex-service men, and various organizations are at present engaged in this work.

Fireproof Celluloid.

Great interest has been aroused by the announcement that a professor in one of the Japanese universities had invented a successful incombustible substitute for celluloid, to be manufactured from soya bean cake.

The new produce has been given the trade name of "Satoilite," derived from the name of the inventor, Prof. Sato, and a company for its manufacture has been started with a capital of 2,000,000 yen ($1,000,000).

Satoilite is described as a balalith made of the glucine of soya bean, coagulated by formalin.

Fields are won by those who believe in the winning—T. W. Higginson.

PIMPLES ITCHED AND BURNED

Face Was Badly Disfigured. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Healed.

"Small red pimples and black-heads began on my face, and my face was badly disfigured. Some of the pimples festered while others scaled over and there were places where the pimples were in blotches. They used to itch and burn terribly. I saw an advertisement for Cuticura and I tried them. They stopped the itching and burning and I used four cakes of Soap and three boxes of Ointment which healed me." (Signed) Miss V. A. Hayne, Stormont, N. S., Dec. 26, '18.

The Cuticura Toilet Trio, consisting of Soap, Ointment and Talcum, promotes skin purity, comfort and health when used for every-day toilet purposes. For Sample Each Free by Mail, address: "Cuticura, Dept. A, Boston, U.S.A." Sold everywhere.

TIMELY RECIPES

BROWNED TRIPE.
Make a good plain sauce with the addition of the yolk of an egg; add to the sauce small squares of boiled tripe. Butter a serving dish and place in the dish some nicely seasoned cold mashed potatoes, in which the beaten white of the egg has been added. Cover with the tripe and sauce and bake until nicely brown. Oyster, onion or tomato sauce will be equally delicious with the tripe and potatoes.

BRAINS.
Brains should be blanched by soaking in salt water overnight and skinned or by boiling a few minutes in salt and water, skinned and plunged into cold water. They may be scrambled with eggs, creamed by adding thick white sauce, rolled in flour and bread crumbs, cooked in hot fat and served with hominy cakes, stewed with dumplings, scalloped or prepared in casserole. Brains and kidneys are comparatively low in fuel value, so that a method of cooking like frying makes of them a "heartier" dish.

LIVER LOAF.
One calf's liver, one-half cup bread-crumbs, one-half teaspoonful salt, one teaspoonful kitchen bouquet, one tablespoonful vinegar, four slices salt pork, chopped; two tablespoonfuls chopped onion, one cup stock, a little nutmeg. Wash and chop liver, cook five minutes (boil) in stock, add ingredients, mould into loaf. Bake one hour in a slow oven.

FRUIT PASTE.
One cup dried apricots, two cups raisins, one-half teaspoonful salt, two tablespoonfuls lemon juice, one cup figs, one-half cup sugar, one tablespoonful grated lemon rind.
Mix the chopped apricots and figs, and the raisins. Add the salt, lemon rind and juice. Cook very slowly, stirring frequently, until the mixture forms a thick paste. Pour into a greased square pan. Set until cold, then cut in squares and wrap in oiled paper.

SHELLS FOR BUTTONS.

Species in New Zealand Can Be Used to Advantage.

According to information which has been furnished by the department of internal affairs at Wellington, the Trochus nitidus, commonly found in Queensland and the South Sea Islands, does not occur in New Zealand; but other shells which are found in these waters might be used in the manufacture of buttons, especially the panna, Haliotis iris, and the toilet, Ostrea sulcata. They are not at present used for the manufacture of buttons or for similar uses, but both occur in great numbers on rocky coasts near the low-tide mark, the panna being much the commoner.

Since these shells have never been sought for commercial purposes, there is no way of ascertaining their cost, the method of disposing of production, market, etc., but it is understood that they are very easily gathered as the tide ebbs and flows on the sandy beaches about the island.—Scientific American.

A Purely Vegetable Pill.—The chief ingredients of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are mandrake and dandelion, sedative and purgative, but perfectly harmless in their action. They cleanse and purify organs. The dyspeptic and all who suffer from liver and kidney ailments will find in these pills the most effective medicine in concentrated form that has yet been offered to the suffering.

NINE PLANES IN ATLANTIC FLIGHT

Eight British and One Italian Machine Enter.

English Fliers Hope to Get First Start.

London Cable — Capt. C. W. F. Morgan, the assistant pilot and navigator of the Martinsyde two-seater biplane entered for the Daily Mail $50,000 trans-Atlantic flight prize, has left London for Liverpool, whence he will board a steamship for Newfoundland.

The second week in April should see at least four competitors ready at their starting point, and unless American enthusiasts have been making preparations about which nothing is known on this side it looks as if the first attempt to fly the Atlantic will fall to British airmen.

The Daily Mail names five British machines entered through the Royal Aero Club and three others, including a British Handley-Page, and an Italian Caproni.

The contest has interested the most famous pilots and aeronautical constructors, Sydney Pickle and Harry Hawker (both Australians) and F. Rayham were prominent in air navigation before the war, and Major J. C. P. Wood, who will pilot a short Rolls-Royce biplane, has a fine flying record with the British air force.

Capt. Morgan, navigator of the Martinsyde Rolls-Royce biplane, lost his right leg below the knee in the war. Morgan says his artificial limb does not hamper him when flying. Sydney Pickle, the pilot in a Rolls-Royce biplane, was piloting his motor from France in a seaplane, in July, 1913, when the engine failed over the Channel, but refusing the assistance of a steamship he repaired the engine on the water and "taxied" into Folkestone. Pickle learned to fly in the Bristol Biplane Fleet in the earliest types of Cadron, Grahame White and Handley-Page machines. Since then he has flown nearly every type.

