WHEN LOVE Came Too Late.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

A Prisoner and His Visitor.

"In Wainford jail, miss," replied Bessie, piteously. "He has been there ever since—ever since the day of the wedding—"

"And the murder!" breathed Olivia.

"He is shut up there with no friend to help him, while the guilty man is free!" Her eyes flashed, and she drew a long breath of repressed and passionate indignation. "Is there no one to help him—no one trying to save him?"

Bessie shook her head.

"I don't know, miss. They say that no one can help him, unless he will help himself."

Olivia thought for a moment, then she sat up with a strange expression of resolution in her eyes.

"Bessie, I must see him."

Bessie started and stared at her.

"You, miss! Oh, how can you! They will not let him come out to you!"

"No, I must go to him," said Olivia, quietly.

"To him—to the prison!" exclaimed Bessie. "Oh, miss, you cannot! The squire—Mr. Bradstone—would not permit it!"

Olivia's lips twitched at the sound of her husband's name.

"They must not know," she said, slowly and thoughtfully, as if she were earnestly considering the question; "they must not know. Stop, Bessie—for Bessie, aghast at the proposal, was about to remonstrate—"I have made up my mind. If all the world said I should not see him, I would contrive to do so. In Wainford jail!" She put her hand to her brow. "That is Colonel Summerford's. He would do anything for me; he will not refuse to let me see him."

Her hands began to move restlessly, and she glanced at the clock with wistful impatience.

"Oh, no, no; not to-day, miss," she pleaded Bessie. "You are not strong enough; you will be ill again, and—oh, not to-day, dear, dear Miss Olivia!"

"I am quite strong," said Olivia, rising and stretching out her hands. "How do I know that to-morrow may not be too late? We will go this afternoon—yes, this afternoon."

"But what can you do, miss?" gasped Bessie, who knew that when her mistress had made up her mind any further remonstrance would be useless.

Olivia sighed heavily.

"I do not know," she said, looking from side to side with a troubled expression in her eyes. "I cannot tell till I see him. I shall know then!"

"Oh, dear!" breathed Bessie. "I am so afraid; you are so weak still."

"I am strong enough to walk to Wainford and back to help—him," came the low but quick response. "But there is no need for that. Go down and order the brougham; say that I wish to go out for a drive—that I will have no one but you with me. No one need know where we are going. Afterward, I do not care who knows."

Then, as Bessie still stood hesitating and trembling, she turned upon her almost fiercely.

"Did he stop to think of the consequences when you were in danger? Have you forgotten that?"

Bessie's face went crimson, and she flung up her hands before it; then, her face quite pale again, she looked at Olivia with a strange, intense reproachfulness, and left the room.

At three o'clock, Olivia, leaning on Bessie's arm, went down the stairs. Notwithstanding her assertions, she felt very weak, and her limbs seemed to quiver and tremble. The brougham was at the door, and the squire stood ready to help her in, with a couple of wraps on his arm.

"Are you sure you are strong enough, dear?" he asked, anxiously. "And will you not let me come with you?"

She put her arm around his neck and kissed him.

"No, dear; Bessie and I are going alone. Don't be anxious; I am getting quite strong again now. Tell James to drive round the park."

The squire wrapped the shawls round her tenderly, and the brougham drove off.

Olivia leaned back with her eyes closed for some minutes, but when the lodge had been left behind she sat up with a new life and eagerness in her eyes.

"Tell him now to drive to the jail," she said.

Bessie gave the order, and the coachman, after a moment or two of inert astonishment, turned the horses' heads.

The brougham pulled up at the prison, and Olivia made ready to get out.

"Shan't I ask the colonel to come to you, miss?" asked Bessie, who was white with anxiety.

Olivia shook her head.

"No," she said. "It would be easier for him to refuse while I am sitting here; it will be more difficult—oh, I will make it possible for him to do so, once I am inside his office," and her voice seemed suddenly to have got back something of its old ring and firmness.

They got out, and, without knocking, Olivia opened the office door.

The colonel looked up from the desk at which he was writing, and stared speechlessly for a moment at the vision of fragile loveliness. Then he sprang to his feet and came round to her.

"Great Heaven, Miss Olivia! I beg pardon—Mrs. Bradstone. You here! What is the matter? Where is the squire?" and as he held her hand he tried to lead her gently to a chair; but Olivia stood firm, and with her thin fingers twining round his, looked at him steadily, though her heart was beating wildly, and the color coming and going in her face.

"Nothing has happened, dear Colonel Summerford, and my father is not here. I am alone, excepting for my maid. I have come to ask a great favor of you. You will not refuse me?"

"A favor?" echoed the colonel; "my dear young lady! Come out of the draught, for Heaven's sake!" he broke off, for she looked so wan and slight that it seemed to him as if a breath of air would waft her away. "I did not know you were well enough to be out. Are you? And to come here! What is it you want me to do? Of course I will not refuse you; you know that."

"Yes, I know that," she murmured, in the sweet voice which had never failed yet to reach men's hearts. "I want you to let me see Mr. Faradeane."

The colonel literally gasped for breath.

"To—to see the prisoner—Mr. Faradeane!" he exclaimed under his breath. "My dear, dear girl, you cannot be serious."

"Yes, I am serious," she murmured, in the sweet voice which had never failed yet to reach men's hearts. "I want you to let me see Mr. Faradeane."

The colonel literally gasped for breath.

her hand on his arm. "You must not do that; you must take me to him unannounced; you must not give him time or the chance to refuse to see me. Take me to him now!"

Colonel Summerford pursed his lips. "I don't know who could resist you; I can't!" he said in despair, and he held out his arm. "Mind, you are to stay a few minutes only, and the warden—"

"There must be no one with us," she said, firmly. "No one. I must be alone."

The colonel groaned.

"In for a penny, in for a pound! My dear, if I am sacked for this, you will have to keep me in my old age."

And he tried to smile. He led her along the corridor, and dismissing the warden with a nod, himself opened the cell door.

"A visitor for you, Mr. Faradeane," he said.

Olivia drew her arm from his, paused a moment to draw a long breath, then entered the cell.

"A visitor for you, Mr. Faradeane," he said.

Olivia drew her arm from his, paused a moment to draw a long breath, then entered the cell.

Faradeane was lying on the hard pallet, his face resting on his arm. He raised his head, and opened his lips as if about to speak; then he rose and stared, his eyes dilating, his arms stretched out. He had not been asleep, but had been dreaming awake, and it is possible that he thought her a vision conjured up by his infinite longing and despair.

"Olivia!" he murmured, unconsciously. "Olivia!"

She glided across the narrow cell, and held out both her hands.

"Yes, it is I!" she said, and at the sound of her voice he trembled, and his pale, worn face grew crimson.

"You here!" he said, almost inaudibly. "Why have you come? This is no place for you—a prison!"

"It is no place for you!" she retorted, and as she spoke her lovely eyes flashed into his, and her fingers closed tightly on his thin hands.

For thirty years the memory of a piece of gold-studded ore haunted Richard Greaves, a famous West Australian prospector, who had died lately. It was in Western Australia, where he arrived in 1885, that "Dick" Greaves allowed the gold fever into his veins. For two years after his arrival he prospected, off and on, for gold before its existence was definitely known in the State. He brought £600 in cash to Western Australia, and the greater part of that money was spent in prospecting work. It was a sample of stone named Beare's stone, had sent him on his wanderings. He was shown the stone, among others, shortly after his arrival in the State, and he tested it, and thereupon decided to find Beare and locate the place where the stone could be obtained. He never found Beare, nor did he find any more of Beare's stone.

To find gold in any stone, however, Greaves and his companion, Ted Faine, went out on their lonely prospecting trips. Success was denied them on several expeditions, but in October, 1887, they were rewarded, for in that month they discovered the first gold.

