Another Mile to Pave
The paving of the Mildmay and Walkerton road is nearing completion, about one mile still remaining to be paved. The concrete is laid to the south end of Adam Hossfeld's farm, but some delay has been occasioned by the deep cuts and fills in that vicinity. The steam shovel is not able to keep very far in advance of the concrete, but the construction company expect to have the job finished by the end of the month. The northern section of the highway, from Otter Creek to Walkerton, is now open for motor traffic.

Pretty July Wedding
At the Sacred Heart Church, Mildmay, on Tuesday morning of this week, the marriage of Miss Clara Weber, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Weber of Carrick, to Mr. Bernard Ruetz of Walkerton, son of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Ruetz of Carlsruhe, was solemnized. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. Father Montag, pastor of the Church, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends of the contracting parties. The bride was very prettily attired in monette blue georgette, with hat to match, and carrying a lovely bouquet of butterfly roses and maiden's hair ferns. She was assisted by her cousin, Miss Mae Scheffer, attired in green tulle, and carrying premier roses. Mr. Alex. Hoffarth, cousin of the groom, was the best man. The groom's gift to the bride was a bank cheque; to the bridesmaid a pearl necklace, and to the best man a pair of gold cuff links. After the ceremony and congratulations were over the wedding guests sat down to a splendid wedding dinner. A reception was held in the evening at the home of the bride's uncle, Mr. Louis Scheffer. The happy young couple are spending their honeymoon at Hamilton, Toronto, and Niagara Falls, and upon their return will take up residence in Walkerton.

Hurt When Car Upset

Last Friday night, Barney Koener of Deemerton sustained several fractured ribs when his motor car upset on the 15th s.d. road, north of the 10th concession. His brother, Jos. L. Koener, who was a passenger in the car when it tipped, had his neck painfully twisted, and Barney Kull and another passenger, received cuts and bruises about his face and forehead.

Transferred to Kenilworth

Rev. Father J. A. Lenhard, parish priest at Deemerton, has been notified of his transfer to Kenilworth. Father Lenhard is an ideal pastor, and a sincere Christian gentleman, and very naturally has many warm friends among all classes and creeds here. His removal will be deeply regretted, at Deemerton and in the whole community as well. We learn that he will be succeeded by Rev. Father Brick of Formosa.

Caught Stealing Gasoline

On Tuesday night after Clement Steffer of Ambleside had retired to bed, he was awakened by the furious barking of his dog. He very quickly and quietly got up and dressed, and hustled out to ascertain the cause of the commotion. Going to his garage he found two young fellows draining the gasoline tank of his car. Mr. Steffer grabbed them and marched them into his home, where he telephoned to Mildmay for the Constable from Mildmay. We learn that the case will be prosecuted.

The Constable's Duties

Mr. Noah Siegler, the village constable, is a very conscientious official, and has been giving the municipality splendid service ever since his appointment. Anxious at all times to regulate motor traffic so as to avoid accidents, a good many irregularities come under his notice. For instance, last Saturday evening, a motorist breezed along with one front light burning and no tail light. On Saturday night, when the traffic is heavy, this infraction is very apt to cause an accident, but the constable was criticized, perhaps mildly, for taking the offender to task. Another driver came driving around the corner with an utter disregard of the stop signs, and another car was driven by a 17 year old boy who didn't have a permit. The constable cannot help seeing these violations of the traffic laws, and up to this time has been letting them pass with a little advice and warning to check up the offenders. The Mildmay Council is extremely anxious that no harsh or unwarranted action be taken in the enforcement of the traffic regulations, but what is the constable to do when so many motorists disregard the law? It is a case where we believe our constable will be able, with perhaps a little more sympathetic co-operation from the council, to adjust these matters to the satisfaction of all concerned.

She was brought to Dr. Carpenter's office, where the fracture was reduced. It was a very painful injury, but the patient is recovering nicely.

Head Badly Gashed

While motoring in the vicinity of Lions Head last Sunday afternoon, Mr. Adam Fink of this village met with a painful accident. In crossing a sharp "hog's back," which abounded in the Bruce peninsula, Mr. Fink was thrown forcibly against the top of the car, and received a badly cut scalp, which required several stitches to close.

Decorating R. C. Church

The contract of painting and decorating the Mildmay Sacred Heart Church, has been awarded to Mr. C. Brown of Willowdale. Scaffolding is being erected this week and the decorators will be ready to commence their work in a few days. Services are being held now in the basement of the Church. It is expected that the contract will be completed before the cold weather arrives, and we are assured that when the last touch is given, this Church will be one of the most beautiful and artistic edifices in Ontario.

Stars Lose to Kitchener

The Kitchener and Waterloo aggregation were fortunate in defeating the Mildmay Stars in the first game in the Ontario Football Association, played here last Saturday evening. It is true that during the first ten minutes of play, the locals were rather badly disorganized, but after that they had the better of the argument by a slight margin. The visitors are a well-balanced team, make use of a short pass, but effective, combination, and played clean ball throughout. They played their positions well, and the defence fed the forwards very effectively. The game opened with the visitors on the aggressive, and the Star forwards backed up to help to relieve the situation. After some ten minutes of rather one-sided play, the Stars finally found themselves, and from then to the conclusion of the game the play was on a very even basis. The only goal in the first period went to the Twin City players who took advantage of an opening in our defence, and drove through counter on a nice combination play. The Stars tried their utmost to even up the score in the first half, but the breaks were against them, and many shots missed the goal. The second period, however, was not very old. When Len Harper carried the ball up on the outside left and made a perfect pass to centre, Bill Lutkin was in like a flash to receive it, and through it went to even the score. The play was very fast with both sides striving for the advantage. The Stars on the forward line had many opportunities to score, but just missed by the narrowest margin. Finally an opening came to the visitors and they came through with another tally to win the game. In the remaining eight minutes the Stars were held scoreless. While the game was fast and exciting throughout, it was clearly evident to the supporters of the home team that our forwards were not all playing up to their usual high standard, and that on another occasion they will be able to give a much better account of themselves. The Stars go to Kitchener this Thursday and they are hopeful that they can succeed in reversing the score on their opponents. Tom Atkinson of Guelph refereed the game, and while many of the spectators did not like his work, the players themselves had not much to kick about. The attendance was the largest given the Stars for some time, the gate receipts being about $165.

Sunday School Lesson

July 28. Lesson IV—The Story of Daniel—Golden Text—They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever.—Daniel 12: 3.

ANALYSIS.
I. A STEADFAST PURPOSE, ch. 1: 1-2.
II. SECRETS REVEALED, chs. 2: 13-29; 4: 19.

III. VISIONS AND DREAMS, chs. 7: 28; 8: 1-12; 9: 20-23; 10: 1-19; 12: 9.

INTRODUCTION—No book of the Old Testament is of greater interest, and none of greater value than the book of Daniel. None has attracted more attention from ordinary readers as well as scholars. Its main ideas will always be the chief concern of religion—steadfast loyalty to an ancient faith, confident assurance of God's protecting care even in the midst of persecution, and the coming of the kingdom of God as the last great era of human history. In it, again and again, the times of men are declared to be in the hand of God.

The book is written about Daniel, captive and exile in Babylon throughout a long life of integrity and honor. He is the central figure in the stories that are told of Babylon and its kings (chs. 1 to 6), and it is to him there come divine revelations in visions and dreams (chs. 7 to 12). As is well known there are two possible interpretations of the book, the one which takes it as literal history of actual events which occurred in the sixth century, B.C., the other which regards it as a story told in the second century, B.C., to sustain the faith and courage of the people who were suffering bitter persecution under the Greek king of Syria, Antiochus IV, who was called Epiphanes. This Antiochus appears to be directly referred to in the visions as a "little horn" (ch. 7: 8, 10-26), and the historical sketch in ch. 11 seems to reach its end in his reign (the "vile person" of v. 21). The evidences for each of these views will be found in any good recent commentary. In either case the inspiration and high value of the book need not be questioned.

