The Security Council on the 11th July continued its discussion of the proposals. The Bulgarian representative again took the floor, arguing that, since the Greek question was being treated under Chapter VI of the Charter, the consent of all the parties concerned was required for the establishment of the semi-permanent commission recommended in the Report. Moreover, to propose that, in the future, support of armed bands should in all circumstances constitute a threat to peace would be dangerous. There had

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

been as yet, he affirmed, no discussion on the verdict of guilt brought against Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria, a verdict to which only five nations had subscribed.

Colonel Hodgson, the Australian representative, then pointed out that the conclusions of the Balkans Commission did not condemn but were conclusions on the evidence collected. It was suspicious, he thought, that while Greece was ready to accept the idea of a semi-permanent commission on her territory, her three northern neighbours should oppose it. It could not be argued that the Balkans Commission was unnecessary, in view of the number of fresh incidents which had since been reported to it. Finally, the U.S. delegate declared that in his view the Security Council had all the powers required by its responsibilities, irrespective of the Chapter under which a question was being considered.

At the next meeting of the Security Council on the 15th July the French representative supported the proposals contained in the Report, but advocated the setting up of a smaller commission rather than one composed of all members of the Security Council. The Chinese delegate, also, supported the proposals, as did with slight amendments the Colombian representative who spoke of the need for conciliation. Senator Warren Austin stated that he was prepared to accept any amendments which did not affect fundamental principles. He urged the need for a speedy settlement of the matter in view of the disturbing news received from Greece.

The Security Council on the 17th July devoted two further sessions to the Report. The sentiments expressed by Mr. Gromyko on the 8th July were there re-echoed by the Polish representative with the customary modifications. He said that all the representatives were agreed that the four countries should do everything possible to put an end to the present tension and should conclude border conventions. He would recommend in addition that Greece should restore normal diplomatic relations with her three neighbours. The speeches of the Yugoslav and Soviet delegates showed no evidence of a change in views already expressed at previous sessions. The U.K. delegate at the end of the meeting deplored allegations made by the Polish delegate, in the chair "by the hazard of the alphabet," that the three countries had been found guilty simply because they had been unable to disprove the charges brought against them and that eight members of the Balkans Commission had reached their conclusions "for some extraneous reasons." The point was taken up by the Australian delegate and, as a result, Dr. Lange offered to have the offending remark expunged from the record.

Armament Questions

The Security Council has continued at intervals a desultory discussion of the Military Staff Committee's Report.

The Commission for Conventional Armaments met on the 16th July, and, on a motion by the Colombian representative, which was approved without a vote, it established a Working Committee of the whole to proceed in accordance with the plan of work which has been approved by the Security Council. The Working Committee is authorised to set up sub-committees as and when necessary and to define their terms of reference.

Economic Commission for Europe

The second session of the Economic Commission for Europe began at Geneva on 5th July and ended on 17th July, a period when public attention was largely occupied with the Paris discussions of the Marshall proposals. Interest was, naturally focussed on the relation of E.C.E. to the organisation being set up at Paris; but this tends to conceal the achievement of this session in transforming the Emergency Economic Committee for Europe into a permanent body with a much wider membership, whose activities will be closely co-ordinated with those of E.C.I.T.O. and E.C.O. to which it is also a successor.

Before this session, U.S.S.R. had done little to hinder the formation of E.C.E.; but, after the breakdown of the three-Power talks on the Marshall offer, the familiar division between East and West appeared here also—though both East and West seem to be of one mind in expecting small practical results from E.C.E. at present. Russia now finds in E.C.E. the same threat of "interference" as in the Committee of European Co-operation, e.g., over the inland transport and coal, and especially over Germany.

An explanation of what had been done in Paris to set in train a response to Mr. Marshall's offer was given to the Commission by the British and French delegates, who stressed the need for a quick answer and, while regretting the outcome of the Big Three consultations in Paris, hoped to avoid a repetition of the dispute in E.C.E. which would, of course, be kept in touch with the work of the Paris organisation. M. Zorin (U.S.S.R.) read, with deliberate emphasis, a long prepared statement, in which he said that the British and French had made their plans before they consulted U.S.S.R. who had no information about the real possibility of American aid or about what Mr. Clayton had been saying in London, that the British and French did not tell U.S.S.R. what their intentions were or what the American plan really was, that they intended not the economic recovery of Europe but the use of this plan to set up an organisation outside the United Nations to interfere in the economic life of European countries for their own benefit, and that they were trying to get Germany included, though this was a matter for the four occupying Powers and no one else. The Anglo-French assurance that no derogation of sovereignty was intended, continued M. Zorin, was belied by the Greek and Turkish agreements with U.S.A. M. Molotov at Paris had shown how the matter should be handled and had warned against the danger of dividing Europe. No one would believe the Anglo-French assurance that they were not trying to bypass E.C.E. and to divide Europe. Russia knew only too well what interference meant; she only wanted co-operation to restore and secure political and economic freedom for all.

Mr. Neil (U.K.) at once objected to this scurrilous attack, and demolished the accusations one after another. He ridiculed the supposed anti-Soviet "plot" and said that M. Molotov's demand for a previous assurance that Congress would support the Marshall offer "showed an infantile ignorance of democratic procedure." M. André Philip (France) said that M. Zorin's accusations were moonshine—mere romance. To ask the United States to foot the bill for European requirements without showing, as M. Blum had done for France in Washington, what they were doing for themselves was not consistent with either dignity or independence. The Marshall offer, he thought, gave Europe the chance to become a going concern once more. No information was withheld, and countries were free to give what replies they wished. He did not for for a moment believe that Russia withdrew because she feared a plot but assumed that it was because she could not understand and was over-suspicious.

At a later discussion the Swedish delegate supported by those of the other Scandinavian countries, emphasised that the Paris organisation which was temporary, must not be in conflict with E.C.E.

The Belgian delegate (M. de Stryker) brought up the question of German trade. He thought the method of arranging import and export transactions in dollars at an arbitrary rate of exchange a cumbrous one, and a serious obstacle to European recovery. M. Zorin objected to this matter being discussed at all; it was outside the scope of E.C.E. and was the concern of the four occupying Powers; moreover, twenty-one days' notice should have been given. The Belgian proposal to add this item to the Agenda was, however, approved; in the discussion which followed, the U.K. delegate undertook to bring to the notice of the zonal authorities any claims which the non-controlling Powers might wish to make. This question will come up again at a later session of the Council.

Proposals for liaison between the Commission's secretariat and the Occupation authorities in Germany led to a similar clash of opinions. The Russian view was that E.C.E. should have no direct communication with zonal authorities; that would only play into the hands of the Western Powers, who wanted to divide Germany and Europe. This was opposed by U.S.A., U.K. and France. In this connection Mr. McNeil asked history to say who had violated the Potsdam doctrine that Germany was an economic unity, the Western Powers or Russia. In the end it was decided that E.C.E. should be the forum for questions of trade between Germany and the rest of Europe and that while the occupying Powers alone had the right to decide (and where necessary to allocate), E.C.E. should have liaison both with Berlin and with the Zones.

The report of the Inland Transport Committee was adopted, after a strong Russian objection—which was not accepted by the Commission—to that Committee having any say in the matter of international waterways. The Coal Committee, successor of E.C.O. with the addition of U.S.S.R., was also set up; M. Zorin clearly wanted this to be merely a consultative body and to have no initiative. It will continue, however, to make recommendations on allocations direct to member Governments.

The new Committees are to begin their meetings early in September. The next session of the E.C.E. will probably be held in January 1948.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

THE EGYPTIAN FINANCIAL AGREEMENT

(This special article on the question of sterling balances in connection with the recent interim agreement between the United Kingdom and Egypt is contributed by a member of the Economic Intelligence Department.)

By the American loan agreement of 6th December, 1945, the United Kingdom undertook that all currently earned sterling should be freely available after 15th July, 1947, for current transactions anywhere, and that any sterling balances which were available for expenditure within the sterling area on or after that date should be available for payment for current transactions in any currency area. The U.K. Government also undertook to negotiate an early settlement of the question of accumulated sterling balances with countries of the sterling area. These balances were to be divided into three categories :—

"(a) balances to be released at once and convertible into any currency for current transactions;

"(b) balances to be similarly released by instalments over a period of years beginning in 1951; and

"(c) balances to be adjusted as a contribution to the settlement of war and post-war indebtedness and in recognition of the benefits which the countries concerned might be expected to gain from such a settlement."

So far as the sterling area is concerned no specific agreements are needed to provide that sterling earnings and sterling balances shall be expendable in any currency area. In all cases except Egypt, Iraq and Iceland the U.K. has always allowed such transfers as are authorized by the exchange control authorities of the various sterling area countries. The expenditure by Egypt, Iraq and Iceland of scarce currencies was governed by Scare Currency Agreements, but these expired on the 15th July.

The problem in the case of the sterling area countries is to control the rate at which existing sterling balances are used. No specific agreements are necessary with the British Commonwealth Governments and the Colonies; with the former there are already understandings concerning the sterling balances, while the Colonies' balances are under the effective control of the United Kingdom Government. This leaves the disposal of the balances of India, Egypt and Iraq as the main problem. There are several difficulties common to these three. First, any favourable terms regarding the release of balances granted to one country are likely to be claimed also as a right by the others. The seriousness of the consequent strain on the British balance of payments can be seen from the fact that, while the Egyptian sterling balances total some £400 million, the Indian balances are some three times this figure. Secondly, all three countries are extremely reluctant to agree to any writing down of the balances (the "adjustment" referred to in the American loan agreement), arguing that they require all the funds for their own needs, and further that such writing down would imply that they had not played their full part in the war and had overcharged the United Kingdom for the goods and services which they had supplied (although in fact this argument has not been used by the U.K. in the negotiations).

Against this background negotiations with Egypt were resumed in London in June. The original intention was that an agreement covering a period of five years should be made, but the Egyptians insisted that as a condition of such agreement we should immediately release £22 million of their balances in the form of gold to fortify the reserves of the National Bank of Egypt. To this the United Kingdom was unable to accede. In these circumstances the Egyptians refused to enter into anything more than an interim agreement, and on this basis an agreement was signed on 30th June, covering the period to the end of 1947. The two Governments reserved their position in regard to all questions not dealt with in the agreement which affect the ultimate settlement of the balances, such as scaling down, rates of interest, etc. There will be consultation later in the year with a view either to extending the agreement, or replacing it by a new one.

In broad outline the terms of the agreement are that existing sterling balances owned by banks in Egypt are frozen except for certain sums which are released as follows :—

(1) A sum sufficient to cover confirmed credits outstanding on 30th June, 1947, is excluded from the blocking;

(2) £8 million is released forthwith. (This is a generous allowance, representing an annual rate of release of some 4 per cent. of the total blocked balances, and was only agreed to after hard bargaining);

(3) The equivalent of any of the allocation of foreign exchange granted under the Hard Currency Agreement which is not spent before 15th July, 1947, is released;

(4) A working balance of £12 million is also made available to Egypt. It is intended that this sum shall be used merely as a cushion against fluctuations in the Egyptian balance of payments position due, for example, to a seasonal fall in exports. Thus, while this balance may be drawn on temporarily, it is intended that over a period it should be maintained and not reduced. (The working balance is necessary because hitherto Egypt could rely on her hard currency allocation and her sterling reserves to meet such temporary difficulties, but now she must rely on her current earnings plus the releases mentioned above.)

(5) There may be certain other releases to pay for sales of military stores and equipment to Egypt.

The sums released, together with Egypt's current earnings of sterling, are available for making any payments within the sterling area or any current payments outside the sterling area. Sterling standing to the credit of firms and individuals (as distinct from banks) in Egypt is not restricted or blocked in any way, and is available in the same way as the unblocked sterling of banks, unless the Egyptian Government decide to requisition these balances, in which case they will be blocked.

The nature of these arrangements implies that free movement of funds, including capital movements, between the United Kingdom and Egypt is no longer permitted; indeed, specific provision is made that capital movements shall only take place with the agreement of both Governments and under their joint supervision. Sterling has become a scarce currency from the Egyptian point of view. Egypt consequently has withdrawn from the sterling area. The significance of this should not be over-emphasised. A distinction must be drawn between the pre-war "sterling bloc" (consisting of many countries, foreign as well as other members of the British Commonwealth and colonies, which maintained their reserves in sterling for convenience and security because much of the merchanting trade of the world was canalized through London) and the war-time "sterling area," with a more restricted number of members who marched in line as regards import policy and the utilisation of foreign exchange for essential purposes. The great advantage of the arrangement was that the movement of funds between member countries was freely permitted. But, with the advent of the 15th July and the unrestricted availability of currently-earned sterling for current expenditure anywhere, the pre-war concept of the sterling bloc is once more tending to become more important than the war-time mechanism of the sterling area.

Egypt will still keep her reserves in London and can finance trade with all parts of the world through London, and so remains a member of the sterling bloc in the pre-war sense. It is simply owing to the fact that sterling has become scarce that Egypt will have to impose exchange restrictions which involve leaving the sterling area; this should, however, in practice add no more interference to the conduct of trade between Egypt and the United Kingdom than it does to trade between Western Europe and this country.

Finally it should be mentioned that since the Sudanese sterling balances are inextricably mixed up with those of Egypt, the Sudan has also left the "sterling area," and is also to treat sterling as a foreign currency for exchange control purposes. During the currency of the agreement Egypt will cover the Sudan's needs of sterling, while for other currencies the Sudan will go direct to London for its requirements. There will be periodical transfers from the free to the blocked sterling accounts of the National Bank of Egypt or vice versa, according to whether there has been a net receipt or a net disbursement by Egypt on account of residents in the Sudan.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267555

THIS DOCUMENT IS THE PROPERTY OF HIS BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT

SECRET

17336

L 4708/6/405

This document is SECRET: as such it is intended for the personal information of authorised recipients only and must on no account be communicated in whole or in part to anyone else

Weekly Political Intelligence Summary

No. 402

FOREIGN OFFICE,
(RESEARCH DEPARTMENT),
30TH JULY, 1947

Copy No. 143

CONTENTS

The passages side-lined in black are GUARD

	Page
Europe—
Germany	1
Austria	3
Czechoslovakia	4
Poland	5
Soviet Union	6
Scandinavia	8
Low Countries	9
France	9
Spain and Portugal	11
Europe (contd.)—
Italy	12
South-Eastern Europe	14
Middle East	17
Far East	22
United States	25
Latin America	27
United Nations	28

EUROPE

GERMANY

No major decisions on the Western Powers' policies in Germany were reached during the week. Anglo-U.S. discussions in Berlin on the level of industrial production and coal management are still suspended. Both Mr. Bevin and Mr. Marshall have informed M. Bidault separately that nothing will be done to implement the new level of industry for the time being (See under "France"). Mr. Bevin and Mr. Marshall agree that in the interval there should be consultations between the three Governments. Mr. Lovett, U.S. Under-Secretary of State, said on the 24th July that his department had not yet made up its mind exactly what form these consultations should take but the French must not get the impression that they could veto the subjects to be discussed. He was careful to state that there had as yet been no definite commitment to hold tripartite conversations. (See also under "United States.")

Anglo-U.S. talks on Ruhr coal are to be held after all in Washington, despite the disagreement over the scope of the discussions recorded in last week's Summary. H.M. Government have now informed the State Department that they are willing, in principle, to send a small party to discuss the technical problems of coal production. The State Department have replied that they would not object to studying anything related directly to coal. It has been agreed that the French Government should be kept fully informed of the talks in order to prevent renewed suspicion that they are something more than technical and might prejudice French plans for the Ruhr. It has also been decided that publicity about the talks should be avoided. The date and agenda have not been finally decided. Unofficial statements suggest that the United States will ask for a half share in running the mines. Great Britain may enter the talks at a disadvantage since there has already been strong public criticism in the United States of alleged British inefficiency in the Ruhr. (See also under "United States.")

The President of the Bi-Zonal Economic Council gave a clear welcome to the

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Marshall proposals at the Council Meeting on the 22nd July. He said that experts from all four zones ought to collaborate in preparing plans and that the Council was prepared to supply representatives from the Bi-Zonal area. The usual type of SED propaganda has been issued against the Conference on European Economic Co-operation, which Neues Deutschland of the 17th July dubbed "The Paris Miscarriage." Berlin Tagesspiegel, representing moderate and intelligent German opinion, welcomed the Conference as "The first break in an unsuccessful series of conferences." Mr. Bevin's statement that not only Great Britain but the whole British Commonwealth was ready to help in European reconstruction caused particular satisfaction. Tagesspiegel remarked that if other countries with overseas territories followed suit nearly two-thirds of the world's raw materials would be available and East European isolation would cease to be a danger. The paper hoped that France would not be presented with any fait accompli on the level of industry. It commented on the need for speed in working out a West European plan, since Russia was already busy in strengthening the position in Eastern Europe by a network of trade agreements. An extension of the existing trade pact between the Eastern zone of Germany and Poland has already been agreed, according to Leipzig Radio, and a Polish official has stated that trade with Poland has grown by 100 per cent. compared with last year. It is reported that an agreement with the Soviet Union is also being discussed. Of course, Russia has for some time been exporting raw materials for processing in Germany.

In view of U.S. criticism, special importance is being attached to the new incentives which are to be introduced for Ruhr miners from the 28th July. Workers in mines which reach certain targets in output during the next four months will be rewarded by food parcels from U.S. army stocks. When daily output in the Ruhr exceeds 245,000 tons any shortages in the official basic food ration will be replaced by additions to the special miners' rations. Some of the foreign exchange earned by coal exports will be used to import consumer goods which can be bought by the miners under the scheme whereby "points" are awarded to those who work their full shifts. This is part of a plan shortly to be introduced under which 5 per cent. of the foreign exchange earned by all types of exports will be set aside to buy goods for the benefit of the workers in the Bi-Zonal area, while another 5 per cent. will form a reserve fund on which German exporters can draw, in proportion to their sales, for buying a wide range of materials. Hitherto the Germans have had no say in the choice of imports. A somewhat similar concession was granted in the Soviet zone recently. The export price of coal is to be raised from 1st September, but this is in no way related to the new concessions.

Political squabbles are already threatening to reduce the usefulness of the new Bi-Zonal Organisation. The Social Democrats have gone into opposition. It will be recalled that there are four main levels of authority. The legislative Economic Council—now to consist of 53 not 54 members—has one representative for every 750,000 inhabitants; the Social Democrats and Christian Democrats now have an equal number of seats but on the whole there is a slight "right-wing" majority. The Council in turn has divided itself into a number of specialist committees, four of them headed by Social Democrats, three by representatives of the Christian Democrat Party and one by the latter's present ally, the Free Democrats. The Economic Committee, which has one member from each State, has a strong Social Democrat majority, chiefly because large but unprogressive States like Bavaria only count for the same as small but "Leftist" States like Schleswig-Holstein. It is already clear that these groups are all pulling in different directions. The fourth important series of appointments had to be made by the Economic Council on the 24th July—these were the Directors to head the Departments who administer the laws. These Directors had first to be nominated by the Executive Committee. The Social Democrats wanted to nominate a candidate for the key post of Director of Economics but the Christian Democrats tried to exact the impossible bargain that the SPD should then give up their representatives from Lower Saxony and North Rhine/Westphalia on the Executive Committee. The SPD refused and when it came to voting on the appointment in the Economic Council, the CDU sided with the FDP in rejecting the SPD candidate. Thereupon the SPD withdrew its candidates for all the other four directorships, which were filled by Christian Democrats, and announced that it would pass to "practical constructive opposition." It is singularly unfortunate that this should happen at a time of strong Communist attacks on the whole set-up, since the SPD will necessarily attack it also. Dr. Schumacher said the CDU had given the Communists the chance to denounce Western Germany as capitalistic and anti-Socialist. In an obvious effort to extend his own party's ranks he also claimed that the CDU, by making common cause with more right wing parties, was striking a heavy blow against working class Catholics who had voted for the CDU and who now saw those votes misused to launch a campaign against Socialism. The CDU leader Adenauer has naturally taken the opportunity to launch an attack on the Socialist-controlled Executive Committee as a structural failure. The German population already appears to be dangerously apathetic about the new Organisation and will become more so if it gives itself up to fruitless wrangling.

Political developments in Germany since the breakdown of the Moscow Conference have increased the need for the Christian Democrats and Liberal Democrats in the Soviet zone to decide whether they are looking East or West. Until recently the Liberal Democrats pursued a policy of complete subservience to the Socialist Unity Party as the only means to preserve their organisation at all. The Christian Democrats were only a few degrees less submissive. In the anti-Fascist Bloc Committees which decide most matters of policy all three parties are represented, but the Socialist Unity Party has the additional support of the Trade Union League and wields the whip-hand. First signs of revolt came at the time of the Munich Conference when the one LDP premier tried to dissociate himself from the disruptive tactics of his SED colleagues, but was forced by Russian pressure to toe the line. The Chairman of the Party, Dr. Kuelz, continued repeatedly to proclaim his solidarity with SED policy, but many of his party dissented. On the 10th July the Berlin Group and some delegates from Brandenburg refused to support the re-election of Dr. Kuelz to be chairman and Berlin left the National Executive. On the 15th July, however, Berlin leaders succeeded in extracting a joint statement from Dr. Kuelz that "even the appearance of dependence on the SED" must be avoided. The statement also condemned SED attempts to strengthen its hand still further by including the Communist-controlled, but ostensibly "non-party," organisations such as the Cultural League in the Bloc Committees. Jakob Kaiser, Soviet zone Chairman of the CDU, made a most outspoken attack on these SED tactics on the 12th July. He is also the first Soviet zone politician openly to criticize the existence of internment camps and to protest against the unrest caused among the population by these measures and by forced recruitment of labour. (In the past month many thousand people from the Soviet zone have fled Westward mainly to escape labour direction. A Bavarian official stated that nearly 50,000 had reached Bavaria in the first half of July.) The toughening in the attitude of the CDU and many elements in the LDP is doubtless helped by the international developments resulting from Mr. Marshall's proposals and the parties' hope that they can make a stand now with less fear of reprisals because the Russians need, at least for the time being, to tread cautiously and to foster the allegiance of all parties in their zone to a policy of close economic collaboration with Eastern Europe. At the moment the Russians would probably prefer not to put all their eggs in one basket by completing the construction of a one-party State and giving the SED undisputed sway—and probably a swollen head. So far the SED press has not reacted except to give a cautious defence of their "Bloc" policy, but the Russians are reported to have called for the full text of Kaiser's speech.

Errata

Last week's Summary.—Page 2, column 2, line 30: Read "through providing" not "though providing." Page 3, column 2, line 13: Read (Government) not (Governments).

AUSTRIA

Austrian morale, already encouraged by the measures taken by the United States Government to relieve Austria's financial and economic difficulties and by participation in the Paris Conference on European Economic Co-operation, has received a further impetus as the result of a personal promise by Generalissimo Stalin that the repatriation of Austrian prisoners-of-war is to be completed by the end of 1947. This welcome news was contained in M. Stalin's reply to a letter of the 18th June from the four Communist Deputies in the Austrian Parliament. The Deputies had claimed that thousands of relatives of Austrian prisoners-of-war held in the Soviet Union had asked the Austrian Communist Party to intervene

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

for the return of the prisoners. The same Deputies have also appealed to Marshal Tito to speed up the repatriation of the Austrian prisoners-of-war in Yugoslavia.

Awareness of the political implications of leaving the Communists to pursue independent negotiations with the Communist Heads of the two States which hold the great majority of the Austrian prisoners-of-war has no doubt contributed to the Austrian Government's recent decision to set up a Commission, consisting of representatives of all three political parties, to deal with all questions concerning the Austrian prisoners. The Minister of the Interior reported on the setting up of this Commission at a meeting of the Austrian Cabinet on the 8th July. The fact that M. Stalin's reply to the Communist Deputies' letter, after an interval of five weeks, bore the same date as that on which the Commission resolved that a further letter, "this time to be written at the request of the Commission," should be despatched to M. Stalin, would seem to be not without significance in view of the Soviet Government's evident displeasure with the overwhelmingly People's Party-Socialist Austrian Government. The Commission is establishing direct contact with the Governments of Yugoslavia, Poland and Roumania in order to speed up the repatriation of the Austrian prisoners held by those countries. In response to a request from the People's Party the International Red Cross is trying to obtain lists of Austrian prisoners held by the various Governments.

Austrian Communists appear to be gathering their strength to meet what a K.P.O. instruction (to all sections) last May described as "the urgency and magnitude of the tasks with which the party will be confronted in the near future." The instruction referred to ordered a temporary but radical cutting down of compulsory meetings in order that individuals might be left free to tackle their particular party tasks. New Communist tactics vis-à-vis the Catholic Church (though by no means a change of heart) may have been foreshadowed in a talk over Vienna radio at the beginning of July when a Communist speaker pleaded the common social cause of Christianity and Communism. Politicians, he said, must not make the mistake of concerning themselves only with things temporal and asking the Church to confine itself to things spiritual; no Church that was loyal to its belief could agree to such a demand. Catholics and Communists had suffered together for liberty and human dignity; Communists regarded as their enemy not religion, but capitalism and fascism.

There has been an outbreak of infantile paralysis in Austria; the Federal Ministry for Social Administration has, however, denied that there is grave cause for anxiety. The most affected areas are Styria and the Tyrol. There was also a large increase in the number of new cases of pulmonary tuberculosis in April, but by the end of May the number of new cases had fallen to the previous level. Even in April the figures for Vienna were considerably below those for the corresponding month in 1946. The Austrian Students' Organisation has stated that no less than fifty per cent. of Austrian students are suffering from T.B. and that the students' health in general gives rise to great anxiety. For Austria as a whole the infant mortality rate fell steadily in April and May, when it was about at pre-war level; in Vienna, however, it continues to be very high.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA

Popular arguments now advanced as an explanation for the Czechoslovak refusal to attend the European Economic Co-operation Conference may briefly be summarised under four headings:—

(a) The Marshall Plan aims at reconstructing Germany without consulting either the United Nations Organisation or Soviet Russia;

(b) The Plan envisages the creation of a Western bloc;

(c) Czechoslovak participation would have endangered the harmonious working of the Republic's own Two-Year Plan;

(d) Distrust of the motives behind American interest in European economy.

Although these arguments are patently designed so as not to offend the Kremlin, the Czechs are, nevertheless, sincerely convinced that only a concerted effort by the United Nations can satisfactorily solve the German problem; hence they regard all talk of a Western loan to rebuild Ruhr industry or of an increase in Germany's steel output with grave suspicion. Therefore, they claim, the lack of Allied agreement on this question compels them to support the Russian viewpoint. Nor is such reasoning confined to the Communists alone. Even the non-Marxist parties pursue a line of thought similar to that of their political opponents. M. David, the Czech Socialist Speaker of the House, has reiterated the need for Slav collaboration against German revival, and in this he is supported by Dr. Drtina, the Socialist Minister for Justice, who was a member of the recent delegation to Moscow. M. Fierlinger, leader of the Social Democrats, has excused the Czechoslovak volte-face on the grounds of divergent Allied opinion on Germany's future and the possible rebirth of German nationalism (attacks on Wenzel Jaksch, for example, have reappeared in the press; he is alleged to be reorganising the Sudeten Germans to agitate for a revision of the Potsdam Agreement). Lidová Demokracie, organ of the Catholic People's Party, sees in the Marshall Plan merely a selfish attempt to ensure a stable market for surplus American output.

In the face of Soviet pressure, it is difficult to imagine what other official attitude Czechoslovakia, a small nation, can adopt: the conditions of the Koše Agreement and the Czech-Soviet Treaty of Alliance have clearly shaped its destiny. Dr. Zenkl, perhaps the most candid spokesman of the Czech Socialist Party, is reported to have revealed that the Russians would—if the Czechs persisted in their intention of attending at Paris—simply annul the Alliance. Such a threat would naturally account for the sudden reversal of the Government's attitude and explain their present insistence upon collaboration with Russia. The full effects of the Russian intervention will not be realised until the next elections are held. The fanaticism of the Communists, their organisation, the proximity of Russia and the new orientation given to political affairs in Eastern Europe, the uneasy state of international relations, as well as unpleasant recollections of 1938, may combine to ensure a larger Communist majority than was gained in 1946. It is not to be expected, however, that the non-Marxist parties with their sturdy traditions of independence and progressive socialism will yield without a keen struggle.

The stiffest and most reckless resistance is likely to come from the Slovak Democrats whose antipathy to the extreme Left is highly seasoned by their different religious and historical upbringing. (Nor will the Moscow "Diktat" have tempered the mood of the Slovak Right.) The gulf is further widened by the obstacles inherent in the formulation of the new Constitution, a difficulty which the special Commission of experts, drawn from all parties, is still unable to resolve. The demands of the Slovak Democrats in the Parliamentary Constitutional Committee are totally unacceptable to the other parties as being essentially "dualistic."

The Slovak Social Democrat Party, on the other hand, is pursuing a more realistic and sensible course. The Central Executive Committee of that Party, criticising both Communists and Democrats alike for their selfish attitudes, has declared for the formation of a single Social Democrat Party throughout the Republic.

The results of the Two-Year Plan for June are four per cent. below the average for the first six months of the year and were particularly unsatisfactory in the food industry. It should be remembered, however, that there were fewer working days in June, and the few results which have reached us so far for particular industries show a daily average above the previous month. Earlier in the month M. Zapotocký said that the hopes which he had placed in nationalised industry had been cruelly disappointed: the standard of industry under private ownership, on the other hand, had been fully maintained. Criticising the workers' discipline, he then emphasised the great responsibility of the trade unions for maintaining output. This outburst, obviously an embarrassment to the left-wing groups, seems to indicate that opinion in the factories is swinging away from the Communists.

(See also under "Hungary.")

POLAND

The evacuation of the German inhabitants of the former German territory east of the provisional Polish-German frontier was resumed in the spring. The Potsdam Agreement, in recognising that such transfers would have to be undertaken, left it to the Allied Control Council in Berlin to arrange for the reception of these evacuees. Eventually H.M. Government agreed to receive 1,500,000 into the British Zone of Germany. This number having now been received, the transfer, known as "Operation Swallow," has now been stopped, and the remaining Germans due to be transferred, numbering perhaps 500,000, are being housed in the Soviet Zone, which had not yet received its agreed numbers. Some discussion has arisen from the fact that some of the 1,500,000 now in the British Zone found their own way there; so that the number of Germans officially conveyed there is still below the agreed quota. This fact is not held to place any obligation on H.M. Government to accept any more transferees, particularly

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

in view of the existing overcrowding and extensive destruction in the British Zone, the need to accept Germans from Denmark, and the fact that the quota for receptions in the Soviet Zone has not yet been filled. It is not expected that the Polish Government will raise more than a formal protest against this decision.

A question in the House of Commons scheduled for the 30th July draws attention to the arrests of certain Socialists in Poland. The arrests appear to have been made in two waves, and it is considered probable that they were designed to serve a particular political purpose. The first wave, made last October and November, could be interpreted as a warning both to independent Socialists and members of the P.P.S. against anti-bloc activities during the election period. The second coincided with a period this summer during which relations between the P.P.S. and the P.P.R. (Communists) were strained.

The charges made by the Ministry of Public Security were of collaboration with a terrorist organisation run by General Anders and other underground movements, anti-State and anti-Soviet propaganda, and provision of material to a foreign intelligence service. In one instance, W.R.N. ("Freedom, Equality and Independence") was cited as the underground organisation concerned. It is known that many Socialists were members of W.R.N. which while it was anti-German was also anti-Soviet. Presumably the Communists aim at showing that W.R.N. still exists, and that even some of the present members of P.P.S. belong to it. The P.P.S. has thus been manœuvred into a very awkward position.

Among those arrested, some are actually members of the P.P.S., a number of them holding responsible administrative positions. Others are members of the independent group of Socialists.

M. Minc, Minister of Commerce and Trade, opened discussions in Paris on the 26th July to negotiate a new Franco-Polish trade agreement replacing that which expires in August. The Polish coal export is a valuable bargaining counter against which Poland may hope to obtain a useful quantity of French goods.

The 22nd July was celebrated throughout Poland as a national festival to commemorate the third anniversary of the issuing of the July manifesto of the Polish Committee of National Liberation. People were out to enjoy themselves in the numerous country celebrations, and there was a note of deep satisfaction in the various official ceremonies, orders-of-the-day, and pronouncements. For the first time, the Church recognised a day of official celebrations by holding continuous morning services. The four Government bloc parties issued a proclamation hailing the victory of Poland over all its obstacles and including the words:—

> "While cementing Slav unity we never forget that with our Allies we form an inseparable part of a Europe stretching from the Urals to the Thames. We have opposed and are opposing all attempts to create artificial divisions between European peoples. That is why, like our nearest Allies, we have been doing our utmost . . . . to consolidate our ties and collaborate with Britain and France and with other States."

SOVIET UNION

Moscow is continuing to stall on the question of the ratification of the Peace Treaties. The latest communication from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs stated that the Soviet Government felt that the fixing of any definite date would be premature, though it agreed in general that it was undesirable to postpone the entry into force of the Treaties. The Soviet view was that the Treaties which were simultaneously drawn up in Paris should be brought into force simultaneously and that the procedure suggested for Italy should apply to all ex-enemy States. When these had all ratified the Soviet Government would be ready to fix a date with Great Britain, the United States and France for simultaneous ratification.

The official Soviet reply to the United States' aide-mémoire of 11th July suggesting the calling of a conference of all Powers for the 19th August to discuss the preparation of a Peace Treaty for Japan was issued on 23rd July. The statement condemned the United States for having begun the negotiations unilaterally and insisted that the question of calling a Conference for the preparation of a Peace Treaty with Japan be a matter for preliminary consideration by the Council of Foreign Ministers.

M. Molotov has agreed in the name of his Government to the proposal for a meeting of the Deputies for Germany in London on 1st October and has expressed the view that their work should be completed in four or five weeks.

The British Trade Mission headed by Mr. Harold Wilson had to leave Moscow, its task unaccomplished, on 25th July after five weeks of intricate negotiations. The talks went well on the commodity side, but broke down on the financial issue of the terms of repayment of the advances made by Great Britain to the U.S.S.R. for civil supplies and reconstruction equipment under the agreement of 16th August 1941. The Soviet press has maintained complete silence on the discussions, merely reporting Mr. Wilson's arrival on 20th June and making no comment until the issue of the final Tass statement on the breakdown on 28th July. Tass described the 1941 terms as onerous and charged the British delegation with refusing to accept the suggested Soviet compromise.

Comment on the Marshall plan has continued to stream out, though nothing new has emerged. Zaslavsky paid a tribute to the sober "shyness" of the Scandinavian delegates, whose voices are drowned by the threatening shouts of the Anglo-French organisers. New Times has taken Mr. Churchill's article in Life, "If I were an American," as a peg on which to hang a reminder to the Soviet public of the Fulton speech and a demonstration of the continuity of the foreign policy of the Labour Government with the doctrines therein enunciated. Mr. Churchill was said to have every ground for recommending the Labour Government to the American capitalists—even if he had not received special instructions to do so from Mr. Attlee and Mr. Bevin.

Since the International Socialist Conference held in Zurich in June this year the Soviet press has kept up a steady flow of attacks on "right-wing social democracy," the British Labour Party being invariably singled out as the villain of the piece in organising the Socialist parties of the world against the U.S.S.R. and in splitting the working class movement. As far as can be judged from the published accounts, the Zurich Conference can scarcely have given the U.S.S.R. real cause for disquiet; the Second International was certainly not revived and the only decisions taken were to publish a new journal and for the parties to meet in Conference every six months. It is of interest that of the Soviet satellites who attended the Conference, while the Roumanians, Hungarians, Czechs and Poles invariably voted in a bloc of four against the other 15 delegates, the Finns always voted with the Western side.

The Vatican has not recently been kept much before Soviet readers as a source of evil machinations and a rival of communism in the international field, but Academician Varga has returned to the attack in an authoritative article in Bolshevik describing the mutual efforts towards collaboration of the Catholic parties and the right wing Social Democrats. He paid, however, a somewhat surprising tribute to the lower clergy who, in spite of the strict discipline of their Church and in contrast to the action of their superiors, "stood close to the people" and were openly defending the new democratic régimes.

Warnings to good Soviet citizens to beware of the painted Jezebel of Western bourgeois civilisation have become a familiar feature, but a new note was struck in an article by P. E. Vyshinsky accusing his compatriots of indifference to the superiority of Soviet science over all other and denying the international character of science. Although asserting that in contrast to capitalist science which was harnessed to harm mankind Soviet science could never be made use of to the detriment of the masses, he illogically insisted on the need for keeping Soviet scientific studies strictly secret. "Every violation of this rule amounts to anti-patriotic sycophancy vis-à-vis bourgeois civilisation." Hitherto a Marxist respect for science as such has led to a not ungenerous attitude to the achievements of foreign scientists, even though they were naturally presented as outdistanced by their Soviet contemporaries.

Navy Day on the 28th July provided an opportunity for a further display of Soviet jingoism and self-satisfaction. Foreigners were accused of putting out "clever rubbish," about Russia being a continental country with no concern on the seas, in order to divert the Russian people from its true historical path. Russia, the Soviet Union, was, and was going to remain, a sea-power, and people should remember that the Russian navy had been created before the British navy: Soviet citizens never never never should be slaves.

Considerable publicity has been given to Indonesian events, though the first comment did not appear until the 25th July. The Izvestiya article of that date headed "The colonisers are in action" accused the Dutch of systematic violation of the Linggadjati Agreement, which had clearly only been signed by them as a manœuvre to gain time The Dutch were described as in fact puppets in the hands of American monopolists who were extending the Truman doctrine to Indonesia; the "war" that had broken out in Indonesia was held up as an illustration of the general threat to peace which these monopolists presented.

Soviet propaganda on the Greek situation has played up the forces of General

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Markos as the "Greek Democratic Army" and has described the guerilla fighting as a civil war, accusing the Americans and, to a lesser extent, Great Britain of military intervention on behalf of the reactionary régime in Athens, thus implying a sinister parallel with the civil war in Spain. Commentators from Moscow were at pains to refute rumours of the existence of an International Brigade, while Pravda published a curious report to the effect that the United States was planning to send American troops to Greece disguised as a volunteer detachment made up of Greeks in the U.S.A. (See also under "United Nations".)

Soviet tactics are no doubt designed to make the establishment of a United Nations frontier commission more difficult and to cover up the exposure of the Communist plot in Greece while leaving the Soviet Government free to indulge in military intervention, disguised or open, through its Balkan satellites. The present visit of the Albanian leaders to Moscow is suspicious in its timing, but it is their first visit since their accession to power and to the Russians might even appear overdue. Enver Hoxha and his party were received by M. Stalin and had lunch with M. Molotov but they seem to have had a good deal of time to spare for sight-seeing during their fortnight's visit. The communiqué issued on the close of the visit revealed nothing beyond the fact that questions of economic and cultural co-operation had been discussed and that the Soviet Union had agreed to furnish a credit to Albania for the purchase of equipment for light industry and and of agricultural machinery.

The Yugoslav Foreign Trade Minister, M. Popovic, arrived in Moscow on the 23rd July, three days before the Albanians left.

Other visitors at present enjoying Moscow hospitality are the delegation of deputies from the Bulgarian Grand National Assembly, representatives of Italian Anti-Fascist women, and Mr. S. A. Dange, President of the All-India Congress of Trade Unions. The last-named made a statement to Tass on the British transfer of power in India, describing it in familiar terms as a scheme for splitting the country and retaining British rule in a disguised form.

SCANDINAVIA

Finland

The arrest last month by the secret State Police of its former chief M. Hannu Kunnas has once more brought that unpopular body into the limelight of public attention. M. Kunnas, it is learnt, will be charged with treason or high treason and the opening of the trial before the Turku High Court was fixed for the 24th July. Disclosing these facts Suomen Sosialidemokraatti went on to assert that the hearing would take place in camera as the accused was in a position to furnish evidence of espionage on members of the Government by certain other Ministers carried out through the medium of the State Police. In an official statement to the press the Ministry of the Interior categorically rejected these allegations, and went on to explain that M. Kunnas had first become suspect in connexion with an embezzlement affair but that further investigations revealed that he was also implicated in treasonable activities. The Ministry, further, took the strongest exception to the personal attacks on M. Leino which had been made in the columns of Suomen Sosialidemokraatti, in consequence of which a libel action would be brought against M. Varjonen, the Editor-in-Chief.

Though the presentation of the facts in this paper may well have bordered on the sensational, the affair has nevertheless caused considerable uneasiness throughout the country. M. Kunnas' predecessor it was recalled was only recently convicted of forgery of a medical prescription whereby he had obtained certain drugs for his personal use, and at least one other suspect in the present case has committed suicide by jumping through the window of his apartment. In view of these strange occurrences within the State Police many sections of the public are now strongly advocating the appointment of a special commission of inquiry which cannot be welcome to M. Leino and the Communist Party. The suspicion that M. Kunnas is the victim of a provocative plot similar to that under which M. Kovacs in Hungary was "framed" is widespread, and a decision, should it be made, to hold the trial within closed doors will not help to dispel it.

Deliveries of War Reparations to the Soviet Union at the end of June showed a total deficit of 920,000 dollars. The combined deficit in the categories for machinery and plant, and shipping actually aggregated more than 4 million dollars, but deliveries in excess of stipulated quotas of paper and cellulose, cable products, and timber and timber products reduced the figure, in terms of "reparations" dollars, to rather less than 1 million. Under the terms of the Reparations Agreement the Russians are, however, in no way bound to take excess deliveries of certain items into consideration, but they are, on the other hand, fully entitled to exact heavy fines for non-delivery in the various groups.

Simultaneously with this announcement it was stated that agreement had been reached for the programme of the fourth reparations year which begins on the 19th September. According to reports, satisfaction has been expressed over the fact that it follows closely that of the current year, though anxiety is felt as to Finland's ability to fulfil deliveries of machinery and plant.

(See also under "Hungary.")

THE LOW COUNTRIES

The Netherlands

Dr. Beel, the Netherlands Prime Minister, began his statement on Indonesia in the Second Chamber (23rd July) with a recapitulation of the exchange of Notes since the 8th July, drawing particular attention to the two points upon which further negotiations broke down, namely, internal security and cessation of hostilities. Reports now available, continued Dr. Beel, showed that 681 "fairly serious" violations of the truce had occurred between the 25th March and the 15th June. The "unceasing hostile propaganda" of General Soedirman had resulted in the deaths of 158 Dutch soldiers from the date of the signing of the truce (14th October, 1946) until the 18th June. The Republican answer of the 17th July had been "the more disappointing" because Sjarifoeddin had been "in complete agreement" with the Dutch proposals before he left for Jogjakarta, and had even gone to the length of writing to Dr. van Mook asking, in anticipation, for "technical assistance for the great work ahead." The final Republican answer convinced both Dr. van Mook and the Commission-General that "the only way out which remained was police action by military means." The Cabinet had considered this conclusion "in all its aspects and consequences," but "no other means of dealing with the situation could be found." The question whether the Republic ought to be "permitted to continue hostilities against the Netherlands Army or against the Malino and Dutch-held territories," was not one which could be "considered a fit subject for arbitration"; nor could they arbitrate on the question of Netherlands sovereignty during the transition period as laid down by the Linggadjati Agreement, and confirmed by the U.S. aide-mémoire to the Republic of the 28th June. The Netherlands Government, said Dr. Beel in conclusion, was "not blind to the deeper causes of the conflict," much of which could be traced to "the former colonial relationships, youthful national desires, the revolution of the second world war, the misery of the Japanese occupation, and to mistakes of all kinds—not excluding mistakes on the Dutch side." Apart from those who had "brought about this rupture," there were others in Indonesia, in the N.W.I. and in the Netherlands who, "with growing impatience," awaited the promised Round Table Conference, through the medium of which the reform of the Kingdom—as foreshadowed by the Queen's speech of the 7th December, 1942—would "at last" be achieved. Also waiting upon this step was the "world community" in which this "new political structure and its members" would have to play their parts.

Dr. Beel's speech was debated on the 25th July. In answer to criticism on the part of Professor Logemann, leader of the Party of Labour and former Minister of Overseas Territories, the present Minister, M. Jonkman, stated that the Government would willingly accept offers of mediation in the future, "if necessary." He went on to thank the Governments of the U.K. and of the U.S. for their offers of mediation, adding that the present action, "which must be as restricted as possible," would immediately have to be followed by consultations with the Government of the Republic and the other States concerned. A Communist motion expressing disapproval of the Government's decision to use force and requesting them forthwith to order cease fire and resumption of negotiations was defeated by 79 votes to 9, the Communists alone voting in favour of their motion.

FRANCE

The Marshall Plan and the future of German industry were—sometimes separately, but more often jointly—the main topics of the week in France. M. Ramadier's speech at Perpignan, following so closely on that of Mr. Bevin at Morpeth, was welcomed by the Press as an indication that the threat seen by France in the American plans for raising the level of German industrial production had become

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Markos as the "Greek Democratic Army" and has described the guerilla fighting as a civil war, accusing the Americans and, to a lesser extent, Great Britain of military intervention on behalf of the reactionary régime in Athens, thus implying a sinister parallel with the civil war in Spain. Commentators from Moscow were at pains to refute rumours of the existence of an International Brigade, while Pravda published a curious report to the effect that the United States was planning to send American troops to Greece disguised as a volunteer detachment made up of Greeks in the U.S.A. (See also under "United Nations".)

Soviet tactics are no doubt designed to make the establishment of a United Nations frontier commission more difficult and to cover up the exposure of the Communist plot in Greece while leaving the Soviet Government free to indulge in military intervention, disguised or open, through its Balkan satellites. The present visit of the Albanian leaders to Moscow is suspicious in its timing, but it is their first visit since their accession to power and to the Russians might even appear overdue. Enver Hoxha and his party were received by M. Stalin and had lunch with M. Molotov but they seem to have had a good deal of time to spare for sightseeing during their fortnight's visit. The communiqué issued on the close of the visit revealed nothing beyond the fact that questions of economic and cultural co-operation had been discussed and that the Soviet Union had agreed to furnish a credit to Albania for the purchase of equipment for light industry and and of agricultural machinery.

The Yugoslav Foreign Trade Minister, M. Popovic, arrived in Moscow on the 23rd July, three days before the Albanians left.

Other visitors at present enjoying Moscow hospitality are the delegation of deputies from the Bulgarian Grand National Assembly, representatives of Italian Anti-Fascist women, and Mr. S. A. Dange, President of the All-India Congress of Trade Unions. The last-named made a statement to Tass on the British transfer of power in India, describing it in familiar terms as a scheme for splitting the country and retaining British rule in a disguised form.

SCANDINAVIA

Finland

The arrest last month by the secret State Police of its former chief M. Hannu Kunnas has once more brought that unpopular body into the limelight of public attention. M. Kunnas, it is learnt, will be charged with treason or high treason and the opening of the trial before the Turku High Court was fixed for the 24th July. Disclosing these facts Suomen Sosialidemokraatti went on to assert that the hearing would take place in camera as the accused was in a position to furnish evidence of espionage on members of the Government by certain other Ministers carried out through the medium of the State Police. In an official statement to the press the Ministry of the Interior categorically rejected these allegations, and went on to explain that M. Kunnas had first become suspect in connexion with an embezzlement affair but that further investigations revealed that he was also implicated in treasonable activities. The Ministry, further, took the strongest exception to the personal attacks on M. Leino which had been made in the columns of Suomen Sosialidemokraatti, in consequence of which a libel action would be brought against M. Varjonen, the Editor-in-Chief.

Though the presentation of the facts in this paper may well have bordered on the sensational, the affair has nevertheless caused considerable uneasiness throughout the country. M. Kunnas' predecessor it was recalled was only recently convicted of forgery of a medical prescription whereby he had obtained certain drugs for his personal use, and at least one other suspect in the present case has committed suicide by jumping through the window of his apartment. In view of these strange occurrences within the State Police many sections of the public are now strongly advocating the appointment of a special commission of inquiry which cannot be welcome to M. Leino and the Communist Party. The suspicion that M. Kunnas is the victim of a provocative plot similar to that under which M. Kovacs in Hungary was "framed" is widespread, and a decision, should it be made, to hold the trial within closed doors will not help to dispel it.

Deliveries of War Reparations to the Soviet Union at the end of June showed a total deficit of 920,000 dollars. The combined deficit in the categories for machinery and plant, and shipping actually aggregated more than 4 million dollars, but deliveries in excess of stipulated quotas of paper and cellulose, cable products, and timber and timber products reduced the figure, in terms of "reparations" dollars, to rather less than 1 million. Under the terms of the Reparations Agreement the Russians are, however, in no way bound to take excess deliveries of certain items into consideration, but they are, on the other hand, fully entitled to exact heavy fines for non-delivery in the various groups.

Simultaneously with this announcement it was stated that agreement had been reached for the programme of the fourth reparations year which begins on the 19th September. According to reports, satisfaction has been expressed over the fact that it follows closely that of the current year, though anxiety is felt as to Finland's ability to fulfil deliveries of machinery and plant.

(See also under "Hungary.")

THE LOW COUNTRIES

The Netherlands

Dr. Beel, the Netherlands Prime Minister, began his statement on Indonesia in the Second Chamber (23rd July) with a recapitulation of the exchange of Notes since the 8th July, drawing particular attention to the two points upon which further negotiations broke down, namely, internal security and cessation of hostilities. Reports now available, continued Dr. Beel, showed that 681 "fairly serious" violations of the truce had occurred between the 25th March and the 15th June. The "unceasing hostile propaganda" of General Soedirman had resulted in the deaths of 158 Dutch soldiers from the date of the signing of the truce (14th October, 1946) until the 18th June. The Republican answer of the 17th July had been "the more disappointing" because Sjarifoeddin had been "in complete agreement" with the Dutch proposals before he left for Jogjakarta, and had even gone to the length of writing to Dr. van Mook asking, in anticipation, for "technical assistance for the great work ahead." The final Republican answer convinced both Dr. van Mook and the Commission-General that "the only way out which remained was police action by military means." The Cabinet had considered this conclusion "in all its aspects and consequences," but "no other means of dealing with the situation could be found." The question whether the Republic ought to be "permitted to continue hostilities against the Netherlands Army or against the Malino and Dutch-held territories," was not one which could be "considered a fit subject for arbitration"; nor could they arbitrate on the question of Netherlands sovereignty during the transition period as laid down by the Linggadjati Agreement, and confirmed by the U.S. aide-mémoire to the Republic of the 28th June. The Netherlands Government, said Dr. Beel in conclusion, was "not blind to the deeper causes of the conflict," much of which could be traced to "the former colonial relationships, youthful national desires, the revolution of the second world war, the misery of the Japanese occupation, and to mistakes of all kinds—not excluding mistakes on the Dutch side." Apart from those who had "brought about this rupture," there were others in Indonesia, in the N.W.I. and in the Netherlands who, "with growing impatience," awaited the promised Round Table Conference, through the medium of which the reform of the Kingdom—as foreshadowed by the Queen's speech of the 7th December, 1942—would "at last" be achieved. Also waiting upon this step was the "world community" in which this "new political structure and its members" would have to play their parts.

Dr. Beel's speech was debated on the 25th July. In answer to criticism on the part of Professor Logemann, leader of the Party of Labour and former Minister of Overseas Territories, the present Minister, M. Jonkman, stated that the Government would willingly accept offers of mediation in the future, "if necessary." He went on to thank the Governments of the U.K. and of the U.S. for their offers of mediation, adding that the present action, "which must be as restricted as possible," would immediately have to be followed by consultations with the Government of the Republic and the other States concerned. A Communist motion expressing disapproval of the Government's decision to use force and requesting them forthwith to order cease fire and resumption of negotiations was defeated by 79 votes to 9, the Communists alone voting in favour of their motion.

FRANCE

The Marshall Plan and the future of German industry were—sometimes separately, but more often jointly—the main topics of the week in France. M. Ramadier's speech at Perpignan, following so closely on that of Mr. Bevin at Morpeth, was welcomed by the Press as an indication that the threat seen by France in the American plans for raising the level of German industrial production had become

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

less imminent, and that a three-Power compromise, satisfactory to all, might be achieved.

On the 23rd July, it was officially announced in Paris that the United States Government had agreed to suspend a decision on the level of industry to be set as a target for the Anglo-American zones in Germany, as well as their administration and the control of the Ruhr, until the French Government had had an opportunity of putting their point of view before the American and British Governments, probably at a tri-partite conference. This announcement was welcomed with profound relief, especially by the right-wing Press. Some confusion arose at first over reports of more immediate Anglo-American discussions, without reference to France, until it was made clear that there were in fact two conferences—the first dealing with matters of administration in the Anglo-American zone; the second, concerning the subjects which France thought affected her own future so gravely and which she considered were beyond the scope of ordinary zonal authority, such as the level of German industry and the ownership and control of the Ruhr mines. On the 24th July, M. Bonnet, French Ambassador in Washington, had a "general exchange of views" with Mr. Armour, Assistant Secretary of State for Occupied Areas, at which were discussed the reasons for France's objections to any immediate raising of the German level of industry. It was felt that France had achieved a diplomatic success when it was announced that Britain had joined her assurances to those of the United States that the proposed Anglo-American plan for German industry would not be published or put into effect without prior consultation with the French Government. Discussions are now proceeding on the date and place of the consultations and the form that they are to take.

M. Maurice Thorez, the French Communist leader, touched on the subject of German industry when, on the 23rd July, he addressed the Anglo-American Press Association in Paris. Rejecting the "pessimistic" view that the world must be divided into two spheres of influence condemned to clash in an atomic war which would spell the doom of mankind, M. Thorez then referred to the apprehension which clouded France's gratitude to America for her assistance proferred in the Marshall Plan, on the ground that German production appeared to be the keystone of the Plan. Frenchmen viewed with anxiety any plan which would again give Germany a dominating economic position in Europe. This did not preclude acceptance of a certain development of industrial production in Germany, both to allow of reparations and to ensure a decent standard of living among the German workers; but France had no wish to witness a rebirth of a dangerously powerful heavy industry and chemical industry in Germany and more particularly in the Ruhr. Strict inter-Allied control was necessary without prejudice to a prolonged military occupation.

The same topics were to the fore, when, on the 26th July, at the end of a debate on foreign affairs, the National Assembly adopted, by 421 votes to 6, a motion which included the Government's unchanged policy on Germany and the Saar, grateful recognition of the Marshall Plan, and the express desire that France should play her part in the reconstruction of Europe, but without the creation of two hostile blocs. The Communists, while voting for the part of the motion which concerned Germany, abstained from voting on the motion as a whole.

The debate developed along what have now become traditional lines, nearly all speakers expressing some degree of fear of a premature industrial recovery in Germany, and the Communists denouncing the Government's foreign policy on the score that it was forcing France to join a Western bloc. M. Reynaud pleaded for a reconciliation between East and West, "on pain of death," demanding what internal squabbles could possibly matter in the face of such problems.

M. Bidault, the Foreign Minister, defended himself against Communist accusations of "a drift to the Right." In reply to criticisms that, by signing the three-Power Agreement at Moscow on the 19th April on the subject of German coal, he had sacrificed French rights to reparations, he reminded the Assembly that Communists had been members of the Government which had approved that Agreement. In actual fact, the Agreement guaranteed for the first time that a percentage of German coal would be exported to Allied countries. He pointed out that the economic incorporation of the Saar with France did not mean abandoning French claims to reparations.

M. Bidault then discussed the Marshall Plan and dealt with Communist criticisms that the matter had not been left for discussion at the Economic Commission for Europe by emphasising the urgency of France's economic position. France, he said, could not afford to refuse American aid. It was not a question of a choice between "the black bread of freedom and the white bread of servitude," as the Communist slogan would have it, but between bread and no bread at all. The needs of France with regard to essential imports were so great that 2,000,000,000 dollars had been allocated the previous year, and now her dollar reserve would barely cover another two months' imports. There was also ground for apprehension concerning the food situation because of the "catastrophic harvest." The foreign loans of 1945 and 1946 could hardly last beyond the end of the year, so that, unless help was forthcoming, a drastic reduction in the import of raw materials would become necessary, bringing in its train industrial and agricultural paralysis and a reduction in food supplies.

On the 27th July, General de Gaulle, who has been making a kind of pilgrimage of the war memorials of Brittany, delivered a speech at Rennes embodying an outspoken attack on the French Communists and on the octopus tactics of Soviet Russia. As the Municipal Council of Rennes had refused the General permission to speak in the town square, he addressed a crowd of 90,000 in an adjacent meadow. Calling on his supporters to ensure French unity "above divisions and parties," by vigorously opposing the intrigues of "those who do not play the game of France," he declared that after the Liberation he had tried to bring about the inclusion of the Communists in the national community, but that now they appeared to have chosen another path. There were in France to-day, he said, men who had sworn obedience to the orders of a foreign plan for domination directed by the leaders of a great Slav Power. Their object was to establish a dictatorship in France, as their counterparts had succeeded in doing elsewhere with the support of that same Power. In time already difficult enough for France, they had brought the Republic into a "régime of impotence." Two-thirds of the Continent, he continued, was dominated by Moscow, which, by combining military and economic pressure with the activities of her supporters inside the various countries, had already created a bloc of nearly 400,000,000 people, with a frontier distant only 500 kilometres from France itself. Those who were resigned in advance to Slav hegemony had no place in France, or in this present century, unless it were "to act as the accomplices of evil until such time as they become its slaves."

The problems arising out of the interception of the "President Warfield" were discussed at a meeting of the French Cabinet at Rambouillet on the 23rd July. At M. Bidault's suggestion Mr. Duff Cooper joined him there and impressed on him the seriousness with which Great Britain regards the question of illegal Jewish immigration. The following day, M. Ramadier, the Premier, declared at his weekly Press Conference that the ship's certificate of navigability was valid only for a voyage without passengers, and that in setting out the Captain had defied the port authority. It was officially stated the same day that the 4,554 Jews from the "President Warfield" (the Colombian Government have declared that their visas were forged and that Colombia would not in any case accept them) were now travelling to an unspecified French port in three British transports. M. Ramadier stated that they would be given refuge in France and allowed to remain if employment could be found for them. It was learned on the 29th July that the vessels were expected that day at Port-de-Bouc, and that the French authorities were taking precautions to minimise the risk of quayside demonstrations. The French Government held firmly to its decision to receive on French soil only those passengers who landed of their own free will, although the British position was that His Majesty's Government must reserve the right to use such force as might prove necessary if the passengers refused to disembark peacefully.

Erratum

In last week's Summary it was stated in error that British agreement had been secured—and announced in London on the 21st July—to the French interim decision to disembark the returning Jewish emigrants at Villefranche.

SPAIN AND PORTUGAL

The results of the referendum on General Franco's Bill of Succession were announced on the 26th July by the President of the Supreme Court of Justice. He stated that 14,145,163 affirmative votes had been recorded out of a total of 15,219,563—over 92 per cent. From reports received it is clear that the persuasion of the population to vote, the voting itself and the

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

counting of the votes was attended by much trickery and faking, though the extent of the interference and the methods used varied from district to district. A careful observer estimates that in Madrid over 160,000 persons abstained from voting and, with the negative votes registered, the adverse total was more than 300,000 as against 923,417 affirmative notes. There seems no doubt, however, that General Franco and his friends are pleased with the outcome of this—his first—campaign at the polls.

On the 18th July General Franco celebrated the eleventh anniversary of the National rising by an interview in Arriba, the Party organ. In a series of questions and answers provided by himself he promised the Spanish people to bestow upon them all the life that remained to him. The referendum, he claimed, represented the re-incorporation into Spanish life "of our opponents of yesterday, and the start for Spain of a period of constitutional normality." After asking himself whether the referendum would not bring about a thorough-going change in the attitude of the international world to the true facts of the Spanish case, the Generalissimo turned upon the Monarchists. The true Monarchists, he affirmed, "are as ever with us and with Spain," the rest were "the old familiar made-in-France breed." The value of any possible bed-fellowship between them and the Reds could be seen "in the exiguous abstentionist total." According to General Franco the foreign press and wireless were under the tyrannical dictatorship of proprietors and did not represent the foreign nations. Official policies in many lands were simply those of governmental cliques. All are not duped, however, the Caudillo asserted, and he claimed that he had received daily thousands of "testimonies" from Catholics all over the world begging him not to confound the public of their countries with the ideas of the oligarchies in power.

In Toulouse the Spanish Socialist Party is holding a conference in which Don Indalecio Prieto, newly arrived from Mexico and one of the strongest personalities of the Spanish Republican period, is taking part. It is thought that he may advocate the liquidation of all Republican institutions in exile, and an all-out move to combine in one organization all Republican and Monarchist opponents of General Franco both inside and outside Spain.

Portugal

In Portugal a certain measure of success has now been achieved by the Minister of Economy, Senhor Barbosa, in the Government campaign to ensure a more equitable distribution of food to the working classes. (During the first half of 1947 there was no tangible reduction in the cost of living, and, despite the optimism of the Minister, an index figure supplied to the Embassy by the Shell Company actually showed an increase of 3·2 per cent. during the first quarter of the year.) There have been, for instance, abundant supplies of fish in Portugal, but at prices out of reach of poorer purses. Now, through Senhor Barbosa's efforts, some essential foodstuffs are obtainable at more reasonable prices.

The Minister, to whom extensive powers were granted by the Portuguese Government, had declared himself determined to combat black market practices and he threatened to go so far as to abolish certain gremios (employers' associations) if they did not mend their ways and pursue a policy more favourable to the well-being of the community. Already police action has been taken against a number of leading industrialists, and one recalcitrant textile factory has been closed down for three months, with the obligation on the owners to go on paying the staff during the period of inactivity.

A Commission of Enquiry has been formed to examine prices as compared with the 1938 price-index, taking into account the increased cost of labour, and other factors, since that date. Strong action is promised in cases where profits are found to be excessive. Facilities will also be given to set up new factories, where existing concerns are judged to be working against the public advantage. The old practice of withholding licences for newcomers to set up factories will be abandoned, since it has resulted in monopolies and price rings. The Paper Manufacturers' Association, a notorious offender, which froze out competition and kept prices at abnormally high levels, has now been dissolved.