Capt. Arthur Payze, the first British entrant, who is still working on a Whitehead biplane at Richmond, has had remarkable escapes. While flying over the lines in France he was hit on the head by shrapnel, and fell several hundred feet before regaining control of his machine. He was piloting a machine in which the late A. Poyle, of the Whitehead Aircraft Company carried off his fatal experiment with a parachute and saw the unfortunate airman fall 1,600 feet to death.

Major Wood is probably the youngest airman in the competition, and he will pilot a short Rolls-Royce biplane. His early experience was in the last African campaign, afterward he was on the Western front, where he gained the reputation of being a very stout pilot. He has flown more than 10,000 hours in service flights.

For years Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator has ranked as the most effective preparation manufactured, and it always maintains its reputation.

HUSBAND SAVES WIFE

From Suffering by Getting Her Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—"For many months I was not able to do my work owing to a weakness which caused backache and headaches. A friend called my attention to one of your newspaper advertisements and immediately my husband bought three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me. After taking two bottles I felt fine and my troubles caused by that weakness are a thing of the past. All women who suffer as I did should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. JAS. ROHRBERG, 620 Knapp St., N. S., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Women who suffer from any form of weakness, as indicated by displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, backache, headaches, nervousness or "the blues," should accept Mrs. Rohrborg's suggestion and give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a thorough trial.

For over forty years it has been correcting such ailments. If you have mysterious complications write for advice to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Monday evening of last week marked an epoch in the history of our home town and the surrounding country. The farmers met together to discuss the advisability of organizing a Farmers' Club of Ontario. The meeting was a decided success. Mr. Allan Eaton in his usual business-like manner ably filled the duties of chairman. Interesting and profitable addresses were given by Warden F. C. Biggs, D. Wray, W. T. Thompson and Stanley Templar, all of Beverly, and Geo. Codlin of Hollowgrove and Mrs. Wilson of Hornby. After hearing the able addresses of the speakers it was unanimously decided to organize a club, and the following officers were elected. President, W. O. Gastle; Secretary-Treasurer, Alfred Tansley. Purchasing committee, the President, Sec-Treasurer and Clark Eaton. After several speeches were made by local men, a hearty vote of appreciation was tendered to the outside speakers. There seems to be an inclination on the part of many to have the forces of the United Farm of Ontario and the Labor Party to affiliate. When this affiliation takes place it will mark the greatest Era in the history of Canada. The joining of these forces would be the electrocution of party politics, and that would be the assassination of combines, high tariffs and all hindrances to moral reform. This would mean that every county and city would have to build another House of Refuge for millionaires, pork packers, drovers, cabinet ministers, government grafters and fifty per cent of the commercial travellers, agents and middlemen. The advent of the farmers and labor men getting rid of the House of Refuge gents or parasites will be as much satisfaction to them as it was for the Israelites to get out of the land of bondage and away from the Egyptians.

The community attended a farewell social for Mr. Gastle and Miss Vera, before they left for their new home. Mr. Gastle was presented with a gold watch, and Miss Vera with a music cabinet, as a slight token of the esteem of their friends.

A reception was held last week to welcome our soldier boys, Pte. Lloyd Binkley and Pte. Ingle Bousefield. A very enjoyable evening was spent by the young people.

The evening service of last Sunday was taken by the Mission Band in the absence of the Pastor.

Pte. David Carrie arrived home from overseas last Sunday.

Mr. Harold Eaton of Hamilton spent the week end under the parental roof. He is nursing a crushed finger. He says he will never stick his finger in the cage and tease the parrot any more.

Pte. Russel Battenham has returned home from overseas.

Dr. Archie Eaton spent the week end with his parents in the Progression Boulevard.

Geo. Cloyd has returned home after renewing old acquaintances in town.

Westinghouse Starting and Lighting

The Gray Dort is more than a good car. It is an unusual car. Unusual in its tip-toe quality—Unusual because it is so completely honest—unusual because it is sturdier than other cars—unusual because it is thoroughly dependable—unusual because of its powerful, faithful motor, famously strong rear axle, its oversize bearings, its Westinghouse Starting and Lighting, and a score of other superlative under-the-hood virtues. The Gray Dort is far out of the ordinary run of cars. Its individuality is in its absolute superiority.

TREES TO CUT DOWN.

Aim to Improve Woods in Cutting Fuel Supply.

In cutting firewood for the winter's emergency fuel supply the operation should be undertaken with the double purpose of furnishing heat and improving the farm wood lot at the same time.

The trees should be marked for cutting while the leaves are on them, even if other farm work prevents the actual felling until later, because it is easier to tell the different kinds by the foliage than by the bark. But the cutting should be done as soon as possible if the firewood is to be used this winter, so there will be some time for the wood to season.

An Old Wood Lot Ungrazed—Note Young Trees Which Will Make Future Timber Crop.

The following kinds should be left standing to furnish lumber, except in the case of individual trees that are crooked, knotty, diseased or defective: White pine, red spruce, balsam, chestnut, white oak, red oak, hard maple, yellow birch, tulip poplar, white ash, hickory and basswood.

The trees of less value for lumber, or slow growing, and which should be cut are hemlock, arbor vitae, black oak, scarlet oak, red maple, beech, gum, elm, gray birch and ironwood.

