THE SEVERED SPECIMEN.

THE STRANGE STORY OF A STAMP.

By A. Massachusetts Ladd.

HAD been in Boston for the greater part of the day, and was returning home on the four o'clock train. It was nearly half-past four, and the train was approaching Sharon, having left Canton Junction but five minutes before.

The car in which I sat was nearly filled, and after studying the faces around me, mentally deciding that this one was a mechanic, that one a bookkeeper, another one a stock-broker, yet another a coal-dealer and so on; after I had amused myself for half-an-hour in this manner, my material having given out, I took from an inner pocket my pocket album for duplicates. Had it not been for this very incident, trifling as it was, my story would never have been writtein: On this incident is based the strangest chain of circumstances in which a postage stamp ever played a leading part.
I was still looking at some of the specimens therein, wondering if any of those little bits of paper had any unusual history connected with them, when the train came to a hait at the popular summer resort of Sharon.
A number of passengers alighted and about an equal number got aboard, the majority of whom entered the car in which I was seated. Ameng the latter was a gentleman, apparently forty years of age, but whom I thought could not be much over thirty. Somewhat above medium height, built in proportion, full brown beard, dark eyes, which would attract attention anywhere-all giving to his face an expression never to be forgotten by the beholder-undoubtedly a man who had had more than his share of trouble in this wide world of ours. I put him down as a traveller whose history would be interesting to hear.

Pausing beside the seat of which I occupied half, he asked in clear, steady tones, which I imagined had a sad ring to them, if the seat, indicating the unoccupied one beside me, was engaged, and, if not, if I had any objection to him sitting there. The last clause I thought somewhat strange, but did not quite understand it till some time later. For, surely, if the seat was not engaged, he could and had a perfect right to sit there, whether I objected or not. Few persons are retiring enough in disposition to ask that.
The stranger seated himself, and as I was about to return the duplicate album to my pocket he observed it and asked if he might look at it ; also asking if I was a stamp collector. My answer was :
"Yes ; are you?"
"Well, not exactly; I was, am not now, and yet I am in a certain way. I'm after a part of a certain stamp; it's all I want for my collection; I'd pay thousands for it."

What did the man mean ? However, I asked : "You do and yet you don't ? Sort of a 'now you see it and now you don't.'" By the w 4 , basing my question on the affirmative clause of your statement. may I ask the number of stamps in your collection?"
"Yes ; I have half a one."
"Half a one?" I ejaculated interrogatively, "I do not quite understand."
"It is a short, sad story, but if you wish I'll tell it to you?"

I assured him that I would be pleased to hear it, whereupon he began.
" You are, or rather will be when I have told you, the only living persen to whom I ever imparted my story. But I feel that you are in some way to help me to find the missing part of my stamp and also my darling."

His darling! A woman in the case? Sure. They are always " in it."
"But we haven't told each other our names yet. Here is my card, and he handed me a neat pasteboard, on which was inscribed :

> "Maurice stockton, The World."
"Do you represent the World, Mr. S ockton ?"
"Oh, no ; I'm no reporter. I have no home ; I am a wanderer upon the face of the earth-no city claims me for a citizen. I've travelled the world over in the past seven years, and am at home in one part as well as in another ; I've had no home since Marion went away ; I have need of none." And his voice was sad indeed.

I then handed Mr. Stockton my card, inscribed thus:

> "A. M. LADD,

Looking at it he queried :
"You are a detective, then ?"
"Yes."
"Then perhaps you can help me. So here is my story :
"Ten-no, eleven years ago I, then a young man of twenty, entered College, in New York State. You have probably heard of it."
"Yes ; I have been through it."
"Indeed, I'm glad to meet, a graduate from there. What class were you in?"
"Oh, I went through as a sight-seeing pedestriannot as a stuc at."
"Oh," said my seat-mate, in a tone of regret, you joke. "Well I suppose it's all right.
"Well, this institution was on the co-education principle, and therefore young ladies were among the students.
" Among them was one-Marian Littlefield her name was-to whom I seemed attracted. The attraction was mutual. We became acquainted, we fell in love, and oh ! we had it bad. Time passed swiftly, and we became engaged, and were to be married one month after graduation."
"Marian Littlefield! Where had I heard that name before? It certainly sounded familiar ; it cerainly connected somewhere with my memory. But where? I could not remember then."
"I was rich, and so was Marian. So it was not a money alliance. Neither knew of the other's financial status till sometime after we became acquainted. No, it was love. ', Oh, heaven, how I loved her, and I love her still I love her still !"
"She still lives, then ?"
" I don't know; that's why I tell you my story; you are a detective ; I want you to find her-or her grave.
"Well, about two months before graduation we had a week's vacation. I, by the way, boarded at a boarding house established for the express custom of the students. Marian boarded in a private family, as did most of the girls.," The advantage and purpose of this is manifest," and my friend actually smiled, the first such emotion he had exhibited since entering the car.
"I was wi'? her there one evening during the vacation; she did not seem like her usual self; I playfully chided her about it. Then she told me she had a presentment of an approaching evil, just what it was she could not tell, but that it would in some way interfere with our approaching happiness. I laughed at her fears and kissed her, but she refused to be comforted. But I have lefi, out one very important fact in telling you my story. I forget to tell you we had an additional bond of frien Iship, besides our mutual love. She was a stamp coilector and had a fine collection. Now I cau ressme intelligibly.
"Opening her album, Marian turned to the page devoted to Costa kica. Taking therefrom the two reales scarlet stamp of 1865 , she tore it in halves. vertically giving it an uneven terminator and handed one part to me, saying, 'take it, Maurice ; it was issued in the year I was born. Take it; keep it ; cherish it; remember that whatever happens our lives are as those sundered parts-they belong to each other; they should be as one.' And Marian continued in that strange manner for some time tinued in that strange manner for some time. Now I really thought she had been affected by a bad dream, or something of that sort, and would be all right when I would see her on the morrow, and when I left an hour or so later I kissed her tears away and made light of her fears.
" But I didn't see her on the morrow, nor have I seen her since that memorable day when we parted lyy the mysotis at the gate. Little did I think of the significance of that little blue flower, for, as yca probably know, it is also known as the forget-me-not.
"I called for her the next day and was informed that she was not to be found that she had disappeared during the preceding night, probably toward morning, as her bed showed evidences of having been slept in. Then I remembered her presentment. Had it come true? It seemed so. At aboust the middle of the affiernoon I sent for one of the best known detectives in New York, having informed the local police of the affair, and they having made no progress in the case. made no progress in the case.
"It was well on toward flusk of the next day when I was startled by the newsboys' cries of 'Here's yer evenin' papers! all about the Littlefield poisonin' case !-only two cents." I bought one in feverish haste, to find out what it all meant. And I did find out. There it was in glaring headlines :

'A FEMALE FIEND.'

[^0]from the bank, and also to convert into cash most of his personal property, whereupon she poisoned her parents and, with the money, fled with a young man of whom a description was of whom a description was given.
"This was the substance of it ; I can't give it in detail. You can imagine my feelings at reading this. It was a great shock to the community as well as to myself. Of course I knew thai there was a mistake somewhere. But would others tiink so, notwithstanding the high estimation in which Marian was. held by all who knew her ?
"My detective arrived.
"He took up ti.e case and traced the fugitive pair to a town thirty miles away, $n$ here he lost all trace of them, and, try as he could, failed to regain it.
"Well, to make a long and bitter story short, the "hane ran its sensational course in the newspapers, case ran its sensational course in the newspapers, occupied the minds of the various police depariments. for awhile, and then gave place to newer sensations. It is the way of the world. But I kept several detectives on the case for years, tives on the case for years, but to no avail. It was tiee mystery of the times, and remains to-day unsolved."
" Do you consider it a conspiracy?" I asked.
"Yes; most emphatically. Marian has been spirited away somewhere and the scheme carried out by clever criminals, by clever criminals,-that's my opinion."
"Perhaps."
"Perhaps I I know so! I knew. Narian; you didn't or you wouldn't be so slieptical. She was true! Some plot separated us ! You are a det. true ! Some plot separated us ! You are a detective, help me find my lost darling and I'll be your slave. Find the missing part of the severed specimen and you'll find Marian. I see it all now ; her presentment told her to do it, and she divided the stamp. Do you think a girl could do as she did and yet be unfaithful?"
"Hardly. But, say; I suppose you have the seevered specimen with you?"
"I have it here," and he took from a small envelope in ins memorandum book the mutilated piece. It was as he had said, part of the dos reales red Cosia Rica, issued in 866 . His Rica, issued in 1865. His was the right-hand half.
Handing it back to him, he returned it carefully to its place in his book, bestowing upon it a wistful look as he did so.
He then showed me Marian's photograph, which he always carried with him. She was a beautifui girl -a handsome brunette.
We, after a little more conversation on the subject, which, however, will be of comparatively little interest to the reader, rolled into the Taunton depot.
Standing on the platform, evidently waiting Standing on the platform, evidently waiting for the train, was a man whom I knew. I thought of my strange seat-mate, and then I knew. strange seat-mate. and then I knew the mission of the man on the platform.
He was the superintendent of the State Luratic Asylum at this place.
As my strange friend and I stepped upon the platform, the asylum-keeper touched Stockton on the arm, and told him that he was wanted. My friend look around as if to run, but evidently changed his mind and walked away with mind and walked away with Ms. Keeper, admonishing me to remember my promise.
I told him I would, and then went to my home. As customary, when at home of an evening, I took up. a daily and started to read, but, try as I would, I could not keep my mind on the words before me. The case of the stranger would rise before. Finally $\boldsymbol{k}$ threw down the paper in disgust, and gave myself up to cogitating on Mr. Stockton's strange case. The name Marian Littlefield kept ringing in my ears. Where had I heard it before?
"Ah, I have it !". I exclaimed; my memory came to my aid. I remembered of having heard my folks speak of the Littlefield poisoning case when I was a boy. It had been the talk in every household, and I had recalled the circumstance after ail these years, Why had I not thought of that when my narrator had told his story. I know nut and then rose the question: Might not Maurice Stockton be right? might not his story be true? The " Littlefield Case " was a fact, his story was closely connected. Perhaps he was not so badly "off " as I had thought, Ii it was a fact, very likely his trcubles had made him so. His manner was merely strange, atter all ; perhaps he had been insane, which would account for hisconnection with the asylum, but was nearly recovered.

