Stella Mordaunt:

—OR—
The Cruise of the "Kingfisher."

CHAPTER XXXII.

"Will you come into the smoking-room?" he said, huskily.

Ralph shook his head.

"Better go home, I think," he said, with preternatural gravity. "That—that port is rather heavy; isn't so old as it pretends to be, I d'essay. I feel sleepy, and will toddle off to bed."

Lord Hatherley accompanied him to the hall and helped him on with his coat, and Ralph, with a meaningless laugh and a thick "Good-night" went out.

Lord Hatherley saw him stop to light his cigar; but as Ralph appeared to be able to do so, and Lord Hatherley disliked the idea of "watching" a departing guest, he closed the door and went to the library with a heart heavy with foreboding.

Ralph made his way up the avenue fairly steadily. The cold air made him feel giddy and confused, but it helped to sober him, and with an oath at his lack of prudence and the quality of the port, he pulled himself together as he passed the lodge gate.

But he had no sooner got into the road, and was making his way towards his own gate, when he saw something that sent the blood from his heart, and caused him to stop short as if he had been shot. Across his own park fence, standing out clearly in the moonlight, in huge, blood-red letters, the one word, "Nita!"

CHAPTER XXXIII.

He stood and stared, and the perspiration broke out from every pore.

"Good God! I must be drunk!" he muttered—"mad drunk! Nita—Nita! It's—it's fancy!"

He shuddered and shook himself, then went up to the word and touched it.

It was a poster of the most glaring kind, and had only recently been posted up, for it was still damp to his touch. By a mere chance he had failed, in his ride through the town, to notice the ordinary bills, and this one glaring at him suddenly from his own park fence almost stunned him.

He looked round covertly, then leant against the fence, and taking off his hat, wiped the sweat from his face. Nita! It was of no use trying to persuade himself that there were probably half a score of Nitas. He knew that this was the announcement of his deserted wife's presence in the town. What should he do? There was only one possible answer to the question. He must leave Ratton for a time, until she had gone. But Lady Mary? He must think it out—he must get home, away from these blood-red letters which seemed to denounce and mock and jeer at him.

He passed through the gates almost stealthily, and keeping in the shadow of the great elms, made his way up the avenue with quick, uncertain steps. Suddenly he stopped snort with a cry of alarm, for something had stepped out from amongst the trees and stood confronting him. It was a woman, tall, commanding, with a white face from which the dark eyes blazed scornfully. It looked so weird, so motionless in the moonlight, that Ralph was half persuaded that it was a vision called up by his overwrought nerves, but he could not prevent the cry, "Nita!" rising from his hot, parched lips.

"Yes, it's me!" she said; and at the sound of his wife's voice Ralph staggered back and leant against one of the elms, his arms hanging at his sides, his eyes distended with terror.

"Nita!" he gasped at last, as she stood looking at him with scorn and suppressed rage. "Nita!" His cunning came to his aid even at that supreme moment. "I—I thought you— you were dead!"

"You lie, Ralph!" she retorted, with a short gasp, as if she were struggling for calm. "You lie, and you know that I know it!"

"I swear—" he began, eagerly; but she stopped him with a gesture.

"Spare yourself the trouble of further falsehoods," she said; "spare yourself the trouble of making excuses. You knew I was alive; you deserted me like a hound, a cur; you have been hiding from me—you left me to die or live, to struggle or starve; you did not care which. No; you hoped that it would be the last—"

"Nita, I never—you wrong me!" he broke in, hurriedly, gesticulating with his hands and trying, but vainly, to meet the fire of her eyes. "I heard you were abroad—and died. I searched for you."

"Where? At the old lodgings, the place you left me? You lie again! You could not have gone there, enquired there, without my knowing it. You left me, intending to desert me, never to come back, and but for this chance, this accident, of seeing you, you would have gone on deserting me. Ralph, I know you now for the mean and cowardly cur you are. No matter what you swear, I should not believe you; you could not deceive me. Not again! I believed in you once, I blinded myself to your faults, I—Oh! She put her hand to her throat as if she were choking. "It drives me mad to think of the past, of the way I trusted and served for you—for you!" she laughed, with bitter self-contempt.

He looked round apprehensively.

"Hush—hush!" he muttered, hoarsely. "Someone—someone may hear you!"

"And if they do?" she retorted, fiercely—so fiercely that he could scarcely believe her to be the same Nita, the woman who had in the old times borne his selfishness, his tyranny, so patiently, so meekly. The wonder at the change in her almost overwhelmed his terror. "What if they do?" she demanded. "I am your wife—a wife may talk to her husband—in his own grounds. This is your house, isn't it? They tell me that you are a

When Rheumatism Strikes the Heart It Kills—'Nerviline' the Cure.

Effect of Nerviline on Chronic Cases Is Almost Magical.

Exposure to wet or cold is apt to bring on an attack.

The muscles stiffen, the joints swell, and exertion brings on excruciating twinges.