ITALY

In the House of Commons on the 23rd July, in answer to a Parliamentary Question, on the subject of ratification of the Peace Treaties, the Secretary of State gave public expression to the hopes of H.M.G. that Italy would shortly ratify her signature given in Paris. "I think," he said,

"it would be in the best interests of Italy if she were to ratify the Treaty and clear up the technical state of war and allow normal relations to be resumed . . . ." The Italian Government ought not to allow themselves to be dissuaded from immediate ratification by the argument that Italy should wait on action by the Soviet Union. Meanwhile Signor De Gasperi had apparently become somewhat alarmed by the trend of discussions among the party leaders who were now proposing to defer the whole question until after the summer recess. He decided that it was a question of taking the bull by the horns and presenting the question as a whole in the Assembly on the basis of a Government motion to the effect that the Italian Government should be authorized to ratify at the moment the Treaty was brought into force by the Four Powers under Article 10.

On the same night, the Constituent Assembly proceeded to reject by a narrow margin of votes (232–204) a motion to postpone consideration of the question. The veteran Signor Orlando, who sponsored the motion, complained rather pathetically that the Assembly was very weary after eleven months of unceasing labour and needed more time for the consideration of such an important matter. He was supported, as was expected, by Togliatti and his Communists, the Nenni Socialists, the Qualunquists, Labour Democrats and a few others, while the Government had the backing of all the Christian Democrats, the Saragat Socialists, the Liberals and some Republicans.

The big debate began the following day and has continued in desultory fashion for the best part of a week. Count Sforza in his opening speech described the advantages of ratifying the Treaty. Italy would have a chance of admission to the United Nations at the General Assembly this year, she would be in a better position to take a full part in, and obtain full benefit of, the scheme being worked out in Paris on the basis of the Marshall proposals; and she would be on sounder ground for working for a revision of the Treaty where it appeared palpably unjust. In a lengthy speech Signor Nitti took the opposite standpoint, adverting to the argument that the right time to ratify was after deposit of the signatures of the four Great Powers. His speech, after some tart personal criticism of Count Sforza, contained the suggestion that the Western Powers had a considerable share of responsibility for the rise of Fascism in Italy. A vote on the Government's motion was not expected before Wednesday, the 30th July.

Trade Agreements

With the end of U.N.R.R.A. help in sight, and with the prospect of a poor wheat crop, which seems likely to fall far short of Italy's minimum requirements, the De Gasperi Government were already pursuing the efforts of previous Governments to re-establish trade relations with various European countries before the Conference for European Economic Co-operation began.

On the 5th of June a protocol to the Italo-Belgian Agreement was signed. This arranges for an exchange of goods up to the 30th April, 1948, to a value of 40 milliard lire, a sum which is three times as great as the figure reached in exchange between the two countries during the past year. The agreement also provides for payment to be effected through the Italo-Belgian "clearing" at a rate representing the medium of the official and "export" dollar rates, instead of as hitherto at the official rate. It is thought that this may become a precedent for future commercial agreements with other countries. Trade with Belgium is of some importance to Italy. Her exports to Belgium amounted to over 1,400 million lire in 1946 and her imports to 323 million only, leaving her with a favourable trade balance of 1,077 million lire.

In spite of political difficulties Italy and Yugoslavia appear to have concluded a trade agreement. The Yugoslavs will supply Italy with chrome, iron ore, copper, timber and coal, for which Italy will pay in Italian lire deposited in Italy in the name of the Yugoslav Government. The Italians will export to Yugoslavia rayon, Olivetti typewriters, buses and agricultural machinery, and the value of these goods will be subtracted from the Yugoslav account held in Italy. This somewhat unusual method of settling accounts has been adopted because difficulties arose over exchange values. The Yugoslavs demanded a rate of 6·5 lire to the dinar, the Italians insisted on only 4.

On the 2nd July Italy signed an agreement with Czechoslovakia, which covered not only exchange of goods, but settled the question of Italian property confiscated under the Czechoslovak industrial nationalisation scheme. No details are yet available.

As far back as last February the Italian Government showed a desire to reopen trade relations with Germany through the occupying authorities. Under the Nazi and Fascist régimes trade between the two countries was artificially stimulated, until by 1939 29·4 per cent. of Italy's imports

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

same from Germany, with the U.S.A. a poor second with 9·5 per cent., and 17·6 per cent. of her exports went to Germany and only 7·1 to the U.S.A. On the other hand a not inconsiderable proportion of Italy's trade always was with Germany :— an average of 16·5 per cent. of her imports and 14·2 per cent. of her exports for the five years 1909–1913, and 15·3 and 13 per cent. respectively for 1931–1935. It is therefore natural that the Italian Government although they understand that trade can only be on a small scale for the present, are anxious to lay the foundations of future trading now. On the 4th of July a Trade and Payment Agreement was signed between the Combined British and United States Zones of Germany and Italy. This Agreement, while listing various products which each side had available or required, made no decision as to the quantities of such products to be exchanged, and the prime desire of the Italians to dispose of fresh fruit and vegetables was not met. Arrangements were, however, contrived for payment to be made by both sides through a current dollar account to be opened at the Ufficio Italiano dei Cambi (Italian exchange office) in Rome. Agreement was also reached regarding rail traffic between Italy and Western Germany, and in particular for the exchange of goods waggons. Last February also the U.S.S.R. Government proposed that an Italian Commercial Delegation should get in touch with the Soviet Military Administration in Germany in order to make a trade agreement. On the 29th June Il Globo announced that an Agreement between Italy and the Soviet-occupied Zone of Germany had been concluded on the 27th, but no details of the Agreement are as yet available.

Erratum. In Summary No. 401 p. 10, l. 20 of Italy, for "Groce" read "Croce" (Professor Benedetto Croce).

SOUTH-EAST EUROPE

Hungary

The Left-wing Parties regard the forthcoming election, now fixed for the 31st August, as a necessary preliminary to the effective implementation of the Three-Year Economic Plan which the National Assembly accepted at a single session on the 1st July, despite bitter criticisms from M. Sulyok. The new Electoral Law was opposed only by a handful of Independents and Smallholders, but M. Vincze Nagy rendered the occasion memorable by declaring during the course of the debate that the Freedom Party must of necessity dissolve itself since it was unwilling to fight on an unequal basis and the Government had failed to give it adequate protection. The Communist Party has taken this decision as a proof that M. Sulyok and his followers intend to discredit Hungary abroad, and accuses them of ending their career as undemocratically as they began it. Some of the members of the Freedom Party will almost certainly join the Opposition, which includes the wing of the Democratic People's Party headed by M. Barankovics, the Bourgeois Democrats, Radicals, and, now, a new Independent Party led by the former Smallholder, M. Pfeiffer, Moreover, it seems that Cardinal Mindszenty's proposed ban on the political activity of priests will after all not preclude Fr. Balogh from availing himself of the Allied Control Commission's authorization to organize a Party under his own leadership. If the Cardinal has indeed modified his views it may well be as a result of arguments used by MM. Sulyok, Pfeiffer and Parragi, who are reported to have urged him to withdraw the ban and to have discussed the question of a right-wing electoral bloc with him.

Underlying friction between the Workers' Parties is suggested by M. Rákosi's recent speech accusing the Social Democrats of failing to achieve political unity and of allowing themselves to be influenced by their sister parties abroad. This attack may later be followed by a demand for the purging of reactionary elements, but at present the election constitutes the most important issue, and the two Parties have proclaimed their solidarity in a joint manifesto. The Social Democrats hope to see an 8 per cent. increase over their 1945 results and to extend their influence among the peasants. The new National Assembly will hold its mandate for four years; election is to be by secret direct suffrage based on party lists, and each seat will require 14,000 valid votes as against 12,000 under the previous electoral law. A further 60 seats will be allocated to the different parties in rough proportion to the total number of votes polled. In all 300,000 to 600,000 are likely to be disfranchised by the Electoral Law. M. Dinnyés has invited representatives of the Foreign Press to observe the election, which will, he promises, be fair and free. The Hungarian Communists are relying on the effect of fear rather than on actual coercion.

Newsprint shortage has not prevented the publication of two new Independent left-wing dailies Friss Ujśag and Magyar Nap, and another Social Democratic newspaper, Uj Hirek, the first number of which appeared on the 28th July.

A Hungarian commercial Delegation, led by M. Korányi, has arrived in London to conclude a trade agreement discussed between the two countries earlier in the year, by which, according to M. Koranyi, 15–16,000,000 dollars worth of goods will be exported to England during the first twelve months—the Russo-Hungarian Trade Agreement had provided for the exchange of goods to the value of 30,000,000 dollars on both sides between the 1st June 1947 and the 31st July 1948. A Finnish-Hungarian Trade Agreement, to take effect from the 1st August 1947 to the 31st July 1948, was signed at Helsingfors on the 18th July.

Szabad Nép alleges that hardly a quarter of the Slovaks who originally volunteered for transfer are in fact leaving Hungary, while other repatriates have returned from Slovakia. The Hungarian authorities again emphasize that all who cross the Slovak frontier automatically lose their Hungarian citizenship.

Roumania

As further details of the escape of the peasant leaders leaks out, it becomes clear that the affair reflects no credit on anybody concerned. It seems likely that two of those who were arrested had actually tried to escape, and it is regrettable that they have allowed themselves to fall into the trap and so have provided the Government with a weapon with which to strike harder at the Opposition. They have been helped by the treachery of one of the party who have been arrested, Dr. Constantin Gafencu, who appears to have kept the Government informed about the doings of his associates. The spectacular arrest in front of the aeroplane—a villainously bad photograph of which appeared in Universul on the 17th July—is not at all convincing. Whatever may be the truth about the "escape plot," there is no doubt that it is being exaggerated and turned to account to destroy the Peasant Party, which has now been formally banned. As in Roumania electors vote not for individual candidates but for a party list, the effect of this step will be the disfranchisement of a considerable majority of the population.

Dl Tătărescu professes to regard the situation as being extremely grave. His party was about to resign, and, although he has been asked by the King to remain in the Government, he feels it impossible to carry on since the Peace Treaty is not yet in force.

On the subject of ratification the Soviet Government have now let it be known that they consider the fixing of a definite date to be premature, but they will be prepared to ratify when all the ex-enemy States have done so. The United States Government have decided that the balance of advantage lies in appointing a diplomatic representative who will take the place of the Political Representative at present at Bucarest. Mr. Marshall was careful to state that this action does not imply condonation of the action of the Roumanian Government in denying fundamental freedom to the Roumanian people.

His Majesty's Government are concerned at the possible results of the formation of Industrial Boards, which is likely to have adverse effects on British commercial interests in Roumania by depriving British shareholders of their rights.

The difficulty over the granting of permits to British subjects to visit Roumania continues. Out of 134 applications forty-two have been granted, twelve refused, and eighty are outstanding.

Yugoslavia

The fighting in Greece has been prominently reported from the Communist angle, and Borba has made a point of scornfully repudiating stories of the gathering of an "International Brigade." Similarly, Tanjug published a declaration by leaders of some of the foreign contingents working on the Youth Railway, vigorously denying that they were being trained for action in Greece. The majority of the Youth Brigades are genuine enough, but it is believed that members of the Greek element return to the Railway for a breather, and for political instruction, between spells of activity in Greece.

A new aspect of the recent incidents in the Austrian frontier area was introduced for propaganda purposes during the trial of some bandits caught in Yugoslavia, when some of the accused were said to have "admitted" that their nefarious activities had been sponsored by the British military authorities in Styria, on instructions from above.

Death sentences have been passed on the former Gauleiter Rainer and other German occupation officials in Slovenia.

Professor Boris Furlan, formerly Minister of Education in the exiled Government, is the latest victim of the purge of the professional class. According to a press report, he and twelve other Slovenes are on

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

trial in Ljubljana on a charge of infringing the elastic "Law for the Defence of the People's Power." Professor Furlan is representative of a number of people who served pre-war and wartime Yugoslav Governments in their professional and in administrative capacities, and who welcomed the Partisan Movement as promising a more liberal and less centralised régime in the future, but on returning to Yugoslavia were rapidly disillusioned. Two years ago Furlan resumed his former duties at Ljubljana University, but as a non-Communist with a Western outlook he may now be regarded as an undesirable influence. The Slovene economist, Dr. Jure Koce, who returned to Yugoslavia in 1945 under similar circumstances, was fortunate to enough to escape to Austria three months ago.

Balkan Peasant Party leaders in exile, notably Dr. Maček, Dr. Milan Gavrilović, the Bulgarian Dr. G. M. Dimitrov and the former Hungarian Premier, M. Nagy, published on the American Day of Independence, a declaration of international peasant solidarity and an appeal to the United States and the United Nations for action against the present rulers of their respective countries. The ideals and intentions of these people are admirable, but alas! their projects are far removed from reality.

Greece

The rebels in northern Greece remain active. On 21st July a band of three hundred made a night raid on Nigrita, a small town thirty-five miles north-east of Salonica. Besides attacking Government offices and the prison the rebels massacred thirty of the inhabitants, most of them women and children. This barbarity was inflicted, as a warning to others, on the relatives of Communists who had deserted the rebel ranks or refused to join them.

In the early hours of 25th July some 1,500 or 2,000 well-armed rebels surrounded Grevena. They had heavy weapons and kept an attack up for several hours, but did not succeed in penetrating into the town before the garrison was reinforced from neighbouring posts. The rebels met more resistance than they expected, losing 78 dead and 46 wounded and prisoners, but most of the attackers managed, as usual, to escape.

The Subsidiary Group left on the spot by the United Nations Balkan Commission, which went to Yannina in an attempt to investigate the attack made on 13th July on Konitsa, was unable to gain admission to Albanian territory. Nevertheless, it picked up useful information on the Greek side of the frontier, and the Albanian refusal—like the refusals of Yugoslavia and Bulgaria—must impress any impartial mind. Meanwhile, M. Gromyko's veto in the Security Council has blocked the attempt of other nations to end the undeclared war in Greece (see under "United Nations").

Mr. Griswold, the head of the American Economic Mission, reached Athens with a few members of the Mission on 14th July. Others arrived a few days later. The British Economic Mission came to an end on 24th July.

Albania

The Albanian Government have at length condescended to express their willingness to appear before the International Court of Justice at The Hague to answer the British complaint about the mining of the destroyers Saumarez and Volage in the Corfu Channel last October. It is understood that when the case comes on they will be represented by the Albanian Minister in Paris. The nomination was made nearly a fortnight after the final date (5th July) fixed by the court.

The question of Albania's admission to the United Nations is again being discussed by the Security Council: last year her application was refused.

Enver Hoxha and his party left Moscow on the 26th July after a visit lasting for eleven days. A discreet silence has been observed on the subject of the conversations, Hoxha merely remarking on his departure that the U.S.S.R. was going to help Albania in the cultural as well as in the economic field.

Bulgaria

On the 21st July His Majesty's Government addressed a further note to the Bulgarian Government on the subject of the non-appearance of the two Opposition newspapers Narodno Zemedelsko Zname and Svoboden Narod. His Majesty's Government, it says, remain unconvinced by the arguments in the Bulgarian note of the 3rd July. "The Bulgarian Government have still not expressed, either publicly or otherwise, their disapproval of the action of those who are refusing to allow the printing and distribution of the two newspapers, and His Majesty's Government are more impresesd by this fact and by the continued non-appearance of the two newspapers than by a promise of a revision, at some indefinite future date, of the Press Law of the 30th April, 1946." While noting the intention of the Bulgarian Government to revise this and certain other arbitrary laws so as (merely) to bring them into conformity with the new draft Constitution, His Majesty's Government go on to say they "are primarily concerned that these laws should be made to conform with Bulgaria's obligations under Article 2 of the Peace Treaty." Immediate action in this sense is urged if the Bulgarian Government are not "to incur public stigma" for refusing to act in the spirit of the treaty which they have signed.

The official indictment against M. Petkov has now been published, and the proceedings against him are expected to start about the middle of August. He is to be charged with having prepared an armed coup d'État, in association with certain named military officers, with the purpose of overthrowing the Government and facilitating the entry of "foreign forces." A further accusation is that he published in his newspaper Narodno Zemedelsko Zname articles calculated to undermine the discipline of the army.

It has often been prophesied that the mutual jealousy of M. Dimitrov and Marshal Tito would be likely to hinder the fulfilment of any plan for the future unification of Bulgaria and Yugoslavia. However that may be, they last Sunday kissed and embraced each other heartily in the railway station at Belgrade amid scenes of great rejoicing. M. Dimitrov is accompanied on this important occasion by the Ministers for Foreign Affairs, the Interior, Finance and Agriculture, the Chairman of the Economic Council and the Director-General of the Militia, and their visit is expected to last for about a week. Their train journey from Sofia seems to have been a triumphal progress punctuated by periodical halts for receptions and speeches. M. Dimitrov made rather a significant little speech to the people of the small border town of Tsaribrod, telling them that they must do all they could to act as a "living bridge" between the two countries. All that the British Political Representative had been able to glean from the Foreign Minister the day the party left was that one of the questions which would be discussed was that of the frontier minorities, and that economic questions would also figure largely.

Shortly before leaving for Belgrade, M. Dimitrov sent a letter to M. Trygve Lie, the Secretary-General, applying for Bulgaria to be admitted to the United Nations.

Trade agreements have been signed with Poland and with Austria, and according to the wireless the Soviet Union has agreed to supply Bulgaria with 10,000 tons of cereals to carry her over until the new harvest.

THE MIDDLE EAST

Egypt

A further criticism of the Egyptian Note to the Security Council (see Summary No. 400) was contained in a statement by the Administrative Council of the Independent Wafdist bloc (Makramites) published on the 21st July. The statement, which begins with an appeal for Egyptian unity before the world, anticipates the failure of the Egyptian case before the Security Council, on the grounds that the Government delegation "have already committed themselves to previous agreements and do not represent the people," and urges that all parties should agree to prepare the people for possible failure at the United Nations, responsibility for which must be borne by the present administration. The statement also maintains that the Note should not be considered as a basis for national demands, since it is inconsistent with the unity which exists between Egypt and the Sudan; that the principle of a plebiscite in the Sudan should be rejected; that a neutral Cabinet should be formed to organise free elections; and that the people of the Nile Valley "will not be bound by any reservation which might limit their independence."

Since the presentation of the Note several articles on the possibility of resuming direct negotiations have appeared in the Cairo press. Al Ikhwan al Muslimin (the organ of the body of that name) maintains that the appeal to the Security Council may yet be withdrawn. Al Kotla (Independent Wafdist) has taken the line that Nokrashy and the rest of the Egyptian delegation are all anxious to resume direct negotiations, the one obstacle in their way being the difficulty of forming a fully representative Administration. In this connection al Assas hints at the possibility of a coalition Cabinet led by Sidky Pasha.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

trial in Ljubljana on a charge of infringing the elastic "Law for the Defence of the People's Power." Professor Furlan is representative of a number of people who served pre-war and wartime Yugoslav Governments in their professional and in administrative capacities, and who welcomed the Partisan Movement as promising a more liberal and less centralised régime in the future, but on returning to Yugoslavia were rapidly disillusioned. Two years ago Furlan resumed his former duties at Ljubljana University, but as a non-Communist with a Western outlook he may now be regarded as an undesirable influence. The Slovene economist, Dr. Jure Koce, who returned to Yugoslavia in 1945 under similar circumstances, was fortunate to enough to escape to Austria three months ago.

Balkan Peasant Party leaders in exile, notably Dr. Maček, Dr. Milan Gavrilović, the Bulgarian Dr. G. M. Dimitrov and the former Hungarian Premier, M. Nagy, published on the American Day of Independence, a declaration of international peasant solidarity and an appeal to the United States and the United Nations for action against the present rulers of their respective countries. The ideals and intentions of these people are admirable, but alas! their projects are far removed from reality.

Greece

The rebels in northern Greece remain active. On 21st July a band of three hundred made a night raid on Nigrita, a small town thirty-five miles north-east of Salonica. Besides attacking Government offices and the prison the rebels massacred thirty of the inhabitants, most of them women and children. This barbarity was inflicted, as a warning to others, on the relatives of Communists who had deserted the rebel ranks or refused to join them.

In the early hours of 25th July some 1,500 or 2,000 well-armed rebels surrounded Grevena. They had heavy weapons and kept an attack up for several hours, but did not succeed in penetrating into the town before the garrison was reinforced from neighbouring posts. The rebels met more resistance than they expected, losing 78 dead and 46 wounded and prisoners, but most of the attackers managed, as usual, to escape.

The Subsidiary Group left on the spot by the United Nations Balkan Commission, which went to Yannina in an attempt to investigate the attack made on 13th July on Konitsa, was unable to gain admission to Albanian territory. Nevertheless, it picked up useful information on the Greek side of the frontier, and the Albanian refusal—like the refusals of Yugoslavia and Bulgaria—must impress any impartial mind. Meanwhile, M. Gromyko's veto in the Security Council has blocked the attempt of other nations to end the undeclared war in Greece (see under "United Nations").

Mr. Griswold, the head of the American Economic Mission, reached Athens with a few members of the Mission on 14th July. Others arrived a few days later. The British Economic Mission came to an end on 24th July.

Albania

The Albanian Government have at length condescended to express their willingness to appear before the International Court of Justice at The Hague to answer the British complaint about the mining of the destroyers Saumarez and Volage in the Corfu Channel last October. It is understood that when the case comes on they will be represented by the Albanian Minister in Paris. The nomination was made nearly a fortnight after the final date (5th July) fixed by the court.

The question of Albania's admission to the United Nations is again being discussed by the Security Council: last year her application was refused.

Enver Hoxha and his party left Moscow on the 26th July after a visit lasting for eleven days. A discreet silence has been observed on the subject of the conversations, Hoxha merely remarking on his departure that the U.S.S.R. was going to help Albania in the cultural as well as in the economic field.

Bulgaria

On the 21st July His Majesty's Government addressed a further note to the Bulgarian Government on the subject of the non-appearance of the two Opposition newspapers Narodno Zemedelsko Zname and Svoboden Narod. His Majesty's Government, it says, remain unconvinced by the arguments in the Bulgarian note of the 3rd July. "The Bulgarian Government have still not expressed, either publicly or otherwise, their disapproval of the action of those who are refusing to allow the printing and distribution of the two newspapers, and His Majesty's Government are more impresesd by this fact and by the continued non-appearance of the two newspapers than by a promise of a revision, at some indefinite future date, of the Press Law of the 30th April, 1946." While noting the intention of the Bulgarian Government to revise this and certain other arbitrary laws so as (merely) to bring them into conformity with the new draft Constitution, His Majesty's Government go on to say they "are primarily concerned that these laws should be made to conform with Bulgaria's obligations under Article 2 of the Peace Treaty." Immediate action in this sense is urged if the Bulgarian Government are not "to incur public stigma" for refusing to act in the spirit of the treaty which they have signed.

The official indictment against M. Petkov has now been published, and the proceedings against him are expected to start about the middle of August. He is to be charged with having prepared an armed coup d'État, in association with certain named military officers, with the purpose of overthrowing the Government and facilitating the entry of "foreign forces." A further accusation is that he published in his newspaper Narodno Zemedelsko Zname articles calculated to undermine the discipline of the army.

It has often been prophesied that the mutual jealousy of M. Dimitrov and Marshal Tito would be likely to hinder the fulfilment of any plan for the future unification of Bulgaria and Yugoslavia. However that may be, they last Sunday kissed and embraced each other heartily in the railway station at Belgrade amid scenes of great rejoicing. M. Dimitrov is accompanied on this important occasion by the Ministers for Foreign Affairs, the Interior, Finance and Agriculture, the Chairman of the Economic Council and the Director-General of the Militia, and their visit is expected to last for about a week. Their train journey from Sofia seems to have been a triumphal progress punctuated by periodical halts for receptions and speeches. M. Dimitrov made rather a significant little speech to the people of the small border town of Tsaribrod, telling them that they must do all they could to act as a "living bridge" between the two countries. All that the British Political Representative had been able to glean from the Foreign Minister the day the party left was that one of the questions which would be discussed was that of the frontier minorities, and that economic questions would also figure largely.

Shortly before leaving for Belgrade, M. Dimitrov sent a letter to M. Trygve Lie, the Secretary-General, applying for Bulgaria to be admitted to the United Nations.

Trade agreements have been signed with Poland and with Austria, and according to the wireless the Soviet Union has agreed to supply Bulgaria with 10,000 tons of cereals to carry her over until the new harvest.

THE MIDDLE EAST

Egypt

A further criticism of the Egyptian Note to the Security Council (see Summary No. 400) was contained in a statement by the Administrative Council of the Independent Wafdist bloc (Makramites) published on the 21st July. The statement, which begins with an appeal for Egyptian unity before the world, anticipates the failure of the Egyptian case before the Security Council, on the grounds that the Government delegation "have already committed themselves to previous agreements and do not represent the people," and urges that all parties should agree to prepare the people for possible failure at the United Nations, responsibility for which must be borne by the present administration. The statement also maintains that the Note should not be considered as a basis for national demands, since it is inconsistent with the unity which exists between Egypt and the Sudan; that the principle of a plebiscite in the Sudan should be rejected; that a neutral Cabinet should be formed to organise free elections; and that the people of the Nile Valley "will not be bound by any reservation which might limit their independence."

Since the presentation of the Note several articles on the possibility of resuming direct negotiations have appeared in the Cairo press. Al Ikhwan al Muslimin (the organ of the body of that name) maintains that the appeal to the Security Council may yet be withdrawn. Al Kotla (Independent Wafdist) has taken the line that Nokrashy and the rest of the Egyptian delegation are all anxious to resume direct negotiations, the one obstacle in their way being the difficulty of forming a fully representative Administration. In this connection al Assas hints at the possibility of a coalition Cabinet led by Sidky Pasha.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Al Ahram has reported that Ahmed Kamel Kotb, the President of the so-called Socialist Fellah Party, will leave for the United States on the 31st July to give publicity to the Egyptian cause. The report adds that his journey is subsidised in part by the Nile Valley Propaganda Front, a newly-formed university society whose object is to disseminate propaganda for the Nile Valley cause in Egypt and elsewhere. Kotb was sentenced to fourteen days' imprisonment last May for attempting to incite anti-Government feeling in the Sudan. Another Egyptian who intends to make his way to New York in connection with the Egyptian appeal is Ibrahim Momen, one of the most active propagandists of the Ikhwan al Muslimin.

King Farouk made a broadcast speech to the nation on the 19th July, the first day of the Ramadan fast. Apart from exhortations to unity, and a reference to the fact that the Arab States' support of Egypt indicated the strength of the Arab League, "which has gained the full confidence of all Arabs and has become the centre of all their hopes," the speech contained a significant reference to Arab Palestine, "whose struggle we fully support and who has our sympathies until right and justice are restored."

It is reported that Abdel Karim, having returned to Cairo from Alexandria, where he has been undergoing medical treatment, has received an Arab delegation from Palestine headed by the ex-Mufti. The latter is believed to have told him that he was an example to the Palestine Arabs in their struggle against Zionism and imperialism.

There are signs of increased Communist agitation in the country. A reliable source reports the fusion of two of the largest groups in the Egyptian Communist movement, and the attempts of these groups to form a national front and awaken the political consciousness of the people. Communist infiltration into the ranks of the Wafd—not a novel development—is also reported, the Communists hoping thereby to gain valuable support in their plans to overthrow the Government. The reported formation of a new youth organisation known as the "White Units"—a Wafdist-Socialist group believed to be subversive in intent—is a further sign of the Wafd's swing to the left. The object of this organisation is, apparently, to gather the different political youth elements under one banner and infuse them with socialist doctrines of equality and social justice. Since there are at least five important youth movements in Egypt, with differing political views and only xenophobia as a common doctrine, their union will not be easy.

The circulation of subversive leaflets in May to all police stations appears to have been another Communist move. These leaflets, which are cleverly worded to appeal to the illiterate policeman and soldier, make use of the dissatisfaction and unrest which is endemic in the Egyptian police force. The latest pamphlet, dated the 21st May, produced by a body describing itself as "the Military Society for the Union of Persecuted Policemen and Soldiers in Egypt," urges that the special law under which policemen and soldiers are tried should be abolished; that the Government should recognise a general police trade union, and should guarantee to find employment for discharged soldiers.

The failure of the Government to redress the grievances of the employees of the Telegraphs Administration formulated nearly a year ago led to a strike in Cairo by some hundreds of their number on the 17th July. The strike later affected more workers, but ended on the 20th July. (See also under "Transjordan" and "Sa'udi Arabia.")

The Sudan

The reactions of the pro-Egyptian Ashigga party to the Egyptian Note appear to be favourable. The terms of the Note have been described by an Ashigga delegate in Cairo as entirely in harmony with Sudanese aspirations. The Umma party, on the other hand, have taken a strongly critical line over the Note (see last week's Summary). Yacoub Osman, the Umma party delegate in London, is reported to have said that the Note "aims simply at diverting Egyptian public opinion from the internal difficulties in Egypt, and also at giving the Sudanese the impression that the Egyptians are interested in the welfare of the Nile Valley population."

Ethiopia

The Ethiopian Herald of the 7th July contained a leading article strongly criticising the decision of the United Nations to accept the British Government's invitation to send field missions to study reconstruction needs in Cyrenaica, Eritrea and Tripolitania. The article claims that Eritrea is an integral part of Ethiopia, and that the United Nations have no right to take any decision regarding Eritrea without previous consultation with the Ethiopian Government. The British Government's invitation to the United Nations is interpreted as either an attempt to transform the temporary nature of British rule into a permanency, or to postpone indefinitely the "primary, fundamental issue of Ethiopia's claim to sovereignty." The article concludes with the statement that the failure to consult the Ethiopian Government in this matter is tantamount to a treaty infringement, and demonstrates to the world the United Nations' inability to adhere to democratic principles.

The real facts are that the initiative in this matter was not taken by His Majesty's Government, but by the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations, who asked for the concurrence of His Majesty's Government in the despatch of the field missions. It must also be pointed out that the terms of reference of the missions are confined entirely to social and economic matters, and have no political significance.

The Ethiopian police have at last succeeded in arresting three Jewish terrorists who were known to be in Addis Ababa. The Emperor granted permission for their refoulement to Eritrea, and they left for the frontier on the 26th July.

Palestine

The Arab States have presented a long memorandum to the U.N.S.C.O.P. in public session at Beirut. This memorandum states that the Arab Governments are convinced that the Palestine problem allows of only one solution, namely the termination of the Mandate and the granting of independence to Palestine, and that any further enquiry into a problem so clear has become superfluous, but that they have decided, nevertheless, to accept the Committee's invitation to give evidence. The memorandum is divided into two main parts—the right of Palestine to self-determination, and the necessity for the maintenance of peace in the Middle East. The first part consists mainly of a denunciation of the Balfour Declaration and the Mandate, and stresses that the Palestine Arabs' right to self-determination has been continuously violated. The second part, dealing with the attitude of the Arab Governments towards Zionism, states that this attitude is founded on a desire to preserve peace in the Middle East, a peace which is being menaced by the expansionist ambitions and terrorist methods of the Zionists. The memorandum claims that the Zionist movement was originally consistent merely with a refuge in Palestine; that later it demanded a National Home, and, having obtained this, tried to make of it a form of State in the heart of Palestine endowed with its own institutions, its own finance, its own economy and its own army. Later, the memorandum states that the Zionist aggressive attitude, "born of the weakness shewn by the Mandatory Power towards the Jews, will not fail to provoke in its turn the creation of similar Arab organisations," and claims that the responsibility for the resultant problems must rest with the Zionist organisation alone. The situation in Palestine, the memorandum maintains, is the direct concern of the Arab countries in the Middle East, for their security is in danger, and this gives them the right to resist Zionism by all means in their power. It then states: "Palestine, for ethical, cultural, political and economic reasons, is, in fact, an integral part of the Arab World which has already organised itself into sovereign States linked together by the Arab League Pact of the 22nd March, 1945 . . . . Every fissure in this whole, every difference between the States which form it, threatens to overthrow it and to plunge this particularly sensitive part of the world into trouble and disorder." The memorandum then claims that the Jewish State which the Zionists are determined to establish in Palestine is not a viable State from either the political or the economic point of view, that the Arab States could by no means tolerate the creation of such a State, and that, if it were established by violence, the Arab Governments would be obliged to reply with violence.

In conclusion, the memorandum stresses the necessity for the immediate stoppage of all Jewish immigration into Palestine, and emphasises that any project for partition, far from resolving the Palestine problem, would only aggravate it. The memorandum then recommends the establishment of a free Government based on proportional representation, and the granting to all Jews who have acquired Palestinian nationality by legitimate means of the same rights as those accorded to Arab citizens. This solution would not, it is claimed, deprive the Jewish citizens of Palestine of their rights, because "Jewish minorities in the Arab States have never been ill-treated."

The Committee held two secret sessions on the 23rd July, at which the Arab delegates answered certain written questions on the above statement. The Chairman of

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

the Committee, accompanied by seven delegates, arrived at Amman on the morning of the 25th July. The delegates were received by King Abdullah, who appears to have confined himself to the subject of Palestine; they also heard a statement by the Prime Minister, Sami Pasha Rifai. The Committee are preparing their report at Geneva.

Two more illegal immigrant ships reached Palestine on the morning of the 28th July. They were boarded by the Royal Navy without incident and brought to Haifa where most of their passengers were trans-shipped for Cyprus.

As a reprisal for the return to France of the passengers of the President Warfield (see last week's Summary) the Haganah carried out an ineffective attack on the Radar installation on Mt. Carmel, and also sank the transport Empire Lifeguard, which reached Palestine on the 23rd July with a monthly quota of legalised immigrants from Cyprus. There were no casualties. There have been a number of other terrorist incidents during the week.

Transjordan

The Indonesian Delegation (see last week's Summary) left Amman on 23rd July after staying a few days. The attitude of the Transjordan Government towards the recognition of Indonesia remains unchanged.

The Prime Minister, Sami Pasha Rifai, has replied to a request from the Syrian Government for his views on the line to be followed by the Syrian representative on the Security Council (see last week's Summary under "Syria"). The gist of his reply was that his Government would stand by the resolution of the Arab League Political Committee in March, recommending the resumption of direction negotiations in preference to an appeal to the United Nations. He also requested the Syrian Government that they should instruct their Security Council representative to do his utmost to press the Council to recommend the immediate re-opening of direct negotiations in Egypt's own interests (see also under "Saudi Arabia" and "Palestine.")

Saudi Arabia

Ibn Saud has expressed his concurrence with the line to be adopted by the Syrian Government towards the Egyptian appeal to the Security Council (see last week's Summary under "Syria). He has also approved of the Syrian decision to send two advisers to New York in order to ensure that the Government's instructions to their Security Council representative are carried out.

A long memorandum on Palestine has been prepared by the Saudi Arabian Government. After explaining that the U.N.S.C.O.P. was appointed without the consent of the Arab States and enumerating their reasons for boycotting it, the memorandum states that the Arab Governments wish to come to an agreement with the Governments of Great Britain and the United States on the basis of the Saudi proposal for the termination of the Mandate (see last week's Summary) before the subject is discussed by the Assembly. Failing such a preliminary agreement, the memorandum maintains that the result of the deliberation in the Assembly will be unfavourable, and that Palestine will not only become a permanent threat to peace in the Middle East, but also an obstacle to the establishment of friendly relations between His Majesty's Government and the Arab States.

It appears that the statement on Greater Syria in the House of Commons (see last week's Summary under "Syria") has had the desired effect of allaying Ibn Saud's anxiety over Hashimite designs (see Summary 395).

Yemen

The Prince Saif al-Islam Abdullah, sixth son of the Imam Yahya, is now in the United States as the official guest of the State Department. Since June, 1945, the Prince has been living in Cairo, where he has been handling Yemeni relations with other Arab States. Diplomatic relations between the Yemen and the United States Government were established on the 4th March, 1946, and this visit, the first which has been paid by a Yemeni official to the United States, will afford an opportunity for the discussion of subjects of mutual interest to the two Governments. It is reported that the Prince is anxious to obtain a loan from the Import-Export Bank to improve agriculture and increase production in the Yemen.

On 24th July the Prince submitted an application for the admission of Yemen to the United Nations. The application observes that "it is hardly necessary to add that Yemen is already a member of the Arab League, which, within its regional limits, is pursuing purposes fully in harmony with those of the United Nations." The application does not, of course, mention that Yemen was dragged into the Arab League with the utmost reluctance, largely through the influence of Ibn Sa'ud. Her contribution to the League discussions has so far been almost negligible.

Syria

The final results of the elections for the whole of Syria, including the Jebel Druze, show 57 old members and 79 new. Of these 136 members approximately 28 are on the National Bloc list, 53 belong to the opposition, while the remainder are of unknown political allegiance. The eventual political set-up of the new Parliament cannot be forecast at present.

The Prime Minister, Jamil Mardum Bey, is reported to have stated at a press conference on 19th July that "no Syrian or Arab can deny that Transjordan is a Syrian district separated from the Mother Country. If Transjordan wishes to return to her mother and accept the republican régime, we shall receive her with open arms." This statement is in harmony with a pronouncement made by the President on 26th February, 1945, in which he stated that he would welcome a Greater Syria provided that the régime were republican, Damascus remained the capital, Zionist infiltration were obviated, the entity and independence of the Lebanon were respected and the change brought about by the free choice of the population.

Lebanon

The Lebanese Prime Minister has told the Oriental Secretary that he was anxious to co-ordinate anti-Communist activities in the Middle East and that he would suggest a meeting of representatives from the Arab Governments to discuss this, possibly in October. Reports from various sources indicate an increase in Communist activities in the Levant States. It appears that a joint committee of the Lebanese and Syrian Communist parties has been formed, while there are also reports of closer liaison with the Palestine Communists. In Lebanon the Communist leader, Mustafa Aris, who visited Persia earlier in the year as head of the W.F.T.U. delegation to that country, appears to have been responsible for an increase in Communist activity in the trade unions. In Syria an important Communist group centred on Aleppo is believed to be extending its influence in the north, particularly in the Latakia district.

Arab League

The presence of Azzam Pasha in America has given rise to numerous rumours that he is endeavouring to obtain the assistance of American agricultural experts for the member states, and that such assistance would be administered by the League. There is probably some truth in these rumours, since Azzam can be expected to take every opportunity while in the United States to shore up the none-too-solid edifice of the League.

Iraq

The Iraqi Government have made a request to the United Nations similar to that of Saudi Arabia (see last week's Summary under "Saudi Arabia") for the termination of the Mandate over Palestine and the recognition of Palestinian independence. Rumours that Iraq would raise the North African question at the forthcoming session of the United Nations General Assembly were, however, strongly denied by the Iraqi Minister in Paris on the 17th July. The Minister pointed out that, as an Arab country, Iraq certainly hoped that the legitimate aspirations of the North African peoples would receive satisfaction, but was at pains to stress the long-standing friendship, founded on mutual economic and cultural interests, which united France and Iraq, and which would be reinforced by the forthcoming visit of the Regent to France.

A bill for the establishment of a National Central Bank has been submitted to Parliament. The function of the Bank will be, if approved, to control the Iraqi banks and supervise foreign currency exchange.

Persia

The Majlis was finally opened by the Shah on the 17th July, and, after the election of temporary officials, adjourned until the 27th July. Constitutionally the Majlis takes legal shape when ½ plus 1, i.e., 69, of the deputies' credentials have been accepted. In accordance with the usual procedure, the Prime Minister is expected to resign. The Majlis' choice of his successor—determined by secret ballot—is then submitted to the Shah, who uses his prerogative to accept or reject the chosen candidate. In practice, however, the Shah's acceptance is almost invariable.

Afghanistan

His Majesty's Government hold the view that there is no justification for the Afghan claim that the people of the North-West Frontier Province should have been given the opportunity of voting to join Afghanistan or of forming an independent "Pathanistan" (see Summary No. 399) in addition to the two alternatives under the

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267576

recent referendum. At the referendum 51 per cent. of the total electorate were in favour of joining Pakistan; but since only 65 per cent. of this electorate voted at the last election, this result may be taken as indicating that there is, in fact, a substantial majority in the country who support union with Pakistan, despite the fact that Abdul Ghaffar Khan and the Redshirts boycotted the referendum. The Redshirts is a popular movement of the towns which has been the main support of the Congress Ministry, the only Ministry functioning in the North-West Frontier Province since the 1936 Government of India Act. Abdul Ghaffar Khan is a brother of Dr. Khan Sahib, an ex-Congress Premier of the Province.

The Prime Minister, Sirdar Shah Mahmud Khan, is now visiting London as the guest of His Majesty's Government. On the 30th July he was received by His Majesty, and a dinner in his honour was given by Mr. Bevin. On the 31st July he was entertained at a luncheon given by Mr. Attlee. It is hoped that this visit, by cementing Anglo-Afghan friendship, will reduce the likelihood of trouble breaking out in the North-West Frontier area on the withdrawal of British forces from India (see Summary No. 392). From London Shah Mahmud Khan will proceed to America, where he will be received by Mr. Marshall. It is expected that American economic assistance to Afghanistan will form a principal subject for discussion.

Corrigendum

Summary No. 401, p. 19, "Persia," line 2: Insert "their claim to" between "bolster up" and "Bahrein."

THE FAR EAST

China

Interest in Nanking political circles is centred almost exclusively in the visit of President Truman's special representative, General Wedemeyer. He and his party arrived in Nanking on 22nd July, and almost immediately the General issued a communiqué re-stating that his mission is to make an appraisal of the "existing overall situation in China and Korea and their relative future capacities for rehabilitation."

No doubt due to press reports in Nanking that the Executive Yuan has drawn up a list of proposed schemes for economic improvement and rehabilitation for presentation to the United States Government through General Wedemeyer, two days later the General's Publicity Officer released another statement, reiterating the fact-finding object of the mission and adding that, under President Truman's directive, General Wedemeyer was not empowered to make comunications to, or requests of, the Chinese Government—a statement which is said to have had a somewhat damping effect on the Government's enthusiastic expectations of the General's appointment. Nevertheless, reports of a statement credited to General Wedemeyer that United States activities might extend into Communist territory in China and Northern Korea have provided food for considerable speculation; and it is widely thought that the despatch of this mission provides proof of a change in United States policy towards China. In an editorial the China Press says in support of this theory that the importance of General Wedemeyer's visit provides hope that before many months are out "the ill-defined, uncertain United States policy in this part of the World will be put on a solid and more permanent foundation." Certainly hopes are cherished in Government circles that it may mean the beginning of unrestricted military and material support for the Central Government. On the other hand, there is also some apprehension lest General Wedemeyer's appointment should spell yet another endeavour to re-open peace negotiations with the Communists—a course that would not be at all to General Chiang Kai-shek's liking at the moment.

In the meantime the Central Government have followed their general mobilisation order with the cancellation of the seats originally reserved for the Communist Party in the State Council and the National Assembly. And, their loud accusations of Soviet aid to the Communist forces in Manchuria having failed to provide the world-wide sympathy and American dollars for which they had hoped, the Central Government are now engaged in a determined effort to demonstrate their ability to deal effectively with the "Communist rebellion" in the field. Weather conditions in Manchuria have necessitated a lull in operations in that sphere, but the fanfaronade over the Szepingkai "victory" has not been allowed to die down; while much publicity is also being given to doubtful claims of substantial Government gains in China proper—more particularly in the war-torn province of Shantung. Beneath the surface of this official façade of confidence, however, there is an under-current of genuine concern indicating that all is not going quite as well as the world is asked to believe. General Chiang Kai-shek, himself, appears to be anything but satisfied with the military situation as a whole—more particularly that in Manchuria. Bad relations between the field commanders are popularly thought to have been largely responsible for the success of the recent Communist drive in the Changchun–Mukden area; and, following a visit of investigation by the Generalissimo's Chief of Staff, General Chen Cheng, a number of important changes have been made. General Tu Yü-ming has been relieved of his supreme command in Manchuria and granted "sick leave"; while General Sun Li-jen has been appointed Deputy Commander-in-Chief of the Chinese Army in the field. General Wedemeyer is known to hold a high opinion of General Sun Li-jen and the latter's appointment to so important a post is thought to have been carefully timed.

Another disturbance is reported to have broken out in the Ili district of Sinkiang. Details are lacking, but General Chang Chih-chung, until recently Provincial Governor of Sinkiang, is reported to have stated at Urumchi that the situation is critical.

Chinese official and mercantile interests are not enthusiastic over the prospects of trade with Japan after the resumption of private trading on 15th August. They have expressed misgivings in regard to "General MacArthur's intended policy of subsidising Japanese exports," which they believe will lead to dumping and prove "ruinous to Chinese industry." Five members of the Control Yuan have requested the Government to endeavour to have the matter held in abeyance pending the signing of a peace treaty with Japan.

On 23rd July, a reciprocal Civil Aviation Agreement, permitting British and Chinese air lines to operate civil air services between Chinese and U.K. territories, was signed at Nanking. In general, it takes the same form as the Agreement between the U.K. and the U.S.A. which was concluded at Bermuda in 1946. Under this Agreement British planes are entitled to fly from London, or Singapore, to Canton, Shanghai and Tientsin. British planes may also operate from Hongkong to Canton and Shanghai. For Chinese aircraft two routes to the United Kingdom have been opened—one through the Middle East and southern Europe, and the other across the Pacific via North America and the Atlantic. Chinese planes may also ply from Shanghai or Canton to Hongkong and Singapore.

C267577

Indonesia

The long and carefully planned Dutch military campaign in the East Indies is being carried out against little organised resistance in either Java or Sumatra.

Claiming that they are already two days ahead of schedule, the Netherlands combined forces have succeeded in occupying extensive areas and most of the larger towns in East and West Java. A few sharp clashes in the Semarang and Sourabaya areas are reported to have occurred, but to have been of short duration. In Sumatra the Dutch have encountered slightly more opposition, although, even here, such checks as they have encountered in their advance have been caused chiefly by land mines and booby traps. In the Medan neighbourhood some fighting of a sharper nature is reported to have taken place before a number of estates were finally captured intact. Two or three oil fields were also brought under Dutch occupation and found to be in fair condition, but reports state that some of these were later found to have been set alight, it is thought as the result of Indonesian infiltration after the sites had been occupied.

Statements from Dutch military sources indicate that no Indonesian property has been damaged and that the Republicans are only putting their threatened scorched-earth policy into practice where Dutch and other foreign-, especially Chinese-, owned properties are concerned. Chinese property owners are said already to have suffered heavy losses in the burning of houses, shops and warehouses including an appreciable number of their rice mills. So far, the only report received concerning British property is that retreating Indonesians have done considerable damage to British-owned estates at Soebang. Dr. Gani, the Republican Deputy Prime Minister who is now being held in protective custody in Batavia, has sent a verbal message to H.M. Consul-General, expressing regret that British property should have sustained damage, which he attributes to the failure of some Republican units to observe the strict orders against such action issued by his Government on the outbreak of hostilities.

In conversation with H.M. Consul-General in Batavia, Dr. van Mook showed little concern over possible unfavourable world reaction to the Dutch employment of force and he intimated that in his judg-

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

ment military operations would be virtually over long before any steps toward foreign intervention were likely to appear on the scene—indeed, he confidently expected military operations to be brought to a successful finish within a week. He went on to make the somewhat astonishing statement that he had no doubt but that some form of moderate and responsible government would ultimately be set up at Jogjakarta, but that, in that case, their authority would have to be limited to Central Java as he intended setting up a number of separate, autonomous states in East and West Java and possibly also in Sumatra.

It is difficult to reconcile this programme with the line taken by Dr. van Mook in his broadcast from Batavia a couple of days earlier, or with the speech delivered in the House at The Hague by Dr. Beel on 23rd July. (See under "Low Countries.")

In appealing for co-operation in the immediate formation of a normal police force—which might enable a beginning to be made in the reconstruction of the country's economic life—Dr. van Mook went on to say that the Dutch still desire full implementation of the Linggadjati Agreement. This latter statement dovetails in with the statement in Dr. Beel's speech that "as soon as a Republican Government proves able and prepared to co-operate on the basis of Linggadjati principles—in a position of equality with other participant States—such a Government will find the door open again for negotiations." As the first principle of the Linggadjati Agreement provides for recognition of the Republican Government's de facto authority over Java, Madura and Sumatra, the "other participant States" referred to by Dr. Beel would appear obviously to be those set up outside Java and Sumatra, such as "East Indonesia" and "West Borneo," and not a number of new states (to be) created within Java and Sumatra. The question whether the Netherlands Government have repudiated, or merely suspended the Linggadjati Agreement, however, is not at all clear.

Dr. van Mook is also reported to have recommended to the Netherlands Government that the whole of Java be occupied. It is thought, however, that the Cabinet is likely to consider this suggestion for some days before coming to any definite decision; and that the Government will be largely influenced in this by the Republicans' action—whether they pursue a policy of systematic destruction of property in the interior and/or if they resort to guerrilla warfare, of which there is at present no evidence of intention. It is also considered likely that a great deal may depend on whether Dr. van Mook's proposal is supported by Professor Schermerhorn, who has just left Batavia for The Hague.

On 29th July, a radio report from Jogjakarta announced that an Indian-owned aircraft carrying medical supplies from Singapore, had been shot down by Dutch fighter-planes over that city and that eight out of the nine passengers (four of whom were British) had lost their lives. In Singapore the local press laid much stress on the fact that the aircraft was carrying Red Cross supplies. It was considered necessary, therefore, to correct an erroneous impression that this consignment was connected with the Indonesian appeal to the Governor-General of Singapore to arrange for the despatch and safe-conduct of planes carrying Red Cross supplies for their wounded—negotiations concerning which were proceeding with the International Red Cross and Dutch officials. Nevertheless, the Dutch action in shooting down the plane has caused world-wide indignation. Reports from both Singapore and Batavia have confirmed, however, that the flight was entirely unofficial and that the pilot was warned before he set off that he was contravening Dutch regulations and must be responsible, therefore, for the risk involved.

Speaking at a press conference in New Delhi on 28th July, the Deputy Prime Minister of the Interim Government of India, Pandit Nehru, announced India's intention to make a formal approach to the United Nations concerning Dutch aggression in Indonesia; also that the Indian Government were taking steps to terminate Dutch air services flying over India. He said that representatives of the prospective Government of Pakistan were being consulted and that he had no doubt that they would agree with whatever action might be taken. A note from the Government of India, asking the Security Council to endeavour to solve the Indonesian problem, was handed to the Secretary-General of the United Nations Organisation on 30th July.

On 30th July, also, the Australian Prime Minister announced that the Australian Government had instructed their representative on the Security Council to draw the Council's attention to the situation in Indonesia, under Article 39 of the Charter. (India's request is made under Article 35.)

M. Sjarir, who is now in New Delhi, is reported by the press to be ready to proceed to the United States to plead Indonesia's case in person. Press reports also state that the Netherlands Government have instructed their newly appointed Ambassador to India to endeavour to contact M. Sjarir and to assure him of a warm welcome, should he elect to visit the Netherlands.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

Mr. Marshall's proposals for the economic rehabilitation of Europe continue to be the main topic of discussion in American press and radio comment—with the great majority of opinion supporting the Secretary of State. On the 24th July Senator Taft, who does not consider that a special autumn session of Congress will be necessary, announced that it had been arranged that Congress could be recalled "at the consent of the four (Republican) leaders"—Mr. Joseph Martin, the Speaker of the House; Rep. Charles A. Halleck, the House Majority Leader; Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, President pro tempore of the Senate; and the Senate Majority Leader, Mr. Wallace H. White. The President, of course, has power under the Constitution to recall Congress should he deem it necessary. Meanwhile Mr. Harriman's committee, appointed by the President to assess United States resources in relation to the needs of foreign nations (see Summary No. 398), held its first meeting on the 24th July. A number of sub-committees were set up and it was agreed that the 1st October should be the "target" date for submission of a full report to the President. Mr. Harriman explained that the report would be written in terms of materials, not dollar value. In this connection it is interesting to note that Senator Taft, a consistent opponent of the British Loan, is recently reported to have stated his conviction that, in American aid to Europe, machinery and raw materials should take priority over food since, in his opinion, the object of Mr. Marshall's proposals is to help European reconstruction rather than to increase United States expenditure abroad.

Discussion of the problem of European economic recovery has concentrated particularly on the change in American policy towards Germany mentioned in last week's Summary. Although the new United States policy directive for Germany has been hailed by economy-minded conservatives as an essential step, liberal and left-wing observers, who claim to see in it a shift from the "Marshall Plan" to the "Hoover Plan," express sympathy with the "justified fears" of France and utter warnings against the danger of a renewal of German industrial domination in Europe. It was officially announced on the 24th July that Mr. Marshall has assured the French Foreign Minister that no decision regarding a new level of industry for Germany will be taken before the French Government has been consulted. In giving this assurance Mr. Marshall is reported by the press to have acted against the wishes of the War Department and without previously informing General Clay, and there is thought to be a serious divergence between the policies of the State and War Departments on the matter of Germany.

With the Anglo-American conference on Ruhr coal problems expected to begin in Washington within the next few days, there has been some discussion on the question how far His Majesty's Government will be willing to compromise with American "free enterprise" ideas on the efficient development of the Ruhr. Considerable publicity has been given to a "secret" report by Mr. Robert Moses, an official of the New York City administration, who has recently returned from a tour of Germany. Mr. Moses alleges, apparently, that inadequate discipline in the mines and the British plans for their socialization have been the main contributory factors in the failure to increase Ruhr coal production. A second unpublished report on the Ruhr, prepared for the War Department by a group of economic experts, is said to have made similar strictures on the British Administration and to have recommended the establishment of a coal authority financed by the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development. Publication of these reports has been suppressed lest they should prove "embarrassing" to the negotiations in Washington. Regarding the vexed question of socialization, Mr. Raymond Gram Swing, the liberal radio commentator, warns that "not to socialize the Ruhr would be to cut the ground under the German Social Democratic Party in the British Zone, which is the only instrument for keeping the Communists in the zone in a minority." (See also under "Germany" and "France.")

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

With the threat of "Communist infiltration" at home as well as abroad very much to the fore, the situation in the Balkans continues to cause alarm. Well-informed observers report that high United States Government officials have been considering seriously the possible need for direct military intervention. The responsibility of the United States for restoring order in Greece in the event of Soviet "obstruction" rendering prompt and effective action by the United Nations impossible, is coming to be widely recognized, and a display of naval force in that area is recommended by some moderate internationalists as a means of discouraging further aggressive manœuvres by the U.S.S.R. It may perhaps be significant, in view of the present uncompromising American attitude towards Soviet policy, that Mr. Truman has nominated Mr. Charles E. Bohlen to succeed Mr. Benjamin Cohen, who is resigning from his post as Counsellor to the State Department on the 31st July. Mr. Bohlen, an American foreign service officer, is particularly well informed on Soviet relations and has attended many international meetings at which the U.S.S.R. was represented.

The Far East is also attracting a considerable amount of attention. A statement on the Indonesian situation issued by the State Department on the 21st July "profoundly regrets" the abandonment of negotiations between the Dutch and the Indonesians, and some commentators have made unfavourable comparisons between the Dutch action in using military force against a weak colonial people and the peaceful settlement achieved by His Majesty's Government in India. In the United States the Government's proposal for an Eleven-Power conference to conduct preliminary discussions regarding a peace treaty for Japan has been widely and enthusiastically welcomed. The failure of the Soviet Union to accept the American invitation has occasioned no surprise and has probably strengthened the conviction that the procedure suggested by the United States Government is the only one likely to produce just decisions with a minimum of "haggling" and delay. It is felt by American commentators that, if the U.S.S.R. will not agree to the terms proposed, the treaty must be written without her, since Russia's contribution to the victory over Japan was so small and so belated that she cannot be allowed to use her Great Power veto to obstruct a settlement. A few of these critics point out that "awkward" differences of opinion may occur between the United States and the strong British Commonwealth group of nations on such questions as the permitted level of Japanese industry and the dissolution of the Zaibatsu industrial combines. (See also under "Low Countries" and "Far East.")

In Washington the first session of the 80th Congress finally adjourned in the early hours of Sunday morning the 27th July. In the last-minute scramble to deal with as much as possible of the urgent legislation remaining on hand the most important measure to be passed was undoubtedly the bill to unify the armed Services of the United States under a single Secretary of Defence with Cabinet rank. There will now be separate departments of the Army, Navy and Air Force, each with its own Secretary, who will not, however, hold Cabinet rank. This bill was signed by President Truman on the 26th and, on the same day, the Senate acted to confirm his nomination of Mr. James V. Forrestal, Secretary of the Navy, to be the first United States Secretary of Defence. The President also signed an executive order implementing the new law, which provides for the creation of a National Security Council headed by the President; a National Security Resources Board to co-ordinate civilian, industrial and military mobilisation; a Central Intelligence Agency; a Munitions Board to co-ordinate procurement for the services; and a permanent Research and Development Board.

As a result of a Senate-House compromise, a bill authorising the appropriation of 1,658,902,197 dollars for United States foreign relief, was completed and passed to the President on the 26th. This sum includes the 400 million dollars for aid to Greece and Turkey, 332 million dollars for post-U.N.R.R.A. relief, the United States contribution to the International Refugee Organisation, and funds for Army administration and relief in the occupied countries. The cut of 18 million dollars (for relief to Poland and Hungary) voted by the House was also approved by the Senate. Also on the 26th the House of Representatives passed and sent to the White House a new Wool Bill authorising the continuance until the 31st December, 1948, of the price support programme for home-produced wool, but omitting the import restrictions contained in the bill vetoed by President Truman last month. (See Summary No. 398)

Important items which have failed to reach the statute book include Mr. Truman's proposals for inter-American military co-operation and for universal military training, while action regarding the State Department's Information Services has been deferred until next year. Congress has also failed during this session to enact any new legislation on such domestic issues as minimum wages, national health insurance, housing and Federal aid to education. On the 24th July Senator Taft announced that two joint Congressional committees were being set up, one to make a special study of housing problems, and the other to conduct a nation-wide survey of price conditions. Consideration of a measure under which the Maritime Commission would be authorised to charter American Liberty ships to Germany with a view to reducing the occupation costs in the bi-zonal area has also been postponed until 1948.

Erratum

Summary No. 401, "United States," page 24, col. 2, line 8: the figure should be 1,353,024,900 dollars, not 1,353,029,900 dollars.

LATIN AMERICA

Inter-American Affairs

According to broadcast reports, most of the American countries support the Brazilian proposal that Nicaragua should not be invited to the Rio de Janeiro Conference; the Argentine attitude was confirmed by her Foreign Minister, Dr. Bramuglia, who stated at a press conference that he would be heading the Argentine delegation. (See Summary No. 401.)

The Brazilian press has given considerable prominence to the question of inviting observers to the Conference. The Pan-American Union was at first inclined to invite observers from countries with interests in the Western Hemisphere, but the Brazilian Foreign Minister has now informed H.M. Embassy that the Union have ruled against the presence of foreign observers, with the exception of Dr. Trygve Lie, representing the United Nations.

In reply to a Communist question in the Chamber of Deputies regarding Uruguay's attitude towards the projected American defence pact to be discussed at the Conference, the Uruguayan Foreign Minister declared that the Government did not practise secret diplomacy. Should such a pact materialise, the Uruguayan Government would ask Parliament to ratify it.

A New York report states that no economic problems will be discussed at the Conference.

Argentina

The Perón Government have recently issued a whole series of decrees concerned with the campaign for normalising prices and lowering the cost of living. One of them fixed maximum prices for a wide range of food commodities and another determined the maximum charges of textile and shoe manufacturers. In a broadcast explaining the scope of these decrees, President Perón said that they would have the immediate effect of lowering the prices of certain goods. He attributed the sharp rise in the cost of living (from 100 in 1939 to 220 in March 1947) to the after-effects of the war and to shortage of goods and inflation. While admitting that the increases were excessive, the President held that they compared favourably with those of most other countries, with the exception of Great Britain, Canada and the U.S.A. Some of the inflationary trends, the President added, had arisen from the activities of a few criminal persons who wanted to get rich quick at the expense of other citizens, and very severe measures would be taken against them. President Perón asked for the co-operation of the whole population in the campaign and appealed to the workers to produce more, as only thus could the general cost of living be reduced.

According to a broadcast report the Government has ordered the closing of La Tribuna. The order was opposed by Señor Miranda and also by the Association of Argentine Journalists, the President of the Association, Señor Octavio Palazzolo, referring to the recent step by the Central Bank in suspending the issue of import permits for newsprint, said that it looked very much as if the Government definitely intended to impose a State monopoly on the purchase and distribution of that type of paper. Señor Miranda's opposition to the closing of La Tribuna is curious, in view of that paper's attacks on him (see Summary No. 401).

Señor Miranda, on his appointment as Chairman of the National Economic Council (see Summary No. 401), tendered his resignation as President of the Central Bank and Chairman of various other organisations whose functions correspond to that office. His successor at the Bank is Señor Orlando Maroglio.

Broadcast reports state that a school for diplomatists is to be opened in the Buenos

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Aires National University, with courses in international law and diplomacy, to equip Argentine officials for diplomatic posts abroad.

The nomination of Mr. James Bruce as Ambassador to Argentina was confirmed by the United States Senate on the 11th July. Mr. Bruce was Assistant Military Attaché in Italy during the 1914–18 war. He is 54 and a Director of various business enterprises.

Brazil

When President Dutra was asked by the Jornal do Comércio of Recife about the Government's attitude towards the militant representatives of the banned Communist Party (see Summary No. 392) he said that the Party had been outlawed by its own actions and nature. "This," he said, "is not an opinion, it is a decision by the highest electoral tribunal in the country." No one could sincerely deny, the President added, that the Communist Party receives foreign guidance and places itself by its conduct and doctrine above the laws of the country. The decision of the judicial power would be enforced without hesitation and in all its consequences. It is interesting to compare these remarks of President Dutra with those of President Perón, who, in a conversation with H.M. Ambassador, referred to the wish of the United States Government to call a conference at Rio to arm the American Continent against Communism. "That is not the way to fight Communism. You can only fight Communism by producing better conditions for the workers. That is what I am trying to do here."