Farmers in the northern country may well cull out for firewood, and thus improve the value of their timber stands, the following trees: Jack pine, hemlock, scarlet oak, black oak, elm and beech.

Katchutegua.

The lively controversy still rages in British Columbia as to whether Vancouver Island shall be renamed, and if so what the new name shall be. Inasmuch as the island was known to the Indians long before Captain George Vancouver sighted its mountain tops as Katchutegua, why not call it that? Kat-chu-teg-ua, by the way, may be freely translated as meaning "the plain," and is just about as applicable to Vancouver Island as Maple Creek or Mountain View, Manitoba.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Sunday School Lesson, 11, April 13, 19.

Christ—Our Saviour, Matt. 20: 27; John 1: 36-61; 3: 16; Rom. 8: 31, 32.

Commentary.—1. The supreme gift to the world (Matt. 20: 27, 28; John 3: 16; Rom. 8: 31, 32). The purpose that Jesus had in coming to earth is impressively declared in Matt. 20: 27, 28. He came "to give His life a ransom for many." Although He "thought it not robbery to be equal with God," "He humbled Himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross," that He might render the highest possible service, supreme service, to man. He did not come for the purpose of being exalted, but to take a lowly place and pour out Himself for the salvation of man. He gave Himself "a ransom for many," but the Father also was a party to this gift, for "He gave His only begotten Son" that man might be saved (John 3: 16). That the Father gave His Son to be our Saviour is further declared through Paul's words in Rom. 8: 32. He "spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all." Jesus is presented to us as our divine Lord.

2. Jesus the Lamb of God (John 1: 35-42). 36. Again the next day—The day following the one on which John the Baptist said to the people, "Behold the Lamb of God." The records of his testimony as to Jesus are that on three successive days he declared to the people that Jesus was the Messiah. He gave witness of this fact to the priests and Levites who came from Jerusalem. He introduced Jesus to the multitudes. He declared this truth privately to two of his disciples—We are not told how many disciples John the Baptist had. From this chapter we learn that some of them directly became followers of Jesus. From the account of his sending an inquiry from the place of his imprisonment, asking Jesus of his Messiahship, we know that he had disciples then (Matt. 11: 2-6); and he had disciples at the time of his death (Mark 6: 27-29). 36. Looking upon Jesus—The verb has in it the thought of beholding with intense interest. Behold the Lamb of God—"Behold, the Lamb of God!"—R. V. This announcement declared both the nature and mission of Christ. 37. They followed Jesus—They followed Him because they were convinced that He was the "Lamb of God" to take away the sins of the world. They followed Him through reproach and shame and through suffering, but they followed Him to eternal triumph and bliss. 38. Rabbi—A Jewish title Jesus forbade His disciples to accept it (Matt. 23: 8). It means master, or teacher. Interpreted—John explained the Hebrew term rabbi for the benefit of those who were no Jews. Where dwellest thou?—They wished to know where He lodged that they might have an extended interview with Him. 39. Come and see—Jesus gave them a hearty welcome. He recognized their sincerity and devotion. About the tenth hour—According to the Roman method of reckoning it would be ten o'clock in the forenoon, but according to the Jewish method it would be four o'clock in the forenoon, but according to the Jewish method it would be four o'clock in the afternoon. The latter was probably the hour. 40. One of the two—... was Andrew—Andrew's name is the first mentioned in the list of Christ's disciples. There is no doubt as to the other one, for it must have been John, the writer of this Gospel. He always modestly refrained from mentioning his own name. 41. He first findeth his own brother Simon—The language in the Greek would imply that such of the two disciples sought at once his own brother to bring him to Jesus, and Andrew succeeded first in bringing his brother Simon. Thus each disciple sought to bring some one to Jesus. This has ever been the method of advancing the cause of Christ. We have found the Messiah—There was an expectation at that time that Christ was about to appear. 42. And he brought him to Jesus—It was through human agency that Simon was brought into contact with the Saviour.

III. Jesus the Son of God (John 1: 45-51). 43. The day following—The day after Christ's interview with Peter. Jesus would go forth into Galilee—Jesus determined that his ministry should begin in Galilee rather than in the wilderness where John was preaching or in Judea where ecclesiasticism was intense. His home was in Galilee, and the people of that district were not closely bound up in religious customs and hence would be open to Christ's teachings.

4. Bethsaida—There was a village by this name on the northwestern shore of the Sea of Galilee and one also at the north end, east of where the Jordan flows into the sea. This was called Bethsaida Julias. The home of Philip, Andrew and Peter was the Bethsaida first mentioned. The name means house, or place, of fish. 45. Philip findeth Nathanael—As soon as Philip became a disciple of Jesus, he went forth to bring another to him. He became at once a winner of souls. In the law—The Pentateuch, or the five books of Moses. The prophets—The Old Testament prophets foretold the coming of the Messiah. Jesus of Nazareth—Nazareth, the early home of Jesus, is a city about fifteen miles west of the Sea of Galilee, situated among the hills, high above the plain of Esdraelon. 46. Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth—This question implies rather than Nazareth was an insignificant town or that it bore a bad reputation. Nathanael lived in Cana, only four miles from Nazareth, and he was astonished that the Messiah should come from that place. 47. Behold an Israelite indeed—Jesus not only saw Nathanael as one man sees another, but he also understood thoroughly his character. 48. Whence knowest thou me—Nathanael was not acquainted with Jesus and he was filled with wonder that Jesus should know him. 49. Thou art the Son of God—The bearing of Jesus together with the marvelous knowledge that He manifested drew forth from Nathanael this sincere and weighty confession. He declared that he was the Messiah and the long-expected King of Israel. 50. Greater things than these—Jesus gave Nathanael to know that he should see greater proofs of divinity than he had yet beheld. Nathanael wondered at Christ's seeing him under the fig tree, but he should see greater displays of divine wisdom and power. 51. Angels of God ascending and descending—This doubtless indicates the closeness and constancy of the relationship between Jesus and the Father. Son of man—This is the title that Jesus applied to himself many times.