I resclved to investigate.
The next day I left for the city wherein was the college in question Arriving there, I sought police headquarters, where I obtained much information from official records. I visited also the old cellege, the young lady's bcarding-place, and also Mr. Stockton's boarding-place. Then I left for the town where the trace had been lost.

Entering the train, I secured a seat on the left about midway of one of the cars. On the right a few seats ahead, were a couple who attracted my attention. Why? Well, we detectives do a great many things we cannot give reasons for, and many detectives can and will tell you that they owe their successes in many instances to unaccountable sug. gestions, whose foundations are unknown. So it was in this instance. Then it passed through my mind that with a "little making up" the feminine part of the combination might make a passable Marian Littleficld.

Intuition prompted me to devote my attention to them. How ? I wanted to get nearer to hear what they said. Fortune favored me. The seat directly behind them was vacated at the next stopping place. I quickly ensconced myself therein. They had not louked around once since I had entered the car, and therefore would not regard me with suspicion.
They were talking to each other in low tones, but on "straining my ears," as the expression goes, I heard them mention the name of the next station, also "Hubbard" and "Littlefield."

Ah, now I thought I saw. My unaccountable suggestions were evolving. "Hubbard," it came to me, was the name of the proprietor of a private madhouse in the town to which I was going-our next stopping-place. And then the mention of the name, "Littlefield." A theory suggested itself in my mind.
"Then," thought I to myself, "I'll leet they are bound there but won't get out there; but I will instead go two stations farther down the road and then 'back-track,' for an 'up' train would come along at the right time to take them up."
"Why two stations instead of one?" the reader may ask. Well, I reasoned thus: A change at the first station would necessitate a wait, whereby more conspicuity would ensue; whereas if they changed at the next station, all they would have to do would be to change trains, thereby courting less attention.

My experience with criminals has taught me that the average one is no fool, as far as smartness is concerned.

I alighted at the next station. Thirty minutes later the "up " train came in, and among the passengers who alighted were my quarries.
"I "shadowed" them ; as I expected, they made their way to the madhouse, though somewhat circuitously. They entered; I boldly followed, entering by means of a picklock which I always carried when "on cases."
I overheard enough to convince me that Marian

Littlefield was incarcerated there, and hat the precious pair were none other than a certain "criminal duet," well-known to the police authorities all over the country, and waose whereabouts were at that time unknown. Though they were " wanted," and I could officially and legally arrest them, I neeled a warrant to search the madhouse. These institu-tions-the private ones-are always objects of suspicion to the authorities, but something tangible must be obtained against them before they can be interfered with. Hence, deciding I could get out and obtain the necessity and return before my game would leave, I ran the risk and went at once to headquarters. Returning with two officers, and armed with a search warrant, I rang the bell ; the proprietor, Hubbard, answered in person. At the sight of the officers he turned pale. At the mention of Mrrian Littlefield's name he turned still paler, and denied that she was there.
His denial convicted him, for I had said nothing about her being there, having merely asked him if he knew such a person.