Paraguay

The masses of undependable information put out by both sides make it difficult to give a reliable account of developments in the Civil War. However, it seems fairly certain that the fighting has increased in intensity and that Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay have become involved, if not in the actual fighting, at least in the circumstances arising out of it. There is little doubt that the Paraguayan gun-boats, Paraguay and Humanitá, which have been declared rebels by the Morínigo Government, have been helped by the Uruguayan Government with repairs and provisions. An exchange of somewhat acrimonious notes on the subject took place between the two Governments about a month ago and has been followed by another from Paraguay. Furthermore, relations have not been improved by rebel propaganda emitted from the Uruguayan short-wave broadcasting station.

In a heated debate in the Brazilian Chamber of Deputies, Senhor Flores da Cunha, a leader of the Democratic Union, had alleged the existence of a secret agreement between Presidents Morínigo and Perón, which provided for the supply of arms and ammunition to the Morínigo Government from Argentina. He supported his allegation with a list of arms already shipped to Asunción by the Perón Government. The Paraguayan Government naturally denied these accusations and attacked Senhor Flores da Cunha as a Communist. The same matter was also raised in the Argentine Chamber by a group of Radicals.

Dr. Negrão de Lima, appointed mediator in the Paraguayan conflict by the Brazilian Government, after fruitless visits to Asunción in June, spoke more hopefully after his visit on the 17th July and thought there was a possibility of settling the civil war, though he declined to go into details.

THE UNITED NATIONS

Security Council

The Balkans Commission

Six meetings of the Security Council were devoted to the American resolution between the 22nd and the 25th July. A French amendment designed to emphasise the conciliatory nature of the U.S. resolution was adopted without a vote. A clarifying U.K. amendment was also adopted. It was felt by many that the Commission's recommendation that support of armed bands should be considered a threat to the peace prejudiced the Security Council's freedom to decide. The wording of the resolution was therefore made less definite. A new passage was inserted in the resolution, with U.S. consent, urging the four Balkan States concerned to establish normal diplomatic relations as a first step towards good neighbourliness. It was decided "for the purpose of restoring normal conditions along the frontiers between Greece on the one hand and Albania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia on the other, and thereby assisting these countries in carrying out the recommendations of this resolution to establish a commission as a subsidiary organ." No decision was reached on the composition of the proposed organ. France suggested the six non-permanent members of the Council.

Colombia suggested four non-permanent members plus U.S., U.S.S.R. and one other permanent member. The U.S. proposal that all eleven of the Council should be represented found small favour. The majority held that a single Commissioner would have been the ideal solution, had it been practical politics. In H.M. Government's view, the French proposal was far better than the American, but that a small committee of disinterested States, chosen by the Security Council, was better still.

On the 24th and the 25th July the Soviet, Bulgarian and Yugoslav delegates put up two arguments, (1) that recommendations under Chapter vi required the consent of the parties concerned: (2) that a decision under article 34 to conduct an investigation would not be binding if it infringed article 2, paragraph 7 (domestic jurisdiction). The first argument is devised by wilfully isolating article 37 (2) and is flatly contradicted by article 38. The second, if admitted, will make nonsense of the whole security system of the United Nations, and comes with ill-grace from a country which took the line that Russia did over the question of the Indians in S. Africa.

Such was the state of affairs on the 29th July when the Security Council voted on the U.S. resolution, thus laboriously built up by long debate in the Council, from the recommendations of the Commission which the Council itself had set up. The resolution was voted clause by clause, and each clause was adopted, Russia abstaining the while. Then, when the resolution was taken as a whole, M. Gromyko imposed his country's veto. Poland voted with Russia, the remaining nine members of the Council voted for the resolution. Russia's own resolution, based on no facts that the Investigation Commission discovered, has still to come before the Security Council.

This is Russia's tenth imposition of the veto. It was no surprise. It was but a continuation of her conduct and that of her clients during the whole investigation. Its seriousness for the future United Nations lies in this. As in the Corfu debate, it is a veto used in face not only of an overwhelming majority of members, but in contradiction of the plain facts as established by investigation. It means that, according to the existing rules, the Security Council cannot work for peace if one permanent member, in this case Russia, determines to oppose. It is an obvious deduction that, peace being the object of the majority of the members of the Security Council, some other way will have to be found, and the world comes gradually to realise, in politics as it has done in economics, that the unwilling must not be allowed to forbid the co-operation of the willing.

Mr. Herschel Johnson described the Soviet action as a flagrant abuse of the veto and said that the U.S. had not said their last word; and the British Government are equally determined that no veto shall hinder the attainment of peace.

Membership

According to the Charter "Membership in the United Nations is open to all other peace-loving states which accept the obligations contained in the present Charter and, in the judgment of the Organisation, are able and willing to carry out these obligations. The admission of any such state to membership in the United Nations will be effected by a decision of the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council" (Article 4, paragraphs 1 and 2); and "the Organisation is based on the sovereign equality of all its members" (Article 2, paragraph 1). Last year, however, of the 8 applicants 5 were not recommended by the Security Council. Albania and Outer Mongolia failed to secure the requisite number of votes, and Eire, Transjordan and Portugal were vetoed by the U.S.S.R. on the ground that they had no diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union. The use of the veto for reasons quite unconnected with the relevant articles of the Charter led to a demand in the General Assembly for an enquiry into the procedure governing the admission of new members. In accordance with a resolution passed by the Assembly conferences took place in June and July between Committees of the Assembly and of the Security Council. The Australian delegation submitted the comprehensive draft as a working paper. As a result of the conferences the Assembly Committee drafted proposals, which the Committee of Experts of the Security Council are now examining. The Assembly Committee agreed unanimously that the Assembly was not entitled, under Article 4 (2), to decide to admit a new member except upon the recommendation of the Security Council. A bare majority of the Committee, viz., India, Norway and the Soviet Union, with Australia and Cuba opposing, maintained that the Committee itself could not suggest rules which would in any way diminish the powers of the Security Council over the admission of new members. Australia had contended in the November proceedings that initial and final responsibility for the

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Admission of New Members rested with the Assembly, and she did so again when the Committees met this year. For the most part the changes foreshadowed in the draft rules are unimportant, but one proposal is that when the Security Council either fails to recommend an applicant, or postpones the case, it shall send a report to the Assembly, and that the Assembly may, after discussing the report, send back the application to the Council for further consideration, recommendation or report. It would also send a full record of the Assembly's own discussion. The Soviet representative could not accept the proposal. It is worth noting that these new rules of procedure provide for a reference back to the Security Council from the Assembly on the lines of the original Australian draft. After they have passed through the Committee of Experts they will go to the Security Council; but there is little hope of their being accepted in time to govern the admission of new members this year.

The Membership Committee of the Security Council met on the 14th, 21st and 22nd July to consider the rejects of last year and the new applicants. In the Soviet view, applications should be dealt with in the order in which they were received. This would mean that Albania and Outer Mongolia would come first, and the Committee would make its recommendations on these two Russian clients before coming to Eire, Portugal and Transjordan. The United Kingdom representative urged that all applications should be considered before any recommendations were made, and the Chairman gave a ruling in this sense. At the second and third meetings, Albania's application was discussed. The Soviet representative spoke in favour. Brazil, turned by Albania's behaviour over the Corfu incident, from a supporter to an opponent, Australia, Belgium, United States, France, China and United Kingdom all doubted Albania's qualifications. There was a general feeling that much would depend on whether or not Albania accepted the Security Council's recommendation of the 9th April that the Corfu dispute be submitted to the International Court of Justice. At the third meeting the Soviet representative supported Albania, making in the process more than the usual number of insinuations and accusations against other countries; and the U.K., U.S., and Australian representatives all deprecated the tone of his utterance.

Hungary, Italy, Austria, Roumania, the Yemen and Bulgaria have all applied for membership of the United Nations. Austria's application was probably prompted by the promise of U.S. support, but under her present régime of occupation and with no hope that a treaty will be concluded in the near future, she is, strictly speaking, not eligible. Roumania is busy contravening the "human rights" clauses of the treaty of peace even before it is ratified. Outer Mongolia is still as little qualified according to Articles 2 and 4 of the Charter as she was last year. The U.S. have been advocating a kind of "blanket" acceptance of all applicants. On the other hand, the U.K. representative holds firmly to the view that the obviously unqualified must not be admitted. Last November Russia's approach to the question was political, at times cynically so. This year, the first states to be voted on will be Albania and Outer Mongolia, and there is no means of knowing how Russia will react and whether, indeed, the Security Council will succeed in admitting any members.

Economic and Social Council

The fifth session of the Economic and Social Council opened on the 19th July. The agenda is a long one and includes reports from the Economic and Employment Commission, the Economic Commission for Europe and the Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East. The Secretary-General will report on relief needs after U.N.R.R.A. Progress reports will also be taken on the International Children's Fund and the proposal that "one day's pay" should be subscribed by all member nations to that fund. Although the Preparatory Committee for the International Conference on Trade and Employment has not yet finished its work at Geneva, a report of its progress will be presented. Discussion will centre on such questions as the date and place of the World Trade Conference, whether States not members of the United Nations are to be invited to it, how ex-enemies are to be represented and whether countries not fully independent are to be invited through their "metropolitan" states to participate separately. A proposal by the International Co-operative Alliance for international control of oil resources, beginning with the Middle East, is almost the last item, though efforts have been made by the proposers to push the subject.

It is too early to report on the session as a whole. Among decisions of interest may be mentioned the Council's agreement to the admission of Hungary to membership of U.N.E.S.C.O., the dropping of a proposal for world calendar reform, and the postponement (whether to the Greek Kalends or to some other date in the unreformed calendar remains to be seen) of a proposal for the universal adoption of metric weights, measures and money. On this last, the general feeling, expressed by the British delegate was that nations had more than enough on their hands already, and the timing of the proposal was therefore inappropriate.

The report of the Fiscal Committee has been approved, those on Human Rights and on the Status of Women have been referred to the Social "Committee of the Whole."

Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East

The Committee of the Whole, which was in effect the second part of the first session of E.C.A.F.E., has now finished its meetings at Lake Success. The efforts of the leading Asiatic members to get other Asiatic countries such as Burma, Ceylon, Malaya and Dutch and French territories in South-East Asia admitted as full members were defeated, largely by the opposition of Soviet and other delegations to the admission to membership of a United Nations Commission of countries not themselves members of the United Nations. The United Kingdom proposal for associate (non-voting) membership for such territories (or groups of them) was approved; but some discussion took place before the point was conceded, in view of assurances given, that applications for associate membership for territories not yet responsible for their international relations should always be put forward by the "metropolitan" Power. India, however, intends to press for greater representation of Asiatic countries when the report of E.C.A.F.E. comes up to the Economic and Social Council.

On the question of geographical scope, it was decided that Japan and Korea should be included and that the Commission should consult the Allied Control Authorities responsible for those territories on all matters affecting them. The next session of E.C.A.F.E. is to be held in the Philippines, probably in November.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267586

THIS DOCUMENT IS THE PROPERTY OF HIS BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT

SECRET

This document is SECRET: as such it is intended for the personal information of authorised recipients only and must on no account be communicated in whole or in part to anyone else

17339
L 4872/6/405

Weekly Political Intelligence Summary
No. 403

FOREIGN OFFICE,
(RESEARCH DEPARTMENT),
6TH AUGUST, 1947

Copy No. 143

CONTENTS

The passages side-lined in black are GUARD

Page
10
13
17
19
21
23
25

Since August, 1946, this Summary has become a more confidential document than it had previously been, and full weight must be given to the label SECRET. The side-lined passages especially must not be divulged to anyone other than the authorized recipients.

EUROPE

GERMANY

After further consultations between the 30th July and the 1st August, the United Kingdom and United States Governments have agreed to inform the French Government that they will be glad to receive and give careful consideration to any representations which the latter may wish to make about the plans for the level of industry and coal management. The French Government had already announced that they were preparing a statement of their case. H.M. Government fully agree with the State Department view, reported in last week's Summary, that the French must not think that they can veto subjects of discussion in any possible three-Power talks. They feel that the French may have to be told plainly that, although any security arguments which they may put forward will be carefully studied, the level of industry plan cannot be substantially modified or indefinitely delayed. Nevertheless, H.M. Government would have been ready to suggest now that there should be informal Three-Power conversations—although not at ministerial level. The State Department were still unwilling to commit themselves definitely to such talks and would like to avoid them altogether since they fear that the French may try to bring up other topics and even try to have a say in the running of the bi-zonal area. (It is not clear how this affects the U.S. attitude to the possibility of tri-zonal economic fusion.) In fact, it seems the French already expect discussions, and it is improbable that the State Department can escape them entirely. The two Governments will await the French statement before deciding together on their next step.

According to the French Ambassador, who visited the Foreign Office on the 28th July, the French Government have pretty well made up their mind to fuse their zone with the other two Western zones. They do not intend to take a final decision until after the November conference unless Russia shows beforehand that she is not going to attend. M. Massigli indicated that this would not prevent

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267586

THIS DOCUMENT IS THE PROPERTY OF HIS BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT

SECRET

17339

L 4872/6/405

This document is SECRET: as such it is intended for the personal information of authorised recipients only and must on no account be communicated in whole or in part to anyone else

Weekly Political Intelligence Summary
No. 403

FOREIGN OFFICE,
(RESEARCH DEPARTMENT),
6TH AUGUST, 1947

Copy No. 143

CONTENTS

The passages side-lined in black are GUARD

	Page
Europe—
Germany	1
Austria	3
Poland	5
Soviet Union	5
Scandinavia	7
Low Countries	8
France	8
Spain	9
Italy	10
Europe (contd.)—
South-Eastern Europe	10
Middle East	13
Far East	17
United States	19
Latin America	21
United Nations	23
European Economic Co-operation	25

EUROPE

GERMANY

After further consultations between the 30th July and the 1st August, the United Kingdom and United States Governments have agreed to inform the French Government that they will be glad to receive and give careful consideration to any representations which the latter may wish to make about the plans for the level of industry and coal management. The French Government had already announced that they were preparing a statement of their case. H.M. Government fully agree with the State Department view, reported in last week's Summary, that the French must not think that they can veto subjects of discussion in any possible three-Power talks. They feel that the French may have to be told plainly that, although any security arguments which they may put forward will be carefully studied, the level of industry plan cannot be substantially modified or indefinitely delayed. Nevertheless, H.M. Government would have been ready to suggest now that there should be informal Three-Power conversations—although not at ministerial level. The State Department were still unwilling to commit themselves definitely to such talks and would like to avoid them altogether since they fear that the French may try to bring up other topics and even try to have a say in the running of the bi-zonal area. (It is not clear how this affects the U.S. attitude to the possibility of tri-zonal economic fusion.) In fact, it seems the French already expect discussions, and it is improbable that the State Department can escape them entirely. The two Governments will await the French statement before deciding together on their next step.

According to the French Ambassador, who visited the Foreign Office on the 28th July, the French Government have pretty well made up their mind to fuse their zone with the other two Western zones. They do not intend to take a final decision until after the November conference unless Russia shows beforehand that she is not going to attend. M. Massigli indicated that this would not prevent

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

discussions on ways and means taking place beforehand. It is, therefore, possible that the French Government will try to use this as a bargaining point in the hopes of securing a limitation of the level of industry plan.

The practical difficulties in the way of fusion between the French zone and the bi-zonal area are of no mean order, and prolonged discussion would clearly be required before any joint economic organisation saw the light of day. In the French zone the Germans have very little say in economic matters—and certainly not on a zonal level. The three German State Governments are entirely unaccustomed to the responsibilities undertaken by the Bi-Zonal Economic Council, and it would cost the French a struggle to permit even that degree of centralisation. M. Laffon told Lord Pakenham during his visit to the zone on the 17th July that nearly 80 per cent. of the coal was allocated directly by the French authorities, not merely to the different industries, but to the individual firms. Again, in contrast to the bi-zonal area, quotas are fixed for export in many types of goods, and these quotas have to be fulfilled, before goods can be released for the home market. The rate of exports, which according to the latest available statistics is still sufficient to pay for imports, is considerably higher than in the bi-zonal area. It is unlikely, however, that this drain on the area's resources can continue very much longer, since the rate of production is estimated by French officials to be no higher than that of the British zone. The French have indeed admitted in previous reports that the economy of the zone—not only of the Saar—is run in the way best calculated to help France. As regards food the French zone cannot at present be counted as an asset to the bi-zonal area. The three States are mainly agricultural but have, like the bi-zonal area, a low production record; they have also to send supplies to the Saar and make certain deliveries to the French occupation forces. German anxiety about the situation is growing and fostering resentment against the Occupation Power; the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Freiburg, for example, recently issued a pastoral letter sharply criticising the French authorities. In the past, the zone has had the lowest official rations in Germany. French officials admitted to Lord Pakenham that some towns had been as badly hit as the Ruhr, but otherwise they spoke with surprising lack of pessimism. M. Laffon calculated the present ration at 1,200 calories daily—but it is doubtful whether this is always met. He claimed that there was little black market owing to strict supervision, although potatoes had undoubtedly found their way there. He made the dubious assertion that it was in the Germans' interest to sabotage food deliveries and eat off the black market because they knew that the Occupying Power had to make up the deficiencies by increased imports. Even a prominent German official told Lord Pakenham that he did not consider the standard of living in the French zone lower than in the British zone, and he believed that "at times" it was better than in either the British or U.S. zones. This latter remark is probably wishful thinking. The French are, however, eager to secure increased imports and to raise the nation to 1,800 calories—the target set for the bi-zonal area.

Further news has been received of Russian plans to raise the level of industry for Germany as a whole. Details are not complete, but according to the comment of economic observers, they show pretty plainly that the Russians have thrown overboard many of the limits imposed on security grounds in March 1946. Engineering would be increased by 62 per cent. over the figure fixed at that time, chemicals by 50 per cent., rubber by 80 per cent., fine mechanics and opticals by 27 per cent. The Russians plan for a surprisingly large and probably unrealisable excess of exports over imports in 1949—imports being even lower than agreed by the Four Powers and apparently making no allowance for food. Textile exports are intended to be larger than those of pre-war. Iron, steel and engineering exports are to be stepped up by 260 per cent.; it is highly improbable that this can be attained (particularly as coal consumption is, it seems, to be kept below that originally planned), and in any case it would hardly be accepted by the other Occupying Powers. At present every effort is being made to step up coal production in the Soviet zone. The first task of the new Economic Commission in July was to draft a plan introducing a seven-day week in the mines, systematic control of distribution, severe measures against hoarding and the guarantee of full special rations to the miners. In Brandenburg new incentives for farmers were announced on the 19th July, which give them the choice of selling surplus food at the best price they can get or at 1944 prices with a permit to buy industrial goods. Some of the surplus food will go to industrial firms with good production records. One of the most significant aspects of the scheme is that all transactions take place through the Co-operative Societies and private retail traders are forced more and more out of the picture.

Steps to abolish an independent judiciary in the Soviet zone have lately become increasingly evident. A reliable German news agency reported on the 16th July a speech by the Brandenburg Minister of the Interior at which he said that he accepted no judge who was not a trade union member. As the Communist-dominated Freie Deutsche Gewerkschaftsbund is the only permitted union, this is an open admission that the individual has no freedom of choice. When installing Public Prosecutors earlier in the year, the Minister had declared that there were to be no more unpolitical judges. According to the CDU organ Neue Zeit of the 14th June a district chairman of the SED was chosen to act as "People's Prosecutor" together with the Public Prosecutor, in the case of 14 Saxon food officials accused of misappropriating foodstuffs. It is stated that his duty was to "express the will and opinion of the people." It will be recalled that judges and Public Prosecutors throughout the zone are elected by the Diets and not appointed, so that their political qualifications have particular importance. The Public Prosecutor of Dresden, speaking over Leipzig radio on the 28th May, repudiated the idea of the rule of law accepted by the Weimar Republic and said that when the bourgeois class struggled to liberate itself from feudal domination, the demand for the Rule of Law was progressive, but the victory of the capitalist over the feudal order changed this progressive ideal into an obstacle to social progress. Formal equality before the law and the independence of judges were used to preserve the status quo. The ideas of "formal equality and abstract conformity with law are outdated . . . . Democratic law is the law that conforms to the German people's conception of justice, that is controlled by the people and serves its interests." This might have been said by a Nazi leader—thus Thierack taking office as Minister of Justice in August 1942 declared: "The administration of justice does not mean the application of trained reason but the regulation of the nation's course of life . . . . Only those judges deserve the highest praise whose judgment represents the people's feelings of right and wrong." It is well known how such methods of "popular justice" led to increasing arbitrariness and eventually to a completely totalitarian system.

After several weeks' silence on the flight of workers from the Soviet zone, the Central Administration for Labour and Social Service issued a statement on the 21st July. This does not deny that there is a mass exodus but says that it is a result of measures taken to discover "fake workers" who were really engaged in black market activities, and to direct them into industry. There are now regular press accounts of conscription in Saxony for work in the uranium mines in the Erzgebirge.

A quantity of "undeclared war material" has been discovered in two plants of the Askonia works in the U.S. Sector of Berlin. According to an official statement by the U.S. authorities, there is evidence, which is being carefully sifted, that "the war material was being manufactured for a foreign Power without sanction." Parts for aircraft, submarines and tanks, as well as kine-theodolites were found. The works have been closed, and some members of the staff, including Count Rudolf Westarp, are reported to be under arrest. Apparently the works council claim that the plant was making kine-theodolites for peaceful purposes, under a plan approved by U.S. Mil. Gov., and that some had been sent to a branch works at Teltow just inside the Russian zone. This was reported by The Times on 4th August, which also reported statements by members of the staff that the material found had not been made since the war and was, in fact, awaiting removal by the occupation authorities—they do not explain how it comes to be "undeclared." Until further information is received, it is not possible to confirm that a flagrant violation of Control Council regulations has occurred or that the Soviet authorities are definitely involved. While it seems surprising that the latter should risk using factories in an area outside their direct control, the possibility cannot be absolutely ruled out. There have of course been reliable reports in the past that the Russians were manufacturing a certain amount of war material in Germany.

AUSTRIA

The regulation of wages and prices promised by Chancellor Figl at the end of May has been brought a big step nearer by the adoption by the Austrian Parliament

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

of certain proposals submitted by the special commission set up to advise on measures of price and wage adjustment. The commission consisted of representatives of the Trades Union Federation and the Chambers of Labour, Agriculture and Commerce. According to reports in the British press, wages are to be raised by about 50 per cent., unemployment relief by 25 per cent., and old-age and disability pensions by two-thirds. The prices of agricultural products are to be raised, and there is also to be a steep rise in tram and railway fares as well as in postage and telephone rates.

Since the regulation of agricultural prices in the summer of 1946 there has been a considerable rise in the prices of industrial products; this naturally adversely affected the cost of agricultural production and was a source of much discontent to the peasants. An increase in prices for livestock, food, milk and dairy produce was permitted by the Government in June, though this measure produced renewed Socialist taunts that the People's Party were pandering to the farmers. The President of the Chamber of Labour, Herr Mantler, has claimed that the main success of the Trades Union Federation and the Chamber of Labour has been that, through an energetic protest against one-sided increases in the prices for agricultural products, they have brought to the notice of the public and the Government the disproportion between wages and prices, with the result that a simultaneous settlement of wages and prices has had to be recognised as indispensable. Wages in Vienna in May 1947 had only risen 12 points since the beginning of the year, but considerable increases had in fact been made in the shape of supplementary allowances. Trade employees were receiving up to 70 per cent. of their wages in allowances and public servants were recently granted a supplementary increase of 100 Schillings a month.

The new prices and rates are not expected to come into effect for some days since the consent of the Allied authorities has not yet been obtained. Irritation against such an Allied rule was expressed by the Minister of the Interior at a Socialist rally on the 3rd August, when he queried how Austrian financial affairs could be put right if Austrians could not even regulate railway fares or the Vienna tram fares without Allied consent. All political parties except the Communists appear to recognise the need for the new adjustments; in the Communist view a new race between wages and prices has been initiated. The People's Party Wiener Tageszeitung has emphasised that the decisive test for the new prices and wages level will be its effect on production. The Socialist Arbeiter-Zeitung has pointed out that consumers can now demand that the farmers fulfil their duty of feeding the population.

The new agreement is considered to be a first step towards a reform of the currency, rumours of which have been rife for many months. Here again bitter opposition comes from the Communists, who claim that the measure would be taken at the expense of the working class. In general Socialists and members of the People's Party are agreed that a reform of the currency is inevitable, but it is reported that there are differences of opinion as to the timing of such a measure. This is believed to be especially the case in the People's Party, where opinion varies from support for very drastic measures to be taken at the earliest opportunity, to those who maintain that a lasting stabilisation of the currency cannot be ensured until the Austrian economy has been put on a sound financial basis by means of a loan.

Having concluded for the time being its discussions on the oil problem, the Austrian Treaty Commission has been dealing with the case of the Danube Steam Shipping Company (D.D.S.G.). An interesting development in these discussions has been Soviet insistence that the whole case should be referred to the Committee of Experts—with only a very preliminary discussion by the Commission. This is in contrast to the attitude of the Soviet Delegation during the past six weeks when other Delegates have sought in vain to get the Committee to work on problems connected with the oil discussions. M. Novikov has, however, flatly stated that he considers the D.D.S.G. to be a "purely German asset"—including the Austrian Government shareholding of 26 per cent. which passed automatically to the German Government. The nature of a "German asset" in the case of the D.D.S.G. and of limited companies generally is also, it appears, still a matter of dispute. In the U.K. view (supported in principle by the French and U.S. Delegations) a German asset must be essentially a shareholding and not the actual property belonging to a company; M. Novikov has only conceded that "property, rights and interests" passing as German assets might in certain cases consist of shares. Herr Bauer, the Managing Director of the D.D.S.G., insisted recently that there was documentary evidence to prove that Germany had seized the D.D.S.G. by force, notwithstanding later attempts to represent the act as a business transaction.

POLAND

The decision of the United States Government not to extend post-UNRRA help to the Poles is generally believed in Poland to be the consequence of its Government's refusal to take part in the Paris Conference for European Reconstruction. Although not actually asserting this, Polish official spokesmen have labelled the United States action unfair treatment of an ally which suffered grievously as the result of the war. The action, it is alleged, was based upon a "biased" report made by Colonel Harrison after his visit to Poland in July as representative of the Department of Agriculture.

According to the text published by the State Department, Colonel Harrison's mission reported that, so far as grain and other foods are concerned, Poland can meet its minimum needs generally for the balance of the calendar year. The mission recognised Poland's need for the import of special supplementary food-stuffs and medical supplies for the relief of certain categories of the population such as children, orphans, sick and aged. In this respect the State Department considers that the Polish authorities concerned with these special cases can obtain all their requirements by dealing directly with private relief agencies in the United States. Colonel Harrison's report stated also that some imports of grain seeds (especially rye) and fertilisers would be helpful in promoting further recovery; presumably the State Department considers that these commodities can likewise be obtained by ordinary trading without the formulation of any American relief programme.

On the 5th August, the Warsaw press announced the signing of the new trade agreement between Poland and the U.S.S.R. Preliminary news reports had suggested that the agreement would bear close resemblances to the pact already concluded between Czechoslovakia and the U.S.S.R.—both agreements forming part of what is being referred to by the Americans as the "Molotov Plan." The earlier reports had spoken of a further reduction in Russia's quota of Polish coal and Russian assistance in the development of new deep oil bearings in the Pomorze province. The details announced on the 5th August, however, are stated to have caused a surprise by including no mention of Russian grain supplies, and, so far as can be gathered, no confirmation was forthcoming of the reported assistance in the new oil-boring project.

SOVIET UNION

Long drawn-out attacks on dollar diplomacy continue to be a steady feature of the Soviet press. Meanwhile, lively economic exchanges are taking place in the Soviet sphere. A new trade agreement with Yugoslavia has followed hard on the heels of those recently concluded with Czechoslovakia and Albania, and another with Poland was signed on the 5th August (see under "Poland). More and more countries within and without the Soviet orbit are concluding deals with the Soviet zone of Germany, the latest to negotiate being Bulgaria and Finland. These agreements are mainly for one year only, on the usual Soviet model. A Moscow broadcast refuting a B.B.C. talk by Patrick Smith, its Vienna correspondent, on the subject of the Soviet-Czechoslovak Agreement was at pains to point out how advantageous were the terms compared with the shackles riveted by the U.S.A. on its trading partners. Much publicity has been given the new Bulgaro-Yugoslav pact, the keystone of Soviet Balkan policy.

Great Britain's economic crisis has provided the occasion for a display of Schadenfreude, but comment has been comparatively moderate in tone. The country's difficulties were ascribed mainly to the excessive size of her armed forces, to the influence exercised by selfish monopoly magnates and, above all, to Mr. Bevin's foreign policy.

The visit of the cruiser and two destroyers of the Mediterranean fleet to Sevastopol passed off in an atmosphere of great cordiality, unclouded by the ominous history of the place in Anglo-Russian relations. The attitude of the Commander-in-Chief of the Black Sea Fleet, Admiral Oktyabrsky, and his senior officers in no way reflected current political disagreements. Moscow, however, is clearly playing the visit down and no publicity has so far been given to it beyond the bare announcement of the arrival and departure of Admiral Sir Algernon Willis, Commander-in-Chief Mediterranean, and his ships. The British correspondents who, backed by the Embassy, had made efforts to get to Sevastopol to cover the visit, were refused the necessary permission.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

An unpleasant note has been struck by the relatively unimportant daily paper Moskovsky Bolshevik in an article castigating members of the British Trade Delegation for "uncultured behaviour" and charging them with being the modern counterparts of Smollett's brawling Commander Trunnion. They were accused of throwing a rowdy party in their hotel and breaking glass, etc., but the chief offence imputed to them was that a party who had gone off to a lake near Moscow deliberately stuffed bread into the mouths of unwilling Soviet children in order to photograph them eating it. This was held to be peculiarly outrageous in people who had come to Moscow expressly to ask for bread for themselves. They were also indirectly accused of spying because one of the party had a rough sketch map of the way to the lake in his possession. The appearance of this article, which is prominently displayed and has been broadcast, is probably connected with the similar publicity given to an incident last June at the Metropole hotel in Moscow in which some Chancery servants were concerned. The intention probably is, by discrediting British officials, to reinforce the conviction of the Soviet citizen that his manners and morals are immeasurably superior to those of the decadent bourgeois. A recent article in Molodoi Bolshevik has hammered home this point, suggesting that bourgeois manners are merely a superficial polish hiding a "brutal and savage morality." The young Soviet person should have simple, natural, modest manners and know how to behave in public places.

Indonesia has had the lion's share of space in the Soviet press during the week, but nothing new has emerged from the comment, the fighting being described in the usual terms as an attempt by Dutch, British and American imperialists to re-establish colonial conditions. In Burma it was implied that the British had been concerned in the murder of Aung San; they were said to be making the fullest use of the new situation in order to strengthen the colonial order in Burma. General Wedemeyer's presence in China was said to be connected with a new aid plan which would put China under the same sort of control as Greece and prominence was given to General Shtykov's statement condemning the American attitude in regard to the organisations to be consulted on the forming of a provisional Korean Government. Tass has issued a denial of an American press report that Russia has sent 60,000 Korean soldiers to Manchuria accompanied by Soviet liaison officers and using Lend-Lease trucks.

Tass has described as a "malicious fabrication" a Swedish report to the effect that the U.S.S.R. Minister to Sweden, M. I. S. Chernyshev, had left his post "not of his own free will" and had been arrested in Moscow. According to Tass M. Chernyshev is spending his leave at a Black Sea health resort. Swedish sources had reported that M. Chernyshev was suspected of showing excessive friendliness to western diplomats, particularly towards those of a certain South American Republic.

There certainly seem to have been some unpleasant goings on of late in the Soviet Legation in Stockholm, as the Swedish Foreign Ministry has asked for the recall of the deputy military attaché, Major V. Konnov, and another minor diplomat on the ground of "legalised espionage." The Soviet Chargé d'Affaires in Stockholm, M. Basarov, has sent a note to the Swedish Ministry of Foreign Affairs denying strongly that the two officials had acted contrary to diplomatic practice. He added, however, that the two men concerned were shortly leaving Stockholm in the course of routine diplomatic charges. Tass has published a report of the activities of an alleged secret organisation of Estonian emigrés engaged in espionage against the U.S.S.R. in the form of a quotation from the Swedish paper Expressen (see under "Scandinavia").

Meanwhile the former Soviet Minister to Sweden, the venerable Mme. Kollontay, has emerged from her retirement to take up the pen and send to Izvestiya a spirited refutation of a story put out in the American magazine Liberty that she had been in charge in the Spring of 1943 of negotiations in Stockholm for securing a separate peace between Moscow and Berlin. Recalling that she herself had been seriously ill in the spring of that year and asserting that A. M. Alexandrov, named as her collaborator in the negotiations, had been counsellor of the U.S.S.R. Legation in Australia at the time, Mme. Kollontay went on to insist that 1943 was a ridiculous date for the detractors of the U.S.S.R. to have chosen. That year was precisely the turning-point of the war after Stalingrad and saw the beginning of the great Soviet counter-offensive.

The drive for repatriation of Armenians to the Armenian S.S.R. continues; it was announced earlier in the year that 63,000 were to arrive in the Soviet Union in 1947 (over 50,000 went in in 1946) though at the present rate it seems improbable that this figure will be reached. The latest contingent of 2,322 from the Lebanon consisted mainly of Lebanese nationals. Two officials of the Council of Ministers of the Armenian S.S.R. and an Armenian attaché of the Soviet Legation in Beirut have applied (unsuccessfully) for visas for Cyprus to collect would-be repatriates from there.

A report has been received to the effect that the two scientists, Roskin and Kluyeva, whose researches on cancer have become well known abroad, are now on trial before a "court of honour" of fellow scientists for giving away secrets connected with their work to a foreign Power. The Power in question is presumably the U.S.A., which took considerable interest in the work and at one time offered to finance it (see Summary No. 388, p. 8). It is said to have come out in the course of the enquiry that the former deputy Minister of Health, M. A. Y. Kuznetsov, who was dismissed from his post last May, had negotiated with the Americans for the sale of the new formula and tried to inveigle Roskin and Kluyeva into signing some kind of contract.

Minor changes are continuing to take place in the personnel of the Ministry of Health; N. N. Priorov has ceased to be a deputy Minister and has become Chairman of the scientific Medical Council of the Ministry.

Such occasions as the All-Union Physical Culture Parade held in Moscow on the 22nd July afford an opportunity for taking stock of the Soviet hierarchy. M. Molotov's position as the second citizen of the U.S.S.R. was emphasised by the fact that he was the only one apart from Stalin to receive a bouquet. The only newcomer to Stalin's box was M. A. Suslov, who seems to be a rising man. He is a member of the Orgburo, and was one of the delegates of the Supreme Soviet who visited England. The principal absentees were Shvernik, who has been away for some time, his duties being fulfilled by his deputy Grechuka, and Kaganovich and Khrushchev. The two last were probably attending a similar parade in the Ukraine, but it may be of some significance that Khrushchev was also absent from the recent meeting of the Ukrainian Supreme Soviet.

A new Faculty, described as Physico-Technical, is to be opened this autumn in Moscow University. It is to train scientific workers in the fields of aerodynamics, thermodynamics, the structure of matter, physical chemistry, radio physics and optics.

SCANDINAVIA

Sweden

Since the discovery of a number of passport forgeries last month (see Summary No. 398) the Swedish authorities have largely been occupied with the activities of foreign agents—real or supposed. About ten persons were detained, though most were later released, in connexion with an alleged "Baltic" underground movement, and it was even suggested that an Estonian "Government" in exile existed on Swedish territory. The activities of this group were said to be financed from the United States ostensibly by wealthy immigrants, but the rumours—the reports must of necessity at this stage be considered as such—have been described by M. Rei, a prominent Estonian politician and former President, residing in Stockholm, as being completely without foundation. What cannot be denied, however, is that an increasing number of Baltic fugitives are finding their way into Sweden through illegal channels, the majority stowing away on colliers or by other means crossing the Baltic from the Soviet zone. Interviewed by Swedish newspapermen some of the refugees gave as their reason for escaping the fact that a drive of Baltic nationals had recently been instigated in the Russian zone to deport them to the Soviet Union.

The greatest attention has, however, been attracted by a police report to the Government concerning a recent tour of the Soviet Military Attaché to certain areas in the north of Sweden normally prohibited to foreigners. Despite the fact that the Soviet Legation must have been well aware of the regulations governing entry into these districts members of the mission staff carried out an extensive reconnaissance, including the taking of photographs, and made enquiries as to billeting facilities and other matters of military interest. The incident has caused the greatest indignation in the country, and Dagens Nyheter has strongly condemned it as a flagrant breach of diplomatic privilege. Declaring that it would be of little avail if the present Soviet Military Attaché were withdrawn only to be replaced by another officer, the paper went on to advocate the curtailment of diplomatic immunity within the defence zones and the granting of greater powers to the Swedish authorities. Readers were also reminded of the fact that a previous Soviet attaché had been withdrawn last year in suspiciously similar circumstances.

The areas in question lie in the Torne älv valley on the Finnish border. Although

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

the Swedes may well be considered unduly sensitive on any question concerning their eastern defences, there can be little doubt that the Russians have behaved in an extremely clumsy manner and made themselves guilty of a gross breach of established standards of behaviour.

(See also under "Soviet Union.")

THE LOW COUNTRIES

The Netherlands

Commenting (31st July) on the Australian Government's proposal to refer the Indonesian question to the Security Council under Chapter 7 of the U.N. Charter, a Dutch Foreign Office spokesman said that it was "very much to be regretted" that such a step had been taken by a member of the British Commonwealth—particularly in view of Mr. Bevin's recent statement in the House of Commons. It was clear, he said, that the Australian action would not "promote the success" of other steps which H.M. Government might take in the matter of mediation.

"Until the complete Australian proposal be known," the spokesman continued, "no comment can naturally be given. Surprise may, however, be fairly expressed that the Australian Government has found it necessary to put forward the Indonesian question under Chapter 7 of the Charter. For this Chapter mentions acts of aggression, breaches of the peace, and threats to the peace of the world, and as such deals only with the wrongful action of one State against another State. This does not apply to Indonesia. Apparently, the Australian Government share the idea wrongly held by the Republic—that the Republic is already to be considered as a Sovereign State. It is to be remembered that, even in accordance with what is laid down by the Linggadjati Agreement after the interim period, the Republic would be one of the participating States of the United States of Indonesia which, after the Netherlands–Indonesian Union had been established, would be a Sovereign State like the reconstructed Kingdom of the Netherlands."

On the 1st August, the Security Council announced the Netherlands Government's acceptance of the U.S. offer of mediation. M. van Kleffens, the Dutch delegate, later stated that his Government would agree to a cessation of hostilities, provided that the "juridical status" of the Republic was "not prejudged." (See also under "United Nations" and "Far East.") The order to cease fire was actually issued shortly afterwards, to take effect at midnight on the 4th August—a decision which has received the general approbation of the Dutch public. The Indonesians have issued a similar order with effect from midnight on the 5th.

A few days earlier, Dr. van Vredenburch, the Political Director of the Dutch Foreign Office, confirmed reports that M. Lamping, the newly-appointed Netherlands Ambassador to India, had been instructed to get in touch with Dr. Sjarir—if necessary using a British intermediary—and to inform him that, should he wish to visit the Netherlands, he would be welcome.

FRANCE

The situation at Port-de-Bouc (see Summaries 401 and 402) where the Jews taken from the "President Warfield" are refusing to disembark from the three British transports which arrived at the port on the 29th July, has caused a serious deterioration in Anglo-French relations. The lack of co-operation shown by the local French authorities amounted to sheer obstruction and contradicts the assurances given to H.M. Government by the French Government. It is believed that M. Jules Moch, Minister of Public Works, and M. Depreux, Minister of the Interior, are mainly responsible for the obstruction, but all the Socialist Ministers feel strongly on the subject of Jewish emigration. Mr. Duff Cooper told M. Chauvel at the Quai d'Orsay that in spite of M. Bidault's efforts the French Government had shown a complete absence of goodwill and of any spirit of co-operation.

The attitude of the Paris press was at first universally anti-British and not even the semi-official Monde presented the true facts of the case. L'Humanité produced headlines on "the floating Auschwitz," and other Left-wing papers referred to "bateaux-cages." The Socialist Populaire was more restrained, but M. Blum wrote an article defending the attitude of the French Government in refusing to force the Jews to disembark, and condemning British actions. The National Assembly voted a resolution on the 30th July which congratulated the Government on its action in the affair of the "President Warfield" and asked that "its feelings of emotion should be made urgently known to the British Government. The general line taken by the press was to treat the Jews as the last survivors of a race persecuted by the Nazis and to gloss over the specific problem of Palestine. The attitude of the French press has now, however, considerably improved; Combat, after one violent article, had a leader which tried to examine the British point of view, and the Radical Aurore printed a reasonable statement of our case. It appears to be generally assumed in the press that the Jews will now be shipped elsewhere, only 100 having disembarked voluntarily, but H.M. Government attach great importance to the establishment of the principle that illegal immigrants should be returned to the country from which they set out (the doctrine of refoulement) and are determined not to ship the Jews back to Palestine or Cyprus.

A refreshing contrast to the situation at Port-de-Bouc was provided by the ceremony held at Saint-Nazaire on the 2nd August to commemorate the British commando raid of March 1942. M. Ramadier was present, together with other French Ministers and the British Ambassador, and in his speech he paid tribute to the British war record.

In another part of Brittany the port of Brest already very largely destroyed during the war, was seriousy damaged by the explosion of a Norwegian nitrate ship which caused over a hundred casualties. The Prime Minister and the Foreign Secretary sent messages of sympathy to the French Government.

The discussions between the C.G.T. and the Employers' Federation (see Summary No. 401), are reported to have ended in agreement for a general increase in wages of 11 per cent. The Cabinet is now considering this agreement, which cannot take effect without its approval, but it is unlikely that the Government will be able to hold out against the combined pressure of labour and the employers.

The reforms in Morocco (see Summary No. 400) have now been followed up by similar measures in Tunisia where the Tunisian Cabinet has been reorganised and made more representative of Tunisian parties and opinion. It now has a Tunisian at its head with the title of Prime Minister. The draft statute for Algeria is being examined by the Assembly's Committee of the Interior and more than 300 amendments have been tabled. The Government have decided to put the question of confidence, if necessary, both on the substance of their draft and on the urgency of its passage through the Assembly. It seems, however, doubtful whether the Assembly will be able to get through its work before it goes into recess on the 13th August.

SPAIN

It may be interesting to review the mathematics of the voting in General Franco's Referendum on the basis of figures just received. According to these figures 82 per cent. of the electorate (representing 93 per cent. of those who actually voted) approved the Bill of Succession—which has now been signed by the Generalissimo and was promulgated in the Official Gazette on the 27th July.

A careful calculation indicates that out of the 17,178,812 Spanish citizens eligible to vote more than 3,018,497 failed to vote "yes." Making due allowance for normal abstention on account of illness, etc., this would still represent a substantial minority of persons refusing to be cajoled or coerced into expressing themselves in favour of General Franco's manœuvre to keep himself indefinitely at the head of Spanish affairs. In Bilbao, for instance, it is reliably reported, the percentage of those entitled to vote who actually voted did not exceed 30 per cent. The figures given for other towns, though not necessarily reliable, are also of interest. In San Sebastian the percentage was even lower and did not exceed 26 per cent.; in Navarre only 40 per cent. voted, while in Corunna, the Caudillo's own province, over 27 per cent. voted against him. The largest number of votes against the Bill (abstentions, negatives and blanks) was cast in Barcelona—432,106. In Madrid, with 200,000 fewer electors, the number was 313,092. There is strong evidence that the voting returns for Burgos were signed and sent to Madrid in blank two days before the Referendum.

In such circumstances General Franco's remarks to the President of the Supreme Court, whose duty it was as Head of the Central Electoral Committee to convey to him the formal communication of the results, reach the high-water mark of governmental hypocrisy. General Franco congratulated all who had taken such a fine and scrupulous part in the tasks and labours of the National Referendum. So exemplary and so unsullied was the way in which this was carried out, said the Caudillo, that it not only did honour to the Spaniards who had contributed in a personal manner to the success of this outburst of truth, but it also furnished a lesson of admirable civic behaviour offered by Spain to the whole world.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

ITALY

The patience and pertinacity of Signor De Gasperi and Count Sforza were rewarded by the vote on the 31st July which concluded the long drawn-out debate in the Constituent Assembly on the question of ratification of the Peace Treaty. 262 Deputies voted in favour of the Government's motion, 68 against, and there were 80 abstentions. The decree authorizing the Government to ratify once the Great Powers have done their part consists of a single article as follows :—

> "The Government of the Italian Republic is authorized to ratify the treaty of peace between the Allied and Associated Powers and Italy, signed at Paris on 10th February, 1947, on the understanding that all the Powers mentioned in Article 90 of the said Treaty shall have previously ratified."

It was duly signed by President De Nicola on Saturday, the 2nd August. Apart from their objurgations in the course of the debate the left-wing leaders have been seeking to maintain in the country an atmosphere of alarm and excitement. Signor Togliatti has been prating of the danger of war if the efforts of the nations represented in Paris, in connection with the Marshall proposals, are pursued, and Signor Nenni has continued to clamour for the De Gasperi Government to be turned out.

In view of the latest statement from the Soviet Ministry of Foreign Affairs on the subject [that the Treaties drawn up simultaneously in Paris should also be brought into force simultaneously, after all ex-enemy States have ratified] this favourable vote does not get us much forrader, and the situation with regard to the coming into force of the Italian Treaty remains one of deadlock.

H.M. Ambassador in Rome has been instructed to make further representations about exchange policy as at present operated by the Italian Government—which is regarded in London as being tantamount to a fundamental breach of the Trade and Payments Agreement of the 17th April and of the agreements reached during the trade discussions which took place at the end of May. The burden of the complaint is that, on the one hand, the Italian Exchange Office have failed to preserve the lire-dollar-sterling cross rate, as stipulated under Article 2 of the Agreement, and on the other hand, Italy has maintained a discriminatory exchange rate against imports from the sterling area. Sir Stafford Cripps took the opportunity of Count Carandini's farewell visit to hand him an aide-mémoire on this matter of currency discrimination.

The Rome evening press announced on the 1st August that the Council of Ministers had decided that morning to raise the official dollar rate of exchange from 225 to 350 lire to the dollar. It was stated that the change was necessary (1) as a step towards carrying out the Bretton Woods Agreements, and (2) to bring the official rate closer to the export quota rate—with a view to pushing the export trade. No date has yet been announced for the coming into force of this decision.

Erratum

In Summary No. 402, p. 13, l. 21, there was a misprint. For "Article 10" read "Article 90."

SOUTH EASTERN EUROPE

Hungary

The Ministry of the Interior's announcement that no candidate may be arrested until after the Election, except on a criminal charge, suggests at least an attempt to conduct the electoral campaign equitably. The authorized Parties have also been promised freedom of assembly and police protection, to ensure which the police must be notified of political meetings twenty-four hours in advance. As previously stated, Swabians generally will be disfranchised pending their deportation, but those "indispensable to the national economy" may vote. Though the new disqualification clauses lend themselves to abuse, it is doubtful whether they are sufficiently wide to alter the final result if applied with relative honesty. Only the leaders of the now disbanded Freedom Party, indeed, have dared to protest publicly against the recent Russo-Communist démarche, and despite the secret ballot a genuine expression of opinion is unlikely to emerge from the background of Occupation, Communist domination and listlessness.

The final decision to hold the Election is due rather to Social Democrat than to Communist pressure, as the Social Democrats expect the more substantial gains. According to newspaper reports the Communists are accusing Social Democrat as well as smallholder "reactionaries" of responsibility for an outbreak of incendiarism, and have in turn to face the counter-charge of attempting to eliminate their left-wing allies by craft and subtlety, and of preparing to use violence in the last resort. The four Coalition Parties are nevertheless agreed as to their common programme, which concentrates on the Three Year Plan, nationalisation—particularly of the major banks—and further agrarian reforms. Cardinal Mindszenty has stated that the Church will not support any single Party, but has urged voters to refer the matter to their consciences—advice which the Vatican supports.

M. Rákosi, backed by the Communist Press, has called for the return of prisoners-of-war from the West, especially those of military age, who had, he alleges, been absorbed by their thousands in various foreign legions. The Anglo-American attitude is unfavourably contrasted with that of the Soviet Union.

His Majesty's Government and the Government of the U.S.A. have notified the Soviet Government of the importance which they attach to the question of the transfer to Russia of German and Italian property in Hungary. The British Note stresses the need of finding a definition of the term "assets" which will satisfy the Three Powers concerned, and requests that further action be meanwhile suspended. The Note also maintains that as the Soviet Union will be entitled to collect the debts due to these undertakings it must also pay the debts contracted by them.

M. M. Oltványi and M. Csornoky have been appointed as Ministers to Berne and Cairo respectively. Both are members of the Smallholders' Party.

General Sviridov has informed the Foreign Minister that Hungary may resume diplomatic relations with Albania.

Roumania

The National Peasant Party has been disbanded by an Order in Council with the approval of the Roumanian Parliament.

The latest episode in the campaign against the Peasant Party is the arrest of no fewer than two-thirds of the Peasant Deputies. Many other prominent members of the party are in hiding. It is reported by Dl Hățieganu, who was formerly included in the Groza Government at the instance of the Allied Control Commission, that during the recent Moscow talks with Dl Gheorghiu-Dej, the Roumanian Communists informed the Russian authorities that without the support of Russian troops the Groza Government and its Communist masters could not maintain themselves in power.

Dl. Tătărescu has informed the British Political Representative that he has received information from the Turkish Ambassador that on 25th July an aircraft landed at Istanbul from Craiova with three officers, three civilians and the crew. The pilot had been shot dead.

Seven members of the Greek E.A.M. organisation have been granted visas for Greece. There are said to be branches of the E.A.M. at Brăila, Sulina, Tulcea, and Isaceea, the members being in close touch with the Roumanian Communists. A branch at Galața up to a few weeks ago consisted of thirty members, but on a recent occasion a distribution of maize flour was made to poor Greeks, and 220 persons were forced to register as members as a condition of receiving help; they did so, as they were in fact dying of starvation.

Information has been received that General Rădescu, the former Prime Minister—who after the fall of his Government was given sanctuary in the British Legation, and eventually escaped by plane to Cyprus—will "direct the operations of the resistance movement abroad." There may, of course, be something in this rumour, but there is more than one "resistance movement" abroad.

The Roumanian Government have approached His Majesty's Government on the subject of Roumanian rolling-stock removed by the Germans and now to be found in the British zone of Germany, where it is used for the normal railway traffic between Roumania and Germany. Under Article 28 of the Peace Treaty this property "becomes eligible" for restitution. This clause of the treaty is one which the Roumanians would like to see honoured. His Majesty's Government have replied asking for a census of German and Allied rolling-stock still in Roumania. His Majesty's Government will then furnish a census of rolling-stock in the British and American zones of Germany. The reply concludes with a reminder to the Roumanian Government that the Western Allied countries will probably expect the return of their property from Roumania to be given precedence over the return of German stock.

The purchase of 35,000 tons of maize from the U.S.A. by Roumania has been cancelled, as it is stated that the home production is sufficient for all needs; the gold deposited in Switzerland for payment has been removed.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

The one bright spot in the present history of Roumania is the way in which the Patriarch is keeping his end up in the face of continual interference with Church affairs on the part of the Government. The Metropolitan of Iași was ordered by the Government to resign in order that his place might be filled by a Communist nominee. The Patriarch has refused to accept his resignation.

Greece

The veto imposed by M. Gromyko at Lake Success on 29th July did not surprise, but it deeply perturbed, the Greek people—with the exception of the Communists. While noted as a further proof of Soviet complicity, it could hardly fail to accentuate the feeling that Greece has become the arena for a clash of world forces.

Although after a four months' campaign the Greek army has cleared the rebels out of important areas of western and south-western Macedonia, pushing them back towards the Albanian and Yugoslav frontiers and inflicting casualties on them, yet the rebels have never suffered a major reverse but have maintained their numbers and are now better armed and organised than ever before. So long as the rebels enjoy the advantage of an open frontier, the Greek army is unlikely to obtain any decisive success over them. The prospect will be still darker if Greece's northern neighbours increase their help to the rebels, especially by supporting an international brigade the mere rumour of which shook public morale. In these circumstances it is easy to understand the Greek Government's appeal to the Security Council.

After dark on 30th July rebels attacked half a dozen small towns in Western Thrace, near the Turkish frontier. At Alexandroupolis (Dedeagatch) they failed in their attempt to destroy the chief flour mill of the district and the railway station. The attacks were believed to have the double purpose firstly of creating a diversion in favour of bands hard pressed by the army between Xanthi and the Bulgarian frontier, and secondly of increasing the public apprehension caused by the Soviet veto.

The Patriarch of Alexandria arrived in Athens by air on a visit to the Œcumenical Patriarch. The reason for this sudden visit is surmised to be important but has not yet been divulged.

Bulgaria

An agreement of far-reaching importance was signed at Bled, Marshal Tito's summer residence in Slovenia, on the 2nd August by the Yugoslav and Bulgarian Foreign Ministers. At the moment of writing only press reports are available, but, judging from them, the agreement may virtually abolish the frontier between the two countries, much on the lines of the pact signed at Belgrade on the 27th November last between Yugoslavia and Albania (see Summary, No. 374, under "Yugoslavia."). Just as on that earlier occasion great care was taken not to offend the Albanians' susceptibilities by saying openly that their little country was being virtually absorbed by Yugoslavia, so on this more important occasion M. Dimitrov, who after all was General Secretary of the Comintern long before Tito's name was heard of, has been able to insist that any rate on paper last Saturday's agreement shall look like a treaty between equals.

M. Dimitrov himself is reported as having told a press conference at Belgrade on Sunday that the agreement provided for a mutual assistance pact and for the closest economic, political and cultural co-operation. It involved the elimination of entry and exit visas, two party ownership of all properties along the entire frontier, and an eventual customs union. The clauses for economic co-operation, he said, provided for mutual assistance in industry, electrification, mining, agriculture, transport and foreign trade, for a fixed rate of exchange, and for an extension of rail and other communications between the two countries. The pact included an undertaking to establish close contact between the two Governments on the "frequent frontier provocations by the Greek Government," and other international problems, particularly the Danube régime (cf. Summary, No. 401). M. Dimitrov added that Bulgaria and Yugoslavia would by their mutual efforts defend themselves against all provocation by the "monarcho-Fascists in Greece." It is also understood that Yugoslavia has finally renounced the 25 million dollars' reparations due to her from Bulgaria under the terms of the peace treaty.

Meanwhile preparations for trying M. Petkov have been speeded up so as to enable the case to be started at Sofia on the 5th August. The British Political Representative is in London for consultations, but arrangements have been made for Mr. A. L. Ungoed-Thomas, K.C., M.P., to attend the proceedings as an observer. Four of M. Petkov's associates—three of them army officers—are facing their trial on very similar charges.

It was announced last week that the Bulgarian Government had appointed a special commission to visit the Soviet Zone of Germany and negotiate for a trade agreement.

Residents abroad are to have until the 31st August to make declarations under the capital levy law (see Summary, No. 387). Foreign companies holding Bulgarian shares may have to pay as natural persons, i.e., 10½ per cent. instead of the 2 per cent. laid down for juridical persons, although the British Political Representative is protesting about this.

Turkey

By 18th July all three American service missions had left Turkey. It is understood that the one hundred million dollar grant originally contemplated may be somewhat increased and that about two hundred American officers and specialists may be detailed for Turkey. In consequence of this substantial support American stock is high, as was shewn by President Inönü's unprecedented action in attending the American naval mission's farewell cocktail party. Similarly almost the entire press accepted as fair the criticism from Mr. Thornburg of the Twentieth Century Fund that so long as private enterprise was not developed in Turkey, there was no place there for private American capital.

This natural increase of American prestige, however, does not imply a slump in our own. The visit paid by the Commander-in-Chief, Mediterranean, with an imposing squadron, to Istanbul between the 21st and 27th July was seized by the Turks as an occasion for demonstrating their friendship for this country by extending cordial hospitality to the visitors. In addition to festivities in Istanbul, Admiral Willis flew to Angora on 23rd July to be warmly received by President Inönü and by the Prime Minister and other members of the Cabinet and to be entertained by the Chief of the General Staff. The President intervened to calm the misgivings inevitably created by the knowledge that the Admiral was about to go on to Sebastopol with a few of the ships then lying in the Bosphorus, and the press was unreserved in its welcome. Indeed the semi-official Ulus emphasised the appropriateness of the Sebastopol visit as indicating that Anglo-Turkish friendship was directed against no third Power, and in general the press dwelt on the peaceful purpose of the alliance. Turkish journalists fell with avidity on Admiral Willis' tribute to the constancy of the Turkish people's friendship during our darkest hours in the war.

Some months ago the suggestion was made in various quarters that the Republic, though still definitely secular, should allow the Moslem religion to be taught again in order to prevent the seeds of Communism from falling on vacant soil. After receiving a good deal of support in the press and in the Grand National Assembly the idea was debated by the People's Republican Party. Recently the matter was settled, for the present at any rate, by a decision that private schools for religious instruction would be permitted provided that the children also attended a primary school and that the teaching and prayers were in Turkish, although Arabic text-books would be allowed.

The harvest is reported to be excellent.

THE MIDDLE EAST

Egypt

The absence of the Egyptian delegation in New York, coupled with the Ramadan fast and the normal summer exodus from Cairo, has brought about a lull in political activity. A further communication to the Security Council is, however, reported to have been sent by Hassan al Banna, head of the Ikhwan al Muslimin (Moslem Brethren), criticising Nahas Pasha's telegram (see Summary No. 401) as an unpatriotic manœuvre.

The Acting Prime Minister, Khashaba Pasha, in a press statement on the 30th July, denied reports that there was a difference of view between the Egyptian delegation and the Arab representatives in New York, who were alleged to be anxious to see the re-opening of direct negotiations. This statement was prompted by an article which had appeared in al Ahram the same day, giving prominence to a report of the disagreement, and maintaining that a well-known Arab had criticised the utility of the documents intended for presentation to the Security Council by the Egyptian Delegation. Despite this denial it seems likely, in view of the instructions issued to the Syrian member of the Council (see Summary No. 401 under "Syria"), now

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

in the Chair, that a divergence of views does exist between the Arab States and the Egyptians.

On the 1st August the Egyptian Government expressed their keen anxiety to the Dutch Minister Plenipotentiary over the military operations in Indonesia, and stated their readiness to take friendly steps to bring about a just settlement of the conflict. During the week press reports tended to indicate that the Balkan and Indonesian questions required the Security Council's attention more urgently than the Egyptian case. As a result there has been much confusion and despondency in Egyptian political circles, where it is felt that Egypt is becoming the victim of a war of nerves waged by Great Britain in New York.

The independent Cairo weekly, Rose el Yusuf, contains an article urging guerilla warfare by Egyptian commandos against the British, and recommending that the Egyptian General Staff should form units, "similar to those of the Stern Gang and the Irgun Zvai Leumi," to operate in the Canal area, the Sudan and wherever there are Britons and British troops, with the task of harassing the British by public floggings and demolitions. "These heroes," the article maintains, "would contribute towards the overthrow of the British, so that the United Nations may finally realise that the presence of British troops in Egypt is a threat to the peace." A more inappropriate time for the appearance of such an article can hardly be imagined.

An important Company Law was passed by the Egyptian Parliament on the 2nd July, and is awaiting promulgation. Its main provisions are that 40 per cent. of the directors of any joint-stock Company shall be Egyptian; that the number of Egyptian employees in such Companies shall not be less than 75 per cent. and their total remuneration not less than 65 per cent.; that at least 51 per cent. of the shares of joint-stock Companies shall be earmarked for Egyptians, and that the officials of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry will have "the authority of police and judicial officers in respect of offences committed in contravention" of it. This bill, the ostensible object of which is the encouragement of new commercial and industrial enterprises in Egypt, marks another step in the campaign to eliminate foreign influence from the country, and is considered likely to hasten the liquidation of established foreign-owned firms, several of which are reported to be contemplating removal to countries where economic legislation is free from the fetters of politics. It is possible that the Egyptians may try to maintain that this law applies to the Suez Canal Company.

A trade agreement has been signed between Egypt and Transjordan, under which "most-favoured-nation" treatment is to be accorded by Egypt to all agricultural and industrial products of Transjordan, whether these goods are for local consumption, for re-exportation or merely in transit.

[See also under "United Nations."]

Palestine

The extreme discretion shown by King Abdullah when the U.N.S.C.O.P. visited Amman (see last week's Summary) was somewhat of a disappointment to the Committee. Apparently the King failed to give them any indication of his real views on the Palestine problem; the Prime Minister's (Samir Pasha Rifai's) public statement, on the other hand, was considered much more satisfactory. The Committee maintain that it presented the Arab case to them far more clearly than anything they had previously heard. The Prime Minister was questioned by the Committee on the status of illegal immigrants and safeguards for the Jews in an independent Palestine with an Arab majority. He was also asked whether the Arabs would react with violence to a decision unfavourable to their interests. The Prime Minister suggested that a Constitution could be framed, guaranteed by the United Nations, providing the Jews with all the necessary safeguards, but he was non-committal on the subject of violence.

The U.N.S.C.O.P. have announced their decision to send a sub-committee to visit the displaced persons' camps in Austria and Germany. The principal reason for the visit is apparently to assess the numbers of Jews who genuinely desire to go to Palestine. It is reported that the route of the sub-committee will be Munich, Vienna, Berlin, the British Zone and Belsen.

