LADY LAURA'S RELEASE

—OR—
THE STORY OF A SPOILED BEAUTY.

CHAPTER XXII.

Lady Laura took more pains than she had ever done before over her toilet, much to the astonishment of Doris Newsham. Her dress, her jewels, the blush roses, were all subjects of anxious interest.

"Make me look extra well to-night, Doris," she said, with a kindly smile; "I have something to do."

And the maid glanced at her mistress in surprise.

"I could not make you look more beautiful if I would, my lady," she responded.

Lady Laura's lovely face had a delicate flush, her eyes were bright and clear; she never looked better than she did on this night.

Her ladyship had come to what she considered a very sensible determination. She resolved, if possible, to outshine her rival, to win her husband to herself by dint of her dazzling beauty and her brightness. He should not see a sad look on her face; she would be all light-heartedness and smiles. She would try to amuse him, and keep him chained by her side, even as Gladys Rane did.

She was full of this idea, and resolved that nothing should daunt her, that nothing should interfere with her purpose. She did not seem why she did not again?

She cried absolutely to trample her pain, her sorrow, her disappointment under foot, and to reveal nothing but smiles and light-heartedness.

"You look like a queen of roses to-night, Laura," the captain remarked. She looked at him with a satisfied smile.

"The strangest part of it is," she said, "that amongst them there is not one thorn."

CHAPTER XXIII.

There was a faint murmur of admiration as the beautiful mother and daughter, accompanied by the gallant captain, entered the ball-room at Lady Holte's.

Angela was soon surrounded by a small and select group of the jeunesse dorée, to most of whom she was a queen.

Lady Laura, after speaking to her hostess, crossed the room with her

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Ready and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup at home. It is simple and cheap but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get ½ ounce of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make 16 ounces. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey or corn syrup instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and seals the membrane, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and frothy cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma. Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its healing effect on the membranes. Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "½ ounce of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything less. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

and in doing so met Lady Kinloch with Gladys Rane.

The meeting could not be avoided even had Lady Laura wished it.

For a few minutes these two beautiful women who were destined to cross each other's lives so fatally, stood looking at each other, each measuring the other's strength, the one triumphing in the consciousness that she was loved, the other triumphing in the knowledge that she was a lawful wife.

Outwardly, everything was pleasant and gracious; within, were the elements of tragedy.

The men awarded the palm of beauty to Lady Laura—for few understood the dark, passionate face of Gladys Rane. It never lighted to forgive save for Vance Wynyard, and none but he knew the full beauty of the dark eyes and crimson-tinted lips. It was when the two women looked steadily at each other that the soul of each shone in their respective eyes.

"I am his wife; he is mine forever and ever!" could be read in Lady Laura's face.

"He loves me!" shone in the dark eyes of Gladys.

And then came another phrase of Lady Laura's martyrdom. Hitherto it was from a distance that she had seen her husband's devotion to Miss Rane. He was standing by his wife's side now when he asked Gladys for her programme and begged to know how many waiters she would spare for him.

It was Lady Kinloch who answered the question. She did not seem well pleased with the captain, and, setting aside his questionable conduct in showing such marked preference for her niece, Lady Kinloch considered that it was for Gladys a waste of time to flirt with a man who already had a beautiful wife of his own.

"You must not expect to monopolize my niece, Captain Wynyard," she said, in a clear voice; "Miss Rane has many friends in the room."

Lady Laura felt a glow of gratitude toward this woman, whom she had never even liked before; but the captain was not to be put down by so mild a protest. He merely bowed to Lady Kinloch, and turned to Gladys with a smile on his face.

"Monopoly is charming in such a case as this. There are plenty of waiters; may I have the first, 'La Berceuse'?"

Gladys blushed with delight under the eyes of the two who were looking on so coldly.

"You may have that and the third, the 'Manola.'"

"Better give Captain Wynyard your programme to fill at his pleasure, Gladys," said Lady Kinloch, satirically.

And the girl's dark eyes, looking at him, said plainly, "I would if I dared."

Lady Laura saw the look, and realized all that it conveyed.

Then the captain and Miss Rane went to join the dancers, leaving the two ladies together. Lady Kinloch would have made some remark as to the captain's conduct, but one look at the pale face beside her disarmed her. She never forgot the yearning expression in her companion's wistful face.

A few minutes later Lady Laura was surrounded by a little court of admirers. She remembered her resolution, and she tried bravely to carry it out; but her heart gave way, her wistful eyes turning ever to her husband, who seemed only happy when with her rival.

That night her partners wondered what had betwixt the lovely Lady

Laura. She talked, but it was easy to see that she did not take any interest in what she was saying, and her smiles were forced and cold. While she danced and conversed her whole heart and thoughts were with her husband and her rival.

Later on, as Lady Laura, tired and dispirited, was sitting out a waltz instead of dancing it, the captain came up to her.

"Lady Holte has been telling me that you are not well and are very tired, Laura—is it so?"

She remembered her resolution, and it was almost pitiful to see the effort she made to banish the pain that was gnawing at her heart. The color rushed into her fair face as she denied that she was either tired or ill. She made desperate efforts to amuse him and keep him by her side, but she saw—and the pain of it went to her heart—that he was watching Gladys Rane the whole time that he stood by her side.

"Of what use is it?" she cried to herself.

Suddenly he bent over her, and it suddenly remembering why he was there.

"If you are tired, Laura," he said, "you had better go home and retire to rest."

"Will you accompany me?" she asked.

"I will take you home; but I shall come back again," he answered. "I consider this the best ball of the season, and I do not care to leave it so early."

"Nor do I," she said.

And the captain, without further ado, turned away abruptly and went in search of Gladys Rane.

A short time afterward Angela came up to her mother, and sat down by her side.

"Mamma, darling," she said, "you look so ill, so tired and weary; many people have spoken of it."

Lady Laura looked at her daughter with a startled expression on her face.

"Do you mean that?" she asked.

"Are people really talking of me? Do they say that I look ill or unhappy?"

"Every one thinks you look ill," she answered gently.

"Do you think any one knows why?" asked Lady Laura.

"No; but, mamma darling, I know. You must do one of two things—either you must trample your trouble under foot and look your usual bright self or you must go home."

"I have tried to smother my grief, but I cannot. I must go home," said Lady Laura. "But, if I do, Angel, he will spend all his time with Miss Rane. It will be a relief and pleasure to him if I go; and the beautiful woman looked at her with such despair in her face that Angela hardly knew what to say to her. 'Think of that, Angel!' she went on. 'I believed he loved me dearly, and now it is a relief to him that I should go away and leave him to enjoy the society that he prefers so infinitely to mine. Oh, Angel, what a mockery my diamonds and roses are! He does not care for me. I—I think I will go home, Angel; I cannot stay here!'"

"I am sure it will be best, mamma," urged Angela. "Shall I tell the captain?"

"No," said the unhappy lady; and then her mood suddenly changed. "After all, I will not go. He would be pleased. I will not go. Angel. Why should I leave her to triumph over me? Why should they two spend the night so happily, and I go home to weep? He is my husband, Angel."

Turkey's Note to Allies Is Moderate in Tone.

British Traders Complain of Franco-Belgian Strangling--French Levying Toll on Germans--Russians Offer Grain for Ruhr Workers.

TURKEY'S REPLY.
CONSTANTINOPLE, March 9. The Turkish Government's reply to the Allied peace proposals arrived here by courier from Ankara to-day and was handed to the British, French and Italian High Commissioners. Copies will be delivered to the United States and Japanese representatives. The whole note is couched in most moderate language and suggests a resumption of negotiations in some European town, preferably Constantinople. The note comprises one hundred and fifteen pages. The note says there are no fundamental modifications proposed in the political clauses of the draft treaty. Turkey, however, desires the sovereignty of Castorizza, of the Southern coast of Asia Minor and the small islands dependent upon Tenedos Island, off the coast of Asia Minor. She also suggests a change in the frontier of Thrace. Regarding the economic clauses, the note proposes that clauses seventy-one and one hundred and seventeen should be disjoined from the draft and subsequently discussed. Part four of the Treaty dealing with communications and sanitary questions is accepted with slight modifications. Part five, dealing with prisoners of war is integrally accepted. As regards the regime for foreigners in Turkey the note suggests that the title of this section should read "Convention of regulations between Turkey and the Allied Powers" and insists on the same prerogatives for Turkish subjects in the United States as for foreigners in Turkey. The note states that the text of the Draft Treaty, therefore, has been modified to avoid any disposition contrary to International practice.

TURKS WILL SUBMIT NEW PROPOSALS TO-DAY.
PARIS, March 9. Turkish official circles express the belief that the new proposition regarding the Near East peace negotiations will be handed the Allied High Commissioners in Constantinople to-morrow.

RUSSIANS WOULD HELP GERMAN WORKERS.
MOSCOW, March 9. Russian Trade Unions have sent another message to Germany reiterating their offer of thirty thousand tons of grain for workers in Ruhr.

