Lemed Trament.

My Lordi;

THE confidential fervants of the Crown, in whofe hands the adminiftration of Government is placed, naturally become the objects of public attention; and in times of national calamity, thofe who are fuppofed to be endowed with luperior abilities, are particularly called upon to exert thofe abilities, in order to remedy paft, or prevent future misfortunes; Troublefome (however honourable) as this diftinction may be to individuals, the public hath a right to make it; and your Lordfhip's colleagues in office, cannot, I prefume, reafonably be offended, if, upon this ground, one of that public chufes to addrefs your Lordthip.

( 2 )

Thus much I thought neceffary to premife, in order to affign my reafon for troubling your Loridhp, in preference to any other of the King's Minifters, though, perhaps, I may be thought premature in my decifion, confidering the recent appointmert (happily contrised to prevent jealoufies) of a Scotch and Irifh fecretary of flate, together with a new. Prefident of the Council, who, indeed, is Englif, and confequently, as far as the cafual circumftance of birth can avail, poffeffed of one qualification at leaft in common wish your Lordthip.

I have, in frort, my Lord, taken the liberty of addreffing the following lines to You, tho: your LordChip may, perhaps, think them below. your notice, and conceive they might with more propriety have been thrown by, amidat the other rubbilh of the Cabinet, under the aufpices of Lord G- G - or his LordMip's not unfuccefisful competitor for public odium, the E- of S - $h$.

Government, my Lord, in a country like ours, lies open to a thoufand mifreprefentations:where each man has a right to comment upon it, freedom will now and then degenerate inta licentioufnefs; and carelefs and unthinking people people will impute thofe evils to Government itfelf, which ought only to be attributed to the bad adminiftration of it. But great care thotid be taken to make a due diftinction between the thing itfelf, and the management of it: the difference is effential: the moft falutary medicine in the hands of ignorance, may prove as fatal as the moft noxious poiton: the beft government, ill adminiftered, may become deftruc: rive, and produce every milchief it was inftituted to prevent.

How far this caution may be neceffary, or in any degree applicable to the thate and temper of the pretent times, nuift be left to your Lordthip's better judgment to pronounce.

Convinced, however, as I am, that diffenfions in the Cabinet muft neceffarily produce thofe. ovils I have juft allided to; and that a weak and puillanimous minittry, fill more enfeebled by the late feceflion, Abrow a difgrace upon Government itfelf-1 call upon your Lordhip to ftand forth at this critical juncture, to repair the blunders of your colleagues; and, by a due exertion of that manly feirit you poffels, to reftore dignity to Government, and confidence in that Government to the nation at large.

The

( 4 )

The epithets weak and pufillanimous, which 1 have applied to the miniftry, may appear harfh.Are they ill founded? Could any but an adniniftration of that defcription, fupported by great majorities in parliament, fuppofed to enjoy in the higheft degree the confidence of their Sovereign, have reduced the empire to it's prefent melancholy (though, I truft, not defperate) fituation ? From fuch an adminiftration alone, could repeated affiftance have continually met with repeated difappointment.

Could any but fuch an adminiftration, with the grant of repeated aids to the fulleet extent of their demands, have had nothing in return to produce, year after year, but repeated apalogies for repeated difappointments and milcarriages.

It is but a poor confolation, my Lord, to reflect, that thofe evils which now furround us, are to be attribuesed to this or that particular fet of men ; ail naturally wifh to throw the weight of cenfure off their own fhoulders; and feem to think the: juftification of their own refpedive parties, an object of more momentous concern; than the well being, I had almoft faid, the very exiftence of the ftate.

Firf, The abfolute neceffity for an effential change of men and meafures in his Majefly's councils.

Secondly, The characters of thefe three Ministers, fo far as they are connected with, or can influence their public capacity or conduat.

It is, I believe, univerflly allowed, that no prince ever mounted the throne with fo fair a profpeet of alorious and happy reigh, as his prefent Majefty did, when the government devolved upon him in the year 1760 . A feries of great and brilliant fucceffes, during the war, in all quarters of the globe, had carried the nation to a degree of inportance, unknown in the mott brilliant periods of our hifory; and when the good old King was gathered from ws, he laid down his venerable head, not fuller of years than honour. Conqueft continued to follow the Britifh arms; and, as fomething thif was wanting to complete our triumph, Spain was induced by France to join her quarrel, and to contribute her fhare of trophies, to decorate the throne of the young Britifh monatch.