A broadcast from the clandestine station of the Irgun Zvai Leumi on the night of the 27th July called upon the Yishuv to start a campaign of civil disobedience in addition to the "military war." The broadcast urged the Palestine Jews to discontinue paying taxes, to sever all connections with the Government and to bring about the unification of all Jewish military organisations under a single command. The broadcast also attacked the Chairman of the U.N.S.C.O.P.

The executions of the three terrorists sentenced to death on the 16th June for the attack on Acre prison on the 4th May (see Summary No. 391) were carried out on the morning of the 29th July, despite last-minute appeals by the Jewish Agency and the Vaad Leumi for clemency. The executions were responsible for a general increase in tension throughout the country.

On the 31st July the Colonial Secretary announced in the House of Commons that the two British Field Security Sergeants, Martin and Paice, abducted in Nathanya on the 12th June, had been murdered by Jewish terrorists. Their bodies were discovered that morning in a eucalyptus grove in the Nathanya area. Pinned to the bodies were notes signed by the "tribunal" of the Irgun, saying that the "two British spies" had been tried on the following charges:—

"(i) illegal entry into the Hebrew homeland;
(ii) membership of the British criminal terrorist organisation known as the Army of Occupation, which was responsible for torture, murder, deportation, and for denial to the Hebrew people of the right to live;
(iii) illegal possession of arms;
(iv) anti-Jewish spying in civilian clothes;
(v) premeditated hostile designs against the underground movement."

Found guilty on these charges, the notes stated that they had been sentenced to hang, and their appeal for clemency dismissed. It added that this was not a reprisal for the recent execution of the three Jews, but a "routine judicial fact," and that the executed Jews would be avenged by a military operation.

This latest act of Jewish terrorism has been strongly condemned both in England and in Palestine. Mr. Creech Jones, in his statement to the House of Commons, said:—

"In the whole history of violence in Palestine there has scarcely been a more dastardly act than the cold-blooded and calculated murder of these two innocent young men, after holding them as hostages for nearly a fortnight.... Such an outrage against men discharging a service in fulfilment of international obligations is not only abhorrent in the eyes of all civilised persons everywhere, but must surely mean the final condemnation of the terrorists in the eyes of their own people. We can only hope that this latest act will stir the Jewish community in Palestine to root out this evil in their midst."

The Jewish Agency and the Vaad Leumi have made a joint statement to the press voicing the indignation of Palestine Jewry at this outrage.

"The Jewish Agency and the Vaad Leumi," the statement says,—

"have no words to express their execration of the dastardly murder of two innocent men by a set of criminals who are impervious to the voice of conscience, and arrogate unto themselves the power to decide on matters of life and death. We call upon the Yishuv, with the whole Jewish people, to stand by our side in fighting the ghastly fate which has befallen us, until its complete eradication from our midst."

Statements condemning the murder have also been issued by the Anglo-Jewish Association, the Zionist Federation of Great Britain and Ireland, and the Agudath Israel World Organisation.

On the night of the 31st July five Jews were killed and sixteen injured as a result of disturbances in Tel Aviv believed to have been caused by soldiers and police. In a terrorist attack on the 30th July two British Other Ranks were killed and thirty slightly injured, when an electrically-detonated mine exploded near Hadera. On the 1st August crowds in Tel Aviv broke down the main door of Barclay's Bank and later set fire to an R.A.F. vehicle which overturned near the Bank. In Jerusalem, the same afternoon, a military billet was attacked with automatic fire and bombs. Fire was returned and one attacker killed.

During the month of June no illegal immigrant succeeded in reaching Palestine. This was due to the unrelenting efforts of the British authorities to control the movements of suspect ships. In April 3,392 illegal immigrants arrived, however, and in May 3,269. These were the two peak months for the first half of 1947, but, until the arrival of the s.s. President Warfield, the maximum for any one month had been 3,926 (in November, 1946).

The first World Congress on Jewish Education was opened on Mount Scopus, Jerusalem, on the 29th July by Dr. Rieger of the Hebrew University. Some 150 delegates, representing twenty-two countries, were expected to be present.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

in the Chair, that a divergence of views does exist between the Arab States and the Egyptians.

On the 1st August the Egyptian Government expressed their keen anxiety to the Dutch Minister Plenipotentiary over the military operations in Indonesia, and stated their readiness to take friendly steps to bring about a just settlement of the conflict. During the week press reports tended to indicate that the Balkan and Indonesian questions required the Security Council's attention more urgently than the Egyptian case. As a result there has been much confusion and despondency in Egyptian political circles, where it is felt that Egypt is becoming the victim of a war of nerves waged by Great Britain in New York.

The independent Cairo weekly, Rose el Yusuf, contains an article urging guerilla warfare by Egyptian commandos against the British, and recommending that the Egyptian General Staff should form units, "similar to those of the Stern Gang and the Irgun Zvai Leumi," to operate in the Canal area, the Sudan and wherever there are Britons and British troops, with the task of harassing the British by public floggings and demolitions. "These heroes," the article maintains, "would contribute towards the overthrow of the British, so that the United Nations may finally realise that the presence of British troops in Egypt is a threat to the peace." A more inappropriate time for the appearance of such an article can hardly be imagined.

An important Company Law was passed by the Egyptian Parliament on the 2nd July, and is awaiting promulgation. Its main provisions are that 40 per cent. of the directors of any joint-stock Company shall be Egyptian; that the number of Egyptian employees in such Companies shall not be less than 75 per cent. and their total remuneration not less than 65 per cent.; that at least 51 per cent. of the shares of joint-stock Companies shall be earmarked for Egyptians, and that the officials of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry will have "the authority of police and judicial officers in respect of offences committed in contravention" of it. This bill, the ostensible object of which is the encouragement of new commercial and industrial enterprises in Egypt, marks another step in the campaign to eliminate foreign influence from the country, and is considered likely to hasten the liquidation of established foreign-owned firms, several of which are reported to be contemplating removal to countries where economic legislation is free from the fetters of politics. It is possible that the Egyptians may try to maintain that this law applies to the Suez Canal Company.

A trade agreement has been signed between Egypt and Transjordan, under which "most-favoured-nation" treatment is to be accorded by Egypt to all agricultural and industrial products of Transjordan, whether these goods are for local consumption, for re-exportation or merely in transit.

[See also under "United Nations."]

Palestine

The extreme discretion shown by King Abdullah when the U.N.S.C.O.P. visited Amman (see last week's Summary) was somewhat of a disappointment to the Committee. Apparently the King failed to give them any indication of his real views on the Palestine problem; the Prime Minister's (Samir Pasha Rifai's) public statement, on the other hand, was considered much more satisfactory. The Committee maintain that it presented the Arab case to them far more clearly than anything they had previously heard. The Prime Minister was questioned by the Committee on the status of illegal immigrants and safeguards for the Jews in an independent Palestine with an Arab majority. He was also asked whether the Arabs would react with violence to a decision unfavourable to their interests. The Prime Minister suggested that a Constitution could be framed, guaranteed by the United Nations, providing the Jews with all the necessary safeguards, but he was non-committal on the subject of violence.

The U.N.S.C.O.P. have announced their decision to send a sub-committee to visit the displaced persons' camps in Austria and Germany. The principal reason for the visit is apparently to assess the numbers of Jews who genuinely desire to go to Palestine. It is reported that the route of the sub-committee will be Munich, Vienna, Berlin, the British Zone and Belsen.

A broadcast from the clandestine station of the Irgun Zvai Leumi on the night of the 27th July called upon the Yishuv to start a campaign of civil disobedience in addition to the "military war." The broadcast urged the Palestine Jews to discontinue paying taxes, to sever all connections with the Government and to bring about the unification of all Jewish military organisations under a single command. The broadcast also attacked the Chairman of the U.N.S.C.O.P.

The executions of the three terrorists sentenced to death on the 16th June for the attack on Acre prison on the 4th May (see Summary No. 391) were carried out on the morning of the 29th July, despite last-minute appeals by the Jewish Agency and the Vaad Leumi for clemency. The executions were responsible for a general increase in tension throughout the country.

On the 31st July the Colonial Secretary announced in the House of Commons that the two British Field Security Sergeants, Martin and Paice, abducted in Nathanya on the 12th June, had been murdered by Jewish terrorists. Their bodies were discovered that morning in a eucalyptus grove in the Nathanya area. Pinned to the bodies were notes signed by the "tribunal" of the Irgun, saying that the "two British spies" had been tried on the following charges:—

"(i) illegal entry into the Hebrew homeland;
(ii) membership of the British criminal terrorist organisation known as the Army of Occupation, which was responsible for torture, murder, deportation, and for denial to the Hebrew people of the right to live;
(iii) illegal possession of arms;
(iv) anti-Jewish spying in civilian clothes;
(v) premeditated hostile designs against the underground movement."

Found guilty on these charges, the notes stated that they had been sentenced to hang, and their appeal for clemency dismissed. It added that this was not a reprisal for the recent execution of the three Jews, but a "routine judicial fact," and that the executed Jews would be avenged by a military operation.

This latest act of Jewish terrorism has been strongly condemned both in England and in Palestine. Mr. Creech Jones, in his statement to the House of Commons, said:—

"In the whole history of violence in Palestine there has scarcely been a more dastardly act than the cold-blooded and calculated murder of these two innocent young men, after holding them as hostages for nearly a fortnight.... Such an outrage against men discharging a service in fulfilment of international obligations is not only abhorrent in the eyes of all civilised persons everywhere, but must surely mean the final condemnation of the terrorists in the eyes of their own people. We can only hope that this latest act will stir the Jewish community in Palestine to root out this evil in their midst."

The Jewish Agency and the Vaad Leumi have made a joint statement to the press voicing the indignation of Palestine Jewry at this outrage.

"The Jewish Agency and the Vaad Leumi," the statement says,—

> "have no words to express their execration of the dastardly murder of two innocent men by a set of criminals who are impervious to the voice of conscience, and arrogate unto themselves the power to decide on matters of life and death. We call upon the Yishuv, with the whole Jewish people, to stand by our side in fighting the ghastly fate which has befallen us, until its complete eradication from our midst."

Statements condemning the murder have also been issued by the Anglo-Jewish Association, the Zionist Federation of Great Britain and Ireland, and the Agudath Israel World Organisation.

On the night of the 31st July five Jews were killed and sixteen injured as a result of disturbances in Tel Aviv believed to have been caused by soldiers and police. In a terrorist attack on the 30th July two British Other Ranks were killed and thirty slightly injured, when an electrically-detonated mine exploded near Hadera. On the 1st August crowds in Tel Aviv broke down the main door of Barclay's Bank and later set fire to an R.A.F. vehicle which overturned near the Bank. In Jerusalem, the same afternoon, a military billet was attacked with automatic fire and bombs. Fire was returned and one attacker killed.

During the month of June no illegal immigrant succeeded in reaching Palestine. This was due to the unrelenting efforts of the British authorities to control the movements of suspect ships. In April 3,392 illegal immigrants arrived, however, and in May 3,269. These were the two peak months for the first half of 1947, but, until the arrival of the s.s. President Warfield, the maximum for any one month had been 3,926 (in November, 1946).

The first World Congress on Jewish Education was opened on Mount Scopus, Jerusalem, on the 29th July by Dr. Rieger of the Hebrew University. Some 150 delegates, representing twenty-two countries, were expected to be present.

REPEAT
REPETER

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Iraq

The Foreign Minister, Dr. Fadhil Jamali, has stated in an interview accorded to a correspondent of the Egyptian paper "Al Moqattam" that Iraqi membership of two pacts—the Sa'adadbad and the Arab League—was quite consistent, since these pacts were complementary and not mutually exclusive. "Iraq is in a geographical position," he said, "in which she can be of great assistance in drawing together both the Arab League and the members of the Sa'adadbad Pact. Thus we are able to consider the Iraqi-Turkish treaty (see Summary No. 396) as a positive step in this direction."

An Emergency Law Bill was laid before the Majlis early this month, but was shelved owing to the shortage of time for its debate this session, and to opposition criticism. The bill provides the Crown, subject to the approval of the Council of Ministers, with the power to declare a state of emergency in any part of the country. This would involve, inter alia, strict control of all publications and the prevention of public meetings. In addition, under the bill the authorities would have the power to dismiss any public official. This bill was probably drawn up to meet the threat of a possible insurrection staged by the five opposition parties (see Summary No. 397). According to recent reports, however, there is a growing disunity within the ranks of these parties, although they still have in common a feeling of hostility towards the Prime Minister, Saleh Jabr, and the Regent, whom they consider to be tools of the British.

(See also under "Persia.")

Persia

In his speech at the opening of the 15th Majlis (see last week's Summary) the Shah emphasised that Persia's relations with the major Powers would continue to be based on amity and reciprocal respect. He also stressed the importance of the United Nations as a safeguard for Persian independence. Internal policy would, he said, rest upon the maintenance of public order and on social and industrial reform, legislation on these matters forming a major part of the Majlis's programme for the session. There has been the expected spate of criticism of the new Majlis from the left-wing press. Nabard-E-Emruz in place of Jebhe (moderate left) expresses the view that, although its members have been appointed by the Government, and it is therefore unrepresentative, its opening is welcomed by the people. Seda-Ye-Mardom (moderate right) maintains that only if purged of its corrupt elements could the Majlis be of any service to the country.

Mahmud Jam has accepted the portfolio of the Ministry of War and assumed his appointment on the 17th July. He was Prime Minister in 1935, and has held a number of other posts, including Minister of Finance (1923–24), Minister of the Interior (1933) and Ambassador to Egypt (1941). He appears to be a trustworthy and sincere character. The post of Minister of the Interior is still vacant, but M. Feriduni is officiating.

The Persian press has been giving prominence recently to events in Indonesia. Several articles have appeared expressing sympathy with the Indonesians and condemning the action taken by the Dutch Government. Dutch oppression has also been denounced from the pulpits of several mosques, but as yet there appears to be no deep public feeling on the subject.

During the past three months there have been two indications that the Persian Government is continuing to implement its vast programme of social reform. The first is a decree of the 31st May, 1947, approving the constitution of the Social Welfare Institution; the second a radio announcement in June describing the meeting of a Commission for the Welfare of the Tribes. The Social Welfare Institution, established under a decree of 22nd January, 1947, acts as trustee to the Central Aid Fund, the body responsible for co-ordinating the work of Factory Aid Funds in providing social benefits for workers. The new decree charges the Social Welfare Institution with the preparation of various plans, such as insurance schemes to cover sickness benefit, retirement and old age pensions, maternity and burial grants, all to apply to industrial workers only. The "Commission for the Welfare of the Tribes" is a much more nebulous body; in fact its existence has not yet been definitely established. The formation of such a commission, however, is a thoroughly desirable step, and one which has been advocated for years past by representatives of His Majesty's Government. To be effective, a council of tribal leaders would also have to be appointed, but it is doubtful whether these leaders would be willing to sink their personal differences and agree to combine in such a body.

The death penalties for the Meshed mutineers (see Summary No. 400) have been commuted to penal servitude. Originally, three Army N.C.O.s were sentenced to death (not two as previously reported), two civilians were given life sentences, and one twenty-five years' hard labour. The civilian sentences have also been substantially reduced. One notoriously pro-Russian bookseller, for example, has had his fifteen years' hard labour cut down to five. Taken in conjunction with the reduction in the sentences of the Iraqi communists (see Summary No. 401 under "Iraq") it is not unreasonable to infer that both Persia and Iraq still entertain too healthy a respect for the reactions of the Soviet Union to inflict punishment on their communist insurrectionists.

Tehran radio reported the inauguration of a telephone line between Persia and Iraq on the 15th July.

Corrigendum

Summary No. 402, page 18, "Egypt," last para., line 5: for "hundreds of their number . . . ." read "hundred of their number . . . ." Page 20, "Palestine," column 1, line 7, and "Transjordan," para. 2, line 1: for "Sami . . . ." read "Samir . . . ."

THE FAR EAST

Japan

Interest has been mainly centred on the visit to General MacArthur of Dr. Evatt, Australian Deputy Prime Minister and Minister for External Affairs. (See Summary No. 401.)

Dr. Evatt made two statements to the press, one immediately on arrival at Kure on 24th July, and the other on his departure from Tokyo on 3rd August.

In the first statement, after paying high tribute both to the endurance of those in the Allied forces who had achieved victory, and to General MacArthur, "under whose inspiring leadership the strategic position in the South Pacific was completely reversed," Dr. Evatt said that he was in search of authoritative information as to how the occupation policy was working out in practice and what has been done toward the building of a peaceful, democratic Japan. It was Australia's desire that the peace settlement with Japan, while tempered with strict justice, should "also foster the growth of true democracy." He concluded his statement by saying that "in making the Peace Treaty Australia has a right to a voice commensurate with the contribution to victory of its forces": he was satisfied that Australia's right to be a principal party was recognised.

In the second statement Dr. Evatt expressed his appreciation of the facilities that had been afforded him to obtain a first-hand picture of the situation. He said that he had conferred with General MacArthur, met all the senior officials concerned with the occupation of the country and also several leading Japanese personalities, including the Prime Minister, Mr. Katayama, and the Trade Union leaders, with whom he had discussed some of Japan's main problems. "It has long been clear," he said, "that the Australian Government shared General MacArthur's views as to the desirability of an early conference in order to negotiate a definitive Japanese treaty of peace," and "it is especially satisfactory to be able to add that there is a very substantial area of agreement with the leading United States authorities in Japan on the major issues which will arise at the Conference."

In internal affairs the energy of politicians and the press appears to have been concentrated on criticism of the Katayama Government, which is said to have lost much of its erstwhile popularity. Among the many press criticisms the Nippon Times asserts that "judging from the foreign press comments, the Katayama Government enjoys wider respect among foreign circles than it does in Japan." In an article in the Central News of 25th July the Katayama Cabinet is blamed for the spirit of increasing unrest in Labour and Farmers' Unions. The two main reasons for the mounting resentment against the Socialist-led Coalition Government are said to be general dissatisfaction with the Government's economic policy and differences of opinion between the Minister for Agriculture and Forestry, Mr. Hirano, and the leaders of the Farmers' Union. The Government, however, are expected to issue new emergency measures which, it is thought, will tide over the economic situation until the position becomes stabilised with the new rice crop in October.

Indonesia

When the United Nations Security Council met to discuss the Indonesian question, the Netherlands Representative,

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

M. van Kleffens, in his statement, said that if the helping hand of a nation such as the United States of America were held out in the interests of conciliation, the Netherlands Government would take it. Shortly afterwards the United States Delegate informed the Security Council that his Government had offered their good offices; and, on 1st August, M. van Kleffens announced the Netherlands Government's acceptance of this offer. The United States Representative made it clear that his Government wished it to be understood that their offer to mediate was also extended to the Indonesian Republican Government, and he quoted M. Sjarir's statement of the 31st July, that Indonesia would accept any impartial arbitration. Later M. van Kleffens said that he had been authorised to announce that the wish expressed by so many members of the Security Council that hostilities should cease "coincided with the wishes of the Netherlands Government." (See also under "United Nations" and "Low Countries").

In Batavia Dr. van Mook released from "protective custody" the six members of the Jogjakarta Government, including Dr. Gani, Deputy Prime Minister. It is to be noted, however, that according to reports neither the Indonesian Mayor of Batavia, nor any of the other detained officials of the Republic were set free.

The message from the Security Council, calling upon both parties to cease hostilities and settle their dispute by arbitration or other peaceful means, was handed to Dr. Gani together with a note from Dr. van Mook offering to transmit it to M. Sjarifoeddin at Jogjakarta over the Batavia radio service.

On the same day Dr. van Mook broadcast a lengthy statement which opened with the announcement that the Netherlands Government had accepted the United States offer of mediation and had ordered, as from midnight on 4th August, the termination of the military action which had been "necessitated by an untenable and lawless situation." Dr. van Mook then went on to state that those parts of Java and Sumatra for which the Netherlands Government have assumed direct responsibility will be defined as soon as possible, and that in those regions they will maintain law and order by every means at their disposal, quelling promptly any disturbance of the peace. And, after declaring that the Netherlands Government are awaiting confirmation of the Republican leaders' compliance with the requirements of the Security Council, Dr. van Mook concluded with a pious expression of hope that the Republican Government may not again be found wanting in that degree of co-operation which "is possible only on a foundation of real security, democratic freedom, and good faith in the execution of agreements."

No doubt the general tone of this somewhat ponderous statement—which indicates that Dr. van Mook has no intention of relinquishing his cherished dream for the formation in East and West Java of two new independent states within the Federation, and which, it is understood, was broadcast before the Security Council's message to the Republican Government was transmitted—produced an irritating effect in Jogjakarta. When, later in the evening, the Republican Government broadcast their reply to the Security Council their acceptance was couched in defiant, rather than conciliatory, tones.

Mr. Sjarifoeddin announced his Government's intention to make every effort to comply with the Security Council's "cease fire" requirement, but asked that the serious technical difficulties to be overcome in the execution of this order be taken into consideration. In regard to arbitration, however, the Republican Government suggested that this be undertaken by a Commission set up by the Security Council and composed of representatives of several countries acceptable to both parties. They also asked that a representative of the Republic be summoned to plead the Indonesian case before the Security Council. Finally, they advanced their desire for the complete withdrawal of all Netherlands forces from the whole of the archipelago, and expressed doubts as to the possibility of any attempt at the cessation of hostilities becoming effective if the armed forces of both sides were only to be withdrawn behind the demarcation lines agreed upon on the 14th October, 1946.

Thus the reply not only counters the Dutch assertion of a reduction in the area over which the Republic of Indonesia is to exercise control in future, but also presents entirely new and far-reaching claims of sovereignty.

According to press statements M. Sjarir, Adviser to the Republican Government, left Bombay by air for the U.S.A. on the 4th August.

French Indo-China

The High Commissioner for Indo-China, M. Bollaert, who had been in Paris for consultations with the French Government, returned to Saigon on 21st July. According to a report from H.M. Consul-General at Saigon, he appeared optimistic concerning the final outcome of certain proposals he had put forward while in France for a solution of the present impasse.

Two days before M. Bollaert's arrival, Dr. Ho Chi-Minh, released a statement in which he said that, although he had not yet met M. Bollaert he was prepared to endorse any statesmanlike action which the latter might take toward the recognition of the independence and unity of Viet-Nam and the restoration of friendship and co-operation between the two nations.

Despite the somewhat provocative undertone of this statement, M. Bollaert is said to believe it likely that the Viet-Nam leaders will now be prepared to negotiate; and, according to press reports, he has issued a stern statement, making it clear that the first essential to any settlement is the cessation of guerrilla hostilities. His statement also conveyed a message that is both a warning and a plea to the followers of Dr. Ho Chi-Minh, that "at the end of this conflict there are neither conquerors nor conquered—we shall exclude from negotiations only those adversaries inimical to reason and partisans of the worst politics."

It would seem that M. Bollaert, having failed to find any other person or group able to command sufficient public support to form an entirely new Government, has decided to try once again to work with the recalcitrant Dr. Ho Chi-Minh. In what is thought to be an endeavour on their part to provide an opening for fresh negotiations with the French Authorities, the Viet-Nam Government have recently discarded a number of their more extreme members and undergone a general reshuffle. It is also reported that Bao Dai, the ex-Emperor of Annam, has been re-appointed to the post, which he held after the Japanese surrender, of Supreme Adviser to the Viet-Nam Government.

On 5th August, accompanied by his military staff, M. Bollaert proceeded to Hanoi, and it seems to be his intention to remain there for some time in order to make a close study of the situation and gather first-hand information.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

Great Britain's financial worries have again become front-page news in the United States. Prominence is given to the difficulties which have resulted from the unexpectedly rapid exhaustion of the American loan. Consequently there is sympathy in internationalist circles for the idea of relaxing at this stage the sterling convertibility and non-discriminaton provisions of the loan agreement. Mr. Marshall has announced that the United States Government has agreed to hold a "high level" conference on the question of easing the loan terms, although the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. John Snyder, seems to feel that no real modification will be possible without the assent of Congress. As during the fuel crisis last winter, commentators readily concede that American security interests may be seriously affected if the situation at home compels this country to abandon any of its foreign military commitments. In analysing the news from these islands the same commentators again pay tribute to the spirit in which the British people are apparently prepared to adjust themselves to new hardships. Yet there are the inevitable recriminations and Schadenfreude regarding the supposed shortcomings of the British "Socialist experiment." Even the otherwise friendly New York Herald-Tribune asserts that "the United States would look upon Britain's plight a good deal more sympathetically if the Labour Government would subordinate its party programme for the moment to the needs of production." It also remarks that "the Marshall Plan, upon which Britain so clearly counts, has been designed to help foreign nations to their feet, not to cradle them for ever in friendly arms."

Those who ascribe this country's difficulties in the main to a surfeit of economic planning and State control have now become adamant in their insistence that the Washington talks on German coal production will fall short of their object if they do not compel His Majesty's Government to abandon their socialisation plans for the Ruhr. The growing conviction that no programme of European recovery is likely to be effective which does not permit the Ruhr to regain more of its former productivity is causing considerable importance to be attached to the Washington

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

meetings, and there has been much speculation regarding the range of subjects to be covered. Mr. John J. McCloy, the President of the International Bank, heightened interest in the forthcoming proceedings on the 29th July, when he disclosed that he had, with the knowledge of the State Department, asked Mr. Lewis Douglas to make an informal survey of the coal situation in the Ruhr during his visit to Germany with a view to determining what the Bank could do to encourage production there. (See also under "Germany.")

Emphasis is given both to the economic position in Great Britain and to the problem of the Ruhr in the newly-announced plans of the Special Committee of the House of Representatives which is to gather information on foreign relief and rehabilitation needs (see Summary No. 401). The Committee is expected to establish its headquarters in London and from there to embark upon a tour of the Ruhr. It will then divide into a number of sub-committees, one of which will devote itself to the problem of the Ruhr and another to "British and Dominion finances." Representative Christian A. Herter (Republican, Massachusetts), a former career diplomat who acted as secretary to the American Peace Commission in 1918, is to officiate as the Committee's "executive head" and vice-chairman, and ten other Republicans and eight Democrats, representing between them most of the Standing Committees of the Lower House, have been selected to serve with him. Although the party appears to be rather on the conservative side and contains one or two unregenerate isolationists, it should be able to give reasonably unbiassed consideration to Europe's difficulties.

The creation of this Special Committee apparently aroused some resentment among the regular Foreign Affairs Committee, and to assuage the latter the House of Representatives has had to agree that the Foreign Affairs Committee likewise shall spend the recess investigating the situation in the needy countries. The Chairman of this committee, Mr. Charles A. Eaton, has also been appointed Chairman of the Special Committee. In addition to the foregoing arrangements the notoriously frugal Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, Mr. John Taber, has designated his colleague, Representative Everett M. Dirksen to come and form his own independent estimate of the situation over here. (Representative Dirksen is an isolationist from Illinois who believes that providing aid to Europe is tantamount to "pouring money down a rat hole.") Thus such is the multiplicity of Congressional bodies at present about to make "on the spot" investigations abroad that the press is waggishly inviting the public to "join Congress and see the world."

M. Gromyko's veto of the proposed United Nations frontier commission for Northern Greece has been taken as ample vindication (if such was needed) of President Truman's "unilateral" approach to the Greco-Turkish problem in his well-known message to Congress last March. It has also had the effect of consolidating support for the Marshall proposals. As one newspaper observes, two tendencies will now become more obvious: "one is that which looks . . . toward excluding Russia from U.N. . . . The other is that which looks toward what is often denounced as 'by-passing' U.N. through devices in which two or three or more of the Western Powers concert measures of their own to meet critical practical situations as they arise." Mr. Charles Eaton, the Chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, who served as a member of the U.S. delegation to the San Francisco Conference in 1945, has now added his influential voice to those who clamour for the Russians to be "read out" of the United Nations if they continue to refuse to "give in and behave like a civilised nation."

Since the adjournment of Congress leaders of both political parties are finding themselves able to devote more attention to the 1948 election. For his part Senator Taft barely waited for the lobbies to clear in Washington before proceeding to a Republican rally at Columbus, Ohio, on the 31st July to announce that he might be a candidate for his party's Presidential nomination. His only proviso was that he must be convinced within the next two months that he had a good chance to win both the nomination and the election. On the same occasion he launched a bitter attack upon President Truman and proceeded to criticize the present foreign policy—hinting, however, that he might support the Marshall proposals if these involved the provision of machinery and materials to "restore . . . . productive ability," instead of mere dollar credits or even food. (It is in any event a tribute to Mr. Truman's still rising prestige that the brunt of the attack was devoted, not to recent developments, but to the alleged failures of the Roosevelt era—especially the Teheran and Yalta agreements and the "harsh and impractical Morgenthau plan" for Germany). Senator Taft was also at pains to defend the achievements of the Republican majority during the recent session of Congress. These, as even a few thoughtful Conservatives at present admit, were not uninfluenced by the special pleading of the wool, sugar, real estate, and railway interests. It is therefore suggested that, having served business so well during its first session, the 80th Congress may find it expedient during its second session to deal with measures with a more popular appeal—such as the housing, education and welfare Bills with which Senator Taft himself has been associated.

LATIN AMERICA

Inter-American Affairs

The Governing Board of the Pan-American Union has decided not to invite the present Government of Nicaragua to the Rio de Janeiro Conference, which is to open on the 15th August. This decision, which was taken on the 28th July, was based on the fact that none of the American Republics have recognised the present Nicaraguan régime. It was pointed out, however, that as an election in Nicaragua is due to be held on the 3rd August, the Union has left the door open for an invitation to any new Nicaraguan Government that gains the recognition of a majority of the American republics (See Summaries Nos. 400, 401, 402).

According to the Brazilian press, the Brazilian delegation will be headed by Dr. Raúl Fernandes, the Foreign Minister; the Argentine Delegation (See Summary No. 402) will be composed of 40 members, including representatives of the armed forces. A very strong United States Delegation is expected at the Conference, including Mr. Marshall, Senators Vandenberg and Connally, Representative Bloom, Mr. Warren Austin and Mr. William Pawley, Ambassador to Brazil. It is probable that President Truman will pay a state visit to Rio de Janeiro during the Conference.

Argentina

On 24th July the Senate approved the appointment of new members of the Supreme Court to replace those who were recently impeached and dismissed from office. The new Justices are: Drs. Justo Lucas; Alvarez Rodriguez; Felipe S. Perez; Luis R. Longhi and Rodolfo Guillermo Valenzuela. The dismissed Attorney General, Dr. Juan Alvarez, has been replaced by Dr. Carlos Gabriel Delfino (See Summaries Nos. 369, 391).

Chile

Before and after the return of President Gonzalez Videla from Argentina on the 12th July there was considerable speculation about Government changes and the formation of a National Government. Many consultations took place between the various parties and there were interviews with the President to whom terms for joining the Government were presented. The only point on which there appeared to be agreement was on the exclusion of the Communists from the Government. It began to look as if the difficulties in finding a formula acceptable to all parties were insuperable.

According to a broadcast announcement, this has proved to be the case. The President has released an official statement to the country in which, after giving an account of his efforts to organise a political cabinet, which were nullified by the inflexibility of the political parties, he requested from a group of citizens the sacrifice of participating with him in the Government. The Cabinet accordingly resigned, and a new one has been constituted as follows:—

Foreign Affairs: Señor German Vergara Donoso.
Interior: Rear-Admiral Holger.
National Defence: General Guillermo Barrios Tirado.
Economics and Trade: Señor Alberto Baltra Cortes.
Finance: Señor Jorge Alessandri Rodriguez.
Education: Dr. Enrique Molina Garmendia.
Justice: Dr. Eugenio Puga Fisher.
Public Works: Señor Ernesto Merino Segura.
Agriculture: Eng. Ricardo Bascunan.
Labour: Señor Juan Pradenas Muñoz.
Health: Dr. Jose Santos Salas.

In his statement the President emphasized that the members of this Cabinet were not party men, but mostly experts, prepared to contribute their abilities, self-denial and patriotism to assuring the welfare of the country. He looked for the support of the healthier public opinion in the country, the unconditional backing of

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

the armed forces, and the certainty of counting on the people's sympathetic co-operation.

Costa Rica

The pre-election campaign began about the middle of July, with Sr. Ulate, Director of El Diario de Costa Rica as Democratic Party candidate, and Dr. Engel Calderon Guardia, who was President from 1940–44, as Republican National Party Candidate. It was evident from the interchange of insults and the use of "nerve" bombs by the Democrats—the conservative elements in opposition—that the political situation was deteriorating. Clashes occurred on the 19th and 20th July, with several fatal casualties. A general strike followed, which, according to broadcast accounts is attributable to indignation at the behaviour of the police in firing on unarmed demonstrators. The Democrats have demanded the removal of the Minister of the Interior, which the Government refuses except on proof of misconduct. All bank clerks have been called up for military service, and the police have been reinforced with voluntary dock workers. The usual arrests, minor clashes and sporadic looting continue, but the food and employment situation is not serious and the railways and air services are being maintained. The Democrats have now abandoned their more extreme demands, and the probabilities are that the general strike will be called off.

Dominican Republic

There have been various statements reporting the existence of a mixed revolution-army operating from Cuba to invade the Dominican Republic (see Summary No. 371). While some official sources are inclined to discount the danger of serious trouble, broadcast reports quote the Dominican Ambassador to Washington as announcing that "a Communist revolutionary in Cuba is ready to invade the Dominican Republic" and add that the Dominican Government has taken steps to deal with the expedition openly prepared in Cuba. The State Department is also said to be studying the situation closely, owing to the possibility of serious consequences to United States interests. Press messages of the 31st July quote the Dominican Embassy in Washington for the assertion that a three-ship expedition has left Cuba to invade the Dominican Republic. Apparently the fleet is not a very speedy one, as no reports have been forthcoming about the welcome that awaited it on arrival at the hospitable shores of Hispaniola.

Ecuador

A Census taken in Quito at the end of June provisionally gives the population of the city as 211,174. The Census Board has since commented on the dreadful living conditions of large numbers of people and the numbers of bars in the old part of the city. There was a counter-consolation in the discovery of a hermit in a cave on the slopes of Mount Pichincha.

Guatemala

The Minister for Foreign Affairs, Lic. Eugenio Silva Pena, and the Minister of Education, Lic. Julio Bonilla Gonzalez, resigned on the 31st July. Though no official announcement has been made, it is almost certain that the new Minister for Foreign Affairs will be Senor Munoz Meany, Guatemalan Minister in Paris. Sr. Munoz is described as Communist and anti-British and difficult to work with. His attitude towards the Belize controversy has not been defined, but he will probably have the support of Congress, which was not the case with Lic. Silva Pena.

President Arévalo has yielded to pressure from the workers and seems to be going towards the Left. This does not meet with the approval of the Army under Colonel Arana, who is perhaps the most powerful man in Guatemala. The situation is uncertain, and there are rumours that a complete change of Government may take place and that the President will be thrown out.

Uruguay

After a few weeks' illness, Tomás Berreta, President of Uruguay, died in Montevideo on the 2nd August.

Dr. Berreta, who had held office for only five months, was born in 1876. He was a man of humble origin, and after early days on his father's farm, he entered public life as a follower of Dr. Jose Battle, in whose group of the Colorado party he managed to secure a good position. He served in both houses of the Legislature and became Minister of Public Works in 1943. In this post he confirmed his reputation and was installed as President in March of this year (see Summary No. 384). Dr. Berreta was a strong supporter of the Allied cause in both world wars and had a particular admiration for Great Britain.

Sr. Battle Berres, the Vice-President, will serve as President for the remainder of Senor Berreta's four-year term.

THE UNITED NATIONS

Security Council

Membership Committee

On the 28th July the Committee postponed consideration of the Albanian application until Member States had examined the exact position with regard to Albania's acceptance of the jurisdiction of the International Court in the Corfu dispute. Another cause of the postponement was Albania's conduct towards the Balkan Investigation Commission. China opposed the admission of Outer Mongolia on the ground that this People's Republic had invaded China by force of arms. Russia's representative transferred the accusation to China, alleging that "certain circles in China" were trying to make the Sino-Mongolian border into another Greek frontier. The Committee postponed further action until China had had time to reply to the Soviet charges. The candidature of Transjordan was supported by Syria, the United Kingdom, the United States, Belgium, Brazil, China and France. When the Committee met on the 30th July the Soviet representative questioned Transjordan's genuine independence under the imposed "treaty." He repeated the objections his Government had made last year to the admission of Eire and Portugal, in particular the assertion that the absence of diplomatic relations with Russia proved a State unfit for membership of the United Nations. Poland's representative argued that the Portuguese case should be put off for the present, because of what he called Portugal's close relations with General Franco's Government.

On the 4th August a Soviet proposal to postpone consideration of the applications of ex-Satellites and of Austria was rejected. The United States representative then declared his Government's support of Italy and Austria and of the Yemen, and their misgivings over the qualifications of Hungary and Roumania.

A memorandum submitted to the United Kingdom delegation by the World Jewish Congress accuses the Yemeni Government of permitting slavery and practising discrimination against Jews—e.g., exclusion from the Civil Service, ban on building their houses higher than those of the Moslems, refusal to allow them to leave the country, etc.

Indonesia

Australia and India had both referred the Indonesian situation to the Security Council, the former under Chapter VII the latter under Chapter VI of the Charter (see last week's Summary under "Far East"). India's request to the Security Council contained the charge that "Dutch forces had embarked without warning on large-scale military action against the Indonesian people" (see also under "Far East"). The Council discussed the matter on the 31st July and the 1st August. Colonel Hodgson (Australia) contended that Indonesia was a State in International Law and moved the following resolution:—

"The Security Council, noting with concern the hostilities in progress between the armed forces of the Netherlands and of the Republic of Indonesia, and having determined that such hostilities constitute a breach of the peace under article 39 of the Charter of the United Nations, calls upon the Governments of the Netherlands and of the Republic of Indonesia under article 40 of the Charter of the United Nations to comply with the following measures, such measures to be without prejudice to the rights, claims or position of either party.

(a) To cease hostilities forthwith.
(b) To settle their disputes by arbitration in accordance with Article 17 of the Linggadjati Agreement signed at Batavia on the 25th March, 1947."

Mr. Van Kleffens denied the competence of the Security Council to consider the Australian request under Chapter VII, since the Republic of Indonesia was not an independent State and Dutch action was domestic, coming within Article 2, paragraph 7. It had, he said, been invited by the Governments of Eastern Indonesia and of Borneo, and was welcomed by the great majority of the Republic's inhabitants. The Dutch had already sought American arbitration and Mr. Van Kleffens told the Council that his Government would seek the good offices of the United States at the appropriate time. A little later the United States representative informed the Council that his Government had that very day offered its services. They were accepted, and Australia's representative announced that Dr. Sjahrir had, on the 31st July, promised Indonesian acceptance of any impartial arbitration.

Great Britain's representative was prepared to put forward a resolution that

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

United States mediation offered the surest way to peace; mediation, he said, was covered by Articles 34 and 35, both of which were far more relevant to the case than was article 39. By suggesting arbitration the Council would not abandon the case, since it would remain "seized" of it until a proper solution was reached. Mr. Gromyko described the United Kingdom resolution as an attempt to by-pass the Council, whose duty was to investigate the matter thoroughly. He also proposed an amendment that the Council's resolution should require the two parties to resume the exact positions they had held when hostilities began. This amendment was defeated.

From the United Nations' standpoint, the main constitutional issue was the old question of the limits of domestic jurisdiction: was the Republic of Indonesia an independent State? Did Chapter VII apply? American amendments were introduced into the Australian resolution to get over the difficulty of Chapter VII and to make the recommendations less definite and therefore more easily acceptable. The Amended Resolution ran as follows:

> "The Security Council, noting with concern the hostilities in progress between the armed forces of the Netherlands and the Republic of Indonesia calls upon the parties, (a) to cease hostilities forthwith and (b) to settle their dispute by arbitration or by other peaceful means, and keep the Security Council informed about the progress of their settlement."

The provision to keep the Council informed was a Polish amendment.

Neither the Belgian nor the French nor the United Kingdom representatives felt entirely convinced that the Republic was an independent State, and all three abstained as the three parts of the Resolution were voted upon and adopted separately. No vote was taken on the resolution as a whole, but the United Kingdom representative let it be known that his abstention would not be intended as a veto. Mr. Gromyko tried to introduce the original Australian preamble, failed, and abstained from voting for the amended preamble on the ground that it was too weak. He supported the two recommendations.

The Balkans Commission

On the 29th July Mr. Gromyko had vetoed the United States resolution, which 9 out of the 11 members of the Security Council approved. On the 4th August, the Security Council rejected the Russian resolution which put the blame on Greece, demanded the withdrawal of foreign troops, and urged the need of a Commission to supervise "economic aid" for Greece. Only Poland supported the resolution. Mr. Herschel Johnston (United States) described as "futile," a Polish compromise resolution calling upon Greece and her northern neighbours to restore normal diplomatic relations.

The Egyptian Complaint

Nokrashy Pasha presented his Government's case to the Security Council on the 5th August. Sir Alexander Cadogan replied to the Egyptian letter of the 8th July, reserving his right to answer Nokrashy's speech at a later meeting, and the hearing was adjourned until the 11th August.

Nokrashy asked the Council (1) to direct the United Kingdom to withdraw its troops from Egypt "including the Sudan," and (2) to end the present régime in the Sudan. He accused the U.K. of bad faith, of seeking not alliance but domination, and hoped that the Council would affirm that the world of the twentieth century had left nineteenth-century imperialism behind, etc., etc. His main argument was that Egypt had accepted the 1936 twenty-year treaty with the U.K. under duress, that the treaty was a "temporary expedient" to meet the danger of world war, that the treaty had "outlived its purpose." The presence of British troops in Egypt without Egypt's consent was contrary to the Charter of the United Nations. With regard to the Sudan, he contended that the 1899 agreement between the U.K. and Egypt did not give the U.K. a share in the sovereignty of the Sudan, and he accused it of trying to divert Sudanese trade from Egypt, and of thwarting what he called the desire of the Sudanese masses for unity with Egypt.

Sir Alexander Cadogan based his case on the principle of all International Law, Pacta sunt observanda. The 1936 treaty remained in force until 1956 unless both parties agreed otherwise. It covered the presence of British troops and the question of the Sudan. Egypt could not denounce it unilaterally and then claim rights on the ground that no treaty existed. Last year the United Kingdom, though in no way bound to do so, had entered into negotiations with Egypt for a revision of the Treaty. All matters had been agreed upon save one, the right of the Sudanese to choose their own status ultimately. This H.M.G. insisted upon and Egypt denied.

Mr. Bevin offered to sign the agreed terms, treaty of mutual assistance, withdrawal of troops, etc., and to leave the Sudan question for future decision. The Egyptian Government refused, and the reward of H.M.G. for meeting Egypt's request for negotiations was to be "haled before the Security Council," which, as Sir Alexander submitted, could "not intervene in respect of negotiations which we were in no way committed to undertake for the revision of an existing international treaty."

As to the alleged threat to international peace and security, he saw none "unless, of course, the Egyptian Government contemplated creating it."

EUROPEAN ECONOMIC CO-OPERATION

The first task of the Committee of European Economic Co-operation in Paris, working through its Executive Committee and its Technical Sub-Committees, has been to draw up a form of questionnaire, the answers to which, supplied by each of the sixteen participating countries and collated by the Committee, will give the material for a report on European needs to the United States. This work started with a long and detailed draft tabled by the French delegation on 16th July.

This draft, prepared by M. Marjolin, the Secretary-General of the Monnet Plan, was in eight sections, designed to show the economic difficulties arising from the war and what the countries have done to overcome them; how basic resources are to be used for the next three or four years; how a balance sheet can be drawn up of Europe's requirements and resources; how much power, raw materials, food, capital equipment and finance will be needed from abroad; and what the sixteen countries can do for European co-operation.

A British re-draft of this questionnaire was put forward in the form of a memorandum on 17th July and some difference is perceptible between the British and French approach. The British delegate asked members (at the second meeting of the Committee of Co-operation on 17th July) to try and see the programme through the eyes of those to whom it was addressed. They should aim at establishing four things:—

(a) How much of the "vital" supplies would be needed;
(b) What "Europe" (i.e., the participating nations) could do singly and collectively;
(c) What outside help would be needed to enable them to do it;
(d) A comprehensive short and long-term picture of the data thus collected, in the form of an estimated balance of payments, particularly with the American continent, over a period long enough to show that progressive improvement would lead to definite recovery.

The "vital" supplies are those dealt with by the four technical committees (food and agriculture, iron and steel, transport, and power) with the addition of timber and, possibly, rubber. The aim is to present a "European" negative balance of the critical items while avoiding complications about the rest, to escape financial pitfalls, to allow for special conditions, and to leave countries free to prove in their own way that each will be internally and externally viable by the end of 1951.

In discussion on the draft questionnaire the Netherlands delegate, Mr. Hirschfeld, stood out for a distinction being made between short-term action to assist recovery by raising the level of production (including that of Western Germany) and long-term development. He wanted the principles to be generally agreed before the questionnaire was drafted and thought it should aim chiefly at obtaining data which would help the fuller use of existing industrial capacity and the re-establishment of multilateral inter-European trade. The arrangement arrived at by agreement with the U.S. administration is that the U.S. authorities are cooperating in the working party which is preparing replies to the questionnaire, and that the British will present the case of the bizonal area in Paris. The distinction between long and short term proposals was also defended by the Scandinavian delegations, who were anxious that the Paris organisation should not take to itself functions belonging properly to the Economic Commission for Europe. M. Alphand, speaking for France, took up Mr. Hirschfeld's point about full use being made of existing industrial capacity in Germany. France, he said emphatically, could not in any case agree to an increase of German capacity or production beyond the security level; and such increase as might be allowed in coal and

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267611

agriculture must be for the benefit of Europe and to relieve the burdens of the occupying Powers.

Nevertheless, it is clear that the picture of "Europe" or even of "Western Europe" will not appear convincing to the United States unless Germany is included in it. The difficulty of achieving the maximum contribution from Germany towards the reconstructing of Europe and at the same time achieving security against future German aggression has been recognised and the Commanders-in-Chief of all four zones, each of whom is receiving the questionaire, have been requested to give a realistic estimate of what Germany might produce in the periods under review and at the same time to state the levels fixed in the 1946 Level of Industry Plan—with a reminder that these levels were fixed on the assumption that Germany was going to be treated as an economic unit. One odd problem arose—namely how the American zone was to be represented at a conference of which the United States is not a member.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267612

THIS DOCUMENT IS THE PROPERTY OF HIS BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT

SECRET

17345

L 5022/6/405

This document is SECRET: as such it is intended for the personal information of authorised recipients only and must on no account be communicated in whole or in part to anyone else

Weekly Political Intelligence Summary
No. 404

FOREIGN OFFICE,
(RESEARCH DEPARTMENT),
13TH AUGUST, 1947

Copy No. 143

CONTENTS

The passages side-lined in black are GUARD

	Page
Europe—
Germany	1
Austria	2
Czechoslovakia	3
Poland	4
Soviet Union	5
Low Countries	6
France	8
Switzerland	10
Spain	11
Europe (contd.)—
Italy	12
South-Eastern Europe	12
Middle East	15
Far East	19
United States	21
Latin America	23
United Nations	24

EUROPE

GERMANY

The British and U.S. Governments informed the French Government on the 9th August that they agreed to a meeting without delay between representatives of the three countries in order to consider French views on the revised level-of-industry plan for Germany already agreed by the British and U.S. Governments. The French views on the management and control of the Ruhr coal would be similarly received and discussed. It was made clear in the U.S. note that the final plan for the level-of-industry would be formulated and adopted by the British and U.S. Governments, i.e., that French agreement would not be indispensable. The talks will be conducted below Ministerial level. Meanwhile, the Anglo-U.S. talks on German coal production are due to open in Washington on 12th August. A view expressed by the State Department is that the United States will wish to express their views on how ownership, that is to say "socialisation," may affect production, but that they will not expect a final decision on this subject at the conference.

The Soviet-controlled German Press has taken the line that Great Britain, as the economic vassal of the United States, will not be able to stand up to U.S. pressure over the Ruhr. More interesting is the faithful if somewhat pallid reproduction in the Soviet-controlled press of Russian propaganda on the British economic crisis: the only way out for Britain, it is said, is to follow the advice of Mr. Zilliacus and the Labour rebels, "now comprising one-third of all Labour M.P.'s," and to "free Britain from the clutches of dollar imperialism by improving trade relations with Eastern and South-Eastern Europe, and putting an end to the General Staff policy, which makes the British troops in Greece the vanguard of a U.S. policy shaped by the Truman doctrine."

The topic of socialisation, though far from dead, is not as alive in North Rhine/Westphalia as might have been expected. On the 2nd August, the North Rhine/Westphalian Diet agreed to remit to an

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Economic Committee for study a Social Democrat Draft Law for the transfer of coal mines to Land ownership. It is interesting that the Social Democrats seem to have come out for Land as opposed to Central ownership: they may realise that a majority for socialisation might not be forthcoming in the Bi-Zonal Area as a whole. The Schleswig-Holstein Diet with a large Social Democrat majority is making the running in the demand for socialisation. On the 6th August, according to press reports, it passed a sweeping measure of socialisation of all basic industries, including utilities and transport. The principle of compensation was admitted. Schleswig-Holstein has also passed a measure providing for official recognition and payment of the "Leader of the Opposition" in the Land Diet. This practice, copied from the House of Commons, was hitherto unknown in Germany, and its introduction is a hopeful sign.

Quadripartite discussions in Berlin have long served as a means less of securing agreement than of elucidating Soviet policy. At the 132nd Co-ordinating Committee meeting on the 6th August, the British and U.S. members again pressed for the much-needed currency reform. Despite concessions on their part, they were rebuffed by the Soviet representative in such a way as to suggest that the Russians will accept no reform which limits their power to print as many notes as they wish. At the same meeting General Dratvin alleged that preparations were being made to incorporate the British and U.S. Sectors of Berlin in the Bi-Zonal Area. General Robertson, denying this, said that any attempt by the U.S.S.R. to include its Sector in the Soviet zone would be regarded as a violation of agreements. There is unfortunately some ground for issuing this warning.

Confidential information suggests that the flow of skilled labour, by deportation or otherwise, from the Soviet zone into the U.S.S.R., has not been checked. In the three months May–July upwards of 110,000 persons, including families, are estimated to have left for the U.S.S.R. Movement on this scale, if continued, must seriously affect the balance of the zone, though to nothing like the same extent as if the families were left behind.

Five delegates of the Communist-controlled "Free German Youth" have returned from a 17-day visit to Russia. They declared exuberantly that they were treated as "equals among equals," that they found no sign of dislike of the Germans, and that they had been able to go anywhere and see anything they wished. Owing to sickness, however, they had not been able to visit prisoner-of-war camps.

The slight improvement in the food situation in the British zone led to a small rise of morale towards the end of July. Actual rations for the town-dweller, however, have not yet reached the nominal 1,550 calorie level, and conditions continue depressing in the extreme. Germans are reported to be becoming increasingly casual when speaking to British officials.

The wrangle still continues between Christian Democrats and Social Democrats over positions in the Bi-Zonal Economic organisation. Summary No. 402 described how the Social Democrats retired into "constructive opposition" when they were unable to secure for one of their nominees the key post of Director of Economics. As a result the Christian Democrats will secure all the Directorships. Both General Clay and General Robertson have decided that, unfortunate as this political squabbling may be, intervention by the Allies would be even more unfortunate. Meanwhile the Social Democrat leader, Dr. Schumacher, has at least declared that the SPD approves of the Economic Council despite its many minor blemishes.

AUSTRIA

With the Austrian Treaty Commission in full session, and the question of reparation claims from German oil assets in Austria still under discussion, the Soviet Authorities on the 2nd August forcibly assumed control of the premises of the Austrian Mineral Oil Works Company Refinery at Lobau (Soviet zone). This company is jointly owned by two British and U.S. corporations through their German subsidiaries. Leading employees of the company were dismissed and all communication with the company's head office in Vienna was cut off. Both the British and U.S. High Commissioners have protested to the Soviet High Commissioner, and the matter was also brought up by the British Delegate at the Treaty Commission's meeting on the 6th August. The Soviet authorities have sought to justify their unilateral action on the basis of Article 10 of Law No. 5 of the Control Council for Germany. The British and U.S. High Commissioners have pointed out that the Law provides no justification for the seizure of the Lobau installations, and in any case it cannot be contended that reparations can be taken from property in Austria, which is in joint British-U.S. beneficial ownership. It is understood that the ownership of the boilers used in the refinery is in the name of a Leipzig firm. There have also been unconfirmed rumours of the seizure by the Soviet authorities of four textile factories owned by the Creditanstalt.

In contrast to this unilateral Soviet action, which seems to cut directly across the purpose of the Treaty Commission's discussions, there have recently been one or two instances of an apparently favourable change in Soviet policy in Austria. At the Austrian Treaty Commission's meeting on the 4th August, M. Novikov took up a surprisingly conciliatory attitude and appeared to be anxious to give the impression that, so long as the Soviet Government received some concrete reparation, a reasonable agreement could be achieved. A couple of days later, after an interview with Sir George Rendel, M. Novikov expressed his readiness to discuss the oil problem informally with the British Delegate with a view to seeing how best agreement could be reached in the Commission. Prior to this, however, the British Delegate found it necessary once more to reassure M. Novikov of his Government's appreciation of the Soviet Union's claim to reparation from Germany and also that the United Kingdom had no intention of defending any unsound British claims.

The Commission has also discussed questions concerning banking institutions, insurance companies, industrial concerns and real estate. Reports show that the Soviet authorities in Austria have taken over some 34,000 hectares of agricultural land and some 56,000 hectares of forest land. Of about 260 confiscated industrial undertakings, 60 are considered of special importance to the Austrian economy; in 18 of these, 100 per cent. of the shares were German-owned on the 8th May, 1945, and Germans had a controlling interest in a further 25 of these concerns. Six—including the Unilever concern which was confiscated at the end of 1946—bear no indication of being in any way German assets.

At the meeting of the Allied Executive Committee on the 9th August the Soviet member took the initiative in re-opening the question of the creation of an Austrian Office for Civil Aviation. He has hitherto maintained an uncompromising opposition to any such move, insisting that firm, quadripartite evidence of the completion of Austrian disarmament must first be presented. Another major change in Soviet policy was revealed at the same meeting in a Soviet resolution on the wages and prices policy of the Austrian Government. All four occupying Powers are now agreed that full responsibility for this policy rests with the Austrian Government.

The new rate of wages and prices came into force on the 10th August. According to British press reports rents have gone up by 50 per cent., and coal by 35 per cent. The new wage schedule is said to be working out to the disadvantage of the salaried classes. There is considerable doubt as to the permanence of the new rate, the stability of which must depend on a real and substantial increase in the production of consumer goods. It is generally regarded as a stop-gap device to tide over the next three months until a reform of the currency can be tackled.

Following on the alarm and uncertainty caused by the recent kidnappings, a stir has been created by the publication of the news of the arrest, in April, of two Austrian police officials by the Soviet occupation authorities. According to reports in the U.S.-controlled press and radio, the policemen fired at a drunken man who had broken into the house of an Austrian family. The man, who was not in uniform, turned out to be a member of the Soviet army. The policemen are said to have been sentenced to ten years' penal servitude in Siberia. The Austrian Minister of the Interior is investigating the matter.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA

Certain prominence has been given recently to the possibilties of concluding a Franco-Czechoslovak Treaty of Alliance. The French Government pledged themselves to renew their pre-war ties with Czechoslovakia, and both countries found themselves more or less in agreement over certain aspects of the German problem. On the other hand, the Quai d'Orsay was aware of the reluctance of the Foreign Office to support the conclusion of military pacts with the countries within the Soviet orbit, albeit M. Bidault found it politic for internal reasons for a certain period to

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Economic Committee for study a Social Democrat Draft Law for the transfer of coal mines to Land ownership. It is interesting that the Social Democrats seem to have come out for Land as opposed to Central ownership: they may realise that a majority for socialisation might not be forthcoming in the Bi-Zonal Area as a whole. The Schleswig-Holstein Diet with a large Social Democrat majority is making the running in the demand for socialisation. On the 6th August, according to press reports, it passed a sweeping measure of socialisation of all basic industries, including utilities and transport. The principle of compensation was admitted. Schleswig-Holstein has also passed a measure providing for official recognition and payment of the "Leader of the Opposition" in the Land Diet. This practice, copied from the House of Commons, was hitherto unknown in Germany, and its introduction is a hopeful sign.

Quadripartite discussions in Berlin have long served as a means less of securing agreement than of elucidating Soviet policy. At the 132nd Co-ordinating Committee meeting on the 6th August, the British and U.S. members again pressed for the much-needed currency reform. Despite concessions on their part, they were rebuffed by the Soviet representative in such a way as to suggest that the Russians will accept no reform which limits their power to print as many notes as they wish. At the same meeting General Dratvin alleged that preparations were being made to incorporate the British and U.S. Sectors of Berlin in the Bi-Zonal Area. General Robertson, denying this, said that any attempt by the U.S.S.R. to include its Sector in the Soviet zone would be regarded as a violation of agreements. There is unfortunately some ground for issuing this warning.

Confidential information suggests that the flow of skilled labour, by deportation or otherwise, from the Soviet zone into the U.S.S.R., has not been checked. In the three months May–July upwards of 110,000 persons, including families, are estimated to have left for the U.S.S.R. Movement on this scale, if continued, must seriously affect the balance of the zone, though to nothing like the same extent as if the families were left behind.

Five delegates of the Communist-controlled "Free German Youth" have returned from a 17-day visit to Russia. They declared exuberantly that they were treated as "equals among equals," that they found no sign of dislike of the Germans, and that they had been able to go anywhere and see anything they wished. Owing to sickness, however, they had not been able to visit prisoner-of-war camps.

The slight improvement in the food situation in the British zone led to a small rise of morale towards the end of July. Actual rations for the town-dweller, however, have not yet reached the nominal 1,550 calorie level, and conditions continue depressing in the extreme. Germans are reported to be becoming increasingly casual when speaking to British officials.

The wrangle still continues between Christian Democrats and Social Democrats over positions in the Bi-Zonal Economic organisation. Summary No. 402 described how the Social Democrats retired into "constructive opposition" when they were unable to secure for one of their nominees the key post of Director of Economics. As a result the Christian Democrats will secure all the Directorships. Both General Clay and General Robertson have decided that, unfortunate as this political squabbling may be, intervention by the Allies would be even more unfortunate. Meanwhile the Social Democrat leader, Dr. Schumacher, has at least declared that the SPD approves of the Economic Council despite its many minor blemishes.

AUSTRIA

With the Austrian Treaty Commission in full session, and the question of reparation claims from German oil assets in Austria still under discussion, the Soviet Authorities on the 2nd August forcibly assumed control of the premises of the Austrian Mineral Oil Works Company Refinery at Lobau (Soviet zone). This company is jointly owned by two British and U.S. corporations through their German subsidiaries. Leading employees of the company were dismissed and all communication with the company's head office in Vienna was cut off. Both the British and U.S. High Commissioners have protested to the Soviet High Commissioner, and the matter was also brought up by the British Delegate at the Treaty Commission's meeting on the 6th August. The Soviet authorities have sought to justify their unilateral action on the basis of Article 10 of Law No. 5 of the Control Council for Germany. The British and U.S. High Commissioners have pointed out that the Law provides no justification for the seizure of the Lobau installations, and in any case it cannot be contended that reparations can be taken from property in Austria, which is in joint British-U.S. beneficial ownership. It is understood that the ownership of the boilers used in the refinery is in the name of a Leipzig firm. There have also been unconfirmed rumours of the seizure by the Soviet authorities of four textile factories owned by the Creditanstalt.

In contrast to this unilateral Soviet action, which seems to cut directly across the purpose of the Treaty Commission's discussions, there have recently been one or two instances of an apparently favourable change in Soviet policy in Austria. At the Austrian Treaty Commission's meeting on the 4th August, M. Novikov took up a surprisingly conciliatory attitude and appeared to be anxious to give the impression that, so long as the Soviet Government received some concrete reparation, a reasonable agreement could be achieved. A couple of days later, after an interview with Sir George Rendel, M. Novikov expressed his readiness to discuss the oil problem informally with the British Delegate with a view to seeing how best agreement could be reached in the Commission. Prior to this, however, the British Delegate found it necessary once more to reassure M. Novikov of his Government's appreciation of the Soviet Union's claim to reparation from Germany and also that the United Kingdom had no intention of defending any unsound British claims.

The Commission has also discussed questions concerning banking institutions, insurance companies, industrial concerns and real estate. Reports show that the Soviet authorities in Austria have taken over some 34,000 hectares of agricultural land and some 56,000 hectares of forest land. Of about 260 confiscated industrial undertakings, 60 are considered of special importance to the Austrian economy; in 18 of these, 100 per cent. of the shares were German-owned on the 8th May, 1945, and Germans had a controlling interest in a further 25 of these concerns. Six—including the Unilever concern which was confiscated at the end of 1946—bear no indication of being in any way German assets.

At the meeting of the Allied Executive Committee on the 9th August the Soviet member took the initiative in re-opening the question of the creation of an Austrian Office for Civil Aviation. He has hitherto maintained an uncompromising opposition to any such move, insisting that firm, quadripartite evidence of the completion of Austrian disarmament must first be presented. Another major change in Soviet policy was revealed at the same meeting in a Soviet resolution on the wages and prices policy of the Austrian Government. All four occupying Powers are now agreed that full responsibility for this policy rests with the Austrian Government.

The new rate of wages and prices came into force on the 10th August. According to British press reports rents have gone up by 50 per cent., and coal by 35 per cent. The new wage schedule is said to be working out to the disadvantage of the salaried classes. There is considerable doubt as to the permanence of the new rate, the stability of which must depend on a real and substantial increase in the production of consumer goods. It is generally regarded as a stop-gap device to tide over the next three months until a reform of the currency can be tackled.