Often the pain shifts from one part to another, and this is dangerous, as the heart is apt to be attacked. Death as a rule follows a heart attack.

The pain of rheumatism is quickly rubbed away with Nerviline.

This is a swift, lasting and safe way to cure rheumatism. You can depend on Nerviline. It has the power, the penetrating force, the control over pain that is so essential to a rheumatic remedy.

Lots of testimony to prove Nerviline's certainty to cure.

nobleman—the Earl of Ratton! Is it true?"

He nodded and wiped the sweat from his face.

"Yes," he admitted, sullenly, absently. How could he persuade her to keep quiet? "I'll—I'll tell you all about it. Let us walk under the trees—there's a seat just behind here."

He led the way amongst the elms, and after a moment of defiant hesitation, she followed him. He had sunk on to the seat, his head resting on his hands, his whole frame shaking, and she stood and looked down at him, her lips tightly set, her eyes gloomy with contempt and anger.

"Well?" she demanded, impatiently. "I am waiting; is it true? If so, how has it happened? Have you robbed someone of his title and estate? How have you got it?"

"What do you mean?" he said, confusedly. "It's mine. I came by it rightly. My—my right name is Ratton; I'm the earl, the owner of this place. I—I discovered who I was after—after I left you."

She saw in a moment that he was lying.

"Before you left me; the same day," she said. "I understand. It was like you—like you! Oh, I see it all! I was not fit to be a countess, the wife of a great swell; I was fit to toil and starve for Ralph Bannister, the strolling actor, but not worthy of being the wife of a nobleman—" She broke off with a laugh. "But we'll see! We'll see, my Lord Ratton! I'll have my rights. Yes, though I have to go back to you, to take you back! And that's paying pretty dear for them!"

He winced under her scorn.

"I tell you I thought you were dead!" he said, sullenly. "Believe it or not as you like; I'm not going to say it again. I'm willing to let bygones be bygones, to—to—to forget the past."

She laughed.

"And I'm not. I'll never forget it. Who was that lady I saw you riding with?"

He pretended not to understand for a moment, then he said, casually: "Only a friend—a neighbour."

"Only the poor girl you were going to marry, going to trap into a marriage that would have been no marriage. I know; they told me; all the town knows it, you cur!"

He half rose, distracted with fear and impotent rage.

"People—people will talk," he stammered. "Nothing was settled. I thought that I was free. But now you've turned up—of course—" He wiped his face again, and unable to meet her gaze, stared at the ground.

"Of course everything is altered."

"Yes," she said. "To-night everybody in your house, our house, shall know I am your wife; and to-morrow you shall take me to her and tell her with your own lips."

He went white, and his under lip twisted. He was silent for a moment or two, then he looked up at her with an expression of sullen resignation.

"All right," he said, with a shrug of the shoulders. "You mean having your revenge, I see. Well, have it; it will ruin me, but it will ruin you also."

"Let it!" she retorted, sharply. "Yes I want my revenge, and I'll take it. All the world shall know the kind of man you are. Your friends—I suppose you have made friends with the people here—the people who don't know you—shall learn what you were, and how you deserted the poor woman who was unlucky enough to money, with every luxury and no end of friends; with travelling and—shopping?"

Her lip curled.

"You know it isn't possible," she said. "I'm Nita, a music-hall artiste, and everybody will know it; and worse, everybody will know that I am the wife you deserted."

"But why should they?" he broke in, eagerly. "Why, where's your old sharpness gone, Nita?"

"With my youth, and my trust in God and man!" she retorted, bitterly. "Don't you see?" he went on, untouched by the terrible arraignment of her response. "We'll go abroad, separately, of course, and I'll be supposed to meet you there for the first time and marry you. There'll be a little excitement and talk, of course; an earl and a music-hall girl, you know; but the world's used to that kind of marriage by this time, or ought to be, seeing how common it is; and when we come back, they'll receive us; all the country people, just as if you were a lady; you'll see if they don't. And what a fine time we'll have! By George! I'm looking forward to it. I've—I've not treated you well—there! I admit it; but I'll make it up to you, by God, I will! I'll be as good a husband as they make 'em! Come, Nita, be reasonable!"

In his eagerness, he ventured to stretch out his hand and take hold of the edge of her jacket; but she jerked it out of his uncertain fingers.

But her eyes wavered, and she bent them on the ground as if half reluctantly pondering his offer.

OFFICIAL.

LONDON, June 11.

The Governor, Newfoundland:

The French Government report heavy losses at Neuville; the enemy left about a thousand dead.

The Russian Government report a German attack on the Russian trenches at Micoeska in Galicia, throwing back with very heavy loss, on the right bank of the Dneister, pressure of the enemy resulted in the capture of two thousand prisoners and eight machine guns. A later report says important enemy forces which had crossed to the left bank of the Dneister were driven back with heavy losses the Russians capturing seventeen guns, forty-nine machine guns and about 6,700 prisoners.

The Italian Government report the occupation of the citadel and heights dominating Montefalcone.