The story of the great find is simple, and told in his own words, is as follows: "As water was getting scarce, and the country very dry, our work on that trip became a quest for water instead of gold. We got to a clay pan, but the water was thick and slimy. We had to get to and pull the dead kangaroo out. We decided to leave the dry and take the horses and test the country round. It was the best bit of country we had seen for prospecting, and so we struck it. Ted Paine struck a flake with a speck of gold in it. To find where it came from was the next move. On October 22nd I came upon the reef, and we took a lot of stone out with gold hanging to it." From that beginning the mining industry sprang into first-rate importance.

Every morning John, the granger, looked with sadness on his corn, for it was in deadly danger, by the hot winds seared and torn. Through the weary weeks he'd tilled it—only nightfall made him stop—hoping by his toll to build it into something like a crop. It was perishing for water, and the heavens leaked no more; every day was fiercer, hotter, than the day that went before. And it seemed to John the granger, as he watched his corn crop go, that henceforth he'd be a stranger to all things but grief and woe. But when once suspense was ended, and he knew the crop was gone, "Next year's crop may well be splendid, and I'll bank on that," said John. "Two bad years don't come together—that would be too fierce, gads-zooks! So next year we'll have such weather as we read about in books." Thus the buoyant, hopeful mortal rises when the worst is known, to surprise you with a chuckle when you're looking for a groan.

It was perishing for water, and the heavens leaked no more; every day was fiercer, hotter, than the day that went before. And it seemed to John the granger, as he watched his corn crop go, that henceforth he'd be a stranger to all things but grief and woe. But when once suspense was ended, and he knew the crop was gone, "Next year's crop may well be splendid, and I'll bank on that," said John. "Two bad years don't come together—that would be too fierce, gads-zooks! So next year we'll have such weather as we read about in books." Thus the buoyant, hopeful mortal rises when the worst is known, to surprise you with a chuckle when you're looking for a groan.

Every morning John, the granger, looked with sadness on his corn, for it was in deadly danger, by the hot winds seared and torn. Through the weary weeks he'd tilled it—only nightfall made him stop—hoping by his toll to build it into something like a crop. Ladies' Coats, BLAIR'S

FOR FALL AND WINTER NOW SHOWING AT

Our Values are Absolutely the Best Obtainable.

This year's style in Coats is distinctive. The Coat with the flare (or wide) skirt is the mode. Coats this year are either without belts or come with a half belt effect. This is quite different from last season's Military Coat, which had a belt all round and was much tighter in the skirt.

Despite increasing cost of Coats, through rising prices of materials, and the fashions demanding more cloth in each, we are enabled to offer you the NEWEST GOODS at the LOWEST PRICES. This we are enabled to do by our early contracts and also by our moderate margin of profit, which has built up such a successful coat business, as it is well known our values are the best. Our prices are:—

$4.90, 5.90, 6.90, 7.90, 9.50 and upwards.

We are also busy opening a full selection of

Misses', Children's and Infants' COATS, which you can depend will be the best values procurable.

Henry Blair

Have just opened our new Spring Suitings! English Worsteds and Irish and Scotch Tweeds.

Notwithstanding the scarcity of the woollens and the drawbacks in freights, we are able to show as good a selection as before the war. The latest in cut, the best in make. Write for samples and self-measuring cards.

LORD ESHER AND THE KAISER.

Lord Escher's protest against our being "caught a second time in the meshes of sleep" by the German Government is of the more significance when we remember the special opportunity this writer has possessed for knowing what arduous attempts were made to weave those meshes on the first occasion. In the early winter of 1907 the German Emperor visited this country, made a "special" speech to the citizens of London at the Guildhall, and was an honoured guest of King Edward at Windsor. Lord Escher at the time was not only Deputy Constable of Windsor Castle, but a member of the Committee of Imperial Defence; and it was in the latter capacity that the Kaiser sought to engage him in discussion on our naval programme and defences. He, eventually, did not prove as amenable to Imperial "soft sawder" as appears to have been expected, and the Emperor thereupon fastened upon the first named capacity to build on it a deliberate insult towards him, which he embodied in a notorious letter to the late Lord Tweedmouth, then First Lord of the Admiralty.

QUALIFICATIONS FOR A NAVAL ADVISER.

It happened that those acquainted with the current gossip of the German Court were especially amused that the Kaiser should so far have forgotten one at least of his own experiences to express to Lord Tweedmouth his "doubt" whether the supervision of the foundations and drains of the Royal palaces is apt to qualify somebody for the judgment of naval affairs in general." Report at Potsdam had it that at the height of one of the gravest of his various "Chancellor" crises—that of the dismissal of Caprivi from the position to which he unexpectedly had been called on the dismissal of Bismarck—the Kaiser exclaimed at the Imperial luncheon table, "Here is a pretty state of things! This city of —" (naming a small Rhine town) "petitioning to build sewers, and proposing to empty the refuse into the river just above the chief bathing establishment! Of course, nobody in the Home Office saw the terrible mistake, and it took me four hours to correct the drawings and suggest a better plan." That was nearly forty years before the gibe in the contemptuous Tweedmouth letter; but the contemporary comment of a German court chronicler is interesting now: "Both ering about the sewage of a secondary town while the empire is quaking to the throes of a crisis is a phenomenon of rapid thought, or an anomaly born of the passion to play providence."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

who came home from Bolivia to join the British Army 13 months ago. He had travelled over a great part of South America, and he described the methods of the Germans in keeping alive their nationalism. In the most remote places they had their "colony," they maintained "circles," displayed the German flag a good deal, held German concerts, lectures, and social gatherings; started German churches, schools, and periodicals; had Consuls everywhere, and kept up constant communication with the Home Government and home institutions. On the other hand, British people away from the large towns in South America, he said, seldom gave heed to such things. They went their own way, were "swallowed up" in the countries they had settled in, and generally speaking had no national cohesion or machinery for keeping them in touch with their own country.

THE MARTYR OF TRENTO.

Italians in London have in these days a remarkable sense of cohesion, centered in the consciousness of nationality. That spirit was manifested on August 28th in the meeting which assembled to pay a patriotic tribute to the memory of Captain Battisti, whom the Austrians executed. Battisti personifies the feelings of the Italians living under the sway of the Hapsburgs, and their longing to be incorporated in the kingdom of Italy. He was one of their leaders, and they elected him Deputy for Trent in the Austrian Parliament. War broke out. Battisti followed the promptings of his heart, and renounced his allegiance to the Emperor Francis Joseph in order to take his place in the Italian army. He fought; was wounded, and captured by the Austrians. They hanged him. His story has moved Italy from Piedmont to Sicily. The war is welding that country together, and is compelling the great work of the Risorgimento by endowing it with common sacrifices, traditions, and legends of glory. It is consecrating the idea of unity. Historically the weakness of Italy has been the predominance of the local sentiment at the expense of the national. Now "La Grande Patrie," to use Victor Hugo's phrase, is making its full appeal, and this in no sense need dull the attachment to "La Petite Patrie." The fate of Battisti has fired Italy from end to end, and the Italians abroad have caught the spirit animating their countrymen at home.

EXPERIENCES OF THE GIRL CONDUCTORS.

The girl conductors on the London buses have now nearly completed six months' service. They are looking even jollier than they did when they started, and they have certainly become very popular with their public, for they are polite, considerate, and without favor or fear. They talk very happily about their work, and say that people as a rule are very nice to them—especially the soldiers—but they still draw a distinction between the ordinary passengers and those they meet "east of the Mansion House," in other words in London's East End, for in those greyer districts, they say, the passengers sometimes talk to them very roughly. In other districts they have a good time, and while there does not seem yet to have been any really romantic story of their adventures—any do they look out for persistent admirers to join the "bus" at stated hours, as they say happens on the Manchester trams,—they get many little gifts of flowers and confectionery from appreciative friends. A good many of the girls, who joined at first have given up the work because it was too hard, but the survivors say that if they can stand the first few days, they get used to the driving and talking, and soon adapt themselves to it without any fatigue finding it, indeed, less trying to move about than to sit down. One girl from a little county town who had been too timid to ride on top of a bus when she first came to London, expecting it to run into everything it met, spoke delightfully of her work, especially when she was on routes that took her from the City far into the country, and other girls said they enjoyed every minute of their days. As far as the greater part of the year was concerned, they said, bus conducting was emphatically work for women.