Following on the alarm and uncertainty caused by the recent kidnappings, a stir has been created by the publication of the news of the arrest, in April, of two Austrian police officials by the Soviet occupation authorities. According to reports in the U.S.-controlled press and radio, the policemen fired at a drunken man who had broken into the house of an Austrian family. The man, who was not in uniform, turned out to be a member of the Soviet army. The policemen are said to have been sentenced to ten years' penal servitude in Siberia. The Austrian Minister of the Interior is investigating the matter.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA

Certain prominence has been given recently to the possibilties of concluding a Franco-Czechoslovak Treaty of Alliance. The French Government pledged themselves to renew their pre-war ties with Czechoslovakia, and both countries found themselves more or less in agreement over certain aspects of the German problem. On the other hand, the Quai d'Orsay was aware of the reluctance of the Foreign Office to support the conclusion of military pacts with the countries within the Soviet orbit, albeit M. Bidault found it politic for internal reasons for a certain period to

REPEAT
REPETER

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

show greater interest in a pact with Czechoslovakia. The Czechoslovak Government, particularly with the eloquence of M. Jan Masaryk to persuade them, had apparently decided that a pact with France would be desirable in view of their avowed policy of strengthening relations with both the east and west.

Agency reports, quoted by the papers of the Czech right-wing parties who are naturally most interested in the matter, state that on the 26th July M. Bidault was accused by M. Pierre Cot of trying to prevent the conclusion of an agreement between the two countries, to which M. Bidault had replied that he had offered such a treaty to Czechoslovakia on the 1st June, as well as a similar one to Poland early in July. Prague had so far not replied. According to Agence France Presse, M. Masaryk thereupon sent a telegram to M. Bidault asking that the Czechoslovak attitude might still wait, that his Government and Parliament were on vacation until September, and that it would be a grave error to attribute the Czech request to a change in policy, the will of his country to conclude a treaty of mutual assistance with France remaining undiminished. It should be stated, however, that M. Masaryk told the British Ambassador in Prague, after returning from the Moscow meeting, when Czechoslovakia finally decided not to join the Paris conference on the Marshall offer, that the French pact would not now, at least for some time, be proceeded with. The prospects of such a pact being concluded have therefore receded somewhat, although M. Masaryk said that the Russians were less opposed to the pact than to the Czech attendance at the Paris Conference.

A Trade and Payments Agreement was signed in Prague at the end of July between the Combined Anglo-American Zones of Germany and Czechoslovakia. This agreement will do much to ease the financial difficulties experienced in their relations with the Zones which resulted from the Czechs' shortage of dollars. A comprehensive list of goods has been drawn up, and such questions as patent rights, travel communications, and goods transit, are satisfactorily settled.

The constitutional problem still remains one of the thorniest in the internal affairs of Czechoslovakia. Obviously few political leaders wish to be too definite about the crucial issue of Czecho-Slovak relationships, or the equally fundamental one of how far the liberal-democratic traditions of the old Masaryk Constitution can be preserved under Communist pressure. A meeting of lawyers and constitutional experts held at Marianské Lázné to consider certain questions put to them by the Assembly's Constitutional Committee left these basic questions unsolved, if perhaps a little more fully explored.

It is reported by Czechoslovak authorities that frost and drought in the spring, followed by mainly dry weather this summer, will result in a scanty grain harvest in Slovakia, where special steps are being taken to maintain the flour ration. Slovakia is also reported to be asking for a larger proportion of the Russian grain imports promised under the Trade Agreement signed last month in Moscow.

POLAND

The remarkable achievements in reconstruction witnessed in Poland since the close of hostilities, and recognisable in production figures and in the statistics of overseas trade, have been recently acknowledged by expert observers. As regards the Three-Year Plan, it is claimed that the targets set for the first six months have been surpassed in the output of all the basic industries, including coal, iron and steel, chemicals, timber and building. Although these, and the official estimate of 4·58 million tons of coal for June 1947 must probably be accepted with reserve, it is interesting to compare that figure with the 3·53 million tons for the same month last year. Preliminary reports of the July output claim that the 5 million mark has been exceeded.

The official termination on the 30th June of the activities of the UNRRA Mission to Poland recalls the part played by that organisation in post-war reconstruction. In its scope the programme of UNRRA aid for Poland was second only to that for China. During the two years which ended on the 30th June the value of UNRRA goods amounted to over 480 million dollars, of which approximately 203 million accounted for food, 95 million for industrial aid, 82 million for clothing, textiles and shoes, 76 million for agricultural aid, and 23 million dollars for medicines. The Polish Government, it is considered, are entitled to praise for the judicious manner in which the materials were used, and for the fact that the black market in goods bearing the UNRRA label was mainly restricted to articles of minor importance.

On the 2nd August, M. Gomulka opened the Gdansk International Fair. In his speech at Danzig, the Minister seized the opportunity to stress the great progress made in Poland, in particular the revival of the ports and Poland's international trade. He referred also to his Government's decision not to take part in the present Paris talks on the Marshall offer. That their decision was justified, M. Gomulka held, was proved by the recent action of the State Department in discontinuing aid to Poland after receiving the report of Colonel Harrison (see Summary No. 403). This was particularly true, the Minister said, in view of the fact that the report acknowledged Poland's great achievements—which were also to the advantage of Europe as a whole.

A tour of Northern and Eastern Poland recently carried out by M. Holliday, the Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy, who reported that as a result of frost and drought the wheat crop in particular will be a light one, and helps to confirm the view that Colonel Harrison's conclusion—that Poland had sufficient food-stuffs generally to meet its minimum requirements for 1947—was accurate only if applied to the calendar year 1947, and not the harvest year 1947–48. Some improvement, especially in the potato crop, was, however, brought about by the heavy rainfall in June.

As evidence of Poland's desire to enter into reciprocal relations with the Western countries, the Government are pointing to the trade negotiations recently opened with France. A joint communiqué issued in Paris on the 1st August prepares the way for the conclusion of a trade agreement covering the exchange of Polish coal against French capital and other goods. At the same time, Warsaw has denied reports emanating from Hamburg that there was any intention of linking the Soviet Zone of Germany any more closely with Poland than is the case already under the Agreement concluded last March.

The political murder by a group of armed bands, of a prominent member of the Socialist Party (P.P.S.), M. Zeglicki, Governor of Lomza, while addressing a local gathering of sheriffs—and with him a member of the pro-Government Peasant Party (S.L.)—is reported to be giving rise to some alarm among members of the P.P.S. The action is held to be a warning from the underground organisations to the Socialists against fusion with the Communists (P.P.R.), and a reply to the latest series of arrests and trials. (See also Summary No. 402). The trial of 17 prominent Poles, including a number of University professors and the former secretary of M. Mikolajczyk Party (P.S.L.) was due to open in Cracow on the 11th August. On the 5th, the Warsaw Regional Court passed sentence on M. Augustynski, editor of the P.S.L. Gazeta Ludowa, Father Pawlina, secretary of the Catholic Relief organisation, Caritas, and M. Maciejec, a former security official; they received sentences of 15 years' imprisonment, 10 years' imprisonment, and the death sentence respectively. Maciejec was convicted of having collected secret information and passing it through Pawlina to Augustynski, who maintained contacts with the illegal organisations, W.I.N. and W.R.N. M. Mikolajczyk and other prominent members of P.S.L. were stated to have received secret information in this way. Meanwhile, in the last few weeks, there have been appearing frequent notices of joint meetings of members of the P.P.R. and the P.P.S. in a number of provincial centres.

SOVIET UNION

The Soviet press, giving rein to wishful thinking, continues to harp on the impending slump in the U.S.A. Academician Varga in an authoritative article in Pravda even suggests that it has already begun. Meanwhile increased attention is being devoted to Great Britain's economic crisis, but nothing new in the way of comment has emerged. Krasny Flot suggested that it would be possible for this country to save herself by her own efforts but held that the Government would not take the necessary measures to this end, as they were unwilling to sacrifice the interests of the ruling class by breaking up the economic structure of the country. They preferred to rely on foreign support, but, instead of making the fullest use of that support and devoting the American loan to the modernisation of industry, they had spent it largely on the financing of foreign obligations. Viktorov, in Pravda, took the line that the U.S.A., both by the actual conditions of the loan and by its general policy, had prevented Great Britain from using it in the way that her interests demanded. Mr. Churchill's Blenheim speech was dismissed as the wielding of an ideological tomahawk of the 1919 type. All commentators pointed the moral that Britain's situation was a warning to all nations who were wistfully looking towards the Marshall plan. If a Great Power should come to such a pass when hitched to the American chariot, what would happen to small countries? It was suggested in most of the comment that the British working class was going to bear the main share of the burden. The plight

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

of the British workers was further elaborated in New Times, which published a detailed refutation of an article in Britansky Soiuznik which had suggested that the lot of the British workers had materially improved. New Times admitted that there had been an advance in technology, such an advance as could be traced even in the Fiji Islands, but said that in the main the British working man was being sapped by under-nourishment and was in a worse state than at the beginning of the century.

The thirtieth anniversary of the sixth Congress of the Bolshevik Party which took place in 1917 at the culminating point of the Revolution provided the occasion for drawing historical parallels for the present "export of reaction" from the West, loans to the Tsar in 1906 and American financial aid to Kerensky being given as notable examples. Stalin, in 1917, had agreed that the West also sent out Socialist rays, but it was now clear that these had changed their direction and to-day Socialist rays came from the East.

The Council of the post-war organisation of concentration camp victims known as the International Federation of Former Political Prisoners has just been meeting in Warsaw, seventeen States being represented. Tass has given a long report of the appeal that was issued to all democratic countries which had fought the Fascist aggressors to intensify the struggle against the remnants of Fascism. The appeal, which was on stereotyped lines, called in particular for the cessation of Anglo-American "intervention" in Greece and for the ending of the conflicts in China, Indonesia and Indochina. It also endorsed current Soviet propaganda to the effect that the Marshall plan was a step on the road to the resurgence of German militarism. Other international organisations in which the U.S.S.R. has shown interest recently are the International Congress of Democratic Lawyers held in Brussels in July, in which the Roumanian Communist Minister of Justice was a prominent speaker and the International Architects' Conference, also held in Belgium. The Soviet delegate to the latter expressed pity for the poor Belgian architects who, in contrast to their Soviet colleagues, had no real freedom for creative work. The Soviet delegate was said to have brought about the insertion of clauses into the statutes of the organisation giving it a "democratic character."

Aviation Day on the 3rd August was celebrated in the usual style but a notable new feature was the display of several new types of aircraft; last year hardly any new types were seen. Seven different types of jet propelled aircraft including a four-engined bomber were shown, and various aerobatics were executed by jet aircraft. The trend of the designs showed strong German influence. It had evidently been decided that the advantages of impressing foreign countries with Soviet airpower outweighed the usual desire for secrecy.

The Council of Ministers has decided that the existing system for collecting and supplying seed grain has become unsatisfactory and that in future the collective farms themselves shall bear the entire responsibility for growing and distributing seed. Apparently certain local Party and Government administrations have been abusing the facilities offered by Gosstrakhfond, which was created some years ago to secure a supply of high quality seed for collective farms, instead of speeding up the creation of seed funds by the farms themselves. Gossortfond, the State Fund for special types of seeds, is to be reformed and incorporated in the Ministry of Agricultural Deliveries, so that improved grades of seed may be gradually introduced on collective farms "exclusively by way of exchange."

The Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. has decorated Col.-General Enver Hoxha with the Order of Suvorov for his capable command of military operations by the Albanian Army against Germany and Italy. This is a relatively minor award to be given to a head of State. Tito received the Order of Victory and Dimitrov the Order of Lenin.

THE LOW COUNTRIES

The Netherlands

Last week Dr. van Vredenburch, Political Director of the Netherlands Foreign Office, who happened to be in London, discussed the Australian and Indian action in referring the Indonesian dispute to the Security Council. It was explained to him that this was not a step which would have been advocated by H.M.G., who had pointed out its disadvantages to the Australian and Indian Governments, adding that these disadvantages appeared to H.M.G. to be greater if Chapter VII rather than Chapter VI of the Charter were invoked. Dr. van Vredenburch was told that it would thus be misleading to construe the Australian Prime Minister's statement that Australian reference to the Security Council had been made "after the closest consultation with the Govts. of the U.K., New Zealand and India" as implying anything more than the statement actually said. The fact was that, when there was no response from the U.S. Govt. to H.M.G.'s proposal for joint mediation, the latter no longer felt justified in attempting further to dissuade the Australian and Indian Governments from referring the dispute to the Security Council. Dr. van Vredenburch has himself made informal comment on the subject. The failure of the U.S. Government promptly to give effect to their mediation offer appears to have depressed him: in his view delay could only lead to further trouble in the Security Council. He expressed the hope that the U.S. Government might see their way to appointing someone of the calibre of General Eisenhower, assisted by a large team, would carry out an investigation on the spot with a view to restoring order. He still, however, looked with favour upon the five-Power investigating Commission (Canada, Brazil, Sweden, China and Saudi Arabia) suggested by his own Government. Dr. van Mook objected to the inclusion of China on the ground of her partiality, and also wanted the Commission to consist of three Powers only, which Dr. van Vredenburch thought too few.

A Netherlands Government statement, outlining the steps to be taken following the end of hostilities in Indonesia, was issued on the 12th August. After a preamble in which the reasons which "compelled" the Government "to make a police use of its military power" are briefly restated, the statement goes on: "The Netherlands Government are again faced with the question of how they are to achieve their object in Indonesia by peaceful means. This aim is known. It is not by any means a return to any kind of Colonial relationship. It is none other than the execution of the right of self-determination granted and accepted by the Government as the basis of their policy. It is none other than the reconstruction of the old Netherlands Indies into a new Indonesia—a sovereign, democratic and federal State, a self-reliant member of the United Nations." The essential prerequisite was the restoration of law and order, to which end Indonesia needed an "efficient police apparatus." The Government reiterated their willingness to reduce the numbers of their troops as soon as the "efficient police apparatus" was capable of "guaranteeing law and order." Lest there should be the "slightest doubt" about their willingness to create the "sovereign, democratic, federal State" in Indonesia, the Government, "in preparation for this State, and during the necessary period of transition," offered the immediate formation of an "Indonesian Federal Interim Government, in which representatives of the various participating States—including the minorities which are still insufficiently represented—would co-operate with the Lieutenant-Governor-General." They had already reached an "important measure of agreement" on this proposal both with the Governments of the Republic and of the other Indonesian participating States—East Indonesia and West Borneo. The Netherlands Government now repeated the offer to "all participating States and population groups in Indonesia." It was the Netherlands Government's intention that this Interim Government should, "for the time being," also administer areas occupied in recent weeks. The previously-mentioned "police apparatus" would be subordinated to the Interim Government which, "as soon as possible," would have to establish federal organisations to ensure food supplies and the "economic, monetary and commercial unity" of Indonesia. The formation of the Interim Government would "in no way" retard the finding of a "permanent solution": the intention was to convene, "at the shortest possible notice" a "Round Table Conference" for consultations on the final establishment of the new Indonesian political structure. Since that was their chief aim—not the "ironing out of a difference"—it followed that a solution could be "promoted by good offices, but not by arbitration between the Netherlands and the Republic."

Belgo-Netherlands-Luxembourg Customs Union

The Netherlands First Chamber unanimously approved Benelux (Belgo-Netherlands-Luxembourg Customs Union) on the 31st July.

Belgium

M. Moens de Fernig, Minister of Food and Imports, in a recent broadcast to the nation, strongly warned his audience against taking too optimistic a view of the present position of Belgian food supplies, and reminded them of the agreement reached at the International Cereals Conference that the participating Governments should "use all possible means of educating public opinion on the seriousness of the position." Agriculturists, upon whose co-operation they depended for

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

the success of the "grain collection plan," and manufacturers, who were "concerned about restrictions," alike had to realize the "very serious situation which existed." It was also of "prime importance" that consumers should understand that the retention of a rationing system was "entirely due to the world situation, of which the consequences were universal and did not affect a few countries only." For "some months" past, the Minister continued, Belgium had been living in a state of "apparent plenty," which made the public "sceptical" about the "serious problems" of world food supplies. Five main commodities—cereals, meat, fats, sugar and cocoa—were at present still rationed. No improvement in the supply of cereals could be expected before the 1948 harvest; and meat supplies were conditioned by fodder supplies. Cereals and meat, therefore, presented twin problems: neither could be solved separately. Another great difficulty was the supply of fats, which would have to be increased by nearly 40 per cent. if demand were to be satisfied. This the Minister did not think would happen "in the next year or two."

M. Moens de Fernig then outlined a series of measures aimed at reducing consumption of cereals. In the current year not only wheat, but also rye, would fall within the scope of official collections. Rye would be exchanged for an equal weight of fodder and hay; wheat-growers would receive a priority coupon for fodder and hay equal to half the weight of the wheat delivered in excess of their quota; while meat coupons would be given in exchange for barley at the rate of 4 kg. of barley to 1 kg. of meat. In addition, the use of cereals would be strictly controlled. They could not tolerate the action of certain millers, bakers and confectioners who milled and used white flour and sold their products "to the detriment of part of the public"; nor could they tolerate the sale of bread "more often than not baked with black-market flour"—to any who cared to buy it without surrendering bread coupons. It was of the utmost importance that Belgium, depending as she did almost entirely upon imported bread-grains, should conform to the recommendations of the Cereals Conference; and he relied upon all concerned to see that the "discipline demanded by the common interest" was maintained.

The latest report on the food situation shews that, for the month of August, the butter and meat rations are reduced from 400 g. to 350 g. and 1,800 g. to 1,500 g., respectively. On the other hand, chocolate, horse meat, condensed and evaporated milk, and infant foods are now unrationed. Subsidies on bread, butter, margarine, lard, milk, beef, pork, table oil, tinned salmon and chocolate were abolished on the 1st August. The difference in price between the official rationed quantities, with and without the subsidies of these commodities, is to form the basis of compensation for consumers classed as "economically weak," payable at the rate of 62 francs per month for each member of the household, with further compensation for those entitled to supplementary rations. Controls affecting the meat and milk trades are to be relaxed considerably: on the sale of some meats (e.g., mutton and horse meat), controls have disappeared. Nevertheless, since the 1st August, the Food Minister has introduced two meatless days in all restaurants (the serving of poultry and feathered game is exempted from the order), with heavy penalties for contravention, including immediate closure of the offending restaurant for three months.

FRANCE

His Majesty's Government were particularly concerned to meet the French request for immediate discussions about the revised level of industry in the Anglo-American zones of Germany, lest the French should insist on tangling the matter up with the technical assessments of European resources being prepared at the Paris Conference. The State Department was duly informed of our views.

The Chargé d'Affaires at the French Embassy in London made it clear, when he called at the Foreign Office on the 8th August, that France would not be satisfied with the proposal for a preliminary exchange of views in writing on this question. Later he conveyed more formal representations to the same effect. With this attitude H.M. Government were disposed to sympathize. French pertinacity eventually had its reward in the U.S. decision, on the 9th August, in agreement with H.M.G., to hold tripartite conversations on the plans relating to the level of German industry and the management and control of the Ruhr mines (see under "Germany").

The joint recommendation of the Employers' Federation and the C.G.T. (see Summaries 401 and 403) for a general increase in wages of 11 per cent. was rejected by the French Cabinet on the 6th August, mainly on the ground that a general increase in prices would follow. Such a development would aggravate the inflationary tendencies which the Government are striving to check, and at the same time render illusory the gain in wages. M. Ramadier's attitude at his Press conference was conciliatory, however, and he suggested that before long "necessary measures" would be announced to settle the problems arising out of the disparity between wages and prices. He declared, moreover, that only "legal" salaries could be taken as the basis for increases—i.e., excluding bonuses and similar additions. The rejection is likely to have both economic and political repercussions, for the C.G.T.'s disappointment can hardly fail to be tinged with political animus. It is admitted that certain controlled prices are out of proportion to the cost of production, and decrees fixing new figures are said to be in preparation. [The agreement had recommended a complete overhaul of price-fixing machinery, and insisted that controls should be restricted to the necessities of the working classes, and to goods for export and for the reconstruction programme. In other cases they should lapse altogether.]

The question of devaluing the franc is again being discussed in the French Press, with the proviso that such a measure would be advantageous only if planned on an international basis with new levels being fixed for the world currencies.

The Communist reaction to General de Gaulle's speech at Rennes (see Summary 402) has been as violent as might have been expected. L'Humanité published a whole-page refutation of the General's attacks on the French Communist Party and the U.S.S.R. This was followed by a series of articles comparing the General with Colonel de la Rocque, and accusing him of wanting to split France into factions. Speeches on similar lines were made over the week-end of the 2nd–3rd August by MM. Thorez at Digne, Duclos at Bordeaux and Marty at Lyon. Except for the groups of the extreme Right, the other parties received the speech with reserve or even disapproval. It certainly appears to have increased the hostility between the Rassemblement du Peuple français and the Communists.

The R.P.F. have requested that a public place in Paris should be made available for a speech by General de Gaulle on the 5th October, which would be his first public speech in Paris itself since the inception of the movement. The initial reactions of the municipal authorities have been favourable.

The situation remains virtually unchanged at Port-de-Bouc (see Summaries 401, 402 and 403), where the Jews transferred from the "President Warfield" to three British transports still refuse to land. It has been suggested that the immigrants are perhaps afraid of molestation by anti-Jewish organisations if they disembark voluntarily. Haganah issued a communiqué in Paris on the 9th August announcing that while the "President Warfield" was at Haifa, Haganah in Palestine got in touch with some of their members who are among the passengers, and that, as a result of their exhortations, all the passengers have sworn not to disembark from the transports in any circumstances. Press representatives, including four Jews, visited the transports on the 5th August, and are believed to have been impressed by the good relations which appeared to exist.

On the 5th August, M. Bousquet informed H.M. Embassy that the Ministry of Foreign Affairs were greatly perturbed by the continued ill effect on Anglo-French relations of the failure to find a solution to the problem. He also mentioned in strict confidence that the Ministry of the Interior had requested the Ministry of Foreign Affairs to ask for the immediate withdrawal of the vessels now at Port-de-Bouc. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs, he said, meant to refuse this request, but were anxious to suggest some definite plan to induce the immigrants to land and so to break the present deadlock.

It is now reported that two cases of measles have broken out among the children on the "Empire Rival," and that the Minister of Population was anxious for the children to be evacuated. It was hoped that the disembarkation of the children might induce a large number of the parents to follow.

By the 10th August it was reported that 129 Jews had left the transports, and that of these 59 had been sent to hospital, while the remainder had been accommodated in a camp.

Two measures are under debate in the somewhat stormy Parliamentary session due to end this week—the new statute for Algeria and a law on the introduction of proportional representation into municipal elections in the larger towns. On the latter, M. Ramadier, faced with combined opposition from the M.R.P. and the Communists, on the 8th August raised the question of confidence. The vote took place on the 11th and resulted in 404 in his

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267621

favour and 184 against, the latter figure being made up largely of Communists. The M.R.P. spokesman in the Chamber stated that, while the party remained faithful to its ideas on the electoral law, they admitted that " account must be taken of the general situation in taking up a political position." They had decided to vote for the confidence motion, but the decision had been taken in difficult circumstances. M. Ramadier thanked the M.R.P. for putting before its own ideas " the feeling of the unity of Government." In other words, the main objects are evidently to keep out the Communists, maintain the continuity of Government, and see the Marshall Plan put into operation.

The new statute for Algeria—which, after protracted consideration by the Government, reached the Assembly earlier in the month, and has at last reached the Commission of the Interior—proposes to establish an Algerian Assembly of 90, elected in equal numbers by two colleges of voters. The first college would consist of those who possessed full citizenship before the war, with the addition of Moslems who have been admitted to it since the war on grounds of property, education or Army service. The great majority of voters in the first college are Europeans. The second college would consist of all Moslem voters not included in the first, and would be numerically many times the stronger of the two. It is here that the point of dissension arises—for if one electoral college were purely French and the other purely Moslem all could be well. But it is feared that the Assembly will be swamped with Moslem members, and that French sovereignty and French interests will go down before the onslaught of Moslem nationalism. New opposition and suspicion were aroused by certain suggested amendments put forward by the Commission of the Interior (apparently by a series of predominantly Communist-Socialist votes)—that the title of the Governor-General should be reduced to that of " representative "; that the franchise should be extended to include Moslem women; and that the two-thirds rule for the budget should be changed to one of a simple majority. These developments have resulted in the resignation of the M.R.P. deputy for Algiers, a change of front of the whole M.R.P., which had originally undertaken to vote for the Bill; a declaration by the President of the Council General of Algiers that if the statute is voted, even without the suggested amendments, 126 mayors and 22 councillors of the Departments of Algiers will resign. M. Ramadier has been anxious to get the statute passed before the present Parliamentary session ends on the 14th August, but in view of the delicate nature of the situation, whether considered from the point of view of Paris or of Algeria, it became more than a little doubtful whether it could be debated in the time. Accordingly, on the 11th August, the Commission of the Interior decided to recommend to the Assembly that it should postpone its holidays to make possible an immediate debate on the statute.

(See also under " Spain ")

SWITZERLAND

Madame Perón, wife of the President of the Argentine Republic, arrived in Switzerland on the 4th August. An official Swiss communiqué issued on the 29th July declared that as she had expressed the wish to visit their country, and as it had been ascertained from the Argentine authorities that the visit was an official one, the the Federal Council had invited her to be their guest in Berne, where problems relating to commercial exchanges between the two countries would be discussed.

Two incidents marred what otherwise appears to have been an amicable enough tour of the capital cities. At Lucerne two large stones were flung at the carriage in which were Madame Perón and M. Etter, President of the Swiss Confederation. The windows were broken, but no-one was injured. At Berne, as the official cars were passing through the city, a ripe tomato thrown at the visitor missed its mark and hit M. Petitpierre, the Swiss Foreign Minister. Police statements identified the Lucerne offender as a paranoiac suffering from schizophrenia who had been confined in asylums both in the Argentine and Switzerland and who apparently intended his attack to be an act of vengeance for his incarceration. The Berne tomato-throwers proved to be three members of the Parti du Travail (Communist). During a session on the 6th August the Federal Council condemned the " unpardonable actions " and expressed regret at behaviour so contrary to the traditions of Swiss hospitality.

In spite of all this, there are definite indications that Swiss opinion just now is extremely resentful of the high prices demanded for Argentine wheat, and in any case Madame Perón's visit must have been a little inopportune, coming as it did during the Federal Council holiday.

On the 5th August l'École d'Eté de la Fédération Mondiale des Associations pour les Nations Unies opened at Geneva for the study of new international institutions. Addressing the delegates from 25 countries Professor Victor Martin said that as it had taken the cantons of Switzerland considerably more than 500 years to recognise the necessity for surrendering unconditional sovereign power, it might reasonably be expected that a great deal of patience would be required for a similar solution of the international problem. This idea was taken up and elaborated by M. Jan Masaryk, Foreign Minister of Czechoslovakia, and President of the Fédération Mondiale des Associations pour les Nations Unies, who frankly admitted that he found it hard to wait on the course of events but that he had learned to have patience and hopes. He was convinced that in the long run the world would follow the example of Switzerland. For the United Nations supplied " the best, the most logical and the most democratic means for solving the problems of a world which, one must admit, had gone a little mad."

The Federal Department of Justice and Police announces the signing of an agreement abolishing visas between Switzerland and Lichtenstein, on the one hand and Denmark, on the other. This does not apply, however, to persons wishing to take up employment in the other country.

C267622

SPAIN

The second Republican all-party Government-in-exile, formed by Señor Llopis in February 1947, came to an end on the 6th August following the withdrawal of the Socialist members and other representatives of workers' organisations who are backing the former Minister of Defence, Indalecio Prieto, and the programme advocated by him at the recent Socialist Congress at Toulouse. Señor Prieto, despite ill-health, had made for the first time the journey from Mexico to France in order to lay before his fellow-Socialists a programme which does in effect involve a complete break with the past, the scrapping of the Government-in-exile and a new appeal to the United Nations Security Council when it re-assembles in September. In a broadcast to the Spanish underground made from Paris on the 9th August Señor Prieto communicated the decisions taken by the large group of the Socialist Party which acknowledges his leadership. There was to be no collaboration with the Communist Party in any shape or form, he said, until the Communists gave proof of a change in heart; the Socialist Party would vote for a Republic if there were elections or a plebiscite in Spain.

The decisions taken by the Congress under Señor Prieto's influence spring from the realisation (1) that no opposition Republican Government containing Communist representatives has any chance of coming to an agreement with the bulk of anti-Francoists inside Spain; (2) that the old slogan of " Republican legality " is outworn and should be discarded; and (3) that direction of the " Opposition " must in future come from inside Spain. In connexion with this third item the Resolution passed by the Congress to the effect that a commission should be set up to contact all opposition elements outside and inside Spain (with the exception of the Communists) was qualified by a proviso that the Socialist Party inside Spain must first give its blessing to such a commission.

The President, Señor Martínez Barrio, approached Señor Giral, Prime Minister of the first Government-in-exile, and asked him to form a new Government, but Señor Giral declined. Señor Martínez Barrio then invited Señor Don Carlos Pi i Suñer, the President of the Catalan National Council, to undertake the task, but he also declined.

When Señor Llopis selected his Government six months ago his aim had been to form a coalition Government which would be in line with the views of the Powers in the United Nations Organisation. But the hope that this show of unity among the Spanish Republican groups would merit official recognition and the active help of the United Nations Security Council was disappointed. Several of the more important groups represented in the late Republican Government are now prepared to come to a working arrangement with the Right on condition that no monarchist restoration will be effected without previous consultation of the Spanish people. They are in effect prepared to co-operate in any type of government which has the sanction of the people freely expressed in a national referendum. This is a big step forward. The fact that all the groups were not prepared to go so far was the main factor which brought about the collapse of the Llopis Government.

Señor Prieto would apparently base this new appeal to the United Nations on the urgent need to take action to remove General Franco and his Fascist Government. He would say in effect: " here we

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

have a "respectable" Opposition Government which you can safely support without risk of dividing Spain into two armed camps. More than this we Spaniards cannot do." He hopes that the United Nations would then be prepared to recommend economic sanctions against the Franco Government and he predicts that the Spanish problem could be quickly and completely solved if Great Britain and the United States were to break off commercial relations with Spain. Incidentally, in an interview given recently to the French left-wing Newspaper, Libération, Señor Prieto made the false allegation that the action of the French Government in closing their frontier with Spain had been taken as a result of a previous agreement with Great Britain and the United States who had then failed to fulfil their part of the bargain and were now profiting by the absence of French trade with Spain! He said that in his opinion France would be justified in re-opening the frontier, since without British and American support the French effort to impose economic sanctions was fruitless. France could not be expected to continue to make such a sacrifice alone.

ITALY

Further analysis of what happened in the Constituent Assembly on the final day of the debate on ratification of the Peace Treaty suggests that the final voting figures, 262 for the Government motion, 68 against, with 80 abstentions, give a misleading impression. Actually, the Government had its way by a much smaller majority. The battle really took place on a previous motion presented by Signor Corbino for postponement sine die of the decision, and this motion secured 204 votes as against 252 in support of the Government. There were no abstentions. 100 members of the Assembly were absent throughout the debate.

In the final vote the 68 were made up of Nenni Socialists, Uomo Qualunque party and the Liberals. The Communists elected to abstain, for tactical reasons presumably, with the idea of renewing their collaboration with the present Government, should the occasion arise before the elections, which are due to take place next spring. It is worth noting that Signor Nenni, on his side, has given public support to the Communists. In a leading article in Avanti on the 10th August he rejects recent suggestions from the left-wing of the Saragat Socialists and also from Signor Ignezio Silone for a reunited Socialist party and announced his faith in an election alliance with the Communists.

The press is talking again of a possible Cabinet reshuffle, since the ratification debate once more revealed the chancy nature of the Government's support. Thus the Qualunquists were on the Government side when this fourth De Gasperi Government came into office, but in spite of a special appeal from the Prime Minister, they voted in the recent debate against the Government—which depended for its success, as we have seen, on support from some of the Saragat Socialists and Republicans. The Government can count only on its 207 Christian Democrat votes plus 20 Liberals. It is possible that, at their next National Council in the middle of September, the Saragat Socialists will approve the idea of participation in the Government.

The Cabinet is now on holiday until after the 20th August, while the Constituent Assembly will not be meeting again until late in September. Politics are at a discount at the moment, as Rome is having an exceptionally hot summer, with temperatures such as have not been known for 42 years.

Now that the Constituent Assembly has authorized the Italian Government to ratify the peace treaty, the way is clear for the visit to London of Count Sforza, the Foreign Minister (see Summary No. 398). No date has yet been fixed. Owing to pressure of business August would, in any case, probably be a bad month for both Mr. Bevin and Count Sforza.

SOUTH-EASTERN EUROPE

Hungary

The prospects of a free and fair Hungarian election were debated in the House of Lords on the 5th August on a motion of Lord Vansittart, who claimed that the occasion would be used to transfer formal power to the Communist minority—already the actual masters in Hungary. Lord Vansittart further questioned the wisdom of ratifying the far from satisfactory South East European Peace Treaties which had been consistently violated in anticipation. Lord Pakenham, replying for the Government, admitted the Communist drive to weaken the peasant-supported parties which, he said, held a slight numerical superiority in the three countries concerned, but defended the Peace Treaties as being the best obtainable, and hoped that the Hungarian Election would be reasonably free. His Majesty's Government would observe events and act accordingly.

Seven Opposition Parties have been authorized to contest the Election. These are:—

(1) The Radical Party—leader M. Zsolt.
(2) The Bourgeois Democratic Party—leader M. Supka.
(3) The Hungarian Independence Party—leader M. Pfeiffer.
(4) The Democratic People's Party—leader M. Barankovics.
(5) The Independent Hungarian Democratic Party—leader Fr. Balogh.
(6) The Christian Women's League—leader Sister Schlachta.
(7) The Catholic People's Party—leader M. Varga.

The so-called Poor People's Party was refused recognition for failing to comply with certain formalities.

The Radical Party has been unexpectedly strengthened by the recent inclusion of MM. Peyer, Valentiny and other former right-wing Social Democrats. M. Peyer, in particular, will be likely to attract votes which the Radicals, who obtained no mandate in the last Election, could otherwise hardly have hoped to gain. The names of M. Parragi and General Miklós de Dalnok, the first Hungarian Premier after the liberation, head Fr. Balogh's list of candidates. So far Fr. Balogh's is the only Opposition Party to press forward energetically with the electoral campaign. Its slogan—singularly reminiscent of the Social Democrats' "bread, freedom, work"—is "work, bread, security." At the Party's inaugural meeting Fr. Balogh stressed the importance of resuming diplomatic relations with the Vatican, and said that as regards foreign policy he would proceed along the lines laid down by the Provisional Government at Debreczen. He also pronounced the inevitable words of gratitude to the Red Army which had freed Hungary from German oppression. The Opposition, indeed, finds itself in the singularly difficult situation of having to placate Russia and at the same time to appeal for support from the anti-Russian elements. The Communists, it is alleged, are for their part, wooing the Church by unusual demonstrations of piety, and an unconfirmed report states that M. Rákosi has even declared himself against the proposal to make religion an optional subject in the schools.

The United Kingdom and the United States have asked the Hungarian Government to include them in the tax exemption granted to the four joint Russo-Hungarian Companies. They claim that the present position is inconsistent with Article 33 (c) of the Peace Treaty, which guarantees most favoured nation treatment to U.N. nationals in all matters pertaining to commerce, industry, shipping and other forms of business activity within Hungary.

The U.S. State Department has protested vigorously against the arrest for political reasons of a U.S. citizen, Mr. Thuransky, and has drawn attention to the fact that Hungary does not yet possess full sovereignty. The Hungarian reply strove to justify the step on the ground that Mr. Thuransky had publicly abused M. Tildy and various members of the Government. Mr. Thuransky has since left for Vienna. (See also under "United States.")

Communist reluctance to bestow a blessing on the Anglo-Hungarian Trade Agreement did not prevent its successful conclusion in London on the 9th August. Social Democrats regard this achievement as something of a triumph for their Party to which M. Korányi, the leader of the Commercial Delegation, belongs.

M. Mihalyfi has denied that there is any truth in the reported death of M. Béla Kovács.

Yugoslavia

Fourteen Yugoslavs have been put on their trial at Ljubljana for spying for a foreign Power. They are supposed to have organised a "spy net" to carry on espionage in Austria and Switzerland. They are mainly teachers, students and professors in Ljubljana University, the chief of whom is Professor Boris Finlan, Dean of the Faculty of Law. He is a well-known scholar of liberal outlook and sympathy with British institutions, and supported the Partisans during the later part of the war. They are said to have collected military, political and economic information, and organised escapes into neighbouring countries, to have written articles for foreign newspapers in which they give their own version of the course of events in Yugoslavia, and to have been acting under the direction of the representative of a foreign Power, whom observers on the spot identify with a former British Consul. It appears that some of them have talked somewhat freely on subjects which in Yugoslavia count as State secrets but which would be considered quite harmless anywhere else. This revealing of "State secrets" has been discovered by one of the maids in the British Consulate—in the employ of the secret police.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Tito has also received a delegation of Protestant ministers from America. In his conversation with them he showed a desire to be fair to all the religious bodies in the country. There was a suggestion that he was not entirely happy about Vatican policy. The visitors declared that the only criticism they had to make was that there were too many churches (presumably meaning church buildings) in the country.

Two agreements between Yugoslavia and Great Britain have been signed in this country. One is concerned with the settlement of advances made to the Royal Yugoslav Government during the war, and the other releases the Ministry of Transport from liability in respect of Yugoslav merchant shipping.

There has been in some quarters apprehension as to whether volunteers who have been recruited in this country for work on the "Yugoslav Youth Railway" are not being persuaded to join a military international brigade. In fact, there is no evidence of such an attempt being made.

Credit, trading and payments agreements have been concluded between Yugoslavia and Russia. The trading and payments agreements are for two years and renewable. The Russian contribution is the supply of equipment for a number of industries which are essential to the Yugoslav five year plan. Besides equipment Russia will supply technical help for planning the various enterprises and getting them going. Yugoslavia will supply Russia with lead, and with lead, zinc and pyrites concentrates, and copper, and also the products of her farming activities, such as tobacco, hemp, plywood.

Greece

The Greek Government, dismayed by the rebels' stiffening resistance to the Army —due largely to the assistance they receive from the neighbouring countries and the sanctuary they can claim there when necessary—and by the renewed Slav hostility shown both in the Security Council and by the Yugoslav-Bulgarian pact, have made a fresh appeal for more effective Anglo-United States assistance. The Athens press, with the usual exception of the Communist papers, have warmly welcomed this step and have contrasted the limited assistance given to the Army by the Allies with the apparently limitless assistance given to the rebels by the Slavs. It is stressed that, in the absence of any real hope of sealing Greece's frontiers, the Greek Army must be considerably strengthened if they are to defeat the rebels. The Vima even urges the active co-operation of Allied military forces.

In view of their difficulties, the Greek Government have learned with regret of the British Government's decision to withdraw their troops from Greece in accordance with previously announced policy, although they appreciate the financial considerations which made the decision necessary. They feel that, although the British troops take no part in the fighting against the rebels, their presence has done much to hearten the Government's supporters. But the reaction of the press and public was much milder than might have been expected.

Meanwhile fresh raids by the rebels have been reported from many areas. A feature of recent raids is that, besides levying contributions in kind, the rebels are now demanding contributions from the villagers in gold. In the second raid on Arakhova, for instance, the rebels took sixty hostages and are said to be demanding 300 sovereigns a head as ransom. In Epirus heavy fighting is reported from the Zagoria area, and there are unconfirmed rumours of a concentration of 3,000 rebels in Central Macedonia.

Queen Frederika has opened a fund for the relief of the victims of the rebels, to which (on the proposal of the General Federation of Labour) all workers contributed the pay they earned for one day's work—on the 10th August. It was estimated that five billion drachmæ would thus be added to the 20 billion previously contributed.

There have been persistent rumours of changes in the Cabinet, but definite decisions are not expected until M. Tsaldaris returns from New York.

The Œcumenical Patriarch has left Athens by destroyer for Alexandroupolis on his return to Istanbul.

Bulgaria

The Petkov trial began on Tuesday the 5th August, and by the end of last week the hearing of the witnesses for the prosecution had been completed. While M. Petkov himself strenuously denied the charges brought against him (repeated as they were in a pamphlet circulated just beforehand by the Minister of Information), almost inevitably the four other defendants—quite obscure individuals—at once hastened to plead guilty. Before the trial the Sofia wireless had made a great deal of the Government's intention to hold the proceedings publicly, announcing that "in order to enable the greatest possible number of citizens to attend," the case would be examined in the largest available court. This was in line with a personal assurance which the British Political Representative had received a month earlier from M. Dimitrov: the full publicity of the trial was guaranteed. Yet in spite of this, admission to the court was refused throughout last week to all members of the British and American Political and Military Missions, while the application for an entry permit to enable Mr. Ungoed-Thomas, K.C., M.P., to attend the trial as an official observer for H.M.G. was refused outright by the Soviet Assistant Chairman of the Allied Control Commission. The trial, he wrote, bore "an entirely internal character." When the fact that according to the prosecution M. Petkov, in planning his alleged coup d'état, was counting on intervention by "foreign Powers" was pointed out to him, he agreed to refer the matter to the Soviet High Command. This is the old technique over again: by the time they answer, the trial will be over. The position last Monday was that the Bulgarian Government had obligingly agreed to let a member of the British Political Mission attend the rest of the trial, but that the Soviet High Command were still refusing to allow Mr. Ungoed-Thomas to enter Bulgaria.

M. Petkov's party, the Opposition Agrarians, are naturally very despondent: they seem to expect that, once the trial is over, their organization will be declared illegal under Article 4 of the peace treaty and that then they will share the fate of M. Maniu's party in Roumania. The (Communist-run) National Committee of the Fatherland Front published a fresh statement on the 2nd August to the effect that the Agrarians' compromise declaration of the 18th July did not go far enough to satisfy them. It is safe to say that nothing short of their complete capitulation will do so.

The Bulgarian Government delegation, headed by the Prime Minister, returned to Sofia from Yugoslavia on the 3rd August after spending a week there. Two days later the Cabinet unanimously approved the Bled Agreement.

Sofia Radio announced on the 7th that a Spanish Republican Minister, Señor Miranda, had presented his credentials to President Kolarov on the previous day.

THE MIDDLE EAST

Egypt

The reaction of the non-Wafd press to Nokrashy Pasha's statement before the Security Council on the 5th August (see last week's Summary under "United Nations"), quoted at length, has been generally favourable, while Sir Alexander Cadogan's speech (which, in contrast, was not reported in any detail) has been universally criticised. Al Ahram of the 7th August, for example, maintains that the British reply is full of misconceptions, but warns the Egyptians against over-optimism before they know the Security Council's decision. The Wafdist Balagh criticises Nokrashy's presentation of the Egyptian case on the grounds that he has left the door open for negotiations, which may lead the British to bargain. The article maintains that Nokrashy should have declared that the Egyptians objected to the whole of the Bevin–Sidky draft treaty and opposed the conclusion of a military alliance with Great Britain. Another Balagh article reiterates the contention that Egypt was compelled to agree to the 1936 Treaty under pressure, and considers that Sir Alexander Cadogan has no justification in arguing that the presence of British troops in the Canal Zone does not affect Egypt's sovereignty and independence. The defence of the Canal, the article maintains, is Egypt's own concern. Both the Ikhwan al Muslimin and Kotla (Wafdist bloc) criticise Nokrashy for expressing willingness to enter into an agreement under Articles 43 and 106 of the Charter. Article 43, according to Kotla, would provide the British with a golden opportunity to impose a treaty which they had tried to force upon Egypt as the price of evacuation.

The press reports that telegrams to the Security Council have been sent by Hassan al-Banna (head of the Ikhwan al Muslimin), the ex-Mufti, and Habib Bourguira, leader of the Tunisian Dustour Party. Hassan al-Banna's telegram appears to follow the usual line in expressing hope of a decision confirming Egypt's "incontestable right to evacuation and unity of the Nile Valley"—both of which issues, the Mufti claims, in his telegram (sent on behalf of the Palestine Arab Higher Committee) have the full support of the Arabs of Palestine. Bourguira's telegram makes a similar

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

pledge of support on behalf of the Tunisian people. Other personalities and organisations reported to have sent, or to be about to send, telegrams to the United Nations expressing support for Egypt's claims include the Grand Rabbi of Egypt, on behalf of the Egyptian Jewish community, Hafez Ramadan Pasha on behalf of the Watanists and Ibrahim Dessouki Abaza Pasha on behalf of the Constitutional Liberals, the Egyptian Chamber of Commerce and the Egyptian Federation of Industries. The Grand Ulema are also reported to have sent a telegram to the Secretary-General of the United Nations urging that the Security Council should restore Egypt's rights. This action followed a reported meeting of the Mufti of Egypt and the Grand Ulema on the 1st August, at which an appeal is believed to have been issued to all Egyptians to unite and back the Government delegation.

This sudden spate of telegrams though doubtless organised by the Government, has in some measure dissipated the growing uneasiness in Cairo over the prospects of success before the United Nations as have also the confident statements of the Egyptian delegates in New York. Nevertheless, Khashaba Pasha, the acting Prime Minister, was cautious in replying to questions at a press conference on the evening of the 5th August, and hinted at the possibility of a treaty of military alliance with His Majesty's Government, to be based on the exchange of benefits on a footing of equality and on the absence of any harmful influence which might result from the presence of foreign troops in the country. The Bevin–Sidky draft, he maintained could not be taken as an example of such an alliance. In a later communiqué to the press, refuting the contentions of Nokrashy's critics (see above), Khashaba Pasha stated that Nokrashy's claim of Egyptian readiness to sign a Pact in accordance with Articles 43 and 106 of the United Nations Charter did not signify that Egypt desired to conclude a pact with Great Britain, but that she was ready to reach an agreement with the Security Council and the Great Powers to decide upon the necessary joint action for the preservation of peace in accordance with the principles of the United Nations Charter.

Twelve Egyptians and an escaped German prisoner-of-war have now been charged, in connection with the bomb incidents in Cairo of the 6th May (see Summary No. 392). The press reports that their case will come before the Assize Court in October. The culprits in the Metro Cinema attack (see Summary No. 392) have yet to be found.

Abdel Karim has recently been attempting to enlist American support for the Moroccan cause. Le Monde of the 20th July reproduced part of an interview granted by him to United Press, in which he said that the situation in Morocco was becoming more tense, and that the French people should take steps to stop their Government from bringing about a war between France and Morocco, but that if such a war did break out, it was the duty of the United States to help the Arabs. He then stated that an appeal to the United Nations would be made if the French did not grant Morocco her independence, and the Arab countries would be asked to impose an economic and political boycott on France. He also referred to a visit to the United States and Great Britain on behalf of the Moroccan cause which he intended to make when his health improved, and denounced Communism as "the enemy of all religions." In a recent statement to Al Balagh Abdel Karim, emphasising once more his opposition to French imperialism, "whether in North Africa or elsewhere," is reported to have said that, since the small nations (presumably the North African Arab States) were not benefiting from the United Nations, it would be better for them to unite, "and thus become a Power able to defend itself."

The Sudan

The following official announcement was issued to the press on the 4th August by the Governor-General :—

"In April, 1946, at the Fifth Session of the Advisory Committee for the Northern Sudan, Sir Hubert Huddleston announced the appointment of a conference to consider the ways of associating the Sudanese more closely with the administration of the Sudan. The latest step in the development of these proposals was taken at a meeting of the Governor-General's Council in the Palace at Khartoum on the 29th July, 1947, when the Civil Secretary submitted the first report of the Sudanese Administrative Conference and his recommendations thereon. His Excellency the Governor-General in Council accepted in principle the main proposals of the report for the development of the Advisory Council into a Legislative Assembly, and the evolution of the existing Governor-General's Council into an Executive Council.

"The Council accepted the proposal that the Legislative Assembly should be representative of the whole Sudan, and that its scope should not be limited to Northern Sudan. It also endorsed the recommendation that safeguards should be introduced into the legislation setting up a new constitution to ensure the healthy and steady development of the Southern peoples.

"The Council agreed to the proposal to appoint members of the Legislative Assembly as under-Secretaries in principal Departments, and recommended that the implications of this step should be studied forthwith. The Council endorsed the proposal to set up an Executive Council of twelve members, composed of three Secretaries, six Sudanese Under-Secretaries and two members to be nominated by the Governor-General.

"Finally, the Council decided that the proposals should be submitted without delay to the British and Egyptians for their consideration in principle. Meanwhile, work on legislation embodying these principles will be started."

This important step has been taken as a result of local demands for the rapid establishment of a Legislative Council, and the above announcement reflects the Sudan Government's intention of pursuing its policy of developing self-governing institutions.

Earlier this week it was thought possible that the Umma and Ashigga parties might have reached an agreement over the future status of the Sudan, but negotiations between them have now broken down owing to the refusal of the Ashigga to modify its policy of unity with Egypt. The prospect of a United Front remains as far away as ever.

The Sudanese Independence Front (aiming at complete Sudanese independence) have sent a delegation of four, including a son of Sayed Abdel Rahman el Mahdi, to New York to be present at the Security Council's discussions. There is, however, little likelihood of their being heard by the Council. Their departure has now resulted in the Ashigga also sending a delegation.

Palestine

The steps taken by the Palestine Government as a result of the murder of the two two British sergeants (see last week's Summary) include the detention of some leading Revisionists, the suppression of the Revisionist Youth Movement, Betar, and the detention of three prominent Mayors. Regulations have also been made providing for the confiscation of the property of unlawful associations and for the destruction of buildings shown to be connected with terrorist activities. One such house, in which arms and explosives were found, was demolished at Givat Shaul. These measures have, on the whole, been accepted with equanimity, since the public was expecting something much more severe, but the detention of the Mayors has aroused considerable hostility. On the 7th August a representative rally of the Yishuv was held at which a strong protest was made against this action, and a general strike of three hours' duration proclaimed. However, it appears that the Vaad Leumi do not at present intend to interrupt their measures against terrorism as a result of the detention of the Mayors.

The Port de Bouc incident has undoubtedly made a very deep impression upon the whole Jewish community and hardened feeling against the Mandatory Power. The intransigent attitude of the passengers has been loudly applauded, and the Hebrew press has seized every opportunity to use this incident as a stick with which to beat the Palestine Administration and His Majesty's Government.

The most serious of the Jewish terrorist activities during the past week was an attack, on the 8th August, by five Jews in khaki drill on the Hasharon Co-operative Bank in Ramat Gan. The staff were held up and £P.1,187 in cash and £P.4,861 in cheques stolen.

On the night of the 10th/11th August three Jews, a Jewess and one Arab were killed, and eight people wounded in an attack on a Jewish café near Tel Aviv carried out by armed Arab terrorists in khaki shirts and shorts. This incident may well be the prelude to further Arab aggression.

A telegram on behalf of the Arab Higher Committee has been sent to the Security Council (see under "Egypt"), and strong support for Egypt has been voiced in the local Arab press.

Syria

On the 14th June a delegation of the Food and Agricultural Organisation of the United Nations Organisation visited Syria, headed by Hafnawi Pasha. Views were

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267629

exchanged between the delegation and the Syrian Government on food, agricultural and health problems. The F.A.O. will recommend the extent of technical and agricultural help to be rendered to Syria by the United Nations.

The Syrian Petroleum Company are now engaged in boring for oil at two sites in Syria: one near Tripoli and a second north of Aleppo (at Bafloun). A third rig is expected to be put in hand shortly. Operations are not yet sufficiently advanced to judge whether hopes of finding oil are justified.

The Arab League

The Syrian President and Prime Minister have confirmed that the instructions sent to Faris Khoury (see Summary No. 401 under "Syria") were from the Arab League as well as from the Syrian Government.

Some weeks ago Azzam Pasha, Secretary-General of the Arab League, made a press statement at the Arab Office, Washington (19th June), in which he outlined the attitude of the League towards the rest of the world. He began by emphasising that "the rising East in Asia and North Africa will no longer tolerate a dominating and dictating West." The ideology of the Arab World, part of this great East, he maintained, differed from Communism, Imperialism and Capitalism. "The Arab League," he said, "stands for national freedom of all peoples against any discrimination in race, religion, or colour, a conception which may bring us sometimes in conflict with either the right or the left, but these clashes will only strengthen our faith in that middle course which our people have always been inclined to follow."

He then dealt with Arab League relations with the Great Powers. If the Arabs contested British domination in Egypt and the Sudan, or French and Spanish imperialism in North Africa, it was not out of any desire to weaken these Powers, but merely to find a more reasonable and human basis for co-operation. Their stability and prosperity were a guarantee for peace in the Mediterranean area, an essential condition for the Arabs themselves. The League, however, did not agree with the theory, supported by Mr. Sumner Welles, that the handing back of Libya to Italy would contribute to this stability.

Referring to Palestine, he said that the League was opposed to aggressive Zionism, but that it did not intend "to clash with Jewish people anywhere." He realised that the United States regarded this problem from a different angle, namely, that of "pure sentiment and humane feeling towards a persecuted and displaced people." He was convinced that they were also well-intentioned towards the Arab World and would not support the maintenance of European imperialism, being moved "by broader and more human Principles." Azzam concluded by urging that the Arab World should maintain its faith in Western democracy.

Iraq

The Extraordinary Session of the Iraqi Parliament, which opened on the 17th March, ended on the 19th July. Parliament will now remain in recess until the 1st December unless summoned by the Regent before that date to consider specific matters. Among its achievements, the Government of Saleh Jabr, the first Shi'a Prime Minister of Iraq, can claim the passing of a budget (the first since 1945), the main provisions of which are the raising of the salaries of officials—an important prerequisite of any serious effort to control corruption—and the appointment of a considerable number of British technical experts. Legislation was also passed for the setting up of a National Bank and, in the social field, for compelling large industrial undertakings to provide housing for their employees. The Treaties with Turkey and Transjordan were ratified in the face of criticism both inside and outside Parliament.

To sum up the session, a slow and shaky start has been made on the programme of economic development, although there has been no serious attempt to reform the administration of the Courts without which any effective economic development will be gravely hampered. Nor has anything been done in the educational field. Preparatory work has, however, started on the important Wadi Tharthar flood control scheme on the Tigris north of Baghdad and efforts are being made to enlarge and improve the medical college.

Persia

The Prime Minister's Iran Democrat Party now appears to be threatened with disintegration owing to the revolt of some thirty to forty deputies, most of them nominal party members, who are prepared, if need be, to follow the Shah against the Prime Minister. Meanwhile, scrutiny of the new deputies' credentials by six subcommittees continues.

C267630

THE FAR EAST

Indonesia

On 6th August the United States Consul-General in Batavia, Dr. Foote, handed to Dr. Gani his Government's formal offer of good offices in connexion with the Netherlands/Indonesian dispute. However, Dr. Gani, who together with Dr. Thamzil, the Indonesian Vice-Minister for Foreign Affairs, had been vainly endeavouring to persuade Dr. van Mook to assist them to return to Jogjakarta, informed Dr. Foote that he had no means of transmitting the offer to the Republican Prime Minister. Later in the day it was arranged that Dr. Foote should himself broadcast the message over the Batavia radio service.

The following evening Dr. Foote received M. Sjarifoeddin's reply. After expressing the Republican Government's gratitude to the United States Government, M. Sjarifoeddin went on to say that his Government were willing to submit to the decisions arrived at by the United Nations, in which arbitration was recommended as the primary means of settling the present dispute; and, in accepting the offer of good offices made by the United States Government, request that they will endeavour to persuade both the Security Council and the Netherlands Government to accept the Indonesian proposal that an international arbitration commission be despatched to Indonesia as soon as possible. The Governments of the United States, Britain and the Netherlands would surely agree that "in arbitration by a United Nations Commission lies the only and final hope of settling this dispute by peaceful means." The reply concluded with a request to the United States Government to send immediately a representative to Jogjakarta "in order that the Republican Government may more fully acquaint the United States Government with their official point of view."

Earlier, when speaking before the Indonesian Provisional Parliament in Jogjakarta, M. Sjarifoeddin had declared that, despite the "cease-fire" order, which had been issued to meet the Security Council's appeal, the Republic was still in a state of war with the Netherlands and, therefore, could negotiate only through the intermediary of an international commission appointed by the United Nations to act as arbitrator—not mediator. Declaring that the Netherlands Government had violated the Linggadjati Agreement, M. Sjarifoeddin added that the Republic "is now released from her bonds to become a constituent part of a future Federal State and now enjoys complete freedom." The Republic therefore declares itself a sovereign state with the power to appoint its own representatives abroad.

In this last declaration lies the whole crux of the Indonesian aim—immediate international recognition of complete independence as a sovereign state. They are not interested in mediation as such by, or through the good offices of, a third party. Republican officials in Batavia, according to H.M. Consul-General, consider that the Linggadjati Agreement is now cancelled and, therefore, that the main questions on which arbitration is sought are (1) how the complete withdrawal of Dutch forces from Java and Sumatra can be arranged, and (2) the restoration of full independence to the Republic, as contained in the whole of the territory under Jogjakarta's control at the time of the Truce Agreement of October, 1946, and without regard to any subsequent separatist movements sponsored or planned by the Dutch. His Majesty's Consul-General also reports that, although the Republicans claim to be capable of maintaining law and order throughout the whole of the territory if the Dutch forces were withdrawn, the consensus of opinion in Batavia is that general disorders, including looting, massacre and, in fact, any other form of savage reprisal against all inhabitants who had co-operated with the Dutch, might confidently be expected from returning Republican troops.

The Dutch, in any case, are showing no signs of willingness to surrender control over any territory now under their domination. They have already declared their intention to retain their hold over those parts of East and West Java of which their forces have taken possession; and they are now reported to be giving sympathetic consideration to a petition submitted by representatives of the people of Sumatra Timoer, in Eastern Sumatra, to set up a new autonomous state within the framework of the Federation. Indeed, the long letter of complaint against the Indonesian Republic's case being allowed to come before the Security Council, from the

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

President and Prime Minister of East Indonesia to the President of the United Nations Security Council, would appear obviously Dutch-inspired. Local Dutch officials in Batavia are inclined to overlook the fact that Article 1 of the Agreement recognises the de facto authority of the Republic over the whole of Java, Sumatra and Madura.

According to press reports the United States Consul-General, Dr. Foote, has arrived in Jogjakarta for discussions with M. Sjarifoeddin concerning the acceptance of the United States offer of mediation, Much must depend on the outcome of these discussions. If the Republican Government definitely decline to accept the offer of mediation and adhere to their original request for arbitration by an international commission, complicated problems will be raised and doubtless the whole question will have to be re-examined by the United Nations Security Council.

In the meantime local Dutch–Indonesian tension shows signs of becoming dangerous. Both sides are accusing each other of violating the "cease-fire" order and skirmishes are taking place with growing frequency. From Dutch sources come reports of a number of clashes in what they term "clearing actions to protect troops and civilians" in the Sourabaya area and in Central Java, north-West of Ambarawa; while other reports are that the Republicans are employing guerrilla tactics in Northern Sumatra.

(See also under "Low Countries" and "United Nations.")

Korea

Despite the elaborate arrangements contrived for the method of consultation with Korean democratic parties and social organisations (see Summary No. 397), discussions on the subject in the Joint Commission meetings were unable to find common ground. Thus another deadlock has resulted as complete as that which brought to an end the discussions of a year ago. At the Joint Commission meeting on the 29th July the Soviet Delegation rejected the proposal of the United States Delegation to prepare a list of parties and organisations which both or either of the Delegations wished to exclude from consultation, and to set out the specific objections entertained in each case. The United States mission issued a lengthy statement, recording their view that "no one faction shall dominate the creation of this Government because no one group enjoys a majority of support of the masses of the Korean people"; and stating that because of this circumstance it is highly undesirable that either the extreme Right or the extreme Left should have a dominating position in the consultation of the Joint Commission.

Competent observers feel that the time has come when, even at the risk of wrecking the Joint Commission, the United States Delegation must take immediate steps to declare and implement a definite policy in regard to South Korea if a confused and frustrated people are to be prevented from resorting to desperate measures. Perhaps the first step in this direction has been taken by Mr. Marshall, who has suggested in a letter to M. Molotov that the Joint Commission should now report progress to the U.S. and Soviet Governments as soon as possible. When M. Molotov agreed to the reconvening of the Joint Commission in the course of his correspondence with Mr. Marshall in April–May of this year, he proposed that the Commission should report progress in July–August and he may agree, therefore, to Mr. Marshall's latest suggestion. Although such a report can hardly fail to be negative, the way will then be clear for whatever further positive action the United States Government may envisage.

In the meantime there is trouble at hand and on the horizon. Foreign occupation of the country, which is achieving neither political, nor economic rehabilitation, is bitterly resented. Rhee Syng-man and Kim Koo have carried out their original threat, and anti-trusteeship demonstrations have been worked up in Seoul and a number of other towns; while political vendettas have led to assassinations.

When General Hodge ordered American tanks to disperse the anti-trusteeship demonstrations in Seoul on 23rd June, the agitators threatened their opponents with annihilation. These threats were repeated with such frequency and meaning that it was felt that sooner or later they would become a fait accompli if only as a means of drawing the world's attention to the cause and determination of right-wing adherents. On 19th July, the leader of the Labouring People's Party, Lyuh Woon Hyung, who was regarded as "one of Korea's most attractive personalities," was murdered while driving in his car. His assassin escaped, and it will be some time—if sufficient interest is sustained—before it is known whether he was working for the the Right or Left political faction. Described as a moderate of the Left, Lyuh is known to have occupied a place of honour on the list drawn up by the Right of those to be liquidated—his main crime being the uncompromising manner in which he had advocated the exclusion of right-wing independent parties from consultation with the Joint Commission. On the other hand, so many Communists had infiltrated into his own party that he had felt compelled to arrange for a meeting to be held in the next few days to decide whether the Communists should be expelled or he, himself, should leave the party. It is thought possible, therefore, that in order to strengthen their hold on the party, the Communists may have forestalled events by arranging his death. Be this as it may, the atmosphere surrounding the crime has given the United States Authorities on the spot cause for considerable anxiety, the more especially as threats of further assassinations and reports of even more serious trouble in the planning for 15th August—"Liberation Day"—are reaching their ears. It is now reported in the press that the U.S. authorities have arrested 2000 Left-wing leaders in the Southern Zone to forestall any possible Liberation Day violence.