the atonement are immediately available for every individual. 2. Redemption is complete. "That he might redeem us from all iniquity," is the apostle's statement of its purpose and scope. The psalmist declares, "He restoreth my soul," and the moral uplift is as inclusive as the wreck of the fall. Spiritual disaster entailed mental and physical disorder and destruction. The entire being has been impaired. Spiritual restoration involves the rebuilding of the entire intellectual and physical manhood. The commencement is at the cross, the consummation is in the "eternal weight of glory."

Not Very Complimentary.

Milton's mother was asking each member of the family which view of the sailor boy they preferred her to keep for them. One said she would like a side view, another a front view, and when Milton's turn came, he, thinking he ought to say something different, earnestly requested a back view.

Deception.

Frances and Agatha had been very carefully reared. Especially had they been taught that in no circumstances must they tell a lie—not even a "white lie"—or deceive any one. One day, during a visit made by these little girls to an aunt in the country, they met a large cow in a field they were crossing. Much frightened, the young sisters stopped, not knowing what to do. Finally Frances said: "Let's go right on, Agatha, and pretend that we are not afraid of it." But Agatha's conscience was not slumbering. "Wouldn't that be deceiving the cow?" she objected.

AN ARMY OF SPIES.

Holland Was Infested by Thousands of Them.

There were ten thousand known German agents in Holland during the war. A Dutch police inspector explained that to expel them would simply mean that their places would be taken by other and unknown agents. They drifted into Holland on various pretexts. Some were highly educated men, capable of moving in the best society. Others were mere shadows and touts. They took up all sorts of positions. The case of the porter at the Hotel des Indes, the Waldorf-Astoria of the Hague, who proved to be a brother of the then German Ambassador at Constantinople, is already known. But that is only one of hundreds of similar incidents. The chief task of this army of men was, of course, to keep in touch with Great Britain in the early days of the war, when there was no more difficulty in this than if there was no war. British passports in those days were not worth the paper on which they were produced. A young journalist who was in Holland but had no passport got one from the local consul in Rotterdam, of course simply on the production of a letter from home. Later on it was rendered very difficult to get a British passport, but curiously enough the previous issues of useless paper was not withdrawn until the war had been in progress for three full years. It need hardly be said that the German secret service made good use of the carelessness. Again the spies benefited from the lack of co-operation between the different British departments. Thus in one large town the British community was unofficially warned against patronizing a certain music dealer, who was a known German agent. Yet that man was one of the few Dutch music dealers who had a license for the import of British music. Dutchmen were largely used as couriers between the German agents in Holland and the spies in Britain. Loose women and night clubs were employed as a

Worth Remembering.

The standard measuring cup holds one-half pint. Nut bread is very good for the children's lunch basket, and grown-ups enjoy it also. It is said that yeast cakes will kill rats or mice, if left where they can eat them. Substitute flours, such as rice, barley, potato, etc., require longer baking and twice as much baking powder. Save every crumb of bread and bake a delicate brown in the oven, they use as breakfast food with top milk. When using a food chopper, add a cracker the last thing. It will save every bit of your food and leave the chopper clean. Don't wash anything that has held fat until you have set it on a warm range to melt all fat that clings to the sides.

THREE NICE ONES.

CANDIED GINGER.

Scald and peel ginger root. Cut in convenient pieces for eating. Boil up three times in separate waters. Drain and measure. Add an equal amount of extracted honey and half as much water. Bring slowly to the boiling point and let simmer until translucent and very tender. Drain and spread on paraffin paper to dry.

ORANGE SPONGE.

Three oranges, juice and pulp, 14 cup white sugar, 1/2 lemon, juice and pulp, 2 1/2 pints of cold water. Strain. Mix three tablespoons cornstarch in a little cold water, add to the liquid and let boil ten or 15 minutes. Set aside to cool. Beat whites of three eggs and whip into the sponge with a Dover egg-beater, when it is ready to serve.

LIGHT SPONGE PUDDING.

Mix a teaspoonful of flour with a little cold water until quite smooth. Add a well-beaten egg, a pinch of salt and a teaspoon of milk. Beat the mixture well, turn into an individual baking dish, which has been well buttered, cover with a greased or oiled paper, and steam gently for half an hour. Turn out and serve with sauce or fruit juice or some jam or jelly. It is important that the pudding be steamed gently to prevent it from curdling.

Learn to Do Without.

One of the arts of life is to learn how to do without. Few of us have everything we consider desirable and if we grumble at every little deprivation we make ourselves miserable and our associates uncomfortable. To learn to do without and yet be cheery and happy, goes far toward making life a success. One way for a woman to get all puffed up is with a powder puff.

IN THE SPRING

When Energy and Vitality are Lowest, then—Influenza!

(By S. C. BOWER, M. D.)

