Simplicity Marks the Funeral Ceremonies at Sandringham

Submarine M-1 Rammed by Swedish Steamer—Painleve Cabinet Resigns—Mourning Ordered in European Courts for Queen Mother.

SIMPLICITY MARKS FUNERAL CEREMONY.

SANDRINGHAM, Nov. 22. With ceremonies as simple as would have been accorded a humble villager Queen Mother Alexandra's body, in a coffin cut from oak on the Royal estate, by estate carpenters, was borne early this morning on a wheeled bier by household servants to Sandringham Church in the presence of the King, the Queen, the Prince of Wales and other members of the Royal Family, and most of the regular congregation. A simple service was conducted. No other service will be held until the final one. The utmost simplicity marks the interment arrangements. The body will be laid beside her husband, King Edward VII, under the Albert Memorial Chapel, at Windsor Castle, where they were married in 1863.

PRIVATE FAMILY SERVICE.

SANDRINGHAM, Nov. 22. A private family service for Dowager Queen Alexandra was conducted Saturday by her chaplain, Rev. Dr. Grant, in the bedroom of Sandringham House. The King and Queen and near relatives attended.

SPANISH COURT IN MOURNING.

MADRID, Nov. 22. By Royal decree the Spanish Court has gone into mourning for seven weeks because of the death of the Queen Mother, Queen Alexandra, of England.

M-1 SANK AFTER COLLISION.

LONDON, Nov. 21. The loss of the monitor submarine M-1, with 68 lives, last week, now appears to have been due to a collision with a Swedish steamer, so the Admiralty announced to-day. This information is due to a report sent by the captain of the steamer Vidar, now at Stockholm, that he felt a shock at the time and in the vicinity of where the submarine disappeared, and this leads to the conclusion that the M-1 was struck by the Vidar and sank immediately.

PAINLEVE CABINET DEFEATED, RESIGNS.

PARIS, Nov. 12. The Painleve Cabinet resigned to-day, following an adverse vote in the Chamber of Deputies on the Government's finance bill. The administration was beaten by three votes.

FOUR KILLED IN 90-FOOT CRASH.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 22. Four workmen were crushed to death and a fifth was critically injured as the result of a 90-foot drop to the cement floor inside a huge concrete elevator under construction here, when the scaffold on which they were working broke Sunday morning.

WITNESS SHOT DEAD IN CHICAGO COURT.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22. Gang warfare invaded a coroner's inquest in Chicago, when Sam Vincl, attending an inquest into the death of his brother, Mike, whipped out a pistol and shot to death John Minatti, a witness. He was grabbed by the police before he could pull the trigger a second time.

AUSTRALIAN ELECTION RESULTS.

MELBOURNE, Nov. 22. With the victory of the Government candidates, Dr. Nott, over S. G. Theodore, former Labor Premier of Queensland, the standing of the parties in the House of Representatives is now: Nationals, 28; Country Party, 14; Labor, 23.

BOSTON, Nov. 21. The bodies of eight members of the crew of the coastguard cutter Morrill, drowned Monday night, at Shelburne, Nov. 8, were brought here to-day aboard the cutter Tampa. A flotilla of coastguard patrol craft with flags at half mast escorted the Tampa up the harbor to the Navy Yards.

Induction of the Lord Mayor of London

LONDON, Nov. 9.—The ancient ceremonies attending the induction of London's new Lord Mayor, including a long symbolic procession through the streets, which from time immemorial has been a feast for the eyes, was carried out to-day in wintry but bright, sunny weather, and attracted the customary great crowds. The new Lord Mayor, Sir William Robert Pryke, is 78 years of age, but is still so sprightly that he was referred to by the City Recorder in his speech "as like Peter Pan."

The procession itself was on this occasion a sort of miniature Wembley Exhibition on wheels—a pageant of Empire trade. The feature was Australia's giant plum pudding, guarded by a kangaroo and a nodding cow with six white horses driven by Father Christmas with a bobbed beard.

Banquet at Guild Hall.

The ceremonies culminated with the historic Guild Hall banquet, with its great baron of beef and turtle soup, its city trumpeters to welcome the important guests, and other ancient rites of London's city father. The banquet is a traditional occasion for political oratory, and there was a brilliant company of Ministers of the Crown and prominent men in all walks of life.

There was a hint of Locarno in another Franco-German gesture, the French Ambassador, H. Delleurieu making it a point of specially greeting the German Ambassador, Dr. Stamer, and chatting with him for several minutes at the reception preceding the banquet.

Among the guests were the United States, Spanish, Portuguese and Brazilian Ambassadors, Admiral Lord Beatty, the Archbishop of Canterbury and Dean Inge. In passing the loving cup, Mr. Baldwin, on the one side, and Austen Chamberlain on the other, drank with Dr. Stamer.

After the royal toasts were honored, Mr. Chamberlain toasted "The Ambassadors and Ministers," expressing the belief that peace was better off than a year ago, the Foreign Secretary devoted himself to the events at Locarno. He was convinced that what was done there responded to the conscious need of the whole world and would be ratified by every country, for, he added, "no statesman would dare assume the responsibility before history of dashing from our lips the cup of hope that Locarno has presented, and no nation dare face the obloquy which would follow denial to the world in the hour of its greatest need of its dearest and profoundest hope."

Mr. Chamberlain continued:

The Spirit of Locarno.
"But it is not the written treaties of Locarno which alone will work the changes we desire. It is the spirit of Locarno that the world needs and must cherish. Mr. Lord Mayor, thanks to your hospitality I have drunk tonight a loving cup with the German Ambassador. What he and I have done this evening may our nations do to-morrow."

"We will work in the spirit of Locarno, that a peace of our world may be kept and civilization recover from its wounds."

Mr. Chamberlain concluded with the hope that the same spirit of mutual good-will would hover over the Treaty powers conference at Peking, bringing new fellowship between the East and West. He coupled the toast with the name of Senor Merry del Val, the Spanish Ambassador, Dean of the Diplomatic Corps whom he described as "a representative of a sovereign so closely allied with our royal house, well known and admired in our country and of a nation with a great future."

The Spanish Ambassador, responding, paid high tribute to the City of London, which he said, "amid all storms, political and otherwise, stands serene and immovable, a pledge to humanity of all most sacred and precious in life, a guarantor and trustee of peace."

He paid high tribute also to Mr. Chamberlain's accomplishment at Locarno. It was not only at Locarno that Great Britain evidenced her will for peace, but she had sent the Prince of Wales half around the world as a messenger of peace, who had journeyed indefatigably in many countries and among many races, bearing in the folds of his mantle the "pax Britannica" founded less on force than on the power of justice.

Praised Mr. Chamberlain. The Prime Minister, Stanley Baldwin, replying to the toast to His Majesty's Ministers, warmly praised Mr. Chamberlain's efforts at Locarno, saying: "Everyone of his colleagues is proud of him."

Apart from this reference, Premier Baldwin's speech mainly concerned home and Dominion affairs and British trade and industrial prospects, in which he expressed tempered optimism. He believed that a large supply of cotton from America would stimulate Lancashire trade, and that the peaceful settlement of Western Europe would greatly help in restoring prosperity. Dealing with the valuable unselfish and unheralded work of the common people he caused laughter by remarking: "There are millions of good men whose names never get into the newspapers."

The other speakers included the Air Minister, Sir Samuel Hoare, who announced his department's willingness to lend a machine to contest for the Schneider Cup in 1926 in the United States, and Earl Beatty, who urged the need of maintaining an effective navy.

Arrest in Decline

OF BRITISH IRON AND STEEL PRODUCTION.

The steady decline in the production of iron and steel in Great Britain, which has continued for so many months, appears to have been arrested in September, according to advices received by the Bankers Trust Company of New York from its British Information Service. Pig iron production in the 30 days of September was 448,700 tons. This was slightly higher than for the 31 days of August, 444,500 tons, while the production of steel ingots and castings of 640,100 tons was higher than in any month since May comparing with 477,100 tons in August and 645,000 tons in September 1924. The number of furnaces in blast declined by 7 to 123, 10 having gone out and 3 having been blown in during the month.

Exports of iron and steel were the lowest of any month this year, amounting to 199,000 tons, as against 232,800 tons in August and 207,200 tons in September 1924. The decrease is probably attributable to the Belgian strike. However, exports were also lower than in any previous month this year amounting to 373,200 tons as against 237,800 tons in August and 263,800 tons in September, 1924.

Employment was slightly better than at the end of August, an increase of 1,370 being recorded. The average earnings of the 105,072 operatives employed during August by 121 firms amounted to £2 17s 2d per week, compared with £2 11d during July and £2 19s 6d in June.