I. A STEADFAST PURPOSE, ch. 1: 1-2.

According to the commonly received chronology, Jehoiakim the son of Josiah, came to the throne in B.C. 608 after the death of his father at Megiddo, and the deposition of his brother Jehozabab by the king of Egypt (2 Kings 23: 29-34). His third year was, therefore, B.C. 605. There is an historical difficulty here, for we know that in the fourth year of Jehoiakim the army of Nebuchadnezzar was still a long way from Jerusalem, engaged in conflict with the army of the king of Egypt at Carchemish on the River Euphrates (see map, and compare Jer. 46: 1-12). There is the further difficulty that in the carefully recorded history of this period, in 2 Kings, 2 Chron., and Jeremiah, there is no mention of a siege of Jerusalem in either the third or fourth year of this king, and apparently not until the reign of his successor in B.C. 597. If this story of Daniel was written, according to the second view mentioned above, more than three hundred years later, in the time of the Maccabean uprising, such a difference might be easily explained as due to the imperfect historical records then available to the writer. The value of the story is not thereby impaired.

The carrying off of vessels of the house of God and other plunder and captives by Nebuchadnezzar in B.C. 605, is mentioned in Jer. 27: 19, 20, and 2 Chron. 36: 7. Certain of the best of the young men of the princely and noble families were chosen and carried to Babylon to be trained for service in the king's court, v. 5. Among these was Daniel. The learning and the tongue, that is the literature and the language, of the Chaldeans were already very old, going back two to three thousand years, and had reached a high development. Very much of this has been recovered by excavation and research from the ruins of the great ancient cities of Babylonia and Assyria where their records, written on stone and on tablets of baked clay, had lain buried for two thousand years. The Chaldeans were originally a people of southern Babylonia who, in the latter part of the seventh century, became masters of the entire country. In other passages of the book of Daniel, however, the name is applied to "wise men" of Babylon, religious leaders who studied magic, astrology, and divination, ch. 2: 2-4, etc.

Daniel, pursued in his heart, He remained steadfastly loyal to the faith and customs of his fathers. The Jews were very particular in abstaining from food which they regarded as unclean, such as the Jewish law forbade, meat which had not been slaughtered in the Jewish way, or meat and drink which had been offered to idols. For this adherence to principle Daniel is rightly to be honored, even though we do not now share his scruples. In so doing he was able to carry his three friends with him to the same decision.

II. SECRETS REVEALED, chs. 2: 13-29; 4: 19.

The king had required a hard thing of his wise men. He demanded that they should first tell him what his dream had been, and then interpret it. Daniel came to the rescue. He and his companions prayed to God, and the secret was revealed to him in a night vision. Both the deep piety of Daniel and his inspired wisdom are displayed in what follows. In his interpretation of the king's dream he shows the wisdom and might of God in the course of human life, in the rise and fall of empires, and in the knowledge which he imparts to the sage and to the prophet, ch. 2: 19-23. The kingdoms seen in the dream are Babylon, Media, Persia, and Greece, and the last the kingdom of the Messiah, the promised Saviour, which shall never be destroyed, ch. 2: 44.

III. VISIONS AND DREAMS, chs. 7: 28; 8: 1-12; 9: 20-23; 10: 1-19; 12: 9.

The Jews in the two centuries preceding the birth of Christ, and after, produced a number of religious books in which prophetic teaching was set forth in the form of visions, some bearing the names of famous ancient men, such as Enoch, the twelve sons of Jacob, Baruch and Ezra. It is possible that the visions of Daniel are of this class. In ch. 7 Daniel himself dreams of kingdoms and kings all of which are to pass away before the coming of the Lord to set up his own kingdom, an everlasting kingdom, ch. 7: 27. Something of the same sort is repeated in ch. 8, in each case the last of the kings, the "little horn" (chs. 7: 8, 20, 21, 24; 8: 9), almost certainly representing the persecuting Greek king of Syria, Antiochus Epiphanes (B.C. 175-164). In ch. 9 an exceedingly impressive confession and prayer is followed by another vision which seems to refer to the period between the beginning of captivity in Babylon, and the Maccabean revolt. Chapter 10 is introductory to the final vision (chs. 10 to 12) in which again (see ch. 9: 21) an angel appears in answer to Daniel's prayers, and reviews the events leading to the same period of revolt.

The Boy Scouts And the Jamboree

Sir Robert Baden-Powell Gives Touchant Answer to Question "Is Scouting a Military Movement?"

A FORCE FOR PEACE

"The sight of boys of forty-two nationalities, different in language, creed and color, but wearing the same uniform, and obeying the same Scout Promise and the same Law which binds every Scout to be a brother to every other Scout, cannot but open up to the most unimaginative a vision of what may be the ultimate outcome. From this meeting we shall go forward with fresh inspiration and renewed strength of brotherhood to spread our Movement wider and to make it a still greater force for the peace of the world and the service of God."—Sir Robert Baden-Powell, Chief Scout.

The Boy Scout Jamboree at Birkhead is responsible for the happy notion on the part of Messrs. Benn and Co. to include in their Sixpenny Library "Scouting and Youth Movements," by Sir R. Baden-Powell, who in one of the chapters answers a question often raised by critics and friends. Sir R. Baden-Powell writes:—

"The aim of the Boy Scout Movement is to make good citizens, and for this reason it has been judged unnecessary to introduce military drill. Scoutcraft is a means through which the veriest hulk can be brought to higher thought and to the elements of faith in God; and, coupled with the Scout's obligation to the base of duty to God and to neighbor on which the parent or pastor can build with greater ease the form of belief that is desired. "I do not think this can be done through 'form' drills."

Things More Important than Drill

"The simple system of drill which is suggested for Boy Scouts is merely given in order to enable Scoutmasters to move their Troops and Patrols in good order for parade purposes and not as an exercise for frequent practice with the boys when other occupations are possible. When I see a Troop drill well but fails to follow a trail or cook its own food, I recognize that the Scoutmaster is not much good as such. The different or unimaginative officer always falls back upon drill as his one resource.

"There is no military aim or meaning in Scouting for Boys. It is true that the Movement has an old General at the head of it, and a goodly number of ex-officers in its rank. The reason of this is not very far to seek. Men retire from the Navy, the Army, and the Royal Air Force at a very much younger age than from most other forms of occupation. They are, more often than not, men of active disposition, imbued with ideals of service for their fellow men and anxious to take up some form of useful work. It is not surprising that they flock into the Scout Movement.

"Further, most of them, like myself, have seen something of the horrors of war; they know the suffering and cruelty that war involves, and they do not want to see war occur again. Are they to be denied this opportunity of beating their swords into plough-shares, their spears into pruning-hooks? After all, there is no reason why an old circus horse, having finished his career in the ring, should not settle down peacefully to his useful civil occupation of pulling a baker's cart.

"Through the Scout training a vision of higher hope and broader outlook has opened out before us, a vision which has nothing whatever to do with militarism. By developing education through backwoodsmanship rather than through drill we can give to our future citizens in each country the instinct for peace rather than for war, yet without their lacking or losing any of the manly virtues or the attributes essential to a healthy nation.

Influence on the Next Generation
"If we look forward we can realize that the two million Scouts and Guides in existence to-day represent another million who have passed through the training, and that they are the prospective fathers and mothers of the next generation. They will, therefore, be bringing up some two or three millions more of boys and girls within the same line of thought and action as their own.

Thus we have a wonderful opportunity and a great responsibility. We must shape our training with the right vision so that we shall not be content merely to have smart Troops and temporary success, but we must be sure that the highest ideals have been actually inculcated and that the boys and girls really bring a Christian spirit into their daily life and practices; that they overcome selfishness with service, and that they substitute goodwill and co-operation for the too prevalent state of narrow patriotism and jealousies. In this way our Movements will be helping in a tangible manner to supply the international spirit of goodwill which is needed to give the soul to the existing form of the League of Nations.