In Seoul, however, open clashes have already taken place between left and right-wing groups, which, but for a violent rainstorm, might well have led to serious developments. The opportunity for these brawls was provided on 27th July in the holding of a public rally of the Communist-controlled Democratic People's Front at which General Brown spoke. Particularly large numbers of people had been attracted to the rally by rumours—entirely false and purposely released to swell the crowd—that the American and Russian Delegates were about to announce that they had resolved their differences and found common ground; another rumour that fell on receptive ears was to the effect that the introduction of a new and sweeping programme for land reform was to be announced. Reports also claim that certain factory-hands within the area were threatened with the forfeit of a month's pay if they failed to attend. In his speech General Brown declared that to deny a large section of the population the right to take part in the most important event of their time—the creation of their own Government—would constitute an injustice to which the United States Delegation could never agree. As it is exactly this denial that is demanded by the Democratic People's Front, it is scarcely surprising that the meeting ended in a "free-for-all" between the rival political factions.

With the approaching visit to Korea of General Wedermeyer, President Truman's special fact-finding representative, Rhee Syng-nam, is reported to be contemplating a somewhat different line of action by abandoning his crusade of anti-trusteeship and advocating, instead, an immediate election. He is said to claim General Wedermeyer as a close and sympathetic friend, and it is generally thought, therefore, that he is unlikely to embark on any definite campaign until after the General's visit.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

Mr. Attlee's House of Commons speech of the 6th August and subsequent Ministerial and opposition pronouncements on the British economic crisis have been studied with great interest in the United States. Commentators welcome the Prime Minister's assertion that His Majesty's Government could not and would not base their plans to meet the situation on any assumption of further American aid. This is taken to mean that the country will first make every effort to help itself—as the Marshall offer is understood to imply that it must. Outright criticism comes mainly from the far Right and from the Left. Right-wing observers contend that the condition of Great Britain has been aggravated by an overdose of Socialist planning; while those at the other extreme are apt to believe that the country has dissipated its manpower and dollars on imperialist schemes abroad. Opposition views on the alleged inadequacy of present remedies have been prominently reported in correspondents' despatches from London. While conceding that "this is no time for prejudgments," the New York Times, among other newspapers, seizes upon the continuation of the five-day week in the mining industry, albeit in modified form, as cause to wonder "how austere the new austerity plan is really going to be." There has, however, been less doubt on this score since the imposition of the 75 per cent. import tax on American films and the ensuing embargo ordered by the American Motion Picture Association on all film shipments to this country.

In the belief that the United States Government will be powerless, during the

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

present recess of Congress, to offer any immediate and effective measure of relief to this country internationalists are now once more mooting the idea of a special session this autumn. The New York Herald-Tribune, for example, urges that it would "help immeasurably" if the authorities in Washington were at this juncture to issue a "formal announcement that, as soon as Europe has anything to offer, it will find the United States ready —by extra session, by committee or administrative action—to act upon it." Though perhaps not intentionally, Congressional leaders themselves tend to add weight to appeals of this kind by firmly insisting, as the Republican Chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee, Mr. Jesse P. Wolcott, is doing, that they must be fully consulted before any modifications in the loan agreement are made. It is suggested that pressure will in any event be put upon the President to reverse the recent decision against a special autumn session of Congress as a result of the Paris talks which Mr. William Clayton, the Under-Secretary of State for Economic Affairs, has been having with the United States diplomatic representatives from Great Britain, France and the Allied Control Council in Germany. Mr. Clayton is reported by the press to have reached the conclusion that the position in Great Britain and France is such that neither country can wait until Congress acts upon the Marshall offer next January. He is also said to favour taking over the British dollar burden in Germany. If this is true it is a complete change from the position recently maintained by other State Department officials in Washington. Only this week the latter let it be known that they could not, even temporarily, bear more than their share of the German dollar costs in view of the fact that Congress might not countenance any such infringement of the existing bi-zonal agreement.

Concern is felt in some quarters lest what is described as "the slowness of American succour for a desperate Britain and Europe" may leave the Western Powers too weak in the face of further aggression from Moscow. The Balkan satellites, it is widely believed, are already being prepared to act as catspaws in a new drive against Greece, and evidence of the increasing truculence of the countries within the Soviet orbit is seen in the recent arrest and detention by the Hungarian political police of Mr. Stephen T. Thuransky, a naturalised American acting as a business representative in Hungary. For its part the State Department has taken a "most serious view" of the Thuransky incident and has expressed, both to the Acting Hungarian Foreign Minister and to the Soviet Chairman of the Allied Control Commission in Budapest, its dissatisfaction with the explanation so far provided by the local authorities. The State Department has also made it known that it is "still seriously concerned" about the continuing suppression of civil liberties by Hungary's neighbour, Roumania, and that it rejects the contention of the Bucarest Government that such concern reflects a desire to intervene to an unwarranted degree in Roumanian internal affairs. The prevailing feeling, however, is that, apart from taking spasmodic economic action like the concellation of the cotton credit to Hungary, the United States can do exasperatingly little to influence the course of events behind the Iron Curtain.

Confidence in the ability of the United Nations Security Council to deal with any impending trouble in Greece is now at a low ebb, and the alacrity with which the Council acted in the case of Indonesia has not been sufficiently impressive to offset the effect of M. Gromyko's veto of the proposed Greek frontier commission. A considerable body of opinion is therefore likely to support Mr. Herschel Johnson's contention that the continued failure of the Security Council to take effective action in the case of Greece because of the Soviet veto could not "preclude individual or collective action by States willing to act, so long as they act in accordance with the general purposes and principles of the United Nations" (see also under "United Nations"). At the State Department the stock of the Security Council seems to have fallen appreciably as a result of the shortcoming to which Mr. Johnson refers. Thus, in communicating his views on the current Egyptian complaint against this country, Mr. Lovett, the Under-Secretary of State, suggests that His Majesty's Government ought to avail themselves of Article 33 of the United Nations Charter to have the case removed from the Council's jurisdiction. He makes this suggestion notwithstanding the fact that he believes the British position to be legally unassailable.

In the domestic field the main news of the week has been provided by the inquiry by a sub-committee of the Senate War Investigating Committee into the award by the Roosevelt Administration of 40 million dollars' worth of war contracts to Mr. Howard Hughes, the millionaire aircraft manufacturer and film producer.

Mr. Hughes, it is alleged, managed through the good offices of Mr. Elliott Roosevelt, a son of the late President, to secure orders for 100 photo-reconnaissance planes of a type previously rejected by the Washington authorities. He himself is trying to turn the tables on his inquisitors by accusing Senator Owen Brewster, a prominent Republican member of the War Investigating Committee, of having been moved to instigate the inquiry by his connexion with competing aviation interests. Mr. Roosevelt has publicly attacked the proceedings as an attempt to "smear" the political reputation of his father.

LATIN AMERICA

Inter-American Affairs

A statement by Dr. Belt, the Cuban Ambassador to Washington, that a clause in the United States Sugar Act implied an economic threat to Cuba, was brought to the attention of Mr. Lovett, U.S. Under-Secretary of State, at his press conference on the 30th July. Mr. Lovett denied that there was any question of an economic threat to any country and said that assurances on this head had been given to the Cuban Ambassador some time ago. Dr. Belt does not seem to have been quite convinced by Mr. Lovett's assurances, as, according to broadcast reports, he has suggested the inclusion of a clause in the projected Continental Defence Treaty which would prohibit any American nation exerting economic pressure on another, while there is talk of Cuba absenting herself from the Rio de Janeiro Conference as a protest against the clause in the Sugar Bill. State Department circles are inclined to attribute this virtual accusation of United States economic pressure to internal Cuban politics. [NOTE.—The clause in question (202E) provides that the Secretary of Agriculture can withdraw or withold any increase in the Sugar quota from any country which denies fair and equitable treatment to United States citizens or enterprises. The authority thus granted to the Secretary of Agriculture is permissive, not mandatory, and applies to all foreign countries in general, and not to any one in particular.]

The pother about Nicaragua's admission to the Rio de Janeiro Conference has been accentuated by the elections for the Constituent Assembly which took place on the 3rd August (see Summary No. 399). As only Liberals (i.e., the followers of Somoza) voted, the results are not difficult to forsee. The Assembly will meet on the 15th August, instead of the 29th (see Summary No. 397) in the hope that Nicaragua will be admitted to the Conference, and it is understood that Dr. Guillermo Sacasa, Ambassador of the Argüello Government at Washington, is going to Rio as an observer on behalf of the de facto Government in the hope of securing Nicaragua's official admission.

Radio messages from Rio state that the delegations of the United States, Chile, Mexico, Panamá, Uruguay and Venezuela will be headed by their respective Foreign Ministers, and that Señora de Perón will be a member of the Argentine delegation. President Truman is expected at Rio de Janeiro for a three-day visit, at the invitation of the Brazilian Government, probably during the first week of September. It is hoped that he will address the Conference, though no official statement to this effect has been made.

Argentina

Official figures of the Census held on the 10th May (see Summary No. 397) give the population of Argentina as 16,107,870, against 7,885,237 in 1914. Some of the most notable increases are those of Buenos Aires District, from 2,066,165 to 4,408,373; Buenos Aires City, from 1,576,597 to 3,000,371; Santa Fé District, from 899,640 to 1,700,020 and Cordoba District, from 735,472 to 1,455,222. The Falkland Islands, whose population is put at 2,947 (see Summary No. 398) does not appear in the 1914 Census. The present Census was carried out on a grandiose scale. Not content with statistics of population and livestock, innumerable officials were engaged on ferreting out such details as the dimensions of each room of each farmhouse and the amount and kind of furniture it contained.

Ecuador

Hardly any disorder attended the elections of Senators and Deputies which were held on the 1st June for the Congress which is to meet in August 1948. Though final figures are not available, it seems fairly certain that the Conservative Party has lost the dominating position which it held in the last Congress and that the Liberals will

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

have a clear majority in the new one. The holding of elections for a Congress which is not to meet for more than a year has been approved as legally correct by the Supreme Electoral Tribunal, but it is generally accepted that the real point, in the event of an extraordinary Congress being called in the meantime, is to ensure that the last Conservative-dominated Assembly shall not be allowed to reassemble.

The Presidential Election is due to be held next year, though no candidates have been so far nominated. The most likely appear to be Señor Galo Plaza, ex-Ambassador to Washington, a man of great popularity with all classes, and persona grata with the United States, and Dr. José Trujillo, at present Minister for Foreign Affairs, who was Democratic-Liberal candidate for presidential office in 1936.

Dominican Republic

Nothing more has been heard regarding the movements of the fleet which was reported to be on the way from Cuba to invade the Dominican Republic (see Summary No. 403). Broadcast messages again quote the Dominican Ambassador in Washington, as announcing that his country's army had been called upon to repel an invasion by Dominican revolutionaries, who, according to an Embassy spokesman, had started on the night of the 31st July from Antilla. Broadcast reports from Port-au-Prince state that many people were entering Haiti from the Dominican Republic, where a virtual state of war existed; Cuban official circles denied any knowledge of a revolutionary force in Cuba, and Dominican émigrés in Mexico City attribute Santo Domingo reports to a manœuvre by President Trujillo to distract attention from the approaching Congressional elections. The President himself has told His Majesty's Representative that he has evidence that Cuban sugar interests are behind the plot. Whatever the facts, it may be noted that the Dominican Government have enquired of the British Minister in Ciudad Trujillo whether, in view of the threatened invasion, they can purchase arms for their corvettes.

Paraguay

Events in the Paraguayan Civil War have moved swiftly during the last two weeks. The Government claim to have captured Concepción seems to have been true, but, so far from the rebels having fled towards the Brazilian frontier, as was also claimed, it appears that they moved the bulk of their forces aboard their river craft, and left the Government troops to enter a deserted city, while they made tracks post-haste in the direction of Asunción. Latest reports are that they are now moving in to the capital, which the Government has evacuated for Pilar, some 190 miles to the south. Argentine warships are available for the removal to Argentine territory of such diplomatic families as desire to leave Concepción.

THE UNITED NATIONS

Security Council

Membership

The Membership Committee held its last two meetings on the 6th and 8th August and has now submitted its report to the Security Council. No applicant escaped open opposition except the Yemen. Russia opposed Transjordan, Eire and Portugal, and defended the Governments of Bulgaria, the most recent applicant for membership, Roumania and Hungary, though she was not in favour of their admission before the peace treaties had entered into force. Poland tried to make Portugal's admission depend upon her Government's acceptance of present and future Assembly policy towards General Franco's Spain. Her suggestion was defeated by 10 votes to 1, even M. Gromyko voting against her, though on the ground that the Portuguese Government could not be reformed by a simple enquiry. A remark by the Soviet representative on the Membership Committee to the effect that the views expressed by him on behalf of his Government were final would appear to make the prospects of Eire, Portugal and Transjordan somewhat dim. Their chances cannot, however, be definitely assessed until the report of the Membership Committee has been considered by the Security Council. But it is clear already that M. Gromyko's will be the decisive vote. The U.K. delegate made it clear that Bulgaria, Roumania and Hungary would have to give solid proof of their intention to carry out the Human Rights clauses of the Treaties, before H.M.G. could support their applications, and Bulgaria would in addition have to give up her intervention in Greece. His Government would support Italy if the treaty were ratified in time. If a vote were taken on Austria, he would have to abstain; though he joined Australia in regretting the inordinate delay in making the Austrian treaty, he could not regard Austria as qualified for membership until a treaty was in force and the occupation at an end. France pledged unconditional support for Italy, distinguishing her from the other ex-satellites by her record as a co-belligerent.

Syria's delegate proposed a kind of blanket acceptance, that last year's five applicants and Austria be recommended forthwith, and that Hungary, Italy, Roumania and Bulgaria should be recommended without further discussion as soon as the treaties had been ratified: M. Gromyko objected that applications were not a "wholesale affair," and neither the U.S. nor the U.K. representatives were ready to discuss the proposal at such short notice, It was accordingly left over, Syria being free to raise it in the Security Council.

Australia's representative, who on every single previous occasion had abstained on the ground that the initiative as regards New Members should rest with the Assembly rather than with the Security Council declared that his Government now thought that the Council should discuss applications from the ex-satellites, and Austria, and, in appropriate cases, make a recommendation to the Assembly which should be conditional on the entry into force of the peace. He supported Portugal, Eire, Transjordan and the Yemen.

The Balkans Commission

Discussion was resumed in the Security Council on the 5th August. On the 6th, the Polish compromise resolution was rejected (see last week's Summary under "United Nations"). A Colombian motion to set up a sub-committee of members who had proposed resolutions or amendments was carried by 10 votes, the Soviet abstaining. The task of the sub-committee was to "ascertain the possibility of formulating a new draft resolution which the sub-committee could recommend for the approval of the Council." A U.K. amendment required the sub-committee to report by the 11th August. The Australian and Colombian delegates each tabled resolutions for the sub-committee to consider, the Australian mentioning chapter 7 of the Charter and demanding the establishment of a corps of observers in Greece, the Colombian, less definite, asking for a body of conciliators. Subsequently the U.S. representative offered an alternative version of the Australian draft; but the sub-committee was soon faced with deadlock: U.K., U.S., Australia, France, Colombia would accept no plan which did not include a U.N. organ of investigation and conciliation in the countries concerned: the Soviet and Polish representatives would accept no plan that did. An interesting and idealistic French suggestion was for three impartial persons chosen on their merits, who should be a commission of conciliation, assisted either by the subsidiary group or by a company of frontier observers appointed by the Secretary General.

On the 12th August, the Colombian delegate told the Security Council that the deadlock in the sub-committee was complete. On the face of it, Russia's veto had made the will of Russia and Poland prevail over the will of the 9 other members of the Security Council. It had made action in defence of Greece impossible. Mr. Herschel Johnson, however, was not prepared to acquiesce in what he called Russia's "use of the veto in defence of aggression by Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania," and he promised that his Government would "exhaust every means within the charter to obtain action" to save Greece. It would co-operate with any like-minded member states to give Greece the protection she was entitled to under the Charter, and he contended that industrial or collective action to aid Greece was possible in accordance with the General purpose and principles of the United Nations. He hoped that a majority of the Council would join the U.S. in seeking action under the Charter provisions, and he enumerated the doctrine, implicit in the action taken over the Syrian-Lebanon case, that a clear decision by a Council majority, even though frustrated by a veto, provided a firm foundation for effective future action within the framework of the Charter. He declared that the Greek problem must be taken to the Assembly (see under "United States").

Egypt

When the Security Council returned to the Egyptian case on the 11th August, the Syrian chairman unexpectedly allowed Nokrashy to make a second long speech before Sir Alexander Cadogan had replied to his first. In the second speech Nokrashy was at pains to divert the Council from the legal aspect of the question; for, he said, the Mission of the Council was to preserve peace and not to act as an organ of international law. The presence of British

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

troops threatened security, because it might well provoke an outbreak of Egyptian patriotic fervour which the Government could not control. H.M.G., on the other hand, regard the matter as a simple legal issue of incalculable importance to the sanctity of all agreements between nations:—the validity of the 1936 Treaty. If it is valid, the Egyptian case fails, and should be dismissed from the Agenda. Once the Security Council is held to be able to pronounce on the validity of freely-negotiated treaties at the request of one party to them when that party finds them inconvenient, international treaties cease to have meaning. Sir Alexander Cadogan's 9,000-word speech on the 11th August was concerned with refuting (for the record though he pointed out that it was irrelevant to the question now before the Council) Nokrashy's version of history. He recalled, in particular, how Egypt herself had during the 19th century imposed a political unity between Egypt and the Sudan for the first time in history. He also demolished the assertion that the British fleet had bombarded the city of Alexandria. It had destroyed the forts, to protect British and foreign lives. Subsequent military measures were requested by the Khedive himself. To Nokrashy's argument that the unity of the Nile valley demanded the unity of Egypt and the Sudan, he replied that Ethiopia supplied [during the flood period] 80% of the total Nile discharge, and asked whether she must also come under the Egyptian crown.

Indonesia

Indonesian affairs came before the Council on the 7th August. A request by the Philippine Government to be represented as an interested party under Article 31 of the Charter was rejected. India's representative thought the Indonesian proposal for an International Arbitration Commission preferable to mediation by the United States of America. He urged the withdrawal of all forces to the lines they held before the outbreak and he gave a detailed history of Indonesia since the Japanese occupation in 1942. This history the Netherlands delegate pronounced accurate in many respects, but he repudiated the assertion that hostilities had arisen over the Gendarmerie question. Their cause was the continuance of violence, disorder and starvation in the Republic. The 1946 agreement had, he said, been violated more than 1,000 times. In certain areas of the Republic 30 per cent. of a population of 2 million had died of starvation, and 27 per cent. were dying of hunger-oedema. The Dutch Government had tried to help all three of the proposed federated States. The Indonesians alone had been "unable to resist aggressive tendencies."

In replying to the Australian delegate's charge, made on the 4th August, that the Dutch authorities at Batavia had deliberately delayed sending on the Security Council's demand for a suspension of hostilities, Mr. Van Kleffens described the extraordinary difficulties the Dutch authorities had had to overcome before they could make actual contact with the Republican leaders. The charge of deliberate delaying occurred also in the Indonesian letter acknowledging the Security Council's instructions. At an evening session on the 12th August the Security Council voted by eight to three in favour of admitting the Indonesian Republic to its discussion on the dispute. The United Kingdom, Belgium and France were the three delegations who voted against admission. Dr. Van Kleffens, the Netherlands delegate, accepted the decision but reserved the right of representatives of East Indonesia and Borneo to be heard simultaneously.

(For the Republic's acceptance of the proffered U.S. good offices, and their ingenious request to the U.S. to employ these good offices to set up an international arbitration commission, see under "Far East.")

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267638

THIS DOCUMENT IS THE PROPERTY OF HIS BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT

SECRET

17347

L 5222/6/405

This document is SECRET: as such it is intended for the personal information of authorised recipients only and must on no account be communicated in whole or in part to anyone else

Weekly Political Intelligence Summary
No. 405

FOREIGN OFFICE,
(RESEARCH DEPARTMENT),
20TH AUGUST, 1947

Copy Nº 143

CONTENTS

The passages side-lined in black are GUARD

	Page
Europe—
Germany	1
Austria	3
Czechoslovakia	3
Poland	4
Soviet Union	5
Scandinavia	7
Low Countries	8
France	9
Europe (contd.)—
Switzerland	10
South-Eastern Europe	11
Middle East	14
Far East	17
United States	19
Latin America	21
United Nations	23

EUROPE

GERMANY

In Washington the Anglo-U.S. talks on Ruhr coal have continued since the 12th August. The Americans seem to have accepted the British view that the main trouble does not lie in the technical conditions and methods of production, but arises from the weak state of large sectors of the whole German economy. In particular, transport is inadequate to move even the coal now being lifted—production has again risen slightly and on the 15th August reached 239,572 tons. On that day the British delegation made the point that an average daily figure of 300,000 tons would demand much increased transport, and surprised the Americans by quoting the Bi-Zonal demand to the European Economic Co-operation Conference in Paris for 893 locomotives and 34,000 wagons during the current year. At this point it became clear that the Washington and Paris Conferences could not be entirely unrelated, for while the Americans in Washington seemed eager to discuss even this tall order it was clearly unwise to create the impression that Germany was being given precedence over all other nations in respect of such long-term support. German politicians are themselves well aware of the transport crisis, and the North Rhine/Westphalia Minister of the Interior has foretold "the worst transport crisis in German history" for next December unless Germany can be lent wagons by her neighbours. Whatever the fate of the transport question in Washington, progress has been made in discussing important short-term supply questions. Preliminary proposals for the import of a special allocation of steel for railway, mining supplies and miners' housing have been worked out, amounting roughly to 120,000 tons of rolled products and 10,000 tons of galvanised sheets, to a value of some $15,000,000.

American criticism of technical mining development in the Ruhr has been damped by expert British explanation of the difference between the Ruhr and American mines. On the question of ownership,

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

however, Mr. Thorp (the United States Assistant Secretary of State) has stated that while the U.S. Government's mind was not made up it would prefer "control of the actual owners by a group of Governments" to last while the problem was being further considered: he doubted whether public ownership would contribute more to security than would private ownership, and he also doubted the propriety of an occupying authority stating policy on ownership without consulting the Germans. Sir W. Strang recalled that the British had in fact kept in touch with available German authorities all along. The U.S. authorities themselves are not immaculate in this respect, for they have recently decided that individual plants of the vast I.G. Farben concern should be sold to individual buyers: this appears to override both the demand of the Hesse Government that the concern should be socialised and also the demand of the U.S. Zone States Council that the concern should be sold to the three U.S. Zone Laender.

Meanwhile General Clay in Germany has not been behaving in a manner calculated to ease negotiation in Washington. At a press conference in Frankfurt, according to Tagesspiegel of the 15th August, published in the U.S. sector, he warned German politicians (and by implication not only German) that this was no time for socialising important industries before the whole nation had been consulted and while economic needs were so pressing. General Clay also said that while the United States was paying such a large sum of money she must reserve a right of decision in economic questions. According to other information, General Clay's Labour Adviser, Mr. Jo Keenan, has been "clandestinely" visiting the British Zone to canvas support among Germans for a five-year trusteeship instead of socialisation of the Ruhr mines: he has even suggested that otherwise food imports may be withheld. Mr. Keenan was rebuffed by at least one Trade Union leader. A delegate meeting of the Industrieverband Bergbau at Herne on the 8th August also passed a sharp resolution demanding the transfer of the Ruhr mines to the Land North Rhine/Westphalia "as trustees for the coming United Germany: . . . . all projects for again subordinating the Ruhr mining industry to the power of German or international monopoly capitalists will meet the decisive resistance of the whole of the Ruhr mine-workers and the mining clerical workers."

At the Washington coal discussions Mr. Thorp handed the British delegation a paper, not yet official, proposing the establishment of a U.S./U.K. Control Group which shall replace the North German Coal Control. This Group would act as the agent of the Anglo-U.S. Bi-Partite Board in the two Zones, and would control the German coal organisation. The Group would have a single Chairman and eight members, four British and four American. The plan appears to confer greater powers of supervision than the previous attitude of the Americans in Berlin might have led one to expect. It is worth remembering, however, that General Clay in Berlin, backed by the War Department, is on many points far from agreement with the U.S. State Department, and that this divergence has not only embarrassed the British Administration in Germany, but has been allowed to cast a shadow even over the talks in Washington. A further and more important piece of background is that the American negotiators in Washington seem preoccupied not so much with the question whether the U.S. must find the money as with the question how they are to find the money and how Congress approval can be secured.

The United States has agreed with the British proposal that the Tripartite Talks on the German level-of-industry should be held in London. Meanwhile, the French have also agreed to London, but the date is not yet fixed. No increase in the permitted level-of-industry could affect production for some time, but certain figures released by General Robertson in Berlin on the 14th August are bound to create the impression that a change is necessary. General Robertson said that there had not been encouraging progress towards making the combined zones self-supporting. In the first seven months of 1947 the combined area's exports were valued at $89,000,000, of which over $55,000,000 came from the export of coal and $15,500,000 from the export of timber.

The non-Communist parties in the Soviet Zone continue to ferment (see Summary No. 402 of 30th July). Brave words unfortunately are confined almost entirely to the relative safety of Berlin. The Christian Democrat (CDU) paper has said that the communist-dominated Socialist Unity Party (SED) is falsely claiming CDU support for "a radical alteration of the social-economic structure of the eastern zone." The paper also attacks the way in which the "Bloc committees," i.e., pre-Diet meetings of the parties held apparently in camera, at which the SED browbeats its opponents, are superseding the constitutionally elected Diets and Assemblies. Comically enough, the CDU has been rebuked by the SED in Thuringia for the "tasteless" crime of venturing to mention in the Diet the shortcomings and encroachments of the SED; such comments, says the SED, should be reserved for the decent obscurity of the pre-Diet committees. The powerlessness even of the Zonal party leaders is illustrated by the "unanimous" decision of the parties in Brandenburg to admit the communist-dominated Free German Trade Union (FDGB) to the "bloc committees"; only three days earlier Kuelz, the Zonal leader of the Liberal Democrats, had said that his party could not agree to this. It seems indeed that the suppression of the non-Communist parties in Eastern and South-Eastern Europe is running only one step ahead of developments in the Soviet Zone of Germany, and the best that can be said of the bourgeois parties in Eastern Germany is that they are not allowing themselves to be steam-rollered entirely without a crunch.

The Socialisation Bill passed by the Schleswig-Holstein Diet (see last week's Summary) exceeded the authority deputed to Land Governments under Ordinance 57. The Social Democrat Government of the Land were, moreover, warned of this as long ago as May. The Bill has no more effect than a resolution at present. Its fate will not be known until it is presented to the Regional Commissioner.

AUSTRIA

The week has furnished no further evidence of the possible improvement in the Soviet attitude mentioned in last week's Summary. A new low level was reached in the Austrian Treaty Commission on the 13th August. The Soviet representative insisted that the official record of the meeting on the 6th (when Sir George Rendel and Mr. Dodge protested against the Soviet occupation of the Lobau oil refinery) should include a statement which in fact M. Novikov had never made—to the effect that any protest should be made "through the appropriate diplomatic channel." The object of this was to prevent discussion in the Allied Council. Finally it was agreed that the official record should contain no mention of either the Anglo-U.S. protest or of the Soviet reply. At the same meeting on the 13th August the Soviet representative refused to comment further on the Lobau seizure or on the principle involved in the Soviet claim to certain other assets. In the Allied Council meeting on the 14th the British representative said that he would report the position to the British Government. In practice, of course, it is the timing of the Lobau seizure, with its implication of disregard for current negotiation, which is more alarming than the action itself. Other and more important assets had already been "seized" by the Russians.

Gen. Kurasov in the Allied Council on the 14th August maintained his view that the Austro-American relief agreement threatened Austrian independence. He said that he would not be bound by objectionable clauses since they infringed his rights in his own zone besides infringing various agreements. This is a warning that the U.S.S.R. will continue to refuse the Austrian Government the powers within the Soviet Zone, which are due to it on the basis of the Control Agreement of June 1946. By its refusal the Soviet element is able to exploit the industries of the zone, for its own purposes, without the Austrian Government having knowledge of industrial output—let alone control over disposal of the products.

General Kurasov in the same meeting refused to agree to the British proposal for re-distributing throughout Austria the "Volksdeutsche" expelled from Yugoslavia. The U.S.S.R. meanwhile has been supporting Yugoslav complaints that these refugees are held in the British Zone, close to the Yugoslav frontier. The Soviet refusal even to study methods of solving the problem thus clearly arises from reluctance to lose any chance of making trouble.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA

Considerable attention is now being devoted to the harvest situation in Slovakia. It is estimated that in that province the harvest which in 1946 yielded between 30,000 and 40,000 waggon-loads will this year be reduced to some 11,000. Though shortages are therefore to be expected the position is by no means critical. In the Czech Lands the harvest is expected to be satisfactory, and M. Majer, the Social Democrat Minister for Food, has announced that he has no fears concerning the general situation. The Slovak authorities are already taking steps to improve distribution, hoarders and black-marketeers are being prosecuted, whilst the recent agreements for the pur-

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

chase of grain from Canada, America, and the Argentine, together with the assistance promised under the terms of the Trade Agreement with Soviet Russia (Russia undertook to furnish 200,000 tons of grain, but the first consignments already on the way from Hungarian Danube ports actually form part of the Hungarian reparations to the Soviet Union) should, according to the Food Minister, prove sufficient to tide over the difficulty. Under the circumstances Slovakia will claim from the Czechs more than her proportional share of such assistance.

Whether or not these reports are purposely exaggerated by the Communist-inspired Ministry of Information—in view of the elections next year, there is good ammunition here for political recrimination. The Communists will no doubt point to the inefficiencies of the Democrat-controlled Commissariats for Food and Agriculture, the failure of the bulk-purchasing system, and black-market activities. In self-defence, M. Fillo and Dr. Kvetko, Trustees for Food and Agriculture respectively, ascribe the situation not merely to climatic vagaries, but also to the deportation of the Magyars—which most Democrats oppose as a Communist stratagem—and the poor quality of the incoming repatriates from Hungary whom the Communists, it is thought, expect ultimately to rally to their cause. Both Trustees admit, however, that distribution methods are inadequate: unlike the position obtaining in the Czech Lands, Slovakia is only now beginning to establish central depots and co-operatives—and for these to succeed the province lacks perhaps both the necessary finances and organisation. Nor are conflicting ideological interests in the composition of the several Commissariats a sound foundation for efficiency.

The World Youth Festival now being staged in Prague appears to be nothing more than a gigantic parade of Communist propaganda (though Mr. Cannon, the self-appointed leader of the British contingent, has publicly refuted this suggestion in the press) with the Soviet and satellite delegates in the forefront of every meeting. It is nevertheless significant that those youth organisations connected with the Czech Popular and National Socialist Parties have more or less dissociated themselves from the Festival. The principal theme has been support for the fighting youth of Greece, Indonesia, Viet-Nam, Republican Spain, interlarded with expressions of sympathy for oppressed colonial peoples. Concurrently with the Youth Festival an International Students' Congress has been held in Prague. Here the leitmotif has been similar in so far as resolutions were passed (a) protesting against the persecution of Jewry in Palestine and (b) expressing the students' solidarity with Indonesia.

In the hope that Trieste can attract a large volume of Czechoslovak trade, an agreement has been signed between AMG, Venezia Giulia, and the Czechoslovak Government. Czechoslovakia has been granted a revolving credit of 200 million Lire to cover transport fees for traffic through the port. The agreement is particularly advantageous to Czechoslovakia in view of the recent Trade Agreement with Greece: Greek leather, fruit and tobacco will be imported against Czech textiles, timber and chemical products.

The press and radio campaign (see Summary No. 402) against the activities of Wenzel Jaksch among the Sudeten Germans in the American Zone has been greatly intensified during the past few weeks. Originally Communist in inspiration the polemics have now spread to other sections of the press, and the impression is being conveyed that Jaksch has been supported by both the American and British authorities.

POLAND

The trial of 17 prominent Poles, referred to in the last Summary, opened in Cracow on the 11th August. The accused are charged with having been leaders of a "spy ring" working under the name of the "Control Chamber." They include, on the one hand, three former senior officials of the Pilsudski régime and, on the other hand, Stanislaw Mierzwa, assistant general secretary of M. Mikolajczyk's Peasant Party, and two of its chief leaders in the Cracow region. The prosecution alleges that espionage reports, including secret information concerning the Polish Army, were conveyed by the "Control Chamber" to the "General Staff of the so-called Polish Armed Forces in London," to the Peasant Party Executive, to certain foreign representatives in Poland, and to General Anders in Italy. It is alleged that substantial sums were received from abroad for these services, that collaboration took place with prohibited underground movements in Poland; and that M. Mikolajczyk himself received the reports issued.

At the same time the Socialist and Communist Parties, which held a joint meeting in Warsaw on the 27th July, have agreed to give assistance to one another in the elimination of "reactionary" elements from both parties. Although the Communists are suggesting that their own party has been penetrated, and needs to purge itself, this new development will primarily affect the Socialists. In fact the provincial newspapers are already publishing names of persons expelled from the Socialist Party, and a number of district party officials have resigned, probably to forestall expulsion.

The Government are indeed continuing to consolidate the position which they won, though fraudulently, as the result of the January elections, one of the most important changes since that date being the process of eliminating M. Mikolajczyk's Peasant Party as a factor in the political scene. Members of this party have almost without exception been removed from the Ministries, and it is asserted that there is now no longer one Starost (administrator of a rural district) who belongs to the party. The party is still the largest numerical block in Poland, but its press is muzzled, its organisation is subject to daily persecution ranging from petty administrative annoyance to the extremes of imprisonment and occasional assassination.

The man in the street continues to regard the political situation with apathy. But, nevertheless, there are signs that he is, though with reluctance, beginning to accept the new régime as inevitable. This does not mean that there is not a mass of latent opposition to the Government. On the contrary, this opposition probably still comprises about 80 per cent. of the population. But it is unlikely to have the chance of becoming vocal so long as the present régime lasts.

SOVIET UNION

As tension between the U.S.S.R. and the West increases, a fresh Soviet propaganda drive on the issue of colonial imperialism is gathering force. The Indonesian debate in the Security Council and the presentation of the Egyptian case have afforded Pravda and Izvestiya a convenient peg on which to hang warnings of the extension of the Truman doctrine and Marshall "dollar diplomacy" to the colonial world. All the articles on the subject, while naming Great Britain as the "old watchdog of the colonial system" have insisted that her day was done. America was represented as stepping vigorously into her shoes and as taking the lead in suppressing the popular democratic movements which had sprung up throughout the colonial world after the war. The British, however, in spite of their having fought for freedom, were co-operating in this as far as they could and together with the Americans were resorting to manœuvres designed to maintain western capitalist domination in a more flexible and disguised form. A Pravda article published on the day after the arrival in Moscow of Mrs. Vijayalakshmi Pandit as the first Ambassador of her country to the U.S.S.R., quoted the Indian position as the classical example of this technique. The colonial policy of the Labour Government was said to differ in no essentials from that of the Conservatives, and it was therefore not surprising that Mr. Churchill was able wholeheartedly to applaud his rival's solution of the Indian problem, which ensured the perpetuation of British rule by splitting the country. No special publicity was given Indian Independence Day.

Linetsky devoted a long commentary to discussing American infiltration into the African sphere. The new American bases on the North African coast, though they "smelt strongly of oil" were said to be not merely designed to secure the grip of the U.S.A. on the oilfields of the Middle East, but were advance strongholds of American imperialism on the African continent. This reference to American interest in Middle Eastern oil has special point in view of the new move in connexion with the Soviet-Iranian oil agreement of April 1946 (see under "Middle East"). M. Nokrashy Pasha's presence in America was said to be due not only to the need for putting the Egyptian case before the Security Council, but also to be related to proposed negotiations on such questions as the appointment of American military experts in Egypt and the equipment of the Egyptian army with American arms. The Americans were also said to be attempting to push the French out of Africa by supporting Abd-el-Krim, and to be busy ousting the firms of other countries and buying up the strategic raw materials of Africa, in particular uranium from the Belgian Congo. All the articles naturally concluded by lauding Soviet policy, opposed to all forms of colonial exploitation, in contrast to the selfish designs of the Anglo-Saxons.

The Palestine question has not been given much space as such, but Pravda published an indignant repudiation of the suggestion put forward in the House of Commons by Major Beamish that some of the

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267643

Jewish terrorists operating in Palestine had been trained in the U.S.S.R. This "provocative fabrication" was said to have been put out in order to ward off an enquiry into the recent "Jewish pogroms" in Great Britain. These alleged outrages were the subject of further comment from Moscow in a broadcast complaining of the liberty allowed to Mosley and his followers under the "classical traditionally democratic laws of old England." The British people had fought for their liberty and independence, for the liberation of the oppressed and for the destruction of racialist theories; now they were seeing such theories running riot in their own country. Mr. Churchill was cited—along with Houston Stewart-Chamberlain, Joseph Chamberlain and Cecil Rhodes—as an advocate of a Herrenvolk view of the British race which implied that they were a nation apart, the only fully-fledged people who, as such, had a mission to civilise the world.

The Soviet citizen may not be a racialist, but nevertheless his superiority to the rest of the world is being kept well before his eyes. Several articles have recently been devoted to this theme, and it has also been elaborated in a lecture given in Moscow under the auspices of the Society for the Dissemination of Political and Scientific Knowledge. The lecturer denounced old-fashioned Russian obsequiousness to the foreigner and worship of the West and insisted that every Soviet man or woman should realise how immeasurably far his social system towered above that of any other country in the world.

National pride is also being fostered by fresh articles and films on the war extolling the Soviet war effort and decrying that of the Allies. The second anniversary of the entry of the U.S.S.R. into the war against Japan provided the occasion for a homily, the gist of which was that not only was the Soviet defeat of Germany the main foundation of the Allied victory in the East, but that it was actually the Soviet armed forces that delivered the decisive blow against the Japanese aggressor. The part played by the atomic bomb was dismissed as comparatively insignificant; it was claimed that the bomb could in any case only play a limited and not a decisive part in modern warfare. Not a single battle in the Far Eastern theatre could be in any way compared with the strategic soundness and daring of the Soviet advance in Manchuria.

Soviet sensitiveness on the subject of the relative contribution of the Allies to the war effort has been clearly illustrated by M. Vyshinsky's indignation at the protest submitted to him by His Majesty's Minister over the passages in the scenario of the Soviet film "Stalingrad" now being shot, which stated that Great Britain had broken a specific promise made in 1942 on a date for opening the Second Front. Not only did the scenario contain this deliberate falsification, but its whole tone was highly offensive to the Western Allies, especially Great Britain, and gave the impression that the Red Army had won the war practically unaided. None the less M. Vyshinsky rejected the protest outright, though he agreed to submit it to his Government. Two points that came to light in his talk with Mr. Roberts are of special interest. His harping on Mr. Churchill's Fulton speech and insistence that it should not be forgotten bears out the accumulated evidence that that speech marked the beginning of a new and unpropitious stage in the development of Anglo-Soviet relations. In the second place, M. Vyshinsky's thoroughly disingenuous stressing of the claims of freedom of the press and of the rights of authors dovetails in with the current Soviet press campaign on that theme in connection with the discussion now proceeding in the Economic and Social Council of U.N.O.

The affair of the Soviet diplomats in Sweden accused of espionage has not yet wholly died down. The latest Soviet move is the putting out of a story by Tass that the Hon. Peter Aitken shortly before his death had been visiting, "in company with a certain diplomat" an island in one of the prohibited districts in Sweden.

Tass has denied a Danish report that the Russians were starting to fortify the Soviet-Norwegian frontier in the Petsamo area, stating that only demarcation work was in progress.

The Soviet Chargé d'Affaires in Athens has protested about alleged arrests and torture by the Greek authorities of persons employed by the Soviet Embassy and other Soviet institutions in Greece. The "unlawful actions" of the Greek police authorities were said to be aimed at hindering the maintenance of economic, cultural or any other relations between Greece and the U.S.S.R.

It appears that the pan-Orthodox Conference scheduled to be held in Moscow in the coming October is to be postponed. It had been discussed ever since last January, when Metropolitan Grigori of Leningrad was visiting the Middle East. It is this same Metropolitan, now in the U.S.A., who spoke of the postponement. This change of plans may be due to the reported refusal of the invitation to Moscow by the Patriarchs of Constantinople, Jerusalem and Alexandria. The Patriarch of Antioch alone of the Big Four of Orthodoxy appeared inclined to accept. The Patriarch of Constantinople seems now to be somewhat better in health and has recently left Athens for his Patriarchate, after consulting with the Patriarch of Alexandria.

Tass has been giving some publicity to the activities of the Baptists in the U.S.S.R., who are now said to have some 3,000 churches throughout the country. Their Central body is a Church Council of 11 members, assisted by 70 elders in charge of local Baptist communities in the Republics and oblasts. It is of interest that efforts are being made on a fairly large scale to link up Baptists from the newly incorporated territories of the U.S.S.R. with the central organisation in Moscow. The Baptist periodical, Bratsky Vestnik, contains far less patriotic fervour and references to State activities than the Journal of the Moscow Patriarchate and consists largely of purely evangelical homilies.

The first sentences under the new laws for the protection of public and private property are heavy; for example, one man has been sentenced to fifteen years for stealing fish from a fish curing factory and another to eight for snatching money from a woman. It is thought that sentences may become lighter in future if the present drive proves successful in reducing crime.

The creation of new institutions and the launching of new periodicals in Moscow proceeds apace. The latest new body is the Academy of Arts of the U.S.S.R., of which the artist Alexander Gerasimov is to be the first head. The newest journal is "Philosophical Problems," the initial issue of which is devoted to a philosophical discussion of Alexandrov's book, "History of Western European Philosophy."

(See also under "Middle East" and "Hungary.")

SCANDINAVIA

Sweden

The principles underlying present-day Swedish foreign policy were outlined by M. Undén, the Foreign Minister, at a Norwegian-Swedish border rally in Strömstad on the 3rd August. His country, M. Undén said, wished to maintain as close a contact as possible with Norway and Denmark, and the common aim of the Scandinavian countries ought to be to preserve their freedom of action. It was the privilege of small nations, he went on, that they were not compelled to define their position in every international issue which arose, as the Great Powers had to do, but only in cases where their own immediate interests were affected and—this was added almost as an after-thought—where membership of an international organisation made it necessary. The interests of the Scandinavian countries would best be served by an objective evaluation, on its own merits, of every issue that arose, which in turn meant that from time to time they would find themselves siding with different groups of Great Powers. Certain critics both at home and abroad professed to see in such a policy a danger of falling between two stools but these obviously proceeded on the assumption that another war was inevitable, choosing to ignore the far more likely contingency that it would prove possible to preserve peace. Any choice between the two Great Power groupings was further complicated by the fact that, as far as the Social Democratic Party was concerned, they found themselves as far removed idealogically from the capitalist creed as from Soviet Communism.

The Foreign Minister's speech received a great deal of attention, and he was immediately attacked by certain sections of the press for the rather smug tone which he had adopted in presenting Swedish foreign policy as a product of wise and far-seeing statesmanship. Though the vast majority of the nation was agreed upon the desirability of conducting an independent foreign policy the question, nevertheless, arose to what extent this actually was a practical possibility. On the following day Svenska Dagbladet in particular had a great many pertinent remarks to make, and began by saying that, though M. Undén had studiously avoided the word "neutrality" the sum total of his address amounted exactly to this. He had, further, shown far too great a deference to the susceptibilities of the Soviet Union by omitting more clearly to define the basis for Scandinavian co-operation, and in completely failing to defend the Commander-in-Chief, General Jung, and Swedish officials against the scurrilous attacks launched against them by the Soviet propaganda machine. The greatest blemish of all, according to the paper, lay, however, in the false assessment of the two forces which to-day confronted each other in the world. Regardless of what economic

C267644

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267643

Jewish terrorists operating in Palestine had been trained in the U.S.S.R. This "provocative fabrication" was said to have been put out in order to ward off an enquiry into the recent "Jewish pogroms" in Great Britain. These alleged outrages were the subject of further comment from Moscow in a broadcast complaining of the liberty allowed to Mosley and his followers under the "classical traditionally democratic laws of old England." The British people had fought for their liberty and independence, for the liberation of the oppressed and for the destruction of racialist theories; now they were seeing such theories running riot in their own country. Mr. Churchill was cited—along with Houston Stewart-Chamberlain, Joseph Chamberlain and Cecil Rhodes—as an advocate of a Herrenvolk view of the British race which implied that they were a nation apart, the only fully-fledged people who, as such, had a mission to civilise the world.

The Soviet citizen may not be a racialist, but nevertheless his superiority to the rest of the world is being kept well before his eyes. Several articles have recently been devoted to this theme, and it has also been elaborated in a lecture given in Moscow under the auspices of the Society for the Dissemination of Political and Scientific Knowledge. The lecturer denounced old-fashioned Russian obsequiousness to the foreigner and worship of the West and insisted that every Soviet man or woman should realise how immeasurably far his social system towered above that of any other country in the world.

National pride is also being fostered by fresh articles and films on the war extolling the Soviet war effort and decrying that of the Allies. The second anniversary of the entry of the U.S.S.R. into the war against Japan provided the occasion for a homily, the gist of which was that not only was the Soviet defeat of Germany the main foundation of the Allied victory in the East, but that it was actually the Soviet armed forces that delivered the decisive blow against the Japanese aggressor. The part played by the atomic bomb was dismissed as comparatively insignificant; it was claimed that the bomb could in any case only play a limited and not a decisive part in modern warfare. Not a single battle in the Far Eastern theatre could be in any way compared with the strategic soundness and daring of the Soviet advance in Manchuria.

Soviet sensitiveness on the subject of the relative contribution of the Allies to the war effort has been clearly illustrated by M. Vyshinsky's indignation at the protest submitted to him by His Majesty's Minister over the passages in the scenario of the Soviet film "Stalingrad" now being shot, which stated that Great Britain had broken a specific promise made in 1942 on a date for opening the Second Front. Not only did the scenario contain this deliberate falsification, but its whole tone was highly offensive to the Western Allies, especially Great Britain, and gave the impression that the Red Army had won the war practically unaided. None the less M. Vyshinsky rejected the protest outright, though he agreed to submit it to his Government. Two points that came to light in his talk with Mr. Roberts are of special interest. His harping on Mr. Churchill's Fulton speech and insistence that it should not be forgotten bears out the accumulated evidence that that speech marked the beginning of a new and unpropitious stage in the development of Anglo-Soviet relations. In the second place, M. Vyshinsky's thoroughly disingenuous stressing of the claims of freedom of the press and of the rights of authors dovetails in with the current Soviet press campaign on that theme in connection with the discussion now proceeding in the Economic and Social Council of U.N.O.

The affair of the Soviet diplomats in Sweden accused of espionage has not yet wholly died down. The latest Soviet move is the putting out of a story by Tass that the Hon. Peter Aitken shortly before his death had been visiting, "in company with a certain diplomat" an island in one of the prohibited districts in Sweden.

Tass has denied a Danish report that the Russians were starting to fortify the Soviet-Norwegian frontier in the Petsamo area, stating that only demarcation work was in progress.

The Soviet Chargé d'Affaires in Athens has protested about alleged arrests and torture by the Greek authorities of persons employed by the Soviet Embassy and other Soviet institutions in Greece. The "unlawful actions" of the Greek police authorities were said to be aimed at hindering the maintenance of economic, cultural or any other relations between Greece and the U.S.S.R.

It appears that the pan-Orthodox Conference scheduled to be held in Moscow in the coming October is to be postponed. It had been discussed ever since last January, when Metropolitan Grigori of Leningrad was visiting the Middle East. It is this same Metropolitan, now in the U.S.A., who spoke of the postponement. This change of plans may be due to the reported refusal of the invitation to Moscow by the Patriarchs of Constantinople, Jerusalem and Alexandria. The Patriarch of Antioch alone of the Big Four of Orthodoxy appeared inclined to accept. The Patriarch of Constantinople seems now to be somewhat better in health and has recently left Athens for his Patriarchate, after consulting with the Patriarch of Alexandria.

Tass has been giving some publicity to the activities of the Baptists in the U.S.S.R., who are now said to have some 3,000 churches throughout the country. Their Central body is a Church Council of 11 members, assisted by 70 elders in charge of local Baptist communities in the Republics and oblasts. It is of interest that efforts are being made on a fairly large scale to link up Baptists from the newly incorporated territories of the U.S.S.R. with the central organisation in Moscow. The Baptist periodical, Bratsky Vestnik, contains far less patriotic fervour and references to State activities than the Journal of the Moscow Patriarchate and consists largely of purely evangelical homilies.

The first sentences under the new laws for the protection of public and private property are heavy; for example, one man has been sentenced to fifteen years for stealing fish from a fish curing factory and another to eight for snatching money from a woman. It is thought that sentences may become lighter in future if the present drive proves successful in reducing crime.

The creation of new institutions and the launching of new periodicals in Moscow proceeds apace. The latest new body is the Academy of Arts of the U.S.S.R., of which the artist Alexander Gerasimov is to be the first head. The newest journal is "Philosophical Problems," the initial issue of which is devoted to a philosophical discussion of Alexandrov's book, "History of Western European Philosophy."

(See also under "Middle East" and "Hungary.")

SCANDINAVIA

Sweden

The principles underlying present-day Swedish foreign policy were outlined by M. Undén, the Foreign Minister, at a Norwegian-Swedish border rally in Strömstad on the 3rd August. His country, M. Undén said, wished to maintain as close a contact as possible with Norway and Denmark, and the common aim of the Scandinavian countries ought to be to preserve their freedom of action. It was the privilege of small nations, he went on, that they were not compelled to define their position in every international issue which arose, as the Great Powers had to do, but only in cases where their own immediate interests were affected and—this was added almost as an after-thought—where membership of an international organisation made it necessary. The interests of the Scandinavian countries would best be served by an objective evaluation, on its own merits, of every issue that arose, which in turn meant that from time to time they would find themselves siding with different groups of Great Powers. Certain critics both at home and abroad professed to see in such a policy a danger of falling between two stools but these obviously proceeded on the assumption that another war was inevitable, choosing to ignore the far more likely contingency that it would prove possible to preserve peace. Any choice between the two Great Power groupings was further complicated by the fact that, as far as the Social Democratic Party was concerned, they found themselves as far removed idealogically from the capitalist creed as from Soviet Communism.

The Foreign Minister's speech received a great deal of attention, and he was immediately attacked by certain sections of the press for the rather smug tone which he had adopted in presenting Swedish foreign policy as a product of wise and far-seeing statesmanship. Though the vast majority of the nation was agreed upon the desirability of conducting an independent foreign policy the question, nevertheless, arose to what extent this actually was a practical possibility. On the following day Svenska Dagbladet in particular had a great many pertinent remarks to make, and began by saying that, though M. Undén had studiously avoided the word "neutrality" the sum total of his address amounted exactly to this. He had, further, shown far too great a deference to the susceptibilities of the Soviet Union by omitting more clearly to define the basis for Scandinavian co-operation, and in completely failing to defend the Commander-in-Chief, General Jung, and Swedish officials against the scurrilous attacks launched against them by the Soviet propaganda machine. The greatest blemish of all, according to the paper, lay, however, in the false assessment of the two forces which to-day confronted each other in the world. Regardless of what economic

C267644

REPEAT
REPETER

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267645

system the Social Democrats favoured the Foreign Minister could hardly fail to be aware of the fact that the dividing-line lay between States upholding the principles of justice and the freedom of the individual, on the one hand, and those where despotism and oppression ruled on the other.

The criticisms of Svenska Dagbladet seem to be very much to the point and they have, therefore, been reported at some length, but this does not mean that M. Undén's speech did not receive a considerable amount of praise in other quarters. His realism was generally approved, and many credited him both with great ability and clear vision. His speech and the press comment do, however, make it evident that Sweden has in no way abandoned her traditional policy of neutrality and that she is more likely to allow herself to be influenced by threats and cajolery than by considerations of moral right to which she cannot be blind.

Norway

While M. Undén was expounding his doctrines across the border, the Norwegian people were gathering to pay homage to King Haakon on his 75th birthday. The immense popularity which surrounds the person of King Haakon was once more illustrated in a most striking manner, and it is not without significance that the Norwegian Communist press should vie with the most conservative papers in singing his praise.

The day itself was marked by various State functions, and after attending a service in the Church of our Saviour the Royal party drove to the palace through the crowded streets of Oslo. Later the King was presented with a yacht as a gift from the Norwegian people, the money having been raised by public subscription. In a speech from the balcony of the Town Hall, during which he was repeatedly interrupted by cheering, King Haakon said inter alia that he believed he had gained the trust of the people because he had himself before the coronation insisted upon a referendum. "When I made that decision, it was because I wished to become a rallying-point and not a cause of conflict. Forty-two years later I believe I can now say that I have attained the objective I set out to achieve."

Curtailed as the royal power must of necessity be within a limited monarchy there can be little doubt that in Norway today King Haakon is by far the most important single factor. His prestige and popularity have certainly never been equalled in modern times, and in the affection and loyalty with which he is regarded by his people he can stand comparison, probably with the later years of the reign of Queen Victoria.

THE LOW COUNTRIES

Belgium

After intermittent debates beginning on the 31st July, the Belgian Senate ratified the Belgo-Netherlands-Luxembourg Customs Union (Benelux) on the 13th August by 93 votes to 14, with 21 abstentions. The most important contribution to the series of debates came from M. Paul van Zeeland, the Catholic ex-Prime Minister, who had been responsible for drawing up the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee's report on Benelux. In the course of a long speech, delivered on the 7th August, M. van Zeeland said that the consequences of the removal of customs barriers for "certain Belgian producers" ought not to be exaggerated. The overriding consideration was that the level of the Belgian and Dutch economies should be maintained and strengthened. M. van Zeeland added that he did not fear Dutch industrial competition, though he admitted the possibility of "difficulties" for (Belgian) agriculture. The measures now before them he went on, were, after all, transitory; and those who would be affected by them had to be given time to adapt themselves to the new economic conditions so created. Each member of Benelux was free to take whatever steps were necessary when prices did eventually fall and when its market was invaded. He pleaded strongly for ratification as the only road to safety. The alternative was a return to "nationalistic methods and protective tariffs": surely no one to-day believed that the foundations of economic recovery rested upon nationalism and tariffs? The new road along which they had to travel ought first to lead to reconciliation among European States, and ultimately to reconciliation among the States of the whole world. The association of Belgium and the Netherlands was the first step towards the formation of a Western European bloc. The prosperity which Belgium at present enjoyed was precarious, said Mr. van Zeeland in conclusion: if a world crisis developed, the country would suffer heavily. Even if economic conditions remained as they were, Belgium could not maintain her state of prosperity unless she developed her economy. He did not minimize the difficulties which would have to be faced in applying the principles of Benelux. Let there be no illusions: the eyes of the world were turned towards Benelux and Belgium. That had been said to him only a few days before by two business men—one from South America, the other from the East. Much could be expected if they succeeded.

C267646

The Netherlands

The Government are understood to have decided upon the second half of September for the meeting of a "Round Table Conference" with delegates from the Netherlands West Indies to discuss the future relations between these territories and the Netherlands, in accordance with the principles laid down by Queen Wilhelmina's broadcast of the 7th December, 1942. A joint Secretariat is in process of formation.

FRANCE

The thirty-ninth French Socialist Party Congress opened at Lyons on the 14th August under the Presidency of M. Cersot, Federal Secretary for the Rhône Department. Delegates representing Socialists in the U.K., Belgium, the Netherlands, Italy, Spain, Greece, Switzerland, Austria, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Bulgaria and Palestine also attended and addressed the Congress. The first day's proceedings were mainly devoted to a consideration of reports submitted to the Congress, the most important of these—the Rapport moral—being adopted by 3,068 votes to 1,111, with 606 abstentions. The voting on this report was preceded by a speech from M. Guy Mollet, Secretary-General of the Party, who put in a strong plea for its adoption and warned delegates against the dangers of disunity in the party ranks. He did not deny that there were weaknesses in the party machine; and it was for this reason that he earnestly appealed to the Congress to accept the proposals (made earlier in the day) for party reorganisation, under which the machine would be adapted to meet present necessities.

On the 17th the Congress heard M. Ramadier, the Prime Minister, vigorously defend his Government's policy, which has been criticised as being out of harmony with Socialist principles. What other policy, he asked, could the Government possibly pursue while on the one hand they were confronted with the "Gaullist danger" and on the other the Communists? There had been a time when the party had "perhaps been too inclined to observe what the Communists were doing, before undertaking its own action." France now knew "how to see through the temporary tactics" which were "a part of the general strategy of the Communists." Referring to the strikes which had occurred earlier in the year, M. Ramadier asked: "Was not their 'spontaneity' surprising when one considers that all these strikes were directed against the State and nationalised industry?" The rest of his speech was taken up with current questions. He had no intention of yielding to any measures which might help to increase inflation; the French Union would be erected on the principle that all peoples who were capable of enjoying all its benefits were entitled to liberty; the Marshall offer was welcome, but he rejected the inevitability of a struggle between "the two Great Powers of the World;" lastly, he affirmed the Socialist Party's duty—united action, not opposition. Fresh from the triumph of seeing 20 of his supporters elected to the Directing Committee of the party, M. Mollet (who is known to be the Prime Minister's most determined critic) replied with a speech which depicted a Socialist Prime Minister dealing with economic and social problems in such a manner as to suggest that the rights and interests of the workers—the backbone of the party—were not being put first. Next day (18th August), M. Mollet scored another success when his motion, calling for support of the Government in return for certain fundamental changes of policy, was carried. ~~2,443 bloc votes were cast in~~ (i) greater State control in economic affairs; (ii) more liberal colonial administration and immediate peace in Indo-China; (iii) a reduction of military credits; (iv) party reorganisation; and (v) no collaboration with the Communists. Those were five in number;-

The whole meeting of the Congress has, indeed, been an unqualified success for M. Mollet and his doctrinaire supporters, who dealt their heaviest blow when a resolution of M. Mollet, which declared that the Parliamentary group of the Party had ceased to practise the true principles of Socialism and called upon them "now to follow that policy in the Government if possible, and in opposition if necessary," was carried. 2,443 bloc votes were cast in favour. On the other hand, the delegates showed little inclination to get rid of M. Ramadier altogether, a motion for his resignation receiving only 274 votes, while another, supporting his policy, received

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

2,002. The Congress ended on the evening of the 18th August. M. Mollet later explained that the "essential difference" between his group and the supporters of M. Ramadier's policy was that "a certain number of our comrades" subordinated the "application of a programme to being in the Government." "They prefer to abandon the programme so as to keep their place," added M. Mollet; "we, on the contrary, say programme first."

On the 16th August M. C. F. Baron, Governor of French India, announced impending reforms for French India—Pondicherry, Chandernagore, Karikal, Mahé and Yanam—which are tantamount to complete autonomy subject to "a united federal bond." The title of Governor is to be changed to "Commissioner of the Republic." "When the great neighbour nation has a firm constitution," said M. Baron, "the population of French India will be able to decide its future in complete sovereignty." These territories, with a population of about 400,000 (of whom only about 300 are Europeans), are at present represented by one Deputy in the National Assembly and by two Councillors in the Council of the Republic. As a first gesture a number of tiny enclaves (loges) are being ceded forthwith to the Indian Union. It appears that the French are not a little perturbed regarding the future of their major Indian possessions. There is an unwillingness to part with them both for economic as well as sentimental reasons: there is also the question of the precedent which any surrender of them might create. Nationalism, however, has manifested itself here as strongly as elsewhere in India.

M. Bollaert, French High Commissioner for Indo-China, arrived somewhat unexpectedly from Saigon on the 15th August. To journalists who questioned him at the airport he gave no indication of the purpose of his visit beyond saying that he had come for consultations with the Government "on various questions affecting Indo-China," and that his stay in Paris would be "as brief as possible."

SWITZERLAND

The Swiss Conservative Party having submitted a comprehensive Note opposing the direct federal tax, there follows a similar Memorandum from the Union of Commerce and Industry, the Union of Arts and Crafts, and the Bankers' Association to the Federal Department of Finance and Customs, objecting to any increase of direct centralised taxation and taking the impost for national defence as a case in point. This Memorandum is a reply to the report of the experts upon the reform of federal taxation. It is pointed out that the idea of the direct federal tax is at variance with the constitution, that it tends towards centralisation, is expensive to collect, is unfair in its incidence, and creates a double levy. The principle of the confederacy as against that of centralised government is argued in the Memorandum, which justifies the reluctance of the Cantons (shown especially by the French-speaking ones), to allow any encroachment upon their rights. A similar insistence on cantonal rights, it may be recalled, marked the holding of a referendum on federal co-ordination of transport in the Spring. The Memorandum contains alternative proposals for fiscal reform.

The Federal Commission for Rhine transport has recently held several meetings under the presidency of M. Robert Grimm. Owing to the large amount of freight between the sea and Basle, it is recommended that both importers and shippers should give priority to goods of vital importance. Meanwhile the Commission is studying the question further in case it should prove necessary to take special measures to safeguard the food supplies of the country.

