NEW YORK, June 3 .- Special.)-Delaring that Canada will reject Presdent Taft's reciprocity agreement, Sir James Whitney, premier of the province of Ontario, to-day gave as one reason the fear of annexation. The premier is here on his way to the coronation of King George. He sailed to-day on the Caronia.

"What is the general sentiment in Canada toward the proposed reciprocal agreement?" he was askeu. "I can't answer that," he replied,

"I don't know. "What is the feeling in Ontario. and what is your opinion?" "We are opposed to it. We object to it for the same reason that Mr. Taft favors it. "I can't quote his exact words; but he said that Canada has come to a parting of the ways so far as its commerce is concerned. He is right. TORONTO'S GROWTH.

Another proposal, first suggested in The World, has been real-ized, namely, that of a transcontinental train to and from Toronto. The C, P. R. has inaugurated a service from Toronto to Vancouver, and it may not be long before the one train a day direct from Toronto is made two. And sometime next year both the Grand Trunk and the Canadian Northern will be starting transcontinental trains from Tor-

Does anybody realize what this means in the way of the growth of Toronto? And yet we have a city council and a public who are not appreciating what Toronto is bound to become.

The first thing Toronto wants to-day is a tube under Yongestreet, and then one running east and west across the city. The World ventures the view that all the transcontinental trains out of this city will start from North Toronto before long, and tubes are essential to this change.

Another thing is wanted is two or three big sixteen or twentystorey hotels in Toronto-one uptown, and the rest in the downtown district. Is anybody getting ready in this respect? We hear one story that plans are out. A Ritz-Carlton hotel is under way in Montreal and one is likely to soon be planned for Toronto.

Real estate rumors continue, especially in regard to property near the corner of King and Yonge. It is pretty well believed now that the Canadian Pacific have acquired more than the three stores which they have recently pulled down, and on which they propose to build their sixteen-storey block. The property owners in this block now are made up of the Traders' Bank, Nordheimer and Murray-Kay on Colborne-street, the Canadian Pacific, the Imperial Bank, the Stitt Building, Nordheimer's and Murray-Kay on King. In regard to this latter firm, the announcement in the papers Saturday of the increase in their capital stock by another million, would indicate that there is substantial reason for the belief that they are ready to sell their property in this block, and to build a much larger store up town, somewhere near Carlton-street.

So far, however, The World does not believe that any actual sale has taken place, tho we would not be surprised if negotiations are on for the acquirement of the Murray site for some big company or hotel proposition

No more details are forthcoming as to the buyers of the Catto

A flight up town of at least half a dozen stores down town is being engineered by one real estate firm.

The rounded corners at King and Yonge-street will have to be abandoned. Mr. McNicoll of the C. P. R. said Saturday afternoon that he would start the company's building on Wednesday next if the city went no further in the matter. It is understood at the city hall hat the project will be dropped because of excessive cost.

FIVE MILLIN North York No Cinch For Reciprocity Government

Last Edition

North York is not the safe Liberal constituency in Dominion politics it once was. When Sir Alan Aylesworth was nominated to succeed Sir William Mulock at the behest of the central organization in Toronto the North Yorkers were not pleased, and they gave headquarters to understand that the constituency was no longer to be regarded as theirs for convenience.

This is the situation that confronted North York Liberais on Saturday, when Sir Alan was renominated, with Mr. Robinette as alternative.

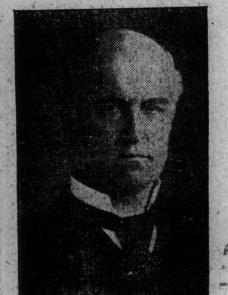

And back of this situation is the fact that North York is badly split on the reciprocity deal. Some of the leading Liberals are hot against the pact, others are mildly protesting, while still others are not saying what they think out of loyalty to the party. We have it from a leading Liberal that it was Mr. Aylesworth's intention to resign at once and open North York, but after looking over the field, the conclusion was come to that the new man, whoever he might be; would be defeated. Therefore, the minister of justice decided to hang on till dissolution to save the government a black eye.

Sir Alan Aylesworth Candidate in Summer Election Sticks to the Ship

If Present Parliament Runs Its Course, Minister of Justice Will Carry Out Expressed Intention of Retiring from Public Life.

North York Liberals won't swap horses crossing the stream. Sir Alan Aylesworth wanzs to quit, but the situation is too critical, with the majority of the party opposed to a new outside man being foisted on them by the central organiza-tion, and a huge runc in the local organization over reciprodity. Therefore, Sir Alan Aylesworth was renominated for the house of commons, with T. C. Robinette, K.C., of Toronto, as alternative.

NEWMAEKET. June 8 .- (Special.) If there is a general election this fall Sir Alan Aylesworth will probably be the Liberal candidate for North York

Germany, Representative Hammill of New Jersey has introduced a resolution in the house calling upon the secretary of state for an investigation. Mr. Hammill bases his demand on the alleged endorsement by United States Consul-General Griffiths at London, of a recent speech by Sir Edward Grey in the British Parliament, in which the latter intimated strongly that such was the aim of the treaty proposed by President Taft. Piccadilly House Brings $7500 for Coronation Day

Two Hundred Guineas Asked For One Window Along Route of Procession.

LONDON, June 3 .- Remarkably big prices are being asked and readily obtained in the west end for seats to view the Coronation procession. In Piccadilly, the agreed price for the use of a house, having accommodation for a large party on June 22, is 1500 guineas, (about $7500).

Not far away 1200 guineas, ($6000) is being demanded for the use of a house for both days. Almost equally high prices are being obtained for accommodation in St. James-street. A commodation in St. James-street. A conservatory is to be had for 1000 guineas, ($5000) and probably many people will be eager to secure it. The occupiers of flats in good posi-tions along the route are reaping a harvest readily obtaining 300 to 400 guineas for three or four windows. The fine view of the procession ob-tainable from Trafalgar Square 1s leading to numerous inquiries for seats there. Two hundred guineas are being asked for one window. Many others have already let at sums near that figure.

ful things, many of which, twenty years ago, their sisters would have thought impossible. Their processions of last year were admittedly marvels of longanization, and this year they will have one which by all accounts is to totally collpse its predecessors. Instead of being two miles long the procession of June 17, is to be four miles in length, and in-stead of walking four abreast, as stead of walking four abreast, as hitherto, the ladles are to walk seven deep. The procession, a gigantic army, of white-robed women, is to include a pageant of ex-prisoners, who have suerfied in the cause, and a pageant of great women who in the past have helped to make their countries great. 6 6dr 201/4, 2.201/4, 2.22. Invades I oronto A B IL TRACE D F Most Successful Stock Company in America, Come in for Summer Season at Princess.

That Toronto is coming to be regarded as a most profitable theatrical centre is demonstrated by the fact that American theatrical managers regard it as a likely field for first-class summer stock companies. Never since its establishment more than twenty years ago has the Princess Theatre opened its doors for a summer season, but this year it is to have a first-class stock company which will give its initial performance on Wednesday evening next on the conclusion of the Bern-hardt engagement. The organization is known as the Baldwin-Melville Stock Company and will have all the efficiency that experience, enterprise and ability can give. The opening piece will be Hall Caine's emotional drama, "The Christian," which, des-in the fact that it has been seen for many seasons, never fails to draw large and enthusiastic audiences. The main reason for choosing it as an opener has been the fact however that it gives has been the fact however that it gives an opportunity which few pieces pro-vide to show the capacity of a large and well balanced stock company. Arthur Byron, the leading man of the company, is recognized by all critics as one of the most promising and able actors on the English-speaking stage. In fact it would be hazardous to prophesy what he will not eventually He is the son of Oliver Doud Byron and Kate Byron, both players of renown on this side of the Atlantic who made themselves famous in the orce popular play "Across the Conti-the most prominent parts in the profuctions for which that very popular star is famous. He figured promin-ertly in the first American productions of "The Tyranny of Tears," "The Luars," and other well known pieces. In 1902 he became leading man for Amelia Bingham, then very prominent as a producer of American society P'ays and in 1903 the late Clyde Fitch starred him in the title role of his un-successful tragedy, "Major Andre." His record since speaks for itself: 1902.

Minister"; 1905, leading man in Charles Kieln's political play, "The Lion and the Mouse"; 1906, leading man with Florence Roberts in "The Struggle

Everlasting"; 1907-8, leading man with Ethel Barrymyore in several pieces; 1909, leading man with William Gillette in his all-star production of Bernstein's "Samson"; 1910, leading man with Max-ine Elliott; 1911, leading man with Maude Adams in "What Every Wo-

Miss Grace Clough, pupil of Mr. J. W. F. Harrison, musical director of the Ontario Ladies' College, Whitby, Ont., gave a most enjoyable and successful piano recital Wednesday evening, May 31, assisted by Miss Kathleen Low, pupil of Mr. Arthur Blight. As a remarkably neat, clear executant and as a sympathetic and graceful interpreter of classical and romantic work, Miss Grace Clough was well received by the large audience in pieces by Schutt, Weber, Liszt, Chopin and Beethoven. Her training in all essentials reflects much credit on her intor, who has been so successful as plano teacher for a number of years. What shall we give her? A question debated with keen interest by men and women the wide land over, and never with better chance of a happy solution than now. People are beginning to realize that the bride of to-day is the housekeeper of many to-morrows, and that the gift most appreciated is one that will give pleasure and comfort in the new home for years to come.

Every recurring June we find increased demand for useful gift things, Artistic Furniture, Pottery, Brassware, Oriental Rugs, and such like taking high rank in popular favor.

This year we have assembled a collection of things artistic and exclusive that far surpass anything we have heretofore attempted.

We cordially invite you to come and see the display whether you have a thought of purchasing or not. This list of some principal items and the sections in which they are to be found may be useful.

Hupmobile for quality with the costliest cars of larger size, for we have added improvements, which represent in material alone $100 more than the Hupmobile which charmed your fancy two seasons ago.

So much for quality ; in the complete equipment added without extra cost, namely : fore-doors at $25, top at $30, windshield at $20, gas lamps and generator at $20, we are giving you nearly $100 more in actual quantity value.

Now to get down to "brass tacks"-pick out any car of lower price. Then add to that price the money value of the 1912 equipment and the improved quality in the Hupmobile.

Surely if quantity plus quality spells value you will not ask for any more convincing argument than the actual extra worth in dollars that we have just shown you.

Study the list of 1912 improvements-see for yourself how in each and every Hupmobile for 1912 we have incorporated entirely new elements of value.

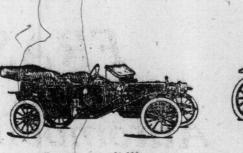

Many of these improvements are peculiar to the Hupmobile ; for some of them you will have to look to cars of $1,500 or more.

The legitimate savings of an immensely increased production are passed on to you in the form of structural, mechanical and incidental refinements never before offered in a car at anything like this price.

Remember the flawless reputation of the Hupmobile. not only among those with whom cost must cut an important figure, but also/with men of wealth and automobile experience in every community.

We believe that your conclusion will lead you to be among the first to inspect this better-than-ever Hupmobile.

We have just received our first quota of the new cars. We are ready now to prove beyond question that we have the greatest motor car value that has ever been demonstrated in this city.

Civic Power Plant

Bylaw Will Be Submitted to the People to Raise $500,000 to Build It.

HAMILTON, June 3 .- The report of Engineer Sifton, the power expert, who has been investigating the local situation, was made public to-day, and estimates the cost of a municipal power lighting and distribution plant at $502,-

This provides for 8000 electric standards to be placed a hundred feet apart all over the city, and for 200 commer-cial customers and 1000 house consumers to begin with.

Mr. Sifton says that even if the city will not get any outside business and be forced to bear the cost of the entire Flant for handling power for its own requirements, it will nose nothing. He figures that 3051 horsepower will be required, and that house lighting will cost customers only 4.8 cents per watt hour, as compared with 7.52 paid to the Cataract at present. He admits that the Cataract, with its cheap de-development could undersell competition if it desired.

A bylaw will be submitted to the people shortly to raise the amount re-quired for building the plant.