BONAR LAW.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, June 11.

The French War Office issued the following to-day: There is nothing of importance to add to the announcement given out last night, with the exception of further success in the Labyrinth, where we have continued to force the enemy back, and some progress to the east of the Labyrinth.

FRENCH REPORTS.

PARIS, via St. Pierre, June 11.

Nothing further of importance to add to yesterday's report except (1) new progress in the Labyrinth, where we have continued to throw back the enemy; (2) small advances to the east of Labyrinth, where we have taken a German position near the big road of Arras to Lille; (3) in Hebuterne region, the widening of our gains north and south of our front, and the taking of several trenches with about 100 prisoners and machine guns.

In the Dardanelles we have strengthened our gains obtained in the fighting of the 4th of June. At the extreme right in Kereve Dere region, we have further progressed, and from inquiries to prisoners these show that the enemy's losses have been very heavy.

GERMANS REINFORCE THE WEST.

LONDON, June 11.

An Amsterdam despatch states that the German general staff is moving a new army of 500,000 men to the western front.

THE RUSSIAN OFFENSIVE.

PETROGRAD, June 11.

Suddenly assuming the offensive the Russian forces in Galicia, south of Lemberg, have defeated the Austro-German forces upon the Dniester River, capturing 6,500 men, 188 officers, 17 cannon, and 49 machine-guns.

GERMANS WELL SUPPLIED WITH MEN AND AMMUNITION.

LONDON, June 11.

The Daily Mail's correspondent at Petrograd telegraphs that in addition to one million German troops pressing towards Lemberg, from the west there are 300,000 moving against the Dneister line in the hope of attacking the city simultaneously from the south. He calls attention to the

Sovereign Cure for Rheumatism

Mrs. E. W. Hazlett, 183 Wyandotte Street, Windsor, Ont., says there is only one Kidney Remedy in the world for her—GIN PILLS.

"GIN PILLS I know from personal experience, are the sovereign remedy for Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble in any form. I was cured by them after months of suffering. I was helpless—had several doctors, and many other remedies but all failed to cure me. Then I tried Gin Pills with the result that I am well today. I heartily recommend them to any person suffering from Kidney or Bladder Trouble."

Do you suffer from Nerve Troubles

Our nerves are like an intricate network of telegraph wires. They are controlled and nourished by a portion of the brain known as the nerve centres. The condition of the nerve centres depends upon the condition of the bodily health. When the bodily health is lowered the nerves suffer in sympathy. Then it is that we are tormented with "nerves," headaches, neuralgia and nervous debility. In such cases there is nothing to equal Wingarhis, the "Wine of Life."

Wingarhis is a powerful nerve food which acts directly upon the nerve centres and gives them new life and new vitality. The result is wonderful.

Begin to get well FREE.

"Wingarhis is made in England, and you can obtain a liberal free trial bottle—no mere taste, but enough to do you good, by sending 6 cent stamps (to pay postage) to COLEMAN & CO., Ltd., Wingarhis Works, Norwich, England. The Governor, Newfoundland:
The French Government report heavy losses at Neuville; the enemy left about a thousand dead.
The Russian Government report a German attack on the Russian trenches at Moceka in Galicia, thrown back with very heavy loss. On the right bank of the Dniester, prisoners of two thousand prisoners and eight machine guns. A later report says important enemy forces which had crossed to the left bank of the Dniester were driven back with heavy losses the Russians capturing seventeen guns, forty-nine machine guns and about 6,700 prisoners.
The Italian Government report the occupation of the citadel and heights dominating Montefalcone.

BONAR LAW.

PARIS, June 11.
The French War Office issued the following to-day: There is nothing of importance to add to the announcement given out last night, with the exception of further success in the Labyrinth, where we have continued to force the enemy back, and some progress to the east of the Labyrinth.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, via St. Pierre, June 11.
Nothing further of importance to add to yesterday's report except (1) progress in the Labyrinth, where we have continued to throw back the enemy; (2) small advance to the east of Labyrinth, where we have taken a German position near the big road of Lias to Lille; (3) in Hebuterne region, the widening of our gains north and south of our front, and the taking of several trenches with about 100 prisoners and machine-guns.
In the Dardanelles we have strengthened our gains obtained in the fighting of the 4th of June. At the extreme right in Kereve Dere region, we have further progressed, and from inquiries to prisoners these show that the enemy's losses have been very heavy.

GERMANS REINFORCE THE WEST.
LONDON, June 11.
An Amsterdam despatch states that the German general staff is moving a new army of 500,000 men to the western front.

THE RUSSIAN OFFENSIVE.

PETROGRAD, June 11.
Suddenly assuming the offensive, the Russian forces in Galicia, south of Lemberg, have defeated the Austro-German forces upon the Dniester River, capturing 6,500 men, 188 officers, 17 cannon, and 49 maxim guns.