I produced the search warrant, and then the doctor came down," as the boys express it.
We entered and, is I expected, found Jim Shin and wife. They were arrested. We kept on, and under the leadership of the "doctor" was led to a room in which was confined Marian Littlefield. Of the criminal part of my story little remains to be told, The guilty parties were punished according to law.

The modus operandi of the crime came out at the trial. It seems that "Jim Shin "was something of a hypnotic., and through this medium got possession of Ma-ian. Jim's partner then "made up" as Marian and went to the latter's home. As Marian she induced Mr. Littlefield to cash all available property and withdraw his money from the bank. Just how this was accomplished was not told, but probably hypnotism had something to do with it,
No lives would have been sacrificed in the consummation of the scheme had not old man Littlefield discovered the deception and imparted his discovery to his wife. To silence them murder was committed.
Leaving Marian in proper care for the restoration of her health. I left for home, and in my pocket was the missing part of the severed stamp.
I had told Marian the story of my neeting with her lover, of my hunt for her, and at my request she let me have the severed specimen.
Arriving home I went to the asylum. Soon I was in conversation with Maurice Stockton, who was about to be pronounced cured and was to be liberated the next day. To him I told the story of my success. He produced the right half, I produced the left, the severed parts matched.

It was still a "severed specimen," but not sundered. They were together as one.

As those separated ports met, so did my friend Stockton and Miss Littlefield a few days later ; as were the sundered parts united, as were two loyal, loving hearts.

His trouble gone, Maurice was his old self again, and not a vestige of his mental trouble remained. After the several years of travel following his college experience he had become demented and was committed by friends where he had happened to be. He had nearly recovered and had escaped when I met him on the train; yet unwittingly he had come back.
They were quietly married, and went south for Marian's health.

They now have a magnificent stamp collection, but not a specimen therein holds place with the severed specimen.

MY NOVA SCOTIA SHILLING.

BY CHAS. E. JENNEY.

0 introduce myself, it will only be necessary to say that I am a stamp collector. I have scraped together by various means in the course of ten years about three thousand varieties. In the course of my collecting I have met with many adventures, amusing and otherwise, have had lots of fun and have got together a collection of which I am very proud, although it is not what would be called a valuable one. Many of my stamps I have come by in queer and extraordinary manners, and I have a Nova Scotia shilling, the history of whose acquisition I must relate to you.

It was about three years ago, when my collection was about half its present size. I had a pretty faif lot of Nova Scotia stamps, but the possession of a genuine shilling was a little beyond my expectations at that time. I was on a visit to a riend in New York City and had taken in all the sights of the big city, visited all the stamp dealers and made a few small purchases, and was on the lookout for finds and I found one. I had my album with me, but had never shown it to my cousins. One evening I was sitting in the library hinging a few new purchases into my album, when my cousin Fanny, who was alone with me (the rest had gone to the theatre), asked me to play a game of euchre.
"All right," said I, " as soon as I have stuck in two more stamps."
"So you are a stamp crank, are you?" said she. "You are almost as bad as my friend, Alice Murray used to be. I never told you about it,? did I?" she continued. "I guess she has got more stamps than you ever saw-an awful lot ; she papered her room with them."
"What," said I, " stuck them all over the walls?"
"Yes About three years ago she heard of somebody papering a room with old postage stamps, and, as her father has lots of stamps come to him, she thought she would try it. She asked all her friends to save them up for her, and in about a year had a whole trunkful-an awful lot-I do not remember just how many, but it must have been almost a million. Then she had what she called a papering bee. She sent out invitations to all her friends to help her stick them on the walls of her room. The trunkful of stamps was placed in the middle of the room, and there were benches and step-ladders for the boys to climb up on, for they had to paper the ceiling and top of the walls, and we girls began at the mouldings and worked upward. There were a lot of dishes of paste already made up, and we set to work. We had great fun, and every once in a while we found funny stamps with such queer pictures on them. When we got tised of pasting, we had games out in the other roorus, and refreshments. We met twice a week for sesen or eight weeks, and at the last 'bee, we finished the room, having papered the four walls and the ceiling so that there was nct the least speck of plastering showing through. Then we had dedicatory exercises and speeches and toasts, and all that sort of thing, you know, and then we voted for the prettiest stamp on the walls. The most of them voted for a funny square purple stamp with a pretty leaf design on it-I think it said New Brunswick, or Nova Scotia, or something like that, on it. I thought it was pretty, but I thought a little red one with a beaver on it was prettier ; it was so odd, too. You have one like it? Yes, that is it."
' Who is Alice Murray? Where does she live ? Has she got the stamps on the walls now ? Do you suppose I could see them? Could you introduce me? ?
These questions were rapidly rattled off from my tongue with an interest and energy that showed me thoroughly in earnest, and Fanny replied to them as thoroughly as she could. Alice Murray was a friend of hers-a real nice girl-she knew that I would like her. Yes, of course she would introduce me.