"That the League itself recognizes this is shown in the following significant and carefully weighed passages from the Report of the Fifth Committee to the General Assembly of the League of Nations.

"The Boy Scout and Girl Guide Movement is not one of those new, unknown or little known movements in the case of which it is desirable to await the results they may produce before recommending them for consideration and support to public opinion and the various governmental organizations. Founded before the 1914 war, the Movement had, even at that date, a very considerable number of adherents throughout the world. To-day it includes more than two and a half million young people of both sexes in every continent and in every land—and it continues to prosper.

"The Fifth Committee was of the Assembly to invite the various governments to grant the assistance requested, it would not be asking for support for some feeble undertaking which is destined to disappear. The Assembly is being asked to take under its protection a movement which is full of life and which is inspired by ideals, the noble and lofty character of which is not contested and whose usefulness is undoubted from the point of view which is of special importance to all of us here, the point of view of world peace.

"Therefore, it is not only necessary, but actually indispensable that this Movement should receive every support and assistance.

"It should not be forgotten that the thoughts and feelings of the younger generation are an important element in forming the conscience of humanity; a pure and healthy element freed from all prejudice, rancour, and memories poisoned by hatred; an element of enthusiasm and generous sentiment.

"For that reason we should assist the international movement on behalf of the Boy Scouts and Girl Guides, a movement which, by the constant exchange of visits, by camp life, by games played, and by happy days spent together, during which the young people get to understand one another, increases from day to day their feelings of comprehension, respect, and love for their neighbors, whatever may be their language, race, or continent."

The Explanation

"Is it true that your engagement to Miss Smarte is at an end?" queried the inquisitive visitor.
The young man addressed shook his head mournfully.
"No," he said, "I didn't break it off."
"Oh, she broke it off, then?"
To this there was no answer, but the curious one was not easily discouraged and tried again.
"But it is broken off, isn't it?"
"Oh, yes!" explained the moody one with delicacy. "She told me what her milliner's bill was, and I told her how much a week I got. Then our engagement just sagged in the middle and gently dissolved."

I hate to be a kicker, I always long for peace.

But the wheel that does the squeaking is the one that gets the grease. It's nice to be a peaceful soul and not hard to please. But the dog that's always scratching is the one that has the fleas. "I hate to be a kicker" means nothing in a show.

But the baby that keeps yelling is the baby that gets fed!

Wife: If I should die, what would you do?
Hubby: Oh, the same thing you would do in the circumstances.
Wife: You wretch! I've always suspected it.

A little boy sat beside a window, with his head on his hands.

He seemed quite indifferent to the shouts of the other youngsters at play in the street. He looked very miserable.

"The Fifth Committee was of the Assembly to invite the various governments to grant the assistance requested, it would not be asking for support for some feeble undertaking which is destined to disappear. The Assembly is being asked to take under its protection a movement which is full of life and which is inspired by ideals, the noble and lofty character of which is not contested and whose usefulness is undoubted from the point of view which is of special importance to all of us here, the point of view of world peace.

"Therefore, it is not only necessary, but actually indispensable that this Movement should receive every support and assistance.

"It should not be forgotten that the thoughts and feelings of the younger generation are an important element in forming the conscience of humanity; a pure and healthy element freed from all prejudice, rancour, and memories poisoned by hatred; an element of enthusiasm and generous sentiment.

"Further, most of them, like myself, have seen something of the horrors of war; they know the suffering and cruelty that war involves, and they do not want to see war occur again. Are they to be denied this opportunity of beating their swords into plough-shares, their spears into pruning-hooks? After all, there is no reason why an old circus horse, having finished his career in the ring, should not settle down peacefully to his useful civil occupation of pulling a baker's cart.

"Through the Scout training a vision of higher hope and broader outlook has opened out before us, a vision which has nothing whatever to do with militarism. By developing education through backwoodsmanship rather than through drill we can give to our future citizens in each country the instinct for peace rather than for war, yet without their lacking or losing any of the manly virtues or the attributes essential to a healthy nation.

Influence on the Next Generation
"If we look forward we can realize that the two million Scouts and Guides in existence to-day represent another million who have passed through the training, and that they are the prospective fathers and mothers of the next generation. They will, therefore, be bringing up some two or three millions more of boys and girls within the same line of thought and action as their own.

Thus we have a wonderful opportunity and a great responsibility. We must shape our training with the right vision so that we shall not be content merely to have smart Troops and temporary success, but we must be sure that the highest ideals have been actually inculcated and that the boys and girls really bring a Christian spirit into their daily life and practices; that they overcome selfishness with service, and that they substitute goodwill and co-operation for the too prevalent state of narrow patriotism and jealousies. In this way our Movements will be helping in a tangible manner to supply the international spirit of goodwill which is needed to give the soul to the existing form of the League of Nations.

"That the League itself recognizes this is shown in the following significant and carefully weighed passages from the Report of the Fifth Committee to the General Assembly of the League of Nations.

"The Boy Scout and Girl Guide Movement is not one of those new, unknown or little known movements in the case of which it is desirable to await the results they may produce before recommending them for consideration and support to public opinion and the various governmental organizations. Founded before the 1914 war, the Movement had, even at that date, a very considerable number of adherents throughout the world. To-day it includes more than two and a half million young people of both sexes in every continent and in every land—and it continues to prosper.

The Erratic Mr. Mart

I had to laugh
At old man Mart;
He lost his head
Then lost his heart.

The normal way,
I've heard it said,
Is to lose one's heart
And then one's head.

Boy Scout—"Yes—I've taught Cousin Lucy not to poke her tongue out at Boy Scouts!"

He—"Wouldn't you like to hear me sing 'Because I Love You?'"
She—"No; if you love me, please don't sing."

Name—"Gee! that's swell."
Malsie—"But he hasn't got the five thousand dollars and nobody else has offered me a kiss."

Nothing For Murphys

"Anything for the Murphys?" Inquired a freckle-faced girl, putting her head in at the postoffice door.
"No, nothing," replied the clerk.
"Anything for Jane Murphy?" pursued the girl.

"No."
"Anything for Bob Murphy?"
"Nothing, I tell you."
"Anything for Biddy Murphy?"
"No; nor for Pat Murphy nor Dennis Murphy, nor for Pete Murphy, nor Paul Murphy, nor for any of the Murphys, individually, jointly or severally."

The girl regarded the clerk for a moment in open-mouthed astonishment.
"Well," she said at last, "have you anything for Clarence Murphy?"

Jones—"Do your daughters live at home?"
Mrs. Smith—"My, no! They are not married yet."

He made no enemy here below,
For him death held no terror;
And now he's where the "Good Fellows" go.
No runs, no hits, no errors.

"I hope," said one wife to another, "that you don't nag your husband."
"Only when he is beating the carpets," said the second one. "When he is thoroughly irritated he makes a much better job of it."

Making the Railway Beautiful

1.—John Caesar, pioneer of Canadian Pacific Station Gardens.
2.—First Canadian Pacific Station Garden at Markdale, Ont., 1881.

John Caesar, like his great prototype, "same, saw and conquered." When he first started as station agent at Markdale, Ont., back in 1881, it was just a station with the rails running past it. He decided that passengers should sit up and take notice when they passed through his territory, so he started in to landscape garden it. Soon he had a beauty spot where before there had been little to interest the traveller. Canadian Pacific officials were quick to recognize the value of the work and the Floral Department of the railway was formed. Mr. Caesar was chosen to look after the beautification of the road and he has to his credit a large number of stations through Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick, and Maine. Since 1871 Mr. Caesar has been drawing pay cheques from railways and probably has signed more than any other living railroad man. When he retired in 1917 on his agent's pension, he went on to work at landscape gardening and has literally created hundreds of station gardens, some of them real showplaces. "I have received new life from the soil," he says, in replies to compliments on his fresh complexion and alert manner, for he is a man well in the seventies, and he hopes to make many more gardens before he completes his life span.