OUR NEW ROYAL ALLY.

King Ferdinand of Rumania is well known in England, and has several times, as Crown Prince, been a guest at Buckingham Palace and Windsor Castle. A man in the prime of life, he is physically active and one of the best shots in his country. He succeeded his uncle, King Charles, soon after the outbreak of the European War. King Charles selected him as heir-apparent nearly thirty years ago. King Ferdinand's German extraction has always been a drawback to him in Rumania, but since his accession his subjects have relied confidently on his loyalty, and their confidence is now fully justified. The Rumanian Army, which owed its present efficiency chiefly to his personal assiduity, has believed in him unwaveringly. It is important to remember that his branch of the Hohenzollerns—the Roman Catholic and non-reigning—has always been out of sympathy with the German Royal Family. Important, too, is the fact that King Ferdinand is a splendid soldier. He proved his worth before his accession as Inspector-General of the Army.

STORIES FROM THE FRONT.

Among the latest stories from the front I read one told against a major in the Leinsters. He lost his way in No Man's Land one night and stumbled into a Saxon trench. "Is this the Nth Leinsters?" he said. "No, the Nth Leinsters are over there," answered a Saxon officer, indicating the right direction with a wave of his arm. It was the same gallant Irish regiment which planned one night to draw in a fallen aeroplane which was lying half-way to the German trenches. So after dark someone crept out and tied a rope to the machine. But when the men in the trench began to tug at the rope they could make no impression for a long time. The Saxons, it happened, had had the same idea at the same moment. However, after a lot of tugging the Leinsters' rope proved the stouter, and the aeroplane was rescued as a trophy.

PRINCE HENRY AND THE ARMY.

The King's third son, Prince Henry, is seen frequently nowadays in khaki. True, it is the khaki of his school corps, but he is very keen about it. His officers say he is simply cut out for a soldier, and he is said to be longing for the time to come when he can join the Army. Meanwhile the Prince and his younger brothers are anxious to go to Balmoral, the spot of all others where they are freest and have the most amusement. The King may arrange for them to go there with their sister.

Select Medicine Carefully.

Purgatives are dangerous. They gripe, cause burning pains and make the constipated condition worse. Physicians say the most ideal laxative is Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut; they are exceedingly mild, composed only of health-giving vegetable extracts. Dr. Hamilton's Pills restore activity to the bowels, strengthen the stomach, and purify the blood. For constipation, sick headache, biliousness and disordered digestion no medicine on earth makes such remarkable cures as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Try a 25c. box yourself.

New Show Rooms

OF BISHOP SONS & CO., LTD.
The store of Messrs. Bishop Sons & Co., Ltd., formerly occupied by Z. Cox, grocer, underwent complete transformation within the past few months and in its place now stands one of the most up-to-date and classiest show rooms in the city. The new store, which has just opened, has already been visited by hundreds of patrons and some very high, though unsolicited, compliments have been extended to the owners. Elaborately furnished and neatly dressed throughout, equipped with all modern appliances and fixtures and containing right up-to-the-minute wearables which are sure to please the most capricious purchasers. The interior of the store is painted with white enamel and is shown off to great advantage with an ample supply of electric lighting and flowers. The front window is especially attractive. The store has every convenience. There is a fitting room with a triplicate mirror, a room for millinery work and an apartment for carrying reserve stock. To sum up the new store can compare favourably with anything of its kind in the biggest of cities outside, and the Messrs. Bishop are to be congratulated on their enterprise. Miss Thompson, a lady of wide experience, is in charge and she has a staff of efficient assistants.

The Balkan Riddle

Ancient Greek legend fixed the dwelling place of the Sphinx at Thebes, where she was wont to propound a famous riddle to passers-by and to devour them when they failed, as they invariably did, to solve it. Somebody may yet see in Venizelos the modern Oedipus who is to answer the riddle of Greece to-day and save his country. The solution is popularly believed to be in his hands, but he is a long time pronouncing it. The latest cabinet has no more intention than any that have gone before of being amenable to the Entente Powers or to the people it professes to represent. Perhaps the King comes in for more hard words than he deserves. He is said to have been sincere in his mistaken policy; the active and mischievous agent of the Germans is not he but Gouraris. The revolution in Crete and at Saloniki is spreading and is an indication that the people are at last rousing themselves. The elections, if they ever take place, will give them the opportunity to make their voice heard, but even if they do so the time for action, which is what the interests of Greece imperatively demand, will have been dangerously postponed.

The whole Balkan military situation is also somewhat of a riddle. It seems inconceivable that the great army under General Sarrail can be waiting upon Greece before it strikes. Yet it is waiting for something. Its left wing alone seems to be actively in earnest, where the Serbians and French are doing brilliant work. On the rest of the front nothing but artillery duels is in progress, though these of course may be the necessary preliminary to infantry fighting. Yet if a general offensive were intended it would have reached far more serious proportions before this. Bulgaria holds not merely the whole of Serbia but a large slice of Greece as well, from which no serious effort has yet been made to eject her.

True, General Sarrail may be waiting for the co-operation of Rumania, but that country's plan of campaign is not yet clear by any means. Her irruption into Transylvania means nothing for the present, so far as it is an evidence of that plan, for it represents merely an attempt to realize at once as much as possible of the ambition which impelled her into the war, and an almost voluntary abandonment by Austria of an untenable salient. It is when that salient has been eliminated and the line established roughly from Kimpolung to Orsova that we shall see what the general Entente idea is. Many assert that Austria has given such clear evidence of weakness and incohesion that she is an even better object of attack than Bulgaria. Despite the dazzling prospect of the isolation of Turkey and the possible capture of Constantinople. There are behind the Transylvanian-Carpathians three general lines of defence; if the Austrians can be driven to the last of these Hungary will be in such danger as has never before confronted it. But this will take time. If nothing else, and the situation in Dobruja is not too reassuring. The German-Bulgarians have seized a huge slice of this province, and if they do nothing else will certainly oppose strong and stubborn resistance to the much-advertised Russian drive upon Bulgaria and Turkey-in-Europe. From all considerations, therefore, the time would seem to be ripe for the Entente offensive in Macedonia, whether to effect anything itself or to make matters easier for the northern allies. And to such an offensive the co-operation of Greece would be an invaluable accession. We are not altogether justified in looking upon the political imbroglio

Killed in Action.

The general pleasure with which Newfoundlanders heard last June of the high honour being bestowed upon one of their most gallant compatriots, Captain John Mitchell, when he was awarded the Military Cross for services of a particularly meritorious kind, will be turned to sorrow as widespread at the news of his death in action. This morning his father, Mr. J. B. Mitchell, received the following telegram from the London Territorial Record Office: "Deeply regret Captain J. B. Mitchell, 8th London Regiment, killed in action September 15th." Wanting particulars, we presume he took part in the great advance of that date which won such fine advantages to the British, and that he fell in the charge at the head of his troops. Whether or not, he was killed in action and in harness. By the many who knew Jack Mitchell intimately sorrow at his loss will be keenly felt, while the regret of all will be heightened by the knowledge that he had so distinguished himself but a short time ago. It seems hard that after doing so much he could not be spared to enjoy his reward and receive in after years the gratitude and esteem of his countrymen that he had so well won. For he is his country's loss, and was so when he left his shores to begin in the sister Dominion a career of bright promise. The promise dies unfulfilled, surrendered by himself in the noblest sacrifice known to man. His memory remains and will not be forgotten. It is no inglorious temple of fame that Newfoundland's sons have raised for her, and in it John Mitchell occupies a high niche. To his parents and family the mingled sympathy and gratitude of the Island will go out.

Beginning with to-day, the weekly summary of the war by "Observer" will appear in future on Saturdays, instead of Mondays as heretofore.