At this time of the year people feel weak, tired, listless, their blood is thin, they have lived indoors and perhaps expended all their mental and bodily energy and they want to know how to renew their energy and stamina, overcome headaches and backaches, have clear eyes, a smooth, ruddy skin and feel the exhilaration of real good health tingling thru their bodies. Good, pure, rich, red blood is the best insurance against ills of all kinds. You are apt to suffer from an attack of influenza if your health is run down.

Purify the blood and you can defy influenza. This is the time to clean house and freshen up a bit.

Drink hot water a half hour before meals, and for a vegetable tonic there's nothing better than Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the old-fashioned herbal remedy, which has had such a fine reputation for fifty years. STRAITFORD, ONT.—"For many years I suffered with neuritis. It would affect my head, extending down into my neck and shoulders. I took Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and was completely cured. I have also taken Pleasant Pellets and found them an excellent remedy for constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach and liver troubles. They seem to regulate one's whole system. Ever since I can remember Dr. Pierce's medicines have been used in my family. I am always ready to recommend them."—W. J. TANK, 272 Railway Avenue.

"Try the capon," said Maude, with interest.

"Well, I will," said Jack, and Mr. Porter cut a wing.

"Dare I ask your advice?" said Mr. Shallop, with a smile, but a respectful one.

"Oh, yes," said Lady Maud, graciously. "I should say the currie; lawyers like cases well-seasoned, you know."

Mr. Shallop laughed and went in for the currie.

Jack, feeling conversational, now turned to Lady Maud.

"What are you drinking, Maud, dry or sweet?"

"Dry," said Lady Maud.

"Then try sweet," said Jack, with a laugh. "I heard a good riddle the other day—"

"Then don't tell me," interrupted her ladyship. "I gbor riddles, conundrums and charades."

"Never mind Maud, Jack dear; tell me," said Lady Maud.

"Well, I don't know," said Jack, "perhaps when Maud is out of the way."

"I'll stop up my ears," said Lady Maud, and she covered her thin, shell-like appendages with her white hands that looked to advantage in the position.

"Come," said Jack, "that's obliging," and, being in a good humor, he pretended to pull them away, at which, when his hands touched hers, Lady Maud, with a little push and a twitch of the mouth, let them fall and sat patiently.

"When," said Jack, "is champagne like corn?"

"When it's wheat," said Mr. Shallop, at once. "That's very easy."

"And very silly," said Lady Maud, with grave and queenliness. "That came from Mr. Fopton, I suppose; it has an odor of his absurdity about it."

"No," said Jack, looking modest. "I invented it. Don't look shocked, Maud, I have caught you in your own net. And now I will have a glass of the same Maud, if you please, and you, dear Lady, shall pour it out."

Lady Maud was in good humor, and when Mr. Porter, with immense gravity, approached with the bottle, she took it in her dainty hands and, protesting that she should let it fall, filled

Jack's glass.

Through the several courses and to the termination of the repast, the light talk ran trippingly, harmonized occasionally by a hearty laugh from Jack, and a smooth, well-bred smile from Lady Maud, and then, after just sipping her glass of old port, Lady Pacewell arose, saying, as Jack held the door open for her:

"Don't let Mr. Shallop inveigle you into a business chat, my dear Jack, you shall not have the tea in until you come."

"All right," said Jack, and returned to his place.

Mr. Porter, with condescending amiability, put two easy-chairs before the fire for the gentlemen; placed a bottle of the special Pacewell port between them, and withdrew.

Jack strolled to the window ere he took his seat.

"Snowing," he said.

"Heaven help the poor," murmured Jack, with a touch of sadness.

"Yes, just so," said Mr. Shallop, carelessly. "A great deal of distress about lately," and he sipped his wine and looked at the fire as if the liquor and the warmth gained additional relish from that reflection.

"Too much," said Jack, "by half. By the way," he said, "is there not some sort of institution for the poor in the east of London?"

"Yes, hundreds," said Mr. Shallop. "Of what class do you mean—soup kitchens, night refuges, hospitals for sick children?"

Jack nodded.

"Shallop," he said, suddenly, "you know more about my money affairs than I know myself." ("I am afraid I do," murmured Mr. Shallop, softly, too softly to be heard. "I wish you would put down on your expense list one or two of these institutions. Say ten guineas for the best soup kitchen and ten guineas each for the best conducted of all others—all in the east of London.")

Mr. Shallop took out a dainty memorandum book, more like a lady's playing than a lawyer's notebook—and jotted a note to that effect.

"You take an interest in the east of London?" he asked.

"Eh?" said Jack, rather hesitatingly. The lawyer repeated his question.

"Yes," said Jack, "I saw it for the first time a few weeks ago," and he sighed.

"Now, what the deuce does she want down to the east?" queried the lawyer, his sharp eyes twinkling in the firelight.

"Indeed," he added, aloud, "a dreadful place, was never down there but once, some law business, I remember. In fact, it was business connected with the Pacewell estate," and he laughed, softly.

"Yes," said Jack, not interested, but asking out of mere politeness, "what was it?"

"Well, we were looking for a missing heir; one would think you would not have far to seek the heir to twenty thousand a year?"

"No," said Jack, suddenly interested. "That was before my time?" he asked, meaning the date at which he had entered upon his fortune.

"Yes," said Mr. Shallop, "and if we had succeeded in finding the heir, your time, I am sorry to say, would never have come at all."

"Oh," said Jack, "you mean the missing brother, the Pacewell, who died abroad?"

"Yes," said Mr. Shallop.

And in leaning back in his chair he contrived to get a glance at the easy face of the young man without his being aware of it.