GERMANS WELL SUPPLIED WITH MEN AND AMMUNITION.
LONDON, June 11.
The Daily Mail's correspondent at Petrograd telegraphs that in addition to one million German troops pressing towards Lemberg, from the west, there are 300,000 moving against the Dniester line in the hope of attacking the city simultaneously from the south. He calls attention to the greatness of Germany's forces on all fronts and says that nowhere upon the Galician frontier or in Poland do the Germans appear to be short of men or ammunition.

BUGARIA SENDS PROTEST TO TURKEY.
LONDON, June 11.
The Bulgarian Government, says a Bucharest despatch to the Times, has sent a strongly worded protest to Turkey because of the continued indifference of that country regarding traffic on the Dedegatch railway and detention of passengers and freight.

ITALIAN FORCES CAPTURE BLECKEN.
INNBRUCK, June 11.
Italian forces have captured Blecken in Austria, close to the frontier. The possession of this location is important, as it endangers the Austrian communications. Blecken is 15 miles south of the main highway between Laibach and Innsbruck. An announcement has been made here by Austrians, that one of their submarines yesterday sunk a British cruiser of the Liverpool type at a point forty miles off St. Jean Medua in the Adriatic.

AUSTRIANS EVACUATE POZZACCHIO.
MILAN, June 11.
The Austrians are reported to have evacuated Pozzaccio after blowing up the fortress. Pozzaccio is east of the Adige River, 15 miles south of Trent. The Italians already hold Vallarsa, a mile from Pozzaccio.

NIGHT AND DAY BOMBARDMENT.
GENEVA, June 11.
A tremendous night and day bombardment of the Austrian forts of Santa Lucia and Santa Maria defending Tolmino, is being carried on by the Italians with heavy guns.

IN THE DARDANELLES.
PARIS, June 11.
An official announcement concerning the Dardanelles reads: "In the Dardanelles we have consolidated results obtained by us in the fighting of June 4th. At the right end of the Ravine of Kereve Dere we were successful with minor engagements in making some progress. Prisoners who fell into our hands confirmed previous reports that the losses of the enemy have been considerable."

SIR W. R. NICOLL ON THE SITUATION.
LONDON, June 11.

advantage she will press to its fullest. The only way for the Allies to avert disaster is to equip themselves and to do this Great Britain must stand behind David Lloyd George, as Minister of Armaments, as one man. Moreover, if he is not given a free hand he may resign." Sir William Robertson Nicoll thus sums up the situation as he sees it in the current number of the British Weekly, one of the best-known journals in England.

SERBIANS ACTIVE.
LONDON, June 11.
A despatch from Rome says that the Serbians have occupied Tirana, a town east of the Albanian seaport of Durazzo.

VICTIMS OF A DAY.
LONDON, June 11.
The Glasgow steamer Strathcona, Russian steamer Danis, Russian barkun Tomisajna, and Swedish steamer Octavo were sunk by German submarines yesterday, while the British fishing smacks Welfare and Laurastina fell victims to a Zeppelin. The crews of all were saved.

ARRESTED AT ALGERIAS, SPAIN.
PARIS, June 11.
A despatch from Algiers, Spain, gives details of the arrest there of a man who professed to be the Commander of the German converted cruiser Prinz Eitel-Friedrich. He shipped as cook aboard an Italian steamer bound for Genoa, intending to go from there to Germany. He was arrested at Gibraltar masquerading under the name of Commander Thierichens.

PROBING GERMAN TRICKERY.
NEW YORK, June 11.
The Grand Jury investigation to determine whether there was a conspiracy to defraud the United States in connection with affidavits submitted by the German Embassy to the State Department to prove that there were guns aboard the Lusitania being gun here, is specifically directed against Paul Koenig, who, according to the authorities, is head of a secret-service department, maintained by the Hamburg-American steamship line. The first result of the investigation was the arrest for perjury of Gustave Stahl, a German reservist, who made one of the affidavits submitted by the Embassy, and who is alleged to be closely associated with Koenig. The warrant alleges he committed perjury.

REPARATION DEMANDED.
EL PASO, June 11.
C. Myles, the British Vice-Consul, to-day telegraphed General Villa demanding punishment of Villa's soldiers responsible for the recent killing of four and wounding of one British subject at Tuxpan. The message was sent on instructions of Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, British Ambassador at Washington.

U. S. NOTE PUBLISHED IN BERLIN.
BERLIN, June 11.
The American note is printed in the Berlin newspapers, but is not accompanied by editorial comment. Headlines are varied, but were similar to "America stands firm." "A very solemn warning to Germany" and "very grave appeal." The note is regarded in diplomatic circles as decidedly conciliatory.

LANSING COMPARED WITH BRYAN.
AMSTERDAM, June 11.
A despatch from the Berlin Kolnische Volks-Kalender, a copy of which has been received here, says: "Without doubt Lansing, in comparison with Bryan, is a man of very sharp tone. Our submarine war will not cease on this account. If American ships or Americans in British ships enter the war zone, they must, despite Lansing and President Wilson, take the risk involved on such a voyage. America can claim the right to judge neutrals' rights only when herself maintains neutrality." Such was not the case under pacifist Bryan, and will probably be just as little the case under the international law expert Lansing."