RED HOT JULY DAYS HARD ON THE BABY

July—the month of oppressive heat; red-hot days and sweetening nights; is extremely hard on little ones. Diarrhoea, dysentery, colic and cholera infantum carry off thousands of precious little lives every summer. The mother must be constantly on her guard to prevent these troubles, or, if they come on suddenly, to fight them. No other medicine is of such aid to mothers during the hot summer as is Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the bowels and stomach, and an occasional dose given to the well child will prevent summer complaint, or if the trouble does come on suddenly, will banish it. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25c. a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

But What Is That?

The weeds are rank,
The grass uncult,
The vines swing wild,
The door is shut;

The clock has stopped,
Stark is the bed,
The fire's out,
My love is dead—

But what is that?
In here! Out there!
Was that the wind
Along the stair?

Was that a hand
That stirred the curtain?
Was that a laugh?
I am not certain—

Love! Are you there?
Or is it only
That I am mad
As well as lonely?

The French Debt to the U.S.A.

Philadelphia Ledger: It is reasonably certain that the people of this country have no wish to be hard upon France. Indeed, the terms of the Mellon-Berenger agreement, which in effect canceled the principal of the French debt and arranged for the payment of the interest alone, show unmistakable generosity. But it is more than three years since that agreement was made, and though its obligations have been met regularly by the French Government, it has not yet been ratified. Speeches like M. Henri Franklin Bouillon's, leader of the National Union group in the French Chamber, who spoke of deliberating with a knife at our throats, make interesting reading, but they are of assistance neither to his own Government nor to this one in reaching a final settlement of the debt question.

The Disappearing Indian

Quebec Evening News: In the greater part of the old hunting grounds of the natives of the country, there barely remain a few thousand descendants of a human family which lacked neither intelligence nor nobility. Outside British Columbia, and the least hospitable parts of the Province of Quebec, there are no longer any forests where the proud nations who have been despoiled and humiliated can taste the illusion of their lost liberty. And it is the representatives of the most generous nations of the white race who have accomplished this inhuman work. Can we, after this warning, blame the yellow races for rebelling against European penetration? Men are no white different from fish or ants. Instead of dominating by intelligence and kindness, the survival of the fittest is ensured by war, strategy, exploitation, fraud and destruction.

The Tariff Policeman

The traffic policeman is usually associated in our minds with sharp rebukes for unknown offences or a summons to court for infringement of traffic regulations. That he may be, after all, a most human and humane individual, is confirmed by an incident which the writer recently witnessed.

It was near the midnight hour, on one of New York's busiest avenues, in the section that years ago was known as "Hell's Kitchen." The swarm of taxicabs that follows the theatre closing hour had just cleared the street fairly quiet, so that pedestrians had an opportunity to observe the magnificent office buildings recently erected in that part of the city.

As we strolled along, what was our amazement and delight to see the traffic policeman standing in the middle of the street and cuddled cozily between his wide-spread feet a somewhat soiled but very contented gray and white cat. We were not near enough to hear the purring but never have we seen a cat by his own fireside looking more peaceful and comfortable.

The picture was too good to spoil by intrusion so we have no facts in regard to this tabby and his protector. From our knowledge of cats, however, we feel sure the confidence displayed was founded on previous association and friendship, and henceforth a traffic policeman will mean to us something more than an administrator of Police Department regulations.—E. M. Rutherford.

And Why Worry?

Once upon a time there was a Restaurant which was equipped with Hot and Cold Running Waiters. And the Waiters were accustomed to wait, and so were the Guests.

And there was a day when I was there, and a man entered, and he said, "I desire a Steak, and I want it to-day and not to-morrow, for I am about to take a Train."

And while he waited, he sang softly concerning the Waiter, saying, "He never came back, he never came back, he never came back any more; but his neck I will break if he bring not that Steak when we meet on that Beautiful Shore."

And it came to pass after a time that the Waiter returned. And the man said, "Art thou the same Lad that took mine Order for a Steak?"

And the Waiter answered and said, "I am."
And the man said, "Thou must pardon me for the question. Thou hast grown."
And the Waiter said, "Art thou ready for thy Steak?"

And he served the Steak.
And the man essayed to cut it, and he said, "The Steak also hath grown; it is old and tough."

But he was hungry and he ate, and the meal was not a Total Loss.
And the man said, "Such is life. They also serve who only stand and wait, and a large part of the service for which one payeth well is of that sort. And he who fleeth an order for Success and waiteth for it to come must often find that when it cometh it is Too Tough to Cut."

Now I sat at a table near at hand, and I said, "My friend, thou hast some reason for thy complaint, and I also have suffered here and elsewhere by reason of the Alacrity which Waiters display in Quiescence. For there are few things so stationary as some Waiters. Nevertheless, we have eaten and are refreshed, and the price of the meal is within our means, and we still have time for our Train."

And he said, "Thou hast well spoken. And it was not so bad a meal at that."
And I said, "May it be so with thy life's Success. And though it be somewhat toughened by reason of the delay, I trust thy Knife may be sharp and thy Digestion good. And I hope that Success for thee is not very far away."

And he said, "I thank thee for thy good wishes, and as for the Success, it is not so bad or remote as it might be. Fare thee well."
And I said, "I rather think thou wilt gain Success and enjoy it. Fare thee well."

And if the Steaks were slow in coming and rather Tough when they come still were we each the better for each other's good wishes.
And if the wait be long and the Steak be tough, there is no use making matter worse by fretting about them.

Close to the Earth

Let the brown lark fly
That has wings to fly,
The ant, the beetle,
The mole, and I
Keep close to the earth
Where we like to lie.

For close to the earth a beetle may trundle
Its treasure below in a claw-clipped bundle;
And close to the earth an ant may funnel
Earthwork in turrets the length of its tunnel;
And close to the earth the secret mole
May fit to its body its cool, dark hole;
And I, who have never a wish to climb
The sky with a lit or a whistling rhyme,
May stoop and listen and mark the time
Of surer songs than a bird ever sings—
Songs slow with the pulse at the root of things.

—Margaret Emerson Bailey in Harper's Magazine.

Very Important

The master had spent the morning telling his boys of the wonderful strides that science had made since the days of the war.
He had noticed that the most backward boy of the class had paid the least attention of all.

The boy came out of his dreams with a start:

FATALLY INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT NEAR WINGHAM

Edwin Jarvis, aged 84, near Lucknow, West Wawanosh Township, was fatally injured in a motor smash on the Lucknow-Wingham highway near Whitechurch at 8.30 o'clock Friday evening. Mr. Jarvis, who was returning home after participating in the Orange Celebration here, died at midnight, three and a half hours after he had been admitted to Wingham Hospital.

The car, driven by Samuel Reid, Mr. Jarvis' son-in-law, turned turtle in the ditch, after a tire had blown out, causing the driver to lose control. Reid suffered minor cuts and bruises while four other occupants in the machine escaped unhurt.

The death of Mr. Jarvis was caused by severe internal injuries, besides three broken ribs. He suffered also from shock, and this, combined with his injuries and advanced age, made recovery doubtful from the first. Mr. Reid was not seriously hurt and was allowed to go to his home after receiving medical attention at the hospital here.—Wingham Advance.

Harry Sanson must have been carrying a rabbit's foot in his pocket and a horseshoe around his neck last Saturday when his big motor truck left the road and flopped on its side in the ditch, with positively no injury to himself and comparatively "small damage to the vehicle. He was negotiating the narrow stretch of roadway a short distance west of the Fordwich s'deroad on the 4th concession, which has been recently gravelled, when he felt the rear end of the truck drop off the road, and, when he attempted to pull it over to the beaten path again, it took a reader off the other side and rolled over. Harry crawled out unhurt, and with the assistance of a farmer's team the truck was got back on the road. A mechanic's assistance was required, however, before the engine would function. The body of the truck was also twisted rather badly, but, strange to relate, no damage was done to the load of groceries and other merchandise.—Fordwich Record.