The production of coal in the United Kingdom in the month of September was 18,808,000 as against 17,068,000 tons in August and 22,149,000 tons in September 1924. The value of shares of iron and steel corporations, expressed in a percentage of a nominal value of 100, was 60.5 on September 30, as compared with 62.8 on September 14, 68.2 on August 14, and with 73.7 on September 15, 1924.

Our Montreal Letter

(From Our Own Correspondent)

NEW NURSES' HOME IN CONNECTION WITH THE MONTREAL GENERAL HOSPITAL.

A nine-storey Nurses' Home, in connection with the Montreal General Hospital will be in course of construction in a few days, and will be completed by next October. The portion to be erected will accommodate 210, while the whole accommodation plan will provide for 450 nurses. Procedure of a part of the plan is accounted for by the financial position of the Hospital. The new building to which two more storeys will be added later, will be situated on the property opposite the Montreal General Hospital on Dorchester Street.

The ground floor plans provide for reception room, libraries and quarters for the superintendent of the training department. The next floor will have provision for educational purposes. The staff nurses will occupy the next two floors and the remaining part of the residence will be for training nurses.

An appeal will be made next spring to the public for funds to further relieve the acute need for public and private hospital accommodation. Hospitals have been taxed to the full during the past summer months and the situation has been ably met, but the fact remains that additional beds are urgently needed.

TOO MANY JUVENILE CASES SETTLED OUT OF COURT.

Judge Lacroix is instituting an investigation into the practice of settling cases against juvenile offenders out of court. Many cases against youngsters have not been tried because the complainants failed to appear. Outside influence has been at work, and such work is only hampering and hindering the good which the influence at the command of the court would exercise. In too many cases, "the dropping the case" or "fixing it up privately," has made the youngsters bolder and more determined to cling to their evil ways.

Adults contributing to the delinquency of juveniles are being sought as the real culprits. Twice during the week Judge Lacroix handed out fines of $25 and $50 to parents who had contributed to the delinquency of their children. Two men were given a long term in jail for having been instrumental in making youngsters break the law. Two other men were fined $300 and $500 for contributing to the immorality of young girls. In one day the juvenile court had to handle forty-two cases. The adult who had a gang of fifteen working for him and profiting by their spoils was apprehended and remanded for trial.

THREE PERIODS IN THE LIFE OF EVERYBODY.

George A. Bellamy, speaking at the annual meeting of the Hiram House trustees said that the most important years in the development of the personality of children are from 1 to 10. A boy who is lazy at 10 will be lazy at 20.

"Each individual has three distinct elements," Bellamy said, "a body, a mind and personality. Or you can call it instinct, soul, character."

"There are three periods in the life of everyone. Between birth and 10 years imagination is developed. The child's mind is simply a receptacle for what society pours into it."

"From ten to twenty years, what society has poured in is reshaped. Here guidance is essential. The third, adult age, is when the individual breaks away from the moorings."

"What we have poured into their minds between the first ten years and have guided during the next ten will decide to a large degree what the children will be when adult."

To growing children, Bellamy pointed out, prize fighting develops the egoist. Fighters crouch, waiting to put over the knockout blow. They are hoping for an error by their opponent.

In football, instead of hoping for an opponent's error, each man is sacrificing himself so his team may win. There are three procedures in the development of personality, according to Bellamy. An early beginning is essential. There must be exercise and training. The emotions must be exercised in creative ways.

"The jazz age," Bellamy said, is not a result of the war. "It existed before the war," he said, "came to a temporary halt during the war and is back again."

THE EX-MAYOR WILL BE A CANDIDATE.

In the next civic elections in 1926, the familiar and once popular Mayor of Montreal, Hon. Mederic Martin, will again be in the limelight as he will be a candidate for his old position as Chief Magistrate of the City. During the election campaign Hon. Mederic Martin received some rousing receptions at the big Liberal meetings. In the Forum at the reception tendered to Premier King, Mederic received a royal welcome and was cheered to the echo. In fact, he was even more popular than the Premier. Mederic is a staunch Liberal, and when he was on the hustings for his party, be-stimulate my jaded thews; I am with the moral critics who abhor the Demon Booze. But my nose is like a beacon, though its hue is a mistake, and this fact is bound to weaken any moral talk I'd make. If I followed up my yearning I would lecture all saloons who go by me daily, burning cigarettes or large cheroots. I would roast the idle voters, loafing by the village Kirk, talking gasoline and motors, when they ought to be at work. I'd rebuke the sinful people who profane the Sabbath day, while the bell in yonder steeple summons them to sing and pray. For I love to call attention to the evils of the times; to my neighbors I would mention all their errors, all their crimes. But my talks are total losses, for the people will not hear; pointing to my red proboscis, they refer to rum and beer. They insist that no reformer should reproach his fellow men, when his nose is glowing warmer than a bonfire in the glen. So I pass the erring blighter and I'll lecture him no more till my nose is bleached and whiter than the snow on Greenland's shore.

Farmers' of Canada Rich Harvest

OTTAWA, Nov. 17.—Canada's wealth this year will show a remarkable increase as a result of expanded production on the farm. A tremendous jump in grain, principally the wheat and the potato, and a bumpy harvest, and a notable growth in the dairy industry all contribute a highly satisfactory position for primary producers. It was estimated to-day by Dairy Commissioner J. A. Ruddock, that the dairy production for this year would be approximately $800,000,000, and the exports would amount to about $55,000,000. This represents an increase of $50,000,000 in the total value of production.

A preliminary estimate, issued to-day, of the yield and value of the potato crop and fodder crop shows potatoes at 44,497,000 cwt., from 545,891 acres, as compared with 58,848,000 cwt. from 561,652 in 1924, but the value of this year's crop is estimated at $64,486,000 as compared with $47,956,000 last year. The value of the crop in New Brunswick, a large potato producer is valued this year at $7,525,000 as compared with $3,625,000 last year.

The value of the combined yield of other roots, such as turnips and mangolds for Canada is estimated for this year at $27,950,000 as compared with $17,384,000 last year. The value of hay and clover shows a drop of about $5,000,000.

Add to this farm wealth is that produced by this year's record-breaking yield of grain. Wheat this year for the whole Dominion is estimated at 422,327,000 bushels, as compared with 405,975,000 bushels; and barley 118,118,000 bushels as compared with 89,807,000 bushels. There is reason to hope, too, that with lighter yields in other big grain producing countries the prices for Canada will be high in proportion to the yield.

While Dr. Chase's Ointment recognized everywhere as the standard treatment for piles you may be interested in this letter which describes a particular case. There are thousands of similar cases. Mrs. Wm. Hughes Appin, Ont. writes: "Dr. Chase's Ointment cannot be equalled. I used it for protruding piles of the worst kind. When the Doctor said an operation was the only way I began to prepare for one, when I remembered reading about Dr. Chase's Ointment, I resolved to try it, and using two boxes I had no trace of piles. It was the greatest relief I got, and I only hope other sufferers read this letter will lose no time purchasing a box, and see for themselves the miracles it works. It will be a best investment they ever put money into."

The Harbour Water-front--Whose Care?

Anyone who cares to make a trip along the waterfront of the harbour must be struck with the shabby appearance which it presents, and if he has any knowledge of construction work, he finds in certain premises sufficient evidence of jerrybuilding, and in others of such neglect as would indicate an early collapse.

Our attention has been called in particular to cases of the latter condition, and the particulars furnished would appear to make an early investigation necessary if a catastrophe is to be averted. These wharves, over which heavy loads are carried, are at times occupied by large numbers of long-shoremen, truckmen, and others, but whose business it is to inspect these structures in order to make certain that they are safe we are unable to say. Possibly the duty comes under the authority of the Public Works Department, possibly under that of the Marine and Fisheries, as the latter is responsible for the harbor, but in any case, where the lives of citizens may be endangered, the responsibility certainly rests with the police authorities, and we would suggest that they give the matter their attention.

One of the city regulations requires that buildings erected in the area of which Water Street is a section shall be constructed of stone, brick, concrete or other equally substantial and non-combustible material and the roof of iron, slate or other non-combustible material. The section also stipulates that sheds for the storage of merchandise erected on the wharves (which would indicate that the Council exercises certain control over this property) may be erected of metal frame construction provided that the external walls, roofs, and doors shall be wholly of metal or other unflammable material.

The regulations are admirable, but the actual conditions existing tend to nullify to a great extent their effectiveness. The wharves are of wood, the stairways leading to the buildings are of wood in many cases, wooden flakes cover considerable space, and on several of the wharves are watchmen's houses and other sheds built entirely of wood. Further, it is not unusual to find immense piles of lumber stored in the open on the waterfront. St. John's, according to the regulations in the charter, is in every respect a model city. Unfortunately, the most conspicuous feature in connection with the regulations is their non observance.

