The Dorner Girls.

Down by the Otis Bridge the rents on. Meat is not so dear, but the continuate has been chased over the Bersshire Hills ten years, at least, before it goes to market, which does not mprove the quality. Garden vegetables are high, and clothing, except blue drilling overalls, is quite out of the question. The butter is excellent, and people whose expenses have been three-quarters rent come in numbers to live with us, and think they live heaply.

It does make a difference in a man's and stay untrine show hies are very contented. The father continues busi-ness in the city and once every two or three weeks comes out to the farm and tests, fills himself with mountain air and tough beefsteak, and goes arr and tough beersteak, and good back happy.

The Dorners came to the Otis Bridge because Mr. Dorner had made some bad investments, and his income, limited at best, was reduced to so low a ited at best, was reduced to so low a figure that he had to curtail expenses. He rented a cottage, really an old house revamped—for fifty dollars a year, and moved in. Ostensibly this was for the summer, but it proved, in reality, to be for life. He was getting on my years and could not hope to recover his lost fortune.

They had four daughters, the Dorners, the oldest at marriageable age. This was a source of trouble and anxiety and without end to Mrs. Dormer, for, while rents were low, and mountain air and water free, husbands at the Bridge were quite out of the question. Husbands of the right sort, I mean.

There were good, honest, plodding farm keys, but they were not very ambitious, preferring to work a few months on the farm or in the shop, and do nothing the rest of the year.

I kept still, but others talked. I had witnessed a few tempests at the Otis Bridge, and I feared for what might come of this minister's leaving. They put me on the committee again, and again I got a young man, unengaged, and little Annie Dorner carried nim off within a year. He was a good preacher, grew rapidly while with us, and we lited him but a church out in the chart. I sat and pondered. The long-or I pondered, the more determined I became to recommend that minister to call, and in a month he came. Only three boy's came with their parents. The other two were in college. —The Baptist S S. picnic, held at Spurr's Grove, Paradise West on Saturday afternoon, was one of the most successful of it's kind this season. The attendance was large, the children and their friends driving out to the beautiful pine grove in buckboards, hay racks and various other styles of carriages. The whole affair was well-managed. Swings, baseball and other sports in which both boys and girls participated, made the afternoon pass pieasantly, and the ride home in the evening was cqually enjoyed.

—J. A. Neily has added to his already complete blacksmith outfit a Bareus Shoeing rack. This apparatus, which is the first to be used in Canada, is used fer shoeing wild and fractious horses. By means of the mechanism the horse to be shod is kept in a position so as to make it perfectly safe to put on the shoes. Besides protecting the smith, it prevents the horse from injuring itself in its struggles to free itself. By means of the Barcus shoeing rack the most fractious horse that can be brought into the shop and tied up, can be shod in perfect safety to both man ard beast. We congratuate Mr. Neily on his enterprise and believe that his outlay in this regard will be amply repaid.—From the Regina West.

When to Water the Horses.

There are, seemingly, hardly two men that agree exactly on the amount of water that should be given to a horse and when it should be given.

The leading veterinarians assert that a horse should be watered just previously to feeding. For the reason that the water does not remain in the stomach, but passes through, going directly to the large intestine.

30kers' Corner.

Habitual colds are due to an ill-kept skin on the outside, and dyspeptic maccus membranes on the inside, the result of indigestion of constipation, coupled with carelessness.

Cold water, proper food, and common sense are the foundations upon which a cild cure must rest. A cold sponge tath, one to three minutes long, with a brisk, dry rub immediately before and after, is excellent—usually all that is necessary to keep the cutaneous circulation alive and the skin reactive to sudden changes of temperature.

For those unaccustomed to cold water, tolerance can be gained in three weeks time by the use of water at any comfortable temperature, making it one degree colder each day, until it can be employed without dread as cold as it will run. Salt may be added to the water for its stimulating effect, or alcohol; witch hazel is also useful.

Cold water intelligently used does not steal vitality, it fosters it. It stimulates the nerves that control the expansion and contraction of the blood vessels and regulates the cutaneous circulation. The dry rub is a fair control that it is included the catch fish.