Plaudits for Aylesworth. Some criticism had been made over this expenditure, and he thought that any riding that could send such men to Parliament an Sir William Mulock and Sir Alan Aylesworth was entitled to get anything it asked for; It would be a great loss if Sir Alan went out of public life. He did not think it necessary to argue with the audience, they had given evidence of their loyalty to Liberalism. Discussing the record of the Laurier administration, Mr. Clark declared that those who claimed that the finance minister was a failure had better first explain the unexampled prosperity of the country. The policy of the Liberal party had been expan-sion of trade, and having regard to that policy, reciprocity was the capstone of the triumphs of the Laurier govern-

Automobile Exchange

N MONDAY morning this establishment will open for business with a splendid range of used Automobiles of various types. Each car is in excellent running condition. Each is marked at a fraction of its original selling price.

The constant purchasing of new Automobiles places upon the market fine used cars which are practically as good as new, and the Automobile Exchange has been established expressly for the purpose of providing a place where such cars can be secured with every confidence on the part of the buyer.

In no sense is this enterprise a temporary one. We are establishing this business on a permanent basis. We intend to maintain a reputation, and will, therefore, handle good cars only. We accept from manufacturers automobiles taken in exchange, when thoroughly overhauled and put in A1 condition.

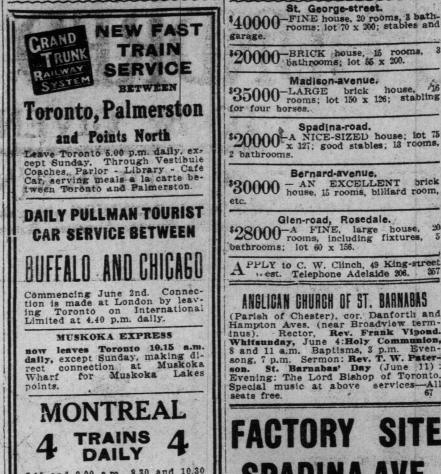

If you intend to purchase an Automobile, and want to save money, look these cars over first Basebail, they say, has changed a heap; I guess it has, in spots. And yet I liked it better when we played it on the lots. There were no signs for "hit and run," no dazzling "fadeaways"; We had no high-priced managers to tell us fancy plays. No, we were just a lot of kids, with tanned and freckled hides: There were no concrete grand stands when we played at "choosing sides."

I saw a ball game yesterday, and o'er a brass band's flare The cheers of thirty thousand fans were scaring in the air; The turnstiles had been clicking for three solid golden hours. Recording wealth and profit for the big league baseball powers. How soon we lose our play days! How swiftly childhood glides! There were no clicking turnstiles when we played at "choosing sides."

The Future Home of the Independent Tire, Guelph, Ont.

The Independent Tire Company of Toronto. Limited, have succeeded in carrying their by-law in the City of Guelph, and intend erecting the above plant in that city. The by-law provides for a loan of $25,-000.00, a free site of from 2 to 3 acres of land, exemption from taxes other than the school tax and local improvement for a term of 10 years. The dimensions of the above plant will be 250 ft. by 60ft., three storeys high, and will have a capacity of 150 tires a day. The Company will manufacture automobile tires, motorcycle tires, truck tires, carriage tires, and rubber hose. It is estimated that the above plant will cost, equipped, about $100,000.

The Company expect to start the construction of their plant by July 1st, and to have same com-pleted and equipped and ready for business by the end of this year. While their plant is being built in Guelph, the Company are carrying a large stock of tires and tubes, such as they are going to manufacture, in their store, at 133 Bay street, Toronto

A limited amount of 7 per cent. preferred, accumulative, participating stock of the Independent Tire Company of Toronto, Limited, is now offered for public subscription, at par. Special inducements are offered to automobile owners. The Gueiph plant will be superintended by Mr. L. T. Vance, who has had 20 years' experience in the rubber fire business, and is the General Superintendent of the Batavia Rub-ber Company, who are manufacturing the Independent Tires for this Company, under contract, until the Canadian plant is completed. The Independent Tire Company of Toronto, Limited, has also secured from Mr. Vance all formulas used in making the compounds used in the Independent Tires, and has also secured the patents for Canada for the Security Tread, Non-skid Tire, which is giving every satisfaction. A great many prominent automobile owners of Toronto are using the Independent Tires at present, and recognize them to be the best tires they ever used, especially the Security Tread.

Mr. H. H. Hestings of Toronto, Promoter and General Manager of the Company, informs us that the Independent Tire Company is meeting with great success in the sale of their tires, and a large business is being developed. The increasing demand for these tires is very noticeable every week.

is being developed. The increasing demand for these three is very noticeable every week. Full particulars with regard to the stock now being offered by this Company will be gladly furn-ished on application at 133 Bay street, Toronto. It is universally known that stock of the different Rub-ber Tire Companies pays handsome dividends, and the future prospects of this Company are very bright. The stock should be worth many times its present value in a short time.

the late King Edward's Minoru two short years ago. As to Sunstar. Prior to last Wednesday's race, Eng-lish racing experts had a deal to say about Sunstar's sprinting parentage, "Augur" in London Sporting Life, for instance, remarking: "Sunstar's pedi-gree, taken as a whole, does not strike me as being that of a staver. Doris. gree, taken as a whole, does not surke me as being that of a stayer. Doris, for instance, barely got five furlongs in a true-race run, and Sunbridge, tho, a brilliant sprinter, was notoriously a non-stayer. A dash of speed in the mare is an essential to her progeny's success over any distance; but if the progeny is to stay, then it is surely necessary that a mare of the type of Doris should be put to a stallion of the Torpoint sort, and not to a mere sprinter like Sundridge, whose produce have up to the present shown quite a lot of their sire's speed and all his lack of stamina. Sunstar may be one of these great exceptions which pro-verbially go to prove the rule. Should he be beaten in the Derby he will not be the first colt to have smashed up a useful field like a lot of hacks at Newmarket, only to go down to unexpected and ignominious defeat on Epsom Downs." But he did not go down to defeat on Epsom Downs, on the condefeat on Epsom Downs, on the con-trary, Sunstar scored an easy victory from 25 others in the second fastest time for the race on record, Lemburg having won last year in 2.361-5, where-as Sunstar's time was the same as Spearmint's in 1906, namely 2.364-5, which stood as the record for four J. W HEN the magistrate in Toronto police court enquires of the somewhat shaky one before him who listed court enquires of the the calendar it would be easy enough for that one to place the date of his last appearance well back in the vis-tas of time save for one thing and David Archibald, Chief Inspector of Police is it.

He is the man who keeps tab. To this end, the court has given him a duplicate calendar and Providence has provided him with a memory longer than his stature, and that is going some. The chief inspector is the very gray gentleman who sits behind a grill and a large moustache immediately to the right of the magistrate and whose voice every now and then rumbles out in contradiction of some artistic tale which is just a little too utterly utter. It is he who is the reason for a large part of the little truth told by self-excusing drunks.

The drunk may be confused by his drinks of the night before, but the man who keeps tab is not. He is not confused and that memory of his after reaching back into the archives of his mind has a terrible and uncomfortable way of bringing out a well established recollection of the whole matter.

Chief Inspector Archibald has been sitting in that same seat day after day for a long time and, like every other fixture, he has made many friends and many enemies. This he knows but does not worry He just naturally sits there doing his level best in a blunt, manly and within kindly determination which neither fear, favor ser affection can abate when he sees his duty. There be those who declare that he is that one of whom it was so eloquently if il-

I be down will heave allow is best for himself should often be answered in the negative and it frequently falls to the lot of the chief inspector to make or suggest the answer. That in itself is enough to provide plenty of enemies for most of us.

But if he does many seemingly harsh things, there is the other side. No one has sat long in the court without seeing the tall stooped form raise and the heavy voice explaining to the magistrate the reason and the way of mercy toward some unfortunate in the dock. When you find a diamond in the rough, you find it in the way the Almighty made it, and that is the way you find David Archibald. Even when you have known him well for a long time and have found the big Irish heart that is in him you will often find yourself desperate over the things that he will do. It isn't that either so much as the way he will do them and, believe me, he does all the disagreeable ones in public.

He couldn't hide an unpleasant thing if he tried. It is only the kindly ones that he whispers. The others are roared out so that no man may say that they were done in secret. You may not like the things he says but you will be able to hear them.

That is one of the things which makes him dear to the hearts of newspapermen. He does not whisper the choicest bits of his tirades against anything or anybody. Be the subject of his objection high or low, or of influence little or great. Anything that he has to say will be said in the open where it may be answered--- if there is an answer. He is not of that tantalizing breed who have grave accusation to make but to be made in confidence and secrecy.

His silence is like his speech. It is not to be bought and it is deep. He is just about the most unfixible thing in a uniform or out of one. If there is any reason why mercy should be shown to anyone bound for the police court, there is no man in whose hands the facts will be of greater service ... but the reason had better be a good cone, soland of word and light is is to go the distance with him. Moreover it must be an hoogst gen. They haven't made expende mouses in "separa" David Archibala which is of tremendous service to the community. It is a work which must harden a man's heart against cruelty and oppression if it is not to break it. It is a work which opens a man's eyes to man's inhumanity to man but more especially man's inhumanity to women and children.

Doubtless much of the relentless animosity to the cruel and the unfair which to-day bristles about the chief/inspector as a halo is the growth of the long years during which he sat in the municipal confessional in the dingy offices of the morality department.

Chief Inspector Archibald was born in Tipperary 69 years ago. His father was a Scotchman and his mother a German. He grew up in the land of ructions and disputations and served in the Royal Irish Constabulary before coming to Toronto 46 years ago when the city had 45,000 inhabitants and 45 policemen to preserve what little order could be maintained.

In those troublous times, he walked the beat for a few months waiting for the weather to break up so that he might seek out his salvation and fortune on a farm. He became fascinated with the job. There were many fights and much'argument and as a preliminary canter he opened up an argument with his then chief, Col. Draper. He propounded the proposition of the swearing cop and asked how, he was to deal differently with those in the street who used "langwidge," when one wore a policeman's uniform and the other did not. This one had the chief very much without an answer and an order. went out that the police must work without cussing.

Conquest of the Air.

If peace has her victories no less renowned than those of was, they are not always, or usually bloodless. Science, art and invention have each its roll of heroes and victims who have died for the cause they had at heart. Many others have carried the soars of honor won or endured hardships and privations to achieve their end comparable to any in the annals of war. All is well for pro-gress that men and women can ever be found with the courage and the patience and the constancy to risk life and limb, to conquer innumer-able obstacles and difficulties and to preserve against endless failures and ted by an exasperating, beautyrebbing cold in the genial Summer time

I have always avoided a cold for two reasons it rendered my voice unmusical, and it was a thief stealing half, if not all, of my good looks. And I have been taught by that grim teacher, experience, to be on my guard against colds quite as much in the Summer as in the Winter.

Automobiles are the cause of many dust colds, the occupants of the automobile sharing the nuisance with any passersby to whom the flying machine gives its dust. The wind, usually an aid to health. is in this case an enemy, for it scatters the dry, irritating dust, sifting it into the nostrils, or if you talk while out of doors, the lungs, as well as spreading a veil of road grime over the features.

Railway journeys are the causes of many Summer colds. No car is free from dust. The man who makes them so will make himself a multimillionaire as well as a public benefactor. Dust comes in at the winodws, settles into the velvet and cloth upholstered seats, which in your country are inferior to the more hygienic if less comfortable wooden and cane sears in the com-partments of European trains.

Long walks along frequented country roads, so interesting and so beneficial otherwise, are among the causes of Summer colds. In-Appropriate clothing. oftener too much than too little, is another cause. A jazy liver, and a tendency to intestinal indigestion are reasons for colds. Diseases that lower the vitality, as rheumatism and gout, cause colds. or family resemblances to colds. The presence

There's a song within my heart Throughout the day. While I watch the swallows dart Above the may: For the Spring has come to me. Calling lond with youthful gies. "Bue, I'm bringing Love to thee, With these to start" "See, I'm bringing Lotay!" With thee to stay!"

cause irritation or disease. Respect the nose. It has five great c. an excess of uric acid in the blood causes congestion and swelling of the nas:1 linings. Overeating is one of the causes. Candy eaters are more subject to colds than other persons, excepting those who by excessive use of alcohol irritate the larynx and pharynx. There is little doubt that even common colds may be caused by infection. A healthy person may catch a cold from a person afflicted with it. A sudden change in the weather for which one has not prepared herself by an extra wrap, an umbrella or a pair of rubbers, is one of the causes. Standing or sitting still with wet feet is a careiessness always paid for by the penalty of a cold. Keep a pair of rubbers and a rain cloak at hand for use in Summer showers. Draughts, or changes of air upon sensitive parts of the body, as the unthatched part of the head, or the back of the neck, are among the common causes. My first advice is to prevent these conditions by giving thought to the unpleasant and debeautifying r-sults of colds. Avoid all these causes, remembering that if ration. you do not shun them you will have the unpleasant sniffles, the swollen nose, The reddened, watery eyes, the husky voice, the feverish cheeks and listless manner that are unbecoming to the prettiest girl in the world. Be sure to keep the nasal passages free from dust. Dust is laden with disease germs, and if the small hairs lining the nostrils do not do their work of filtering the air well these germs may settle in some part of the nasal passages and duties to perform for the body. It gives you the sense of smell. It filters the air that enters the nostrils, acting as a sieve, the little hairs in the lining keeping out all intruders except the air, acting as tiny policemen arresting all elements not wanted in the body. It is a kind of stove of the body, heating the air slightly before it enters the delicate lungs. It is the great drainage pipe of the head. And it is one of the chief organs of breathing.