The authority of the Municipal Council, it has been said, ends at tidal water, but it must come within the responsibility of that body to see to it that the city is not endangered by anything in the nature of a menace which is permitted to remain immediately outside the city limits. If it is the duty of the Government to make regulations covering such property, then the Council should have sufficient influence to insist that those regulations conform to the requirements of the city and that they are enforced.

Not only would the substitution of concrete in the construction of wharves improve the appearance of the water front, and reduce the fire hazard, but it would also make them permanent structures and obviate the necessity for constant repairs.

Rev. Henry Gordon

WRITES FROM LIVERPOOL.

Rev. Henry Gordon writes from St. James', Toxteth, Liverpool: "This parish is a very busy one with, I believe, as many organisations as at St. Thomas'. Here are some of them: Three Girls Classes and Sunday Schools, Band of Hope, Senior and Junior Girls Clubs, Senior and Junior Lads Clubs, Church Lads Brigade, Boys Training Corps. Our vicarage is a huge house, five stories high; at present we live in only one corner of it. There are various settlements which one has to visit and I am thankful to say that I am finding I can settle down to routine—a fact which I once doubted. I don't think we could have found a greater contrast to Labrador. One needs a stout heart in Merrie England in these times, but I feel some consolation in the thought that I haven't dropped into a soft job."—St. Thomas' Church Bulletin.

The feast of St. Cecilia, Virgin and Martyr and patron of music was celebrated with great pomp and ceremony in St. Peter's and Paul's Church, Port Royal Sunday morning. A special musical programme was arranged by Rev. Francis Caciola, Rector of the Mission. This Mission is attached to the parish of Bar Haven and is one of the largest and most important stations of the parish of Bar Haven. Rev. Francis Caciola was the celebrant. He was assisted by his little altar boys. The vestments worn on the occasion were most beautiful to behold. The altars were neatly prepared and a large congregation attended.

Work on the Dock

Contract to Be Completed on Time--Cost Will Be Well Within the Estimate.

Recovery has been made from the slide which occurred recently at the Dry Dock, and construction work is now going on at the usual rate. Protective measures have been taken to prevent a similar slide, and it is anticipated that the concrete work of the dock proper will be finished by Christmas, as only about 50 feet more in length remains to be completed before the gate is reached. High tides with an unusual heavy underflow following the recent storms were responsible, more than anything else, for the cave in. As a preventative, steel piling could have been placed all round the dock, but this would have added anywhere from fifty to eighty thousand dollars to the cost. The debris from the slide cost no more than three or four hundred dollars to remove.

DOCK WAS UNSAFE.
 Excavation for the site of the pump-house begins this week. The old gate, as well as the machinery of the pump-house has been cleared away. The huge iron suction pipes, used in pumping the dock, were taken away Saturday. They were so badly decayed that they could scarcely stand the strain of lifting. Additional proof of the correctness of the reports of the engineers, that the dock was unsafe, was afforded by the removal of the gate when it was revealed that the retaining walls of concrete were practically crumbled away. That the old dock stood for upwards of 40 years in itself a great recommendation for the builders. Nothing was skimped on the work and much of the timbers, particularly in the floor, were as sound as when they were placed in position. The work of construction was begun by J. E. Simpson, the patentee, in May, 1882. It was completed in December, 1884.

MATERIALS IN NEW STRUCTURE.
 The new dock, which is of reinforced concrete, is designed to withstand a full hydrostatic head, and, unlike the wooden one which it replaces, does not rely on back filling for its stability. Its inside dimensions are: length on bottom, 595 feet; width at top, 59 feet; width at bottom, 70 feet. It is 38 1/4 feet from the floor to the top. Steamers the size of the Empress of Britain, 15,900 tons

COST OF CONSTRUCTION WITHIN ESTIMATE.
 The criticism which was heard when the work of construction began has been outlived, and many of those who were loudest in denouncement are now foremost in expressing their appreciation of the new structure. Rumors that the dock would cost upwards of three million dollars were only flights of imagination, as there is an absolute assurance now that the cost will be within the estimate of one million one hundred thousand dollars, and it must not be forgotten that by far the greater part of this sum will have been expended on labor. The old wooden dock, built when labor could be procured for 60 cents per day, cost over a half million dollars to build.

 Heard Saturday Afternoon.
 A domestic, belonging to Trepassay, was charged with the following offences before Judge Morris on Saturday afternoon last:—(1) Larceny of one ladies' overcoat, valued at $30.00; one scarf, at $5.00; one hat, at $4.00; the property of Mrs. Elliott, on Oct. 29th. (2) Larceny of $6.00 in cash; the property of Mrs. Percy LeMessurier, on November 6th. (3) Larceny of one sweater, valued at $4.00; the property of Mrs. J. Breen, on Nov. 6th. The accused pleaded guilty on all counts. The evidence showed that most of the stolen articles had been recovered, but the value of those not recovered, to the value of $13.00, was made good by the defendant's brother. It being her first offence, she was allowed to go under suspended sentence, but the Judge gave her to understand that she must leave the city immediately, and should she return again within the next twelve months she will be arrested and sent down for three months.

Protest Against Land Grabbing

Fearing that there would not be a stick of wood left for firing or fishing purposes, about 200 residents of Flatrock and Torbay have lodged a protest with the Agriculture, and Mines Department against land grabbing which has lately developed in this section. As far as can be learned one of the residents of the latter place hired the local surveyor, Mr. Roach to survey some crown lands in the vicinity of his home, and having done this he had other tracts surveyed for his sons and relatives. The news of a land boom soon spread with the consequence that every inch of crown land between Pouch Cove and Torbay had a claimant for it, some families having as high as two hundred acres. Delegations from the settlements of Flatrock and Torbay came to the city to-day and lodged a protest with the Mines Department. It is understood that they will petition to have the lands in question held in reserve by proclamation. The Minister of Agriculture has given an attentive ear to the protest and it is understood that when the applications for grants are received they will not be acceded to. Having a survey made is part of the process of obtaining crown lands, but it does not entitle anyone to a holding.

A small car seen on Duckworth Street this morning carried, instead of a number plate, a crown both back and front about two inches square. Fast Driving on Muddy Road

Some citizens, including a couple of ladies, proceeding to Petty Harbor yesterday, had their clothes practically ruined through being splashed with muddy water, by a motor car, the number of which is known, which passed at an all too rapid speed. Fast driving over muddy roads occurs altogether too frequently. Drivers might remember that they are open to action for damages.

Dedication of Window

Before the ringing bell had ceased a quietly awaited service which was the unveiling and dedication of a window erected by the Children's Hour, The back to many those services during which the memory of whom to perpetuate. The unusual solemnity, as the service progressed interior adorn and enriched by the dows of richly staining glass peeling forth and the words and ministrations all did the quiet simple scene be remembered by present. The window, erected in the South-west Church, was unveiled by Rev. Robert Johnson, pastor of the Methodist Presbyterian Church, present Minister of the New Glasgow. The window is "and the back to the streets thereof represented by group singing, dancing and cal instruments, were around the kindergarten. It was selected particularly appropriate the life and work of which was so bound among the children, velling a telegram to the family of the late Dr. to accept the invitation and sending their love. The hymns that were old favourites of Dr. the large congregation in the singing. He preached by Rev. M took as his text:— Hebrews XI, 4.— "speaketh."

This chapter is the great Christian ago. They are remembrance of their but because they saw in the righteous light revealed to the quest for the unseen, and gave of that they believed was as this world shall men and women to follow God's plan away on to the citadels, and likewise who will be satisfied, happy, and the matter their feet.

Though dead he has an example of this Andrew Robertson, a thing worth while in this city and that you would never be erecting this Memorial. It is no doubt a credit your hearts his influence and this has awakened a desire for some of them. The voice speaks, and the represents for the God.

He was born in Edinburgh, famous the and the world for learning. A receptive mind and heart could see surroundings of some of the fragments. Dr. Robertson extended his preaching the masses of his first advent, to the Ministry. He was in the year 1888—37 years to labour the things I know something of instances connected with in the town. He was locally known as the St. Andrew's was and the Presbyterian Church about in the year 1870 the Kirk Church, Nova Scotia, not long ago to long to teach.