Well, I did not take much interest in our game of euchre that evening and Fanny beat me shamefully, for thoughts of that stamp-adorned room floated through my brain, and that purple stamp-could it be a Nova Scotia shilling ?

I dreamed thai night that my bed room was papered with Nova Scotia shillings, and even the morning light scarcely drove the purple mist from before my eyes.

A few evenings later, I was introduced to Miss Murray. In spite of prescribed customs on such occasions, she was not charmingly beautiful nor did I fall in love with her at first sight. She was just an ordinary young lady, with an attractive face and pleasing manner, and I mentally sized her up is tiptop. Fanny told her I was a stamp collector, and how I was interested in hearing that she hed so many.
"Oh," she sa.d, "you are interested in stamps. Well, you must come up and see mine. Everybody says it is quite a curiosity, but it has become quite an old story to me." And then she told me how she had got the idea, how she had collected the stamps and how they had been put in place. She said that she had had almost a waste basket full left over, but she had destroyed them. There were about five hundred thousand stamps on the walls. As this was a common hobby to us, we got so interested in talking it over that in a short time we came to feel like old friends. I had expressed a very earnest wish to see her room, and she had again heartily invited me to call and do so.
"Well," said Fanny the next morning, " how did you like my friend, Alice Murray? You spent most all the evening talking with her. Isn't she sweet?"
"She is very nice," said I, " and we had a fine time talking over stamps."
"Stamps!" said Fanny ; "Pshaw ! couldn't you find anything more agreeable to talk about to a young lady ?"
"Well, we got on very nicely," said I, " and she has invited me to call and see her."
"Oh, oh, oh, you are a sly one! Shall you go ?" "Yes, of course ; why not?"
So a few days later Fanny and I called on Miss Murray and found her at home. After a little conversation, the subject of which I do not remember, although the charming manner of our hostess remained impressed on my memory, she said :-
"I suppose you want to see the stamp room. Come this way, please."
I felt a little awed at entering this virgin sanctum, but my philatelic enthusiasm arose within me as I discovered at once a rare Japanese stamp just at my right on entering.
"Isn't this great!" said I.
"Here," she said, "is the stamp we thought was the prettiest."