Colds are occasional. and catarrh is a chronic inflammation of the upper part of the breathing apparatus. Frequent colds are likely to cause permanent catarrh, and for this, if for no other reason, should be avoided. A proverb of practical physicians is, "Catch your cold early." That is within the first twenty-four hours.

Try to induce a heavy sweat, but do this discreetly or the second cold will be worse than the first. Take a very hot bath. Get between heavy blankets. It is better to leave off your night gown or pajamas so that the chilling touch of linen or muslin will not check the perspi-

London, May 11. W ITH the Coronation cere-monies, the Dowager Queen Alexandra will virtually pass from the stage, never again to be reckoned a power among the European royalties.

Few Queens in history have ever outrivaled her in popularity and none have outshone her as a beauty. Yet with her retirement to Marlborough House she will be as lost the world as any cloistered nunjost and forgotten.

Always dramatic from that sunny day when first she set foot in England a beautiful bride going to a royal marriage, so beautiful that the usually phlegmatic English people went wild over this vision of young loveliness, unhitched the horses from her carriage and triumphantly dragged her through the streets to the aitar, she departs in tragic dignity.

Sombrely, in swathings of crepe trimmed inky habiliments, gathering about her a small court of crepe swathed personal attendants, she will pass from the stage just at that hour when with all London en fete, with Westminster Abbey, thronged "A simple remedy that has with magnificently dressed personages, glittering with royal orders, cured hoarseness is a soluthe heralds proclaim to the waiting tion of bicarbonate of soda world without the Abbey doors that taken four times a day." haps a fashionable preference for small, allover patterns of a conventional acter, shown sometimes in black on a col-ored ground or else in two shades of one chosen tint. Sometimes, indeed, two en-tirely diverse arrangements of a pattern will figure on one length of foulard, which is, consequently, known as the "half-andhalf" make, part of the design being, for instance, carried out in white on honey color, while the other gives prominence to the white as background for honeycolored scrolls and spots. Such a scheme looks specially well carried out in white and two shades of blue, the deeper tone being repeated by vehing bands of ninon on corsage and skirt, and a definite contrast o. weave provided by buttons and pipings of cerise. A touch of black in the form of a quaint little satin tie studded with gold buttons is also of good effect, a turn-down collar of white embroidered lawn being a further detail whose addition is to be distinctly recommended, while when the possessor of this very pretty thing in the way of gowns desires to utilize it for outdoor and more ceremonious occasions, she only has to add a short coat of transparent blue ninon piped with cerise and banded with dull gold galon. A New "Lucile" Tea Gown. White Satin Underdress with Broad Band of Silver Insertion at Foot. Coat of Blue and Gold Tissue Trimmed with Cherry Colored Satin and Pleated Silver Lace. Cap of Silver Lace with Pink and Blue Ribbons.

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile")

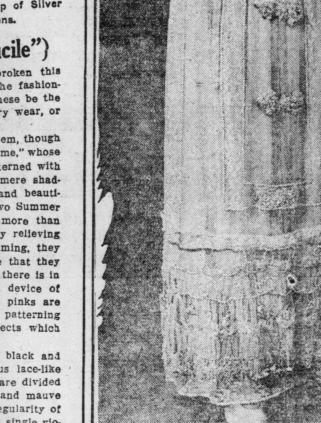

DOSITIVELY, all records have been broken this season by the fabrics provided for the fashioning of gowns of all kinds, whether these be the simplest little affairs for morning or country wear, or exquisite creations for court functions.

There is real beauty in one and all of them, though loveliest of all, perhaps, is the "ninon imprime," whose filmy and softly colored transparency is patterned with an infinite variety of designs, some being mere shadowy suggestions, while others are boldly and beautifully defined. You must all have one or two Summer dresses in these new ninons, which will more than make up for their somewhat high price. by relieving you from any expense in the way of trimming, they themselves being so exceedingly decorative that they can be made up in the simplest styles. One there is in the tone of old parchment which bears a device of roses and forget-me-nots, whose blues and pinks are curiously and charmingly softened by their patterning on this soft background, if you prefer effects which are striking rather than subtle.

There is a vivid cerise, on which tiny black and white berries are scattered between curious lace-like stripes in black nd white, whose scallops are divided at intervals by bouquets of reses in pink and mauve and yellow. Lovely, too, in the artistic irregularity of its design is a shadow gray ninon, on which single violets and faintest mauve are shadowed, while here and there come bunches of poppies, rose hued and purple. and still again, you can, if you so prefer it, have a series of pretty prim little blossoms of various colorings, set each one within a little square of white on a semi-transparency of blac : mauve. Pink, blue and yellow are the colors thus used, while tiny leaves of fresh green are further introduced to make the white and black contrast still more effective. A similar design, also looking well on a dark blue ground, while dainty to a degree, too, is a white ninon, on which-deprived of their guarding square-the little colored flowers show up charmingly. A still further variety is afforded, too, by the use of shot ninons. Imagine the loveliness of a shimmering transparency of pale blue. which now shows a flush of palest pink and next a suggestion of mauve, all three delicate colors, with the addition of a touch or two of green, being definitely and delightfully displayed in the sprays of both roses and forget-me-nots with which it is strewn.

And if I had to choose between three other new designs in ninon imprine, I should find it distinctly difficult to give up any one of them, for there is much charm, for instance, in a soft pewter gray, on which little poppies of bright royal blue shading are divided by single forget-me-not blossoms, whose tiny cerise petals are all outlined with black. And then another and more elusive shade of gray bears a device of shadowy black stripes, broken at intervals by groups of spots, while a further and most fascinating addition is a little full blown flower, in which white. pale blue, tawny brown, golden yellow and delicate green are all most cleverly combined.

Quite different, but oh! so smart, is a royal blue ninon, narrowly and closely striped with black, those fascination, too, of softly colored blossoms, tied together by trailing ribbons of tender blue on a white ground, or, again, the bolder beauty of a chine design of flowers whose shadowy grays and mauves and pinks are silhouetted against a black background.

Next, for the sake of contrast and to prove the promised beauty of both the cheap and the costly fabrics, I would wish you to make the acquaintance of a new make of white French pique, which is as soft as it is strong, and is patterned with colored stripes-royal blue, cherry red or almond green-these, too, being further adorned on their own account with a shower of little white spots.

A white silk and cotton batiste, too, which has imprisoned on its checked pattern sprays of little forgetme-nots in pale blue and pink shadings, is also an assured success, while then to go to the other extreme, there is a new and exquisite gold tissue, on whose shimmering surface is brocaded a raised device in softest gray velvet.

Some of these metallic tissues are interwoven with the color eventually and more definitely displayed by velvet device, while also sure of favor for the making of Court gowns is a silk all interwoven with the threads of gold or silver, which are eventually massed more closely ogether in the flower device. And everything, however rich and weighted with gold it may be, is absolutely soft and supple in texture, so that it is a double delight to use such materials. and one to which I can assure you I am looking for- X.Ray Photograph of Bessie Clayward.

What the Toe Dancer's Muscles Teach Us

By DR. ANDREW WILSON. T is astonishing to find many persons either do not know or forget that what we term "muscle" is the flesh of an animal's body.

And many people, besides, have no conception of the arious uses to which muscle is put in the living economy. Thus all ordinary move-ments are executed by our muscles. The heart is a muscular force-pump and circulates our blood. Muscle chews our food, and propels it along the digestive canal, and muscle enables us to execute the mechanical part of speech. It also enables us to express our thoughts, in a way. Among the muscular movements which appeal to us in a very decided. fashion are those involved in dancing. If it so happen that the dancing is of professional kind, where the muscular actions are visible and can be studied, a very interesting demonstration in respect of what muscles do and in what muscles may be trained to do becomes pos-

The photographs of the legs of Miss Bessie Clayton, who is appearing at the London Alhambra, form in this light an interesting study. They illustrate, first of all, the great "law of use and disuse"-use developing and strengthening muscles, disuse having the opposite effect. Hence it is possible for the practised and trained dancer even to stand and dance on her toes, as her performance demonstrates. Naturally, we find special training accomplishing special results here as elsewhere. The left leg brings out very strikingly the very strong development of the calf-muscles. whose business it is to raise the heel. Many persons not trained dancers can raise the heels to a degree not usually seen in ordinary life; but it certainly represents a very special action of these muscles when they enable an individual actually to bring the foot practically in a vertical line with the leg.

That which is additionally interesting in considering all cases of muscular development and perfected or specialized muscular action is the knowledge that all our actions really depend on the special quality or property possessed by our mus-cles—that of shortening themselves. This property is what, in other words, is termed "contractility." A muscle is fixed at one extremity (its "origin"), and moves at the other (its "insertion"), and by the act of shortening itself it brings nearer together the parts between which it is attached.

This is the whole story of muscular action, and Miss Clayton illustrates this action in special fashion. When she raises her heel and stands on her toes, the calf-muscles shorten themselves. They are attached above, and it is the heel end which is raised by their contraction. The muscles are attached to bones by stout bands called "sinews," or, technically, "tendons." These latter do not contract; that power lies in the fleshy fibres of the muscle which run into and become continuous with the tendon. We can imagine the strength of tendon when we see what Miss Clayton's tendo Achillis has to do when she, raises her heel after the manner described. Nature, in her wisdom. has got a better and stronger grip of the bones to be moved by making muscles end (and originate) in sinews, than if she inserted the softer flesh fibres into the bone. Extreme flexibility of joints must needs constitute a condition inseparable from the perfect practice of the dancer's art. but the development of muscle and the culture of the joints are matters which mutually influence each other.

GOVERNESS SAYS "NAUGHTY, NAUGHTY" WREN I POUR THE TEA INTO A SAUCERO. PA Paris. May 26. LLE LOUISE GREUZE is one of the loveliest actresses on the French stage. She loves to pose in tableaux modelled upon the paintings of her great namesake She does this because she thinks she looks like Greuze's dimpled girls. If a boulevardier says, "Why. I remember that little Greuze girl ten years ago," his companion is apt to say, "Impossible! Why, she can't be more than twenty now!" And she doesn't look it, although she may be twice that. How she does it has been her secret. Here she tells her secret. New thought, which is really very old thought, teaches its believers that we are what we think w eare So if any one has courage enough to do the crazy things Mllé. By Mlle. Louise Greuze.

OST people think that I am very, very young Only a little girl, in fact. And so strong was this feeling about me when I was playing in London that to please and satisfy the English people I had to hire a governess to be always with me. It wouldn't be fair to tell how far wrong every one is in this matter, for actresses never tell their real ages, and I might be very sorry for it later on. I will only say, however, that I am at least ten years older than most people think me. I retain my child-like ap pearance and expression by a most careful system! If you don't feel like doing silly, undignified things, haved little girl shouldn't do.