Outbreak of Disease On S. S. Home

The Reid Nid. Co.'s coastal boat Home is now at Lewisporte held under quarantine, and will remain there until Oct. 2nd, and in the meantime will have all her bedding renovated. It happened that a man belonging to a northern outpost boarded the boat with the intention of going to Grand Falls, and was taken suddenly ill before reaching Lewisporte. Dr. Chamberlain, of Grand Falls, was immediately sent for and left by special train, and in company with another doctor examined the sick passenger and had him removed to the hospital at Change Islands. So far as we can learn the patient is suffering from a bad attack of typhus, the only case to be reported for several months. Drastic steps are being taken by the authorities to prevent the spread of the disease.

The Jewish New Year.

Local Hebrews Will Celebrate.

Wednesday next will mark the beginning of the Jewish New Year, lasting from Wednesday at sunset till Friday at sunset and services will be held by the Hebrews of this city, according to the Jewish rite. All stores, the proprietors of which are of Jewish persuasion, will close from Wednesday evening next till the following Saturday morning. The services to be held during the celebration will be conducted by the Jewish Rabbi, Mr. Eshler. The subjoined information concerning the Jewish New Year will be of interest to readers:

Sundown Wednesday, September 27, the first day of the Jewish month Tisri, will mark the beginning of the Jewish High Holidays. These holidays of deep religious significance, will commence with the feast of Rosh Hashanah, or New Year. The New Year will be followed by Ten days of Penitence, which reach their climax in the Day of Atonement, October 7th.

"On the New Year all the inhabitants of the earth pass before Him as sheep before a shepherd." In these words the ancient Jewish law book, the Mishna, refers to the significance of this day. It is a day of Judgment when the sins and the merits of all men are weighed by the Divine Judge. The Talmud tells that in this annual New Year's Judgment scene three books lie open before the Most High. In one book, the Book of Life, the names of the perfectly righteous, the sinless, are inscribed; the second book, the book of death has recorded in it the names of the utterly wicked; and the third book is for the ordinary "middle type" of men, in whose behalf judgment is suspended through the ten days of penitence, until the Day of Atonement when the decision is finally made and recorded.

The services for the day are especially solemn. Prayers in prose and poetry, Jewelling upon the theme of God's judgment of man, are recited and sung. The Ram's horn, the "Shofar," summoning men to prayer and repentance, is sounded in all synagogues. At the close of the service the worshippers greet each other with the words, "May you be written down for a good year."

Orthodox Jews observe many ceremonies which suggest the ideas and emotions of the day. In the home honey and fruits are eaten and the pious wish expressed "May it be Thy will to renew to us a good and sweet year." During the day orthodox Jews will go to a river, shake crumbs from their clothes, recite among other prayers the verse from Micah, "And you will cast into the depths of the sea all their sins. While orthodox Jews observe a fast for two days, September 27 and 28 this year, Reform Jews return to the ancient Palestinian custom and observe but one day.

Arctic Explorer Reaches Sydney.

Ensign Green is Here To Meet Prof. McMillan and Party — Peary Saw Mirage — News of European War Was Brought to Them by Esquimaux.

Ensign Fitzhugh Green, the U. S. Government representative with the McMillan Crockerland expedition, who returned to America, via Copenhagen, from the far north, just two weeks ago is in Sydney, awaiting the other members of the expedition who are expected to arrive here in the near future. In view of the fact that the various scientists who accompanied the expedition for the purpose of investigating Crockerland, the "dream land" which Admiral Peary declared he had seen from Cape Thomas Hubbard, its mineral deposits and its commercial or industrial possibilities, have not yet returned. Ensign Green felt that he was not at liberty to say very much about the work accomplished by these men.

Prof. McMillan who is a native of Cape Breton and in whom Cape Bretoners are especially interested, is to write a book upon the romance and fact of the expedition as its subject matter. He will also give a series of lectures on the same subject.

Explorer Reticent. Of his own experience Ensign Green is also inclined to be rather reticent. The fact that he made a sledge journey in the worst season of the year, over the precarious ice fields of the north, in order to procure food for the other members of the expedition when all were on short rations he treats lightly.

"It was hard, but just as much fun as anything one could do here," was the answer to the question, "A lot of the papers play up the story of hardships but they were not half as bad as they say and we enjoyed the work."

Ensign Green had with him a number of photographs taken in the north. One was of Mr. McMillan building a snow hut with the assistance of an Esquimaux, another of a sledge with its train of ferocious looking dogs and still another of a fjord with high barren cliffs surrounding a bay of ice. According to Ensign Green, Peary's Crockerland does not exist. He believes Peary was absolutely sincere when he stated that he had seen the mountains from Cape Hubbard but they may have been mirages.

Believes Peary Succeeded. In answer to a query regarding his belief in Peary's polar expedition, Ensign Green said that he believed Peary had come within a few miles of the Pole. It was impossible to say that he actually stood at the Pole, he may have been a few yards away but certainly not more than a few miles. Some of the Esquimaux who had accompanied Peary, had added considerably to his belief in this. Their story coinciding in all essential points with that told by the explorer on his return.

News of the War. Coming back to recent events Ensign Green said that the first intimation they had of the war, was from one of the Esquimaux who had been down to South Greenland, and they thought he must have mistaken the names and that the war was in Mexico. "Later they had received letters which confirmed the news that they found it almost impossible to believe.

No Shortage of Food. There was not at any time a real shortage of food, but at one time the party were on short rations. That was when the George B. Cluett was to bring up provisions for one year and certainly not more than a few months. Only enough for two or three months.

Visit to Kirkwall. On his return to the U. S. via Copenhagen the reality of the war was impressed upon him by the hundreds of coal patrol boats in the North Sea. The ship was taken into Kirkwall and searched but no real difficulty was encountered.

At Kirkwall, there is almost no evidence of war. The only real symbol was the harbor. Across the mouth of which was stretched a line of buoys. A tug came out from the shore and opened a passageway in this boom and the ship entered the passage was closed again. There is not a warship in sight, but around a bend in the harbor, sheltered by a kindly concealing hill, many things which the censor will not permit us to publish have happened and are happening every day.

Ensign Green has many tales to tell which it is hoped he will find time to write and publish in book form, sometime. At present, readers of the Post must thank him for the above few remarks which are interesting coming as they do from a member of an enterprise that even the European war could not wholly overshadow.

LONDON SUMMARY.

LONDON, To-day.

On the Somme front in France the French and British forces again have taken the offensive and have been rewarded with additional gains. General Haig's men made progress toward Bapaume, while General Foch's soldiers who apparently have begun another effort to eject the Germans from Comblès and its salient. The Entente line north of the Somme also met with success following the checking of a German attack southeast of Comblès between Leprieux Farm and Ramcourt at the end of the French part of the Entente line which almost encircled the town. The French undertook local operations on the outskirts of Comblès itself and organized and defended a house captured. Several trench elements were occupied in these enterprises and 140 prisoners taken. General Haig's troops straightened out their line between Martignipish and Piers, a distance of about one mile, by taking two lines of German trenches. The British front there now runs on a direct line north of the two villages. London also records an improvement in other positions on the British front. It is announced officially in Paris that the number of prisoners taken by the Anglo-French forces on the Somme from July 1st to Sept. 18 aggregated something over 55,800; of these 34,000 fell into the hands of the French. Berlin reports no activity on the whole western front. German and Roumanian reports as to the progress or result of the battle in Dobruja conflict. The contradiction of the announcement from Bucharest that the forces of the Central Powers were falling back, Berlin declared that Field Marshal Mackensen has by an encircling movement broken the resistance of the Roumanians and Russians and compelled them to retreat. Berlin says that strong Roumanian forces were repulsed southwest of Teprasiari, 14 miles southwest of Constantza on the Black Sea Coast. Berlin and Vienna admit a reverse in the Carpathians and the Russian capture of the summit of the Smotrovo height, which previously had changed hands many times, but declare that Russian attacks in Volhynia and southern Bukovina were checked. West of Intsk in Volhynia the Germans again repulsed Russian attacks, capturing 750 prisoners and several machine guns, according to Berlin. Russian assaults in Galicia north of Sebrow and in the region of Dornawators on border of Bukovina and Roumania were frustrated. Serbian and French troops continue to make progress in Northwestern Macedonia, the Serbians advancing in the Broda River region and the French pushing forward north of Florina toward Monastir. A Bulgarian attack on Zborzky was checked by the Entente forces. Berlin and Sofia report no activity in Macedonia. Boy's Narrow Escape From Drowning.