Dr. Robertson would all unless they were Presbyterian Church in a vote was taken they a violent majority of the portion of the parish by the Northern Church, and called Dr. Robertson. He was strenuously and for eight years, an

Dedication of Memorial Window at the Kirk

Before the ringing of the Church bell had ceased a well filled Church quietly awaited in anticipation of the service which was to be marked by the unveiling and dedicating of a window erected by the congregation in memory of the Rev. Andrew Robertson, D.D., and the children of the Children's Hour.

Dr. Robertson was called to this Church in the year 1896 at a time when he was in the full vigour of his powers both mental and physical. It is idle for me to speak of his work amongst you. You looked at him every week, you listened to him and you loved him.

In the year 1909 he left you to go to Toronto to St. James' Square Church. No doubt the call to a great centre of population and influence appealed to him. While for a time I have reason to believe he was happy there, yet at the close of his ministry in Toronto, when his views on Church affairs were not in harmony with those of some of the leading members of his Church, one can think of his heart often wandering back to this congregation, the home of his deepest affections and to a people who understood him and who had ever given him about with a remarkable loyalty.

shedding it abroad. The aesthetic belongs to God and surely we can use it as his herald and ambassador. This Dr. Robertson did through the beauty and gifts of a well trained mind.

Let us notice some few things that stand out prominently in the life and ministry of our friend:— 1. His rich manhood and his genius for friendship. His was no colourless life but blood red with the stream of manhood in his veins.

Dr. Robertson would not accept the call unless they decided to enter the Presbyterian Church in Canada. When a vote was taken they did not get a sufficient majority to carry them into Union with the result that a certain portion of the people broke away from the Northern Church, built another, and called Dr. Robertson to be their Minister. He laboured there most strenuously and most successfully for eight years, and gathered round him

The preacher at the morning service was a candidate for the Ministry, Rev. W. G. Barry, of Sydneyham, N.S., who is stationed at Summerford, Green Bay. Taking as his text Luke 10-27, "And Jesus answered and said 'Thou shalt love the Lord Thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength; and thy neighbour as thyself.'"

Once more then we stand at the grave of Andrew Robertson and drop a fresh tear to show the appreciation of our hearers. And yet, why should we weep for our departed. If we have the right conception about death and immortality then our dead in Christ have triumphed and stand on the top of the hill waving the flag of victory while we continue to tramp and trudge on through the valley with weary feet and doubtful vision.

Persia's Bloodless Revolution

Another Mussolini is seen by certain elements in Persia in the assumption of the Shah's throne by Reza Khan Pahlevi, Premier and former Minister of War, after the National Assembly had adopted a resolution deposing the youthful Shah and the Kajar dynasty by a vote of 50 to 5. Thus a private soldier in a Cossack regiment garrisoned in Persia becomes a dictator of an empire which for centuries has been one of the most exclusive monarchies on earth. Little sympathy for the Shah, however, is to be found in American newspapers. In fact, the Shah himself is to blame for the present situation, declares the New York Evening World. "Two years ago he left Persia to regale himself with the delights of Paris. There he has given himself over to wine, women and song, spending lavishly of the money that has been wrung from the Persian people. His deposition came in direct response to public opinion, and out of it may come a better and more popular government."

"Nowhere in America will there be much sympathy for Shah Ahmed Mirza, who has been playing ducks and drakes with his big income in European gambling places," agrees the Brooklyn Eagle. The youthful ruler's losses, according to the New York Herald Tribune, have been estimated at $3,000,000. His parties on his private yacht have cost him another million, it is said. Under the new regime, he is to receive a pension—and his jewels, valued at $400,000,000, were sold.

What of his successor? What of this "iron-willed" soldier who has ousted the "King of Kings," as Mustafa Kemal Pasha deposed the Ottoman Sultan and Caliph? According to the Providence Journal: "Before the World War Persia had come under the joint control of Great Britain and Russia, but the latter's hold slipped because of its own upheaval. Reza Khan saw his opportunity. His rise to power was rapid, and for years he has been the Mussolini of Persia."

During the last six years, says a dispatch from Persia's capital to the Chicago Tribune, "international intrigue, with oil as the compelling motive, has added to political unrest in Persia. Bolsheviki and British influences have sought constantly to gain a predominant position." Persia has great potential wealth, but needs money for its development.

"The World War," points out the Washington Star, "needs railroads and improved agricultural methods." In a New York Herald Tribune article by Emil Lengyel we are told that: "In contemporary Persia, covering more than 600,000 miles, there are at the most only about 100 miles of railway tracks. Thirteen years ago there was in the country only a single automobile."

"Reza Khan Pahlevi, who now is the virtual dictator of the land of the Shahs, is of a very humble origin, both as regards his ancestry and education. His father was a farmer, which means that Reza Khan could not obtain in his childhood that elementary education which is comprised in the three Rs. He has been virtual dictator since February, 1921. Like Mussolini, Reza Khan has retained the Parliament in order that it may approve his will, according to the formalities of a constitutional regime."

"It is rather difficult to compare Reza Khan with any of the dictators who have made themselves the rulers of several European countries. Both Lenin and Mussolini had sworn allegiance to causes which have served as the cloaks of their assumption of power. Reza Khan professes no adherence either to the tenets of internationalism or to those of nationalism. Although there is some superficial resemblance between him and Spain's dictator, Primo de Rivera, and his aspirations, as indicated in their utterances, are far from having the same objective. Reza Khan is fighting for the unification of his country, because the expansive power of his ruling ambition demands the widening of his field of action."

"Reza Khan has an army such as Persia has not had for a long time. It consists of 40,000 soldiers who, although they are not models of military efficiency, are a great deal ahead of the military formations of the past. Reza pays them regularly, feeds and clothes them, thereby assuring for himself their loyalty and fitness for military action. His personal courage, which is extraordinary, has helped him in retaining his hold over the troops. "The inhabitants of the country have attributed the greatest importance to Reza Khan's army. They have not seemed to be aware that the international situation has been greatly favoring the dictator's scheme of unification and of centralized sovereignty. Soviet Russia had renounced her claims to Persian concessions and privileges. Britain, too, the cause of perennial jealousy, having been thus eliminated, felt no inducement to continue a policy of infringement upon Persia's sovereignty. The United States, too, had declared its assistance upon the policy of the open door, which was an additional reason for the course which England

Interest of their profession is greater than that of the trade union of the manual worker.

A Plea for Frankness.
There is thus developing at least a common bond of trade unionism between the working-men of hand and brain. But it is not enough. There should be a great brotherhood of workpeople, not brotherhoods of superior and inferior workpeople.

If we could but content to be styled "workers," if we do work, how much self-conceit we could destroy! For work is noble and dignified when it is creative, as all work can be. It is the common bond of the vast majority of mankind. Some escape it, 'tis true, but are they to be envied? There is no more pitiable object in life than the aimless, purposeless idler.

Therefore let me urge at least among those whose common bond is work, either by hand or brain, that there should be more generosity, more of the common purpose, more tolerance, more real fraternity. Let us recognize with a few frankness that our great and complex society, with its multitude of interests and pursuits, rests with the poise of an inverted pyramid on perhaps the humblest of all our great working brotherhood—the man with the hoe.

There is a tendency to decry work or to escape it. There are those who would substitute the gospel of the "Right to Work" by the gospel of the "Right to be Lazy." The believers in the latter tend to increase. But every man should work. There is a certain amount of necessary work to be done in the world. Some jobs are pleasant, others are less pleasant. Such leisure as is made possible by the genius of mankind, by compelling old Mother Nature to produce all the requirements of man in less and less time, should be the heritage of all and be shared by all.

For millions, the work they do gives them no interest. Leisure appeals to them because of the dullness of their work and the devastating monotony of detailed and almost mechanical processes. Many of these tasks cannot be avoided in our mechanized industries. But the workmen need not be kept at one operation all the days of their lives. In a well-organized factory they could go from one process to another as an antidote to monotonous toil. But unemployment is different from leisure.

My Unemployment Care.
The unemployed man is the saddest man. For the first few weeks of his leisure there is no marked change in him. Months go by and he is a changed man. Gloom settles upon him, blotting out hope. His soul becomes embittered. His outlook is that of the rebel. His attitude towards law and order becomes one of utter contempt. Unemployment is like pitiless rain upon soft limestone. It disintegrates the character of a man before it causes it to crumble away.

There is less chance, less opportunity, less work. Many of our young folk cannot be planted in the character-making soil of work. Later they float about, the flotsam and jetsam of our industrial life, purposeless and valueless, exposed to the easy temptations which make criminality.

One of the quickest and safest ways out of the difficulty would be to keep children at school for a longer period and take the elderly men and veterans out of industry at an earlier age. If we could but, top off at both ends, we should keep in production the young and virile men whose productivity would be at the maximum. We should keep our children from becoming demoralized through idleness and we should give rest and leisure to those whose life force is already far spent in the great creative task of making two commodities where only one existed before.