"Yes, it was a singular thing. He disappeared some years before the fortune was left, and few knew the cause. I was among the few. He disappeared for a while, then turned up in London. I always thought that if I wanted him I should be able to put my hand upon him, but it proved that I was wrong. He slipped away and died in the most provoking manner in Australia. I say provoking manner, meaning it only in one sense; in the other it was an excellent and most wise thing, for I need not say the fortune is better applied in its present owner's hands."

Mother and Son Are Both Grateful

FOR THE GOOD DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS DID THEM.

Cured Mrs. Larson's Sore Back, and Put an End to Her Son's Sleepless Nights.

Bergland, Ont., April 7.—(Special)—"I am glad to have an opportunity to give fair credit to Dodd's Kidney Pills, for the good they did me, and also my family," says Mrs. John S. Larson, a well-known and highly respected resident of the place. "We have been using them as a family remedy for sore back."

"At the time I ordered Dodd's Kidney Pills I did it more for a fancy than from any belief in their curative value."

"But I was all in from an aching back, I caught a bad cold and that settled on my kidneys so bad that I could not sleep, and I could not work."

"When I stooped forward my back was so sore that I had to brace up my body by putting my elbows on my knees and I could hardly rise up again."

"After taking two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills the pain decreased some and my back is fairly good unless I overwork."

"Also one of my young sons had diseased kidneys, so that he had to get up every half hour during the night. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him, and now he can sleep all night."

"I am very grateful to Dodd's Kidney Pills."

"Dodd's Kidney Pills have been curing kidney ills for over twenty-five years. Ask your neighbors about them."

And he inclined his head respectfully to Jack, who quietly poked the fire.

"I don't know that," he said. "But why should he have been in hiding? What had he done?"

"Well, I never could find out quite," said Mr. Shallop. "The Pacewells were always a close family. I fancy that he was given to drinking and made a mesalliance, fell out of their circle and into disrepute; and if I am right in my conjectures, it needed nothing more to keep him out of the way. The Pacewells were as sensitive as they were proud, and, if any man did not mind his disgracing himself individually, he would change his name that he might not disgrace his family."

"I see," said Jack. "I almost wish he was alive and had the money. But see to those institutions, will you, please? And if you can find one for used-up actors and actresses—you can make it twenty guineas."

Mr. Shallop's eyes opened a little, but he took out his notebook and made an additional bequest.

"You are interested in theatricals?" he asked, quietly.

"Yes, I am," said Jack, with just the slightest flush, "and now you mention it I don't think I can do better than ask your advice upon a matter I have in hand. That sounds quite commercial, doesn't it?" and he laughed, but with a certain shyness.

"And yet," said Mr. Shallop, echoing the laugh, "I hope it is not commercial, for, with all due deference, you do not manage your money affairs with very great success."

"No? Well, set your mind at rest, it is not a speculation on 'Change. I don't want you to buy me shares in the Great Wheat-Bang tin mine, but to give me your advice and assistance as a man of the world."

Mr. Shallop nodded.

Jack poked the fire again and cleared his throat.

"Mr. Shallop," he said, "I am very much interested in an individual, a gentleman, who, I believe, placed in trying circumstances by ill-luck and those accidents which will befall the best and worst regulated human lives. That was neatly turned, I think. Thank Heaven, if anything happens I can earn my living in the compilation of polite letter-writers."

Mr. Shallop laughed.

"Yes," he said, "a gentleman very down in the world."

"Well, not very," said Jack, thoughtfully. "There are many far lower. To cut the matter short, he is an actor, an actor of an east end theatre—"

Mr. Shallop got out his notebook, but Jack put out his hand with an exclamation of impatience.

"Confound it, man, not that way," he said. "I don't want you to take instructions as if you were going to lay out five hundred pounds or draw up a lease. I want your advice as a man of the world."

Mr. Shallop put up his notebook, not at all offended, and rubbed his hands.

"Well," said Jack, "he's an actor at an east end theatre; he may be a good actor or he may not. I am not a critic and can't say. He interests me, and his voice is as deep as a diving-bell and sonorous as a brown bear's."

Mr. Shallop laughed.

"Great recommendation in a tragedian," he said.

TERRIBLE AGONY FROM RHEUMATISM

A Sufferer Shows How Complete Relief Was Obtained.

Rheumatism is a trouble extremely difficult to get rid of. If a tendency to rheumatism is established in the system it makes itself manifest by a return of the acute pains with every spell of bad weather. This is why so many people think the trouble is due to cold or damp. The fact is known, however, to medical men, that with the appearance of rheumatism there is a rapid thinning of the blood, and that the rheumatic poisons are only expelled from the system when the blood is restored to its normal condition. This means that to drive rheumatism from the system it must be treated through the blood, and for this purpose no other medicine has been so successful as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills renew and enrich the blood, thus driving out the rheumatic poison, easing the aching, painful, swollen joints, and restoring the victim to general good health. Among the rheumatic sufferers who have been cured by the use of this medicine is Mrs. Wm. Johnston, Chatham, Ont., who says: "Some years ago, while living in Mount Forest, I was stricken with inflammatory rheumatism, from which I suffered terrible agony. Neither the doctor who attended me, nor the remedies I tried gave more than a little relief for a time, and as a consequence, I grew very weak and was on the verge of nervous prostration. At this stage an uncle advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, as they had cured him of a severe attack of rheumatism. I took his advice and faithfully used the pills for several months, when I found myself fully restored to health, with every vestige of the rheumatism, and every symptom of the nerve trouble gone. I have had no return of either trouble since, and feel very grateful for what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills did for me."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can be obtained through any medicine dealer, or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"Just so," said Jack. "Well, then, he has a gentlemanly manner, and seems a good-hearted, well-conducted, respectable man. Now, Mr. Shallop, I want to do something for him."