On the 31st July, M. Petitpierre, the head of the Political Department, expressed his views privately on the "Marshall Plan." He considered it to be vital for Europe that the "Plan" should succeed, but this would depend upon French agreement with the British and Americans about the Ruhr; when once this was achieved, all other problems would be resolved. Failure upon this point would mean failure of the "Plan" and a victory for Russian policy. Switzerland could help in certain small ways; nor did she rule out the possibility of larger demands being made upon her, in spite of the heavy calls already made upon her industries and the large credits (amounting to 250 million francs) which she had already given under the Washington Agreement. The chief items she could supply were machine-tools, vegetables and fruit. M. Petitpierre believed that there was a sense of relief in the satellite countries of Russia—with all of which she has active trade relations—because Switzerland was taking part in the conference on the "Marshall Plan." They regarded her as a country with no axe to grind and which might even serve their interests in connexion with the "Plan." The official Swiss welcome to the "Plan" was outlined in Summary No. 399.

SOUTH-EAST EUROPE

Hungary

M. Nagy, broadcasting from the U.S.A., has advised his compatriots to abstain from voting in the forthcoming Election. In Hungary itself there is widespread consternation at the abuses resulting from the Electoral Law which as at present applied disfranchises at least 20 per cent. of the electorate—a Communist source places the figure at 22 per cent. Representations made by a bourgeois-democratic delegation to M. Rajk were met by assurances that irregularities would be remedied, but since the period allowed for appeal by individuals terminates on 18th August and electoral lists are to be closed eight days later, time will not allow of a thorough investigation into the cases of the 1,000,000 persons said to be concerned. Many who at first took the news of their disqualification apathetically finally appealed against it in the belief that it might prove merely the first of a series of steps curtailing their civic rights—a fear which M. Rajk now declares to be groundless. Cardinal Mindszenty, speaking in the name of the Hungarian Bishops' Council, protested against the disfranchisement of many of his supporters, but all parties stand to lose votes from what on higher levels is ascribed to the excessive zeal of underlings. It is, indeed, difficult to understand what selective principle, if any, is involved. Budapest, where left-wing tendencies predominate, appears to have suffered more than other parts of the country. Whole streets failed to receive the electoral lists, names included on the original lists distributed by the Minister of the Interior were subsequently erased, and prospective voters who put a dash instead of a "no" in answer to the question whether they had belonged to a Fascist organization were in consequence disfranchised. Other pretexts advanced are entirely frivolous, such as that Jews interned in ghettoes during the German occupation "had escaped to the West," that persons of academic distinction suffered from mental incapacity, or that elderly women were "under police surveillance for reasons of morality." H.M. Representative and the Representative of the U.S.A. have been instructed to protest to M. Dinnyes and to point out Hungary's obligation under the Peace Treaty to assure her citizens the enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms, including freedom of political opinion.

Inside the Coalition exchanges between Communists and Social Democrats are sharper than between Communists and Smallholders. MM. Szakasits, Ries and Böhm have firmly rejected the proposal urged by MM. Rakosi, and Gerö for a fusion of the Workers' parties, while the Communists have gone out of their way to attack the small traders' organizations of Koksz and Ipok which are under Social Democratic domination. The Communists by contrast praise the Smallholders for eliminating reaction from their ranks and suggest that words rather than ideals separate the two parties.

The Independent Hungarian Democratic Party continues to be the most active member of the Opposition, though there are indications of trouble ahead for its leader, Fr. Balogh, who has been accused of misappropriating 200,000 forints from the Minorities' Fund. It is also rumoured that "reasons of health" may compel him to retire from political life. According to Magyar Nemzet talks are taking place between his Party and that of M. Barankovics. M. István Szabó, the leader of the Smallholders' right-wing, and M. Imre Kovacs of the National Peasant Party are reported to be joining M. Pfeiffer. It is added that hostility on the part of the printers has prevented the publication of the weekly newspaper which was to be the organ of M. Pfeiffer's Party.

Apart from the protest referred to above Cardinal Mindszenty is playing no prominent rôle in the electoral preparations. While this may be largely due to Vatican instructions the Cardinal is also well aware that he enjoys the unreserved support only of Sister Schlachta's small following.

Hungarian Press reports state that M. Sulyok is likely to leave the country before the Election. The Deputy leader of the former Freedom Party, M. Vincze Nagy, has already escaped abroad owing to a mistaken belief that he was about to be arrested.

Russian claims on Hungary under the Potsdam Agreement have been reduced from 200,000,000 to 40,000,000 dollars, and it appears probable that they will be scaled down still further. Hungary has paid 6 million out of a 7½ million forint cash advancement agreement negotiated with the French Government against war damages. United Kingdom nationals, on

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267649

the other hand, who have yet to be indemnified, regard the situation with increasing gloom in view of the 50 per cent. increase in wages accompanying the introduction of the Three Year Plan and the limited supply of money available.

The British refusal to support Hungary's request for admission to the United Nations is considered an unmerited rebuff, particularly after Lord Pakenham's statement concerning the elections. Communist newspaper, Szabad Nép, complains that the Anglo-Saxon attitude is "incomprehensible and unreasonable," while the Social Democratic Népszava, observes that Hungary is the scapegoat in Great Power quarrels.

Roumania

For some time past stabilisation of the currency has been in the air, and one result has been an enormous increase of price of all commodities combined with a sudden and surprising shortage, goods vanishing from the Bucharest shops like magic. On the 12th August a decision of the Committee on Stabilisation was published ordering the entire population to register within three days for the purpose of exchanging old currency for new. It is suspected that this fantastic order is intended to enable the Government to deal with the details of the exchange when it takes place in truly Roumanian fashion. The amounts within certain limits which are held by the various foreign diplomatic missions are to be deposited at the National Bank and exchanged on the first day on which the new rule operates. The British Mission has exchanged £500 at a rate of 605·25 lei to the £ sterling, less a bank charge of 181 lei.

The new coins and notes range from 50 bani (half a leu) to 1,000 lei. It is many years since "bani" has had any meaning except as a colloquialism for "small change." 20,000 old lei are to be exchanged for one new leu. The new rate of 605·25 lei to the £ sterling is approximately the same as obtained in the years just before the war, although virtually all business except foreign commercial exchange was done at a rate of about 1,000 lei to the £. There has always been a semi-official black market in currency in Roumania. The most hopeful part of the new regulations is a new scale of wages and prices. If this can be made effective, it may mean the beginning of better times.

When there was some question of Roumania purchasing grain from America, gold was deposited in Switzerland as security for payment. 15 tons of gold has now been sent back to Roumania, and it is surmised that the reason for this step is the necessity for providing backing for the new currency. A large amount of Roumanian gold remains blocked in Switzerland.

Closely connected with the ratification of the Peace Treaty (see Summary No. 402) is the Roumanian application for admission to the United Nations. On this subject the Minister for Foreign Affairs has admitted that the main result of Roumania's admission at the present moment would be to give the Russian bloc an additional vote. Dl Tătărescu went on to say that if he were Roumania's representative his vote would be nothing but a lie, and he added with a certain naiveté that he was not given to lying save in such exceptional cases. He intended to press for ratification by Roumania this week, and so clear the way for the Russian ratification—which the Soviet authorities had decided must be carried out only after ratification by the satellite countries. It does not follow that the Soviet ratification would be forthcoming even then, if Russia thought well to delay the matter further.

All that has been happening leads step by step to the next stage in the efforts to eliminate the last vestiges of Roumanian independence and to compromise the King. The King has been isolated and left without any political support against the Government. There is no doubt that the people remain loyal and devoted to him, but people in an official position find it necessary to be extremely cautious about the expression of their loyalty while Russian forces remain in the country. The King's immediate entourage expect that a crisis may be forced upon the country at any time, and agents of the secret police, i.e., the Roumanian counterpart of the N.V.D., are keeping a close watch upon the private airfield at the King's country residence. The King represents the Roumanian people in a way that the Government certainly does not, and he will undoubtedly be the rallying-point if and when the moment arrives for a movement which will restore his country's independence.

There has been a lessening of party activity since the "discovery of the escape plot." But the Ankara radio reports that the eight Roumanians who took refuge in Turkey have told the Turkish press that the reason for their flight was fear of Communism, and the "cruelty under which Roumanians live." They took their tickets in the ordinary way, boarded the aircraft, and when in the air asked the pilot who was in Russian employ to change course and take them to Turkey. As he refused they "had to get rid of him," and one of the Roumanians, who was a pilot, flew the plane to Turkey.

C267650

Yugoslavia

The Ljubljana spy trials ended last week with three death-sentences—on Prof. Furlan, Ljubo Sirc and Dr. Nagode—and long prison sentences on the other defendants. The charges, of a flimsy nature, included giving information on the political, economic and military situation in Yugoslavia to diplomatic representatives of foreign Powers (of whom the chief, by implication, was the former British Consul). In the cases of Furlan and Sirc, their friendship with recent British Consuls has undoubtedly been the main reason for their being condemned to death. They consistently carried on a normal friendly social relationship with them at a time when nearly all Slovenes kept well clear of the British Consulate. The whole episode is a grim commentary on the statements frequently made that in Yugoslavia access to representatives of foreign Powers is free and that social relationships with them are normal.

H.M. Ambassador, in a protest to the Yugoslav Government, stated that Furlan's relationship with the British Consul had been quite innocent. The evidence of the trial suggested, he said, that contacts between Yugoslav citizens and officials of foreign Powers were regarded as treasonable in themselves. This is the fifth political trial in recent weeks, and there is evidence that the Ministry of the Interior, alarmed at the internal situation, and in fear for the safety of leading Communists, has staged them—and given them immense publicity in the press—in order to warn everybody that connections with foreigners are most unhealthy.

Both Tito and Kardelj, it now appears, were at first enthusiastically in favour of accepting the invitation to the discussions in Paris on the Marshall Plan. Simić, the Foreign Minister, in order to strengthen his doubtful standing with the Communists, threw his weight against acceptance. The decision to accept the Russian directive not to participate, which overruled Tito and Kardelj, was eventually taken at the bidding of the extreme Communists, Ranković, Head of Ozna, and Djilas, who are responsible for ensuring that non-Communist Ministers toe the Party line.

A draft agreement has been drawn up by the British Government for submission to the Yugoslav Government about the disposal of Yugoslav Displaced Persons. It provides for the surrender to the Yugoslav Government of all Yugoslav nationals against whom a prima facie case of active collaboration with the Axis Powers exists; for facilities for Yugoslav Officials to question Displaced Persons; for the break-up of organisations in British-controlled territory directed against the present Yugoslav Government, it being understood that representations shall be made to the Italian Government by the British Government requesting the dissolution of all such bodies outside Displaced Persons camps on Italian soil; and for the segregation of Yugoslavs engaged in anti-repatriation propaganda, together with access for Yugoslav authorities to these camps for the purpose of carrying on repatriation propaganda. All Yugoslavs in camps against whom a case of collaboration does not exist and who are unwilling to be repatriated, will be moved into the Anglo-American Zone of Germany from Austria and Italy.

The four British soldiers kidnapped on the Austro-Yugoslav frontier on the 10th July were returned to Austria by the Yugoslav authorities on the 8th August.

Sehović, Yugoslav Chargé d'Affaires in Athens, returned to Belgrade last week, and it is believed in Greek Government circles that this departure is connected with a coming recognition of a 'Free Greek Government' by Russia and her satellites. Proclamation of an "Independent Greek Republic" was reported in all Belgrade newspapers on the 19th August.

The Yugoslav Trade Delegation arrived in the U.K. on the 14th August, to discuss with the British Government a new monetary agreement and trading prospects. It is also hoped to settle the question of compensation for British property in Yugoslavia, about which discussions have previously taken place. An Anglo-United States Trade Mission from the Western Zone of Germany has arrived in Belgrade to discuss possibilities of trade. A Dutch Trade Mission has also gone to Belgrade to discuss questions arising out of the Dutch-Yugoslav Trade Agreement. Finally a Civil Aviation Agreement has been signed between Roumania and Yugoslavia, and negotiations are taking place for a similar agreement with Bulgaria.

Bulgaria

After the familiar agitation—in the press, by poster, leaflet, film and "spontaneous" resolution, and on the air—for a death-sentence, and after the usual travesty of judicial impartiality, Nikola Petkov was on the 16th August condemned

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

to death, for conspiracy, although, even by Bulgarian standards no case for such a penalty was made out. The other four accused were sentenced to rigorous imprisonment ranging from five to fifteen years. The object of this nefarious trial was plainly to destroy the core of the Agrarian Party which alone stands between the Communists and undisputed power. Even if the perpetration of a further judicial murder were stopped by a successful appeal for clemency or for cassation, there can be little doubt that one whose only offence it is to have been the leader of the Agrarians, would not be allowed to return to freedom except as a broken man.

The British and American representatives on the Allied Control Commission urgently requested their Soviet colleague on the 18th August to instruct the Bulgarian Government to suspend the sentence pending a review of the case by the Comission.

Turkey

The undeclared war in Greece remains a major preoccupation for the Turkish Government. Apprehension has been increased by the prospect of the withdrawal of the last British forces from Greece and by the Tito–Dimitrov pact, which is regarded as being aimed primarily against Greece but secondarily against Turkey. Among leading Turks there is a real fear lest the Greek régime should collapse through attrition and be replaced by Communist government, and lest, after creating such an irreparable situation, Russia should turn her attention next to Italy and finally to Turkey. This fear may account for the ventilation in the press of ideas so lacking—at first sight, at any rate—in realism as those of a Mediterranean Confederation and a Greek-Turkish Federation. It is unfortunate that at this very time stories should be appearing in the Turkish press about the persecution of Turks in Western Thrace. The Turkish authorities allege that these people are not only raided by bandits, but also punished by the Greek regular forces for not stopping the bandits.

While the Grand National Assembly has been in recess the newspapers have filled much space with rumours of imminent internal political charges, but in fact no such changes seem to be in prospect. The Grand National Assembly is to meet again on the 25th August for ten days and then adjourn again until the 29th October. In November there is to be a congress of the Republican People's Party which, it may be presumed, will discuss further steps in the direction of true democracy.

The Occumenial Patriarch, who returned from Athens to Istanbul on the 3rd August, was reported by the press to have dismissed all idea of his resignation, saying that he was in perfect health.

THE MIDDLE EAST

Egypt

Despite the surfeit of over-confident statements from the Egyptian delegates at Lake Success, it now appears that most sections of the politically-minded public, apart from the more extreme nationalists, are less hopeful of success before the Security Council, while there is increased talk in Cairo of the resumption of direct negotiations. The more enlightened elements of the population realise that, whatever the outcome at Lake Success, the problem of future Anglo-Egyptian-Sudanese relations will remain.

This general uneasiness is reflected in the somewhat less optimistic tone of the press. Most papers are of the opinion that the Egyptian case is not a legal one suitable for reference to the International Court of Justice. They also hold that, if the Security Council fails to give Egypt satisfaction, it will have proved to the world its incompetence to settle international disputes. Both Opposition and pro-Government papers suggest that the delegates of the Sudanese Independence Front who recently left for New York (see last week's Summary) are, in reality, British emissaries, and that it is the Ashigga representatives who speak for the majority of the Sudanese people. The speeches at the Security Council on the 11th August were dealt with in much the same way as the earlier ones (see last week's Summary). Al Ahram and Ikhwan al Muslimin both approve Nokrashy's statement of the 13th August, and maintain that Sir A. Cadogan's is full of misconceptions. Misri expresses satisfaction at the Polish member's support for the evacuation of British forces from the Nile Valley, and hopes that representatives of other Powers will follow his lead. Assas, endeavouring to bolster up public confidence, asserts that British readiness to resume negotiations indicates a desire to find a way out of their critical situation. Moqattam, adopting an air of injured innocence, asserts that it was Egypt who supported Britain to save the British Empire in Asia and Africa, and denies that the British forces saved Egypt from Axis invasion.

The last few weeks have produced several memoranda on the Egyptian case. Four have been produced by Sanhoury Pasha, present Minister of Education, now in the United States with the Egyptian delegation, and another, in four parts, by Adli Andraos Bey, a Judge who was Legal Adviser to the Egyptian delegation at San Francisco and is now Head of the European Section of the King's Cabinet. Other contributors include Baghat Badawi, one of the Legal Advisers to the present delegation, Abbas Annar Bey, a professor at Fuad I University, and Kamil Abar Rahman Bey, the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

These memoranda offer no further enlightenment on the basis of the Egyptian claims. Various arguments, founded, in the main, on unproven premises, are presented to show that the 1936 Treaty has become null and void, while the 1899 Condominium Agreement is repudiated on the plea that Egypt was not entitled at that time to sign a document. The memoranda contain the usual outpourings of calumny against the British, such as the charge that Great Britain, with imperialist designs on the Sudan, has consistently prevented the Egyptians from filling their rightful place in its administration, and allegations of British encouragement to Sudanese separatism.

Sidky Pasha, in an interview with the weekly magazine Musawwar, is reported to have said that he still held to his previously-expressed view that it would have been more advantageous for Egypt to have solved her problems with Britain by direct negotiation. He then maintained that British talk of independence for the Sudan and the holding of a plebiscite there had an imperialistic ring—an explanation for the way in which Great Britain had hastened to send the "separatist" delega- to the Security Council to back her there. He concluded by calling for a United Front as the only way to compel Britain to recognise Egypt's rights, but declined to indicate who should lead this front.

The Egyptian Government has decided to grant official recognition to India and Pakistan.

(See also under "United Nations.")

Palestine

The past week has been notable for an outbreak of clashes between Arabs and Jews. The worst two days were the 14th and 15th August, which witnessed a number of shooting, assault, stoning and hand-grenade incidents, as well as eight cases of arson, four committed by Jews and four by Arabs. The most serious incident of the week was an attack on the night of the 14th/15th August by some 30–35 Jews on an Arab-owned building in an orange-grove near Petah Tiqvah. Haganah have admitted responsibility for this incident, which, it claims, was in retribution for the Arab attack on the Jewish café at Tel Aviv (see last week's Summary). Four Arabs were shot dead and seven buried in the explosion which subsequently destroyed the building. Altogether, during the past week some eighteen Arabs and eight Jews have been killed, and many more seriously injured. The Jewish Agency have appealed to the Government to restore order.

The Irgun maintain that this new outbreak of Arab terrorist activity is part of a premeditated British plan to incite Arabs against Jews. A recent Irgun broadcast concluded by asserting that the Irgun would continue its fight against the British, not the Arabs. On the 16th August a Jewish youth in Tel Aviv was observed posting pamphlets which contained the following message :—

> "To our neighbours, the Arabs. Do not touch us, but join us in the fight against the British!"

A plea to all parties and sections of the Yishuv to unite in the face of the recent Arab attacks was made on the night of the 11th August by the Central Committee of the General Zionist Assembly at an emergency meeting in Tel Aviv. The Committee are reported to have decided to take all steps to avert the danger of a civil war among the Jews in Palestine—an indication of how strained relations are growing between the extremists and the more moderate elements. A similar call to unity and an appeal to combat terrorism with all available means was made by Mr. Ben Gurion, Chairman of the Jewish Agency Executive, at a Conference of the Palestine Jewish Labour Party (Mapai), which opened on the 10th August.

The Jews claim that the Arab attack on the café near Tel Aviv (see last week's Summary) was led by Mahmoud Labib, the leader of the new Arab Youth Organisation

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267653

which has absorbed the former Najjada and Futuwa. If this be so, the rumours that the fusion of these two groups is a prelude to more intensive and more widespread Arab activity would appear to be well-founded. At present, however, there is no reason to believe that these Arab outbreaks have been carefully organised. Responsible Arab leaders, supported by the influential Arab press, have called upon the Arabs to desist from these activities and to remain calm at this critical period. Nevertheless, the temporary permit allowing Mahmoud Labib to remain in Palestine is not to be extended, and he will be required to leave the country as soon as he has recovered from an alleged illness.

The U.N.S.C.O.P. sub-committee which has been visiting the Jewish Displaced Persons camps in Germany and Austria returned to Geneva on the 14th August. It appears that they have formed a clear view of the prevailing unrest in the camps and of the desire of the majority of the Jews to emigrate to Palestine. General Clay is reported to have stated that, of the 153,000 at present in camps in the American Zone, only about 18–20,000 in his opinion, wish to integrate themselves into the German economy rather than leave Germany. Major-General Sir Bryan Robertson, in charge of D.P. affairs in the British Zone, is reported to have confirmed that nearly all the 11,000 Jewish Displaced Persons in his zone wish to go to Palestine.

On the 13th August the European Zionist Conference opened at Karlsbad. One of the most reasonable speeches was made by Dr. Nahum Goldmann, who admitted that gratitude was due to Great Britain for having provided the legal possibility of Jewish reconstruction in Palestine, but at the same time called upon Great Britain to surrender the Mandate, and urged that the Jewish State must be established at whatever cost. Mr. Shertok strongly condemned the activities of the Irgun, and stressed the necessity for an immediate solution of the Palestine problem. Dr. Moshe Sneh, however, maintained that the demand for the establishment of a Jewish State should not be pressed at this stage. He then expressed his anxiety lest U.N.S.C.O.P. should advocate the creation of a very small Jewish State unable to maintain itself, or some form of partition which would deny the Jews sovereignty. This Conference is to be followed by a European Conference of General Zionists, which is to sit in Paris on the 20th and 21st August.

Iraq

The Treasury announced on the 13th August that a financial agreement, regulating the use of the Iraqi sterling balances (see Summary No. 401) over a period of five years as from the 15th July, 1947, had been signed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Iraqi Ambassador on behalf of their respective Governments, Iraq is to remain in the sterling area.

The Regent and Nuri Said arrived in London on the 15th August. One of the objects of the Regent's visit is to make arrangements for King Faisal's schooling in England. The young King is to go to Bryanston after a short time at a preparatory school.

Persia

The most important development has been the return of the Soviet Ambassador, Sadchikov (who has been in Moscow for the past three months) on the 10th August and his immediate renewal of demands for the submission to the Majlis of the oil agreement drawn up in April 1946 (see Summary No. 339 of the 10th April, 1946). He is reported to have stated that his Government had given their approval to the text, and expected the agreement to be passed without modification. They would judge from Persia's response to this request, he said, whether or not she wished to have friendly relations with the Soviet Union. The Prime Minister maintained that, in view of the changed political situation, there was no hope of the Majlis passing the agreement, but added that he would submit the text as given him. It appears that the Soviet Ambassador warned Qawam that if the Majlis were to reject the agreement, the Soviet Government would ask for a concession similar to that of the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company. M. Sadchikov has now suggested that, since the agreement was unlikely to pass the Majlis as it stood, it should be submitted to a joint Perso-Soviet Committee for revision.

Until the Majlis is legally constituted it is impossible for the agreement to be formally submitted or for the suggested committee to be formed. The minority opposed to Qawam, known to be controlled by the Shah, are adopting delaying tactics by breaking the Parliamentary quorum (which under the Persian Constitution is abnormally high). The Soviet Ambassador, confronted with this situation, has accused the Prime Minister of "unfriendly procrastination."

C267654

THE FAR EAST

China

In Nanking political affairs are reported to continue in a state of "suspended animation," pending some pointer from General Wedemeyer as to the real purpose of his mission. He recently returned to Nanking from a flying tour of the Peiping, Tientsin and Manchurian areas, during which he visited the Fushun Coal Mines and also made a point of getting into personal touch with most of the prominent Chinese residents. Somewhat irritatingly, however, he appears to be exercising particular care to give no clue to his general impressions and conclusions.

A United Press report from Shanghai quotes "a high United States official in Nanking, who is in a position to exert influence on General Wedemeyer's final recommendations to President Truman," as expressing the view that there are three courses open to the General to recommend: a complete hands-off China policy; a middle-of-the-road "watching and waiting" programme; or all-out assistance to General Chiang Kai-shek and his Government. According to this report if, as the "high official" confidently expects, the third course is adopted, the following steps would be required of General Chiang Kai-shek by the United States Government:—

> A complete and real reorganisation of the Government, leaving the door open for eventual participation by the Communists;
>
> Reduction of the size of the National Army, which is now consuming between 70 and 80 per cent. of the national revenue;
>
> The Army to be converted into a more mobile, efficient and purely defensive arm through training and equipment by U.S. officers;
>
> Communists to be confined to certain defined areas—roughly those they now occupy—and in which they will be free from interference from Government forces;
>
> The Chinese Government to accept American advisers, who would be responsible directly and solely to the United States Government and would supervise the administration of substantial U.S. economic and financial assistance to Government-controlled China—particularly for the restoration of rail communication.

Doubt is expressed, however, if even General Chiang Kai-shek could weather the storm that would inevitably be brought about his ears were he to acquiesce in any such "violations of national sovereignty."

Other press reports indicate a state of nervous tension concerning the outcome of General Wedemeyer's visit to south China, including troubled Formosa. The Government are said to entertain fears that General Wedemeyer may well carry word back to President Truman of a possible—even probable—South China rebellion. Nor have these fears been allayed by a pronouncement attributed to a "high American quarter" that "under foreseeable conditions various sections of Nationalist China might withdraw from General Chiang Kai-shek's sphere of influence and become virtual warlord domains." In support of this theory it is pointed out that for some time intense dissatisfaction has been expressed by certain local magnates in south China over the economic policy now followed by the "reactionary Government" at Nanking and that these officials and party leaders are believed to be working more or less openly for autonomy. Press reports add, however, that to neutral observers General Chiang Kai-shek is still capable of exercising control over all but the Communist-held areas.

As a result of the Generalissimo's assumption of personal command over field operations in Shantung, the Communists have been driven northwards in what the Government claim to be a heavy rout, this is declared to afford proof of their ability to quell the "Communist rebellion" if left to deal with the situation in their own way.

On 13th August Dr. Hollington Tong made a long statement on China's outstanding foreign loan indebtedness. He announced China's intention to honour her pledges as soon as her financial position improves sufficiently to make this possible. The reaction abroad to this "encouraging assurance" is that bond-holders would be better convinced by some more tangible token of good faith.

It was simultaneously announced in both Houses of Parliament at Westminster on 5th August that—

> "it has been widely felt that, as nearly two years have elapsed since the war was concluded, it will be appropriate for a Parliamentary Delegation from the

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267655

United Kingdom to pay a visit to China, our war-time Ally. The Chinese Government share these feelings and have intimated that they would warmly welcome such a Delegation to visit China in October."

The following have accepted the proposal to be members of the Delegation :—

The Lord Ammon.
The Lord Amulree.
Mr. F. McLeavy, M.P.
Mr. J. Harrison, M.P.
Mr. Wilfred Roberts, M.P.
Mr. Martin Lindsay, D.S.O., M.P.

Lord Nathan, Minister of Civil Aviation, is making a tour of the Far East on civil aviation matters. He has accepted an invitation extended to him by the Chinese Ambassador in London to visit Nanking and hopes to spend from 17th to 21st September there.

Japan

On 16th August the Australian Prime Minister, Mr. Chifley, in outlining Australia's policy towards a peace settlement for Japan, expressed the view that this should be concluded early in 1948, and appealed to all those nations which had played a substantial part in the Pacific war to strive for this end. Mr. Chifley strongly supported the two-thirds majority voting procedure, as suggested by the United States, and advocated that any attempt to apply the "veto" be resisted. In this connexion it is reported that the United States Government have countered the Soviet contention that the peace treaty with Japan should first be examined by the Council of Foreign Ministers. The State Department's reply was handed to the Soviet Chargé d'Affaires in Washington on 13th August, and argues that neither the Yalta Agreement, nor the Potsdam Declaration provides the Council of Foreign Ministers with any authority to act in connexion with the peace settlement for Japan; and it points out that in December, 1945, four of the Governments represented on the Council agreed to the constitution of the Far Eastern Commission. The United States Government consider, therefore, that this action constituted recognition of the primary interests of these eleven Powers in the post-surrender policy for Japan, which includes the peace settlement. The reply continues that the United States Government's Note, which was exploratory, has elicited from the other nine Powers approval of the suggestion for an 11-Powers conference. Nevertheless, the Soviet Government's views are being communicated to them, and the United States Government hope that, should the other Powers decide in favour of the original plan, the Soviet Government will also indicate their willingness to fall in with it.

In the meantime the resignation has been announced somewhat abruptly of Mr. W. MacMahon Ball, British Commonwealth member of the Allied Council for Japan and concurrently Australian Minister in Tokyo.

Detailed arrangements covering the procedure in connexion with foreign representatives of private trading concerns permitted to enter Japan between August 15th–29th were issued by the Supreme Commander in Tokyo on the morning of 14th August. In addition to "Government Trade Representatives" who have been conducting international trade on a Government-to-Government basis for some time, commercial entrants are divided into three categories :—

1. Private trade representatives, the total number of which for all countries has been limited for the present to 400.
2. Representatives of shipping, insurance, banking and other services necessary to facilitate private trading, the quota for this category will be limited to a much smaller number.
3. "Investment Representatives;" those who fall within this category will not be admitted to the country until a later and as yet undefined date.

In general the procedure has been so devised as to permit and encourage the Japanese Government, through the official Board of Trade (Boeki Cho), to play a practical rôle, in preparation for the responsibilities which it will have to shoulder in the post-treaty period. In consultation with, and subject to the approval of, the Supreme Commander, private trade representatives will negotiate with Japanese suppliers and the Boeki Cho, which latter organ will be the Japanese signatory to contracts and will also issue export licences. Prices will be quoted in U.S. dollars and will be determined on the basis of current world market prices. All Japanese products must be paid for in "acceptable foreign currency," defined as either United States dollars, or the currency of nations with which their exist relevant convertibility agreements. The Supreme Commander also announced on 14th August that in consequence of the Far Eastern Commission's decision, he planned to use a 137,000,000 dollars' stock pile of Japanese precious metals now in his custody as a "credit base against which private or Government financing institutions of Allied or neutral countries will be asked to advance funds or commodities to activate their foreign trade with Japan." The Supreme Commander will decide disputes between foreign and Japanese businessmen, but will not accept responsibility for, or guarantee, any Japanese merchandise. Businessmen, who must confine their activities strictly to the commercial functions for which they were licensed to enter the country, will have the same legal status as nationals of the same country who are not connected with the occupation and will be subject to Japanese criminal law and administration under occupation procedures. Accommodation for businessmen will be provided by Boeki Cho at a flat rate.

C267656

On 1st July, the Inter-Allied Trade Board for Japan discussed the allocation of quotas of representatives among the countries concerned. The following allocations were agreed to :—

United States	102
United Kingdom (including Burma)	64
Australia	23
New Zealand	6
Canada	8
India	39
China	64
Netherlands (N.E.I.)	27
France	16
Philippines	6
Others	45

On 17th August, Mr. George Atcheson, United States Ambassador and Chairman of the Allied Council for Japan, lost his life in an air accident while travelling from Japan to the U.S.A.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

So far there has been no diminution of American interest in the British economic crisis, although comment continues for the most part to follow the pattern outlined in this Summary last week. Critics of the Labour Government's policy are still many and vocal, and they have tended to seize upon the introduction of the 'Transitional Powers' Bill as proof of the dictatorial proclivities of some members of His Majesty's Government. (In this they have derived encouragement from Mr. Churchill's observations, although there was anyway a spontaneous feeling, even in friendly circles, that the Bill in question might be a step in the totalitarian direction.) Exception has been taken to the method, rather than to the object, of the much-discussed tax on American films. The decision to reduce dollar expenditure on films is conceded to be a commendable feature of the austerity programme, but the "resort to confiscatory taxation in the guise of customs duties to exclude imports" (as the Washington Post describes it) is believed to constitute a form of discrimination in international trade which might well nullify the work of the Geneva Conference. Nevertheless, thoughtful commentators are at pains to emphasize that American interests are so inextricably bound up with those of Great Britain that it would be too costly for the United States to permit its anti-Socialist prejudices to prevent it from rendering all possible assistance to this country. In any case, a striking contrast to the above misgivings about the current performance of His Majesty's Government at home has been provided by the encomiums lavished upon Labour "statesmanship" in connexion with the formal elevation of India and Pakistan to Dominion status.

Considerable emphasis is given by more friendly observers to the fact that the difficulties inherent in the British situation are not peculiar to these islands and that the crisis really encompasses the whole of Western Europe. The same observers are consequently inclined to stress what they believe to be the essential connexion between the Washington discussions on the British loan and on the Ruhr (separate as these may be in actual scope and venue) and the forthcoming London meeting on the German level of industry. Despite the suggestion of Mr. Lovett, at his press conference on the 13th August, that they could not in themselves arrive at "basic decisions," although they might "result in recommendations which would go to a governmental level," the general view is that these talks will have an important bearing upon the future of Mr. Marshall's

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267657

Harvard proposals. There is thus strong approval for the Anglo-American decision to invite the French to the London meeting. As the Washington News observes, "the Marshall plan for saving Europe is threatened by Britain's economic crisis and France's fear of a Ruhr revival" and, while it is possible to restore Western Europe without the help or approval of Generalissimo Stalin, "it isn't possible if Britain is too weak to co-operate effectively or France is too shortsighted." It is also felt that, limited as their present agenda may be, the Ruhr talks offer a test case of British and American ability to sink ideological differences for the sake of providing a practical solution to Europe's problems, and that, unless this ability is proved, all further consideration of the Marshall offer is likely to remain academic.

There is concern in some quarters that the American public is not more alive to the critical importance of Mr. Marshall's proposals, and liberal-internationalists like the Alsop brothers feel that the Secretary of State himself might have had more to say on the question to stimulate interest. (Senator Vandenberg is also said to have been pressing the United States Government to provide more popular enlightenment on the Marshall offer.) According to the Alsops, who are usually well-informed, the "betting is better than even" in Washington that there will be a special session of Congress in December to consider any European programme that may be agreed upon by the Economic Co-operation Conference in Paris. The New York Herald-Tribune is urging the constitution of a "bi-partisan committee" of both the Senate and House of Representatives to pave the way for such a special session as soon as the House Committee of Nineteen (see Summary No. 403) returns from its investigations in Western Europe. Meanwhile President Truman is clearly reluctant to commit himself one way or the other on the idea of calling Congress back from its present recess. When questioned on the subject at his press conference on the 14th August he merely replied that there was "nothing on the horizon" at the present time to warrant any such action.

The fact that the State Department is likely to have its hands full in coming weeks with other important matters like the Inter-American Security Conference at Rio de Janeiro and the September session of the United Nations General Assembly is expected by some commentators to militate against the early presentation of the Marshall proposals to Congress. The significance which the Department attaches to the Rio meeting is believed to be attested by the size and standing of the U.S. delegation which left Washington on the 13th August. In bidding an official farewell to the delegation the President himself pointed out that it included the same bi-partisan team, led by Senators Vandenberg and Connally, which had in the past accompanied Messrs. Byrnes and Marshall to the Foreign Ministers' conferences in Europe. Mr. Henry Wallace, who apparently views the Conference with the same mistrust as he did the formulation of "Truman Doctrine" for Greece and Turkey last spring, suggests that the representatives of the states in conference at Rio would do well to eschew military matters and confine themselves to mutual economic problems. Most editorial writers, however, are optimistic about the meeting. The Conservatives in particular hope that it will be a demonstration of inter-American solidarity against what the Los Angeles Times calls "the most feared of potential aggressors"—the Soviet Union.

In the general field of Soviet-American relations the State Department can count upon strong popular support in refusing to be baulked by Moscow in convening as soon as possible a conference of all the eleven nations interested in drafting a peace treaty with Japan. It is also being warmly applauded by the American press and public for continuing to display firmness towards countries within the Soviet orbit—as instanced by its spirited reply of the 13th August to Marshall Tito's charges of economic discrimination against Yugoslavia and its protest against the use of "third degree" methods in Roumania. At the same time the State Department decision to waive an estimated 1,000 million dollars worth of claims against Italy has generally been welcomed as a boon to that country in its struggle against Communism and as an instructive contrast to Soviet insistence upon the full pound of flesh of reparations.

On the domestic front the sub-committee of the Senate War Investigating Committee has now sheepishly postponed until the 17th November its inquiry into the aircraft contracts awarded by the Roosevelt Administration to Mr. Howard Hughes (see last week's Summary). Nevertheless, with a Presidential election approaching and with leaders of both parties searching avidly for political ammunition for the campaign, the appetite for Congressional investigations is not likely to diminish. Congressman John Taber is already leading his House Appropriations Committee in an inquiry into the activities of thirteen Federal agencies. For its part the Administration has also launched an investigation that may shed light upon the recent misdemeanours of some Republican politicians. This is inquiry by the Department of Justice into the existence of a "conspiracy" on the part of business interests to drive up prices in the food, clothing and housing industries.

C267658

LATIN AMERICA

Inter-American Affairs

According to press reports the United States delegation to the Rio de Janeiro Conference, which opened on the 15th August, is making every effort to prevent discussion at the present conference of American States of the demand for an Economic Commission for Latin America—which is not on the agenda. Chile, who is supported by most of the Latin American States, is the moving spirit of this proposal. An ad hoc Committee consisting of Chile, China, Cuba, Lebanon, Peru, United States, Venezuela, France and the United Kingdom, has already been appointed by the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations to examine the factors affecting the establishment of such a commission, and they have undertaken to ascertain the views of the ninth International Conference of American States, which is to meet in Bogotá on the 17th January, 1948.

The United States is perfectly correct in its wish to have the question of an Economic Commission considered at Bogotá rather than at Rio de Janeiro. Resolution VIII of the Conference held at Mexico City in 1945, it may be remembered—known as the Act of Chapúltepec—called for specific measures to ensure the peace of America, including the use of armed force. It was agreed at the time that the Act would be operative only during the War, and that in order to give it permanent effect its provisions would be incorporated in a treaty. At the San Francisco Conference the United States Secretary of State, and later the President, announced that such a treaty would be drawn up and that a conference would be held for this purpose at Rio de Janeiro. This is the Conference which has just opened at Rio de Janeiro to give consideration exclusively to the Act of Chapúltepec on Continental Peace and Security.

Argentina's proposal that common defence action should be taken by unanimous vote of the signatories, which is tantamount to instituting a veto, has been countered by a United States suggestion that all would be obliged to sever relations with an aggressor, should collective action be agreed upon by a two-thirds majority. Though it is not known whether a decision has been taken on this matter, this American step towards a reconciliation of the views of the twenty delegations has been favourably received. According to a private source there is likely to be a conflict of opinion among the Argentine delegates. Dr. Bramuglia, the Argentine Foreign Minister for Foreign Affairs, is all out for collaboration with the United States on Hemisphere Defence, while the Army, though willing if pressed to agree to arms standardisation, refuses to consider any measures which might prejudice the Argentine armament industry or restrict Argentine sovereignty and army initiative. The same source also states that Dr. Bramuglia wishes to replace General Accame, Argentine Ambassador at Rio de Janeiro, by one less likely to share army views.

A preliminary agenda for the International Conference of American States (at Bogotá) has been issued by the Pan American Union containing seven 'norms' designed to give permanent character to the Inter-American system. The main purpose of this Conference, which will be the ninth of a series that began in 1889–90 in Washington, is to give effect to Resolution IX of the Mexico City Conference, dealing with the reorganisation, consolidation and strengthening of the Inter-American system. The Colombian Government is making great preparations for the Bogotá Conference. The whole of the Parliament buildings are being re-conditioned, private houses are being taken over, new hotels are being reconstructed, and the city in general is being made a thing of beauty.

A broadcast message states that the Guatemalan Government has issued a statement through its Lima Legation, which will be read at the Bogotá Conference. In this statement it is pointed out that American emancipation cannot be regarded as having been attained, so long as there are areas on the Continent under colonial status, and that the political dependence of these possessions is a danger to the peace and security of the American Republics.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Colombia

Early in 1946 the Colombian Foreign Minister initiated talks with a Venezuelan Delegation regarding the setting up of a joint Mercantile Fleet. Ecuador was later invited to participate, and a formal agreement was signed at Bogotá in June 1946, by which the Greater Colombian Merchant Marine was formed, with an initial capital of 20 million U.S. Dollars. Dr. Alvaro Diaz, Colombian Minister of Public Works, was appointed Director General. Dr. Diaz sent technical missions to the United States, Canada and the United Kingdom, and, as a result of their reports, it was decided to buy eight vessels in the United States, with a displacement of 5,100 tons each. On the 14th May the Republica de Colombia, the first vessel of the Gran Colombia Merchant Fleet to be put into service, arrived in Cartagena with a cargo of foodstuffs, and an Ecuadorean master and crew went to New Orleans during the same month to receive the Rio Guayas, which is expected to enter service very shortly.

Costa Rica

Messages from San José state that life is returning to normal in Costa Rica following an agreement between President Picado and the Opposition, guaranteeing freedom of expression and action in the coming Presidential election. This agreement ends the two weeks' strike which had paralysed the country's activities and caused a death-roll of nine persons with many injured. By the agreement compensation is to be provided for the families of the dead and injured; Government employees have been given guarantees that they can join any party, and the Electoral Tribunal will have power to arbitrate in any dispute (see Summary No. 403).

Dominican Republic

The State Department is reported to be seriously concerned about the situation in the Caribbean and maintains that there are two plots afoot: (1) For the overthrow of the Venezuelan Government. President Trujillo of Santo Domingo is accused of having financed this plot, in which Señor Lopez Contreras, ex-President of Venezuela, is thought to be involved. Four American citizens, shortly to be tried in the United States are also said to be implicated, in particular, a former adviser to the U.S. Embassy in Caracas, one Carl Eisenhardt, on whose farm arms were discovered in April, (2) The invasion of the Dominican Republic (see Summaries Nos. 403 and 404). President Trujillo seems to be well aware of the danger and he has informed the United States and Cuban Governments that he is ready to give the invaders a warm "welcome." Zero hour was put at the 17th August, and if nothing happens the story will probably be described by anti-Trujillo elements as the President's invention for strengthening his own position. On the other side Communist machinations are imputed, through Moscow headquarters in Cuba and Guatemala. Sugar and rum interests are probably not altogether remote from the happenings.

The State Department's concern regarding these plots is sharpened by the realisation that President Trujillo might make matters difficult at Rio de Janeiro over the part played by United States citizens, in supplying the intending invaders with ships, planes and munitions of war. Whether these war materials have been acquired directly or through the United States gifts to Latin America, the fact remains that they have been assembled in considerable quantities for the overthrow of existing Governments, both dictatorial (Trujillo) and Liberal (Betancourt), and the use to which awareness of these facts might be put is full of awkward possibilities.

Nicaragua

As a result of the elections held on the 3rd August in which the voting was limited to Liberals and National Conservatives, the Government claim that the Constituent Assembly was elected by popular vote. After its installation on the 15th August the Assembly passed a decree providing for the exercise of executive power by a President or Vice-President (a new office) of the Republic. Drs. Roman y Reyes and Arguello Vargas, both former Foreign Ministers, were elected as President and Vice-President respectively. It is extremely doubtful if the action of the Assembly in passing this decree is constitutional. The Vice-President and three other delegates left on the 15th August for Rio de Janeiro, where they will join Señor Sevilla Sacasa in an attempt to secure the admittance of Nicaragua to the conference. Ex-President Somoza is reported to be going later to Washington to try to secure recognition of the new régime by the United States Government and to have declared that, if recognition is accorded, he will be prepared to accept voluntary exile from Nicaragua.

The attitude of the United States Government towards Nicaragua will be guided by the wishes of a majority of Latin American Governments, when it comes to deciding whether to recognize the latest Nicaraguan régime. Mexico is reported to be waging a fierce campaign against recognition, with Washington weighting the scales on that side.

Erratum

Under Dominican Republic Summary No. 404, p. 24, Col. 2, for sentence "and Dominican émigrés . . . . Congressional elections," read "and Dominican émigrés in Mexico City attribute Santo Domingo reports to manœuvres on the part of President Trujillo."

THE UNITED NATIONS

Security Council

Indonesia

The Security Council continued its discussion of Indonesia on the 14th and 15th August without reaching any major decision, without even settling whether the Charter justified the Council's intervention. Indeed, the question of the limits of the Council's jurisdiction dominates the proceedings. Having admitted a representative of the Indonesian Republic on grounds of equity, despite the legal objections voiced by the delegates of the United Kingdom, Belgium, France and the United States, the Council declined to accept a Dutch plea, that it should also hear representatives of Borneo and East Indonesia. Belgium, France, United States and United Kingdom voted for the proposal: the other members abstained. So strongly did the French Government feel about the whole issue of the Council's right to intervene, that it instructed its representative to carry his opposition to the point of veto; and the anxiety of the constitutionalists seemed warranted when the President made the astonishing statement that the Council was "competent" because the subject was on the agenda, and that its competence continued until a vote of the Council repudiated it. Belgium's representative was quick to point out the danger of entrusting the power to decide competence to any one permanent member who chose to vote against such a repudiation.

The Australian resolution, presented on the 12th August, is non-controversial except for one paragraph resolving "to establish a commission consisting of representatives of . . . . who will report direct to the Security Council on the situation in the Republic of Indonesia following the resolution of the Council of 1st August, 1947." If this paragraph can be taken to refer only to the "cease-fire" position, the whole resolution becomes non-controversial; but a Polish amendment seeks to establish a "Commission of the Security Council consisting of . . . . who on behalf of the Security Council will act in the capacity of mediator and arbitrator between the Governments of the Netherlands and of the Republic of Indonesia." It emphasises the rôle of the Council as mediator and the independent status of the Republic. It would, if carried, do away with the United States offer of her "good offices" which the Dutch accepted and which the Indonesians seem bent on using as a stepping-stone to some kind of international arbitration, a course which the State Department have let the Indonesians know is tantamount to rejection. According to the Indonesian representative, who spoke to the Council on the 14th August, his Government wish the Council to appoint a Commission to supervise the execution of the 1st August decision. The Commission might ultimately report on the state of law and order in those parts of Indonesia evacuated by the Dutch; for the Indonesians require the Dutch to withdraw, first to the 14th October, 1946, positions, later from all "Republican territories." They would like arbitration by the Council's nominees, but would accept any impartial arbitration.

Mr. van Kleffens, on the other hand, made it clear that his Government denied the Council's right to intervene, which, he said, the Australian resolution took for granted, and he hoped that the Council would send no such commission as the resolution proposed. His Government did not oppose investigation. It opposed any investigation by the Council, for the Council's intervention in this case might "well prove a step on its road to ruin." He made no mention of arbitration, except to say that it would be a mockery with a government which exercised no control. His aim was a resumption of negotiations, and then, he wanted Borneo and East Indonesia to join in, if the question of the Indonesian Federation was raised. He put forward a plan of his own to bring the parties together. Each side should choose one State. These two States should agree

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

to nominate one impartial State. Citizens from this one State should enquire into the situation, supervise the cease fire, and encourage an immediate resumption of negotiations. They should report on the situation as it developed. To obtain a true picture of conditions in Indonesia, Mr. van Kleffens suggested that all foreign Consuls in Batavia should jointly draw up reoprts on Java, Sumatra and Madura.

Egypt

On the 11th August, Nokrashy had accused the British of interfering in the internal affairs of Egypt. Sir Alexander Cadogan in his speech on the 13th August admitted interference on two occasions only, in 1940 and 1942; but then highly placed Egyptians were obstructing the Allied war-effort in the interest of the Axis Powers, whose forces were advancing on Egypt. He had the documents necessary to prove his statement; but, to avoid embarrassing Nokrashy, he would only produce them if Nokrashy so wished. Nokrashy then made a reply which had been prepared beforehand, and which he did not alter to cover anything that Sir A. Cadogan had said (including the reference to documentary evidence). Sir Alexander dealt so faithfully with Nokrashy's historical essay on Anglo-Egyptian relations that Nokrashy deprecated spending any more time over historical matters. Turning to the fundamental issue involved in the Egyptian appeal, Sir Alexander said that if the Security Council maintained that it could override treaty rights, any State could escape its obligations on the plea that it would endanger peace rather than fulfil them, and he contended that the Egyptian claims should be rejected, though, of course, all genuine disputes over the interpretation of the 1936 treaty should be settled according to the procedure laid down in the Charter. Nokrashy repeated old arguments. "Egypt wanted to live her own life free from the hand of the powerful invader"; and he begged the Council to let no obsolete treaty stand in the way of your fulfilling your high mission under the Charter . . . . between the 1936 Treaty and the Charter, we have chosen the Charter." His most startling demand was that the Council should order the British to withdraw their forces by the 1st September. Poland's representative, while contending that the question of the Sudan required further consideration, supported Nohrashy's demand for the evacuation of British troops, considered the 1936 Treaty contrary to the Charter and the Assembly Resolution on Armed Forces of December 1946, and argued that the Security Council, although not limited to legal considerations, had the legal power to order the removal of British troops.

It was decided, with the agreement of the United Kingdom representative, to adjourn the discussion until the 20th August, when the Brazilian and the Russian representatives are due to speak. Meanwhile the United States Government, while agreeing with the justice of the United Kingdom case, is working for a resolution advocating the resumption of negotiations. Opinion in the Council appears to favour such a solution though anxious to save Egypt's face as far as possible.

The Balkans Commission

Mr. Gromyko took up all the Council's time on the 14th August. He went over old arguments, attacked the first United States resolution and displayed the excellencies of his own resolution. As for the new United States resolution, it was as unacceptable to him as was the Australian resolution, which was but the same thing in different words. To the United States criticisms of his use of the veto he replied that the Soviet delegation was not bound to agree to proposals which were not based on facts. Meanwhile, on the 17th August, "General" Markos proclaimed a "Free" Greek Government.

On the 19th August Mr. Gromyko used the veto twice more, to kill the Australian and the United States resolutions. In each case 9 States voted in favour, and only the Russians and Poles against. The Yugoslav, Albanian and Polish delegates talked as usual about Greek fascists and British imperialism. After he had outvoted the 9 member States, Mr. Gromyko demanded that life in the Commission of Investigation and of the Subsidiary Group should be pronounced extinct; but the Syrian President ruled that life continued "pending a new decision."

The Secretary-General has told Sir Alexander Cadogan that Article 99 of the Charter provides a method of freeing the Council from the state of petrifaction into which the gorgon-like powers of Mr. Gromyko has transformed it. As Secretary-General, he is ready to claim the right to send observers so that he may know what is happening in Northern Greece. Mr. Lie made such a claim in September 1946 when Russia seemed about to veto the United States proposal to establish a Commission of Inquiry into the Greek situation.

Membership

Russia's veto was used three times on the 18th August. Nine members of the Security Council voted for Eire, for Portugal and for Transjordan. Poland opposed Portugal and abstained in the other two cases. Russia voted against all three, who are thus for the second time prevented from joining an organisation the overwhelming majority of whose members wish them to join. Albania and Outer Mongolia failed to obtain sufficient votes for recommendation. Russia, Poland and Syria voted for Albania; Australia, Belgium, the United Kingdom, and the United States voted against. Outer Mongolia was supported by Russia, Poland and Syria, and opposed by China, the U.K. and the U.S. In both cases the remaining members abstained. The Syrian President waived his proposal for a kind of blanket recommendation of all parties when he heard that China meant to oppose Mongolia, come what may. Two candidates only received the Council's recommendation, and it was unanimous, the Yemen and Pakistan.

Economic and Social Council

The fifth session of the Economic and Social Council, which began on 19th July, ended on 17th August. The long agenda included some items of immediate importance and some involving questions of principle which may come up again in other connexions later on. Reports were received from those specialized agencies and dependent organisms which are already in operation—e.g., the Economic and Employment Commission, the Economic Commission for Europe, the Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East, the Fiscal Commission, the Commission on Human Rights etc. The Preparatory Commission for the International Trade Organisation reported on its second session at Geneva, where the terms of an International Trade Charter and a complex set of agreements on tariffs have been brought in sight of completion.

The report of ECE led the French delegate to say, among other things, that, while his country could not agree to the revival of pre-war German strength, questions about Germany could properly be discussed in the ECE, and that the temporary organisation for European recovery now being set up at Paris was in no way prejudicial to ECE. The delegate of Byelorussia was indignant at either of these topics being introduced. The Russian delegate, who had a long speech ready, did not get the chance to deliver it all, but did make an emphatic protest against the idea that ECE might interfere with national sovereignty, or with the occupying Powers in Germany, or with the great waterways of Europe. After these suspicions had been repudiated by the British Delegate and after a long procedural wrangle of familiar type over a Soviet proposal to omit one item from it, the report was adopted.

The report of the first session of ECAFE and of its Committee of the Whole was adopted. The status of associate membership, to be given to non-self-governing territories in the area which apply for it through the metropolitan Power responsible for their international relations, was agreed to. This will give Burma and Ceylon the opportunity for immediate attendance at the Commission's meetings and application will be made for associate membership for all British colonial territories in the area. A Soviet proposal that all States members of the United Nations in Asia and the Far East should be members of ECAFE was rejected.

It was decided that the World Conference on Trade and Employment should open at Havana on 21st November. The delegate of U.S.S.R. made it plain that his country would not be present. States not now members of the United Nations will be invited to attend but without the right to vote, as the United Kingdom would have preferred.

Among the questions which may have wider implications than are apparent on the surface was the proposal by the Chilean delegation that an Economic Commission for Latin America be established (see also under "Latin America"). There are various reasons for the proposal, notably the Latin American desire to get a U.N. body whose secretariat staff will be drawn from their countries, a belief that dollars will be more readily available for economic development schemes sponsored by a U.N. Commission, and a desire to have regional machinery similar to ECE and ECAFE set up, for the sake of prestige, in Latin America. The fact that both ECE and ECAFE have been set up to deal with countries damaged by the war, as no Latin American country has been, seems to have been overlooked. If the proposal were to be accepted, it would inevitably lead to the setting up of an Economic Commission in the Middle East. The proposal has been referred to a nine-Power committee which will report to the next session of the Council.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267663

The relation of Specialised Agencies to the Economic and Social Council (which has a co-ordinating but not a directing function) has led to much confusion of thought. It has, in the end, proved both natural and judicious to allow considerable latitude in the variety of agreements to be negotiated, depending on the specialised agency itself, its organisation and work, rather than on a set pattern. One of the oldest of international bodies, the Universal Postal Union, has been a case in point; its charter (now beginning to be a venerable historical document) is quite unlike the sort of agreement made in recent cases. Yet the new organs of international life also show peculiarities of their own. The World Bank and the International Monetary Fund, both a little older than the United Nations, strongly dislike any sign of interference by the U.N. in their own affairs. After much debate the Economic and Social Council has adopted by 13 votes to 3 agreements which, whilst providing for a certain degree of mutual co-operation, recognise their budgetary autonomy and full independence in the conduct of their business.

A question of principle that may recur is latent in the proposal raised at the instance of the International Co-operative Alliance that the world's oil resources and their disposal, beginning with the Middle East, should be administered by an organ of the United Nations. This appears to have both commercial and idealistic motives and to have been framed—and pertinaciously forwarded—in an innocent ignorance both of the world's oil industry and of the very great difficulty of working international control of any prized raw material (as the Atomic Energy Commission can bear witness). Vigorous criticism by the U.K. delegate persuaded the Council to rule that " action is unnecessary at this time " and the proposal was defeated. The I.C.A., disappointed of getting the majority vote they expected, hope to raise the matter with the I.T.O. at some other future time, when it is fully established.

A Conference on Freedom of Information and of the Press will be held at Geneva in March 1948.

The Economic and Social Council itself proposes to hold two regular sessions in 1948, the first in February at Lake Success and the second at Geneva in July; but the latter is not to imply any move to change the Council's headquarters.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267664

CANADIAN WOMEN'S VOLUNTARY SERVICES.

(Ontario Division)

MEMBERS OF EXECUTIVE.

HONORARY PRESIDENT. Mrs. Albert Matthews, 169 Warren Rd., Toronto.

Mrs. Jas. R. Roberts, 1051 Main St. E., Hamilton, Ont.
(Chairman)

Mrs. Murdoch MacKenzie, 14 Prince Arthur Ave., Toronto.
(Speakers' Executive & Vice-Chairman)

Mrs. Gordon Conant, Oshawa.
(Extension Executive - Vice-Chairman)

Miss Muriel Gladman, 150 Balmoral Ave., Toronto.
(Secretary-Treasurer)

Mrs. A. Graham-Bryce, 9 Beaumont Rd., Toronto.
(Director of Organization).

Mrs. W. H. Clarke, 132 South Drive, Toronto.
(Training Executive)

Mrs. R. J. Marshall, 11 Glenholme Ave., Toronto.
(Public Relations Executive)

Mrs. (Col.) Peacock, 40 Hadley Rd., Toronto.

Mrs. E. S. Duggan, 1340 Avenue Rd., Toronto.

Mrs. Robert Conner, 118 Kingston Rd., Toronto.
(Chairman Toronto Unit)

Mrs. A. B. Colerick, 140 Rosewell Ave., Toronto.

Miss Margaret Hyndman, K.C., 67 Yonge St., Toronto.
(Honorary Counsel)

Mrs. Thos. Dann, Aurora, Ont.
(Finance Executive).

Mrs. Egmont Frankel, 236 Douglas Drive, Toronto.
(Enrolment Executive)

Miss Frances Steinhoff, 122 Balmoral Ave., Toronto.
(Publicity Executive).

Miss Kay Pointon, 21 Warren Rd., Toronto.
(Publicity Executive).

Miss Olive Zeigler, 609 Avenue Rd., Toronto.

Mrs. M. Kensit, 74 St. George St., Toronto.

Mrs. J. P. Hynes, 43 Castle Frank Crescent, Toronto.

Mrs. T. J. MacKay, 54 Rumsay Rd., Toronto.
(Alternate for Mrs. (Col.) Peacock).

Mrs. J. L. Savage, 93 Garfield St., Toronto.
(Alternate for Mrs. Colerick).

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

ADVISORY COUNCIL

C267665

CANADIAN WOMEN'S VOLUNTARY SERVICES
(Ontario Division)

Organization	Representative
British Empire Ex-Service Women's Association	Mrs. T. Turner, 234 Lake Shore Road, Toronto.
Canadian Auxiliary Territorial Services Ad. 7813	Miss Ivy Madson, 134 King Street, East, Toronto.
Canadian Business and Professional Women's Club El. 0919	Miss Ethel Butler, 141 Rochborough Street, W. Toronto.
Canadian Federation of University Women Mi. 1653	Mrs. C. D. H. MacAlpine, 20 Warren Road, Toronto.
Canadian Mothercraft Society Ha.1591	Miss Isobel Wilson, 50 Hillhurst Blvd., Toronto.
Canadian Women's Service Force Ad. 6491	Mrs. Richards, 73 Adelaide Street, West, Toronto.
Children's Aid Society Ra. 4151	Mrs. J. S. Driscoll, 73 St. Clair Avenue, E., Toronto.
Church of Christ Disciples Ra. 8506	Mrs. Gordon Graham, 45 Binscarth Road, Toronto.
Community Welfare Council of Ontario Inc. Ki. 8641	Miss Follett, 24 Bloor Street, West, Toronto.
Coronation Unit of Ex-Service Women Gl. 0619	Mrs. Ed. McKechnie, 166 Booth Avenue, Toronto.
Eastern Canada Region, International Association of Soroptimist Clubs Wa. 2644	Mrs. B. Mackness, 12 Wellington Street, E. Toronto.
East York Women's Service Corps	Mrs. Marjorie MacKenzie, 264 Springdale Blvd. Toronto.
English Speaking Union Mi. 6114	Mrs. Geo. Watt, 216 Poplar Plains Road, Toronto.
Federated Women's Institutes of Ontario	Miss Mary A. Clarke, Superintendent of Women's Institutes, Parliament Bldgs., Toronto.
Federation of Women Teachers Association of Ontario Mi. 8427	Miss H. E. Carr, 30 Bloor Street, West, Toronto.
Grand Camp, Daughters of Scotland in Canada Mo. 2228	Mrs. Alexander, 2571 Yonge Street, Toronto.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Grand Lodge, Daughters of England Benevolent Society	Mrs. F. Small, 23 Murray Street, Brantford.
Hadassah Organization Hy. 7276	Mrs. Chas. Rotenberg, 168 Forest Hill Road, Toronto.
Ladies' Auxiliaries to the Order of Scottish Clans Ge. 2235	Mrs. Madge Wright, 144 Danforth Avenue, Toronto.
Ladies' Orange Benevolent Association Ha. 6451	Mrs. L. Roe, 62 Westwood Avenue, Toronto.
Ontario Dental Nurses and Assistants El. 9011	Mrs. Tonye Turner, c/o Dr. H. W. Reid, 195 Yonge Street, Toronto.
Ontario Provincial Command Ladies' Auxiliary, Canadian Legion Ra. 6334	Mrs. A. C. Norley, 45 Spruce Court, Toronto.
Ontario Provincial Council, Canadian Daughters League Ho. 1728	Mrs. Aileen Fines, 147 Elmer Avenue, Toronto.
Order of the Eastern Star	Mrs. Robert Geddes, 72 Alpine Avenue, Hamilton, Ontario.
Protestant Women's Federation of Canada Ke. 4843	Mrs. A. F. McMichael, 89 ~~80~~ Ellsworth Avenue, Toronto.
Provincial Branch, Canadian Ladies' Golf Union Ra. 1453	Mrs. Alex. McBain, 35 Cluny Drive, Toronto.
Provincial Chapter of Ontario, Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire Oakville 354	Mrs. Ryland New, Oakville, Ontario.
Queen's University Alumnae Ki. 1413	Mrs. Arthur L. Scace, 34 Poplar Plains Crescent, Toronto.
Registered Nurses' Association of Ontario Ra. 4939	Miss Jean Masten, Hospital for Sick Children Miss Beatrice Ellis, Toronto Western Hospital.
St. John Ambulance Society Mo. 2470	Mrs. Harold Ritchie, 6 Burton Road, Toronto.
Silver Cross Women of the British Empire Mi. 5548	Mrs. W. J. Dyas, 74 Kendal Avenue, Toronto.
The Baptist Women's War Services Auxiliary Ke. 2618	Mrs. W. A. Batty, 96 Hilton Avenue, Toronto.
The Canadian Girl Guides Association Mi. 6423	Mrs. D. E. S. Wishart, 10 Dale Avenue, Toronto.
The Canadian Jewish Congress Hu. 4735	Mrs. Herbert Allen, 238 Dunvegan Road, Toronto.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

The Catholic Women's League of Canada	Mrs. A. B. Collins, 187 George Street, Belleville, Ontario.
The Council of Jewish Women Hy. 1437	Mrs. Harry Samuel, 68 Hillholme Road, Toronto.
The Girls' Friendly Society Mo. 8972	Mrs. R. Ruddle 34 Wilfred Avenue, Toronto.
The Inner Wheel Hu. 5372	Mrs. Ernest Steiner, 375 Spadina Road, Toronto.
The Lyceum Club and Women's Art Association of Canada Mi. 3324 69 Oriole Rd.	Mrs. Jas. McCallum, ~~800 Bloor Street West~~ Toronto.
The Maccabees	Mrs. Mabel T. Blake, 137 Ouellette Avenue, Windsor, Ontario.
The Ontario Federation of Home and School Associations Ho. 4559	Mrs. D. H. Walkinshaw, 25 Columbine Avenue, Toronto.
The Ontario Women's Liberal Association Ju. 5028	Mrs. J. G. Culnan, 209 Indian Road Crescent, Toronto.
The Rebekah Assembly of Ontario Lo. 6773	Miss Violet Pearce, 139 Essex Street, Toronto.
The Salvation Army Hu. 6658	Mrs. Lt.-Col. Spooner, 37 Dundas Street, East, Toronto.
The Women's Missionary Society of the Church of England Mi. 7868	Mrs. Wm. C. White, 68 Spadina Road, Toronto. Mrs. K. E. Wodehouse, 19 Buena Vista Road, Ottawa, Ontario.
The Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church in Canada Ju. 9084	Mrs. E. F. Perry, 159 Mavety Street, Toronto.
The Women's Missionary Society of the United Church of Canada Ll. 6724	Mrs. Geo. Robinson, 13 Rosemount Avenue, Toronto.
Toronto Dietetic Association Ra. 3613	Mrs. Alan Stevenson, 77 Wellesley Street, Toronto.
Women's Central Conservative Association of Toronto Ho. 2893	Mrs. Robert Conner, 118 Kingston Road, Toronto. Mrs. Geo. Cockshutt, 172 Morrell Street, Brantford, Ontario.
Women's Christian Temperance Union La. 7061	Mrs. C. W. Hillock, 1570 King Street, West, Toronto.
Women's Committee of the Navy League Hu. 6594	Mrs. J. Bruce MacKinnon, 202 Heath Street, West, Toronto.
Overseas Nursing Sisters' Assocn. for Ontario.	Miss Mary Sunley, 55 Madison Ave., Toronto.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Women's Land Brigade Auxiliary	Mrs. K. V. Svanefelt 22 Castlefield Avenue, Toronto.
Women's Law Association of Ontario	Miss Elva Dunn, 253 Bay Street, Toronto.
Zonta Clubs of Canada El. 4321	Miss Helen Cleveland, Wood, Gundy & Co. Limited, 36 King Street, West, Toronto.
Provincial Council of Women	Mrs. Fred G. Miller, 24 Stinson Street, Hamilton, Ontario.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267669

P.M.O

(3)

FOR THE PRIME MINISTER

FOR COUNCIL: December 27th, 1940.