Wealth Worth Having.
More money would be required for pensions and education. Two things would make this possible:—

Education, which should emphasize more than ever the greatness and dignity of work. That good work is the hall-mark of good citizenship, not good manners. Thus would the young generation enter the sphere of work with a new attitude and new vigour. Thus the creation of real wealth would be increased.

Having only virile elements in industry the volume of productive energy would be intensified and mobilized. Greater productivity per unit of labour would result. The nation would begin to bear lightly its heavier burdens.

But what of the unpleasant jobs? Who is to do them? Who is to be the scavenger and the sewerman? Can we expect men to take pride in these? Of course! It is merely a matter of values.

A man who lays a drain is of more value than a bookmaker. Only snobbery says "No." A scavenger, or to use a more choice phrase, a dustman, is as socially useful as a politician. Both are engaged upon cleaning up the mess of mankind—though in promoting mankind's health the dustman has something to show for his work! The difficulty would disappear if we would approach these jobs from that angle.

The Beautiful Woman
takes the greatest care to protect and nourish her skin and not to give the fatal wrinkles a chance to form. After cleansing her face she rubs in with an upward and outward motion a generous amount of Three Flowers Skin and Tissue Cream. The pure oils it contains are quickly absorbed by the tissues. The lady whose skin is inclined to be dry finds in this splendid cosmetic the means to replace the natural oil her skin lacks, while the woman whose skin is inclined to be too oily finds that a thorough cleansing with Three Flowers Skin and Tissue Cream opens the overloaded pores and helps them throw off the excessive oils. Thus does this beautiful cream benefit every woman's skin.—Oct 22, 1925, n.m.f.

Invasions Cause Killings

According to Chicago police authorities the killing of better, on the average, than a person a day in the Windy City is accounted for by the fact that bootleggers are invading each other's territory.

Here is the explanation in detail by a Chicago police official: "All these shootings out here are caused by only one thing—rival bootleggers scrapping over territory invasions. Things are getting so bad the police will have to mark off the territories with white lines and the names of bootleggers having priority rights so that these invasions and the resulting deaths will stop."

The above refers directly to the killing of two men as recounted in the Chicago Daily News, and indirectly to four other murders that had occurred within a day or two.

The solution offered by this police official may be the proper one, but to many of us it looks a trifle crude. Suppose the State of Illinois hangs a few murderers for a change, and see how that would work.

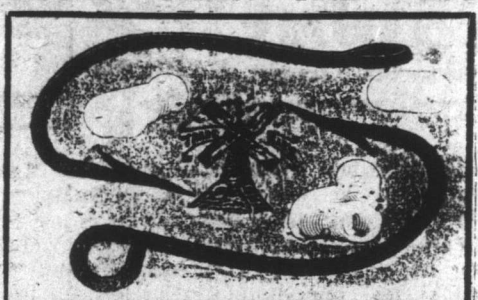

Judge Marcus Kavanagh, a distinguished United States jurist, is responsible for the statement that there are 135,000 murderers at large in that country, and that 350,000 men and women make their living either wholly or in part by crime.

In New York city there are 160 murderers to 10 in London, and in Chicago thirteen times as many as in all Canada. However, even Chicago's record of better than one a day is exceeded on a per capita basis by St. Louis, Memphis and Jacksonville.

Unquestionably ancient criminal laws and maudlin sentiment, combined with the Volstead Act, are mainly responsible for this condition of affairs. Seven out of ten murderers in London are hanged, while in New York city only 1 in 160 go to the electric chair. In fact murdering people in the U.S.A. appears to be a comparatively safe occupation.—Toronto Saturday Night.

What is a Working Man?

STILLY SNOBBERY THAT HANDICAPS AND BITTERS US.
By FRANK HODGES.
"He's only a working-man!" This phrase has long since passed into our popular everyday language. But to whom does it refer? Its usual meaning and application limits it to a special and distinctive species of the genus "human."
He is the painter and the plumber, the tinker and the tailor, the miner and the mechanic, the porter and the porter, the weaver and the wheelwright, the sailor and the signalman and the navy.

Pitied and Patronized.
He is the fellow who works with his hands, who does the hard manual part of the world.
He is the universal labourer. He is regarded as the cart-horse of modern society. The snobism of modern society has given him a classification—"He is only a working-man."
He is the "lower order" and the rest are only lower than the angels! Pitied and patronized in turn, he remains the fixed, the unchanging "working-man."

Yet this "working-man" is not ashamed of his description. In the main he glories in it. What he hates is the subtle suggestion of his inferiority conveyed in the phrase when used by those who think they are not working-men. It hurts. In fact, he begins to accuse his self-styled superiors of the crime of being "striking-men." In his resentment the worker gratifies his pride in describing the other as shirker. He has made a rough-and-ready classification of society accordingly.

Cause for Pride.
Only the other day a great and successful man of business said to me: I am a working-man. I go to my office every day. I control my staff, I give my personal services in the administration of the business. I never take a longer holiday than my manager. If I retired it would kill me. Let me die in harness. I am a working-man.
He was right. His life was one of creative effort—the very glory of existence.
The creative worker is the working-man. He is the worker by hand or by brain. It is not to be supposed that the hand-worker needs no brain, any more than that the brain-worker needs no hands. Both are indispensable in the world's work. They fall into one of the other category by a conscious worker. His pride in his work is wholesome, his pride in his class is folly. He rages against the "working-man" because the latter uses the phrase "class conscious" to describe his political fundamentals. The "working-man" on occasion desires to spread his class-consciousness to his fellow-workers of the black coat and fountain pen, but the class-consciousness of the black coat is narrow and selfish.

Minds Out of Focus.
It is the snobishness of modern society which creates our social strata. This is only another name for ignorance. It is not necessarily an attitude of the aristocrat towards the plebeian, nor yet of the rich to the poor. It is the frame of mind of the poor in spirit, of the self-confident, is Suburbia against Poplar. It is the black coat versus the corduroy trousers.

The black coat is a worker—a class-conscious worker. His pride in his work is wholesome, his pride in his class is folly. He rages against the "working-man" because the latter uses the phrase "class conscious" to describe his political fundamentals. The "working-man" on occasion desires to spread his class-consciousness to his fellow-workers of the black coat and fountain pen, but the class-consciousness of the black coat is narrow and selfish.

There are not wanting signs, however, that this attitude is changing. Clerical, technical, and even administrative workers are following the manual worker in this, that they are becoming trade unionists. Doctors and lawyers, professors and teachers, authors and journalists, accountants and auctioneers, Civil Servants, and many others have their trade unions. They may be called society this or society that, but they are trade unions nevertheless. They are close corporations whose rules are strictly enforced and whose influence in the advantage in life's struggle. It does not increase his wages nor raise his status. No employer will give special treatment to his staff merely because of the collar and tie. He has a hard life, not so much in his daily work or business, but in maintaining the appearance of superiority over his fellow-workmen of the horny and gauntled fist.

Little Jack Rabbit by David Cory

As Peter Pig stepped into Lady Love's neat little kitchen he heard Dr. Quack say to poor Uncle Lucky: "Let me see your pinkie toe."

How did it get swollen so? Rheumatism, not a word. Would swell, it said, like a balloon.

"You're perfectly right, Dr. Quack," answered truthfully Uncle Lucky. "I took a hop-toe-ly over the fence and sprained it. So I did, and I wish I had been more careful. But what's the use of complaining! Give me some Swooshing Strup. If it can change a swollen pinkie into a peaceful citizen, it should reduce my pinkie to its normal size."

"Maybe and perhaps," answered the famous duck doctor, "but as I'm not certain, I'll bandage it a nice brown color and wrap a bandage around it. You'll be all right by to-morrow noon."

As soon as dear Uncle Lucky was made comfortable, Lady Love invited Peter Pig and Dr. Quack to spend the night in the tiny white bungalow. "It might be dangerous to venture out in the darkness. There's no telling how long Mr. Wicked-Wolf will be quiet," she added.

Accepting her kind invitation of course meant that two or three people must be called up on the telephone to keep Old Man Worry from knocking on their doors all night. First, Mrs. Duck was informed of the good doctor's narrow escape from Mr. Wicked-Wolf and Lady Love's kind invitation to spend the night. Then Peter Pig called up Mrs. Pig to tell her that Donkey Longears was safe in the Little Red Barn and that he would spend the night in the dear Old Bramble Patch. "Had a narrow escape from Mr. Wicked-Wolf and I don't dare venture out to-night," he added, as Mrs. Pig uttered a squeal of fright.