"Yes?" said Mr. Shallop.

"And it must be done sub rosa, no charity will do; he would scent it out, and very likely give me a sound hiding."

"I don't think it shall be in the shape of charity then," said Mr. Shallop, shrugging his shoulders.

Jack laughed.

"He is very proud, and it will have to be done on the quiet and while he is hoodwinked."

"Have you thought of any channel through which the benefit might reach him?" asked Mr. Shallop.

"Yes," said Jack, "we must get him an engagement at one of the principal theatres."

Mr. Shallop whistled.

"When?" he said; easier said than done. Engagements at the West-end don't go begging."

"No," said Jack, "I suppose not, but by hook or by crook we must manage it. You know all the fashionable managers and those sort of people, and must get the thing done for me. You said once very prettily that money could buy anything. Buy me an engagement for my friend, and I won't look twice at the price. You understand?"

"Hem!" he said. "Well, I can do nothing until I have seen this gentleman—on the boards I mean. May I ask his name?"

"His name," said Jack, "is Montague—Horatius Montague—and he plays at the Royal Signet."

Mr. Shallop drew out his pocketbook.

"You must let me jot that down," he said, laughing, "or I shall have forgotten it before I reach the office to-morrow morning."

"Hot away," said Jack.

"Horatius Montague, Royal Signet Theatre. Private address?" asked Mr. Shallop.

"I don't know," said Jack, dryly.

Mr. Shallop opened his eyes.

"Well," he said, "I must make the best use of this, I suppose."

"You will go and see him?" asked Jack, "and tell me if you think you can manage to help me?"

"I will," said Mr. Shallop.

There was a moment's silence spent by the lawyer in wondering how Mr. Moratius Montague had managed to catch his wealthy client's interest, when suddenly Jack poked the fire and said, in a tone of the most sublime indifference:

"By the way, I should tell you that there is a daughter—"

"Ah," thought the lawyer, "now I can understand it. This is the missing piece that makes the puzzle plain. A daughter?" he said, "for whom I must get an engagement also?"

"Just so," said Jack, trying to keep up the indifference.

"May I ask the young lady's age?" asked Mr. Shallop.

"You may if you like, but I guess if she'll tell you; I can't," and Jack laughed.

Mr. Shallop, throw off his guard and enjoying his joke, was incautious to run on with:

"And has she a diving-bell voice with brown bearish capabilities?" he stopped suddenly as Jack's face darkened and his eyes assumed that cold, haughty expression which the Pacewell lawyer knew so well.

"That you can discover for yourself," he replied, gravely. "The father and the daughter are acting on the same nights. You have the name of the theatre, and the sooner you can conveniently give the matter your attention the greater will be my gratitude."

Mr. Shallop bowed respectfully, and Jack, who was forgiving, passed the bottle and said:

"A glass of wine to the undertaking."

"Right willingly," said Mr. Shallop.

And with mutual good will again they drained the glasses.

"And now," said Jack, "having nearly poked the fire out and bored you to death, I think I'll propose the drawing-room. My aunt will be hankering after the cup that cheers and does not inebriate."

CHAPTER VI.

Lady Maud had a deliciously easy lounge beside her own in front of the great fire, and her delicately tinted silk swept it at the edge. She drew it aside and made room for him with a smile of welcome.

"Come and be seated," she said.

"Aunt and I are browsing gradually."

"All right," he said, sinking into the seat of down and velvet an dholding his strong, white hand out to the blaze. "Aunt is now going to get cooked in another way; Mr. Shallop has got her, you see."

"And there will be nothing but share lists and Change talk, advanced rentals and income tax for the rest of the evening," said Lady Maud, gleaning languidly at the table where Lady Pacewell and the amusing lawyer were seated.

"Never mind, we will have a game at backgammon," said Jack.

"No," said Lady Maud, "I want you to enjoy your evening, not to be bored to death. I know you hate backgammon, and, between me and Fido here, I hate it, too."

Jack laughed.

"All right," he said, in his lazy way. "Give me a cup of tea then, and we will play the idle apprentices."

Lady Maud gave him a strong cup of tea in a delicate toy cup, and held the piece of sugar suspended in the tongs over it.

"Oh, never mind the sugar," said Jack, with indolent gallantry. "It will be quite sweet enough if you pour it out."

Lady Maud laughed, and after placing the cups at her aunt's and Mr. Shallop's elbows, sat down again.

"Jack, you are improving, I am sure of it. That was not a bad compliment. Rather a knockdown, rough-and-ready kind, but still not bad for you."

"Thanks," said Jack. "Kind to qualify it; you might make me vain."

"Vain boy," she said, and lightly, just so lightly, laid her hand upon his arm.

It was a feather's weight of a caress, but caresses from such an exquisitely beautiful woman as Lady Maud—and at that particular after-dinner hour when the senses are already lulled to a sweet, balmy comfort are dangerous things.

If you do not want to be cut don't play with edged tools.

Jack either forgot or was ignorant of the admonition, for with his low, musical laugh, he laid his hand upon the one that had tapped him and looked at it.

It was a shapely hand; it was a white hand; its fingers glistened with rubies and diamonds; it was a hand once caught should be always kept, for the looking at constantly, for the kissing occasionally.