The English governess had such a beneficial effect upon my childish imitations that I retained her. A great part of her duty is to chide me, to slap me when I am naughty and to talk real childish, baby talk to me when I am going through my youth-retaining exercises. Then I fool about a lot with my tea. I sip it out of the spoon, making a gurgling noise and acting as if it was great fun-I get to think it is. That is the way to be happy and gay. Only three or four years ago Toronto began to wake up to the fact that she was growing in size very rapidly but without a corresponding consciousness of the added responsibilities necessitated by a congested population. The Progressive Club discussed the need in Toronto of public playgrounds and a committee was playgrounds and a committee was formed which wated on the council and resulted in much agitation thru the newspapers. During the winter months free skating rinks are provided in many parts of the city, and toboggan slides are erected and maintained in Riverdale and High

Every dollar subscrib-ed to the work will bring happiness to some child in the city. Something is accomplished if the children are kept off the streets, but when the chance is given to them to enjoy, under favorable conditions, the inherent blessings of childhood, we are contributing to the sum of human ested citizens. Jesus Christ, by faith and not for our own works or de-servings: wherefore that we are justified by faith only is a most wholesome doct-tine, and very full of comfort." This is also found in Buck's Theo. Dictionary, page 80, and in the Methodist Church Discipline, published in Toronto, page 6. In "Gems of Truth and Beauty," pub-lished in 188, page 125, we read as ol-lows: "Bring out from the dust of six thousand years the old covenant of Eden, and on that solled and torn banner you read the fading motto. 'Do and live.' But what read we on the folds of this ban-ner, which, defiant of helt and the world, waves above Calvary and under which And the closing lines has it like this: ner, which, defiant of hell and the world, waves above Calvary and under which believers march to victory. The eye of a sinner's hope kindles at the sight of fitother and a better motto, for there in-berthed in the blood of Jesus, like red letters on snow-white ground, we read: Believe and live; salvation is the only thing needful for man, and faith is the only thing neearul for salvation," Gutberie. thing needful for mail, and failth is the only thing needful for salvation," Gutheria. The Rev. Dr Van Horne preached in the very shadow of the Wesleyam Uni-versity at Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, in April. 1832. The following is cooled from The Mount Pleasant News: "What must I do to be saved?" This is the text from which Dr. Van Horne preached to a full house last evening. He 'said: "This ubestion presupposes two things; first, a desire on our part to be saved from sin and its consequences: from that which is distressing to that which is blessed; "is the ouseful and ultimately heaven." "Second, to receive this solvation what it use do? Believe on the Lord Jes-ub Christ, and thou shalt be saved." What does this mean? First, we assent that Jesus came into the world to save somers. Second, we consent with our heart and our will that He came to save us. When these two requisites are ful-filled we will be saved." Dr. Talmage, in September, 1894, made the following statement: "There is only one road to heaven, and that is the road of fauth. There is only one boat to heav-en, and that is the boat of faith. There is only one step to heaven, and that is the step of faith. For how much is heaven and pardon offered to you? A m...on dollars? less than that; a thous-and dollars? less than that; a thou-from it, as follows: "And tho I have all faith, so that I could remove mount-ains, and have not charity. I am nothing. Oh, you say, that does not mean a saving faith. Bless your heart, my friend, if you have all faith, how much more faith can you have than all of it? Yet the writer here says that the you may have all faith, and yet lack the essential son thing else, it will profit you no-thing. How can it save you then? In the closing verses of this chapter he says: "And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three: but the greatest of these is charity." Why, if faith alone will save you, why didn't he say, the greatest of these is faith?--but he didn't. The Reformer's Mistake.

greatest of these is faith?-but he didn't. The Reformer's Mistake. Now, I do not wish to speak dispar-agingly of faith, for I believe with the Bible that without faith it is impossible to please God; that faith is the great motive power of every intelligent action; and that faith is the first principle of the Christian doctrine. But that faith and that faith is the first principle of the Christian doctrine. But that faith alone will save you, I believe to be a palpable misconception of Christ's teach-ing as found in the New Testament. I believe that some of our reformers-good men as they were in many respects-went to the extreme on the question of works. While Romanism was placing its whole trust for salvation on indul-gence and penance and such things as that, which was wrong and contrary to the Book; these men went to the ex-treme in the other direction, when they began to teach and to show that works had nothing to do with our salvation. Here is their strongest point; for it is

The Discontented Prospector

There's a story told Of a prospector bold, Who was grizzled and worn with years, Who had nosed around-picking holes in the ground, Prospecting-this vale of tears. Life to him was a "hike"- oft he made a good strike; But his soul never knew content, For he had it in mind, that pure gold he would find, And oft his last "two bits" were spent, Till he took his last hike-(up eternity's pike) To the unknown realms afar. And came to the gates, where the good saint waits: And found the doors standing ajar. Said he to the saint, "I have the gold taint; * I have searched o'er the earth far and wide. Please don't send me below-For I've lived where there's snow And I'm sure there's good values inside. I did my best in life's grim test And I did as most men do, And of't ere I died I just took (on the side) A taste of the Spruce bough brew, was tanked when I croaked; liquidated and soaked. In Piggers foul brew of the (dope) The Spruce boughs green, with a dash of benzine, Well blended with strychnine and soap. I have bunked in the snow where the North winds blow; And the germ festered swamps of the South. But I should like to know? when inside I go! Can I get the taste out of my mouth?" "Pass in," said the saint, without restraint, "We ne'er send a prospector below-For their life I've heard tell, is the blue fringe of hell, With instalments each day as they go.' Then he smiling passed thru-and quickly he knew-With his pick, and his spade, sad havoc he made; For he ripped up the golden street. Another poor prospector came to the gate-With pick, and with shovel, to join his mate. But was promptly told he could go-And stand with a brand, on someone's left hand. In a place where they don't shovel snow. For we have one inside, and the golden street wide, Is ripped up the back and the front, The gold he piles high, and what for and why, Is he doing this prospecting stunt.' The newcomer replied: "I can lure him outside, And they hustled him in, without cleansing his sin, Where the first one was piling it high. "Have you seen the new strike? Come let's make a hike!" And he turned toward our host.

"Gentlemen, you have recalled to my mind the great remorse of my life. At the end of the Syrian expedition I was a young ensign on sick leave, and I went to pass the time on the banks of the Bosphorus, in that delicious nook, Candilly, where I had been invited to stay at the house of Ali-Bey. He was a very distinguished Turk, who in old days had been a fellowstudent of mine in the Latin Quarter. Through Ali-Bey I made the acquaintance of Mahmoud Djellal Pasha, one of the most celebrated vizers of Abdul Medjid, and a real Oriental grandee. He was thoroughly Turkish in his opulence and hospitality, and was

"'Tell him that I was only joking, Ali-Bey,' I cried. I know that a stranger, and, above all, "a dog of a After gently glaour" can't enter the harem of a Mussulman. Tell shutting up the sandalwood box him so.'

"But it was too late. When Djellah Pasha gave his the old man reseated himself on word he always kept it.

"With the same gloomy air he clapped his hands the purple satin three times. Two black slaves appeared, their arms ottoman ornacrossed on their breasts. "'What folly!' said Ali-Bey to me again, with keen of fine gauze, and he turned toward regret.

"At last Haznefer Agha, a big negro, blacker than his tambouline, appeared, much out of breath. The master said something in a low voice, the eunuch raised his head, and with gaping mouth and wide eyes looked up as if frightened.

"But after a new and more brief order he retired, throwing on me a look of savage hate, and his eyes glowed like a cat's, or like the red pearls of this lamp. I assure you I was much impressed."

The Captain stopped a moment, threw away the "marecutch" of his extinct narghile, pressed his hands on his eyes, as if to read a half-forgotten vision, and continued in a melancholy tone:

"Soon after we came we-that is to say, the Pasha and I-Ali-Bey, who was consumed with anxiety, would not follow us to the Pasha's harem. beauties, whose sweet and regular features were the boast of the harems of the Bosphorus. Suddenly I saw coming toward me one so exquisitely beautiful that she was more like a divine spirit than a woman-one of those incomparable houris that haunt the dreams of a smoker of hashish. She was svelte and bland, and as lovely as the djammas of Hafiz or the peri Saadi. Her white robe made yet more ethereal the transparent purity of her complexion. Her hair was the color of tawny, honey, and her limpid eyes like the clear blue of the Sea of Marmora.

"Round her proud and graceful neck a narrow necklace of garnets drew a line as red as blood. She passed before us calm and dignified, but I thought I saw a slight smile of disdain hover tremblingly on her lips, and a sadness darkened the haughtiness of her eyes. I looked after her, but she never turned round. When she had gone I looked at nothing more.

"The other women seemed but her court-mere slaves, that aroused in me no emotion. Naturally this all passed in silence between the Pasha and myself: we had not even exchanged a look.

"When we were again in the garden All-Bey, who was waiting for us with a face of yet more funereal frigate, who sat with his eyes fixed on the ceiling while he smoked his narghile luxuriously. "You knew the East well in the old days; do you really believe in all these things?" "What a question to ask!" interposed one of our friends who was an artist and who was annoyed by all this chatter. "Everything you see here-the porcelains from Kutakia this Khorassan carnet, this damascened gueridor, these weapons from Syria-do they tell you nothing? And this divan on which you are lying, you most unappreciative person; or this delicious piece of silk from Broussa against which you are rubbing your patent leather shoes? And look at this exquisite little mother-o'-pearl coffer. Do you think it comes from the Avenue de l'Opera? Captain, I really am in love with your little coffer! Where could you have discovered such a gem? What wonderful carving and inlaid work! See with what matchless delicacy these little mosaics have been fashioned! And the color is ravishing! Why, it is a work of art fit for an emperor! From what Sultan did you steal it?"

"Oh, it is only a present from a pasha," said our host.

"Only! But may we look inside?" and the enthusiastic amateur, who, like all artists, was something of a child, did not wait for a reply, and had already found the secret of the golden lock to the little chest. But suddenly he drew back, exclaiming: "Oh, pardon me! I did not mean to be indiscreet!"

"Not at all, my dear fellow," replied the master of the house in a slightly embarrassed tone, and dropping his nonchalant mood, he said: "You can look inside, and these other gentlemen, too."

Full of curiosity, the guests crowded round the colfer, and there on the red velvet lining lay a tress of rich, silky hair in coils, like a golden serpent, the ruddy light of the transparent carbuncles in the hanting Arab lamps falling on it in spots, like drops of pale blood.

It was tied by a ribbon of some color long since faded, and the contrast was strange between the burnished lights of the golden hair, which still seemed proud, dignified and haughty. The magnificence of his banquets would have astonished the American Club of Millionaires. His stables were certainly the most superb in the East, and his harem ranked second only to the Sultan's. He upheld all the ancient customs of his race, he had a fine contempt for modern progress, and he studiously avoided all contact with Europeans. I owed it to Ali-Bey that he made an exception in my favor, for he introduced me as his friend and as a writer devoted to Arab literature. "'My humble cottage is at thy service,' said he to me. Each time thy steps lead thee to it thou wilt such a charming welcome should be accorded to a Giaour. "We had come near the waterside, when suddenly I saw through a gap in the foliage a pavilion more costly than all the others. It was a marvellous little Mooris'. palace of ophite marble, surrounded by a gallery whose small columns were ail intersected with garlands of roses.

"Between two tiny 'chahnissins' ornamented with a lattice of fretwori: a small arched doorway opened on to a court full of such sweet, cool shadows that I eagerly went toward it, but immediately three grotesque Nubians appeared and barred the threshold of the little temple. They stood motionless, their hands crossed on their breasts, with an air that was at once hostile and respectful.

"'Come away, come away,' said Ali-Bey quicky. 'No doubt this is the harem,' thought I; and, musing, I rejoined my companions, full of dreams of enchanted palaces where slept the treasures guarded by the Djinns, dreaming, too, of Bagdad, that city of fairyland, and of her caliphs, and I pictured to myself the wonders hidden away in this Moorish palace.

"One morning, when I was packing my trunk at the end of my holiday, a mounted negro arrived to invite me to come immediately to the court of his most puissant .chief. The solemn tone of the message made me sure that His Highness wish. ed to thank me for a present I had sent him the night before. It was a sabre from the Lebanon, a trophy from my recent campaign, a beautiful weapon of exquisite symmetry; and the blade, gray and shimmering like water silk, was decorated with an Arab inscription in damascened silver.

"When, accompanied by Ali-Bey, I obeyed the invitation. Diellal came to meet me, saying: 'What return can I make thee for the beautiful gift thou hast offered me, O! generous Frenchman?"

"He then pointed out to me something very wonderful. The filigree inscription on the old sabre, which was without doubt taken in some combat with a sheikh of the desert, proved, it seemed, that it had once

"We then went down a long gallery, where young negroes stood in line, with their hands crossed on their breasts, motionless and mute and holding their breath. "At the bottom we came to a wide folding door of marqueterie, which opened as if touched by a magic ring, and let us pass into a large hall, where we found ourselves in a perfumed twilight. "Along the whole length of the walls ran very low divans covered with rich stuffs and broidered cushions

"'Answer him that I find them all absolutely perfect. and before to-day I did not know what beauty really, was.