A ten year old youth while romping around the King's wharf this morning fell overboard. His screams for help were heard by a boatman nearby named Robert Ratchford, who rescued the lad in the nick of time. The youngster had a narrow escape from being drowned. Daily children can be seen on the King's Wharf 'tom cod' fishing, jumping in and out of boats and doing other "stunts" and the wonder is that a fatality does not happen. Parents should warn their children and keep them away from danger.

THE DIMPLE.

What is more fascinating than a dimple? All the mischievousness of a nature, all the merriment of a disposition, all the subtle coquettishness of a woman is coyly expressed in this little indentation in the cheek.

But sad to relate, Nature forgot many of us when she devised the alluring dimple. However, all hope for ever possessing one may not be abandoned.

A few moments of a day, and little patience will produce a dimple just as real and charming as any dimple that ever grew.

Whatever you are doing, reading, studying, enjoying a matinee or simply gossiping, make the moments count for more than the mere doing of one thing.

Press the blunt end of a pen holder or pencil into the cheek wherever you wish to produce a dimple, and hold it there as long as you can spare the time. At first it will be difficult to do this unconsciously, but you will be surprised to find how quickly you will be able to concentrate on your book or matinee, while the process of dimple making is going on.

A few weeks of persistent effort will reward you with a dimple that will cause envious admiration among your friends.

Mr. Gosling Writes on the Ward System.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—Tuesday of next week a plebiscite vote of the citizens of St. John's is to be taken on the question, whether or not in future, elections for the City Council shall be by Wards.

It is useless now to discuss the question of the advisability of having such a vote taken, but it is I think very important that so far as possible the electors should know what they are voting about.

It is not by any means such a simple proposition as it may appear for, as a matter of fact, it is a fundamental principle of City Government and has a bearing upon every phase of city life.

The Municipal Board, which was appointed for the purpose of framing a Charter for the better government of the city, gave this matter its closest study. Again and again it came up for discussion and always it was decided, almost unanimously, that the Ward System was an evil influence in municipal government and consequently the Charter now before the Legislature is built upon the supposition that the elections will be "at large" and not "by wards."

The idea at the base of the Ward System is that the representative of the ward is to look after the interests of one particular locality, and one can be sure that the electorate will see to it that their representative does look after his ward. The interests of the city as a whole will be continually found at variance with the interest of a particular locality, and a Council under the Ward System must continually find that if he wishes to be elected in his ward he is unable to do what he knows to be best for the city.

Each Councillor under the Ward System will be called upon to get all sorts of petty jobs attended to, a drain, a sidewalk, a crossing, a gully, a section of road, with the result that all large constructive work for the city will be neglected, the time and energies of the staff and the funds of the city will be wasted on unimportant matters, and the city will never be improved.

I beg the electors of St. John's to take a large view of the city. Do not worry so much about your own particular street, but give your representatives a chance to deal with each problem in turn as it may affect the whole and not the little portion. In the course of time it will all be attended to and effectively and economically improved. We will never get anywhere if every Councillor has to depend on his re-election upon getting the little jobs of his ward attended to.

Another pressure that will be brought to bear upon the ward representative is to induce him to condescend to all sorts of wrong doing. To permit houses to be built where they ought not to be built, to allow persons the assistance of the Small Homes Sewerage Act who should not get it, to stop legal proceedings against those who owe water rates, or to stay prosecution of those who defy the laws of the city. It is not easy to withstand appeals of this sort when one represents the whole city, and it must be plain to everybody that the smaller the electoral district the greater will be the pressure.

Another evil resulting from the Ward System is what the Americans call "log rolling." The "you-scratch-my-back and I'll scratch-yours" policy. The bargaining of a vote for a light on Pennywell Road, for a vote for a new sidewalk in Hoytestown, producing waste and extravagance.

In a great big city, wards are a necessity but in cities of under, say, 150,000 inhabitants the Ward System is an evil without any redeeming feature. I have seen the argument advanced that men of a better stamp would be more likely to offer themselves for election under the Ward System. But surely this is the most upside down argument, for it is obvious that a man may get the support of a small section who would stand no chance with the city as a whole, and therefore it has become an axiom of politics that the larger the district the more prominent will be the representative. There are thousands of men who can worthily represent a district of Newfoundland, but if someone to represent Newfoundland as a Colony is required, the choice will be narrowed to perhaps half a dozen.

There is another important matter to be considered. The Charter provides for a continuous Council, one half of the members retiring every two years, thus securing for the city the services of men with some experience all the time. I believe this to be a very important section and one likely to be of great benefit to the city, but this system cannot be worked scientifically under the Ward System unless there are at least two representatives for each ward, which would necessitate a Council of twelve which would be cumbersome and unnecessary. The reason for this is obvious; for if there were 6 wards, with one representative for each ward, and three retired every two years, the result would be that one half of the city would be represented by members with experience and the other half by inexperienced men, which would be lop-sided and unscientific.

The English Act for the appointment of Local Boards recognizes this principle. The clause reads: "One-third of the number of members elected for the district, or if the district is divided into wards, one-third of the number elected for each ward (being those who have been longest in office) shall go out of office on the 15th April in each year."

But as a matter of fact, I do not believe any of these questions influence the majority of those who are advocating the Ward System. The sole reason for the agitation is the belief of a certain section that they would be more apt to secure representation if the city were divided into wards.

In my opinion this is both unnecessary and unworthy, and even if the grievance were genuine, this is not the right way to remedy it. The proper way to secure the representation of all sections of a community is by the system known as "Proportional Representation," but I do not think that St. John's is at present ready to discuss this matter.

In conclusion, I would say that I have given this question most careful study, and have consulted dozens of authorities on modern municipal government in reference to it, every one of whom condemns the principle utterly, and I am convinced that for us to adopt the Ward System would be a retrograde step of a very serious nature.

I trust, therefore, that every citizen who wishes to see St. John's a healthy, happy and beautiful city to live in, will make it his business to vote against the Ward System.

Yours truly,
W. G. GOSLING.

The War Week by Week.

By OBSERVER.

A week that has had its share of hard fighting but contained little of outstanding importance allows us to look at the situation as a whole in a general review. Every military man knew, when Roumania threw down the gauntlet to Austria, that a new development had arisen that would fundamentally affect the strategic merits of the whole position, but it was also apparent that some time must elapse before the change would make itself patent. That time has not yet quite arrived, but there are signs that it is rapidly approaching.

Turning first to the West front, which is still the most important and always will be, we may remark at least two facts of much significance. One, although this is really to be seen elsewhere, is that Hindenburg has undoubtedly added in some way to the strength of all the Eastern armies and stiffened their resistance. Whether this has been done by means of reinforcements drawn from the West is not of course, known, but it is likely to be partly true. Turkey undoubtedly has been pressed into service; we learn of Turkish troops fighting as far from home as in the Riga region. If the German line in the West has been at all thinned, it will soon enough be apparent, and cannot fail to be of value to us. The other fact—though it is only a great possibility—is that both British and French are meeting with less and less effective resistance. This is not at all likely to be due to the weakening of the man power that faces their offensive; in fact, this has been proved actually to have increased of late. It may be due partly to the better position which the Allies have won after so long fighting for it, and the higher ground on which their guns are now posted. But it is most probable that it is due also to another and more gratifying cause—the piercing at last of all the most formidable and elaborately constructed German defences in many places. Aerial observation has found this to be so, or it is so reported, and it is no more than we should expect. From Marcourt, where the French started, to Bouchavesnes, where they are now established, is more than six miles, and it cannot be supposed that the same strong, deep and massively fortified trenches are found so far back as this.