In 1763, peace was figned between the conzending fowers. I hall not trouble your letd

Ahip with the mefits or demerits of that treaty; but thall only obferve, that when Peace did come, the appeared unaccompanied with thofe Bleffings her almoft conftant attendants. Inftead of Concord, Faetion falked foremoft in her train. and fcarce were our hoftile exertions terminated, when internal divifions, domeftic feuds, arofe, and fpread their baneful influence thro' every part of the Empire. Under thefe inaufpicious appearances, amidit the threatening clouds which darkened almoft every part of the political how rizon, it ftill was funfhine over head; the quiet and difpaffionate looked up to government, and called upon thofe in whofe hands the adiminiftration of it was depofited, in order to difpel the growing tempeft, and reftore ferenity to the troubled fly. How were thefe expectations anfwered? Every former idea of government feemed already obfolete, and no new plan appeared to be form'd in lieu of them; the only groundupon which the minifters feemed agreed to proceed, was to aft in direft oppofition to every meafure of the late reign; and, as if furfeited with the repeated benefits arigng from that lyftem, to adopt a conduct as difonant from it in it's nature, as it has fince been found diametrically oppofire to it in it's effects. : Thort, my lord, the hiftory of the then adminiftration might be eafily miftaken for that of the prefent; and winh alike afford to impartial pofterity the noret cither fôr amulement or inttuetons than a kthd of political chsos, a cabinet of hareds and parches ; with this difference howevit the det eraio form berations of the former, were in a mannery confined to dometic matets ; thote of the later have been difected to more exten five and more important objects: but, in the refult, the p per. fectly agree', their contuftations equally fata to the country, have ended in nothing, but either ufelefs, ill-imed exertion, or misjudged unfarisfactory relaxation of Authority.

The interval however, between thete two add miniftrations, Alould hot be paffed over with. out fome notice. In the yen 6 man Aration was formed under the inmeciate aufpices of a Prince of the blood, whof charaeder independant of his high birth, furnifhed the mof trafonabte hope, that every cauf of complaint would be done away, and the king ap pear' 1 the moft Yplendid fituation a King cza appear in, enthroned in the hearts of his fubjegte This agreable profpect was ftill beightened by the truation of thofe ho compoled the them A ta Adminiftration: men of the firf property in the kingdom, ffounch friends th the reiguing family, family, and poffefing public confdence ;-fome: thing however, ftill was wanting to give weighe to their meafures, or even permanency to their fituation. Their Patron died in the Olober following - they may be faid in a political fenfe, to have lingered on till the next fummer, and then expired. The fhore duration of this adminiftration and the grounds upon which they did, and meant to have acted, will give it the giir of A parinnthefis in the hiftory of the Regn.

( 9 )

An adififnifitration which was called Lord Chatham's, was the next in rotation; but, whether owing to the bad healch of that great man, or to what caure 1 know not, it appears as if he had lent his name to them, and nothing elfe; it was not very lorig before he quitred them; and foon after, Feveral of the members of the preYent, were infinuated into that adminittration the foon overpowered the remaining few, whom, I may call original members, and boldy (perhaps raftiy) fet up for themelves.

The American war broke out; how that war has been conducted; what Alliances have been formed to counterbalance the hotile defigns of pur heighbours, now leagued with our revolted colonites what fteps were taken to prevent the junction of the combined fleet s whaticifare has been given to our European enemies; to arm and aet againt us - the public will, I hopre e'er long be informed of. If thefe ate not fufficient to: deftroy the leaft confidence in our prefent miniftry, I would call your Lordibip's attention to Ireland-it is not the layingla few: papers of ingports and exports before the two thqufes, that. will fatisfy the Parliament, or the people of this country, in regard to the flate of Irelanaw No, minifters have Chamefulty neglected the mutual interefts of both Kirgdoms; and will $\mathrm{I}_{\text {truft }}$ * be made to anfwer for it It is not the paltry. fubterfuge of the Minifter of this or that paricular départment, upon which the blame liess. faying, he afted with the confent of the reft of the cabinet, that is to fatisfy publie enquiry. The whole cabinet is relpoifible: and if one individual Arecns himferf behind his calleagues, the accufation muft be generaly in order to come at the truth. -ffithe meafures of the King's fervants have been fueh, as to jullify she making the above enquirys is it prudent or fafe tg purfue them farther? the dear baught, experience of five melancholy years, is alfuffient anSwer to the queftion. Or can we entertain any well grounded hope, that thofe men, who have distated, or at leaft adopted fuch meaiures, and thereby brought us to the very brink of ruin, merit any longer the public confidence? A brief fketch of their refpective charafters will, I think, fülly fatisfy us in that particular.