McKenzie Remanded For Trial

The charge of fraud against McKenzie, who is presently obtaining possession of Ontario Bonds, from Mrs. Elizabeth Schonn and son Anthony, of Deemerton, preferred against W. H. McKenzie of Harriston, were heard at Walkerton on Friday. Mr. Campbell Grant appeared for Mrs. Schonn and her son, and McKenzie was not represented by Counsel. Hitherto O. E. Klein A. C. has been acting for McKenzie, but he refused to continue in this capacity.

Mrs. Schonn was the first witness, and as she does not understand English, Rev. C. P. Hoerner of Walkerton was sworn in as interpreter. Mrs. Schonn's evidence went to show that she is unable to write her own name in English, and when shown the power of attorney used in the transfer of her bonds she positively affirmed that the name "Mrs. Elizabeth Schonn" was not in her writing, neither had she authorized any person to sign her name for her.

Chas. Wells of Fergus testified that he is now employed in the Beatty factory at Fergus, but was a former resident of Harriston. He was asked by McKenzie to sign his name as witness to the alleged signature of Mrs. Schonn, and he had done so.

Mr. Waddell, Manager of the Bank of Commerce at Harriston, was called to the stand, and he testified that he had guaranteed the signature of Mrs. Schonn after having satisfied himself that Wells had witnessed the signature. Waddell has been a bank manager for about fifteen years, but his evidence was badly given and sounded so hazy that Mr. Freeborn, the Crown Attorney, was constrained to suggest that perhaps he was interested, with McKenzie, in the transfer of the bonds.

Jos. Nelson, provincial constable, exhibited specimens of McKenzie's handwriting, in which he had written the names of Mrs. Schonn and Anthony Schonn with both pen and pencil.

W. M. McCutcheon, manager of the Ontario Savings Bank at Walkerton, with whom Mrs. Schonn has had an account, testified that the signature on the transfer form was "absolutely not Mrs. Schonn's". He had compared McKenzie's handwriting exhibited by Constable Nelson with that on the transfer, and said that in addition to the unusual spelling of the word "Elizabeth" there were other points of similarity, and from his experience in comparing handwriting, he said he believed that the names on the transfer and on the exhibit had been written by one and the same person.

Anthony Kocher, who was held as a material witness, came up to the witness stand with his usual bland smile, and seemed to be as much at his ease as the lawyers were. He had nothing to tell about the case, although it is alleged that McKenzie

RUM-RUNNERS AT GODERICH

The Goderich Signal of last week had the following rather significant article:

The presence of several rum-runner's boats at the harbor during the past three weeks has aroused considerable local interest. The activities of the craft have not been very extensive. Since their appearance here three weeks ago, they have made about six trips, ostensibly to United States destinations, with cargoes of liquor. A boat with 300 cases of beer aboard has been lying at the harbour for several days this week. It is suggested that the boats are here not so much with the idea of business as to draw the attention of the United States officers away from the Detroit district, where it is being made very hot for the rum-runners. The supplies for the boats here are brought by truck from the brewery at London

BANK OF MONTREAL CROP REPORT

General—Grain crops throughout the Prairie Provinces with the exception of Southern Alberta and Northwestern areas in Saskatchewan have been badly damaged through drought and there seems little doubt that the West will harvest crops that will be much below the average. In Quebec crops generally continue to make satisfactory progress, with ideal weather prevailing. In Ontario warm weather and intermittent showers have greatly benefited all crops during the past week, and in general yields up to average are in prospect. In the Maritime Provinces scattered showers providing sufficient moisture and warm weather have helped all crops. In British Columbia the crop situation generally is favorable.

Alberta—Western Area.—In the North prospects are fairly good and in the South excellent, but in the central portion crops will have a small yield even on summer-fallow and breaking. Northeastern Area—Recent rains were too late to benefit any grain other than well prepared summer fallow and breaking. Pastures are poor, and there is danger of a feed shortage in some districts.

Southeastern Area—There has been no rain since the last report and not winds are causing damage.

Saskatchewan—Northern Area.—In the Northern area wheat is heading out, and conditions generally are contributing to fairly satisfactory progress. Prospects vary from good average to somewhat below average.

Southern Area—Except in the South West crops are suffering from continued dry weather, and indications point to the yield being below average. Wheat is heading out under unfavorable conditions and rain is needed urgently.

Manitoba—Continued dry weather accompanied by hot winds, has caused further damage to crops. Nearly all wheat is headed out with very short straw. Crops on summer-fallow are holding up well and promise a fair average yield but rain is urgently needed.

Quebec—Hay cutting is becoming general and the promise is for an above average yield of good quality. Grain and root crops have improved rapidly and look well. Pastures are in very good condition. Small fruits are plentiful.

Ontario—Fall wheat continues to open fast, and a good average crop is predicted. Oat and barley heads are filling well and the yield will probably be average. Corn should be a satisfactory yield. Early potatoes are very good. Mangels and turnips are growing well. Sugar beets will be somewhat below an average crop. Apples promise to be better than average and small fruits are doing well. Late peas in Prince Edward County have been badly affected by vermin, and the previous estimate of a 30 per cent now appears high. Grass pastures are in excellent condition. Tobacco is growing very fast and on the whole should be an average crop.

WALKERTON.

While swimming near the dam at Formosa last Sunday, Mr. Jack McDonald, foreman on the dredging work on the Teeswater river, was cut in the left hand by a broken bottle, and had to motor to Walkerton to have the injury stitched and dressed.

Relatives and friends in Walkerton learned with pleasure last week that Mr. Clarence Oberle, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Oberle of Walkerton, had been appointed manager of the Mildmay branch of the Bank of Montreal, his new duties to commence Aug. 1st. Clarence, as he is known in his home town, commenced his banking experience in the local branch of the old Merchants' Bank, being teller before transferred to another point. He has been accountant respectively at Chatham, Kitchener, Toronto, and latterly at Owen Sound.

Hearing, about 12.30 o'clock noon last Sunday, strange calls from the direction of the Triax company's race, near the mill of Pletsch Bros., Mr. George Scott and one of his mechanics "Pete" Blum, who were standing in front of the garage, hastened to the spot. "Pete" somewhat in the lead of his employer, saw a man struggling in the water, and, without a second's delay, jumped in, and undoubtedly saved John (Jack) Clements, of Goderich, from a watery grave. The stranger wishes "Pete" first, then Mr. Scott, who assisted in pulling him to safety and reviving him, to get all the credit to which they are entitled. Messrs. Blum and Scott worked over Clements while Dr. P. F. McCue, who received a hurried call, was hastening to the scene. By the time he physician arrived Jack, who has been here, with others, in the interests of the Ottawa Rug Co., was coming around. Mr. Clements, who has not good eyesight, had been walking along the race, and, in some way, which he cannot account for, made a mis-step and found himself in the water, which, in depth, was well over his head. At the time few, with the exception of his rescuers, were in the vicinity, but, fortunately, they heard his cries. Unable to swim, and with the weight of his clothes he says he would not have had a chance to save himself.

The Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries is embarking on an organized effort to bring the ruffed grouse, or partridge, back to Ontario in gunnable numbers. From this farm the department hopes, in time, to restock all suitable sections of the province.

It is not anticipated, owing to the lightness of the crop in Western Canada this year, that there will be much demand for harvesters from the East. Hon. It is more than likely that no British immigrants will be brought out for harvesting purposes.

remarkable size. When it failed to hatch within a reasonable length of time and something inside the shell shook when the egg was moved, Mrs. Richards decided that it must be bad and so chipped the shell at the ends. Much to her surprise she found a second egg within the first shell with a suggestion similar to that of the white of ordinary eggs between the two shells. The outer shell is of unusual size, 12 1/2 inches in circumference the long way of the egg, 9 1/2 inches in circumference around width and apparently 4 1/2 inches in length. The second egg is of ordinary size, with a space of about one-half inch between the two shells all the way around. Both shells are quite hard and thick and are of natural shape.