A Splendid Opportunity.

We learn with great pleasure that as a result of recommendations brought before them by a representative committee of the congregation, the Select Vestry of the C. of E. Cathedral have formulated a plan that will very materially assist the choirmaster in his duties. Choir work is arduous at the best, but especially with boys. Mr. Allen has been somewhat concerned by the difficulties of obtaining boys with promising voices. Following out this plan, in future there will be a group of eight boys selected by Mr. Allen (29 Monkstown Road) who will be taught voice production and to read music, as now, and in addition will be educated free at Bishop Field College and receive also as salary, ten dollars a year. There will be also eight probationers who will be in training and in readiness to fill any vacancy that may occur and thus have the advantage of being educated free. Boys of ten years, and upwards will be taken. This arrangement for free schooling, is a common one in England even in the small Parish Churches and the benefits accruing to parents, boys, and Church are such as to commend themselves thoroughly to all. The benefit of a musical education with its direct use in surroundings which preclude any but the best music is an advantage which cannot be too highly estimated, whilst a College education (what otherwise might not be open to some boys) will fit the boy to breast the world when the time comes for him to leave school. Mr. Allen wants to commence work this month and hopes to have many applications, and with such inducements, we cannot but think that the results of the scheme will fully justify its existence.

Meeting 22,000 Wounded

All About the Wonderful Work of London's Ambulance Column.

Every time a train bringing wounded soldiers into London starts on its way, the telephone bell rings in a big house close by Paddington Station.

The call comes from the Deputy Director of Medical Services at the Horse Guards in Whitehall, and the big house at Paddington is the headquarters of the Ambulance Column of the London District.

The main work—it is voluntary and gratuitous—of the Ambulance Column is to meet all the military hospital-trains in London, and to take charge of their freights of broken humanity. It met the first train which carried wounded soldiers back from the war to London—that was at Waterloo Station, on August 30th, and it has met every train since. Although over 22,000 officers and men have been met and succoured so far.

Exactly what happens when a hospital train is on its way to town is this. The Medical Service Department of the Horse Guards rings through to the Ambulance Column. They say where and when the train is due, how many officers and how many men it is bringing, and how many of them are stretcher cases, and how many "sitting" cases.

The message, which may come late in the night, generally allows about an hour and a half for all arrangements to be made. And very thorough and admirable these arrangements are.

"Sisters" Warned by Telephone. Nothing that ingenuity and foresight can suggest to ease the lot of the heroes of the trenches on their arrival is overlooked or forgotten. First of all, the stretcher-bearers and "sisters" are warned for duty by telephone. There are 200 of these voluntary helpers, the majority of them women employees of the Prudential Assurance Company, and there have been times when they have had to deal with as many as 2,300 cases a week. This, bearing in mind that about fifty stretcher bearers are allowed to a train, shows the demands made upon them.

The next thing done is to load an omnibus with blankets, pillow-cases, hot-water bottles, and Thermos flasks (filled with milk), and get it off to the station at which the train arrives. There is an enormous room at the headquarters of the Ambulance Column which is literally piled high with blankets and pillow-cases, and the sorting and folding of them on their return after use is a matter of infinite labour of love.

So is the washing; and but for the splendid self-sacrificing spirit of patriotism which has been shown by a small band of working women the expense of washing would be enormous. But the blankets are taken and washed by laundresses in their own free time, while some of the men employed in the neighbouring houses turn to the headquarters of the Ambulance Column have banded together to take turns in washing the pillow-cases.

Psychology of Obsessions.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

What causes obsessions? How do people get into the state of mind in which their fear of some disaster becomes a mania untrammelled by reason or common sense? Having a natural tendency in the direction of obsessions I have studied their psychology very carefully and I have come to the following conclusion.

An obsession consists in getting into the state of mind where you do not stop to reason about the possibility of the thing you dread happening, but jump over that part of the subject entirely and concentrate upon the dire consequences if it should happen.

Could the Basket Really Catch a Fire? For instance, the woman with an obsession on fire does not stop to reason out as to whether it is really possible for the basket of stockings she removes so carefully from the radiator to catch fire there. She does not consider whether the radiator could ever give off a heat equivalent to the igniting point of the wicker basket. She thinks only of what a terrible thing it would be if the basket should catch fire and the house should catch fire and burn down. She pictures her beloved household belongings vanished forever; she imagines herself and her family burned alive in their beds. It would be a horrible calamity, it is better to take no chances—and so she removes the basket.

How Do I Know What Other People Think?

