Roman Intelligence.

Besides the 12,000 lire already distributed to the poor of Rome, by the Pope in the name of Leo XIII, His Holiness has been further pleased to direct the appropriation, amongst the indigent families of the Eternal City, of a further sum of 10,000 lire.

His Holiness, Leo XIII, having forwarded to the Sultan of Zanzibar, Seyid Bargash, a magnificent picture in mosaic, splendidly framed, accompanied with a letter from the Cardinal Prefect of Propaganda, in token of Pontifical satisfaction at the protection accorded by the Sultan to the Catholic missions throughout Zanzibar, Mgr. Baur, Apostolic Prefect of that region, in a letter under date October 29th, 1882, relates to the Holy Father full particulars of the presentation of the gift, which His Highness the Sultan, recognizing in the august Head of Christianity the power and majesty of a Sovereign, had ordered to take place in his palace with the utmost official ceremony. At the close of the latter, the Sultan declared his intention to testify his great esteem for the Pope, and his high appreciation and gratitude for the honor conferred upon him by His Holiness.

The solemnity of the Nativity was celebrated with great pomp in the Liberian Basilica of Maria Maggiore, where the previous evening the Holy Crib was exposed to public veneration upon the High Altar. High Mass was pontificated in the Vatican Basilica by His Eminence Cardinal Howard. Midnight Masses were, in every instance, celebrated with closed doors. Ancient Duodecim rituals, etc., furnish interesting details relative to pious usages and historical dates connected with Christmas Day. We learn that the custom of celebrating three Masses on that latest day from time immemorial, and signifies the three births of Christ. The first was celebrated at midnight, recalling his birth in the womb of Mary; the second was said at the dawn of day, known as the Aurora Mass, indicating his birth in the souls of the just, and the announcement of the angel to the shepherds; the third Mass was sung before midnight, and denoted His birth in the bosom of the Father, for which reason the epistle of that Mass was taken from Chapter I of St. Paul's Epistle to the Hebrews, wherein the Apostle treats of that eternal descent, and the Gospel from the first chapter of St. John, in which the Evangelist explains the divine nature of Christ. Another interesting peculiarity was, in every instance, preceded by Matins, numerous indulgences being awarded those present thereat by degree of Sixtus V. Durandus and other liturgical writers state that in Rome the first Mass of the Nativity, on Eve and night, was celebrated with three veils; the first was black, and was lifted at the termination of the first Nocturn; the second, white in color, was lifted at the end of the second Nocturn, and signified the time of the Written Law; the third veil was red, and was lifted at the end of the third Nocturn, and symbolized the New Law of Grace. Pope Pius IX. (1846-1878) is said to have decreed this custom of singing three Masses on Christmas Day, to mark that the Nativity of Christ, according to the Law of three epochs, namely, the Law before the Law, the Law, and the Law, and that the Bread daily offered in sacrifice and consumed upon the altar—that is to say, Christ—was born in Bethlehem (the House of Bread), and that on Christmas night, Pope Telephorus further ordained the solemn singing at that Mass of the Gloria in Excelsis, in memory of the angels who sang to the shepherds the auspicious night of the Nativity of our Lord.

In the time of Innocent III, thirteenth century, it was customary for the Pope to celebrate Mass at the Basilica of St. Maria Maggiore on the Vigil of Christmas, which, later, was bestowed upon Sovereign Princes, or valorous generals deserving well of the Church. From St. Maria Maggiore the Pope repaired, at dawn of day, to the church of St. Anastasia, where he celebrated the Mass of the Nativity, and there celebrated the Mass of the Aurora, with Gloria and Credo, wearing the precious mitre. Were the Pope not in Urbe this Mass was sung by the Cardinal Titular of the Church, and in case of the absence of both, by the first Cardinal Priest. Whilst Pope Gregory VII. was celebrating this Aurora Mass, 1078, Cencius, son of Stephen, Prefect of Rome, and partner in the rebel Emperor Henry IV., fell upon the Vicar of Christ, wounding him severely, dragged him from the church, and imprisoned him in the Torre dei Conti, whence he was rescued by the infatuated Pope. The third Mass was solemnly celebrated by His Holiness, either in the Vatican Basilica or in St. Maria Maggiore, more generally in the latter church. As he entered the presbytery of a Manicoriaris of the Basilica handed him a rod, bearing a lighted taper, wherewith the Holy Father lighted bunches of tow, or flax, placed on the altars, to figure the wax of the world, which will be wrought by the rain of fire.

Fifty Years in the Northwest.

ARCHBISHOP TACHE'S REMINISCENCES.

"An article on my Christmas reminiscences in the Northwest for half a century" laughingly exclaimed His Grace the Archbishop of St. Boniface to a Winnipeg Sun reporter. "I should be delighted to write one, but I'm not much more than half a century old myself, and I have been in the Northwest only thirty-eight years. You can, therefore, see the impossibility of my giving you the reminiscences of fifty years. My time is very much occupied, and while I should be delighted to contribute anything to the Sun that would be of interest to its readers, I am afraid I would not have time to write such an article as you ask me by the day you would want it. But sit down, and I will reply to such questions as you may ask. My first Christmas in the Northwest was in 1845—just 37 years ago. There were then about fifteen houses, in what is the Winnipeg of today. Some of them were comfortable dwellings. One of them—a log house—was the residence of Mr. J. J. Hargrave, not homesteaded, and is located opposite the McDermott House, on the Post Office street. It is a story and a half high. At the Christmas time I speak of, it was occupied by Mr. McDermott and his family. What was Fort Garry like? The wooden buildings existed, but the government house did not, nor had the wooden wall been erected. Alexander Christie, Sr., was in charge of the fort. He was also the Governor of the district of Assiniboia. Mr. Black was the accountant of the Hudson Bay Company—the one who carried the mail to the fort. He was afterwards Judge Black, and in 1870 was one of the three delegates to Ottawa to confer with the Dominion Government for the creation of Manitoba. He was a year or two before that, Mr. Alexander Ross, in 1867, the author of the History of the Red River settlement, then lived on what is now known as the William Ross estate. He was Sheriff of Winnipeg. Another of the residents whom I well remember was Jas. Sinclair, father of Mrs. Dr. Cowan, a merchant who carried on business on the site of the old Banquet house. There were also a Mr. Douglas, a Mr. Douglas, the only stores were those kept by the Hudson's Bay people, McDermott and Sinclair. Yes, the Church of St. John's was then in existence. No doctor, a Mr. Brown, who died in 1870, whose history was recently described in the Sun by Ven. Archbishop Pinkham, was the clergyman in charge. Four or five years later Bishop Anderson was chosen to succeed him. Another of the residents whom I well remember was Jas. The discouragement does not yet show itself in the newspapers, but it too apparent in private conversation. It would be rash to suppose that because Republicans are discouraged, therefore the Republic is doomed. It is on trial, but it has strength to survive many mistakes.