"'His Highness,' began Ali-Bey again, after another dialogue with my host; 'tells me to ask you if one of them did not make an impression on you.'

> "'It is true,' said I, impetuously. 'I shall never forget that blonde with the blue eyes, dressed all in white.'

"As we left the conak Ali-Bey said to me: 'Djellal . thinks you have very good taste for a giaour, but all the same, you have made a very, great blunder.'

"But I put a finishing touch to his indignation when I said coolly: 'Tell me, Ali-Bey, do you think the Pasha will send me the beautiful b'onde?" "A little while afterwards I was told that messengers from Mahmoud Djellal Pasha wanted to see me, and three slaves entered. One brought a letter and another this coffer which you see here: it was then wrapped in a veil of white tulle and tied with red ribbons. When they have received their baksheesh the porters withdrew, and Ali-Bey opened the letter and translated as follows:

"The laws of my country forbid a believer to give a daughter of Islam to a Christian; but, at least, thou wilt know that no other man will look on her thou hast preferred.'

"'I do not understand in the least,' I exclaimed, vaguely uneasy. 'What does it mean?'

"'Open the coffer! open the coffer!' cried All-Bey, turning very pale, while he feverishly untied the covering of tulle. We raised the lid, and my friends, if I live to a hundred years I shall never forget the agony of that moment. On the red velvet of the coffer, half hidden by the long tresses which you admired just now, I saw the lovely head that I had thought so fair two hours before; but the lips no longer smiled, and the glorious eyes were closed forever."

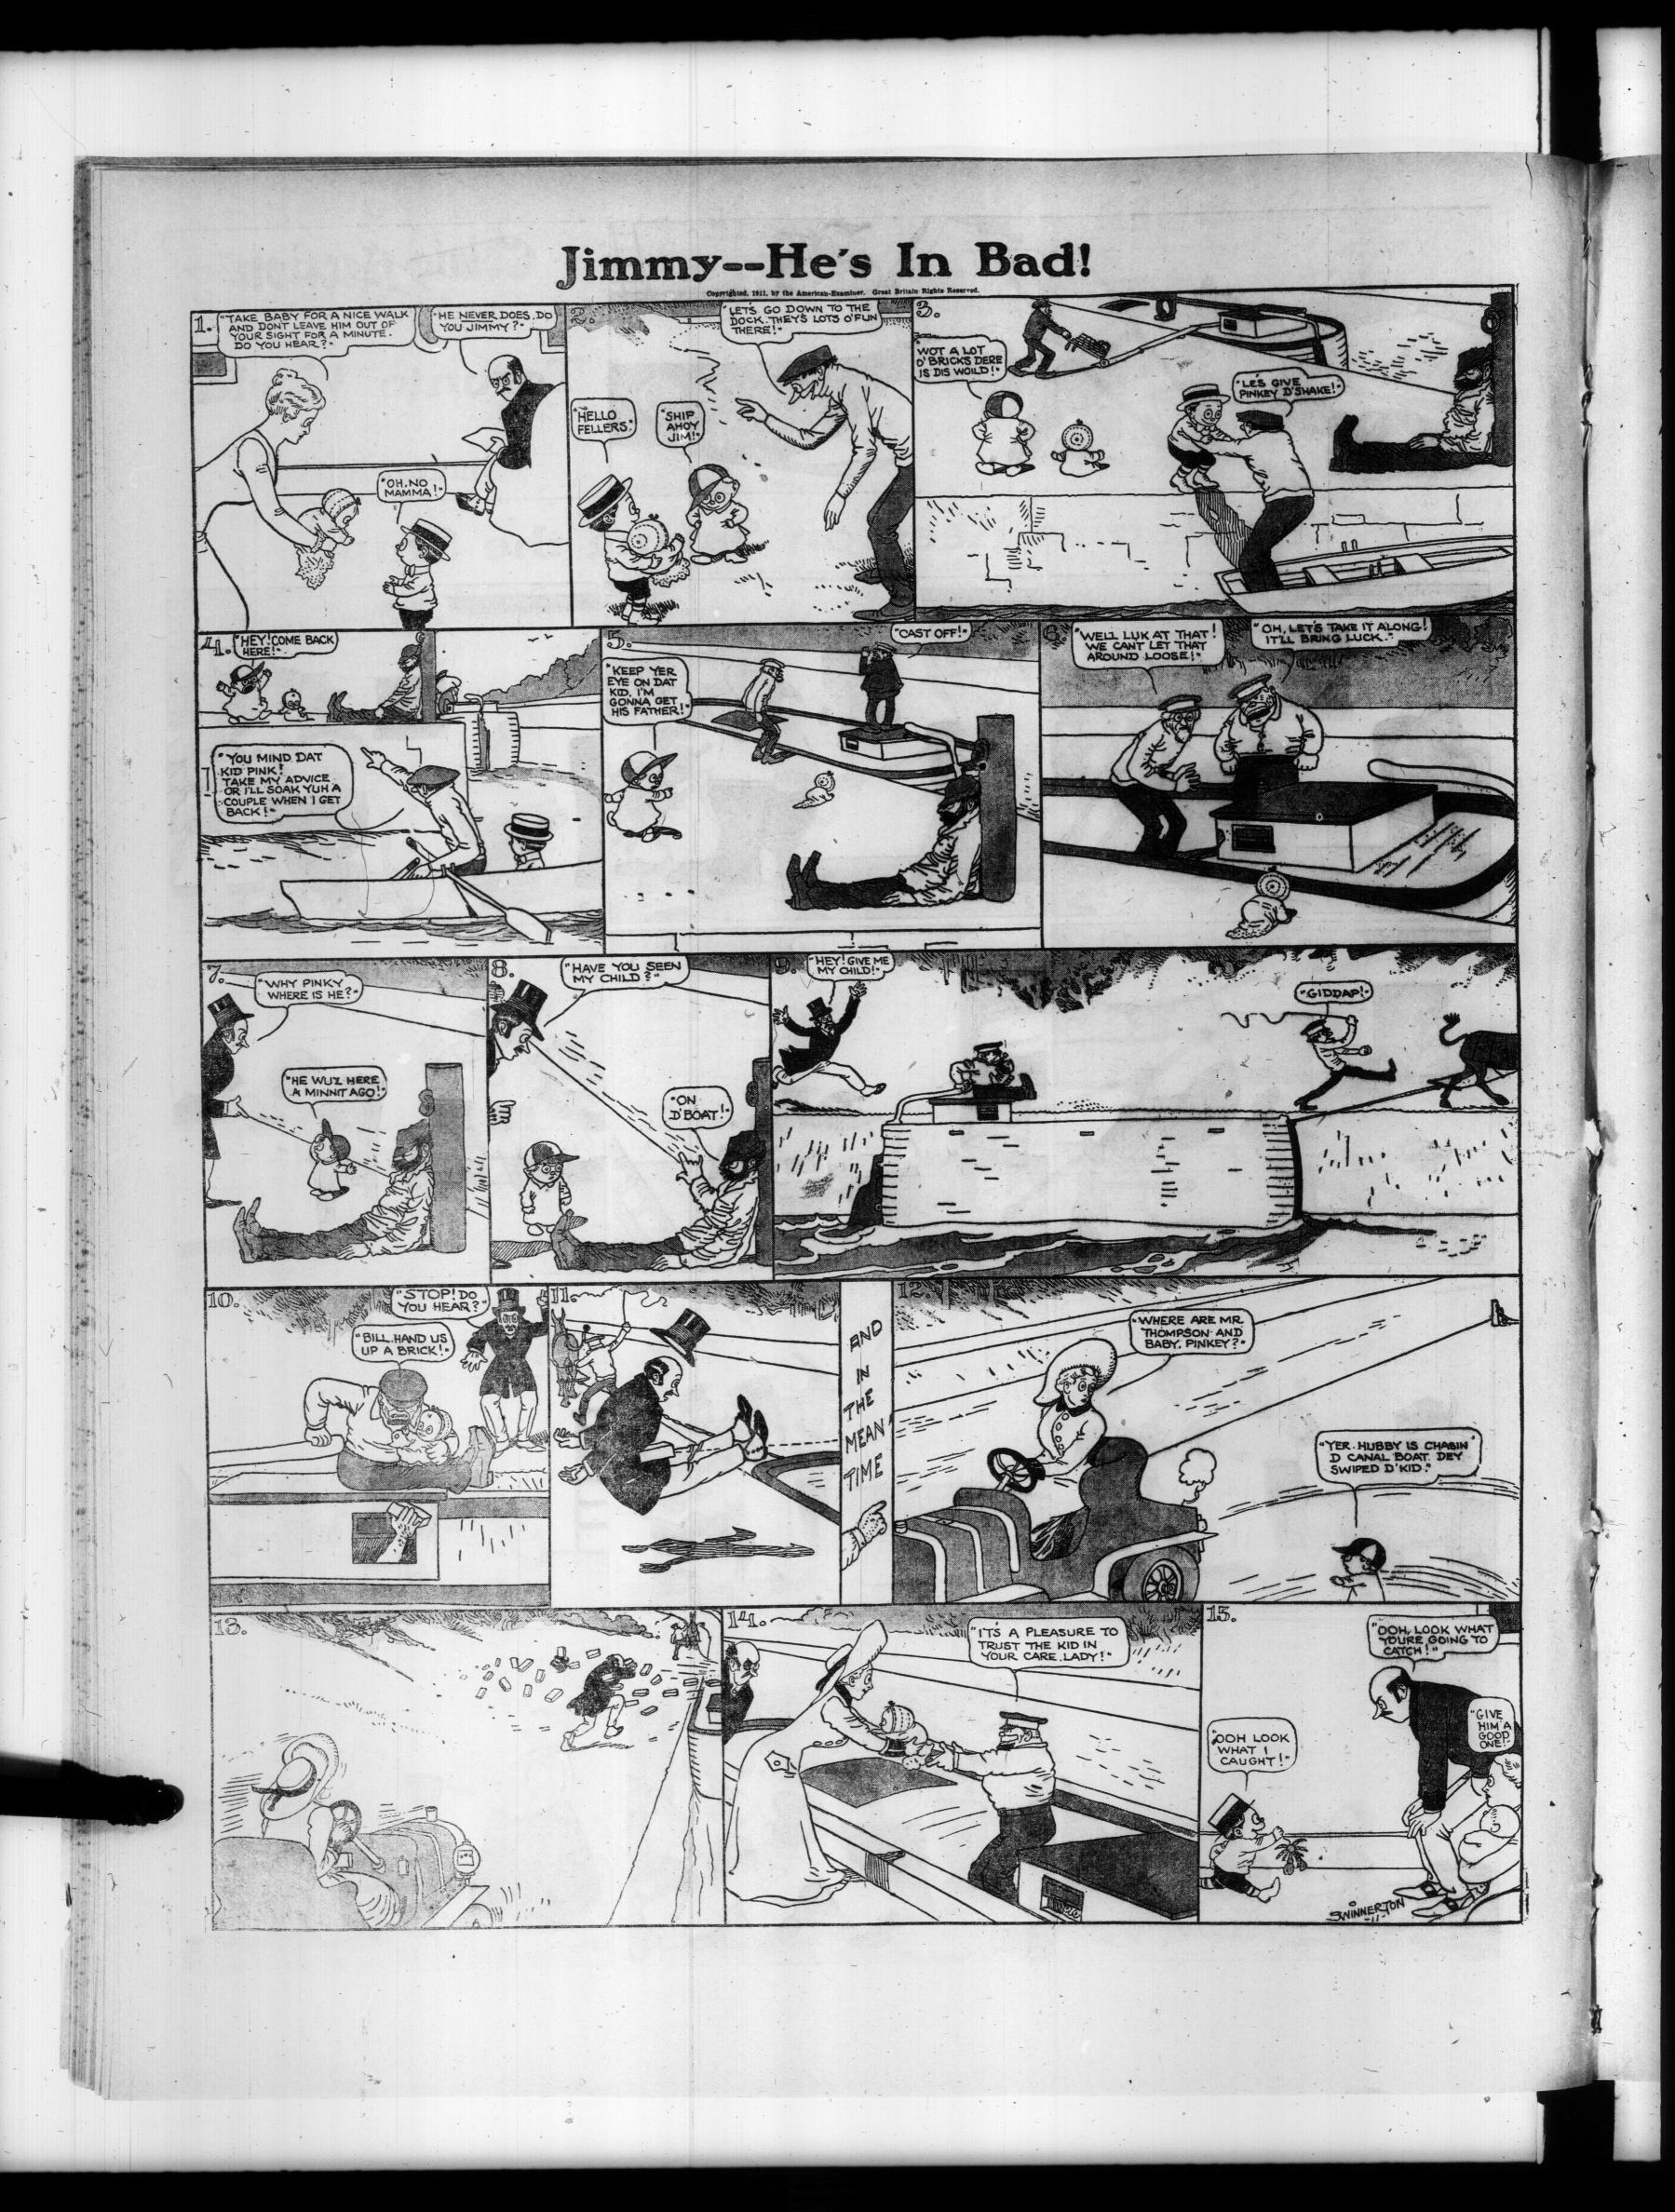

longed into infinite perspective the splendors of this voluptuous retreat.