If this is so, all the elements of the position point to a retirement, by the Germans before long. Combes is already virtually useless; Peronne is very seriously threatened; while the position south of the river, because of the French started, to Bouchavesnes, where they are now established, is more than six miles, and it cannot be supposed that the same strong, deep and massively fortified trenches are found so far back as this.

In this so, all the elements of the position point to a retirement, by the Germans before long. Along the Balkan front, the outstanding events are the progress of the Serbians against the Bulgarians south of Monastir, and the defeat of Von Mackensen in Dobruja. The former is a prelude of good augury to the Salonki drive, which is yet to come off; the latter removes a serious menace to Rumania, a coup which very nearly came off. The most expert observers are of the opinion that Rumania will halt her advance into Transylvania when she has established a strong line that could be held against a possible counter-invasion, and then devote her energies, with Russia's, to Bulgaria. Mackensen's drive was a clever manoeuvre to take advantage of Rumania's preoccupation to deal her a stunning blow from behind, but it has failed in time and importance—but from behind the protection of their great trench defences. This may not happen for some time to come, but it is plain that the joint advance cannot be carried much further without bringing it about. The Allies are here doing splendid work in holding so many divisions of the enemy before them, but they have a far greater and more positive aim than that in view, and it may be nearer fulfilment than so long fighting for it has led us to imagine.

The struggle on all the Eastern fronts is growing in intensity, and something big is bound to happen ere long. The Italians have scored a success at the northern end of the Carso plateau, where we indicated that they would probably first resume the serious offensive when ready for it. The capture of Gorizia must have involved a huge expenditure of ammunition, which has had to be made good. General Cadorna, though we have only nigardly reports, has evidently begun the great attack upon Isonzo, and already there are rumours of the abandonment of Trieste. This is of course premature, for the Austrians will fight strenuously to keep the Italians back, but they will not long be denied. Once they can break the strong Austrian centre, Trieste will be theirs, its conquest being merely a matter of time.

Along the whole Russian front fighting has taken place, which has on the whole been favourable to the Germans. In the Lutsk region and before Halicz they claim to have repulsed the Russians with great losses to the attackers, but have progressed a gain to them in the Carpathians. Russia has plainly aimed less at specific points, by means of concentrated attacks, than at a general pressure along the whole front with the purpose of keeping the German forces out of the place that needs them most, the Balkans. Rumania, after brilliant progress through Transylvania, has at last met with a check, but neither the progress nor its arresting need be taken at face value. Paradoxical as it may seem, the Rumanian advance is probably as much to the liking of Austria as of Rumania, for the great Transylvanian elbow that projects into Rumania and is flanked by it is much too dangerous and large a salient for exhausted Austria to hold. Hence the weak resistance she has made, a resistance which will stiffen when the proper line of defence is reached.

In the Balkans proper, the outstanding events are the progress of the Serbians against the Bulgarians south of Monastir, and the defeat of Von Mackensen in Dobruja. The former is a prelude of good augury to the Salonki drive, which is yet to come off; the latter removes a serious menace to Rumania, a coup which very nearly came off. Say, how shall the Sea-Kings,
Who know the white death
Of the iceberg and fog-wreath,
Yield up their last breath?

They were bred in the tempest
And steeped to salt lips
In the sea's noble perils,
The glory of ships.

They have scanned in the heavens
The script of the stars,
And learned the wild music
That sings in the spars.

They have challenged the cyclones,
And, over and over,
Have sought the round world out
And fronted the thunder.

For their gods are like Vikings;
Though a harness of gold
Is less than a thread

Like their fathers aforeside,
Who bred them as men,
And their mothers who gave them

McMurdo's Store News

SATURDAY, Sept. 23, 1916.
Owing to a shipment having got astray, we have been out of the famous Zoetic Tonic for some time. However we have now secured a small supply to keep us going until the bulk of our stock arrives. This Tonic has many users, and seems in great measure to live up to its claims. Price $1.30 a bottle.

We have just got in a new stock of Na-Dru-Co. Sabadilla. For the purpose for which it is designed, few preparations are more certain and effective. Price 20c. a tin.

Another new arrival is Chloride of Lime in handy tins. This well known disinfectant, deodorizer and bleaching powder has one fault—that it gets damp on exposure to the air. Buying Chloride of Lime tins obviates this inconvenience. Price 10c. a tin.

This live concern, which is an enlargement of the business recently successfully conducted by P. J. Tremlett at Salmoner, St. Mary's Bay, will be operating in full swing under the new status by the end of October.

The concession grant under the new "Act to encourage shipbuilding," viz.: free entry of all material, machinery and implements, required for the construction and equipment of plant and building and equipment of vessels, and increase of bounties 100 per cent. considered in conjunction with the former success of the concern, makes it an uncommonly commendable proposition.

The Act referred to also guaranteed a dividend of 7 per cent. on monies invested.

The Drinking Troughs

Dear Sir,—Will you allow me through the columns of your paper to contradict a statement that appeared in the Council's report of Thursday night's meeting. Councillor Tait is reported for saying that truckmen were too lazy to get off their vehicles to turn on the water.

Sir, I don't think this is true as the majority of the teamsters, truckmen and cabmen in this city own their horses and are not a lazy lot of men, and work from daylight till dark for a mere existence while the Doctor and others can live in luxury.

I really think, sir, that those remarks coming from a newly elected Councillor who received a strong support from the truckmen of this city, is uncalled for, and I further contend that those drinking troughs should be kept running, as it is an every day occurrence to see a horse or dog with some disease drinking out of them.

Thanking you in anticipation, I remain,

Entente will increase their shipping facilities which already are proving valuable in making available tonnage in proportion as the Germans succeed in destroying merchant ships. The minister said as matter of course the Entente Allies would be favored and unsuspected neutral trade would be given the next consideration. The neutrals suspected of unneutral acts, he added, would not enjoy the usual facilities. Lord Robert said an answer from Britain to the American Government's protest against seizure of mails would be sent to Washington almost immediately, and that a reply to the American protest with regard to the blacklist imposed by the Allies would follow shortly.

Your Boys and Girls.

In the darker ages of motherhood, babies were literally deprived of air. To this fact may be traced part of the white plague curse of to-day. This is a fresh age stage. But this does not mean that a mother should go to extremes in supplying the air her baby needs, nor in hardening its body, as some faddists maintain. The baby should not be chilled or exposed to a direct draught, but the air in the room should be cool and pure, not hot and fetid.

In this one respect, strangely enough, the city baby has the best of the country baby. The average city house is uniformly heated by steam or furnace and easily ventilated. The country or farm house is still heated largely by stoves. One room is very hot, others very cold. The warm rooms are places of refuge for the entire family and they are kept too tight; often every window is closed tightly and the air is sadly vitiated.

SERVED UNDER TWO FLAGS.

Staff-Sergeant Patrick E. Timmins, a Veteran of the Spanish-American War, Boxer Rising in China, Boer War and the Present European War Arrived by the Florizel Yesterday.

"I am giving you this," but mind, no flourish," said Staff-Sergeant Patrick E. Timmins, of the Canadian Overseas Royal Construction Corps, to the Telegram reporter yesterday afternoon as the veteran of many wars stepped from the deck of the S. S. Florizel to the Red Cross pier after an absence of twenty years from his native land. He wore on his left breast four ribbons indicative of the four wars in which he had fought, on his features were still visible signs of the effects of poisonous gases, while both his legs had been riddled with shrapnel bullets. In answer to several questions asked by the Telegram reporter, Staff-Sergeant Timmins gave a brief account of his experiences since leaving the beautiful little village of Holyrood, C.B., when but a lad not quite fifteen years of age.