Why it is Hard to Get Men.

It needs no affidavit to convince the people that Sir Richard Squires is finding it a very hard problem to get men. Now why is this? There is food for reflection in the question. He has the government chest behind him and is in a position to promise some very fat jobs and lucrative offices. Still he is scouring the country every day and can't get men. He has offered the fine coveted position of Minister of Finance to at least five gentlemen, but not one has accepted. Surely nothing like this ever happened in Newfoundland before. Others may supply different reasons for this unique state of affairs, but these are ours. The opinion is too general and too strong that this government is exonerated all over the country. It is putridly moribund and will have to be buried out of sight the first opportunity that are invited to go to Districts know this, and there is no honor and no gain in going out to a district as a candidate for Squires, and coming back beaten badly down to the foot of the poll. They know that the Government is doomed to defeat, and no man desires the obloquy of having the attention of the whole country focussed on him by and by as the man of bad judgement, who had not enough sense and foresight to keep off a wreck. If the government had a record even as good as the worst administration that we have ever had formerly in Newfoundland, Sir Richard Squires would even then get all the candidates he wanted. They would be rushing to his standard, instead of hiding away from him. But the record of extravagance and waste of borrowed millions is so great that no decent man wants to be associated with it. Candidates are offering every day for Bennett; they are running away from Squires, because they have vision enough to see that the people are waiting to punish him.

STRANGLING BRITISH TRADE TO DEATH.
LONDON, March 9. The outcry of British merchants in Cologne against the Franco-Belgian customs barrier around the area gathers strength daily and the complaint is that British trade with Germany is being strangled to death.

PAYING ARMIES WITH REQUISITIONED MARKS.
DUSSELDORF, March 9. The French and Belgian armies of occupation are paying their expenses by means of requisitioned marks. It was announced to-day by French headquarters. More than fourteen billion marks have been collected by occupation forces, all of which will be applied towards expenses incurred since the Ruhr troop movement began just two months ago.

TORPEDO EXPLODES ON CRUISER GIBRALTAR.
MILFORD, New Hampshire, Mar. 9. Two sailors were killed and four injured, probably fatally, as a result of a torpedo explosion on the British cruiser Coventry last night.

FAMOUS COOK DEAD.
MILFORD, New Hampshire, Mar. 9. Mrs. Anna Fremich whose ability to cut the tenderest sections from a side of beef and cook so satisfactorily when she became cook at the Porter House, North Cambridge, and introduced the famous Porter House steaks died here yesterday aged 87. She became cook at Porter House after the civil war and was a native of Lowell.

Kilbride Voter.
RESENTS INSULT TO PEOPLE OF THAT VILLAGE.
Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—When in town a few days ago I was told that a report has been spread around the city by Government heeler that the majority of Kilbride men are supporters of Coakerism and will vote for the candidates of that side. I cannot too strongly express the feelings of most voters out here in their resentment of that slanderous report, and I would like the Telegram to give publication to this letter as a protest against such an attempt to belittle us.

We all know right well that poor times in St. John's City means poor times for the farmers of Kilbride, because the city is our great market for the sale of all our produce. We know that Coakerism has already ruined many of our customers, and that if there is any more political monkeying carried on by the Coaker tribe it will be one long cold day for us all, for there would be no business in St. John's, no employment, no money in circulation, and consequently no outlet for any of the produce we raise. What I say about Kilbride, I might also say with truth about the Goulds, Petty Harbor, Maddox Cove and other nearby places. The number of Coakerites in all could be counted on one's fingers, with probably a few toes added; certain individuals who get pickings out of the Government, but as for the hundreds of the voters around here there is nothing doing with them so far as Coakerism is concerned. The men who would ask us to vote for a "COAKER CANDIDATE" and expect us to do so, would only be asking us to lash our own backs, and to turn our smiling village into a waste and wilderness. There is enough of poverty and hard times in St. John's now without asking us to help increase it, and so I would ask our good friends and customers in the city not to believe those false stories about us. THE BENNETT GOVERNMENT and good times is what we want, and you may count the Kilbride men, and also the men of the Goulds, Petty Harbor and Maddox Cove, as on this popular side and so will vote when election day arrives.

Yours truly,
KILBRIDE VOTER.

The Great Crime.
To defraud a fisherman or workman of one cent of his earnings is a peculiarly atrocious crime. Yet that has been done to the West Coast through the insistence of the Mad Mullah of the North in putting through the infamous Fish Regulations! A prosperous coast, independent and flourishing, has been brought to its knees and is now with its neck bare and bent, waiting for the executioner's axe to fall if the Squires-Coaker party is brought back to power with its policy of the Nationalization of Fish. Nationalization means the final demoralization of the whole island. Fearing such measures there left by the Silvia a party of thirty Burin fishermen en route to Boston, while each succeeding steamer will doubtless carry others. Let our public-spirited Newfoundlanders pause and consider for a moment the fact that over 10,000 persons have left our shores (most of them forever) since the Fish Regulations were made law, and now Coaker announces that the chief plank in his platform is the Nationalization of Fish. Would that we Newfoundlanders had the pluck and spirit to once and for all time do away with this menace known as Coakerism. Do we lack the necessary courage? Only the ballot boxes will tell. At all public functions in the United States there is always one toast which is never forgotten. It is known as the Chairman's "honour." It is as follows:
"May our voters always have a standard to try their rulers by, and be quick to punish or reward justly." Would that we could forget all prejudices and party feelings and be true patriots—letting the progress and prosperity of our country ever be foremost.

TRINITY

MARY MARCH.

Interest in Mary March (a Red Indian or Beothic woman who lived a hundred years ago) was awakened long ago by a remark made in the presence of the late Mr. Gillingham, who was brought to Trinity and taken care of. The Rev. John Clinch taught him the rudiments of Christianity and at his baptism he was given the name of John August—John, after Mr. Clinch, and August, the month in which he was found. The entry of his burial in St. Paul's Churchyard, Trinity (which I have referred to before) is as follows:—

"1788. October 29th.—Interred, John August, a native Indian of this Island, and servant to Messrs Jeffrey and Street."

Since I wrote the preceding items re Mary March, from information as contained in "Rambling Thoughts" by Philip Touque, I have had the privilege and pleasure of meeting Mr. Gillingham, who, nearly thirty-six years ago, when he was a boy, talked with the man who captured Mary March.

This man was John Day, who, when Mr. Gillingham met him, was a hundred years old (he was 103 when he died). Though Mr. Gillingham is not quite sure, yet he is under the impression, from what John Day told him, that it was in the summer when Mary March was captured. (I still believe, however, that it was in the winter. W. J. L.) Mr. Gillingham is also familiar with the A.N.D. timber areas; and he told me that by the side of Red Indian Lake (at Millertown) for many years there was a large pine-tree, under which in 1819 (on a level sandy point) was the site of a Beothic family camp, of which Mary March was a member when she was captured.

their male protectors had been shot to death. One, whose name was Shanandithit was brought to St. John's, where she lived six years, was kindly treated, but died of pneumonia in the hospital in 1829.

In the year 1789 a young Beothic male was found in a starving condition not far from Trinity. He was brought to Trinity and taken care of. The Rev. John Clinch taught him the rudiments of Christianity and at his baptism he was given the name of John August—John, after Mr. Clinch, and August, the month in which he was found. The entry of his burial in St. Paul's Churchyard, Trinity (which I have referred to before) is as follows:—

This pine tree, and the level piece of land, jutting out into the lake, have ever since that time, been associated with Mary March; and when Mr. Beaton was president of the A.N.D. Company, he expressed the wish that this pine tree and piece of land should be left undisturbed. His wishes were respected, till, owing to the developments by the Company at Millertown heavy dams had to be erected, with the result that the site of the Beothic camp and the pine tree became covered with water. But at the present time, when the water in the dam is low, the historic spot can still be seen.

A river running into Red Indian Lake, near the place where Mary March was captured, is still known as Mary March river. One of the men, who was with John Day when she was captured, was William Peyton of Twillingate.

Who was who in Trinity a hundred and fifty years ago; and why John Lane, Surgeon, came here in 1765.

Advertisement for Steedman's Soothing Powders, featuring an illustration of a child and text: 'SPEAKING FROM EXPERIENCE... THE DOCTOR: "Ah yes, restless and feverish. Give him a Steedman's Powder and he'll be as good as well again." STEEDMAN'S SOOTHING POWDERS contain no Poison.'

associated with things that he had set his heart upon thoroughly understanding some day. All went well during the three years that John was with the old doctor, and they had become in their actions towards each other, more like father and son. John had not been with the doctor very long before he became aware of the fact that the dear old man was daily and silently bearing a heavy cross, in the shape of a malignant disease, for which there was no known cure. John had many opportunities to notice that the disease was rapidly undermining his constitution; and when he made arrangements to hand over his practice to another man; though it was a painful surprise to many in the village, it was a clear indication to John, that a serious turning point had been reached in the old doctor's life; and it was no great surprise to him when it was found one morning that his soul had passed away during the night. After the funeral, John had a long and serious talk with Father John, and definite arrangements were made for him to begin his college course, at the beginning of the next term.

