When we pause to gaze around upon this world of ours,
And note the freshness of the trees, the color
of the flowers,
We feel a sense of keenest pride, and all our woes forget;
Our hearts cry out, "This world is mine,
mine to improve," and yet
What is beyond?

We gaze up at the azure sky at eve, when all is bright; We feel a holy, soothing calm steal from the soft moonlight, soft moonight,
And each small star looks down from heaven
like angels' watchful eyes;
Our whole soul stirs in ecstacy, but ah! do all our eyes have seen, By blaze of sun we saw by day, at eve the pale moon's sheen;

'Tis then we realize that Death, who comes so still and cold, Will free our spirit, guiding us to where God will unfold What is beyond.

"I did not speak; I was still strangely intent on my work, but, at last, I was looking forward to the time when I should steal up to her and, holding her closely in my arms, lavish so many loving kisses upon the dear face that, from the baby-heart, they should shut out all memory of the weary, unsatisfactory afternoon.

"So I worked on with feverish energy, feeling a little relief when I saw that Allie was asleep.

—Bornt friends and foes of prohibition will find in the two reports of the royal temperance commission, presented to parliament last week, much that will help to confirm and strengthen their convictions. The misority report prepared by Rev. Dr. McLeod is just what the zealous prohibitionis wanted. It declares its substance that immediate prohibition is the only effective remedy for the evils of intemperance, and that parliament should enact and thoroughly enforce such a law without further dealy. Dr. McLeod declares that all the information, which the commission has been able too be tain has made it clear to him that the flects of the liquor traffic are a hindrance to the moral, social, and material interest of the mation, and that the meanres adopted torsepress or lessen the traffic have been of benefit only as they have approached absolute prohibition. He also declares that the perple of the various sections of the dominion have given expression. The report is an elaborate argument against prohibition, four in all, appear to have arrived at an entirely different conclusion. This act, the majority report declares, has been repealed in fifty two per cent of the counties and cities where it has been adopted, and no new district has put the act in force since 1886. New Brunswick tried a prohibitory law in 1855. It came into operation in 1856 and was repealed before a year. In the North West Territories prohibition has been abandoned for the license system. Control of Dr. McLeod will strengthen the convictions of the temperance people of the dominion and perhaps help to add new zeal to their labors in behalf of prohibition. The majority report doubtless represents the view of a large majority of the business and professional men of the dominion, while that of Dr. McLeod will be heartily endorsed by the more prominent temperance workers both lay and clerical. To the politician who does not wish to antagonize either of these elements the task of dealing with this problem is a difficult one, and the commission has not aided him one iota in solving it. The entire cost of the commission thus far has been $69,376.

The schr. Thelma, 50 tons, was launched at Granville Ferry on Saturday from the Gouncil at its late meeting in taking $1,000 of the money received from the Western Counties Railway damages and using it as ordinary revenue, or for road money, will meet with the approval of a majority of the electors of the county. The amount received from that source was a sort of wind-fall,—a special sum received under extraordinary and especial circumstances,—and we think it would have been much more satisfactory, not only to those who were instrumental in getting this money for the county, but to the rate-payers generally, to have seen it invested in something of a more permanent nature. Besides, as we stated once before, while the provincial government pursues the policy of borrowing large sums of money for our road and ridge service, it certainly does not seem judications on the part of our connections of the county in the service of the county in the part of our connections of the county in the part of our connections of the county in the service of the service of the county. Beautiful for the stime of the time of year.

Within the past few weeks Mr. Townsend Anderson, a former resident of Yarmouth, who for the past twelve years has been encounty's little nest-egg as an ordinary road money. There is, if we mistake not, a good part of the last provincial loan still remaining to the credit of the county. The bridge money is about all used up, but a part of the road money allotted to this county under the last borrowing bill is yet unexpended. If the county were really in need of an extra thousand dollars of road money, it would seem to have been better to have used some of the provincial road money to the credit of the county. That money is drawing no interest for the county, while that received from the railway damages was. It would only have been necessary to prove to our two local representatives that the expenditure was stocked.

Oddfellows Celebrating.

This report declares that the evils of intemperance are as prevalent in those states of the American Union which have enacted prohibitory laws as in those Canadian provinces where a license system is in operation. It also deals with the revenue feature of the case, expressing the opinion that our federal, provincial and municipal systems could not stand the loss which would follow the enactment of a prohibitory law.

representatives that the expenditure was airgently needed to have had it expended. All we will not be uncharitable enough to suppose that in deciding to expend this extrathousand dollars on our roads, during this season, our councillors were influenced by the fact that a municipal election is to take place in a few months, and that this sum would give each councillor a few more road commissions to distribute. We have always believed that our present councillors were moved by higher and more disinterested motives. Still, we think they have made a mistake in this instance, whatever were the motives which led to it.

MRS. WM. E. MILLER

The death of Mrs. Wm. E. Millers.