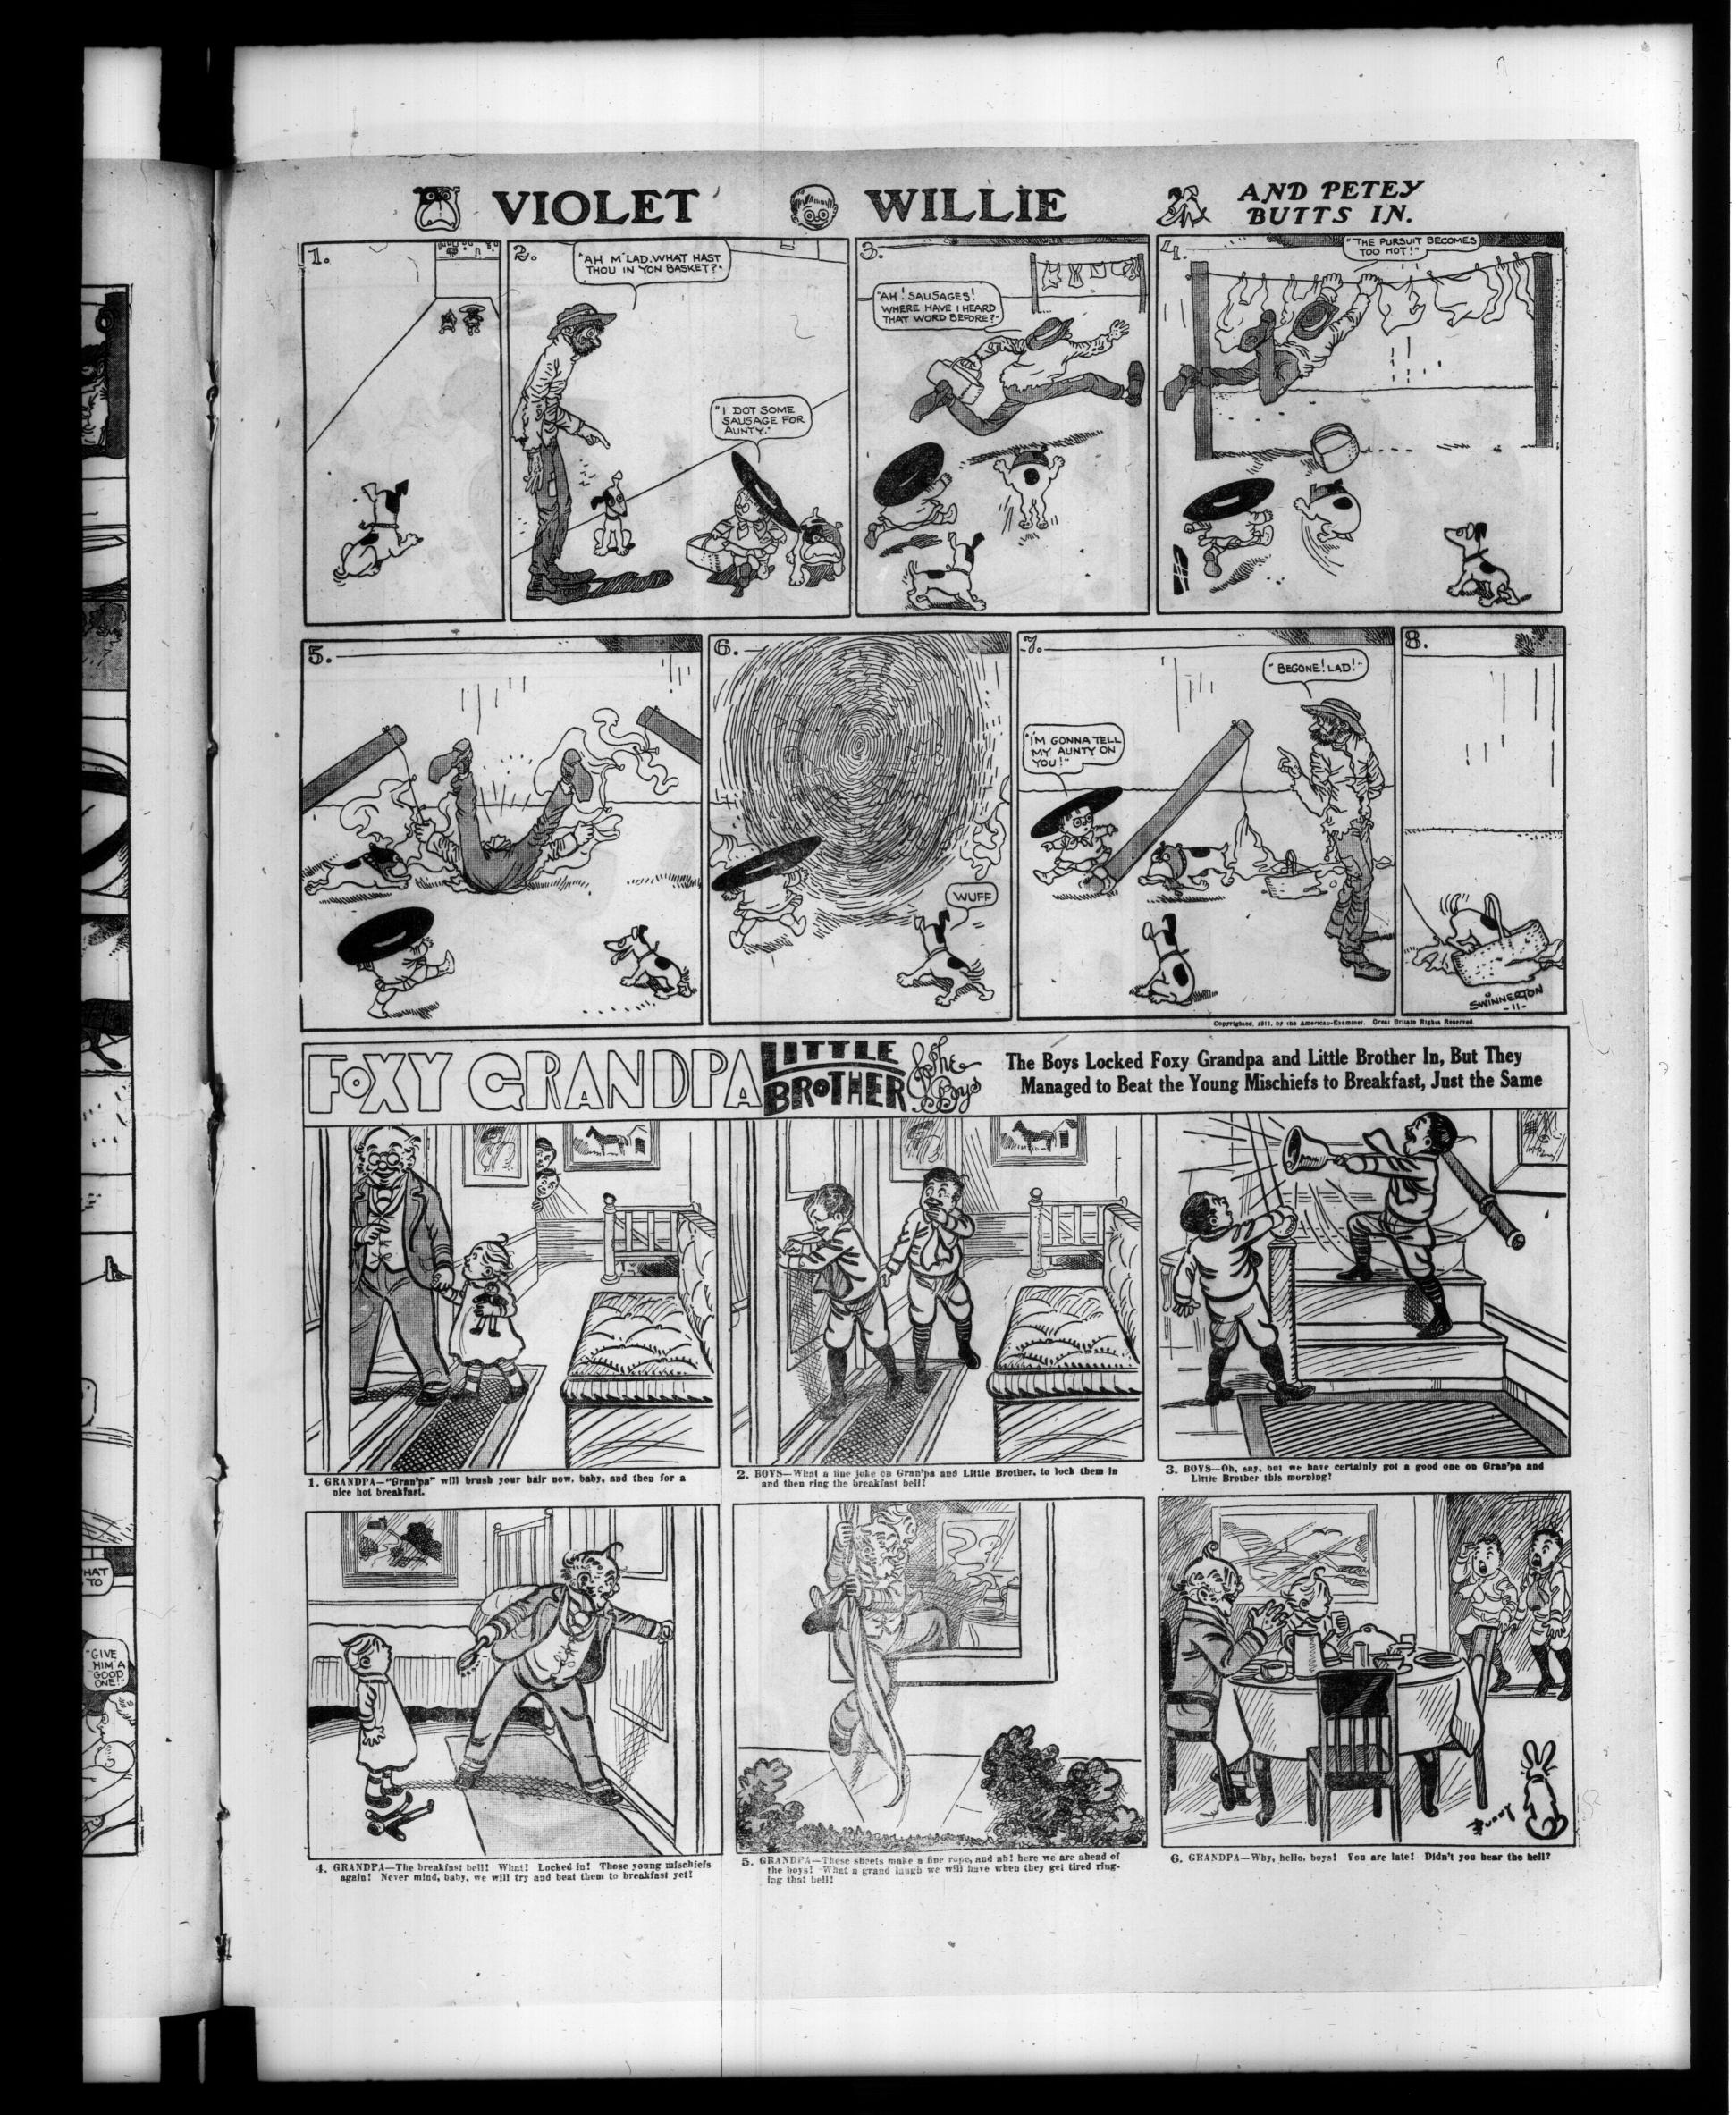

"A little door suddenly opened noiselessly, and a beautiful slave entered, dressed in pale silk, carrying by two handles a tray covered with a purple cloth, richly fringed, on which was arranged a service of little cups of Ispahan ware, the enamel incrusted with pearls and turquoises.