"Dear me," all of a sudden cried Uncle Lucky. "Call up Little Miss Mousie. I declare, my aching toe almost made me forget my manners."

"One, two, three, Tiptoe foot, Lettuce Avenue, Carrot Street," shouted the little rabbit over the wire, and the next minute Little Miss Mousie asked:

"Who is calling Little Me? Uncle Lucky's late for tea. His carpet slippers by the chair. Are waiting for him over there. Is sparking in the candle light. The Angel Cake with frosting bright. Yes, I've been waiting all alone. Until you rang the telephone."

"Little Miss Mousie," cried the old gentleman rabbit, who at the sound

Plans of French Expedition to North Pole

PLAN TO USE AUTO SLEDGES.

PARIS, Nov. 17.—The expedition to the North Pole planned by the French Navy Department for next spring, with a subsequent flight from the Pole to New York will depend heavily for its success upon the amphibious auto-sledges which are the recent invention of Otto Sverdrup, former Captain of the Polar ship Fram. They are said to be capable of carrying six tons at a speed over the ice of about 15 miles an hour, but their mechanical construction is being kept secret.

Flight to New York.

They are expected to carry two hydro-airplanes, sixteen men and the necessary supplies and scientific apparatus from King's Bay, Spitzbergen, to the North Pole, where the expedition will split, six men undertaking the New York flight, and the rest exploring the Polar regions with the auto-sledges.

Naval Commander Scales, chief of the expedition; Lieutenant Darvils, wireless expert; Lieutenant De Barsez, meteorologist, another pilot and two mechanics to be chosen later, will undertake the flight, hoping to make Point Barrow, Alaska in ten hours.

Gasoline supplies have already been purchased to care for the journey from Point Barrow southward. These will be stored at Nome and sent to Point Barrow around the first of July, when the planes are expected to arrive.

The aviators hope to reach New York in ten days, proceeding by way of the Mackenzie River, Winnipeg and Chicago. The schedule calls for arriving in New York about August 1st.

Majors Arnold and Hunsley of the United States Army Air Service, it is said, will co-operate with the French fliers.

The seaplanes and auto-sledges will be equipped with wireless, and the Soviet authorities have promised to broadcast weather information for the benefit of the expedition from its station in Northern Russia.

The section of the expedition remaining with the auto-sledges after the flight to New York has begun, will be under the command of Captain Sverdrup. These men will stay as long as possible in the Polar region for scientific exploration of the unknown areas between the Pole and Point Barrow.

It is estimated the expedition will cost 3,000,000 paper francs (about $120,000).

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C., Nov. 16.—Bishop Collins Benny advises every man to wear a moustache as the last distinctive badge of masculinity that women have left him.

SIDE TALKS.
By Ruth Cameron.

THE ONE WHO KNOWS.

Sometimes I tell it all to someone and then have a good cry. I think my aches and pains would feel better. But (contrary creature that I am) I should hate anyone who knew. And then she goes on to tell me the secret sorrow of her life. She should not have said, "contrary creature that I am," but rather "typically human creature that I am." For could anything be more, typically human than that reaction?

The Cosmic Urge.

First, the cosmic urge to tell someone, to pour out our hearts, to get relief in expression from the pressure of some secret grief or perplexity; and then the reaction of bitter regret that one has given away one's secrets. Of course this regret ought to make us feel resentful against ourselves, but self-resentment is an unnatural emotion. Whenever we have cause to feel it, we are inclined to unconsciously seek some other object to attach it to. In this case the recipient of the information becomes the scapegoat and we find ourselves as my Letter Friend puts it, "hating the one who knows." Especially if the one who knows is someone we must meet again in the light of common day (probably our confidence was given at night, I imagine three quarters of all confidences are).

How She Lost Her Friend.
A friend of mine once told me of her irreparable loss of a friend. "I can't understand it," she said. "We used to be the closest friends you can imagine. We used to go to walk together for we both loved to walk and we used to talk and talk about everything. She was having a lot of trouble with her husband and she told me everything about it and I tried my best to help her and she said she hadn't ever told anyone the things she told me, and that it was such a relief, and then all at once she began to seem so different. Now she is hardly more than a casual friend. I never in the world told anyone the things she told me. I sometimes wonder if she thought I did, I simply can't understand it any other way."

Of course it's plain enough what happened. Unjust? Thoroughly. But, one of the lessons we learn as we study in the school of life is that human relations are not regulated by justice.

Signor Mussolini on a Spirit of War

Rome.—In his Armistice Day speech at the Costanzi Theatre, Signor Mussolini, the Italian Prime Minister, said the Locarno agreement was an important step for peace in Europe, but the Macdonald and Bryan events happened immediately afterwards. "Though he felt that Europe would enjoy a long period of peace, it would not be durable and eternal. Amid great applause, he declared that if Italian frontiers were even questioned Italy would move immediately towards war. He urged the necessity of a powerful army, an efficient navy, and a superior air force—above all a virile spirit. "We are now creating the third Italy," he said. "It must be greater than the previous ones. We will create it with brains and brawn, if necessary, with blood."

Murderer Trapped by a Monkey

TRUE STORIES OF BRAINY APES.

In Kipling's Jungle Books monkeys are supposed to be despised by all the rest of the jungle folk on account of their restlessness and lack of purpose. But the truth is that the monkey has the best brain of any animal, next to man, and that it can come far nearer to reasoning than even elephants or dogs, which are usually considered the most intelligent creatures. For instance, Arthur, the new chimpanzee at the London Zoo, can use a key to open a padlock. It may be that Arthur has been taught this particular trick, but there are plenty of instances of monkeys teaching themselves. Dr. Kohler, who has written a book called "The Mentality of Apes," kept chimpanzees in a big open-air enclosure in Tenerife.

Distressed After Meals?

Indigestion, no matter how slight, is a nuisance. It can ruin the good nature of the most genial of us. If you are troubled this way, you'll be glad to know a simple way to avoid it. Just try eating a few pep-o-mint Life Savers after meals. It's wonderful how these little mint circles relieve that heavy, lousy feeling after eating. Probably that's why our grandfathers so often had their bulky little bags of peppermints handy in their pockets. Life Savers are grand-dad's bag of peppermints up to date.

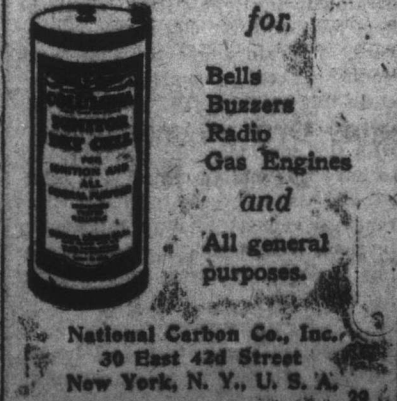

GERALD S. DOYLE, Agent.

Deserved His Meal.
They were kept as nearly as possible under wild conditions and were not trained. The experiment was tried of hanging a banana high over their heads. At first all jumped wildly upwards, but the fruit was out of their reach. After a while Sultan, their leader, fetched a box, placed it below the banana, climbed on it and reached the dainty. Next day the banana was hung higher, and this time Sultan stacked three boxes, one on top of the other, and so formed a platform high enough to enable him to reach the fruit. In another experiment a banana was placed on the ground outside the bars of the enclosure and beyond the monkey's reach. Then Sultan was provided with a joint of a fishing rod. With this he tried to reach the banana, but the stick was not long enough. A second joint was provided, and after a little experimenting he fitted one joint into the other, thus making a rod long enough to reach and secure the meal. A dog does not seem to pay any attention to its reflection in a mirror, but a monkey is keenly interested. Finding that there is not another monkey at the back of the mirror, it soon realizes that the image in the glass is a reflection of itself, and even the glass like a human being. A monkey will even recognize one of its kind in a coloured picture, and with evident pleasure. Given nuts too hard to crack with its teeth, a Capuchin monkey used a stone as a hammer and got the kernels. In a Malay hut on a rubber estate near Taping a man was robbed and murdered, his body being buried near by. Later, an Englishman walking past the hut was surprised by a monkey pulling at the leg of his trousers. He tried to drive it away, but it persisted and at last he followed it. The monkey led him to a mound of freshly-turned earth and began to scratch. The Englishman informed the police, who dug up the ground and found the body of the monkey's master. Suspicion fell on a man who, when taken to the police station, was singled out by the monkey and attacked with fury. In his terror he confessed to the murder. An amazing story was told recently by Professor Sir Charles S. Sherrington. Professor Sir Charles S. Sherrington, he said, "had a reminder of mental kinship of primitive forebears in laboratory chimpanzees when I paid my daily visit to their room. One day after a visit, I turned back, pondering what the chimpanzees might do when I left them. I looked through the keyhole, and there the chimpanzee's eyes met mine. The same thought had struck us both, but the chimpanzee, being a lady, had got there first."