You may wonder how I can know what goes on in another's mind. I don't know. I only reconstruct by analogy. You see, as I before remarked, I have a strong tendency in that direction myself, and the other night when I was on the verge of giving way to it, I stopped and analyzed my feeling. I was in a friend's home, I was the last person to leave the bathroom for the night and as I clambered into bed I found myself wondering if I had turned off the water cock. "It would be terrible if that should overflow," I found myself thinking; "it's right over the living room and water would run that new ceiling." I actually started to climb out of bed and go back to make sure and then I restrained myself. "You know perfectly well you turned it off," I told myself. "And even if you hadn't, of course there is an extra outlet in the bowl. You can't remember it but there always is. You aren't looking at the thing reasonably. You are simply thinking of how terrible it would be if it should happen."

Obsessions Grow by What They Feed On.

An obsession is a cancer of the will. It grows by what it feeds on. The time to nip it is in the bud. Have you any dominating fears that other people are inclined to call obsessions? If you have, suppose your subject them to the test I have outlined and if you find you are forgetting to use your reasoning powers, take hold of yourself, make a fresh start, and use them.

Questions and Answers. Question.—Does one congratulate the bride or the groom or both? Reply.—If one wishes to do just the right thing I believe one congratulates the groom and wishes the bride happiness. By the way, if one wishes to be ultra right, one congratulates another only when one is or has been in a similar position. Otherwise one felicitates.

MISREPRESENTATION.

I bought a pound of yellow cheese the other day from Grocer Whee. And as he wrapped it up he cried, "In this fine cheese I take much pride. It's made from Jersey cream and milk and you will find it fine as silk; it's absolutely pure and clean, contains no dyes or gasolene, it's rich and sweet, without a taint, dogme my buttons if it ain't. Oh, it will chase away your woe, and make your hair and whiskers grow." I took it home with eager feet, impatient to sit down and eat, for I am fond of high class cheese, which with my inner works agrees. But that blamed stuff was rank and strong, for it had been on earth too long. My wife, a good and patient soul, remarked, "Bring me a ten-foot pole, before you do your 'other chores, and I will take that cheese out doors. Before it's fit for human grub we'll have to stun it with a club." What does a sawed-off groper gain by such a trick, unsafe, insane? And what does any merchant make by boosting some atrocious fake? Yet every day we're buying junk which proves inferior and pink, although it's praised to beat the band; such things are hard to understand.

At the City Hall. Here and There.

The Chairman, Messrs. Harris, McGrath, Ayre, Bradshaw, Mullaly, Morris, Amerson and Withers attended last night's meeting of the Civic Commission.

W. Dooling was given permission to erect a temporary shed on LeMarchant Road to be removed at the Board's pleasure.

Peter Purcell, of the Sanitary Staff, wrote saying that he had been dismissed and asked to be reinstated. The letter was referred to the Supervisor for report.

C. J. Fox, Secretary S. P. A., asked that attention be given to Robinson's Hill, which is unfit for vehicular traffic. The matter was referred to the Engineer.

Inspector Desmet reported that he had captured three goats during the week, and that the owners had not taken delivery of the same. He also asked that he be given an assistant, and guaranteed that the latter would be paid for his services. The keeping of goats within the municipality is a violation of the law, and the animals will likely be sent to some 'outport' where they are allowed to be kept.

E. R. Frowse will be asked to fence vacant land at the corner of Hutchings Street and Water Street.

J. J. Vey, Manager of the Nail Factory, applied for permission to make repairs to buildings. Permission was granted, subject to the approval of the Engineer.

T. Graham applied for permission to make repairs to house 333 Water Street West. Referred to the Engineer.

T. Davis, Roofer Lane, was given permission to repair house recently gutted by fire.

Mrs. P. Daphy applied for permission to repair and paint house 57 Bannerman Street. The matter was referred to the Engineer.

The Engineer reported that Mulliney's Bridge was too small and unfit for the service required of it.

It was decided that 10 barrels of tar will be ordered to be used as an experiment for dust-laying. Mr. Anderson suggested that an artificial lake be made in Bannerman Park, and the matter will be taken up by the Park Committee.

With the adoption of the various reports and passing of pay rolls the meeting adjourned at 10 p.m.

Meeting 22,000 Wounded Soldiers.

All About the Wonderful Work of London's Ambulance Column.

Every time a train bringing wounded soldiers into London starts on its way, the telephone bell rings in a big house close by Paddington Station.

The call comes from the Deputy Director of Medical Services at the Horse Guards in Whitehall, and the big house at Paddington is the headquarters of the Ambulance Column of the London District.

They Wear a Special Uniform.

The stretcher-bearers and "sisters" having been warned, and the omnibus loaded up and dispatched, the officers' nurses then set out from headquarters. There are over twenty of these highly skilled and trained "sisters" available, and, like the rest of the helpers of the Ambulance Column, they are distinguishable by the Red Cross uniform they wear—a big, flat blue cap, and long blue serge coat, with the red cross on the right arm. They carry with them a haversack containing emergency medical stores, smelling salts, and so on, and also a freshly filled slung water-bottle.