The noble lord at prefent firt C - r of the $\mathrm{T}-\mathrm{y}$ and $\mathrm{C} \rightarrow-\mathrm{r}$ of the $\mathrm{E}-\mathrm{C}_{\mathrm{r}}$, from his Gituation, naturally prefents himfelf the firt to our confideration. Though his Lordhipeannoc, I think, lay any claim to the character of agreat miniter, he certainly is entitled to that of a good man; and viewed in a domettic fight it is not flattery to look upon him as equalled by few, excelled by none: and whether we confider him in the capacity of a a Father, Son, Hufband, or Friend, it would be detraction not to pronounce him an exemplary character. Eew people can boaft a greater Share of that kind of pleafantry which fets the table in a soar, and ferves to enliven converfation. Tho' certainly not to be reckoned among ourfirt wits, he poffefles an infinise fuind of humpur which now and then, indeed, fhews, itfelf in improper placess and during the mof important deliberations. He certainly is a moft excellent companion, and tho his fallies are always lively and parp pointed, I never knew him accufed of faying an ill patured thing. The qualicies of his heart have pever

( $\mathbf{1 2}_{2}$ )

never been, I believe, called in queftion; and for long as good intentions joined to probity and integrity, remain refpetable among mankind, his Lordfhip never can want an Advocate ó of nwoun

Happy had it been for that noble Lord, fortunate for his country, had fate ordained hionto have lived in lefs bufting times, or to haye co. operated with fome great and aetive minifter. Under the direction of the late Earl of Chatham, when in the full vigour of his abilities, Lord N - - h might have proved no defícicable minifter; but his Lordfhip never pofeffed that degret either of difcerment or activity fo effentialIy neceffary for the fituation he is placed in.

Indolence, my Lord, confidered as a quality in individuals, may be paffed over as insipid; in' minifters it becomes criminal; they have the public welfare to anfwer for. Indolence in them may equally permit the mof fatal, or prevent the mof falutary meafures from being carried into execution : and it is of little importance to the nation, whether a minifter poffefles the beft or wortt qualities, if his indolence is of fo confirmed a nature, as to prevent the effect of either.

$\left(i_{3}\right)$

That inactivity, the natural refult of habitual indolence, thas been the charateriftic of $\mathrm{L}-\mathrm{d}$ N Hent hadminiffation, is a truth too well known to yotr Leordflip to teed any arguments in fupport of it. And turely, my Lord, in times like thete' when the mof vigourous meafures, refutting from manly and decifive councils, are abfoturely ${ }^{3}$ neceffary to enable us to itruggle againf the complicated miichief that furrounds us, indolence is guilt, and the public intereft demands it hould no longer be permitted to difgrace our courcils. The nation hes an undoubted right to expect effential fervice-an ac: tive line of conduat in thofe, to whom it's moft importantrights and interefts are confided; and no private confideration ought to jultify publig neglect. The motives which indused Lewis XIV. to the difinifion of M : de Chaimellart are not iaapplicable to our prefent fubject-La caufe de la difgrace de M. de Chamellart, (fays the Marihal de Berwick in his memörs) venoit du dechainemens * de tout le monde contre lui, de maniere

This defcription of the French minitter in 1709, to my idea, coriefponds fo much with that of the Englifh minifter feventy years afterwards; that I could not help troubling your Lordghip with a recital of it.