B.I.S. Quarterly Meeting

RESOLUTIONS OF SYMPATHY TO RELATIONS OF LATE HON. J. D. RYAN, K.C.S.G.

The quarterly meeting of the Benevolent Irish Society was held on yesterday. The Vice President, Mr. J. C. Pippy, presided. A large number of members were present and five applicants were admitted to membership.

Since the last meeting of the Benevolent Irish Society its esteemed Vice Patron, Hon. James D. Ryan, K.C.S.G., passed to the "Great Beyond."

By his death the community mourns the loss of an estimable citizen; the country a faithful servant; the Church a devoted son; the Society a loyal member.

Both Church and State, appreciating his great worth conferred many honours upon him. He was the only Knight Commander of the Order of St. Gregory the Great in Newfoundland, and for years he occupied the distinguished office of President of the Legislative Council, resigning through ill health, one year ago.

For fifty-seven years he was a member of the Benevolent Irish Society, and it is his duty to honour him. Assiduously he worked for its welfare. His educational endeavours in particular strongly appealed to him, and nobly he espoused this splendid cause so dear to his unselfish heart.

There seems to be an increase in the number of schooners this year, and the likelihood of a greater number that will prosecute the fishery next year. Speaking to an old fisherman yesterday he referred to the falling off of schooners in the last fifty years.

Quite a lot of schooners were found in the settlements of Knights Cove, Tickle Cove, Keels, Tickle Cove and other sections, especially at Tickle Cove, where as many as ten or fifteen schooners, boats and gallopers, as they were called then, used to sail to the Labrador.

Speaking of Tickle Cove, how many of your readers are aware that Tickle Cove is the birth place of the famous seal-killer and builder, Hon. Capt. Edward White. It is a mistake not the old Methodist cemetery at Tickle Cove contains the remains of the parents of the late Capt. White.

A friend of the writer, the late Mr. R. C. Russell, H.M.C., who died at St. John's a few years ago was a native of Tickle Cove and used to relate some good stories of his boyhood days at Tickle Cove, the days of the late Mark Walker.

I will give a few words of Walker's latest song, in fact his last. It was composed in Boston. Many of Mark's old friends would like to see it. Here is a verse:

There's a place on the shore where I first saw the light, Where my heart wanders back in sweet dreams at night; Though far from my home I can picture it still.

Says Troutlers

WERE PULLING FORMER PREMIER'S LEG.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir.—At the risk of being accused of a fondness of dabbling with ancient history, I venture to send you a quite recent communication concerning that miraculous catch of trout reported in your columns as being caught at Old Bay.

My enquiries have led to the following information from a Fortune Bay sportsman who "knows every stone—I won't say every trout—in Old Bay, and this is what he says:—

I thought that such an explanation of that extraordinary catch was worth sending in.

Yours truly, C. T. FITZGERALD. Nov. 20, 1925

I will give a few words of Walker's latest song, in fact his last. It was composed in Boston. Many of Mark's old friends would like to see it. Here is a verse:

There's a place on the shore where I first saw the light, Where my heart wanders back in sweet dreams at night; Though far from my home I can picture it still.

The arch referred to is one of the greatest sights of Nature. It is just above where the entrance to Tickle Cove stands, and small boats may pass through it. The arch is just as perfect as any ever built to welcome a distinguished visitor.

Before finishing my remarks regarding Tickle Cove I would say that the men of Tickle Cove are still anxiously looking forward to the Public Wharf promised them so long.

Hurry up, Billy, or you will most certainly wet your socks landing.

Passing through Plate Cove not long ago the writer saw Mr. Edward Dooley, Mr. Dooley although long past the four score milestones is still very active, and can tell many a good story of the old days.

King's Cove the past summer had as a resident one of her distinguished sons, Mr. K. McK. Byrnes, M.H.A., who last spring purchased the property of Mr. Thos. Brown and will reside there in future.—COR. Nov. 19, 1925.

Wedding Bells

THISTLE-DAVIS.

The Parsonage at Curling was the scene of a quiet wedding on November 19th, at 7.30 p.m., when Gertrude Laible, only daughter of Mrs. and the late Orestes Davis, of Harbor Grace, was united in marriage to Jesse Gordon, son of Mr. and Mrs. N. Thistle, of Pouch Cove, St. John's, the ceremony being performed by the bride's brother, Rev. Ernest Davis, pastor of the United Church of Corner Brook and Curling.

The bride, who looked charming, was given away by Mr. Arch Lindsay, and wore golden-tan charmante, with a wreath of gold leaves, and carried a bouquet of roses, chrysanthemums, and maidenhair fern. Mrs. Ernest Davis, as matron of honor, wore rose satin. Mr. Kenneth Parsons supported the groom.

After the ceremony (during which the hymn, "Oh love divine and tender" was sung) a delightful supper was served and the usual toasts honored, following which the happy couple embarked for Corner Brook, where they will in future reside.

The bride received many lovely and valuable presents, including a handsome silver tea service from the United Church of Harbor Grace, of which she had been organist for the past six years.

We extend our heartfelt good wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Thistle for many years of unalloyed happiness, as they journey over the matrimonial sea.

Pola Negri at the Nickel To-Night

"MEN," THE BIGGEST PICTURE OF HER CAREER.

"Men," Pola Negri's new Paramount picture, written and directed by the Russian producer, Dimitri Buchowetzki, the man who made "Peter the Great," will be shown for the first time in St. John's at the Nickel Theatre to-night. It's a great dramatic story of modern France, a tale of love and regeneration.

Pola plays the role of "Cleo," waitress in a shore front cafe in Marseilles. And what a role it is! Here's the Pola of the old European productions, the Pola of "Passion" and the rest, Pola in a picture that is going to make the screen world sit up and take notice—take a new interest in life.

Here's Pola in her greatest role in a story with a HAPPY ENDING. Good as was "Windows of Paris" and the other American made Negri pictures, they don't even begin to compare with "Men." You never saw such a vital flashing Pola before in your life. Paramount claims Buchowetzki wrote the story some time ago, ten years to be exact, with Pola Negri in mind for the starring role and that time after time the occasion presented itself to picture the story with another star. But Buchowetzki waited. We'll admit it was worth waiting for.

But why go further? We could fill a book about "Men," and when we were finished you wouldn't know any more about it than when we started, not that we haven't any faith in our ability along literary lines but "Men" just can't be explained, it has to be SEEN.

Robert Fraser has the leading man's role opposite the star. Robert Edeson and Joseph Swickard also have important parts. Others in the strong supporting cast of the production include Monti Collins, Gino Corrado and Edgar Norton. Paul Bern, who wrote the scenario for Ernst Lubitsch's "The Marriage Circle," made the adaptation. Alvin Wyckoff handled the photography.

Residents Between the Devil and the Deep Sea

During the past summer a drain was laid by the Council on part of the western side of Quill's Road, but ended at a grating, which is sunk at a considerable depth below the street surface, before it had passed the whole of the houses situated there. In consequence after every rainstorm the occupants are caused considerable inconvenience by the water that flows over the road into their cellars through the coat shutters, which according to the regulations, shall be kept level with the sidewalk.

Twenty yards of drain added to the work would have completely overcome this trouble. The voters in this district should use their influence with the candidates for civic honours to have this matter remedied if elected, and also to accede to the oft times repeated request to have their other torment, the stone crushing monster, removed to some less populous area.

The long blouse with a flounce finishing the bottom makes a pretty line.

Professor W. Seeley BUILDER OF THE BODY BEAUTIFUL. Special offer to all ladies and girls:—I will give you a full three months' course for the small sum of $5.00 each. This same course will cost you $20.00 each, as soon as I get back to U.S.A. My business is growing so fast that I am able to make a special offer. There will be $175.00 given in prizes at the beauty of form contest. I will hold the contest about the 1st of March, 1926, here in Newfoundland. First prize $100.00 in gold or a return ticket to New York; second prize $50.00; 3rd prize $25.00. Will also photograph the three prize winners for the leading papers and magazines of the world. Will also hold a beauty of form and strength contest for men. The first prize winner will receive about $200.00 in gold. I will hold this contest about March 15th, 1926. Beauty contests are held all over the world, why not hold them in Newfoundland. Is there any reason why Newfoundland cannot send out world's champions? All the boys here want is a chance to progress and someone to teach them. I am offering you people some things that should interest you; please don't value my course by the small sum I am asking for it. Don't fail to see the big performance at the Star Theatre, December 4th and 5th. Myself and three of my star pupils will perform at the Star Theatre and I know that you all will be interested to see your local boys perform. It will be well worth your while to see what can be accomplished through physical training under the proper teaching in only about eight weeks.