Just then, however, when it looked as though John was about to begin the last lap of his life's course of preparation—the end of which would find him a duly qualified medical doctor—several unexpected things happened. The presence of her boy, and the consciousness of his great love for her, kept her from dwelling too much upon her loss, and it was hoped that in the near future she would be up and about again.

The effects of the shock, however, were too great for her age and her frail constitution to throw off, and within a month her body was laid beside that of her husband in the old Churchyard—till the Resurrection morning.

"Man proposes; but God disposes," and "There is a destiny that shapes our end. Rough hew them as we will."

No one ever realized the truth of this more fully than John Lane did as he went back to the old home after his mother's funeral; for in addition to the effects that the death of his father and mother were having upon him, he also had known for a year, that change was going on in connection with his hitherto rugged constitution, a change that he felt quite sure would some day unfit him to qualify for the honourable profession that had been his goal in life. He made up his mind to postpone his going to college, for a year, at the end of which he hoped that he would be in a position to decide upon his future. Although in the meantime he kept his own counsel, yet Father John and other observing people in the parish noticed the change that had taken place in John's physical appearance, and it was no surprise to any of them, when John announced his intention to leave Ireland in the interests of his health.

At that time a trade had begun between Ireland and Newfoundland, and several of the men whom John had known from childhood, had gone to Newfoundland, and had sent back favourable reports of the bracing and healthful climate.

in life, decided to conduct a church service. The little boy was made responsible for the music, and the little girl undertook to provide a sermon. At the appointed time she announced: "My subject, is the apostles. The apostles, you know, are those funny little men that we see on the ends of the handles of spoons." It is hardly necessary to remark that, in "the preacher's" home, there was a dozen "apostles-spoons" in use.

AN UNCOMMON WEIGHT. A friend of mine who has much to do with a large fishing establishment, whilst fitting out some smaller stations with the necessary equipment for weighing fish, found amongst some discarded 28 and 56 pound weights, one in every respect like a 56 pound, (or half-hundred weight) but having on it in raised figures 82 instead of 56. By testing it with a weight marked 56, it was found to be just what it was marked, viz: 53 pounds. This is such an unusual weight, that the owner is anxious to find out something more about it. It is quite possible that this weight came from Jersey, as the effects of a defunct Jersey firm were scattered about the premises, and mixed up with those in use by my friend. Will some reader, who can give the explanation, kindly do so, and oblige? March 10, 1923. —W.J.L.

He Was Not Able to Work. NOW HE PRAISES DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

"Pilate's Daughter." ALL WELL PLEASED WITH PERFORMANCE.

After nearly a week's successful run the final performance of "Pilate's Daughter" will be given at the matinee this afternoon in the Casino Theatre. Another large audience was present last evening and all were immensely pleased with its general rendition, the individual acting of each performer, the stage settings, and the musical contributions of the orchestra. In addition to the clever young ladies who have previously been given special complimentary mention, (the always popular Ross Berrigan and Miss Madeline Kavanagh are also entitled to the compliments all deserved. Though this was the first public performance in which Miss Berrigan has been seen, she displayed all the self-confidence of one long accustomed to the stage. To her attractive appearance, graceful movements and natural portrality of the part assigned her, she added the touch of clear and distinct enunciation, so that her phrases were heard and understood quite easily in the very remotest portions of the building. This resonance of her voice was all the more appreciated as it gave to the audience an agreeable understanding of each role as it was enacted, thus marking a distinct improvement on the low-toned expressions which occasionally weaken the merits of so many a good performance. Miss Madeline Kavanagh has, of course, contributed of her talents before at several very interesting entertainments, and always, as on this occasion, displayed them to such an advantage as to merit and win the approval of her audiences. The Rev. Superiors of the Mercy Convent, who assisted Mrs. Baxter in the management and details of the performance, and to whom practically all of the young ladies are indebted for their tuition and training, should certainly not be overlooked in apportioning the congratulations due to all concerned. That the theatrical prowess of St. John's, noted critics to a high degree, have expressed themselves as so well pleased with the performance sufficiently indicates its high class nature and that it was cleverly produced.

Advertisement for 'A Picture That Women Will Take Their Men to See.' AT THE MAJESTIC MONDAY. "What do men want?" the greatest screen sensation of the greatest producer of motion pictures is essentially a woman's picture. It deals with a problem of American life well known to millions and millions of women, and equally familiar to countless judges in the divorce courts of the country. This great drama from the facile pen of Lois Weber, producer of such outstanding successes as "Where are my Children?" "Hypocrites" and "The Price of a Good Time," is a piercing study of the things that make for happiness in man. Down through the ages woman's greatest wish has been to bring happiness and contentment to man. To-day the complexity of our social conditions demands an even closer analysis of the question "What do Men Want?" It is believed that the movie-going public who see this dynamic drama of the quest for happiness, will agree that Lois Weber has produced the biggest picture in the history of the motion picture industry. So say the critics.

Advertisement for Poultry Notes. USE ONLY STANDARD-BRED STOCK. There are many good reasons for the claim that standard-bred, i.e., pure-bred poultry flocks are generally superior in every way to mixed or mongrel flocks. Wide individual differences in productive capacity and in size and colour of eggs exists in all flocks, but there are sound, scientific reasons for stating that these variations are much less in standard-bred flocks. Whether standard-bred hens as individuals are capable of laying more eggs than selected individuals from mixed or cross-bred flocks is not an established fact, but there is no question that standard-bred production will show a higher average of production and show therefore the greater profit. Eggs from pure-bred stock will be more uniform in size and color and the additional profit realized from the sale of eggs for hatching and stock for breeding will greatly increase the yearly income without in any way adding to the cost of production. Also, there must be considered the fact that every poultry-keeper takes more interest and pride in a uniform, well-bred flock than he does in a flock composed of a motley collection of birds of all shapes and sizes, possessing no bred characteristics. He will, therefore, give his birds more individual attention which will repay him for the extra care.

WEEK-END NOTES.

(L. C. MORRIS.)
CHAPTER X.

Old time ship-sailing, and sea-faring life generally had a great many superstitious customs, all of which were indulged in to the full, and which were a part of the sailor's life. There was the belief in good luck and bad luck; and there were certain things which were strictly prohibited, because of their supposed evil tendencies. These superstitions were based upon tradition; and their origin dated far back into earlier times, when people dreaded the sea, and knew it not beyond the headlands of the continents. These superstitions gave rise to strange and weird tales, and these tales were handed down from generation to generation, and in time they developed into the lore, which was so universal during the nineteenth century, when ship-sailing had developed to its best, and had reached the zenith of its glory.

CHANTY SINGING.

Prominent among the different customs on ships was that of chanty singing—a custom which was principally indulged in when vessels were weighing anchor, on, and before leaving port. This custom was also indulged in when vessels were being moored on arrival, and while the ships were warped into the wharf of the owners. There was usually on board of each ship one man who had the gift of song, and who on the occasion referred to, took the lead. The singing had a strain of mournfulness in it, and whether it was on the outward bound trip, or on the homeward bound trip, there was something in the stinging of the chancies, by the old-time sailors, which touched many a heart. There was a plaintive cry, which told of departure; or there was that note of hope, which indicated a homeward voyage. But in all there was a depth of feeling which appealed deeply to the landspeople, who stood by, as the ships hauled off, or when they hauled in. As already stated, the arrival, or departure, of a ship in those days of which we are writing, was more of an event than it is to-day. A voyage then was, of course, surrounded by much mystery, as little or nothing would be heard of the ships for weeks and months; and because of that, there was a great deal of romance and speculation surrounding a voyage. Besides this, the far off places possessed a glamour and an interest, peculiar to themselves; and so, when a ship was signalled, it soon spread around that such a vessel "was off," and those interested would hasten to the water-front and watch her arrival.

ATTRACTED MUCH ATTENTION.

The songs we say were plaintive, and the sailors seemed to pour out their souls as they shouted out their ditties, and swelled their choruses. They truly sang lustily; and bronzed and bearded as they usually were, attracted great attention. Those songs were, of course, racy of the sea; but they mostly expressed the thought and longings of the sailors; and it was generally accepted that by the shouting of those choruses, and the singing of those sea songs, the task of heaving up the anchor, or of warping in the ship, was relieved of much of its drudgery. There were but few steam winches at that time, therefore much heavy labour had to be performed by the crew, and it was while thus engaged that they sang their ocean ditties. Like a good deal of the old time ship-sailing customs the singing of chancies are almost lost. To the present generation those songs have but very little meaning, and even though the ballads may be purchased at some bookstores, they are of little interest, because the conditions of sea-faring life to-day are very much the reverse of what they were fifty years, or a century ago; and they do not apply to steam ships, nor to the conditions of sea-ports. Usually the leader in the singing of these songs would be the boatswain, but the leadership usually fell to any member of the crew, who could sing the best, and the leader could shout, and the more plaintiveness he could pour into his singing, the louder also in proportion, would be the volume of songs, when at the end of each line or verse, the entire crew joined in.