The main work—it is voluntary and gratuitous—of the Ambulance Column is to meet all the military hospital-trains in London, and to take charge of their freights of broken humanity. It met the first train which carried wounded soldiers back from the war to London—that was at Waterloo Station, on August 20th, and it has met every train since. Although over 22,000 officers and men have been met and succoured so far.

Exactly what happens when a hospital train is on its way to town is this. The Medical Service Department of the Horse Guards rings through to the Ambulance Column. They say where and when the train is due, how many officers and how many men it is bringing, and how many of them are stretcher cases, and how many "sitting" cases.

The motor-cars used for conveying the wounded men from railway station to hospital or home, as the case may be, have also to be called upon when a telephone call from the Horse Guards sets the wonderful machinery of the Ambulance Column in motion. Every car used is lent to the Column free of all charges, and here is a chance for those who would like to help in the magnificent work of meeting the men who have risked all for their country, to do so.

Roughly, 100 cars and ambulances a day are required, and although several big London garages and many private owners have been—and will continue to be—most generous in lending cars, the supply of both cars and drivers must be greater if the work of the Column is not to be handicapped.

"We want to have the call on at least 400 cars," said Mr. Lancelot Dent, who, with his wife, is responsible for this amazing organization. "We shall be grateful for every additional car which we can place upon our list, to be called up if needed."

"Motorists who do not own cars can help us, too. There is a shortage of drivers, so far as we are concerned, and any man who can skilfully drive a car in London traffic will be most welcome. We can find plenty of work for good drivers. If owners of cars, or drivers, would like to help us, they should write to me at 83 Westbourne Terrace, Paddington, or else ring me up there—Paddington 6054."

"So strenuous is the work of the Ambulance Column that at one exceptionally busy period, Mr. Dent and his wife did not go to bed for 60 hours; while for the past eight months neither he nor Mrs. Dent has been off duty for more than ten hours at a stretch. They sleep "on the end of a telephone wire," so to speak.

One of the minor, but none the less important and difficult, sides of the Column's activities lies in returning lost kit to wounded men. Sometimes when a man comes off the train his kit gets mixed up or mislaid with some one else's, and presently there comes the task of bringing kit and owner together again.

The next thing done is to load an omnibus with blankets, pillow-cases, hot-water bottles, and Thermos flasks (filled with milk), and get it off to the station at which the train arrives. There is an enormous room at the headquarters of the Ambulance Column which is literally piled high with blankets and pillow-cases, and the "sorting and folding of them on their return after use is a matter of infinite labour of love.

So is the washing; and but for the splendid self-sacrificing spirit of patriotism which has been shown by a small band of working women the expense of washing would be enormous. But the blankets are taken and washed by laundresses in their own free time, while some of the maids employed in the neighbouring houses to the headquarters of the Ambulance Column have banded together to take turns in washing the pillow-cases.

This is frequently a matter of considerable difficulty, for although it may be perfectly true that certain articles belong to, say, Private Jones of such and such battalion, to track down Jones himself means to make inquiries at a dozen or more hospitals.

However it is done—like everything else this wonderful organization sets out to do.

corded on his card, which is filled in and kept by the Ambulance Column.

The efficient bravery of the wounded is little short of amazing; they hate to cause any fuss, and many of them are almost apologetic at not being able to help themselves.

Cigarettes, and the cool, clean, white pillows provided for them are the things that delight them most. However ill or badly wounded a man may be he will generally manage to smoke a cigarette; while the "feel" of a pillow is a sheer delight to the majority of the "cot" cases. The eagerness with which many a poor stricken fellow sinks into his pillow is intensely pathetic.

There have been some almost dramatic incidents in the work of the Ambulance Column. On one occasion two wounded soldiers were placed in one of the big motor ambulances which are used in this wonderful railway station collection and distribution of human beings. They were lifted in, one after the other. Suddenly one of the two looked down.

"Joe!" he cried. "Hullo, Joe—is it you, isn't it?"

They were brothers who had not seen each other for five years, and although each knew the other was at the front, they had not met there. One had come over from India with his regiment, the other had joined here.

"So strenuous is the work of the Ambulance Column that at one exceptionally busy period, Mr. Dent and his wife did not go to bed for 60 hours; while for the past eight months neither he nor Mrs. Dent has been off duty for more than ten hours at a stretch. They sleep "on the end of a telephone wire," so to speak.

One of the minor, but none the less important and difficult, sides of the Column's activities lies in returning lost kit to wounded men. Sometimes when a man comes off the train his kit gets mixed up or mislaid with some one else's, and presently there comes the task of bringing kit and owner together again.

This is frequently a matter of considerable difficulty, for although it may be perfectly true that certain articles belong to, say, Private Jones of such and such battalion, to track down Jones himself means to make inquiries at a dozen or more hospitals.

However it is done—like everything else this wonderful organization sets out to do.

More than eight thousand German-Americans at a meeting in Baltimore, in a resolution passed by the German Catholic Union, placed themselves behind President Wilson in his conduct of the situation with Germany. The resolution, which is addressed directly to the President, reads: "While proud of our German ancestry we know only one flag, the flag of our country, and we tender you, the standard bearer, our undivided loyalty. We have every confidence in your cool judgment, honest purpose, and brave manhood and are convinced that you would rather be right than President. That God may guide you is the prayer of the German Catholic Union of Baltimore."