Born with a mind to roam and a desire to see the great things of the world, he quietly slipped away from home, and after varied experiences in other lands happened to be in the United States in the year 1898 when the Spanish-American War broke out. Enlisting in the American Army he proceeded to Cuba and passed through the famous battle of Santiago where the Americans gained a decisive victory over the Spaniards. After peace was declared he returned to the States and sought other employment following the sea for the next two years, when, in 1900, serious trouble between the Chinese and people of other nationalities residing in China, attracted the attention of the civilized world and finally brought on the Boxer War. Grasping the opportunity for another fight he was again with the Stars and Stripes, and proceeding to the Far East he passed through several stiff engagements. He was hardly back in America when Great Britain declared war on the Boers. Taking the first train to Vancouver he offered his services to the Canadian Army and was attached to the British Columbia Horse who in company with the Lord Strathcona Mounted Rifles did excellent work for upwards of two years in continuous fighting on the deserts and plains of South Africa. He suffered untold hardships, being for a whole week at a time with little or no water to drink and that little often stagnant. After seeing this campaign closed, the return journey to Canada was made where he received his discharge at the place of enlistment. Finished with the soldier's life he again settled down to follow the sea and for upwards of twelve years sailed in and out of many ports in many lands, being practically around the world twice. For six or eight years he commanded a steamship owned by the American Government doing special work in the Pacific Ocean, chiefly along the Alaskan Coast. Deciding to go into business for himself he purchased an auxiliary schooner and met with great success in the halibut and salmon fishery at Prince Rupert, and was rolling in the dollars when news was received that Great Britain had decided to enter the Great War against Germany and her allies, and that Canada was raising an army for the front. This was enough for our hero, so settling up his business he took the next boat for Vancouver and was immediately on arrival signed on with the Princess Patricia's Light Infantry, and in less than a week was on his way East to join the main body of his regiment which it will be remembered consisted of almost all Boer War veterans from every Province in Canada. Crossing to the Old Country the Princess Pats were the first Canadian troops to go into action. Passing through the early stages of the war, he escaped serious injury and was soon after transferred to the Canadian Overseas Royal Construction Corps, which received a severe cutting at the battle of Ypres, only four others besides himself from his Company escaping with their lives, two of whom are in hospital in England and the other two in France. Timmins received his wounds as described during this never to be forgotten battle and as a consequence was confined to different hospitals in France and England since December 25th, 1915 up to a few weeks ago when he arrived in Halifax in company with an old Boer War veteran and comrade, Pte. Thomas Fraser, of the C. E. F. Army Service Corps who was also wounded and received his honorable discharge.

A Teuton Dream.

(From the Baltimore American.)
One of the recent news cables coming from Berlin by way of Copenhagen tells of preparations for a convention to be held in Budapest in the near future, not to consider war measures nor yet peace plans, but to arrange for a great engineering enterprise. At this conference plans are to be discussed for linking up the Danube and the Rhine rivers and thus opening a through water route from the Black Sea to the North Sea, a way which it is proposed shall be through-out navigable for 1,000 ton barges and steamboats.

It is but another of the Teuton dreams, like unto the proposed through railroad line from Berlin to Bagdad. The last-named scheme was well on its way to realization when the war broke out, and, though the Far Eastern extension of this big undertaking has been blocked, temporarily at least, it is an important fact that this line through Bulgaria into Turkey is now doing business on more or less regular schedules. The linking up of the Danube and the Rhine is no new proposition, but it comes as a distinct surprise that the Central Powers should be planning a conference in connection with this purely commercial scheme at a time when seven armies from as many points of an encompassing ring are driving into or toward Teuton territory.

GERMAN PRISONERS.

PARIS, Sept. 22. North of the Somme, the French to-day captured a strongly defended house from the Germans, and took 100 prisoners, three of them officers, according to an official statement issued to-night. Elsewhere on the front there were only minor engagements. The Germans made prisoners on the Somme front by the French and British from July 1st to Sept. 15th, aggregating 55,000, of whom 54,000 were taken by the French.

BRITISH ADVANCE.

LONDON, Sept. 22. The British advanced on the front of about a mile last night in the Somme sector, south of the Ancre River. The war office announced to-day that two lines of hostile trenches had been captured. During the night we advanced on a front of about a mile, the statement says, capturing lines of hostile trenches approximately between Fiers and Martinpuich. Our front now runs approximately on a direct line north of Fiers and Martinpuich. The enemy trenches were successfully entered last night north of Arras, prisoners being taken and many casualties inflicted. North of Neuville St. Vaast a mine was blown up by us and the crater occupied.

ITALIAN ADVANCE.

ROME, Sept. 22. The Italian troops made further progress on the Trentino front, the war office announced to-day.

BRITISH WARSHIPS BOMB BULGARIAN POSITIONS.

LONDON, Sept. 22. British warships have been bombarding Bulgarian positions in the vicinity of Nichori, on the east bank of the Struma, near its mouth, northeast of Salonika, the war office announced to-day. On the left of the British position on the Macedonia front in the Doljan region, an artillery duel of increasing intensity is in progress, says the statement, which follows: On our Struma front ships of the royal navy shelled the enemy in the neighborhood of Nichori with satisfactory results. On the Doljan front there has been increased activity on both sides.

REVOLUTION SPREADING.

ATHENS, Sept. 22. Further disorders in Greek Macedonia, where the revolutionary movement has been in progress for some time, were reported to-day. In a despatch from Kozhani, a town of some 10,000 inhabitants, 56 miles southeast of Monastir, it says the Greek civil authorities have been removed from office by the inhabitants. The police chief, mayor, and military governor, with a company of the 51st regiment, are said to have joined in the uprising.

HUNS SINK TRANSPORT.

BERLIN, Sept. 22. The Admiralty to-day issued the following statement: "A German submarine on Sept. 17th sunk in the Mediterranean a completely filled hostile transport. The steamer sank in 43 minutes."

FRENCH SUBMARINE SUNK.

BERLIN, Sept. 22. The French submarine Foucaux was sunk by bombs dropped from Austro-Hungarian naval aeroplanes in the southern Adriatic, the Austrian Admiralty announced to-day. The whole crew of 29 was rescued and made prisoners.

CANADIAN CASUALTIES.

OTTAWA, Sept. 22. The casualty total of Canadians by their engagement on the Somme, now amount to 4,000, the dead numbering approximately 900. In addition to the number announced in yesterday's report, the Militia Department's reports to-day indicate that between 400 and 500 were killed, 1,790 wounded and 300 missing.

LANSING'S DENIAL.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22. Secretary of State Lansing to-day denounced as untrue the published reports that President Wilson's political advisers disagreed over the legal phases of the retaliatory legislation aimed at Britain's interferences with trade. He added that the views of the State Department regarding the legislation were not in shape to be disclosed, and that no conclusion had been reached as to the enforcement. This has been known for several days, and while no course has been determined upon by Lansing, some of the officials of the Department believe that part of the legislation is doubtful, legally, and unenforceable.

QUIT PREVAILS.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 22. On the western and Caucasian fronts there were no developments of importance, says the official statement issued to-day.

NAMED IN CASUALTY LIST.

OTTAWA, Sept. 22. "Pioneer Roll" of Bonavista, N.F., is named in the casualty list.

THE TONNAGE QUESTION.