She walked over to the opposite side of the room and raised the shades a trifle higher, and there, just above our heads, was the Nova Scotia shilling. My admiration was outspoken, and when she saw that I recognized the stamp and seemed to set a great value on it she was surprised and asked about it. I tol $\mathbf{d}$ her of its value and how eagerly it was sought by collectors, and then I told her about other stamps and showed her that she had some rare ones among the many common ones on the walls. She listened with interest, and I found I had gained another devotee for Philatelia.
I found many stamps new to me on the walls, although of course the greater part were common Americans. I felt as though I was walking around inside the covers of a great stamp album. The ceiling was covered entirely with blue stamps, a great many of the fifteen centimes French being among the number, but the sides of the room were covered in a style which our grandmothers called "hit or miss," which gave the room a decidedly Oriental appearance. So interested did I become in examining the walls that our call was prolonged considerably beyond what is considered the proper time for a call in New York, and Fanny had to remind me that it was already getting latt. I parted reluctantly with Miss Murray and her stamps, but was partly consoled by a promise from her to call and see my collection
My stay in New York lasted another month, and after this I often met Miss Murray and we became very intimate. She informed me one day that she was going to have the stamps soaked off, that is, all the good ones, and her room papered with a less expensive paper, and she was going to start a collection of stamps. Would I come up some time and show her which ones to save? Ot course I would be delighted to. And so she began collecting. She gave me several of which she had duplicates, which added to my collection, and I advised her in the purchase of an album and a catalogue. She learned very rapidly and hecame an enthusiast. Of course she retained the Nova Scotia shilling. She had offered it to me when I first expressed my admiration for it, but I declined to accept a gift so valuable in my eyes, and she now kept it as the gem of her album.
One day we were out for a ride in the country. I had got out of the carriage topick a flower for her when a freight train rushed by near us. The horses leecame frightened and stood upon their haunches, and were just starting to run as I leaped for the bridle. I caught it, however, and my hold was good. I was dragged about a hundred yards, and came out of it with no worse mishap than a broken arm. Miss Murray was not even frightened on her own account, but I noticed she was almost as pale as I was be'ore I fainted, a little later, from the pain. A week later, with my arm in a sling, I left New York for my Canadian home. Miss Murray was at the station to see me off and pressed into my hand a little present, she said, which she wished me to accept. She would be very sorry if I did not, and she wanted me to wait till I got home before I opened it. I promised and then bid her good-bye, received a promise from her to write, and the cars sped out to northward. I felt a little lonesome to think that it would be many a long month, perhaps years, before I should see Miss Murray again.
Two days afterwards I was at home, and almost my first act after greeting my parents and brothers was to go to my room and open the little envelope that Alice had given me. You have probably guessed it already. It was the Nova Probaty shilling. My first thought was to write to her, enclosing it and refusing to accept it, but upon, further thought I changed my mind, and so I have it to-day. Not only is it the most valuable stamp in my collection from a monetary standpoint, but from its associations I rank it far above all the rest.
I still correspond with Miss Murray and hope some day to meet her again and compare collections with her. I sometimes ask her if she does not regret parting with the Nova Scotia stamp, but she always replies that if it had been a " Connell" or a "Brattleboro " she would have given it as cheerfully.

As í turn o'er the leaves of my album. With face full of joy and of glee,
Queer costumes of knights and fair ladi:s Glide forth and seem beck'ning to me;
Long trains of those noted in history Their destinies seem to pursue,
And pass me in grandeur so stately, As armies pass by in review.
I see the bright fruits of the tropics ; The Italian olives so greet,
The orange and figs of the Grecian, And currants the finest e'er seen.
In fancy I see India's poppies,
Nutmegs of the brown Siamese ;
The indigo plant of Columbia, And the tea from the heathen Chinese.
And the sinews and brains of these nationsThe great common people, the best-

I see the plain Newfoundland fisher, The French cultivating the vine ; The sugar plantations of Cuba, And Russian deep down in the mine.
I can see the sweet milkmaids in Holland, The Swiss and their carvers of clocks ; The granite and marble of Scotland, And ship builders at the Clyde docks ; The glass blowers there in Bohemia, 7 he gatherers of cork here in Spain ; The Brazilian coffee plantations, And India's tall fields of grain.

They tell me Philately's worthless,

But let these dissenters awaken,
And look o'er these notable lines
Of sages, and patriots, and workers,
Who stand at each nation's helm.
And I'll venture, within twenty-four hours
They'll come to Philately's realm.

WHY DO WE IGNORE THEM?

iili

BY ROY $F$. GREENE

HEN the United States, in 1878, ceased to issue adhesives for the use of the various departments of national affairs, and substituted therefor a series of so-called "penalty 'envelopes, philatelists at once ignored these successors of the popular departments, and no value whatever is set upon them by cataloguers.
This has always seemed strangely queer to me, and I have sought in vain for a good reason for their being cast aside as of no consequence, and no spaces left in our albums for them.
I may seem bold in rushing into print in defence of these stamps which a popular verdict has seemed to cast aside, but there seems to be a diversity of opinion on the subject, and a great many collectors are asking themselves the question, whether these will ever be collected, hence I feel that at least a reason should be given for their unpopularity.

Of course they are not pretty, but they are a true governmental issue, they are the natural successors of the bright colored departments, they are used postally. and are certainly true postage stan.ps.

While I would not be accused of championing their cause, I nevertheless feel them to be much more worthy of a place in our albums than other stamps for which spaces are provided. For example there are the Bavarian return letter stamps which at best look like trade mark labels, and of the cheapest and least artistic designs at that.