We congratulate Lance-Corpl. Thos Connors, of the Newfoundland Regiment, on his receiving a Commission as Master of a trawler operating in the North Sea. According to letters received from Stub's Camp by the last English mail, we learn that Capt. Connors came second out of a class of forty-two candidates who were aspirants for such positions. Capt. Connors was for many years chief officer on Bowring Bros. coaster Portia, and also made several trips as captain of that ship. His many friends in the city and elsewhere will be pleased to hear of his new appointment, and will wish him success in the work he has undertaken.

Boxes Containing Revolvers

But were Labeled Bread and Were Bound for Germany.

On the Italian Frontier, via Chiasso, to Paris, May 24—Two hundred large packing cases from Barcelona, Spain, bound for Germany, recently were disembarked at Genoa. Labels on the boxes indicated that they contained foodstuffs.

The German Consul at Genoa made great efforts to facilitate the despatch of the cases to Germany.

Porters in moving the cases broke one of them open and from it fell several heavy packages. On examination it was found that the cases instead of foodstuffs, contained thousands of revolvers.

INCREASE OUTPUT 1,000 TIMES.

London, June 7.—The output of shells in Great Britain could be increased a thousand times if cast iron instead of tensile steel for shell cases, following the German example, were used, according to James Keith, a well known mechanical engineer, in a letter to the Post. He says this would enable every small foundry in the Kingdom to manufacture shells in great quantities at a fraction of the present price, as no special or expensive machinery is required.

Lord C. Beresford at the Front.

Week With French Army—Where We Have 1,000 Guns We Ought to Have 5,000.

Paris, June 1.—Lord Charles Beresford returned to Paris to-day after a week's motor car tour on the eastern French front, in splendid health and spirits. His journey extended to recovered Alsace. He said:

"Great courtesy was shown to me by all the generals. I was allowed to see a parade of the finest troops of France—magnificent men, marching along full of good spirits, very like men of my nation, the Irish, in that respect. All the officers and men had a look of grim determination. After the parade and the band had played the National Anthem I had to say something. I said, 'Now I've seen your Alpine chausseurs, all I can say is, Pauvres Boches!—Poor Boches.' It was a short speech, but it 'went well,' and has gone all down the line. Every one was much amused by it.

"I saw many other regiments and places I must not name. I heard German shells and saw remarkable evidences of the power and accuracy of their guns. There is no doubt that this is an artillery war. Where we have one thousand we ought to have five thousand guns. There is no doubt as to the final result, but we must keep at it and be prepared for anything.

How He Was Missed.

"At one place the Germans sent a Taube to bombard my house. It missed and killed a poor woman a few doors away. The same night, after I left, they made a second attempt. The airman swooped down and dropped two bombs just outside the door. The explosion covered the face of the house with mud and drove in the windows, the glass filling the bed I had slept in. The French authorities were of opinion that the attempt was the deliberate result of information by a spy."

Lord Charles Beresford treated the matter as a compliment and said: "I must write to the Emperor and tell him what I think. I know him well. I stayed twice with him and also motored with him to many places in England. I knew him when he was quite a boy. I never thought he would turn out such a bad fellow."

In the course of his tour Lord Charles Beresford was introduced to Sister Julie, a heroine of the war, who nursed the wounded while her village was being burned, saved her patients from having their throats cut, defied the German colonel, and stopped further burning.

Lord Charles Beresford has high praise for the work of the British Ambulance Committee. "I found our 250 men working, under strict French discipline, under dangerous conditions. I saw wounded brought in from the firing line and heard their grateful remarks. I was delighted with all I saw, but must refrain from detailed description, having regard to the military situation."

A NOTE OF WARNING. Said a distinguished surgeon who has been at work in the war hospitals for the last three months, "Day by day, it comes over one what little use we make at home of this splendid human material, and I shall go back determined to do what I can to give this man and the class he comes from something to lose and something to work for when they have done fighting."

WOMAN IN TERRIBLE STATE

Finds Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Capo Wolfe, Canada.—"Last March I was a complete wreck. I had given up all hope of getting better by living any length of time, as I was such a sufferer from female troubles. But I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am in good health and have a pair of twin boys two months old and growing finely. I surprised doctors and neighbors for they all know what a wreck I was."

Grand Opportunity For Farmers and Horse Owners.

Owing to the wastages of war, scarcity in the horse supply is in prospect for years to come. The farmer was never presented with a better chance for turning his mares to good account, alike to himself and to the country.

There is little outlay until the foal is weaned. The mare can continue to do her allotted share on the land, and for many years the demand for an animal serviceable either for draught or carriage purposes will be greater than ever.

For the embodiment of quality and substance the horse breeder is referred to the Imported English Coaching Stallion