THE FLOWING BOWL.

There was, of course, at that time much indulgence in drunkenness, and usually on a ship's departure, there would be one or two of the crew intoxicated, and some of them quite merry and hilarious; there would, then, be an inclination on the part of sailors to have a say. The outburst of song at the weighing of the anchor, or the sheeting of the topsails, was an outlet for the hilarious feelings of the sailors, and it afforded ample opportunity for their lusty notes. At that time very little could be accomplished without drink; hence the departure of ships for foreign ports was usually made with intoxicated men, and frothy crews. It was part of the game, and was inseparable from life on ship-board, fifty and sixty years ago.

Some Reduction in Taxation.

An esteemed business man in Harbour Grace, who is likewise a subscriber, sent us the copy of a Weekly Price List issued by Messrs. Harvey & Company. It is dated February 19th. One part of it says:—"The removal of the sur-tax of 25 per cent, announced by the Government, necessitates a change in a great many of our prices. ALTHOUGH IN MANY CASES THE DIFFERENCE IN COST is very slight."

On Flour it is 7 cents per bri.
Pork 41 cents per bri.
Beef 27 cents per bri.
Molasses 14 cents per gal.
Tea 1 cent per pound.

Now the ordinary family uses say 3 bbls. Flour, 1 bri. each Pork and Beef, 1 barrel Molasses, and 40 lbs. Tea, on which the total saving in taxation is ONE DOLLAR and FIFTY CENTS PER YEAR. Ye gods! And yet the "Daily Wall" and "Agitate" crow about what they have done for the fishermen.

PAINING UNCLE.

My income tax is rather frightful, it takes my savings from the bin, but I pretend it is delightful to pay the money with a grin. Perhaps the grin is rather sickly, a ghastly thing that has no style, perhaps it wrinkles and shrivels quickly, but all the same it is a smile. When something painful is before us, let's go ahead and get it done, refuse to join the mourner's chorus, just stand the gaff and call it fun. It doesn't make one's tax much lighter to wear a dark, forbidding front, and say our Uncle is a blighter who pulls a nery strong arm stunt. It doesn't pay to be the spectre of all the grief that ever grew, and cuss the sad-eyed tax collector, and knock his weary map askew. It doesn't help to tell the neighbors that you will sail for other lands, where men who bend to useful labors may keep the products of their hands. Perhaps I grumble in my cellar, where I'm remote from human eyes, down there where no obtrusive fellow may see my tears or hear my cries. Perhaps I wall when no one's looking, but when I'm on the village street you hear me cheerily gadzooking, you see me go on nimble feet; I go to pay my income taxes, I hand in rolls of hard-earned bones; I will not join the battle axes who shake the heavens with groans.

Doesn't This Suit
Coker and His Fish Regulations.

The following excerpt from an American publication on "Economics" might have been written by a Newfoundland victim of Coker's insane Fish Regulations:—

"Before defining price and value and their intimate relation to each other and to speculation, it will prove profitable to point out that to the gross misunderstanding of what they really are, most of the wildly absurd theories set forth as economic panaceas, and most of the bad legislation enacted with the avowed purpose of affecting economic betterment, are due."

In times of widespread distress a certain type of mind compounds wild theories for economic rehabilitation. Such a mind, coming at once to the conclusion that all economic difficulties are due to sudden depreciation in value and fall in prices, set about compounding an instant remedy by attempting to formulate a method for regulating value or price or both. It puts the cart before the horse, and attempts to drag the animal water with the proclaimed intention of making him drink.

Such are minds that urge for adoption as laws, absurd theories for government price control; schemes contemplating huge governmental loans to certain classes, to be used in trying to bolster up prices, and plans for reforming business generally. Invariably these schemes and plans, whether they are honest and sincere or otherwise, are the outgrowth of utter ignorance of what speculation is, and of the real meaning and of the inter-relation among them."

Role in "The Pilgrim."

CHAPLIN DROPS DERBY FOR MINISTERIAL HAT.

Enter Charles Chaplin in the pulpit! The inimitable comedian has been a tramp, a soldier and a dude on the screen, but now he blossoms forth in the full regalia of a parson.

In "The Pilgrim," the First National picture which will be shown at the Nickel Theatre on Monday, he discards his battered derby and swaggers came of other film triumphs for the cleric's hat and frock.

Charles' ministerial garb is stolen property, however, for he portrays an escaped convict who exchanges his prison stripes for the clothing of an unsuspecting parson in swimming.

The complications which ensue when an eloping couple endeavor to get "The Pilgrim" to marry them and when he is unwittingly forced into the pulpit by a chain of extraordinary circumstances, are among the most ludicrous ever screened. "The Pilgrim," like all of the comedians' starring vehicles, was written and directed by Chaplin himself. It is a feature production in four reels and, according to review reports, rivals that screen classic, "The Kid."

With the return of the sweater the Peter Pan collar will be in demand. Hand embroidery, silet lace and colored organdie are points of interest in these collars.

Pointed Paragraphs.

The West's awake.

It will be a landslide.

The big committee meeting of the Bennett Party the other night settled it.

The whole country is only waiting for a chance at the ballot boxes. No more trips abroad with suites at luxurious hotels that cost the taxpayers thousands of dollars.

The death knell of Coakerism has sounded; the merchants will engage outfitting after the elections with a confidence that there will be no Squires-Coaker despotism to go fooling with the marketing of their fish.

Harbor Grace will again take its place in having the Premier of the country to represent it. We congratulate the Second City.

The wild shrieking of the Government organs is the latest proof that their game is up. It is as impossible to keep back the tide of Public Opinion as it is to stop the ocean tide.

The three hundred coopers now idle or breaking rocks for a living will have their shops open once more, and later, along the waterfront, trade will revive.

Useless expenditure will be cut down, and taxes will be reduced. It can be done, and it must be done, though the Government say differently. Bennett's promise of a bounty on fish has put heart into the fishermen. They will now be able to get a living out of the industry.

Squires should give the Bennett Party the address of the detectives that he invited here to put the Cashin Executive in jail. It might come in handy now. They certainly will have some material to work on.

The people are determined to oust the Government. It is now down to the question of "Are we going to live in Newfoundland or must we get out to seek a living like the thousands who have gone before us?"

The clerks on Water Street have been dispersed with in scores the past six months. More will go if the Government gets back to power. No class should be more determined to turn this trade ruining Government out.

With quiet determination and dignity Bennett is getting in his work; Candidates more than enough are offering their services in all the districts. Even critical opinion has veered round to his support, and it is realized that he is "the man of destiny" to save Newfoundland.

BENNETT & BETTER TIMES.

Notes From Argentina.

Just a few notes to give the outside public an idea of political and other matters here.

The winter has been very severe compelling the abandonment of the steamship service. The whole ocean for the month of February has been covered with ice, and there is no controversy between Placentia and ourselves as to which port is most accessible this winter.

We are glad to say that Silver Cliff is going on space, and there are, we understand, about 30 men working there. The general manager and promoter, Mr. McKay, deserves all the credit that can be given him. Coming here last winter in the frost and snow, he started this company, and to-day he has a fully equipped mine which everyone hopes will turn out all that is expected from it.

Within the past three weeks a bombshell has been exploded by the dissolution of the House, and the prospect of a general election. Squires and Coaker have no show here. Argentina and vicinity all solid for the Opposition. Squires is trying to buy the West Coast by a terminal he. The terminal will end the fishing which has been the life of Placentia Bay for hundreds of years.

We notice a letter from Fox Hr. referring to our Sub-Collector and his assistant. We agree with him that the necessity is not there for the two men, but we think that it is not the positions that this party is after, but the men who hold them, and we believe that the letter was never written at Fox Hr. Our own little town contains the writer.

Some on Messrs. Walsh, Sullivan and Sinnott, we will elect you with greater majority, under the leadership of that Veteran in politics, John R. Bennett, the man who promises development of our fisheries, which will keep our young men home and not be making money for foreign capitalists.—Com. Argentina, Mar. 7th, 1923.

SCANDALS.

Mosdell Claims There are None -- Here is the First Instalment.

The Editor of the Daily Mail imprudently asserts that no scandals can be charged against the Government and proclaims that in this it is unlike any previous administration. He must be taking leave of his senses or he must have a profound faith that he can fool all the people all the time. However, there are some people he cannot fool, and we think that they will be the great majority of the people of this country after polling day. No Government in Newfoundland has ever had such a record of scandals, extravagance, corruption and maladministration as the cabal that now directs our affairs. Talk of scandals, indeed! How about the "script" scandal, the barstaced and flagrant open violation of the Prohibition Law, as a result of which thousands of "scripts" are issued every week and the Controller's Department covered up into the biggest and most profitable rumshop ever seen in Newfoundland, and this by men who went to the country denouncing the Cashin Government because it was not carrying out the Prohibition Act properly.