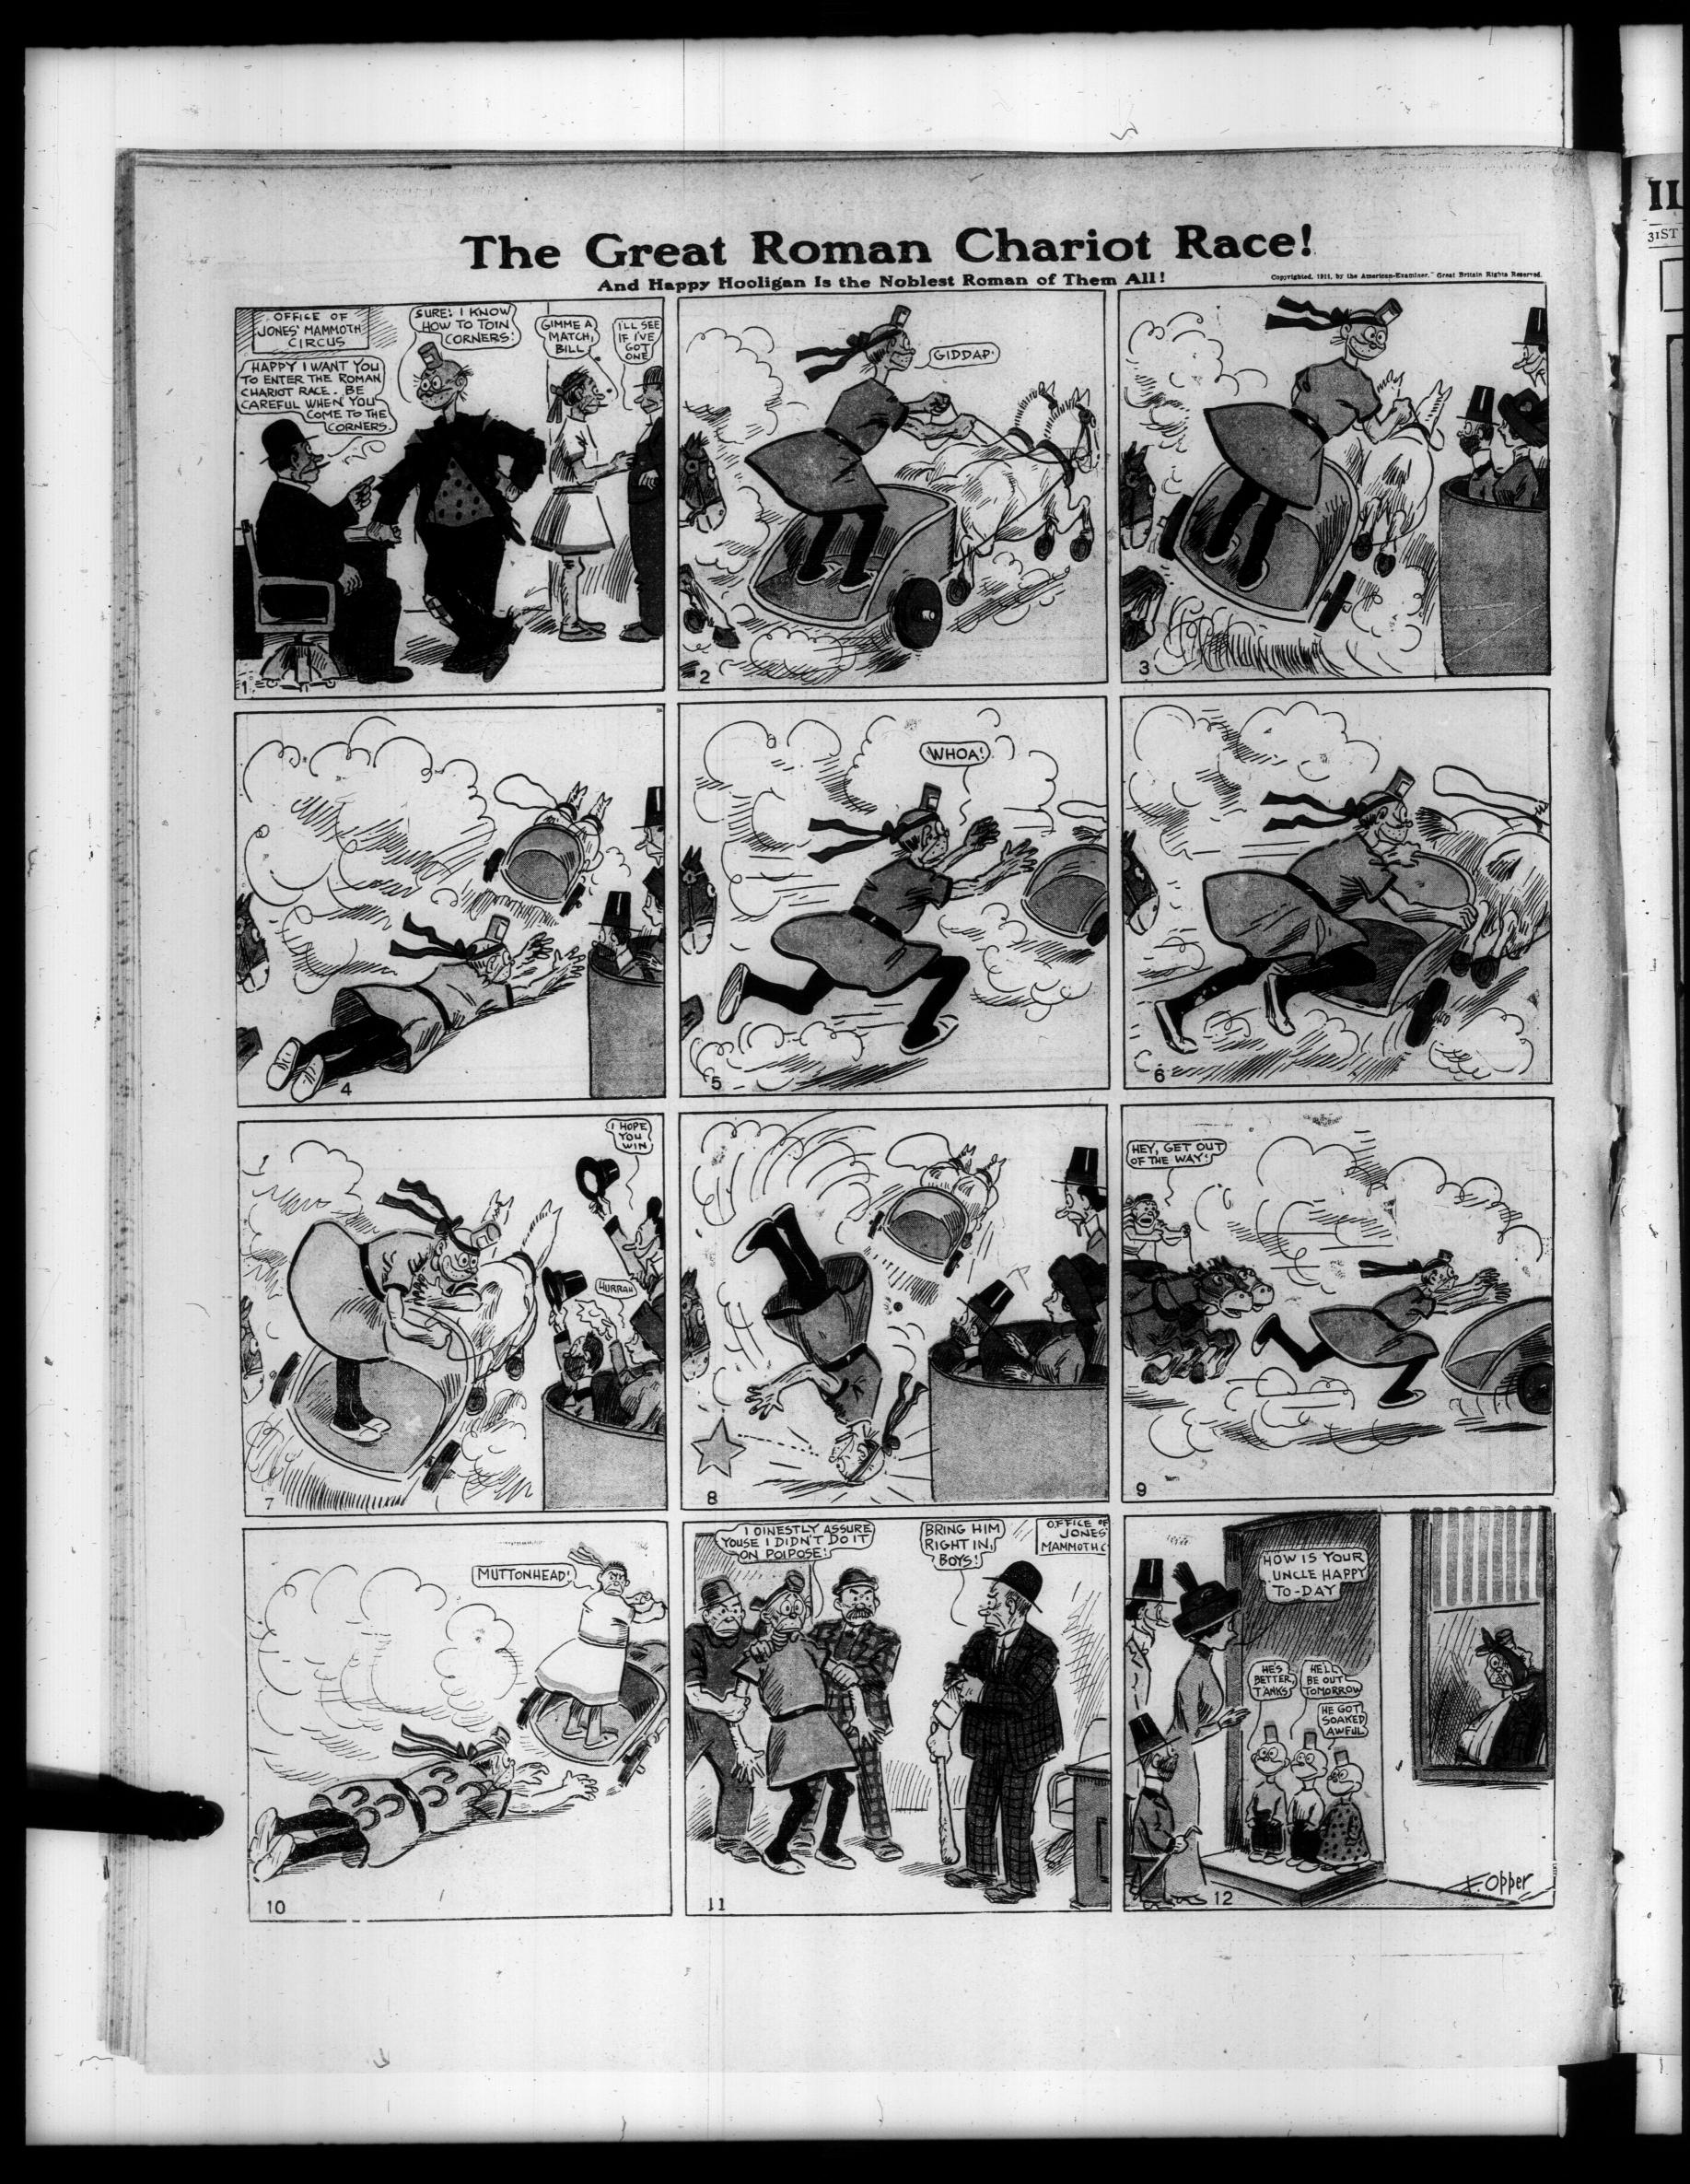

"Two young girls followed her, one carrying/cigarettes, and a burning censer for lighting them hung on their chains, and the other, the elegant lacquer 'Ibrik,' in which smoked the mocha that she poured out for us.