1 hall now leave this noble Lord with this Thore farewell-! think his removal neceffary for the public fervice : but however 1 may difike the Minifter, I cannot but efteem the Man.

The character of the firtt $\mathrm{C}-r$ of the A- $y$, fo far as is necelfary for the prefent purppofe, may be comprized in a very fmall compars, in being in alrnoft every one refpect the direet contrary to $\mathrm{L}-\mathrm{d} \mathbf{N}$ h's. It ${ }^{1}$ niay be neceflary, however, to mention one particular circtimtance of this nable. Lord; which we winh to attribute to his want of memory (no fran defeet, by the bys in a great political character) that is, his pofitively afferting facts in one leffiot, which his Lordhip as Atrenuoully denies in anothet This, with other fimilar circumitances, all, without doubt, arifing from the fame caufe, have preduced one difagrecable ef-fect-an almoft univerfal want of ronfidence in his I-- p's integrity. Were further particu. lars neceffary, I would refer your Lord/hip to the whole fleet of England, but Ratter myfelf no new argument is wanting to prove, that the removal of this minitter is devoutly to be wifhed.

The $\mathrm{S}-\mathrm{y}$ of $\mathrm{S}-\mathrm{m}$ for the $\mathrm{A}-\mathrm{nD}$ --t, prefents the laft, tho by no means the leaft fitbjed for difcufion. The hiftory of this Perfon would furnifh matter to fupply a volume, were it neceffary; from the fingle confideration of a man crufhed (as one thould have thought) bencath a load of ignominy, daring to offer, or being fuffered to intrude himfelf upon the nation in a great public character Pofterity will fcarcely credit the fact; nay the recital almoft ftaggers the faith of thofe who have been eyewitneffes to ir, and muft to no inconfiderable degree have furprized the noble Lord himfelf, I dall him noble, for by birth he is (f) ; f his memory recains the leaf trace of certain sirgumftances Which happened at a very early Perigd of fthe prefent reign. His Lordibip will Gid it no fmall difficulty, be his abilities what they may to atcount for his own promotion. If anked by himfelf, it was a proof of inprecedented wgakness; if recommended by others, let them be anifwerabie for it, if hiving; accurfed be their mermory, if now no more. In cither cafe, it was a difgrace upon every foldier, every individ aid man of honour in the king dom ; 2 hur cat apon the facred memory of the deceafed Nonarch and in infult upon the Puilic. The minitry who have received him their conteague, are furely in that retpect culpable; 10 to a certain degres are all thofe who have fupporied a Miniftry of which he was a member, whether in parliament or elfewhere. To this charge my Lord, I , as an individual, plead guilty. No matter in what sphere of life I move - The only excure $I$ can make to my own confcience, is the reputation of the great political abilities I had heard atcribed to him-abilities, which confidering the Guation we were in, I thought tright juftify an appointment, which, in regard to every other confideration, I could not but abhor.

The fruits of his Lordhip's councils will fully explain how far my expectations have been anfwerd. 1 hiall now, my Lord, beg leave to Quit this difagreeable fubject, with only obrervine that this Lord is furely the mof ftiking, Hot the only example, of the rame perfon having, at two furch remate periods, and in fuch different lines, brought, or ar leaft Ifa iramply contributed to bring, difgrace uponhis Country. I believe, indeed, no other country would have fuffored the experiment to have been tried a fecond time, by employing a perfon under, Gmilar difadvantages-at the former period he could not effeet it further than perfonally to himfelf. Pray Heaven his efforts of the fame fort, may not at the latter meet with a more general fuccefs!

Such, my Lord, are the charatters of three of the leading Cabinet Minitters: and are thefe men of fo peculiar a nature as to derive confidence from ill fuccefs, or to demand fupport in return for difappointment? They themfelves cannot, I hould think, reproach with any degree of juttice, thofe who have hitherto fupported them, and who now withdraw their fupport from them. Great numbers in both houfes, who have hitherto voted with them, aeted, I truft, upon fair and honourable principles. Parliament could no further be concerned than in judging of the practicability, expediency, or propriecy of certain meafures. The moment fuch meafures obtained the fanction of parliamentary approbation, it became incumbent on the executive power to carry them into execution. Every affiftance the nation could beftow, minifters have received: tow onlgiheavy taxes have been patiently fubmitted to by the public, but individuals have contribured their private fortunes to an enormous'amount. In a word, no Adminiftration, I believe, ever received a greater degree of fupport, both from parliament and people, than the prefent have experienced; and, therefore, that Adminiftration mult incur the blame, of either having fhamefully neglected, or grofsly mifapplied, thofe powers wherewith they were intrufted.