Toronto's Cenotaph Controversy A good deal of nonsense has been circulated with reference to the inscription on the beautiful cenotaph unveiled at Toronto by Lord Byng on Armistice Day. The dedication "To All Who Served" has been challenged and it is understood that Toronto's civic fathers, whose teeth always chatter when anyone objects to anything, have consented to a change. The next controversy will of course be with regard to new phraseology, for it is quite certain that the man does not live who could devise an inscription which would suit all the numerous gentry who spend their leisure writing to the newspapers.

Special notice to all the people of Heart's Content, Carbonara, Port de Grave and Brigus.—I will perform at Heart's Content Saturday night, November 21, 1925; Carbonara, Monday night, November 23; Port de Grave, Tuesday night, November 24; Brigus, Wednesday night, November 25. Don't miss seeing this performance. I guarantee you all a real good time. Back to St. John's Thursday noon, November 26th. We instruct personally in classes and by mail to all parts of the country.

PROFESSOR W. SEELEY, Physical Director, Office—Renold Building, Phone 3116. P.O. Box 1892. nov21.1f

According to the letter those who protest against the inscription "To All Who Served" are technically right, but no argument we have seen has been based on the ground of literal meaning. In the same way one might argue that any circle is a circus. The prevailing sentiment among objectors to the inscription "To All Who Served" seems to be that only those who fell in battle deserve commemoration and that they were necessarily more brave and self-sacrificing than those who survived. With all due deference to the glorious dead that is not true, and the boys who fell, could they speak, would be the first to so declare. Those who give thought to the wreckage wrought on the minds and bodies of many of those who survived cannot seriously believe that the soldiers who fell on the battlefield were the least fortunate among the men who served. Not a week, or a day passes in Canada but death claims an ex-service man who is just as surely a victim of the war as any of those who died on the battle fields of Flanders. This is true of the non-combatant services as well as the combatant forces. The writer of this editorial can name three distinguished physicians of the Toronto Military district who have died untimely within the past year as a direct result of the labors they endured as army surgeons. Do such men deserve no commemoration? The tragic spectacle that our base hospitals present to ex-soldiers permanently invalided should give everyone a sense of the heroism that service, even when not crowned by death, meant. In Toronto, as in most Canadian cities, it is hardly possible to go out of doors in the busy hours of the day without encountering men who were maimed and shattered by the war. Do they merit no memorial? To think so is to yield to that false sentimentality which makes a fetish of death. The number of ex-service men who seem healthy to-day but whose normal lives have been shortened a decade at least by the hardships of campaigning is incalculable. Not for twenty or thirty years hence shall we come to a full realization of that fact. Let it be remembered that the cenotaph

"East of Suez"
Megri Mystery—
Drama of Orient

Three glasses of wine were carried by the Chinese servant. One of them contained a deadly poison. Three people, a wife, her husband and the man who loved her, pledged each other in the wine. Which glass did she drink?

Suspense, mystery and drama are piled one upon the other in this thrilling picture in Pola Negri's latest stage play, which Rexed Walsh produced. Adapted to the screen by Gladys Cowan from Somerset Maugham's enthralling play of the Orient, "East of Suez" brings new types and new settings to the silver screen. A riot of beautiful and artistic Chinese temples, gardens and mansions are included in this gorgeous spectacle of the mysterious eastern world. Featured in support of Pola in "East of Suez," which opens to-night at the Star Movie are Edmund Lowe, Rockcliffe Fellows and Noah Beery at the head of a strong cast.

FIRO SAYS HE WILL COME BACK AGAIN.

Big Call of the Pampas Says Tex Rickard Will Handle His Affairs.

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 13.—Luis Angel Firpo, South American heavyweight, will return to the United States in March, for another effort to win the world's heavyweight championship, he said in an interview today.

He said he will go back to the United States in better physical condition than he has been in years, as a result of four months of light training and that he will have no business worries to trouble him.

"I'm going back to New York, under the general direction of Tex Rickard with the ambition to fight my way through all the contenders and earn the chance for another championship fight," he said. "I want to meet Bertley Madden, Jack Renault, Gene Tunney, Harry Williams and then Dempsey. I am willing to meet any other fighters suggested because I know I will have to prove my right for another chance."

"The opportunity now for a comeback looks especially good to me. If Dempsey ever meets Wills, he will win if he is anything like the Dempsey I fought. I was in bad shape when I fought Wills. I had not slept eight hours in seven days due to worry over Canon Chase and several wives, but at that Wills never hurt me once. He can't hit. His reputation for punching is only a reputation."

"It is my opinion that Dempsey is through as the champion and if he ever fights again, he can't withstand much punishment. Wills never could stand a tough fight. Tunney hasn't the size, and I could lick Renault when I was a novice. The stage looks set for me."

Firpo concluded that he was still young and that he could beat any man in the world when he was in shape.

BILLIARDS.

The Bridge.

Having selected a cue to suit the next, and perhaps the most important of all, is the Bridge. The hand should be placed flat on the table and the knuckles raised to form a low pyramid, keeping the thumb close to the first finger. It is on the thumb and first finger that the cue should rest. Pay particular attention to this instruction. Most beginners make the great mistake of resting their cue between the thumb and first finger. That is absolutely wrong. The cue should rest on the thumb and first finger. It is absolutely necessary to start right and we must get a good foundation. So get your bridge right. The bridge should not be kept firm or stiff, but should rest naturally and easily, the fingers being kept slightly open to ensure this. It is also best to incline your bridge slightly to the left, if possible. This will not come easy at first but it will come with determination and practice. The distance of the bridge from the striking ball in ordinary strokes from bank should be about one foot. Most young players like to get as near to the ball as possible, but this distance of about one foot will ensure greater accuracy and is just about right. Watch the good players around you, those that make the big breaks, and see how this applies. Above all cultivate ease and a naturalness of position. Don't be cramped. Be sure not to adopt any mannerisms at the commencement, especially with the bridge. Habits like bending one finger, keeping two fingers in the air, and twisting your thumb into awkward positions are to be deplored.

FRIEDMAN-WALKER BOUT LOOKS GOOD.

Chicago Sonthpay Gave Champion a Great Battle at Chicago.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Just as soon as Jack Kearns heard that Mickey

Walker would have to meet Sailor Friedman in their 12-round battle in Newark on November 25 at the welter-weight poundage, he dropped everything and rushed to the side of his protégé where he will remain until after the battle.

Jack paid fifty thousand dollars for the privilege of managing Walker. And now, since the investment looks very good indeed, he will leave no stone unturned to prevent Friedman from copying the welter title, which he could do by knocking out Mickey or by Walker committing a foul.

If the second meeting between Mickey and the Sailor proves to be as good as the first one, the fans will have their money's worth. Walker in the first bout in East Chicago, got away to a flying start by dumping one of his leg hooks to the Sailor's jaw and spilling him for a count. He handed Friedman an unmerciful beating for the first six rounds.

But the Sailor showed his class by coming back for more and by handing Walker something to think about in the final rounds. Some observers say that the champion was lucky the battle did not go fifteen rounds.

While Mickey's willingness to take Friedman on again shows that he does not fear him, the fact remains that the Sailor seems to have done a comeback to his former greatness. He has been showing a world of craft around Philadelphia and Pittsburgh and is in big demand out there.

Friedman is wise enough to know that the body is a great place to hit. He slows a rival down with terrific body smashes and then switches to the head. He has got away with this very well and probably will follow his system against Walker.

MISS MCKANE'S HAPPY WAY.

LONDON, Eng.—(C.P.)—An interesting commentary by Miss Kathleen McKane, one of England's outstanding women tennis players, on the successful tour of the British ladies' tennis team in Canada and the United States, is noted by The Field, which says: "If it contains too little about her own achievements, which included two victories over Mrs. Malory and one over Miss Ryan, it does so faithfully and judiciously with a memorable and exacting campaign."

Miss McKane, "had the happy knack of creating just the right spirit of enthusiasm during our somewhat strenuous and nerve-shaking ordeal, and through at times we felt perhaps overwhelmed by our responsibilities, never allowed us to forget that we were playing for the fun of the game, which added immensely to our enjoyment of the various contests."

The American ball is more highly inflated than we play with in England, but after a time we found that we could hit it harder and still keep it in play, so our play became much faster."