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

Alden Drake formerly a sailor, now grown soft and flabby through a life of idle ease, visits Sallertown, where he meets Joe Bunting, a seaman, with whom he drinks himself off his feet in a barroom. Awakening next morning Drake hears Captain Stevens of the Orontes denounce him as a "dude." Angry, Drake sneaks aboard the Orontes as one of the crew. He is discovered and thrown overboard. Drake now is lying snug on a heap of canvas, where he overhears Mr. Adams and Mr. Twining, the two mates, discussing Mary Manning, daughter of the owner, who is a passenger on the Orontes and the guest of Captain Stevens.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"Mister Adams, you will please not discuss the Captain or his passengers," said the mate. "You will find work enough about the ship, if you're going to make as good a second mate as I was."

"I'll bet she has some fun with Jake, though," retorted the irrepressible Adams, as he stepped down the winding poop ladder to smoke a pipe in the waist, waiting for the bell.

While he was there, Drake had to remain hidden. The men forward clustered at the fore hatch. The lads in the halfdeck put on their jackets and caps. At the rail above Mary Manning's voice rippled; her hearty laughter leaped aloft in the sleeping breasts of the gleaming sails.

"I want to see what watches picked again," she said. "It is so interesting to watch how a new crew shapes up."

"The only interesting thing about crews nowadays, is how they happened to be the only rescals out of jail just when a ship needed a crew!" Captain Stevens stated emphatically.

Drake felt an almost irresistible impulse to go forth and confront this new skipper who broadcast such opinions about sailormen. Then the big poop bell clanged eight sonorous strokes and the mate blew his whistle.

"Let the hands muck, bosun!" he bawled. Captain Stevens walked aft, watches, Mister Twining!" said the captain impatiently, walking forward to find what caused the delay. He wanted to show Mary the shore lights. He slipped a hand inside Mary's arm. She gave him no notice.

"We're not a man short, sir," the mate said. "Finch has been stowed away all day, skulking."

"Get the watches picked and set! Never mind Finch now. You can give him some wake-up medicine some other time. He won't jump overboard, Mister!"

Drake mingled with the sailors going forward. Joe Bunting was in the mate's watch, too. He overtook the fat little red man at the fore firerail.

"And I thought you 'ad come into money," wheezed Joe. "See wot comes o' makin' too sure of anything. I didn't see—" He stopped outside the little room shared by the bosun and Chips, staring at Drake in the yellow lamplight just for a moment before the lamp was extinguished. "Hey, wuz you th' bloke they hove overboard in dock? Wuz you? Bl' me! I knowed you wuzn't wiv the crowd as signed in the cabin."

"I wasn't. But here I am, Joe, and they won't put back to dump me out. As soon as the pilot goes off, I'll see the Old Man. Just now, I am starvin', and bedless, and want a smoke so badly I'd sign away my payday for that inch of clay you're chewing to chaff."

"I'm on!" said Joe, and they entered the fore-castle. Already the big fore-castle rumbled with the sheering bow wave. Sleepers added their own note. The bright new kerosene lamp on the bulkhead was turned low. With the easy motion of the ship clothes swung from their pegs with a sibilant swish. In the after end of the port fore-castle Joe Bunting had chosen his bunk. The only other bunk vacant was far forward. Beneath Joe's bunk Tony Fernando lay, dreaming already of his next payday. Joe seized him by the breast of his shirt.

leaving his mates to divide the men. There were bosun, and carpenter, and cook; they answered to their names. Then the sailmaker. Next the able seamen, one by one.

"Tony Fernando!"

"Here!"

"Henry Hall!"

"Ere, sir!"

"Joe Bunting!"

The names were called down to the end. And there was no response to the last name called. Drake suddenly remembered the ship had sailed one man short, too. He called again:

"Peter Finch!"

"That's the man that cleared out," the second mate volunteered. When Drake, stepping into the crowd like a shadow, answered:

"Peter Finch here, sir!"

"Oh, you are, hey?" snarled the mate, stooping over the rail to look at the man who had just appeared.

"Yes, sir," said Drake, tingling with pride in his swift move. Mary Manning laughed merrily overhead. She had watched the milling of the men, the shuffling movement across the deck as they answered to their names. She wanted to see this cheerful rebel.

"Oh, you have?" the mate cried. "Step up!"

"Please hurry up and set the

"C'm on outa that, hombre! Shake a leg! Rise an' shine!"

"Wotta da mat! Time for turn out so soon?" stammered Tony, rubbing heavy eyes. Joe was rummaging through his pockets for a stub of pencil. He found it while yet Tony struggled with sleep, and scribbled a straggling "Peter Finch" on the lee board.

"C'm on, me son! Show a leg! Yer in th' wrong pew, that's a.l. Yer in me mate's bunk. Shunt outa it, slippy!"

"I geev you a tick ear, you!" snarled Tony, justifiably angry at being roused out. "Dees my bunk, an' you go to hell, see?"

"Let him stay," whispered Drake, for other men were rousing at the noise, muttering oaths, and horrid threats. It is a grievous sin to break the sleep of a watch below.

"Me mate's name's wrote on it, see?" wheezed the inexorably. He hauled at the furious Diego, and drew him from the bunk so smoothly that Drake stared in amazement, wondering where the tremendous strength came from. And though Tony fought like a terrier, Joe took him by the neck and pushed his face down for him to read "Peter Finch" on the lee board.

"See? Nah git yer dunnage outa here quick!"

Tony spat like a wet cat. Teeth gleam with grinding rage, he grabbed his belt hanging on the bunk stanchion, and whipped out his sheath knife.

"Here, here! none of that!" cried Drake, thrusting forward. Joe wheezed to him to keep clear; then coolly gripped the knife hand of Tony, twisted it cruelly with the knife dropped, and crumpled with the man. Picking him up like a bag of potatoes he heaved him headlong into the bare vacant bunk; then dragged out all his bedding and gear and threw them in on top of him.

"We's all th' bloody racket!" growled an awakened sailor.

"Tony drew a knife," wheezed Joe, easily.

"Kick th' bloody bum's guts in, then!"

You've made an enemy," Drake muttered as Joe hauled out a blanket from his own bunk and pitched it into "Peter Finch's."

"Wotta you care? You got a bunk, 'ave't yer?" grinned Joe.

Drake took a smoke for his supper. He lay in his bedless bunk, with nothing but Joe's seabag for his pillow, and smoked luxuriously while every other man slept. He fell to pondering whether he had left anything undone in embarking upon this mad voyage. His affairs were efficiently handled by the family lawyer. His household ran smoothly under his Aunt Angelina's guidance; would run the smoother in his absence, no doubt. He was still forming smoke pictures when the watch was called to turn out at midnight.

"Shake a leg, me salty sons!" bawled the sailor calling them. "Now me old brown sons, Resurrection Mornin'."

Public Ownership and Power

Toronto Star (Ind.): Premier Ferguson has helped along the private power program. He has made one contract to buy 264,000 horsepower for 30 years from a power plant on the Gatineau River in Quebec which is owned by United States magnates, and he has made another to buy 100,000 horsepower for 40 years. One financial authority says that the total amount the Hydro will pay to this New York controlled company on the first contract alone will be more than $100,000,000. And Mr. Ferguson has intimated that he is willing to buy another huge lock of power from other private power interests in Quebec. Meanwhile he is doing nothing to establish public-owned power-houses on the St. Lawrence and the Ottawa rivers. Indeed, he is known to be the chief obstacle to the development by Ontario of its own water-powers wasting away in the St. Lawrence rapids.

Mistress—"So you have got a situation with my friend, Mrs. Long, Mary? Did you tell her you have only been with me for two months?" Mary—"Yes, mum, and she said that if I could stay with you for two months that was a good enough reference for her."

"Are you a clock watcher?" asked the employer of the candidate for a job. "No, I don't like inside work," replied the applicant, without heat. "I'm a whistle listener."