I know it has been, and I take for granted will be urged in favour of Minifters, that they have been continually thwarted in their plans by the artful machinations of oppofition, nor only by ill judged or feditious principles publickly avowed, tut likewife by the fecret practices of difappointed men. For argument fake, 1 will fuppofe this affertion to be proved, and upon that fingle ground thall bring a more ferious charge than any I have yet proved againtt them.

[^1]yians of Government. From their own thaid connivance they become Partnets in the gith ${ }^{4}$ Whith whis only aifference, the eriminality of the others may be fuppofed to foring from a fource freis quently productive of good as welly as bàd cr feets-I mean ambition'; while thetrs can alone be derived from that woit cometernprible of

Were a ftranger, who knew nothing of our country but it's language, to be introduced into our houfes of Parliament during the courfe of the debate, he would imagine himfelf prefent at the pleading of a mof extraordinary caufe; and from a fort of tech inical language common to all parties, would infer, that the Minority, and every indizidual out of doors, were ELCtiffs againft the K -m, and the majority Deferdants. Hisconjeeture would furely be excufable; for Winle the beat of debate is fuffered to carry peoph away from the immediate object of difciffion, and to become little better than the veticte of perfonal invective, the Atranger cannot be expected to form any favourable ideas of either branch of our legillature in particular, or of our conftitution in gencral.

To a want of caution in fome of our firt chatacters; I mult atribute a fatal idea entertained by soc many; of feparate interefts in the $X \operatorname{ling}$ and people An ideb lam convinced, not lef unconftitutiond jin jets, principle, than dangerous in it's tendency to Their caufe, is one, their dittrefs or profpgrity is mutual; bound by the fame laws, the, prefervation and obfervance of thofe laws is a duty cepually incumbent an them both, and, from their effect alone, can the Sovereign, or the meanefl fubject in his ctominions, derive fecurity. The King's minifters are not only to be confidered as fervants of the Crown, but as fervants of the People confequently, their politicat chat racter tequires them to aft confiftently with that duty they owe the public; the executive part of government natarally falls to their lot; and in the adminiftration of it, if they fuffer themfolves to be insimidated by any man, or fet of men, they beutay their truft.

This plea, my Lord, (true orfalfe, Iknow not) which they have brought againft their opponents, being the only one I have heard urged by the friends of Adminiftration, in excufe for theirapparent want of conduct or ability, I thought merited fome notice; and to thei: own advócates, I muft afcribe the origin of my laft charge againf them.

I have now, my Lord, troubled your LordThip with thofe reafong which have convinged me that a change is requifite, and have pointed out to ycu thofe Minifters whofe rempyalappears to me effentially necelfary to the public, welfare, 1 beg leave now to addrefs my felf more; partio cularly to your Lordhip, not only ypon thofe grounds I mentioned in the beginning of my letr ter, but from motives of a ftill mare perfonal nature.

The moment, my Lord, you were by your Sovereign intrufted with the cuftody of the Great Seal of England, your Lordßip's acknowledged abilities, and manly conduct, both in your Profeffional and Senatorial capacity, joined to your new fituation in the Cabinet, prefented you to public view a great political character Every individual, who wilhed vell to Government, rejoiced at the appointments

Unconnetted with any party, either in doors or without, I can only anfwer for my mpa thoughts on the occafion-I conceived the moft flatrering hopes of public profperity being so ttored, from the opinion I entertained of twos of bis Majefty's then Minifters; thinking thempofn feffed

From the efforts of thefe two Minifters, a expected Government would have derived importance, and indolence and mdecifioh have been forced to give way to firmnefs and activity. The two minifters I allude tc, were your Lordhip and the late Lord Prefident. Judge then, my Lord, how all thefe hopes were blafted-when I found that noble Lord declare himfelf incapable of remaining longer of the Cabinet, confiftently with bonour to himfelf, or fervice to the public-and when I heard your Lordfip, I believe not the very fame day, but a very Thott time after, declare as publickly, That though from your office you mult be confidered as refponfible for public meafures, you did not take any part in the political bufinefs of the Ca binet, but confined yourfelf folely to the :"e of your Profeflion-that moment, my Lord, was the laft in which I entertained the fmalleft degree of confidence in his Majefty's Minifters-that declaration of your Lordihip, carried convietion in it, to almoft all who heard it, of the abfolute necemity of an effential change both of men and meafures.