The death of Mrs. Wm. E. Miller, which occurred on Wednesday morning last, after a painful illness of several months duration, occasioned deep regret and sorrow amongst a very large circle of friends and acquaintances in this community, where she has resided during her entire life-time and where the loss of her genial and attractive presence will long be lamented.

She was the daughter of the late John fills, and the mother of Mr. Reginald Miller, of Annapolis. For a number of years she successfully conducted a millinery business in this town, in the management of which her strict integrity and conscientious ness won her the highest esteem of all with whom she came in contact.

She was a consistent and faithful member of the Church of England, and in all efforts for its wellfare she was one of the most zealious and devoted of its workers. She also held the position of organist for a number of years, fulfilling her duties in that capacity in the most acceptable manner. Whenever sickness or need demanded she was ever ready with kindly attentions and a helping hand, and all who knew her will testify to the many admirable traits of character which made her so beloved. To her bereaved husband, son and sister we extend our sympathy.

LAWRENCETOWN LOSES ANOTHER AGED RESIDENT.

Elijah Phinney, an aged and well-known resident of Lawrencetown, passed away on Saturday last from the effects of a stroke of paralysis, which occurred some few weeks ago, since which time he has been a severe sufferer. The deceased was born Nov. 30th, 1819, and has spent nearly his entire life in that vicinity. On March 11th, 1841, he married Mary E., daughter of the late Abner Foster, who still survives, and who is the mother of seven living sons, among the number being N. H., C. W. and Timothy Phinney, Esgrs, together with some twenty grand-children. For many years Mr. Phinney was one of the popular mail couriers of the county, having a number of routes, the most prominent of them being that between Lawrence-town and Bridgewater. Of a robust and strong constitution, he battled all weathers in the punctual performance of his public duties with such regularity as to win the friendship of all inhabitants living along the highways over which he travelled, and there are few men living to-day who have not heard of some of the many hardships he endured while in Her Majesty's service as mail courier.

The funeral took place yesterday afternoon from his late residence and was largely attended. The Rev. R. D. Porter conducted the services, and the remains were interred in the cemetery at Paradise.

I have much pleasure in testifying to the value of the Fertilizers sold by you. I used last year five tons/of Bradley's Potato Manure on twenty acres of potatoes, with a good deal of satisfaction, averaging nearly 200 bushels per arce from the whole field. Its dryness and mechanical condition seem to me to be perfect. I used it in the Planter without clogging, while other fertilizers that I used were too damp to be used at all in the machine. I got good value for my investment, and shall use it in increased quantities.

The revelation of anothor world solves the mystery of death. This is the one thing from which we all shrink, and the one thing from which none of us can escape. But why should we shrink from it, if we believe that it is the entrance to a higher and more abundant life? And when the faithful die, why and speak with bated breath, and toll the mournful knell, and sing the melancholy dirge, and go sorrowing all the day long? This Easter festival brings us into communication with the departed, not as those who are dead but as those who are still living. The church militant to-day joins hands with the church triumphant. The gates swing open, and, standing here in the earthly porch, we look out upon the eternal temple and hear the anthems of the redeemed, as they float around the great white throne, and join with them in singing the praises of the Lamb. They also may possibly hear our voices and join with us in our hymns of praise. We do not forget them, and we cannot believe that they have forgotten us.

-It is said that the expression, "There is a skeleton in every closet," arose from the following incident: A young Italian student, finding he was dying, fearing to break the news to his mother, adopted the following device. He informed her that he was ill, and that it had been foretold he would no recover until he had worn a shirt made by a woman who had no trouble. The widow soon discovered it was no easy task to find uch a person, but at length was referred to a lady who seemed surrounded with every comfort and happiness and possessed a hus band who seemed devoted to her. The widow made known her request, and for an widow made known her request, and for as answer was shown a closet, where a skeleton hung suspended from a beam. She was told it was the remains of a lady's former lover, who from motives of jealously had been slain by her husband, and that he compelled her to visit it every day. The widow concluded that no one was without trouble, that "there is a skeleton in every closet," and there is a skeleton in every closet," and became reconciled to the approaching loss of

A Model Poultry House.

A fowl house is a necessity, for the cessful poultry raiser never depends upon rees, bushes, fences, or what not as roosting places for the fowls. While the precarious roosts are pleasant to the fowls in fine weather, they are not good for many reasons in any weather in spring, winter or fall. The fowl house should be divided into apartments, one for sleeping, one for eating and day use, and a third for nesting places. Roosting perches should be very nearly two inches wide, and smoothly finished for ease of the fowls' feet and safety of one's hands, for the perches must be rubbed with kerosene at least once a week as a vermin preventive.

There is, however, a modern invention loss of life has been great, you say "fan't it terrible?" but in a few days the affair has fully and with less trouble, an adjustable perch which fits on brackets furnished with latter instance months after you could re- oil cups; the vermin, when they reach the count the minutest particulars of the run- cups, drop into the oil and die.