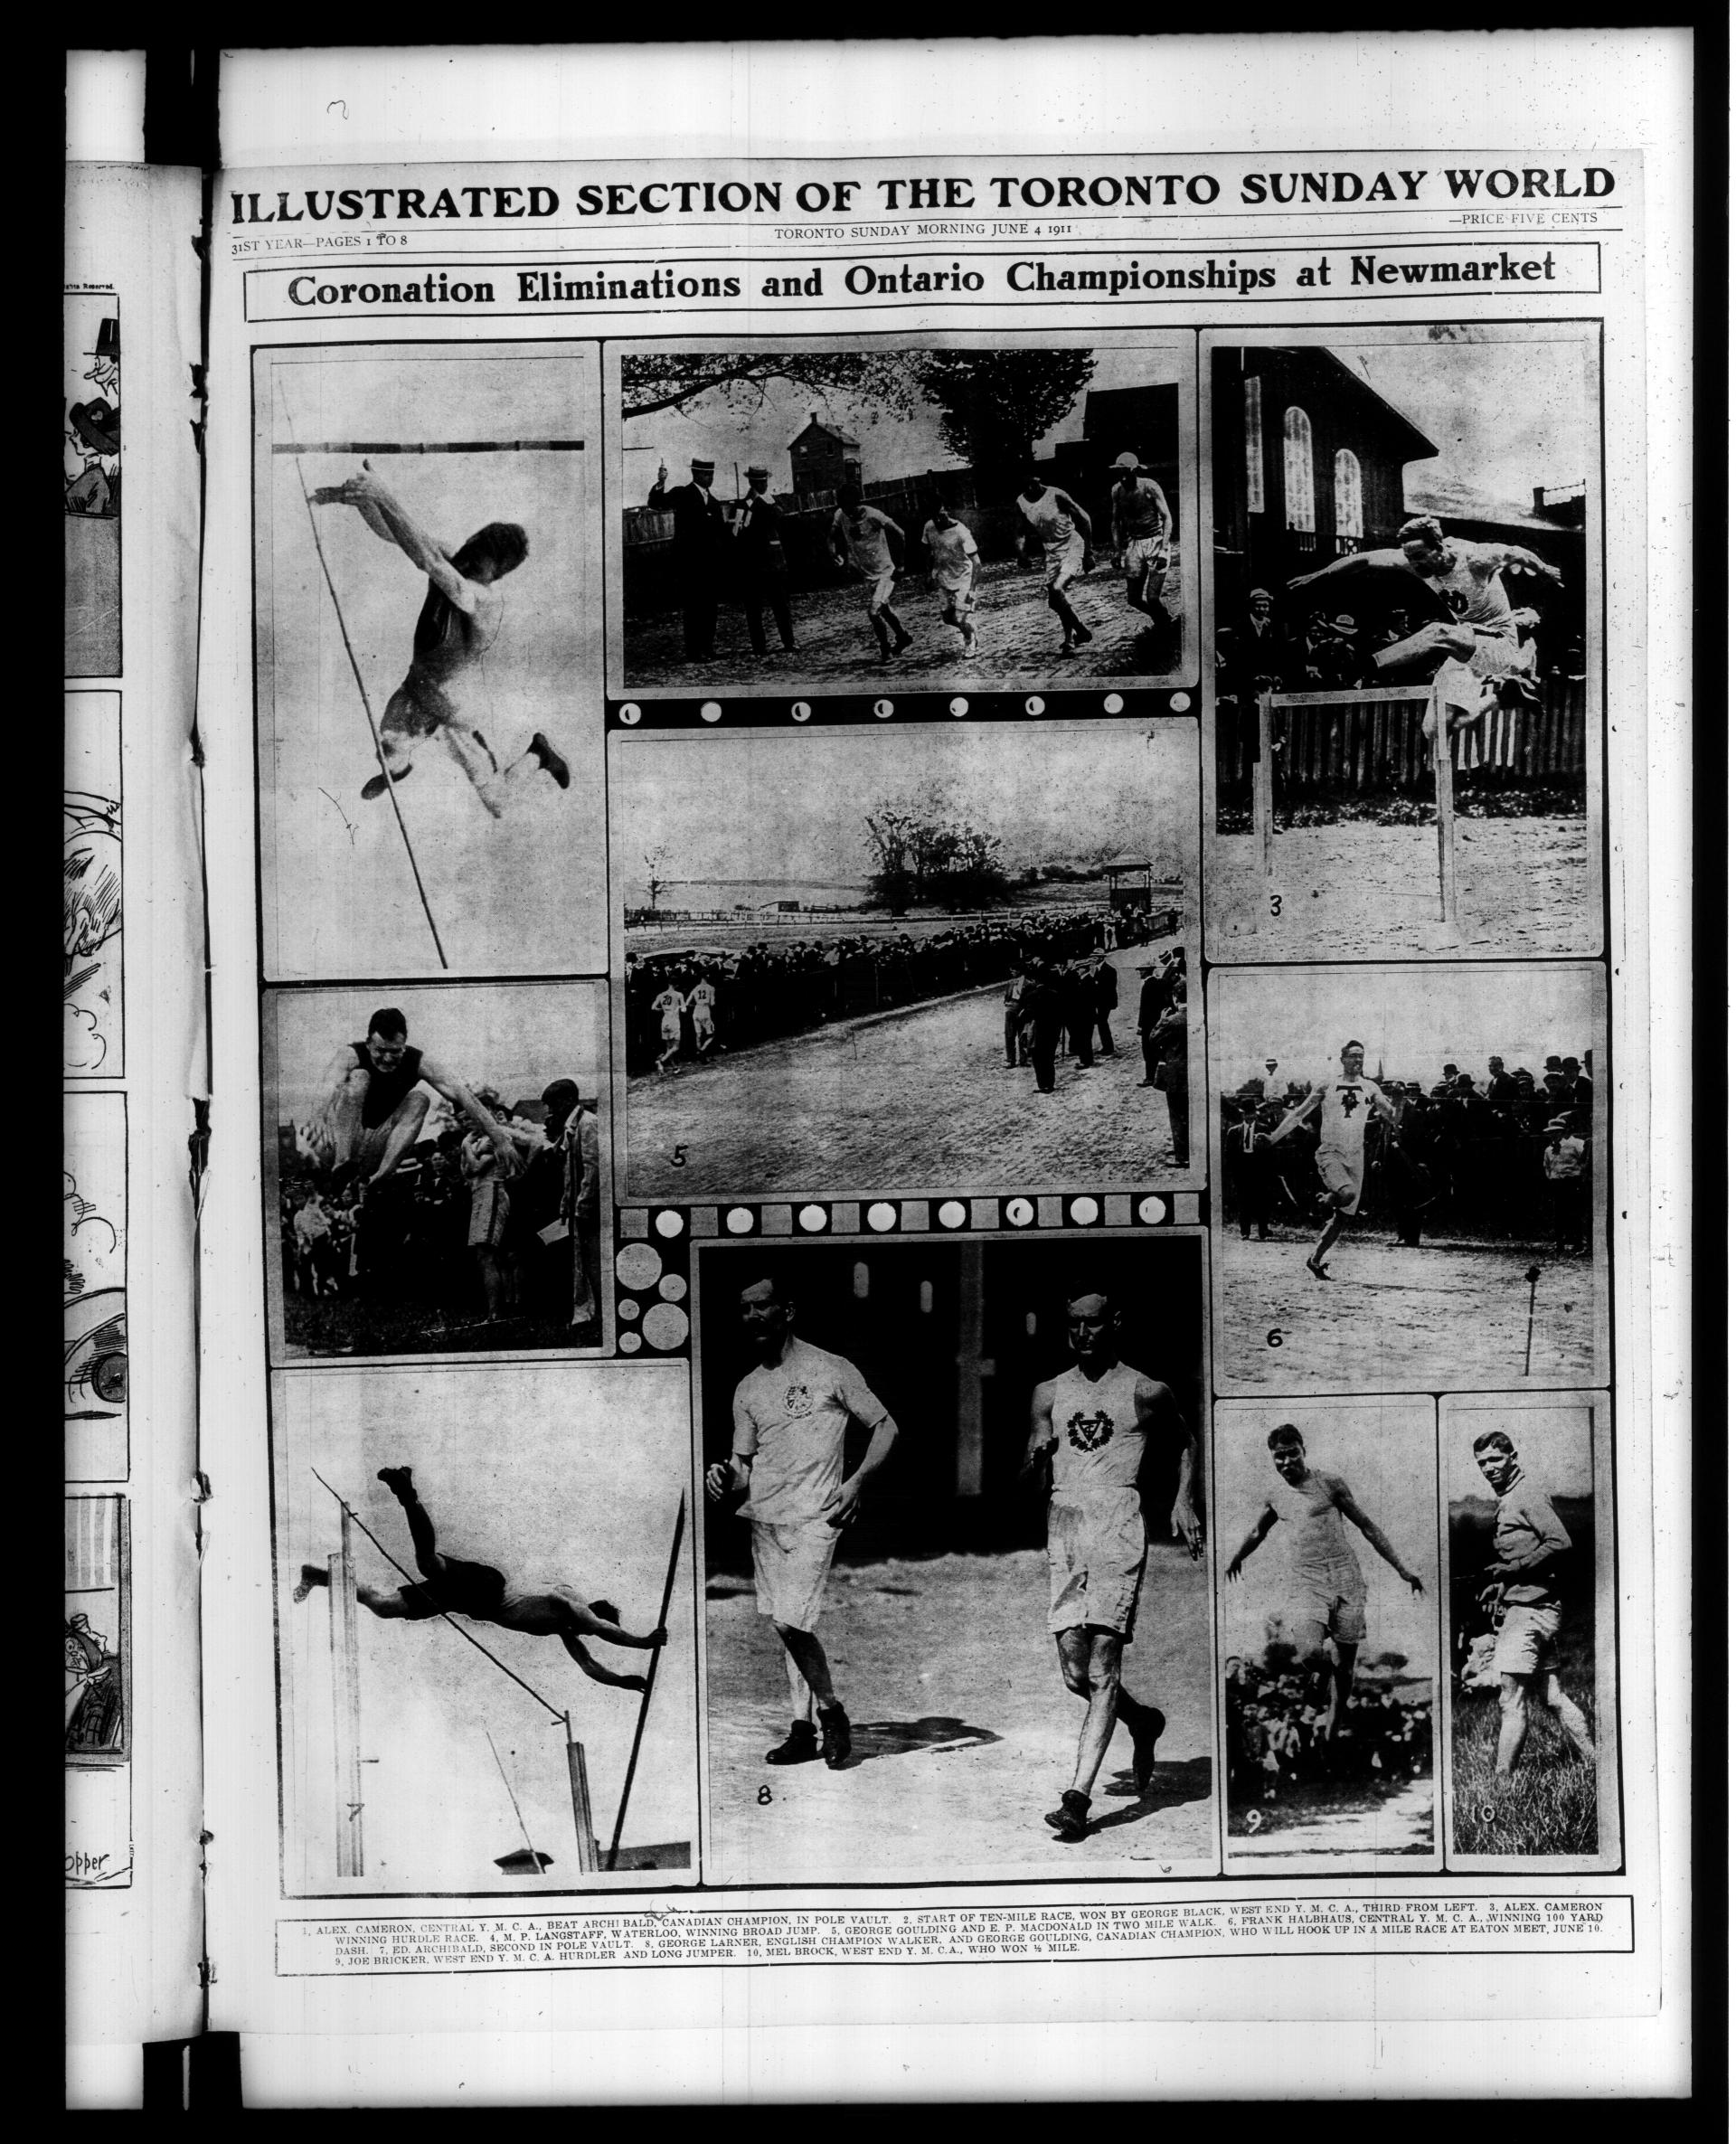

" 'What return can I make thee for the beautiful gift thou hast offered me, O, generous Frenchman?'

Long School Hours. The Austrian minister of education has issued a decree denouncing the long hours enforced in the schools of the empire, amounting in some cases to forty-five a week. This would have seemed a very mild regime to some old-time pedagogues. In Scotland up to the middle of the eighteenth century usual school hours were from 6