COAKER'S NAVY.

What about the "Coaker Navy" scandal, the purchase of a fleet of steamers like the "Lobelia," the "Daisy," the "Malakoff," the "Sebastopol," the "Sagat," etc., on the buying and fitting up of which hundreds of thousands of dollars were spent. What about the guarantee of fishery supplies through which the F.P.U. got $76,000 worth and made no returns till after the House opened, and the matter was ventilated in the Assembly, when about half the money was paid in, though whether the balance has ever been paid or not is not known officially, through the failure of the House of Assembly to meet this winter. What about the scandal of the same guarantee for fishery supplies by which strong supporters of the Government in the city and in the outports were able to get thousands of dollars to carry on their business and made no returns whatever. What about the scandal of a man right here in this city, an active supporter of the Premier's, who got some thousands of dollars to issue fishery supplies, and used it for other purposes without any attempt being made to prosecute him or get the money back.

COLONY LOST THOUSANDS.

What about the salt scandal on which the Colony lost thousands of dollars? What about the scandal of a few favored Tory merchants who stood in with the Government, being able to use the fishery regulation policy for their own advantage, to sell their own fish in the foreign markets while other people were not allowed to dispose of them. What about the scandal of the Premier being away from the Colony for more than half of every year he has held office at an enormous expense without any advantage to Newfoundland or its interests. What about the scandal of Mr. Coaker being absent from his Department for nearly two years, drawing a full salary and leaving the affairs of the Department to get into a condition of ruin and neglect. What about the scandal of the Department of Education, created simply and solely to purchase the support of Dr. Barnes as a candidate for the Government and doing not a scrap of service to the country or the interests of education from the day it was formed up to the present minute.

This is only a first instalment of some of the scandals and we have plenty more to follow.

Electors, think over all of these and make up your mind that the right course for you to adopt is to turn the Squires-Coaker crowd out and vote for BENNETT & BETTER TIMES.

Negroes Flee in Terror From Southern States.

FIFTY THOUSAND MIGRATE TO THE NORTH WITHIN THE PAST THREE MONTHS.

Over fifty thousand negroes have fled from the Southern States within the past few months to endeavor to make new homes in the North, and the migration continues at an alarming rate.

Among the principal reasons for the flight are lynchings on the slightest pretext, exportation by the whites and the denial of common justice in the courts of the South. From the Mississippi and Arkansas deltas fully 15,000 have already left, Georgia comes next with 12,000, South Carolina, Texas and Alabama each furnish an important quota in the order named.

So anxious are the negroes to get away that, according to a Southern States correspondent, it is no uncommon sight for a negro to be seen boarding a train for the Middle West clad in working clothes, which represent his complete wardrobe on or off his back. His personal appearance, which would suggest the probability of his sighting at the next station, is entirely misleading; for he is an interstate passenger travelling hundreds of miles to reach "the promised land" where justice is meted out on a more equitable and humane basis.

So fired are many negroes with an overwhelming desire to leave the South that they get on a train for the North with less than a dollar in their pockets after having bought a through ticket. Learning of their financial straits, frequently sandwiches and soda pop are supplied them by generous passengers.

The majority of those being drawn North on the crest of the present wave have very little use for trunks. A family, consisting of from three to eight, convey their belongings in bulging suit cases of various sizes, colors and texture. There are instances, of course, of families selling out their business and shipping household effects ahead. Their financial status, however, is above that of the average deserting the South.

The volubility of the migrant, particularly to one of his own race, has its pathetic appeal. In less than ten minutes you learn a life's story, perhaps somewhat crudely related but full of human interest and narrated with childish simplicity. Inability to earn a decent livelihood, coupled with the reaction after years of pent-up resentment and dissatisfaction over their unfair treatment are the potent reasons for shaking the dust of the Southland.

SOME CAUSES OF THE EXODUS.

The Negro press is devoting considerable space to the exodus and is unanimous in assigning reasons for the movement. A Southern weekly recently published fourteen vital reasons for the Negro's departure in large numbers, which follow:

Unjust treatment. Failure to secure a square deal in the courts. Taxation without representation. Denial of the right to vote through the subterfuge of the white primary. No racial representation in the legislative halls of the State and Nation. Inequality of pay of Negro teachers doing the same work as white teachers.

Poor crops and unjust division of the crops on the tenant plan. Farming out of convicts to the place of free laborers. Lynching and burning of men and women on the slightest pretext with no immediate relief in sight. Pernicious activity of night riders who terrorize Negro communities.

A longing for free air. Relatives who have gone before writing South and telling about real freedom in the North.

The offer of living wages made by labor agents from the North.

UNFAIR PRACTICES.

A revolt against unfair practices resorted to by white owners who let out their farms on the sharing plan is one of the chief contributory causes to the migration. It is not always the case of the owner taking advantage of a Negro. Usually the tenant is fully aware that he has been victimized. He also knows that if he values his life and property he had better keep his mouth shut and refrain from registering protest. What weight would his word have in or out of court compared with the white man who has systematically defrauded him?

A Negro farmer is responsible for the story that he worked ten years on the plantation in Mississippi. When a settlement was recently made he had but $50 coming to him. Such tales are common. There is no denying that the Negro tenant farmer has been defrauded out of millions of dollars by the avaricious, unprincipled white

A trial bottle only is required to stop the pain—the sleepless nights—the agony of itching.

We publish just one letter that tells the story in a few words. It was written by Mr. J. W. Corra, 33 Melbourne Ave., Toronto, one of the prominent business men of that city. A letter from you would reach him. "I have been a sufferer for two years with eczema on the legs and ankles. I tried three or four different doctors. I went to a skin specialist. All of no use. I used one bottle of D. D. D.—that is all. Today I am perfectly well."

D. D. D. is a soothing, cooling fluid directly applied to the skin. This powerful agent instantly acts on the inflamed and tortured cells. The itching disappears at once. The pain is soothed. Under continued treatment the rough scaly surface assumes the healthy normal look you have perhaps not known for years.

Perhaps there is someone in your home who is suffering with some skin disease, a mild case of rash, a chronic eczema of long standing. Perhaps you have a friend, know a growing child, a tiny baby, who have tried other ways of relief without success.

Why not try D. D. D.? Thousands of people in every walk of life have used it. It gives results in the worst cases, yet is mild enough to use on infants' tender skins.

A trial bottle will prove to you that D. D. D. is the REAL REMEDY, YOUR REMEDY. Do not make the mistake of selecting to try this great medical discovery.

The Menace of Coakerism.

Any industry, corporation or institution subject to Governmental control, if not a scandal will become one, is the verdict rendered by the editor of the largest Dominion trade journal published in the United Kingdom.

Governmental control of any section of the trade of any country is ruinous to the welfare of that particular item, says the financial editor of the London Times.

The English speaking press through out Canada, America and England decries the wisdom of Government ownership or control of any trade or commercial institution, and the New York Sun-Herald asserts that Governmental control has been the means of encouraging graft, corruption, and in the end failure of corporations or businesses thus hampered.

During the war period Newfoundland was the most flourishing and prosperous country in the world. Imports and exports were unrestricted. To-day, five years after the war, the Dominion is called upon to suffer severe restrictions and Governmental control of railways and steamship services and prospective coal areas is contemplated, not because such a move is found necessary, but that the whims and prejudices of a political mountebank must be satisfied.

Any Government is better than no Government. We have no Government to-day, Newfoundland is as it never was before in the hands of a one-man control. The supposed Prime Minister, and others in the Cabinet who hold Legislative seats, are but pawns; they must do his bidding or forfeit lucrative pay and positions. The members of the Executive are exactly in the same position as members of the F.P.U. Party, owned and controlled by the same man, who boasts of his power and influence to break that party and Government and drive them out of office whenever he so desires.

What a humiliating position those men who would have us believe their independence are enjoying. They are forced to cater to Mr. Coaker or forfeit the sweets of office. With him they agreed to permit Governmental control, despite the clamour of the entire populace opposed to such. The exportation of fish was governed by the Government, because W. F. Coaker is largely interested in same.

Because a few sugar speculators stood to lose considerable money on new stocks, governmental control was availed of, and large consignments were purchased at the expense of the common people.

The railway contractors likewise succeeded in the same channel and the responsibility that heretofore rested upon the Reid Nfd. Co. is removed and placed upon the shoulders of the country, and the members of the Cabinet and the Government dare not oppose such measures which were originated and planned by W. F. Coaker.

In consequence of such erratic legislation, in a few short years conditions in Newfoundland have changed. Where general prosperity reigned depression and trade disruption have taken its place. We are now entering upon a period that will entail much distress and privation. The exchequer is telling a tale with its increasing deficit. Former surpluses have been wasted on whimsical ideas, and incapable officials are thrust into the public service.