(To be continued.)

DANGER OF EXPLOSION.

"Was Maud's make-up as obvious as usual at the party last night?"

"Was it? Mercy! Whenever her face lit up I was afraid it would set off the powder."—Boston Transcript.

Any Woman's Struggle For Good Health Quickly Rewarded

A HOME TREATMENT NOW ADVOCATED THAT GIVES FINE RESULTS.

When a woman's face grows haggard and pale, when she is tired all day and ready to cry when night comes, she ought to know something is wrong.

Putting off only makes matters worse. The best advice we can give any sickly woman is to test out the following treatment:

At the close of every meal, with a sip or two of water, take two chocolate-coated Ferrozone Tablets. This seems to be the best thing going for folks that are tired out, run-down and in need of a strengthening, building-up medicine.

Ferrozone's action aids the three principal functions of the body—digestion, assimilation, elimination.

By strengthening digestion it forms an abundance of rich, red blood—this gives good color.

By perfecting assimilation, Ferrozone supplies nutrition—this gives strength, vim, stability.

Elimination is assured because Ferrozone quickens the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels—this guarantees the maintenance of vigorous health.

Ferrozone puts you on the right road—the one that leads to health.

Not a man, woman or child needing blood, vigor, endurance—not a person who is weak, nervous or sickly—not a person in ill-health who won't receive immediate help from Ferrozone.

As a tonic and restorative, as a health-bringer and body builder, Ferrozone is unrivalled. It cures because it feeds and nourishes, because it contains the elements that build up and strengthen. Try it yourself—sold everywhere in 50 cent boxes, 6 boxes for $2.50, or by mail from The Catarrhose Co., Kingston, Ont.

GOOD REASON, TOO!

It happened at a Red Cross tea held at a country club. The fussy old gentleman of the white vest tapped the tweed-clad youngster on the shoulder. "My boy," he said, "why are you not in the army?"

The boy smiled. "To be frank with you, sir," he said, "I don't like it. There's all this business of sleeping in the mud, and uncooked food, and rain all the time—dashed uncomfortable, you know."

"Uncomfortable!" The white vest-front heaved indignantly. "Are you not of age, in good health or physically fit?"

"Yes—sound as a drum. Just twenty-two, no dependents." The young man was still cheerful. The inevitable group gathered about them.

"Disgusting! Have you no patriotism—no love of country? What is your reason for not being in the army? Confess, coward!"

"I can't be," said the cheerful youth. "I'm in the navy. Eighteen hours' leave and special permission to wear 'civies.'"

Cares for It.

"And do you care for the theater, Mrs. Murphy?"

"Sure, I do not. My husband does that."

"Does what?"

"Cares for the theater! He's the janitor!"

RIGHT IN IT.

"Virginia is consistent in everything, isn't she?"
"What now?"
"Why, her new mermaid gown is to be made of watered silk."

Gasped.

The perfume of the wildwood flower
Expands across the scene,
And then is wholly smothered by
The scent of gasoline.

A Sleepy Humorist.

Mrs. Timmid—John, wake up! There's a man downstairs; I'm sure I heard a noise that sounded like a yawn.

Husband—Oh, go to sleep. What you heard was probably the rubber plant stretching itself."

His Real Worth.

"Did you see the widow of our late friend?"

"Yes, but when I told her I had called to extend my condolences, she asked my congratulations instead. She had just received his insurance money."

Sad but True.

Mrs. Hickson—Some men are so peculiar.

Mr. Huson—How so?

Mrs. Hickson—They would rather lose $30 playing poker than give their wives $10 for a new hat.

Their Way.

"Average juries remind me of a self-cocking revolver."

"In what way?"

"They go off as soon as they're charged, but nobody knows what they're going to hit."

New Names Wanted.

New names for Arctic lands and seas probably will soon be wanted in Ottawa as a result of the discoveries of Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the returned Canadian Arctic explorer. A board of geologists in Ottawa directs the giving of names to all of Canada's new-found possessions.

Suggestions have been made that "Stefansson's Land" should be the name of the group of islands found by the explorer northwest of Prince Patrick Land. Stefansson, however, says new lands are never named after the men who find them.

Another name will be needed for what has long been called Prince Gustav Adolph Sea, thought to be an arm of the Arctic Ocean. Stefansson found that the sea wasn't a sea at all, but contained the new land he discovered.

Found Wagon-load of Eggs.

Pte. Matthew King in a letter to his people at Colborne, tells of the luck of a Canadian battalion which, in taking possession of a captured town recently found a "wagonful of hard-boiled eggs," which they proceeded forthwith to put to excellent use. King adds: "Fritz has plenty of good food for his soldiers, no matter how those at home may be running short."

Paint For Protection
PAINT YOUR BUILDINGS

High Finance and Paint

A farm with buildings preserved with good paint is from a financial standpoint a better selling proposition than a farm which has buildings left bare of paint to all kinds of weather.

The farmer who preserves his buildings, and keeps them in good repair, will naturally leave the impression with the general public, that his farm all around is better kept than the man who lets his buildings get out of repair.

There are about 63 per cent of farm buildings of all classes in Ontario suffering from lack of paint.

A few dollars spent in painting your buildings will increase the value of your property more than you would ever imagine.

Good Roads and Good Paint

Go a long way towards promoting better farming conditions. Paint suggests general cleaning up, and when protection is the motive for painting, you can rest pretty well assured that such a farmer is taking care of his assets in equally good manner.