Who can say that they are more worthy a place in our collections than these same penalty envelopes ?
Then the insured letter stamps of Columbia, with their different varieties of borders which enthuse the advanced collectors, and the thousand and one other emissions of foreign governments that collectors and dealers seize upon and go wild over, no matter how unworthy they may be to grace our album's pages.
And then the collecting of bands and seals used by the post office department that really have no postal significance, and which in a slang sense "come high but we must have them."
After all these extremes and a seeming desire on the part of some to create enthusiasm over every bit of scrap paper which emanates from the postal department, still these penalty envelopes are ignored.
Perhaps the grand Moguls who dictate to us what we shall and shall not collect have ruled wisely in casting this particular issue into the realms of unsought specimens, but we can cite precedents where other stamps have been held up for public worship none the more worthy.
Still in arguing the pros and cons of this question I have been led to ask where this thing is ever going to stop, for if we collect these penalty stamps on the grounds that they are legitimate because used postally, why not for the same reason collect the franks of the 444 members of Congress and the 88 United States Senators, whose autographs in the upper right-hand corner of an envelope containing public documents are sufficent to insure their prompt delivery by the emissaries of Uncle Sam's postal service.

So it seems we must draw the line somewhere, and it may be that it has wisely been drawn at these same department envelopes, but since these are ignored I shall hope to see in future so-called standard cata-Iogues sonie of the conflicting features eliminated, and the same Bavarian "return letter" stamps and like specimens relegated to the rear.

"Oh consistency, thou art a jewel"
But still, many of the younger collecturs are trying to complete their sets of these same penalty envelopes, and some are even laying by a stock hoping they may some day command attention. In my own collection I have neariy a complete set of thesestamps arranged on a blank page, and while they lack artistic force they are, as I think, pleasing to look upon as successors of the now so popular departmental issue.
Everyone has, without donbt, their opinions of this subject, and from them I would like to hear of the reasons why they should be ignored.

St. John, N. B., April 10, 1893. I wish to warn collectors to be on the lookout for bogus split stamps (provisionals) of New Brunswick, on "original envelopes." An irresponsible young fellow of this city (whose name I will withhold for the present) is putting these things on the market for sale or exchange. His plan is to get the common 5 c . green on the envelopes (the cancellation covering the stamp only, and not extending to the envelope) remove the stamp and substitute one-half of an unused 10 c ., which is then neatly cancelled with a rubber stamp made in exact imitation of the old "gridiron" cancellation of New Brunswick. The forgery is difficult to detect, but in most cases the cancellation is of a somewhat deeper black, and has a fresher appearance than the genuine provisionals. I have reason to believe that this party is also manufacturing Nova Scotian as well as New Brunswick splits in the manner described. The existence of such forgeries might tend to throw discredit upongenuinesplit provisionals, my own for example. Persons obtaining any doubtful stamps of this kind from this city or neighborhood will do well to send them to me for inspection. I will gladly advise as to their genuineness, and in the case of forgeries will. if necessary, take measures to have the offender punished according to law.

will cheerfuliy forward. - Mr. H. S. Dickson, of this will cheerfuliy forward. -Mr . H. S. Dickson, of this city, informs us that it is altngether probable that he will not issue another number of the Philatelic Journal of Canada, probably for the same reason that caused that Journal to omit issuing a December and January number. - While speaking of Mr. Dickson, we might also say that he has moved from his little office in the Robinson Hall Chambers and announces his intention of retiring as a stamp dealer.-
Mr. Alva Davidson has resigned the efiter Mr. Alva Davidson has resigned the editorship of the Post Office. - Mr. R. F. Albrecht & Co. hold a very important sale of U. S. stamps on April 18th and 19th. It will be their 13 th sale, and among the many nice stamps offered will be the following:-6 copies of the New York, 1843, 3 cent blue, various 8 shades and papers ; New York, 1845,5 cent black, 8 copies, amongst which is to be found an unused copy on watermarked paper which is unique ; St. Louis 10 cent, unused; Franklin Carrier ; an unused and a used 3 cent scarlet, also an unused 3 cent grilled all over, in perfect condition, and another on the entire. The sale is also rich in Confederate Provisionals. You should send for a catalogue to the publishers at 90 Nassau St., N. Y.-The October, November and December numbers of the Philatelic Fraud Reforter came to hand about the ist of April.-The Stamp Collector's Companion is now ready for delivery and as it is a book that every collector should possess, you should order a copy at once. The edition is limited to 1,000 copies. See advertisement elsewhere. - The design on the new 8 cent Columbian stamp is Columbus restored to favor, while the 8 cent to correspond with the 1890 issue bears the portrait of General Sherman. - Local societies are now being organized on all parts of the contiaent. This is a step in the right direction.-S. Allen Taylor says that Canada will never issue any more stamps. He prophesies that at the next election the Dominion will be absorbed by the glorious republic (?). We are thankful we are not of the same opinion.-It is said the Ottawa Philatelist is to be raised from the dead. We trust it will be an improvement over its previous numbers - It is said that counterfeit Newfoundland 10 cent black of the 1866 issue are in circulation. They are unperforated, and evidently have been printed from a catalogue cut, and are obliterated by a piece of cork in imitation of the old post mark,-The following is the latest joke on the Columbian stamps. A few days ago a lady of our city stepped up to the stamp window at the post office and asked for stamps. The always blushing clerk threw out some of the new Columbian style, when she exclaimed, "Oh, I don't wish picture cards "The clerk exploded and the lady is now posting herself on the various styles of new stamps.The Toronto Philatelic Club have submitted a petition to the Minister of Customs to take some action in regard to the matter of outrageous duties being charged on stamps at Toronto. -It is said that it is not hard to collect the stamps of Afghanistan and native India after you have learned the language.