Reading and Remembering

The late C. E. Montague in the London Mercury: What I mean by reading is not skimming, not being able to say the world saith, "Oh! yes, I've read that," but reading again and again, in all sorts of moods, with an increase of delight every time, till the thing read has become a part of your system and goes forth along with you to meet with any new experience you may have. Quite early in the history of medicine the doctors found out that a man could digest his food best if it ate it with pleasure among cheerful friends. So it is with books. You may devour them by the thousand swiftly and grimly, and yet remain the lean soul that you were. The only mental food that will turn to new tissue within you, and build itself into your mind, is that which you eat with a great surge of joy and surprise that any thing so exciting should ever have been written. When Scott's witty or tragic imagination was working at the top of its powers, more and more whiffs of Shakespeare would seem to visit his brain, to regale and incite it.

Liquor Smuggling

Winnipeg Tribune (Ind. Cons.): It may look like good business on the surface—this business of running wares merchandise into a dry country—but in the long run it will prove to be losing business. Canada is losing character in this border enterprise, and doing so is parting with something that will be a long time coming back.

"Mama, is papa going to Heaven when he dies?" "Why, son, who put such an absurd idea into your head?"

No idea is worth much unless a first-class man is behind it.

Echo of Old Times In Horse Thief

And Even Then It Seems Hard On Mike When He Has Money Coming to Him

Calgary, Alta.—Horse thieving, once an offence which meant death to the culprit, still is a serious offence in this western country, John Mike, a Steuque Mission Indian has discovered. For the next two years he will remain at New Westminister penitentiary for the theft of two three-year-olds from the herds run on the open range near Fernie, by the late Alfred Doyle.

"He told me to take two three-year-olds for some money he owed me for back pay," protested Johnny before being sentenced.

"How long has he owed you the money?" inquired the Court.

"About five years," was the answer. Provincial police, in giving evidence explained Doyle had notified them he had located two of his horses on a ranch near Cranbrook. He had asked Tony Skoff, the proprietor, where he had doubted them and Skoff said he had bought them both from the Indian for $55. He then reclaimed the animals and notified the police. Soon after he died.

The Indian, when located, protested Doyle had told them to cut the two horses from the herd in payment of a wages debt more than five years old. This Doyle at the time denied, stating the horses had been stolen from him. Arrest and appearances before Judge Thompson resulted in a penitentiary sentence.

Enquiry in the vicinity of Calgary has disclosed no case has ever been reported in Alberta of a man being hung for horse-stealing although the pioneers of the early days in the States, immediately south, recall such instances in the frontier United States very well.

This province is fertile, but in the arid stretches below the border the loss of a horse was a most serious affair.

"A man could die of thirst possibly, or starve to death without a horse," one old timer pointed out. "You mustn't forget, too, that many of those old time riders were lost without a cayuse under them. Many of them were born in a saddle, and walked with a funny gait. Walking was hard work for those fellows."

Baldwin and Lloyd George

A. A. B. in the London Evening Standard (Ind. Cons.): According to Mr. Lloyd George there is no time to be lost in preparing for the next election, "for the moment the Socialist Government acts Socialistically I will turn them out. I am the Master of the House of Commons, and I will tolerate no Socialism, though I will allow the Government to carry some of my program." Such was the substance, very nearly the exact words, of Mr. Lloyd George's speech at the National Liberal Club. This swaggering is unspeakably foolish. Mr. Lloyd George can do nothing in the House of Commons without the co-operation of the Conservatives, and he talks as if he had Mr. Baldwin in his pocket. So far from his being in that part of his person, Mr. Baldwin is more likely to be at his throat.

Quebec Not Jealous

Le Canada (Lib.): The Province of Quebec has never been jealous of its sisters; on the contrary, it has enthusiastically supported them, knowing that the country as a whole will benefit thereby. Our delegates at Ottawa, for example, have never criticized enviously or jealously a credit intended for the ports of Ontario or those of the West when these credits were likely to add to the progress and prosperity of the whole Dominion. It has the right, therefore, to expect the same attitude on the part of Canadians from the other provinces.

Give Good or Bad As We Get in Tariff

Spirit of Retaliation Growing in Canada Against U.S. Attitude in Trade Treaties

SOLID CANADA

Ottawa.—There is a general feeling here, backed by important statements made privately in leading circles that some definite retaliatory tariff measures will be promulgated by the Federal Government if the United States puts into force its proposed increased rates against Canadian products.

The Government's intention will not be known, probably, until the House re-opens. Action, however, will be governed to a great extent, by the trend of events between now and next February.

It is practically certain that Premier King's offensive will consist of a very substantial increase in the British preference in an effort to make the Motherland the beneficiary for the lost markets in the United States.

In fact, so far will this British preference extend that it might be termed a measure of free trade.

Direct increases in the general tariff will also accompany this plan and it is quite within the bounds of probability that certain duties will be heightened against the United States, duties which will result in an immediate outcry from big business interests in that country.

The Cabinet is discussing these plans in response to demands from all parts of the country for some show of retaliatory action.

The Government, furthermore, is watching closely the action at Washington and the Advisory Tariff Board is giving the whole issue its closest scrutiny.

Canadian Sentiment Aroused
If these reports are true and their appearance in leading Government organs practically assures their truth, it means that the Government is bowing before an overwhelming Canadian sentiment in favor of counter-action against the tariff activities of Washington.

The Prime Minister undoubtedly perceives that all over the country there is a feeling that all is not well in regard to the country's fiscal policy and that, above all, the new U.S. tariff measures call for a policy of national self-respect and self-interest.

Ghosts of 1914, too, hover over the situation. Then Laurier and Fielding were urged to accompany their reciprocity policy with a substantial increase in the British preference and failure to do this undoubtedly added to the Liberal disaster of that time.

There is no doubt that lack of definite action by the Government will mean a serious setback to their prestige throughout the country.

There is no strong anti-commercial feeling in the Dominion, but there is and always has been, an extreme sensitiveness to any policy of greed and big-brother pomposity on the part of Canada's nearest neighbor.

Not a few political parties in the past have been shipwrecked on similar lines and the situation calls for all the adroit political sagacity with which Mr. King is endowed.

Canadians are not likely to enthuse over the Premier's visit to Washington to confer with Rt. Hon. Ramsay MacDonald and President Hoover on navy disarmament.

They recall that the country which emanates high sounding phrases of good-will makes Britain carry two-thirds of the whole cost of the war, and takes millions out of the pockets of the Canadian people by still further raising a tariff wall already as high as Haman's gallows.

We are told that eventually science will give us a new religion. Most of the religions we have seem to be so little used they must be as good as new.

Many more men make money out of the stock market than in it.

THIS IS THE GREAT SOURCE OF EUROPE'S UNEASINESS

One of rare photographs smuggled out of Russia, showing factory hands becoming familiar with gas-mask use, which is causing uneasiness in Europe.

her secret. But the enemy submarine, although it passed near, gave no sign of having detected our presence.

"Soon our way was stopped by huge blocks of cement. I went forward alone to investigate, and found I could get well under the embankment. So we steered the tiny submarine beneath it.

"To ascertain our exact position I went forward, swimming alongside the face of the rock. When I got to the edge of the embankment I heard above my head a sudden cough. I stopped.

"Not more than a few feet above me was a man. He was almost bound to see me. I set my head swaying imitating the oscillations of a floating bottle.

Moment of Fear

"I was daunted by the certainty that a bullet from a gun breaking the glass would leave its trace of red along the surface of the sea—not the red of the wine, but the red out of my veins.

"Instead of that I heard the fall of receding footsteps.

"At last I reached the other obstruction serving to shield the port. It was made of two files of long beams, set parallel to the entrance into the port and separated by other transverse beams.

"Pointed steel rods, turned outward from the harbor, bristled at intervals here and there. Upon some of them were fixed great tin cans to give warning with their noise in case an attempt was made to force a passage.

Into the Harbor

"Satisfied with what I had seen, I went backwards towards our little craft and pushed forward into the harbor. We knew then that it would be impossible to return.