LONDON, Sept. 22. The continuing depletion of the country's tonnage as a result of operations of the submarines of the Central Powers will be met by increased stringent measures, by which the Entente Allies design to control shipping so as to ensure it being used to the best advantage. The Allies will prevent even indirectly aiding their opponents, according to a statement made to the Associated Press to-day by Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of War Trade. Lord Robert admitted that even at the present rate of destruction, even without considering the possibility of a resumption of unrestricted submarine warfare, it meant a serious loss to the world's tonnage, and that facilities should not be extended to ships carrying goods to black listed firms. MOTOR DRIVING.
Now that the recent motor accident has been disposed of as far as blame is concerned, the time is opportune for a few general, though oft repeated, remarks on the changed conditions on our roadways brought about by the advent of motor cars of all descriptions. These fast, silent, and convenient conveyances are increasing in number very rapidly in St. John's. When they are built capable of driving at the rate of fifty or more miles per hour, they become fascinating yet dangerous toys in the hands of those who enjoy travelling at a fast rate, and even in the hands of careful drivers, a faster pace than ten or fifteen miles an hour becomes a very dangerous element in any roadway. A regular occupant of a motor car quickly realizes at what speed he is traveling. I think the limit of speed in the city is placed at ten miles per hour. It is evident to the most casual observer that this rate is exceeded every day by almost every car. It is for the authorities who back up this law of the city limits it is difficult to limit speed, yet it is notorious that a greater speed than is warranted is continually being made by motor cars. You will find that most people will agree that motor cars are driven too fast and that the infrequency of accidents is simply the result of a sharp look-out by pedestrians and the feeble detention of children in the houses or in circumscribed areas. This is not as it should be. It presupposes a superior claim of motor cars over pedestrians to the roadway, which is a false claim. It does not tend to the conservation of the common Good, which after all is the ultimate aim of all our works. The motor car is at all perfectly legitimate means of conveyance, and it has certain advantages over other means of travelling, but all its good points do not

Paint Looks Alike When It's New
You can't tell much about the quality of paint by looking at it when it is freshly applied. Colors are easy to produce, and the glisten of fresh oil gives even poor paint a temporary beauty.

But look at it a Few Years Later!
The cheap paint, that started out so bravely, has faded, cracked, and peeled. It is unsightly, and—more important still—has exposed the wood below to the destructive effect of sun, rain, wind and snow. The other, is still a good-looking, weather-tight coating, that will give years more of reliable service. There is no mystery about the reason. It lies in the fact that B-H "English" Paint is perfectly proportioned to meet Canadian weather conditions. It contains 70% of Brandram's B.B. Genuine White Lead, and 30% of Pure White Zinc, ground to such marvellous fineness that it penetrates deep into the fibre of the wood.

"ENGLISH" B-H PAINT

Being the best, it's cheapest in the end.

THE THOUGHTS OF THEOBALD.

MOTOR DRIVING.
Now that the recent motor accident has been disposed of as far as blame is concerned, the time is opportune for a few general, though of repeated, remarks on the changed conditions on our roadways brought about by the advent of motor cars of all descriptions. These fast, silent, and convenient conveyances are increasing in number very rapidly in St. John's. When they are built capable of driving at the rate of fifty or more miles per hour, they become fascinating yet dangerous toys in the hands of those who enjoy travelling at a fast rate, and even in the hands of careful drivers, a faster pace than ten or fifteen miles an hour becomes a very dangerous element in any roadway. A regular occupant of a motor car rarely realises at what speed he is running. I think the limit of speed in the city is placed at ten miles per hour. It is evident to the most casual observer that this rate is exceeded every day by almost every car. It is for the authorities who back up this law to see that it is enforced. When out of the city limits it is difficult to limit speed, yet it is notorious that a greater speed than is warranted is continually being made by motor cars. You will find that most people will agree that motor cars are driven too fast and that the infrequency of accidents is simply the result of a sharp look-out by pedestrians and the forcible detention of children in the houses or in circumscribed areas. This is not as it should be. It presupposes a superior claim of motor cars over pedestrians to the roadway, which is a false claim. It does not tend to the conservation of the Common Good, which after all, is the ultimate aim of all our works. The motor car is a perfectly legitimate means of conveyance, and it has certainly its advantages over other means of travelling, but all its good points do not ments be placed on all motor cars and motor trucks. This coupled with the specified speed limits on city and suburban roads ought to cover the matter fairly well. In passing such laws we are only following the ordinary precautions used in other countries.

MUNICIPAL FARMING.
Glasgow, perhaps the most go-ahead city in municipalisation of commodities, has two farms, one eleven miles from the city, the other four miles. The produce grown on the farm includes oats, wheat, barley, potatoes, turnips, hay and the total amount repeated last season is valued at about $65,000.00. The present hay crop is so abundant, that after the needs of the department's stud horses are met, it is estimated that there will be a surplus for sale of about 500 tons. The farms are run just as ordinary farms and have no advantages over them in exemption of any of the accounting charges of an ordinary farm. These municipal farms net a yearly profit of about $15,000.00. If we in St. John's were more enterprising it might be possible for the Council to grow enough hay even for its own use, and oats as well, instead of buying at market rates as we have to do every year. Encouragement of local industry of every kind could not better be encouraged than by our authorities showing that it is possible for us to produce more than we do, and more than anything else, show us that we should buy our own produce and thus as they say "keep our money in the country."

ABERDEEN TRAMWAYS.
The Aberdeen Town Council owns the city's tramways and the past year's working showed a profit of about $48,000.00. Of this $10,000 is allocated to the Common Good of the city and $6,000.00 carried forward for city improvements which the Council might desire in the future. It is interesting to know that while the total capital expenditure is only $1,800,000, the accumulated funds of the department have now reached $1,200,000, a remarkably good showing. I give these figures to show that city-owned tramways are capable of being run in a safe and sane manner, and prove a profit making business, which profit goes to the city as a whole, and not to a few interested shareholders.

New Skin Remedy.

Since the old-fashioned theory of curing eczema through the blood has been given up by scientists, many different salves have been tried for skin diseases. But it has been found that these salves only clog the pores and cannot penetrate to the inner skin below the epidermis where the eczema germs are lodged. This—the quality of penetrating—partially explains the tremendous success of the wonderful new liquid eczema remedy, the D. D. D. Prescription.

D. D. D. is now recognized as the only absolutely reliable eczema remedy, for it penetrates the pores, washes away the disease germs and leaves the skin as clear and healthy as that of a child.

This scientific antiseptic wash has been found to be especially effective in all forms of Eczema, Bad Leg, Ulcers, Pimples, Ringworm, Sores and Rash, Salt Rheum and all other skin diseases. One bottle will prove it to you.

Don't delay; get a bottle of D. D. D. Prescription to-day. Sold Everywhere.

Huge Sums Unclaimed.
Bank of England Has Eighty Volumes of Them.
In England alone there are scores of millions of pounds that have no one to claim them. There is scarcely a bank or a company of any description that has not in its books long lists of sums which, year after year, nobody claims, or, in many cases, is at all likely to ask for.

At the Bank of England there are eighty fat volumes bristling with figures, amounting in the aggregate to millions of pounds, all of which represent dividends for which the owners are not forthcoming.

Many of them have died without leaving a record of the stock holdings; others have left the country and cannot be traced, and in other cases the dividends have been overlooked or forgotten altogether.

When, a good many years ago, Mr. Goschen introduced his conversion scheme it was found that the unclaimed amounts almost reached the stupendous total of £8,000,000—including forty holdings exceeding £10,000 each, and one fortune of £187,598—for not a penny of which a claimant could be found. And this enormous sum of derelict gold is only about one-third of the aggregate sum deposited and lost sight of in English banks alone to-day.

Another "buried treasure" is in the custody of the Court of Chancery, awaiting those who have a title to it. Fabulous tales are told of these dormant Chancery funds, and the hundred or more millions they are supposed to represent. As a matter of sober fact they barely exceed £1,000,000, and are made up of some 3,000 sums, not one in twenty of which is within nodding distance of £1,000.

Caught in Mispec Sardine Weir— Fearful Find of Fishermen as They go out to Seine Their Weir—Killed After Titanic Struggle and Left on the Beach.
J. Hanford Stanley, of Mispec, informed The Telegraph recently that two large man-eating sharks were caught in the weirs of the Mispec weir owners, at Mispec. After a struggle lasting for several hours, both the monsters were captured and killed and towed to the beach at Mispec where they now lie. When weighed, on the shore, it was found that they would tip the scale at about 1,000 lbs. each.

The discovery was made when the fishermen went to the weirs. The fact that there were larger fish in the waters than the ordinary sardines or herring was soon made manifest and it was very quickly learned that the new comers were the much dreaded shark and of the most voracious variety. There was no use tackling them with the small apparatus at hand so help was summoned and ropes and other tackle were secured. Thus reinforced, the party returned and the fight began. It lasted for some hours but finally both monsters were captured and killed, then towed to the shore. They were laid on the beach at Thomas Creek where they will be left for a while.