EDITORIAL.

On Specialism.

A few words on specialism When starting a collection specialism is not advisable. Do not be too hasty in selecting a field for specialism, When you are below the 2,000 mark, keep to general collecting, and when you have reached that number of varieties, you will be better qualified to judge which stamps you prefer, and those most advantageous from a financial point of view, to collect. It is often preferable when a general collector becomes a specialist not to drop general collecting entirely, but to retain all of your collection, simply devoting a little more attention to one portion or district than to another. This style of specialism is preferable to that which devotes its attention to a single country. Specialists usually make a specialty of their own or neighboring countries. American collectors are partial to the stamps of the United States and British North America.

Are you a If not, we would urge upon you the Subseriber? advantage of at once having your name placed on our books. Every subscriber who places his subscription in our hands has the assurance of 12 numbers, or his money refunded. Gradual and steady increase in both size and quality is our aim. To make the magazine attain a high standard of excellence is our determination. We have made, and shall make every effort to secure the best and most interesting reading matter that can be procured. It will be to your interest to subscribe.

The Stamp This valuable little book is now ready Collector's for delivery. It will no donbt have a Companion. large sale. To the collector who has not already ordered a copy we would refer them to the advertisement. A feature of the book which will be especially useful to those collectors who have foreign correspondents is the Foreign Coinage Table, in which isgiven the cill rency of nearly all principal stamp issuing countries and its equivalent value in United States and Canadian currency. Regarding the value of the many definitions and explanations of difficult philatelic terms nothing need be said. The book also contains a large number of useful hints and suggestions and other matter of like nature. Space prevents further review. Procure a copy and read it yourself. The price is low. See advertisement.

 books. Who are not on our sulacription books. We trust you will examine this number, and should you desire to see us regularly forward your subscription, for we send but one sample to one person. We guarantee 12 numbers, or refund subscription. You should subscribe.
Re Pardoe's In a previous issue we gave our read-

Operations. ers a hint to the effect that Thomas
O. Pardoe, Jr., who carried his swindling operations on to such an extent from Ingersoll, Ont., was operating under the name of a Company from Toronto. We give a littie extended information this issue to additionaly warn our patrons. This party is shadowing himself under the name of The Toronto Stamp Concern. He is at present sending out circulars accompanied by coupons, offering rare Canadian stamps at outrageously low prices. These coupons are all numbered, and any collector lucky (?) enough to obtain a certain number, can by sending an order for a dollar ir more, enclosing this coupon, receive frec, a rare stamp. It is a fact that nearly all the coupons sent out have thereon the same lucky numbers. This is a scheme to ture on the collectors to send their money for stamps, which, 10 judge by this boy's (for he is nothing more) former operations, that they will never receive. As we have before said, caution should be used in dealing with this party, and it would in all probability be better for your pocket book's welfare to avoid him allogether.

Our Retall We would call the attention of our List. customers to the fact that our Third Annual Retail List has just been issued, and it is larger, cheaper and better than even before. Every collector and dealer should possess a copy. To those who have not yet received it, we shall be pleased to forward it, post free on application.