Such is the short career of Coakerism and Coaker rule in Newfoundland. It is a curse that we shall pay dearly for ere it is checked. Everywhere the cry of alarm is echoed and the people are disheartened and dispirited. Thousands have left and are leaving their native soil to avoid the consequences of the curse.

CUTICURA HEALS BABY'S BLISTERS

Head Covered With Eruptions. Hair All Fell Out. Got Little Sleep.

A friend recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using he got relief and in two months he was healed." (Signed) Mrs. Allan R. Caldwell, R. F. D. 2, Auburn, Me., Jan. 12, 1922.

Our Dumb Animals.

REPORT OF THE CHIEF AGENT FOR WEEK ENDING MARCH 9TH.

Was asked to humanely put to death a horse in the West End. The animal had put its shoulder out of place and had been undergoing treatment. Also a dog owned by Mr. Pope, which had been run over by a horse and slide. Sent in two horses for a rest and treatment, one with sore shoulders and the other with a sore back. Both of those horses are in very poor condition. 3 horses and 2 dogs were humanely destroyed by Mr. Ashev during my stay in hospital. Several horses have been laid up, having bruised themselves in deep snow, and the sand and salt on the streets, has got into the hoofs and made them very sore. Quite a number of horses are bandaged and the owners trying to work them. I think something should be done to prevent so much salt being used on Water Street. I have interviewed the Municipal Council and the Reid Newfoundland Co. about clearing Water Street. Also filling in the gulches. The Council say they are unable to do any better than they are doing. They are filling up the gulches, yet it is very slow work. The Reid Company are only using one track, and all the sweepings from that one goes on the other side, and the horses have to work right through it, which to my mind is downright cruelty; every horse owner should sign a protest against the condition of things. I am thankful to be spared to report again for duty the past week after my accident—being kicked by a stallion. I must say the staff of the Hospital and everyone was very kind; and to one and all I extend grateful thanks for courtesies.

Burdened With Bills, But no Carfare.

DUSSELDORF—"You must be making an enormous lot of money," said an American to the head porter of the largest hotel in Dusseeldorf, "you spend more than half your time counting great stacks of bills."

The head porter looked up sadly. "Don't joke with me," he admonished. "I am the man who is responsible for the passing of one of the oldest, ironical, sarcastic remarks ever made about jobs."

"What is it, I would like to know?"

"This job isn't worth carfare," the porter replied.

It turned out to be literally true. It cost him fifteen thousand marks a month to go to and from his work on the street cars, the hotel paid him ten thousand marks.

THE SALT OFFERER.

The guest who accepts our hospitality is disarmed at the door. He cannot criticize, he cannot complain. That is as inalterable as the laws of the Medes and Persians. It is the unvoiced but (presumably) unbroken covenant between the guest and host. The guest who visits and condemns and the man who kisses and tells are in the same class. But—

I know a school teacher. She supports her mother as well as herself, and in order to make her income sufficient she usually works during the summer vacation. Just before school opened last fall she received an invitation to visit an old friend who was in the country with her family.

The visitor that presented itself to her was alluring. She was tired more so than she had realized. She accepted joyfully and gratefully. Her hostess greeted her warmly. "The children have to have separate beds, you know," she said, apologetically. "So I'm going to put you in the living room. You won't mind, will you?"

"Of course not," said the teacher heartily.

But she did. Not because she was fussy but because the cot was narrow and uncomfortable and because the children had sprinkled sand on it while frolicking about it. She was a very long time getting to sleep. Then at 5 o'clock in the morning she was awakened by a terrific racket.

But she didn't get it. The noise was inexplicable. She discovered later, however, that the baby in its crib was right over her head. The noise was caused by the baby rocking in its crib, an every morning performance which effectually banished sleep.

She arose with a headache. At the breakfast table the children forgetting the shyness of the evening before, were in full feather.

"I want some bacon," shouted the little boy.

"I want some marmalade," clamored the little girl.

The guest gulped a cup of coffee and retreated conquered by the clamor and confusion. She saw a hammock under the trees and longed to climb into it, but seeing her friend busy with the broom she offered to help. The broom was relinquished into her grasp and she swept the lower floor. Then she shelled peas for lunch.

And She Had To Be Grateful. In the afternoon she told stories to the children at their earnest request while their mother took a nap. After dinner she helped with the dishes because her friend said having company made the cook resentful and she always tried to help as much as possible. Then she went back to the horrible cot again.

This was a sample of her days. There was nothing restful about the week she spent there. Indeed the clamor and confusion by day, and the broken sleep at night, left her more tired than when she started. But she was a guest. She could neither question nor condemn.

The incident may seem exaggerated to some people. To others it will perhaps seem toned down. That depends.

But while we are talking, as we so often do, of the obligations he assumes who eats another's salt, let's not forget to say something about the obligations of him who offers that salt.

THE YOUTH BEHIND.

Someone will take your place when you are gone. Will come as you to face the morning mail. Hear the small talk and bear the burdens on. And in his care the venture will not fail.

You may be brave and wise and quick and strong. You may command with courage and with grace. But one shall come, when you have passed along. And serve with equal splendor in your place.

And he may see what you have never seen. May find new ways your feet have never trod. And he may go where you have never been. For, after all, the greatest of us died.

In all the throng you may not see his face; Secure you seem, and all your prospects fair. But one there is who waits to take your place. Again your passing. Life has placed him there.

A sand-color will suit him a wrap skirt and a fringed sash of crepe de chine worn with skirt and drooping below coat.

Both the long and short sleeves are good for spring. In short cases it is apt to be either open or gathered at the bottom.

Moire in black only is a favorite of the French milliner. A single large flower is often the only trimming used on the moire hat.

An interesting gown worn recently at a famous reception showed a high neckline. Silver gray was noticed, but very little black.

Alaska Salmon Face Extermination.

If you were to ask your grocer for a can of salmon, you probably would be astonished to hear him say:

"I am sorry, ma'am, but we haven't any salmon. I have had an order in for a dozen tins for two weeks, but canned salmon is hard to get. It is a luxury now and it's expensive. How about Japanese crab meat or French sardines? I have both of those in stock."

Considering that the product of Alaska and other west coast canneries helps mightily to feed the people of the United States and many other countries, it seems as though a grocer who would make such a statement should be headed for a padded cell.

Last year the number of cans of salmon representing the season's catch approximated 350,000,000. During the war the total mounted to nearly 530,000,000. For five years, from 1915 to 1922, the tremendous aggregate of 1,100,000,000 cans was reached.

This is going too strong. Unless some drastic action is taken at once by the federal government, the greatest sea food resource of the American people is about to give out.

Clearly enough the canning of salmon, first on the coast of California, Washington and Oregon, and finally off the coast of Alaska, has grown to be a distinct and important industry. It is an extremely interesting industry (fishing somehow is always interesting), and is a rather unique and picturesque calling.—Sunday Herald.

Influenza 'Bug' Caught at Last.

SCHENECTADY, Feb. — Hopes of thousands of sufferers from epidemic influenza for a cure or prevention were raised by the announcement of the discovery of the cause and the isolation of the germ.

The announcement was made by Dr. Simon W. Flexner, director of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research, who attributed the discovery to Dr. Peter K. Oltzky and Dr. Frederick T. Gates, also of the institute.

DETAILS OF DISCOVERY.

In describing the details of the discovery, Dr. Flexner says: "The effects are of two general classes: first, as they affect the blood and alter the relative number of red and white blood cells through the destruction of one variety of the latter."

"The second kind of effect from the germ causing influenza is far more significant and consists of mild injuries to the substance of the lungs, recognizable under the microscope."

"This new bacterium, found thus far only in cases of epidemic influenza in the early hours of the disease, is so small that it can pass through the pores of an earthware filter, and when magnified 1000 times is just capable of being seen distinctly under the microscope."

"It has been given the name of bacterium pneumosintes, which, translated into simple English, signifies that this germ injures the lung tissue in such a way as to deprive it of the power of oxidizing, or resisting, the attacks of the common bacteria of the nose and throat."

EFFECT ON LUNGS.

"In health these common bacteria are easily destroyed by the lung tissue, but as a result of the injuries induced by bacterium pneumosintes they are now enabled to lodge and multiply in the lungs, thus producing these serious inflammations to which the names of bronchitis and pneumonia are applied."

Dr. Flexner says the bacillus never has been found in healthy persons, nor in those sick with other diseases. When it is injected into the windpipe of rabbits it produces effects similar to those seen in human beings in the various stages of the disease.

PRINCIPLES NOT NEW.

The series of epidemic waves of influenza in 1918 and this year have been served to extend medical knowledge of the disease, he says, particularly in respect to the bacteriology of the original disease. He used the term 'influenza' to distinguish between the influenza as such and the common complication of bronchitis and pneumonia, to which the grave nature of influenza is directly due.