"There were enemy ships at anchor in the port of Pola. Among them was the great Dreadnought, Viribus Unitis. We made for it at a speed that ought to have betrayed us. The decisive moment was approaching.

"A strong current against us did not leave a possibility of getting beneath the hull of the big battleship until about a quarter past four. She was not many feet off from us now, silent, vast, grim as a fortress.

"There had been an agreement between us as to which one was to have the glory of fixing the torpedo to the hull of the battleship. I had been chosen, but my comrade all at once decided to make the trip himself as his greater experience enabled him to foresee the technical difficulties which might present themselves.

Lost His Comrade

"Little by little while he was swimming cautiously towards the battleship, the current swept me away with my tiny craft. At last I managed to get control of her again and finally succeeded in getting her directed towards the Viribus Unitis.

"There was no sign to be seen of my partner, and I looked at my watch. It was 25 minutes since his disappearance.

"Meanwhile aboard the enemy ships the morning call was sounding. Away on the horizon the first dawn was beginning to show in the sky and the formidable lines of the ports defences began to take form and shape. It was possible to make out aboard the Viribus Unitis the movements of her crew.

"Suddenly under the shadow of the battleship I made out a bottle that was floating and swaying. That was my partner Rosetti.

Discovered

"No sooner had we greeted each other than a shout rang out from the deck of the battleship. We were discovered. The next moment a motor-boat made for us.

"Faithful to our word of honor, and certain of receiving a volley at any moment we set to work to destroy the submarine. Rosetti opened the immersion valve. I having charged the second torpedo set it off.

"It dived and ended up in a small inlet where it exploded and sank the big Transatlantic steamer Wien.

"Wer da?" the challenge came from the motor-boat. 'Italian officers.' 'The answer had an astonishing effect. The crew of the boat stared at us as if we were madmen. That, however, did not prevent them from seizing us with all speed.

"Imagine our horror when we were taken aboard the dreadnought under which we had laid the time fuse torpedo. In a very few minutes she would blow up.

"The marines crowded about us asking countless questions. Who were we? Where had we sprung from down below? What were we doing there?

Crews' Terror

"By this time the commander of the Viribus Unitis had been aroused and told of our mysterious arrival aboard his ship. We were taken into his presence.

"'Captain!' said Rosetti. Your crew is in great danger.

"'What danger?' the captain demanded. 'Are you jesting?'

"'I can't tell what peril, but in a few moments your ship will go up. I'm not jesting. Save your crew.'

Each For Himself

"The captain was at last brought to see the truth. He dashed outside his cabin. We heard him roar in German. 'The Italians have put a bomb under her. Each one for himself!'

"Gangs of sailors, half-naked, raced madly along the bridges or thronged the stairways yelling. We heard the splash of bodies as men leaped from the decks to the water.

"In reply to Rosetti's question, the captain said: 'You may look out for yourselves.' We lost no time in running to the bridge and pointing in the confusion of human forms that dotted the sea.

"With slow strokes we managed to get away from the big ship. Not until we were some distance off did a launch appear. We were seized and carried again aboard.

"Time passed until it occurred to some of the crew that since nothing had blown up they had been trick-

A Splendid Feat Of the Great War

A Thrilling Yarn of the Adventures of Two Italian Naval Officers at Pola As Told in the Montreal Standard

We are able to reveal the details of what must be regarded as one of the greatest personal exploits of the war.

It tells how two men, risking almost unbelievable perils, made themselves into a human torpedo and sank a huge enemy warship in her own harbor, guarded by many dozens of death and under the shadow of shore batteries.

The tiny submarine with its crew of two which performed the amazing feat was the invention of two naval officers.

In the craft there was just room enough for the mechanism, a torpedo and two men. It was known officially as "The Leech."

Both men were immersed save for their heads, which were disguised with coverings made to look like empty bottles.

The Two Heroes

The two men who carried out this daring enterprise were Major Raffaele Rosetti and Lieut. Paolucci, of the Italian Navy. Their orders were to penetrate the enemy's powerful base at Pola at the head of the Adriatic and do what damage they could. They and their craft set out from Venice, and at a given point at sea the human torpedo, with its "crew," was launched on its perilous journey. The story of what followed is told as follows by Lieutenant Paolucci:

All around us and above us was the darkness of night absolutely silent, says Paolucci. The engineer had charge of the electric motor which drove the craft. He accelerated, and the first rush of waves caught me in the face and went down my neck and breast. I got a sensation of acute pain as if I had only a of grief. Then all slowly sank from our sight.

Deliverance

"Our launch bore us to wharf within the port. Half naked and still dripping we were taken to the hospital ship, Hapsburg. My hands were numb. My feet were frozen. My liver seemed affre, not only from the congestion of my blood but from a blow dealt me shortly before by a sailor as I was getting ashore.

"There ensued some days of melancholy meditation for us.

"There were occasions upon which our execution seemed certain. Preparations were all completed for the purpose by a squad of eight soldiers armed with guns and revolvers and lead by an officer.

"Five days later our own fleet arrived in triumph at Pola. It was our deliverance!"

Lieutenant Paolucci's amazing story ends at this point. Shortly afterwards the Armistice was signed and the daring adventurers returned to Venice.

Cannibalism and Famine in China

Boston.—Reports of appalling conditions caused by famines in the Shensi, Suiguan, Kansu, Honan, Tientsin and Tientsin districts of China have been received by the Commissioners for Foreign Missions. Conditions are so terrible, the missionaries report, that several cases of cannibalism have been authenticated.

Only a few hundred miles west of Tientsin the famine is so great that parents dare not let their children out on the streets for fear they will be stolen and sold or actually eaten.

Failure of the spring crop and the extreme dryness which prevents planting of crops for the fall in southern Shensi means that there will be no food grown in that area until the spring of 1920.

The people are dying by the hundreds and thousands. The situation will grow worse until crops are harvested.

British Flotilla Finds Location of Lost Submarine

Heavy Weather Hinders Relief Crews Searching for Trapped Sailors

London.—The admiralty has announced that the position of the submarine H-17, which went down after a collision with another undersea boat, the L-12 had been buoyed, but that bad weather had forced the salvage fleet to withdraw temporarily to the shelter of Milford Haven.

Pembroke, Wales.—An impressive array of life-saving apparatus—the most elaborate the British Navy could muster—was placed in position in the coasts to discover the whereabouts of the sunken H-17.

Divers aboard a diving ship were ready to descend and attempt to fasten tackle to the boat, despite the great depth of 270 feet as soon as her position was ascertained.

For mine-sweepers, an anti-submarine flotilla of five vessels, and seven destroyers searched the area, while the lifting lighters made ready. The Admiralty has revised its list of casualties to 24.

London dispatches said that collision had been made the occasion for a fresh appeal for abolition of the submarine by Commander J. Kenworthy. In an article in the Daily Sketch, he contended that despite all the lessons of past years, and improvements in underwater navigation, the submersible remained a highly dangerous vessel to the crew either in peace or in war. He said it was time to make an effort to abolish the dangerous craft by international agreement.

Small Mary was going to have her picture taken for the first time. Her mother was going on with her friends while she was to come with her father. As her mother was going out the door, Mary called, 'ma, please don't have my picture taken till I get there.'

Be sure and attend the Lutheran garden party at Henry Hossfeld's on July 25th and enjoy a real time.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Coleman of London are spending a few holidays with Mrs. Coleman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Mittleholtz.

John Weigel has a gang of men repairing the bridge on the 12th, which was washed away with the flood and has been closed ever since.

THE AIR IS DIFFERENT

Lake of Bays is one thousand or more feet above sea level, and the altitude of this sequestered group of lakes combines with the fragrance of the pines to give the visitor a new vigor in life. You have real enjoyment—golf or paddling all day long without tiring. You eat heartily and sleep like a log.

Select your own type of accommodation, for here you have them all from rustic cottage to the most pretentious of hotels. Canadian National Railways' comfortable trains connect at Huntsville with the steamer for all points on the lakes.

Ask any Canadian National Agent for information and literature on this attractive country.