The ingenious author of fome leters lately publified, addreffed to the Earl of Cathat; condemns the idea of any Retrofpect \% inqthis general affertion, I muft beg teave to difertwith him; though great care flould be bblefued in the conduct of it. No Recrofpect prozeding from a peevifh or vinditive fipirt, eat be beheficial; but, on the conttary, a eooldifipamonte revifion of public matragement, bectineatref. fary, from every mozive of polity whd found reafoning. Juftice to thofe who are fufpected of mifconduct, would fuggeft the ideas if the public utility were out of the quethion. Minilters may have proceeded upon wreng grounds, though from the mon laudable'motives, They may have been deceived; and mifrepefeatation may have produced the mof fatal effects-mon the other hand, Minifters may either have been negligent, or criminal. At ali svente, a Retrofpeet will at leaft produce the goodeffeet, of difclofing the hidden caufes of our prefent unhappt firtuation ; and it will be forme confolation to thofe, under whofe Adminiffrationtwe ate reduced to it, if they can prove themfelves unfortunate only, not guilty.

The fole purpofe of this Letter, (after havigg frated thofe reafons which have convinced ine of the necefity of a change in adminifitration) is to capli uppon: your Lordghip in the moft earneff, though refpegfut manner, to contribute that weight of inflyence which your fation and abitiides give you a pigte to demand, to .d the greay, wiperk of our political falvation. Your Lorda Mipibeing she only perfon in the adminiftration, whome every party feems to refper, it is from you mone we cin hope for redrels.
-4 Your own penetration, joined to your acquaintancee with many men of the greatef abilities, camaturally vender you a cumpetent judge of the effential benefits, which mult arife from the employing thefe men in the public fervice. The tane talents, which, actuated by difappointed simbition, thake government to it's cenere, might in $/$ a conetrary ficuation, render it permanent, and give weight and efficacy to its meafures. It is a melancholy, bue a no lefs certain fact, that at this moment of public difficulty, your - Lordonip exeepred, the cabinet is as barren in poist of abilities, as of property. In fhort, my Lord, it affurds no ground for hope to ir's Friends, nor for defpondency to it's Enemies. Iadecifive in the forming, irrefolute in the execution of it's plans, is is become an object of general contempt: nor is there, I prefume, a likelihood of it's retrieving the fmalleft portion of it's former fplendour, fo long as thofe who now difgrace it, are fuffered to continue thero:

To remove from his Majefty's councils thoft Minitters, whofe weaknefs or wickednefs have tarnithed the honour of his Crown, and whofe meafures have brought his dominions to their. prefent melancholy firuation, to remedy shofe evils which their Adminiftration hath given rife to, and by adopting a new fyftem to reftore the national honour and public confidence, is the important task I wih to impofe upon your Lordhip. Arduous as it may appear, let us not deem it impracticable (for in that cale we are no longer a people). Your Principles, my Lord, I have no doubt, incline you to the general properity : and when your Lordhip confiders the prefent fituation of the country, you cannot, furely, tefrain one moment from exerting thofe fuperior talents you porees, in order to complete the glorious work of Reformation.

> FINIS.

[^0]:    * The general tenor of this paffage appearing to the author's idea, fo confonant to the prefent political fituation of the nable Lord, it was thought improper to alter any expreflion in it, etherwife he would have fubftituted a lefs harflexpreffion in lieu of dechainement, which cannot with propriety be applied in the prefent inftapee, as the above character of his Lordfhip futticjently erinces.

[^1]:    I mean that oi having, from an unpardonable degree of pufillanimity, fuffered their perfonal opponents to counseract the nof important