"The newer principles," he says, "for cultivating disease germs outside the bodies of man and animals—in their native very difficult to grow in this manner, but necessary for purposes of study and research—were worked out 10 years ago, or more by Dr. Hideo Noguchi of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research in New York city. It was by the use of these new methods modified to meet the needs of the special conditions necessary in studying influenza that additional knowledge of great importance was obtained."

Why are the Nile Tombs Crowded With Treasure?

Interest in the discovery of the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen continues unabated. Priceless treasures day by day are carried away from it with the most minute care against possible damage or disintegration, as is becoming when we consider that these trophies of the highest artistic skill of thousands of years ago appeal not only to the popular imagination, but have enormous value for the historian and the archaeologist.

But why is the tomb thus packed with treasures? Many persons in a general way understand the reasons. They are stated briefly and carefully by the professor of Egyptology of the University of Liverpool in the Manchester Guardian, and that statement here is compressed into a few paragraphs. Egyptian ideas as to death and the next life were "not the momentary product of a single inspired sage" but the "accumulated outcome of 2000 years or more of wondering."

"They could not imagine physical life as actually coming to an end. The dead continued to exist in some purely physical sense and still to have need of food, drink, clothing and weapons. That point of view, revealed in the tombs of almost 6000 years ago, persisted through the whole of the history of Egypt."

And was at the bottom of the whole "funerary cult" in all periods. "The inscriptions make it clear that they believed 'the dead' enjoyed a continued physical existence of a modified and highly-concreted type in the tomb itself, and the evidence of the tombs themselves confirm this."

"These tombs when completed had two parts, the underground chamber with the body in the coffin, and an offering chamber above ground. That rule applies to the Pyramids and to the great rock tombs in the Valley of the Kings. To the offering chambers, many of them now perished, friends and relatives brought food and the dead man came from his burial chamber to take it. Food was supplied for the continuance of physical life, and the mummification was simply the attempt by artificial means to prevent the dissolution of the body in which the physical life continued to exist. The mummy being made and deposited in the tomb. It was surrounded with the clothing and furnishings that a living man would require. So much jewelry was placed in these tombs, and so liable therefore were they to plunderers' attacks, that extraordinary efforts were put forth to block up the entrances so securely that robbers would not be able to break in, or to conceal the entrance so cleverly that marauders would not find it. Yet the royal tombs were often despoiled, and frequently the robbers, having taken out part of the treasure, would again seal up the chamber. That happened in the case of Tut-Ankh-Amen's tomb. Robbers almost of his own time carried off many things, thus revealing the tomb. Inasmuch as the offerings chambers for the Valley of the Kings were on the plain remote from the tombs they gave no clue to the location of the tombs themselves, fortunately, for this this rare treasure, long lost, only now is being uncovered."

"This, diseased, at some details, in the story as stated by Prof. Pest. Such, he says, is 'the crude and simple conception of the base of the Egyptian funerary custom.' If the Egyptians also held to other and very different beliefs, so that the dead man went to live in the sky, that fact need not disturb us, for it is a symptom of another underlying idea of the ancients of the Nile, namely that the Egyptians were altogether lacking in philosophical elaborations and found no trouble in holding at one and the same time two totally inconsistent beliefs without any apparent sense of contradiction.—Sunday Herald.

Carrie Nation's Axe Again on Job.

FAMOUS HATCHET NOT SMASHING SALOONS NOW, HOWEVER.

Carrie Nation's hatchet is still "marching on." Word has just come out of Lexington, Ky., that the instrument used by the indomitable Carrie in smashing up saloons is now being employed in building a new dormitory for the Eastern Kentucky Hospital for the Insane. It is owned and is being operated by Ben R. Moore, a carpenter of Lexington, and nephew of the woman who was the acknowledged terror of saloon-keepers a quarter-century ago.

"When prohibition came people forgot the keen-eyed, sharp-tongued, militant woman who led the Women's Christian Temperance Union through Kansas leaving behind her a trail of wrecked saloons and battered bar-keepers. Yet it was Carrie Nation with her ceaseless fight against whiskey, her constant lecturing and what was most effective, her incessant sabotage, that struck the deepest blow for prohibition."

After the dormitory is finished, the notorious hatchet will be placed in a glass showcase (the very kind its owner smashed) for the inspection of visitors. They will see an ordinary hatchet, its red paint scarred, the handle worn smooth, the blade a trifle nicked. There is will be, a valuable relic, behind glass in a Kentucky insane asylum.

Yet how many of the people who come to see it will remember that it is the cornerstone of a law that has caused more controversy and agitation than any other amendment to the constitution except that on slavery? How many people will remember the history of Carrie Nation, who fought the liquor interests and made it pay? Despite the costly litigation Mrs. Nation was always tangled up in, she made enough money by lecturing, selling souvenir hatchets, and traveling with a circus giving temperance talks to buy a farm in Kansas for her old age.

Born in Kentucky of well-to-do parents, Carrie Nation, then Moore, showed her pique at an early age. She held the record in her county for Sunday school attendance. Still in the teens, Carrie married a Mr. Campbell.

HUSBAND DRUNKARD.

Mrs. Nation confessed later in her speeches that her first husband led her a dog's life. He was a hard drinker, and, coming home drunk right after night, would beat her almost to death. He finally died of drink, and it was over his coffin she swore a terrible oath never to rest in life or spirit until the entire world was as dry as the northwestern part of Africa.

ARRESTED, HATED.

Arrested time and again, sued, hated, denounced by newspapers and courts, she still kept at her work unabated. Even her husband, meek soul that he was, rebelled at the publicity and cost she was putting him to at bailing her out of prison and paying for her damages. He threatened divorce many times, and gave out statements to newspapers that his wife was crazy. Yet Carrie-minded him no more than she did the police.

Meanwhile, Carrie Nation Clubs sprang up all over the country. Women organized into batches, brigades and went out smashing saloons. All the pilled-up, jealous rancour they bore against the places they thought took their husbands' health and money, came out during these raids. Saloons were forced to close-time and again. At one time over 600 saloons had been raided by the Carrie Nation disciples.

ARRESTED, HATED.

Arrested time and again, sued, hated, denounced by newspapers and courts, she still kept at her work unabated. Even her husband, meek soul that he was, rebelled at the publicity and cost she was putting him to at bailing her out of prison and paying for her damages. He threatened divorce many times, and gave out statements to newspapers that his wife was crazy. Yet Carrie-minded him no more than she did the police.

Meanwhile, Carrie Nation Clubs sprang up all over the country. Women organized into batches, brigades and went out smashing saloons. All the pilled-up, jealous rancour they bore against the places they thought took their husbands' health and money, came out during these raids. Saloons were forced to close-time and again. At one time over 600 saloons had been raided by the Carrie Nation disciples.

VISITED POOR HOUSE.—Lady Cashin and daughter (Mrs. Cyril J. Fox) visited the Poor Asylum yesterday, and presented the inmates with tobacco and oranges. The ladies' beautiful also spoke some very kind words of cheer in addition to their gifts, all of which much gratitude is expressed.

A PRETTY HOUSE OR PORCH FROCK.

4270. Checked gingham in brown and white is here illustrated. It is trimmed with white picoté. Figured voile or percale will also be good for this model. Taffeta or tub silk would be very pleasing, with stitching or embroidery for trimming.

To trim as illustrated requires 3/4 yard of 36 inch material. Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

A COMFORTABLE WORK DRESS. 3988. It is the little touches in the finish of this garment that will please you—as well as knowing that it is easy to make and comfortable to wear. In seersucker or chambray or a neat pattern of percale it is quite as nice as it made up in gabardine, dainty or dotted-Swiss.

It is cut in 7 Sizes: 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, and 48 inches bust measure. A 38 inch size requires 6 yards of 36 inch material.

WHAT DO MEN WANT?

A STORY THAT STRIKES DEEP INTO THE HEART OF EVERY

Wife, Husband, Sweetheart

MOTHER

Father, Son, Daughter

The First Round.

By WILL U. BE WISE.

The first round of the political combat clearly shows that the Squires-Coaker party are in, as termed in pugilistic parlance, an extremely "grogy condition."

This desperate plight, disclosed so early in the contest, will grow more desperate for the weeks to go by, thus indicating that when the final punch is given them by the voters on polling day every man of them will drop to the mat beaten to a frazzle.

The suffering endured the past three years by the businessmen, tradesmen, fishermen, labourers, and all classes of working people, women and children included, must without a doubt be attributed in the main to that fierce and furious craziness that inspired the infamous fish regulations.

That iniquitous and shallow brained measure, above and before everything else, brought suffering beyond description into thousands of homes in Newfoundland. How then in the name of common sense can it be expected that the persecuted voters of this country will ever again tolerate a return to power of a party that created such havoc, and whose manipulation is bent on trying other fantastic schemes probably more devastating still.

Worse than the man who conceived and enforced that crazy idea, were the parties who sat in Council with him and who blindly permitted that cloud of disaster to be created and to fall as a piercing blight upon homes that were once so happy.