The Ministers had another conference with the committee of the Chamber of Deputies on the bills against the pretenders. After the departure of the Emperor, the committee adopted a proposition excluding from French Territory, Algeria, and the Colonies, all members of families having engaged in France, depriving them of political rights as citizens, declaring them ineligible to any office, and preventing them from being engaged in the army. The result of the committee further provides that transgressors of the proposed law shall be liable to a correctional tribunal, and liable to from one to five years' imprisonment, after which they shall be again expelled. The discussion revealed wide divergences of opinion between the members of the committee. M. Pons, inspired by the Ministry, called for permission to amend the proposed law. The answer was they would examine the matter.

The North German Gazette gives the text of a letter from the Emperor William to the Pope, dated Dec. 22nd. After hearty remarks of good wishes expressed in the letter from the Pope to the Emperor, the latter declares that the Pope's letter has strengthened his hope that the satisfaction felt by the Pope at the re-establishment of the Prussian legation at the Vatican, will afford grounds for His Holiness to reciprocate by similar advances. The Emperor believes the advance made by the Vatican, in regard to the duty of giving notice of ecclesiastical appointments to the Government, is even more to the interest of the Catholic Church than to the State. If the Emperor were convinced that his desire for an understanding were reciprocated, we would be able to concede that the Diet should reconsider the May laws, which are not permanently required for the maintenance of peaceful relations with the Vatican.

Joseph Brady, John Kelly, Lawrence Haslam, John Dwyer, and Miss Kavanagh appeared in the Kilmainham Court on Saturday, charged with conspiracy to murder Field, a special juror. Alice Carroll, aged 17 years, is so far that she saw Brady stand with a sword-cane or a dagger. Witness positively identified Brady, Kelly, and Kavanagh. When Field fell he was stabbed by Brady or Kelly. The three men got on a car and drove off. The witness was then cross-examined, but her testimony was not shaken. She did not recall any until the reward was offered, but she said she did not "inform" in consequence of the reward.

THE WORD AND THE DEED.

The Word and the Deed, says the revolution. Justice is often done by the sword. The Word is the sword of the spirit. The Word is the sword of the spirit. The Word is the sword of the spirit.

THE OLD BARON.

THE CHAMPION OF VIRTUE.

Joseph withdrew and Edmund returned to the other door, and attempted several times to open it in vain. His hands were numb and cold, and at length he gave over.

He had last night, said he, and all by my lord's own order. 'Every hour receives some new proof of his goodness,' said Edmund.

'When they arrived, he found a good fire at the chimney, and a table covered with cold meats, and a flagon of strong beer. 'Sit down and get your supper, my dear master, and Joseph. I must attend my lord; but as soon as the family are gone to bed, I will visit you again.'

'I will see him if you desire it, and I will come to you as soon as possible.' So saying, he went his way, and Edmund sat down to supper.

After a moderate refreshment, he knelt down, and prayed with noble and worthy fervor; he resigned himself to the disposal of Heaven. 'I am nothing,' said he, 'I desire to be nothing but what thou, O Lord, pleasest to make me. If it is thy will that I should return to my former obscurity, be it obeyed with cheerfulness; and if thou art pleased to exalt me, I will look up to thee as the only fountain of honor and dignity.'

While he prayed he felt an enlargement of heart, beyond what he ever experienced before. All his fears were dispersed, and his heart glowed with divine love and affection; he seemed raised above the world and all its perils. He continued wrapped up in mental devotion, till a knocking at the door obliged him to rise, and let in his two friends, who came without shoes, and on tiptoe, to visit him.

'What you, my son,' said the friar, 'you look cheerful and happy.' 'I am so, Father,' said Edmund. 'I have resigned myself to the disposal of Heaven, and I find my heart strengthened above what I can express.'

'Heaven be praised,' said Father Oswald; 'I believe you are designed for great things, my son.' 'What! do you, too, encourage my ambition?' said Edmund, 'strange concurrence of circumstances! Sit down, my friends; and do you, my good Joseph, tell me the particulars you promised last night.'

'You have heard of the untimely death of the late Lord Lovel, my noble and worthy master, perhaps you may have also heard, that from that time, this apartment was haunted. What passed the other day, when my lord questioned you both on this head, brought all the circumstances fresh into my mind. You then said, there were suspicions that he came not fairly to his end. I trust you both, and will speak what I know of it. There was a person suspected of this murder, and who do you think it was?'

'You must speak out,' said Father Oswald. 'Why then,' said Joseph, 'it was the late Lord Lovel.' 'You speak my thoughts,' said Father Oswald; 'but proceed to the proofs.'