Fortunately the ballot boxes are available to wipe all of them out of any future political existence. That remedy is still left to the freemen of this grand old British Colony; this loyal dependent of an Empire; the greatest the world has ever known and which stands unshaken to-day as the brightest symbol of freedom upon the whole vast service of the earth.

... wild carnival of squandering and borrowing millions upon millions—the latter because of the disruption to the Colony's main resources the fisheries—added more grievous burdens to the backs of the Colony's toilers till to-day everybody is manacled by taxes, riven so tightly that there can be no unloosening of these strangulation burdens unless by a complete demolition of the Squires-Coaker Government.

Should it happen by some unfortunate oversight of electors the same tyrannical rule would again be restored that nothing could ever again unloose them, all the young people of the country would flee from it wholesale, and none but old men, old women and children would be left behind and given rocks to break to earn sufficient to keep body and soul together.

The way to prevent all this is to wipe out Coakerism entirely and to return instead a Government that will bring about a confidence such as will cause the wheels of industry to revolve again, thus creating instead, steady employment for the tradesmen and the laborers at work to which they are accustomed, and which is more congenial to their desires; a happy condition also that will stimulate the prosecution of the fisheries at good prices to all who toil thereat. Thus will return again an era of happiness and prosperity, a contented living for us all in this land of our father, and in the home wherein we love to dwell.

Political Paragraphs.

The Government organs attack the merchants supporting Bennett and call them Tory merchants in the same issue in which it was announced that Sir M. G. Winter had been appointed to a seat in the Executive Council. It is to laugh! Sir Marmaduke was never regarded as a Liberal.

Squires and Coaker took good care in the selection of their Executive when they appointed a merchant who has no direct interests in the fisheries in supplying fishermen or purchasing fishery products.

The new Council will doubtless insist on the Government giving adequate protection to the various enterprises of which he is a Director, even though the fishermen must pay for the privilege of seeing him a member of the Squires-Coaker Government.

Sir Marmaduke would have no objection to giving Mr. Coaker's Fish Regulations another trial. He is not in the fish business anyway and wouldn't mind the risk.

If Squires is a friend of the fishermen, as he professes to be, why did he not select a fisherman to fill this Executive seat?

Squires and Coaker can't be sincere in their professions of interest in the fishermen. They destroyed their fish markets and in the face of this they now appeal to them for a new lease of power.

Do they think the fishermen are fools to support a party that ruined their prospects and left them impoverished?

No they are not fools. The fishermen are waiting their opportunity to turn the rascals out.

The election will show the fishermen to be strong for Bennett and safe and sane government. Squires and Coaker must go!

Bennett and Good Times.

Watch Cashin, Hunt and Linegar rolling up a record majority in St. John's West!

It is now said that Squires feels so sure of defeat in St. John's West that he intends scuttling off to Harbor Grace. Ooowah!

Campbell must think that he can buy his seat in St. John's West with scrip. The voters gave him their verdict in 1919. They will give him the same now.

Bennett's popularity is increasing day by day. Bennett can't lose!

Squires and Coaker could hardly hope that a people deceived and disappointed, whose industries have been wrecked, would agree to give them any further lease of power. Therefore Squires and Coaker must go.

Fishermen, laborers, merchants and mechanics are united this time to turn the rascals out.

Three and a half years of squandering maladministration have brought the country to the verge of ruin. 'Tis time for a change.

Every man in Newfoundland is poorer to-day because of Squires and Coaker's rule.

No country in the world witnessed such an abuse of trust as that experienced by Newfoundland under Squires and Coaker.

Here's to the land we live in!

Bennett and clean government.

The clouds of depression are being dispersed since Bennett's leadership was announced.

When Monroe, Hunt, Ayre, Harris, Long, Moore and others of this kind of men take an active part in public affairs it augurs well for the future of the country.

The whole country is crying out for a change.

Bennett and better times. Bennett can't lose!

It is encouraging to the fishermen to know that in their fight for clean government they are supported by mechanics, farmers and laborers.

PADDOCK COMING EAST.

Charlie Paddock, "the fastest human," is determined to answer once and for all the critics who have questioned his courage and the officials who have refused to accept his records. Preparing for an intensive campaign against the best sprinters the country can produce, Paddock is at present taking light workouts and playing a lot of golf in California to get ready for the regular training grind which will begin when he returns to the University of Southern California within the next few weeks. Paddock will run again this season in Pacific Coast meets and will come east determined to meet and defeat Leebney, Woodring, Lovejoy and Liever, the sprinters some critics said he was afraid to meet. He plans to compete for the U.S.C. in the Pennsylvania relay.

ROCKY KANSAS DEFEATED WHITE.

NEW YORK.—Rocky Kansas, of Buffalo, delivered a severe beating to Charlie White, of Chicago, in a 15-round bout at Madison Square Garden, to pave the way for the winner meeting champion Benny Leonard in a title match this year. Kansas received the judges' decision. The bout was one-sided, and the result was a surprise to close followers of the game who predicted a knockout for the Chicagoan. Kansas got the jump and held it all the way, winning a large ovation from the crowd of 12,000 when he left the ring. White was unusually hesitant to-night and before he knew it Rocky had planted enough blows to nullify any counter attack. Charley made a flash in the 13th when he called upon the resource that rarely has failed him—his deadly left hook to the jaw—but when he planted it four times to Rocky's chin and he stood up, White's heart was gone. In the latter rounds Rocky bounced White against the ropes and in the 15th when White tried desperately for a knockout, Rocky was still so vigorous that he had his man on the verge of a knockout.

GIBBONS AND DEMPSEY IS "DOPE" NOW.

NEW YORK.—Announcement that the New Jersey Boxing Commission would not permit Jack Dempsey to meet Harry Wills or Jess Willard within its domain, is almost a knockout-blow as far as Tex Rickard is concerned, especially when New York won't have either of them. With Wills and Willard removed from the list, Tom Gibbons is the likely choice and Rickard already has discussed terms with the managers of the two boxers, but although he had given up the idea of a Wills-Dempsey battle, he was counting on sticking Willard up against the champion, and he feels the blow keenly. The New York Commission said recently that Gibbons couldn't get in the ring with Dempsey because he was too small, but Chairman Muldoon is now ready to approve the bout if Gibbons wins decisively from Lloyd Johnson when they meet this month. Rickard's option on Dempsey has expired, and the bids will begin firing in the direction of Jack Kearns again.

RUTH NOT MAKING ANY PREDICTIONS.

NEW YORK.—Babe Ruth, the swat king, is back in his town house for a week's shopping. He feels fine after his long spell of training on a New England farm.

"Had to come to the city to do some shopping before I take off for Hot Springs to finish the process of getting in shape," Ruth said.

The big bam looked as if he didn't have much more to do to get into real condition. In full winter regalia, with a big, heavy overcoat on, he was strikingly less girthy than he was when he was missing them a mile in the world's series last fall.

"I feel fine now, but it will not do me any harm to take off some more weight," Ruth said. "He didn't announce his poundage, but he did say he was way below what he was last year.

The Babe looked over the new Yankee stadium, and said, he couldn't see how they could say the park was made for him or built to beat him. "Looks like a regular park to me. The right field stands are a little closer than the Polo Grounds' right on the foul line, but the stands on the Giants' field cut in deeper into the playing field," he said.

"There were a lot of pop flies that went for home runs last year on the Polo Grounds, but I don't believe the ones I got could be called pop flies. A drive into the upper stands at the Polo Grounds would be a home run on any field," Ruth said.

The swat king does not think it brings good luck to make predictions. He thinks that he can make a new record on the theory that he could not if he thought otherwise.

"I never told anyone that I was going to knock seventy homers next season. That's a big order. I haven't told anyone how many I am going to get because I don't know."

"If I can correct my faults sufficiently I might be able to hit one every time I go to the bat. From what the papers have been saying all winter, every rookie pitcher in the country knows how to stop me from hitting. All I have to do to fool them is to learn this spring how to hit a low one, a floater and a fast ball, and some curves mixed in with them. Then, maybe, I'll be some good," he said.

Franco-German Steel Power.

The Bismarckian method of building up the power of Germany involved the use of blood and iron. Now there is considerable discussion of the possible establishment of Franco-German supremacy in steel, by a close union of the interests having control of French iron and of German coal. The French are in the Ruhr with bayonets trying to dig out the German coal they need, and at no great distance in Lorraine they have the necessary iron. But it is not by their action alone that the controlling national interests can be united. Force will not do it. Between the coal owners of one nation and the iron masters of the other there must be solid commercial contracts in which each party will see profits and power.

British newspapers and leaders of trade and industry are discussing with much animation the question of this industrial linking of the Ruhr coal mines and the Brierley-Longwy iron field, because it is thought in some quarters that the combination would be a grave menace to the British steel trade. The Paris correspondent of one London journal declares that "the business organization which managed to marry the twin elements of German coal and French iron will be the steel rulers of the world." "We venture to doubt that, while a place remains in the world for America. And we are not