SUBJECT: Organization of wartime service for women.

REMARKS: Mrs. McClung's letter and copy of Prime Minister's reply attached.

CONSIDERED BY COUNCIL:

ACTION TAKEN: Copies of correspondence sent to the following Ministers:
Labour,
National War Services,
National Defence,
Munitions and Supply.

DISPOSED OF:

(A. D. P. Heeney)
J.C.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

OFFICE OF THE CLERK OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL

MEMORANDUM

C267670

Mr. Turnbull:

Re: National Committee for Voluntary Registration of Canadian Women.

Attached are Miss Hyndman's wire and a draft reply which have been discussed with Dr. Coleman.

I suggest that you have Mr. Gardiner approve the reply before putting the draft before the Prime Minister.

Copies for Mr. Gardiner attached.

A. D. P. H.

July 9th, 1940.

Mr Gardiner approves of answer proposed & follow up with word to Miss Hyndman say A.M. has previously spoken to Lindsay.
Mr King says to send letter pointing out ~~that~~ was sent ~~from~~ 1940

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950, MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Exclusive Connection with WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH CO.
Cable Service to all the World
Money Transferred by Telegraph

CANADIAN NATIONAL TELEGRAPHS

C267671

D. E. GALLOWAY, Assistant Vice-President, Toronto, Ont.

Form 6103. T.W.

CLASS OF SERVICE DESIRED
Full-Rate Message
Day Letter
Night Message
Night Letter

PATRONS SHOULD MARK AN X OPPOSITE THE CLASS OF SERVICE DESIRED; OTHERWISE THE MESSAGE WILL BE TRANSMITTED AS A FULL-RATE TELEGRAM

RECEIVER'S NO.	TIME FILED	CHECK

Send the following message, subject to the terms on back hereof, which are hereby agreed to

DAY LETTER

Ottawa, July 9th, 1940.

Miss Margaret Hyndman, K.C.,
National Committee for Voluntary
Registration of Canadian Women,
1203 Montreal Trust Building,
Toronto, Ontario.

Regarding your telegram of today, may I assure you once more that the Government have no intention of ignoring the work of your National Committee for the Voluntary Registration of Canadian Women, and arrangements have been made to turn over to the new Department of National War Services the detailed information made available to the Voluntary Service Registration Bureau by your National Committee.

The Government anticipate that this information will be of great value in the organization and co-ordination of voluntary services. National registration conducted by the Government, will of necessity be of general character, and for obvious reasons will include all men and women throughout Canada over the age of sixteen years.

Would appreciate your explaining position to members of your National Committee. Copy of reply your telegram and this, are being handed to the Honourable J.G. Gardiner, who is to be Minister immediately concerned.

W. L. Mackenzie King.

Charge: Prime Minister's Office.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

MEMORANDUM

Office of the Prime Minister C267372

Ottawa,.....

Mr Dickson

Prime Minister asked about the further ... I told the Bruce about young man & two women who had applied for permit. Said they were expected ... Mayor in Cabinet. Mr
Prime ... only ... up in Huron ...

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267373

Unrevised Hansard
May 12th, 1941, page 2845

Mr. Bruce :-

We heard yesterday over the BBC that women's contribution to the war effort in Britain is gaining in value daily, that they are now doing eighty per cent of the skilled work in some of the munitions plants. I was glad to hear the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Ralston) say over the radio yesterday that plans are being considered for the utilization of women in certain work in Canada's fighting services. There is no doubt that there are many positions which women can fill as well as men. A voluntary women's transport service was organized last summer in Montreal, and in September a detachment was formed in Toronto under the Canadian Red Cross. The Toronto detachment has 160 women members, thoroughly disciplined, who have been driving motor cars, ambulances and other army vehicles, and are able to do all the running repairs to their cars. They are also trained in first aid and air raid precautions work. For some time Great Britain has had women performing similar services, and they would welcome reinforcements from Canada. Although the members of the Toronto detachment are anxious to go to England to help their sisters there, and for this purpose will pay their own expenses, the Department of External Affairs has refused them passports.

I should like to read the cabled reply from the head of the British motor transport corps to a message sent from the Toronto women's transport service:

Grateful for wire. M.T.C. needs hundreds of drivers, some with pay. Work includes day and night driving, London and provinces. Likelihood foreign service later. Age limit 21 to 43.

I suggest that this voluntary organization be given official recognition by the Department of National Defence, to facilitate their getting overseas for service.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267674

N-305-14
1941

Recd for file June 1/41 d-300
1941

MEMORANDUM FOR MR. TURNBULL:

Mr. Robertson has asked me to send you a brief statement respecting the editorial in the Citizen this morning on "Canadian Women want to Serve".

I enclose copy of the Notes that were given to Senator Dandurand on the subject, which, I think, explain as clearly as can be done at present the action taken by the Government and the reasons for it. The Senator used the note marked for June 12th and I think he read, as typed, the statement prepared for June 13th. The Senate Handard, however, is not yet available to check this.

There are two points of importance in connection with the Citizen's editorial and Senator Meighen's criticims on which it is based.

First, the British Government is not pressing or even asking that permission be given to Canadian women to proceed overseas to engage in war work. In the one case in which a request was made by the Department of Health of Scotland for eight specially qualified women, namely "occupational therapists", permission was, of course, granted at once.

The other point is that of the many hundreds of women who have applied for permission to visit the United

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Kingdom to be with their husbands, fiancés, parents or for other reasons, the great majority state that they are anxious to do various kinds of war work and sometimes produce letters from individuals or private organizations intimating that their offers of service would be welcome. It is clear, however, that to grant exemption in such cases would defeat the whole purpose of the Order in Council, the reasons for which, as set forth in Senator Dandurand's statement, are the pressure on shipping in the Atlantic, on food and housing accommodation in the United Kingdom and the desire to avoid the problem which gave rise to so much difficulty at the end of the last war of having large numbers of women to repatriate at a time when the pressure on shipping was so great as to seriously delay the return of our soldiers to Canada.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Draft used on June 12th.

C267676

SUGGESTED REPLY TO QUESTION RAISED BY RT. HON. ARTHUR MEIGHEN ON APRIL 3rd, RESPECTING PERMITS FOR WOMEN TO VISIT THE UNITED KINGDOM

Shortly before adjournment on April 3rd the Rt. Hon. Mr. Meighen raised the question of Canadian women not being permitted to go to the United Kingdom to take part in war work. I intimated that I should endeavour to give him some information on the subject.

The decision not to permit women to go Overseas, except in special cases, was taken on June 4th, 1940, and is incorporated in an Order in Council of that date - P.C. 2371. The Order provides that women, other than women engaged or employed in the Armed Forces or the Public Service of Canada, and children under the age of twelve years, are prohibited from travelling to countries in the European war zone. The Secretary of State for External Affairs is authorized, however, to grant exemption in special cases involving hardship.

The Order in Council, it may be noted, was based on the very similar Order in Council of February 20th, 1917, passed when the difficulties and dangers of travel across the

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267677

Atlantic and the growing problem of food supplies in Great Britain made it advisable to put a stop to the movement of women and children to Britain.

The present Order in Council was passed at the instance of the Canadian military authorities and on representations from the Canadian High Commissioner in London. It was passed at a time when the occupation of the Low Countries and Northern France by the enemy greatly increased the strain on shipping, the danger of travel in the Atlantic, and the problem of food supplies and housing accommodation in Great Britain itself. There was also another consideration and that a very important one, namely, the desire to avoid the situation which arose at the close of the last war when the presence in the United Kingdom of considerable numbers of Canadian women who had gone to be with their husbands there seriously delayed the repatriation of Canadian troops. I may add that the situation as regards shipping, food supplies and housing accommodation is at least equally as serious now as when it was deemed necessary to pass the present Order-in-Council nearly a year ago.

Provision is made, as I have already indicated, for exemption in special cases where hardship is involved. Under this provision permits have been granted to two or three categories of women and children, such as those passing in transit through

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Canada from Australia or the Far East, women whose homes are in the United Kingdom and who have been in Canada on a brief visit or who are without financial resources in this country. A number of permits have also been granted, at the request of the United Kingdom Government, to women who are proceeding overseas to marry British subjects domiciled in the United Kingdom and who would not be returning to Canada. Permits have also been granted to eight occupational therapists whose services were requested by the British War Office and the Department of Health for Scotland and for whom definite arrangements for employment were made in advance.

I may add that there have been a great many requests which it has not been found practicable to grant under the Order in Council, from women of all ages who desire to go to the United Kingdom to take part in war activities of various kinds. Indeed, practically all the requests for special exemption from women who desire to join their husbands or fiances in England, state that they are competent and anxious to do various kinds of war work as canteen or munitions workers, motor drivers or to work in nursing or in social service. Many of them, indeed, have stated that they had offers of employment from various organizations in the United Kingdom. The letters which these women have received and which, of course, were in

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

reply to their own enquiries, or offers to serve, usually intimate that their services would be welcomed but that they are invitations to present themselves for enrolment rather than definite assurances of employment.

Perhaps the largest group of women desiring to volunteer their services is that of motor drivers, of which there are, of course, many different categories. The United Kingdom authorities, who were approached on the matter, took the view, however, that it would be preferable for women to join the Women's Auxiliary Territorial Service of the British Army or the sister organizations which serve the Royal Navy, or the Royal Air Force. They indicated, however, it would be undesirable to allow women to proceed to the United Kingdom without being definitely accepted for service before departure because of the strict medical examination required and there have been no proposals from the United Kingdom Government to recruit women for these services in Canada.

The desire of large numbers of Canadian women to do war work in the United Kingdom is recognized and appreciated by the Government. The prospect of danger or privation have in no wise deterred them from offering their services but rather tended to stimulate them to offer to undertake

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

any work for which there might be a need. It would surely be unwise, however, especially at this critical period in the war, to permit an added drain on shipping and housing and food resources to develop when there is no real assurance that the women would be accepted for service on arrival. Even in such cases it would not be an efficient employment of our war resources for Canadian women to be taken across the Ocean to do work for which there are already women available in the United Kingdom. I should add that, if the British Government wished to secure the services of competent Canadian women for war work to meet any shortage that might develop the Canadian Government would, of course, be quite prepared to give the matter immediate and most careful consideration.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Draft prepared for June 13th

C267681

At the conclusion of my remarks yesterday on the Order in Council prohibiting women and children from travelling to the United Kingdom, except by special permission, I pointed out that, if His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom should wish to secure the services of competent Canadian women for any particular branch of war work to meet any shortage that might develop, immediate attention would be given to the question of providing exit permits.

I am now informed that in the past week or two further information has been received respecting the need for a number of qualified women transport drivers. It has been decided, in principle, to relax the regulations somewhat to permit them to proceed overseas. Consideration is now being given to the detailed requirements it will be necessary to fulfill before women can be accepted for enrolment in United Kingdom motor transport organizations. An essential condition will be that they must be accepted for service by representatives of a United Kingdom organization or corps before leaving this country. The reason for this requirement, as the British authorities have pointed out, is

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

that both the technical and medical qualifications are high and it would be a waste of effort for women to go to the United Kingdom only to find on arriving there that they were unable to measure up to the standards required. A further point is that applicants would have to give an undertaking, if accepted, to serve for the duration of the war or as long as their services were required since there is already a heavy pressure on shipping on the part of Canadian women in the United Kingdom who desire to return to Canada.

I should perhaps add that, if there should be any indication from the British authorities in the months to come that there is a strong need for the services of qualified women in other branches of war work, consideration would be given to granting special exemption for them also.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Unrevised Senate Debates
June 12, 1941
Pages 277-78

WITHHOLDING OF EXEATS

DISCUSSION

On the Orders of the Day:

Right Hon. ARTHUR MEIGHEN: Honourable members, some months ago I called attention to the inability of young Canadian women, eager to serve in some capacity in the auxiliary women's service of England, to get exeats from the Government of Canada to enable them to proceed overseas to fill positions already granted them, subject only to medical examination in England. I have heard nothing on the subject since, beyond receipt of a letter from the Department of External Affairs telling me about an Order in Council passed on June 4, a year ago, under which women are not permitted to go to the British Isles or the war area unless they are part of the actual military, naval or air services, or unless England is their home and it is a case of the exercise of legal compassion.

A considerable number of these eager young women have already been accepted, subject only to medical examination, and one would think it would not have been difficult to arrange with the British war services to accept medical examinations made here by doctors approved by such a body as our Pension Board; but apparently nothing has been done. These women, many of them born in England, are extremely irked that they cannot do anything, although the auxiliary services overseas have been virtually begging them to come so that they may be accepted for work.

Now I find there has been established in the United States an air training scheme for British airmen—an event of some significance in view of our recent past. The purpose is to send back eight thousand men with the limited training they can secure in that country, such training, of course, being British. In connection with the establishment of this plan there have come to the United States a considerable number of members of the Women's Auxiliary Air Force of Britain. While they can cross the Atlantic this way for the purpose of rendering essential services to the Air Force of Britain in the United States, Canadian women are unable by any means to go to the help of their sisters in England. Can one imagine anything more preposterous?

Hon. Mr. DANDURAND: Do I understand that women from Great Britain will cross over?

Right Hon. Mr. MEIGHEN: Yes.

Hon. Mr. DANDURAND: That is quite explainable if there are too many in Great Britain.

Right Hon. Mr. MEIGHEN: What the leader of the Government says is that they would not cross over unless there were too many. I would rather say they would not cross over unless they were needed.

Hon. Mr. DANDURAND: That is an inference. But surely the United States, with 130,000,000 people—

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Right Hon. Mr. MEIGHEN: But they cannot enlist in the force. The United States are not in the war.

Hon. Mr. DANDURAND: No, but the United States are receiving British airmen for training.

Right Hon. Mr. MEIGHEN: In compliance with international law they are being trained in civilian clothes, and the women's auxiliary services are needed to assist them. These members of the auxiliary services are not in the United States, but have to come from England. They come, not because they are eager to leave England, but because they are needed in the United States.

My authority for what I say is a Canadian Press dispatch dated Ottawa, May 31. It says:

> Fresh strength for the fighting forces has come to this continent—airmen, sailors and soldiers, and United States-bound girls of the Women's Auxiliary Air Force.
>
> Guarded by mighty units of the British fleet, they sailed the north Atlantic while the greatest naval battle of the war was fought in those waters—the action which saw the loss of H.M.S. Hood and the avenging destruction of Germany's battleship Bismarck.
>
> In the varied contingent of air, sea and land fighters came the first group of Royal Air Force fledglings who will be trained in the United States under the plan announced at Washington May 29 by the United States War Department.
>
> They will be followed at intervals by other flights until 8,000 have been trained in the next year. The instruction course begins June 7.
>
> Most of the blue-clad youths in the first group were destined for service in air crews. They did not know their destination in the United States.
>
> Practically all the airmen were in uniform, but all had been issued with mufti, and it was indicated they would doff their uniform before entering the U.S. to conform with the international amenities.

This does seem an odd state of affairs.

Hon. Mr. EULER: May I ask the right honourable gentleman a question? Is there any indication that there is a dearth of the kind of assistance these Canadian women could give?

Right Hon. Mr. MEIGHEN: Yes. Such indication is contained in the messages which I have already reported to the House, messages from these auxiliary services telling how desirous they are of having these girls. A girl in Weyburn, whose case I have in mind now, was actually accepted, but has not been able to get out of Canada. The department is simply adhering to the letter of this Order in Council of June 4. Its terms are apparently more important than any real service.

Hon. Mr. EULER: From the fact that women were being allowed to go from England to the United States, I thought there might be a sufficiency of that kind of help in England now.

Right Hon. Mr. MEIGHEN: There has to be, and, besides, England has to send women to the United States. Why is it that we cannot at least supply the help needed in the United States and in that way save the women two trips—across the ocean and back? I presume, though, we have no means of training women here.

Hon. Mr. EULER: Is it the right honourable gentleman's suggestion that Canadian women might go to the United States?

Right Hon. Mr. MEIGHEN: Yes, if they could be trained here. I do not know whether we have any organization to train them. We might have been expected to have some such organization, but I doubt that we have. In any event, it would seem that we should allow Canadian women to go to England. So far as I know there is no suggestion that their expenses be paid. Those I have heard of are ready to pay their own expenses if they are permitted to go.

Hon. Mr. DANDURAND: Honourable senators, I may say that my right honourable friend's inquiry was not left unanswered by the department. An answer was sent to me and I should have presented it to the House, but at the same time I received a copy of a letter from the department addressed to my right honourable friend, which covered virtually the whole situation. If my right honourable friend so desires, I can place the answer on Hansard this afternoon.

The information given by my right honourable friend is new to me. As to our furnishing any number of women to play the role that is now being played by British women by the side of British airmen who are undergoing training in the United States, I cannot understand why this could not be done if the British Government notified our Government of what was going on. I will obtain from the Hansard reporters a copy of my right honourable friend's statement and bring it to the attention of my colleagues at the Council meeting which is to be held this morning. I am surprised that the British Government or authorities on the other side have not called upon these Canadian nurses and hospital attendants, as I take them to be, who have offered to serve in England. However, as I say, the matter is new to me. I will bring an answer to my right honourable friend this afternoon.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267695
Liberal Organization
WWII - Voluntary Service
Registration Bureau W-314-1
1944
N-450
1944

Memorandum for the Prime Minister:

Mrs. Tweed of the National Liberal Federation telephoned to say that she had received many telephone calls of protest from Ottawa women in regard to the action of General LaFleche in sending Miss Helen Doherty to England as a representative of the Women's Voluntary Services.

You may be familiar with the situation. Briefly put, it is that an invitation was extended from United Kingdom sources to Women's Voluntary Service organizations in Canada to send over four representatives. General LaFleche is said to have taken on himself the task of selecting these representatives and this without much, if any, consultation. Instead of taking all four from the ranks of the volunteers, he nominated Miss Helen Doherty from his own office and, in addition, apparently selected a Jewish woman from Toronto, who is completely unacceptable to any of the organizations, largely I believe on personal grounds.

The protests to Mrs. Tweed largely centered on the appointment of Miss Doherty, the feeling being that she is well paid for any work she does and does not need to force out some other woman from having a chance at this trip. It was added that if the Minister felt he should send someone from his own staff, then Mrs. West, who is actually employed on this work, should have been chosen. Mrs. Tweed is somewhat concerned because the effect on the Liberal women generally is to make them disinclined to assist in party matters.

WJT/CEB.

W.J.T.

January 5, 1944.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

(N.A. ROBERTSON TO WLMK) March 25th, 1945

C267686 TOP SECRET

(MARCH 25, 1945)

The Crimea Conference

The Crimea Conference, held at Yalta from February 4 to 11, 1945, was attended by Prime Minister Churchill, Marshal Stalin and President Roosevelt, together with their Foreign Secretaries, Chiefs of Staff and other diplomatic, military and economic advisers, the conference personnel totalling almost 600 persons.

In eight days, thanks in part to preliminary work done at Malta the preceding week by British and United States delegates, agreement was reached on a variety of questions grouped under ten heads:

1. The defeat of Germany
2. Occupation and control of Germany
3. Reparation by Germany
4. A United Nations conference on general international organization
5. A declaration on liberated Europe
6. Poland
7. Jugoslavia
8. Meetings of Foreign Secretaries
9. Unity for peace as for war
10. Agreement on freed prisoners

I. The defeat of Germany

The scope of the present memorandum does not include a report of detailed plans made during the Crimea Conference for coordinating future attacks on Germany, nor discussions of shipping problems held earlier at Malta, on which information is not available. The official communiqué, published on February 12, confined itself to reporting agreement on coordination of military plans and an arrangement whereby meetings of the three military staffs would be continued in the future whenever need arose. President Roosevelt in his address to Congress added three details: (a) that daily tactical bombing in support of the Red armies by heavy British and American bombers had been arranged; (b) that agreement had been reached on the most effective distribution of available material for use in the combined war effort; and (c) that henceforward there would be direct, daily interchange of information between the various fighting fronts, making it unnecessary for messages between the Soviet and other armies to be routed through Chiefs of Staff in London or Washington as heretofore.

II. Occupation and control of Germany

The Crimea Conference confirmed in effect plans already worked out by the European Advisory Commission for the occupation and control of Germany. The communiqué announced that the Allies had agreed on common policies and plans for enforcing unconditional surrender terms; that the forces of the three powers would occupy separate zones of Germany; that a central control commission, having its headquarters in Berlin, would consist of the Supreme Commanders of the three powers, and that France would be invited to occupy a fourth zone and participate as a fourth member of the control commission. Next were cited the methods by which the Nazi system was to be extirpated - viz., by break-up of armed forces and the German General Staff, removal or destruction of military equipment, elimination or control of war industries, punishment of war criminals, and wiping out of Nazi laws, institutions and organizations and all militarist influence in German culture and economic life. Only after these things had been done would there be hope for a decent life for Germans and a place for them in the comity of nations.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

It was agreed that the three Foreign Secretaries should study the question of punishment of major war criminals and report in due course after the close of the Conference.

The question of dismembering Germany was raised at Yalta by Marshal Stalin, who had listened with interest at Teheran to a discussion of the subject by Mr. Churchill and President Roosevelt and now supposed there would be general assent to the principle. Mr. Churchill mentioned the complications that would have to be faced if dismemberment were agreed on, but the conference adopted, apparently without further discussion, two recommendations subsequently brought in by the Foreign Secretaries:

(a) That a reference to dismemberment should be inserted in Article 12 of the Terms of Surrender immediately after the phrases foreshadowing complete disarmament and demilitarization of Germany as being among the steps requisite for future peace and security;
(b) That Mr. Eden and the United States and Soviet Ambassadors in London should be constituted a commission to study questions of procedure with regard to dismembering Germany. An ad hoc commission was named, rather than the European Advisory Commission, apparently because the three principal Powers were not ready yet to give France a share in the discussions.

There was some uncertainty as to what was meant by the word 'dismemberment', which might be applied to truncation, decentralization or a complete cutting up of Germany. At the first session of the commission it was assumed that the term meant the disappearance of Germany as a single entity, and on this hypothesis discussions are continuing.

III. Reparation

It was agreed during the Crimea Conference that Germany must pay in kind for losses it had caused Allied nations during the war. An Allied Reparation Commission - composed of one representative each from the U.S.S.R., the United Kingdom and the United States - would be set up in Moscow to work out a detailed plan based on the following principles agreed to during the conference:

1. Reparations would be received in the first instance by countries which had borne the main burden of the war, suffered the heaviest losses and organized victory over the enemy.

2. They would be exacted from Germany in three forms:

(a) Removals of equipment, machine tools, shops, rolling stock; transfers of German investments abroad and of shares in industrial, transport and other enterprises in Germany - the process to be completed within two years after surrender and to be aimed chiefly at destroying German war potential;

(b) Annual deliveries of goods from current German production for a period still to be fixed;

(c) The use of German labour.

The Soviet and United States delegations asked that the total value of reparation under (a) and (b) should be set at $20 billion, of which the U.S.S.R. should receive half. Mr. Churchill, however, in the light of experience after the last war, doubted the efficacy of any reparation scheme based on an arbitrary figure and asked that no total be mentioned pending study of the question by the Reparation Commission. Nevertheless the various governments concerned, including that of the United Kingdom, have already begun to estimate their own requirements in manpower and the claims they feel they have a

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267688

right to make on German assets and production in order to meet military and civilian requirements after the European phase of the war is ended.

There was a difference of opinion at the conference as to the length of time during which annual deliveries in kind should be expected under heading 2(b). The Soviet delegation thought ten years a proper period, whereas the United Kingdom Government had been using a five-year period as a basis for its plans. Decision on this point was deferred.

The Soviet delegation wished to postpone any discussion of the use of German labour as a form of reparation, but the United Kingdom delegation was responsible for having item 2(c) inserted in the agreed outline of principles. There does not seem, however, to have been any discussion of legal, economic, administrative and political implications of the use of German labour, although the United Kingdom Government and presumably the others as well had given considerable study to the matter prior to the conference.

The War Cabinet in a despatch to Yalta reminded the British delegation that reparation policy must be related to decisions on the dismemberment of Germany. Large annual reparation payments would be impossible if Germany's manufacturing capacity were drastically depleted. The Allies must avoid creating conditions (a) in which it would be necessary for them to finance Germany to meet its obligations or (b) which would renew such international economic problems as the I.L.O. has been trying to solve. Finally, in fixing the amount of reparation, allowance should be made for requirements of the occupying forces, for pre-war claims of the United Nations on Germany and for Germany's own need of foreign currency to pay for essential imports.

The complete text of sections II and III of the Crimea Conference communiqué has not been disclosed to the German public by Nazi leaders. Plans for reparation, destruction of Nazi institutions and trial of war criminals have been withheld altogether, while little has been said about proposed limitations of German territory. There have been public denunciations, however, of plans for occupation of Germany by zones, the 'forced deportation of millions of German workers', the 'new super-militarism' to be centred in Berlin and the proposals for restriction of industry, described as 'pure Morgenthau'. Every effort has been made to represent the Yalta decisions as implying permanent enslavement of the German people, for which reason no mention has been made of the prospect of Germany's eventual restoration to the comity of nations.

IV. United Nations Conference on proposed world organization

The Yalta communiqué emphasized the need for earliest possible establishment of a general international organization, regarded as essential both to prevent aggression and to remove causes of war through close and continued collaboration of all peace-loving peoples. To prepare the charter of such an organization along lines proposed at Dumbarton Oaks a conference of United Nations would be called at San Francisco on April 25, 1945. The Government of China and the Provisional Government of France would be consulted and given an opportunity to sponsor invitations. Although at Dumbarton Oaks the important question of voting procedure in the Security Council had not been settled, the difficulty had now been resolved and the text of the agreed proposals would be published as soon as consultations with China and France were completed.

Conversations at Yalta which preceded this announcement were concerned chiefly with voting procedure in the Security Council, the principle of territorial trusteeship, the distribution of invitations to the San Francisco Conference, and membership of Soviet Republics in the general international organization.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

A. Voting procedure in the Security Council

At Dumbarton Oaks the four leading powers concurred in the view that the executive council of a general international organization should have primary responsibility for maintaining international peace. The composition of the Council was agreed on, as well as the general lines along which it should exercise its authority, and its right in certain instances to base decisions on a majority vote provided all the permanent members of the council concurred. There was disagreement, however, on the question of whether a permanent member should have the right to block action by a negative vote in a case where it might itself be party to a dispute. The Soviet delegates insisted that this right must be recognized; the British and American delegates did not concur, and a compromise proposal offered toward the close of the conference by Sir Alexander Cadogan was rejected by the Soviet delegates.

At the Crimea Conference, when President Roosevelt brought forward virtually the same compromise proposal again, Soviet opposition evaporated as soon as its implications were understood. The compromise formula was agreed to on February 8 and published when invitations to the San Francisco conference were issued on March 5. It provided in effect:

(a) That each member of the Security Council should have one vote;

(b) That in procedural matters decisions should be made by an affirmative vote of any seven members of the council;

(c) That in all other matters decisions should be made by an affirmative vote of seven members including the concurring votes of the permanent members. In certain cases within this category, however, a party to a dispute - whether a permanent member or not - would abstain from voting. Such cases would be those involving decisions (i) under Chapter VIII, Section A of the Dumbarton Oaks proposals, or (ii) under Chapter VIII, Section C, sentence 2 of paragraph 1.

This implied that in questions of procedure permanent members would have no special rights. In other questions the assent of all permanent members would be required except in decisions falling within the two categories mentioned in the last sentence of section (c) above. By virtue of these two exceptions a party to a dispute, whether a permanent member or not, would be unable to prevent the Security Council from investigating a dispute or a situation to ascertain whether its continuance would endanger the maintenance of international peace and security. Nor could a disputant prevent the Security Council from recommending appropriate procedures or methods of adjustment, thereby indicating how the world as a whole thought a Great Power party to a dispute should conduct itself. Similarly the Yalta formula would make it impossible for a party to a dispute to prevent the Security Council from (a) referring to the Permanent Court of International Justice for advice, or (b) deciding whether or not a dispute or situation arose out of matters which under international law were solely within the domestic jurisdiction of the State concerned, or (c) determining whether a dispute should be settled through suitable regional arrangements or agencies. The Yalta formula, however, would not enable the Security Council to decide to inflict sanctions on any of its permanent members.

Mr. Stettinius in an explanatory statement pointed out that the practical effect of these proposals was to differentiate, so far as voting was concerned, between the quasi-judicial function of the Security Council in promoting pacific settlement of disputes and its political function in taking action for the maintenance of

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

peace and security. Where the Council was engaged in performing its quasi-judicial functions, no party to a dispute - whether powerful or weak - would participate in decisions. Where, however, the Council was engaged in performing its political functions of action for maintenance of peace and security, a difference would be made between permanent members and other nations - for the practical reason that the permanent members must of necessity bear principal responsibility for action. Here the concurrence of all permanent members would be required, their votes being counted even when they themselves were parties to the dispute under consideration.

B. Territorial trusteeship

The United States delegation asked at the Crimea Conference for acceptance of the principle of trusteeship in administering conquered territories. Since this raised issues of particular interest to France, however, it was agreed that the five nations which will have permanent seats on the Security Council should discuss the question prior to the San Francisco Conference, subject to the following reservations: (a) The principle of trusteeship should apply only to existing mandates of the League of Nations, territories detached from the enemy as a result of the present war and any other territory which might voluntarily be placed under trusteeship. (b) No discussion was contemplated at San Francisco or in the preliminary talks of the actual territories to be placed under trusteeship. This would be a matter for subsequent agreement.

C. Invitations to the conference

It was planned at Yalta that invitations to the San Francisco Conference should go to the United Nations as they existed on February 8, 1945 and to such of the Associated Nations as should have declared war on the common enemy by March 1. (The Associated Nations were at the time Chile, Ecuador, Paraguay, Peru, Uruguay, Venezuela, Egypt and Iceland; to these Turkey was added at Mr. Eden's request, and later Sa'udi Arabia). All qualified for representation at San Francisco except Iceland, which tried to secure an invitation without declaring war on the ground that it had no army and that it had pledged itself to perpetual neutrality under the Act of Union with Denmark. Failing to secure the desired invitation, the government fell back on an expression of hope that Iceland would not suffer discrimination or be prejudiced in the postwar world by reason of its failure to join the United Nations.

Syria and Lebanon on their own initiative made last-minute declarations of war, then proceeded to press for invitations to the conference despite advance warning from the United Kingdom Minister that the French Provisional Government would claim a voice in determining their eligibility either as members of the conference or as signatories of the United Nations Declaration. The status of these two countries is still under discussion.

D. Membership of Soviet Republics in the international organization

The Soviet delegation came to the Crimea Conference prepared to ask that all sixteen Soviet Republics should become members of the general international organization. On further reflection, however, M. Molotov asked only for the inclusion of White Russia, the Ukraine and Lithuania as founder members. It was agreed that at the San Francisco conference delegates of the United Kingdom and United States would support a proposal to admit two of these - the Ukraine and White Russia - to original membership. No special reservation seems to have been made along lines suggested by the War Cabinet to guard against a possible attempt by the U.S.S.R. to

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

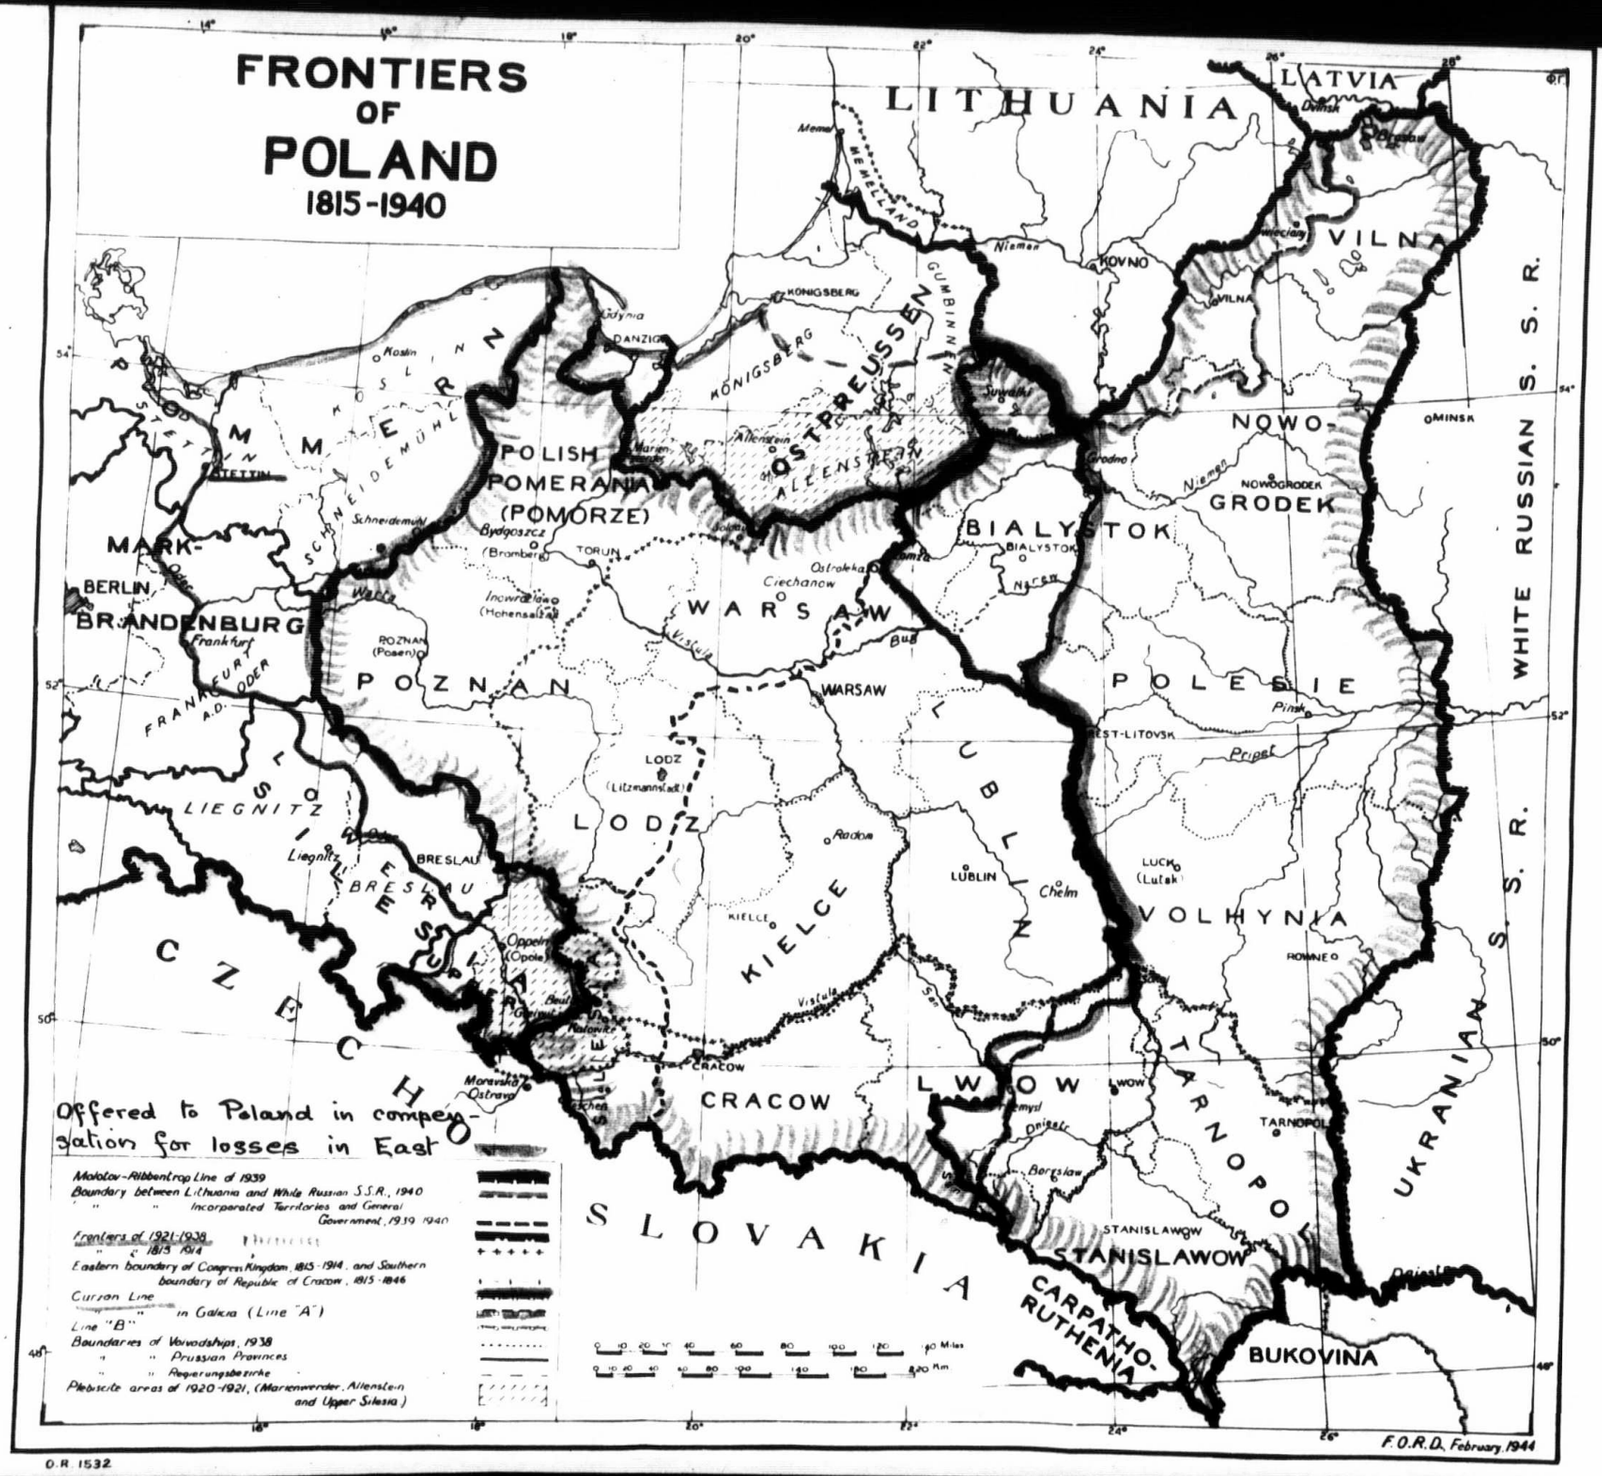
POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267691

secure subsequent admission of the other fourteen Soviet republics as members of the international organization.

V. Declaration on liberated Europe

During the fourteen-month period which elapsed between the Teheran and Crimea Conferences there developed serious strains in the relations of the principal Powers as a result of political and economic trends in such European countries as Poland, Jugoslavia, Greece and Italy, where the process of liberation was accompanied by conflict between rival aspirants for power or by economic difficulties whose solution had not been found immediately. To reduce the risk of serious misunderstanding among the major Allies it had become apparent that more frequent conferences had become a necessity. Provision was accordingly made for regular consultation among the three Foreign Secretaries, who would meet in the three capitals by turn, probably at intervals of three or four months. The first meeting was to be held in London after the San Francisco Conference. This decision was supplemented by a declaration on liberated Europe which was greeted with special satisfaction in circles where fear had been growing of a serious rift among the three Powers. The declaration announced an agreement that the three Governments should concert during the temporary period of instability in liberated Europe their policies in assisting peoples freed from Nazi domination and peoples of the former Axis satellite States to solve their pressing political and economic problems by democratic means. Such assistance would be given jointly (a) to establish conditions of internal peace; (b) to carry out emergency measures for the relief of distressed peoples; (c) to form interim governmental authorities broadly representative of all democratic elements in the population and pledged to earliest possible establishment through free elections of governments responsive to the will of the people, and (d) to facilitate where necessary the holding of such elections. The three Governments would consult together immediately wherever in their opinion conditions made action necessary. Other governments would be consulted when matters of direct interest to them were under consideration. It was hoped that the Provisional Government of France might be associated with the three powers in the procedure suggested.



The declaration was described in the conference communiqué as a reaffirmation of faith in the principles of the Atlantic Charter, the pledge given in the United Nations Declaration and the determination of the three governments to build in cooperation with other peace-loving nations world order under law, dedicated to peace, security, freedom and the general wellbeing of mankind. Closely related to this declaration was the affirmation with which the communiqué closed, that to maintain and strengthen in the peace to come the unity of purpose and of action which had made victory possible was a sacred obligation owed by the three governments to their own peoples and to all the peoples of the world. Lasting peace would be dependent on continuing and growing cooperation and understanding among the three countries and among all the peace-loving nations.

VI. Poland

A number of particularly urgent European problems were taken up during the Crimea Conference itself. Of these possibly the most formidable had grown out of the existence of rival Polish governments in London and Warsaw, the former supported by two of the principal Allies and the latter by the U.S.S.R.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

D.R. 1532

C267692

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

When the conference opened three distinct proposals were in the air for restoring unity on a basis which would satisfy the requirements of the Allies and be acceptable to the Poles themselves:

(1) In the latter part of January 1945 the Polish Government in London had asked Mr. Churchill and President Roosevelt to press for creation of an inter-Allied military commission to be maintained in Poland while the millions of Poles now abroad returned home; they wished the commission to continue in control not only until free elections could be held, but also until a plebiscite should determine whether areas east of the Curzon Line should become part of the Ukrainian Soviet or remain within the Polish Republic. To such a commission the Polish Government in London would be prepared to cede part of its authority, provided the Warsaw group at the same time ceased to exercise administrative powers. This proposal of the London Poles, however, was not put forward at Yalta.

(2) President Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill asked Marshal Stalin instead to agree to (a) creation of a united representative Polish government based on political parties, and (b) a modification of the Curzon Line so as to give Lwow and the Galician oilfields - or at least the oilfields - to Poland.

(3) Marshal Stalin at the outset described his position in the following terms: Soviet policy recognized that a strong and free Poland, able to bar the way to German aggression, was essential to the U.S.S.R. The present Warsaw administration was fulfilling by no means badly its chief role of maintaining peace and order along Russian lines of communication behind the fighting front; agents of the London Poles, on the contrary, were killing Russian soldiers, raiding Russian arms dumps and violating regulations governing the use of radios. Under martial law such persons must be shot. A new government in Poland could be created only by the Poles themselves, and in existing circumstances there was little prospect that the London and Warsaw groups would come together. As for Poland's boundaries, Russian and Ukrainian opinion would not permit Marshal Stalin to make any concessions with regard to the Curzon Line.

After this first exchange of views, during which Mr.Churchill mentioned the very different information about conditions in Poland which he had received, the conferees drew up separate memoranda to serve as a basis for further discussion. The Soviet draft introduced a new formula on the boundary question which was promptly accepted by Mr. Churchill and somewhat more reluctantly by President Roosevelt. This provided for local digressions from the Curzon Line of from 3.1 to 4.9 miles in favour of Poland. The conference, however, dropped Marshal Stalin's proposal to guarantee forthwith a western boundary for Poland which would follow the Neisse and Oder Rivers to Stettin on the Baltic Coast, adopting instead Mr. Churchill's formula that the new Polish government should be consulted about accessions in the west and that final delimitation of the western border should be left to the peace conference. Two considerations seem to have been in Mr. Churchill's mind. There would be an advantage for Poland in owing accessions of territory to action of all the powers represented at the peace conference rather than to the initiative of Soviet officials alone. He was not certain moreover, that Polish leaders or their friends would think it possible for the country to absorb, man and develop all the territory Marshal Stalin was willing to guarantee to it east of the Oder.

The problem of creating a new Polish government which all

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

of the Great Powers could recognize was next discussed under two general headings - its composition and the manner of bringing it into being. The American memorandum proposed to hurdle constitutional difficulties and the rival claims of the London and Warsaw groups by creating a Presidential Committee of three, which would undertake to form a new representative interim government. M. Molotov maintained that it would be sufficient simply to enlarge the existing administration in Warsaw by the addition of 'some democratic leaders from Polish émigré circles and from within Poland itself.' (This formula, embodied in the Soviet memorandum, apparently represented an abandonment of Marshal Stalin's original position that it was impossible to expect the two rival groups to cooperate at all.)

Mr. Churchill objected to enlargement of the Warsaw administration on the ground that if the United Kingdom Government were to break with the Polish Government in London a completely new start ought to be made on more or less equal terms. In the end, however, the proposal for a Presidential Committee was withdrawn in deference to M. Molotov's wishes. What was agreed to was a formula providing for reorganization of the Warsaw Government on a broader democratic basis with the inclusion of democratic leaders from Poland itself and from Poles abroad. M. Molotov, Mr. Harriman and Sir. A. Clark Kerr were authorized as a commission to consult in the first instance in Moscow with these persons with a view to creating the new government. These terms of reference went a step beyond a proposal in the Soviet memorandum that M. Molotov, Mr. Harriman and Sir A. Clark Kerr should merely discuss among themselves the question of reorganization and submit their proposals to the three Powers.

It was agreed that the new Polish Provisional Government of National Unity should pledge itself to hold free elections as soon as possible on the basis of universal suffrage and the secret ballot. All democratic and anti-Nazi parties would have the right to take part in the election and to put forward candidates. The three powers would recognize the new provisional government when it was properly constituted and would exchange ambassadors with it. Thus all of them could be kept informed about the situation in Poland.

As foreseen by all concerned, the first difficulty encountered by the Moscow commission was to persuade the various Polish leaders to attend discussions in which their rivals would participate. Negotiations have not advanced yet beyond this stage, although in the invitations sent out it was made clear that the persons addressed were not being summoned to Moscow as candidates for inclusion in the new government but only for purposes of consultation. It will not be the function of the commission to select the new government but merely to arrange for and preside over discussions among representative Poles, its members acting in rotation as neutral chairmen.

Mr. Churchill's defence of the agreement on Poland was not made until two weeks after it had been repudiated by the Polish Government in London and considerable hostile comment had been published in the British and American press. The importance Mr. Churchill attached to winning support for the proposed Polish settlement is indicated by the fact that his statement defending it took up fully one-third of an extended report to the House of Commons on what had taken place during discussions at Malta, in the Crimea, in Egypt and at Athens.

It was necessary, Mr. Churchill said, to put an end to

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

a situation which would have proclaimed to the world disunity and confusion had it survived the Crimea Conference. To establish a free Polish nation with a good home to live in had always in his mind outweighed the actual tracing of frontier lines. He believed the Russian claim to the Curzon line to be just and right. It must be remembered that the investigators who suggested it in 1919 had not been friendly to Russia; their search had been for a line that would be right and proper. The British Government of the day had approved the line they proposed, which excluded Lwow from Poland. The U.S.S.R., which had sacrificed tens of millions of lives in the thirty-year struggle against German aggression, was now asking - after all its sufferings and victories - boundaries less spacious than those of Russia in 1914. They had saved Poland as a State and the Poles as a race from destruction and reduction to servitude. The Poles would be exchanging the enormous, dismal region of the Pripet Marshes, held between two wars, for developed agricultural and industrial areas in the west, from which a very large proportion of the German people had already departed. Within the new world organization their tenure of these areas should be secure. — Had the Polish Government in London not refused the advice of the United Kingdom Government in 1944 it could have entered Poland with Marshal Stalin's friendship and the present difficulties would not have arisen. The new plan for a united government which all the Allies could recognize would depend on the willingness of all sections of democratic Polish opinion to work together to give effect to the settlement.— The three governments represented at Yalta had declared that the sovereignty and independence of Poland would be maintained. No government stood more to its obligations than that of the U.S.S.R., whose leaders seemed to wish to live in honourable friendship with the western democracies. Mr. Churchill would embark on no discussion of Russian good faith. If any Polish troops did not desire to return to Poland after the war he hoped that they might enjoy the freedom and citizenship of the British Empire if the consent of the Dominions could be secured.

In confidential memoranda sent to Field Marshals Alexander and Montgomery it was observed that the new arrangements could not be squared with the Polish constitution, nor would they permit the Polish President to remain in office. As little as possible should be said of this aspect of the agreement. Polish troops should be reminded that the agreement would put an end to a situation in which the authorities in Poland were not representative of the Polish people while the Polish Government in London had no prospect of influencing events in Poland. Furthermore, they must realize that unless good relations were established between Poland and its powerful eastern neighbour the Poles would be unable to devote themselves to rehabilitating their country. The territorial settlement was broadly speaking along the lines both Sikorsky and Mikolajczyk had sought; it made good relations with the Soviet Union and agreement among the Great Powers possible.

VII. Jugoslavia

The declaration on Jugoslavia represented acceptance by the three powers of a concerted policy which the United Kingdom Government, with the passive support of the U.S.S.R., had been trying for months to achieve.

British policy had been directed toward (a) preventing civil war from breaking out between rival groups as an aftermath of German withdrawal or during the course of that withdrawal and (b) moderating revolutionary tendencies among Tito's partisans by grafting certain elements of the Jugoslav government in exile on to the National Liberation Movement in Jugoslavia itself. The policy of backing General Mihailovitch had finally been abandoned

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

by the United Kingdom government in the spring of 1944, owing to the General's failure to prosecute the war against the Germans actively. It will be recalled that in May, 1944, at the suggestion of the United Kingdom Ambassador, King Peter had ousted the government which General Mihailovitch served as War Minister, entrusting to the Ban of Croatia - Dr. Subasitch - the task of forming a new government with which Marshal Tito, the effective leader of Jugoslav resistance, could cooperate. This had been accomplished in July on the basis of an initial agreement of June 16 between Dr. Subasitch and Marshal Tito, in the drafting of which members of the National Liberation Movement and the AVNOJ, or Anti-Fascist Council of National Liberation, had played a part. The June agreement called for appointment of organs to facilitate collaboration in (a) the struggle against the common enemy, (b) the provision of supplies, (c) reconstruction of liberated areas, and (d) the conduct of foreign policy. It also called for the creation as soon as possible of a single representation of the State. From London the new government had appealed to all fighting groups in Jugoslavia to join the National Liberation Army; in return Marshal Tito had announced that a democratic, federal regime would be established in accordance with the wishes of the people expressed freely and without interference from the National Liberation Army. The principles thus agreed to still required, however, to be interpreted in specific terms.

In October, 1944, further talks took place between Dr. Subasitch and Marshal Tito which led to the main agreement of November 1 (with annexes of December 7), whose immediate fulfilment the Yalta declaration recommended. This agreement foreshadowed the creation of a democratic, federative Jugoslavia, with component parts enjoying sovereign and equal rights. King Peter would not return until the people had decided what form of government they desired. Meanwhile his powers would be exercised by a Regency Council appointed by a constitutional act of the King in agreement with Marshal Tito and Dr. Subasitch. The Council would take its oath to the King and maintain direct intercourse with him. Marshal Tito (as President of the Council and Prime Minister) and Dr. Subasitch (as Foreign Minister) would continue to represent the State in its relations with the outside world. The new government would be composed of 28 persons and would include ministers representing each of the six proposed federal units - Serbia, Croatia, Slovenia, Montenegro, Macedonia and Bosnia-Herzegovina. It would take its oath to the people, establish an independent judiciary and publish a declaration guaranteeing democratic liberties, of which a list was included in the agreement. Elections to a Constituent Assembly would be held within three months after liberation of the country. Only collaborationists would be barred from the elections, which in other respects would be free. Until the Constituent Assembly completed its work the AVNOJ would exercise legislative functions - a provision which implied that the inner political group of Partisan leaders would draft the electoral law.

State Department officials viewed this provision and other features of the Tito-Subasitch agreement, with some misgiving. They believed it left the way open for one political group to have practically exclusive power through control of the elections and undemocratic use of the authority concentrated in its hands. The State Department therefore took the position in the last week of December that the various peoples of Jugoslavia had a right to work out their own form of government unimpeded by foreign influences, and that the rule of any one national or political group within the country ought not to be imposed on other elements. Marshal Stalin and M. Molotov, on the contrary, fully supported the agreement and emphasized to Dr. Subasitch the identical nature of Soviet and British policy in Jugoslavia.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Only very gradually was the State Department won around to a concerted policy. When King Peter objected in mid-January to the creation of a Regency Council and the concentration of legislative power in the hands of AVNOJ and shortly afterward tried to dismiss Dr. Subasitch, the United Kingdom Government inquired whether the Soviet and United States governments would support a demand for immediate implementation of the Tito-Subasitch agreement, recognize a united Jugoslav government, accredit Ambassadors to the Regency Council and refuse to have dealings with any government which Marshal Tito or King Peter might set up independently. The U.S.S.R. gave the desired assurances, but at first the State Department would go no farther than to promise de facto recognition of a united Jugoslav government. At the end of January, however, when King Peter reinstated Dr. Subasitch and agreed to appoint a Regency Council, the State Department informed the Foreign Office that if the united Jugoslav government would make a declaration that it had been set up only for the transitional period, pending elections in which the will of the people would be freely expressed, the United States Government would accredit an Ambassador to it. In the absence of any such declaration the United States Government would accord only provisional recognition.

At Yalta, however, the United States delegation was able at last to join its colleagues without reservation. Marshal Tito and General Subasitch would be asked to put their agreement into effect immediately and to form a new government based on that agreement. As soon as the new government was formed it should declare that:

(a) The AVNOJ should be extended to include members of the last Jugoslav Parliament who had not compromised themselves by collaborating with the enemy, thus forming a body to be known as a temporary Parliament; and
(b) Legislative acts of the AVNOJ would be subject to subsequent ratification by a Constituent Assembly.

This decision put an end to the possibility that the State Department might be induced to support a government set up outside the terms of the Tito-Subasitch agreement. Members of the Royal Jugoslav Government left London immediately for Belgrade; the three members of the Regency Council were sworn in on March 5 and the formation of a government under Marshal Tito's leadership, with Dr. Subasitch as Foreign Minister, was announced two days later.

Other special problems raised during the Crimea Conference had to be postponed for later consideration. These included the following items:

(a) Italy's frontiers with Austria and Jugoslavia. The American and Soviet delegations agreed to consider notes on these subjects presented by the British delegation and to express their views later.
(b) The Allied Control Commission in Bulgaria.
(c) Greek representation in Bulgaria; immediate reparations deliveries by Bulgaria to Greece.
(d) The treatment of oil equipment in Rumania as war booty by the U.S.S.R.

It was agreed that discussions of subjects under (b), (c) and (d), on which the British delegation also submitted notes, should proceed through diplomatic channels. Efforts are being made to secure an early decision on issues raised in item (c).

(e) Proposed Jugoslav-Bulgarian pact. Mr. Eden maintained that this proposal raised serious issues of principle, since Bulgaria was an ex-enemy State whose affairs were regulated

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

by the Armistice régime; it was therefore debarred from entering into treaties of this nature without permission from the Armistice Powers and the Bulgarian and Jugoslav Governments should be told that they ought not to proceed with the proposed pact. Mr. Molotov, on the other hand, thought the three Powers should limit themselves for the present to an exchange of views, but promised to consider the matter further. The question was left for discussion through diplomatic channels.

(f) Montreux Convention and the Straits. It was agreed that proposals to be put forward by the Soviet Government would be considered by the Foreign Secretaries at their next meeting in London, after which they would report to their Governments. The Turkish Government would be informed at an appropriate moment.

(g) Iran. Mr. Eden, Mr. Stettinius and M. Molotov exchanged views on what the British and American delegations regarded as an unsatisfactory situation. As on previous occasions, however, the subject had to be left for further discussion through diplomatic channels.

(h) Allied policy in Italy. This issue was raised at Malta, where Mr. Eden said his government could not agree that Italy should receive better treatment than liberated Allies in the matter of relief supplies. It was later made the subject of a letter given to Mr. Churchill by President Roosevelt at the close of the Yalta sessions. It was finally discussed by the two leaders on shipboard in Alexandria Harbour.

Mr. Roosevelt's letter referred to differences of emphasis in British and American viewpoints on Italy, but asserted that there was no basic reason for disagreement since it was in the interests of both Governments to rehabilitate Italy and restore it to the democratic fold. Steps should be taken, he thought, to move away from the onerous and obsolete surrender terms. A solution might perhaps be worked out at departmental level.

Mr. Churchill promised to consider the letter further on his return to London. His statement in the House of Commons showed no disposition, however, to make further concessions to Italy in the immediate future. He referred to the steps he himself had taken leading to the declaration of September 28, 1944(mitigating the severity of the Allies' attitude toward Italy) and drew attention to new measures in favour of the Italian Government in fulfilment of the September declaration, which Mr. MacMillan and Admiral Stone had announced on February 24. He had been assured, he said, that the United States Government had no complaints against British policy in Italy.

VIII & IX. Meetings of Foreign Secretaries and Unity for Peace as for war. (See page 6.)

X. Supplemental report on freed prisoners.

A comprehensive agreement was reached at Yalta providing detailed arrangements for protection, maintenance and repatriation of prisoners of war and civilians of the British Commonwealth, Soviet Union and United States liberated by Allied forces in Germany. Under these arrangements each Ally would provide for nationals of the others food, clothing, medical attention and other needs until transport was available for repatriation. British and American officers would aid Soviet authorities in caring for British subjects and American citizens. Similarly Soviet officers would aid British and American authorities in caring for Soviet citizens while the latter were on the European Continent or in the United Kingdom awaiting transport to take them home. Repatriation would be arranged as speedily as operational requirements permitted.

Note on position of France in relation to decisions of the Crimea Conference

Special references to France in the conference communiqué appeared only in the sections on (a) occupation and control of

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267699

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Germany, (b) the declaration on liberated Europe and (c) the calling of a United Nations Conference.

(a) The first of these proposed that France should have a seat on the Control Commission. It was planned that the zone in Germany to be occupied by French forces should be formed out of the prospective British and American zones, its extent to be settled through the European Advisory Commission. (The protocol of the proceedings of the conference added, more specifically, that British and Americans would consult the French Provisional Government to determine the extent of the French zone.) In London M. Bidault said during the last week of February that France wanted an exclusive zone in the Rhineland from the Swiss border to Cologne. The rest of the Rhineland, including the Ruhr, should be under international control. Soviet authorities have been inclined to regard this claim as excessive and Belgian officials have represented to the United Kingdom Government that it would be preferable to use Belgian forces of occupation within a British zone east of the Belgian border rather than to permit the French zone to extend as far north as M. Bidault contemplated. M. Bidault explained that France had no desire to annex any part of Germany, General de Gaulle adding that if the Rhine-Westphalian region, which is an economic entity, should become a political entity as well, it should be subjected to international Allied control.

(b) M. Bidault took up with Mr. Eden in London the question of how the declaration on liberated Europe would actually work. He suggested that permanent machinery would be necessary to ensure success. It was agreed that if M. Bidault would put forward a proposal along this line the United Kingdom Government would view it with sympathy.

(c) In regard to sponsorship of invitations to the San Francisco Conference M. Bidault at first stated that France could not agree to become an inviting power after China in regard to a subject in the discussion of which the French had not had a part. Urged by Mr. Eden to take a more cooperative attitude, M. Bidault offered on February 27 to accept for France the status of an inviting Power on two conditions: (a) the invitations must make clear that the Dumbarton Oaks proposals were to be taken as a basis for discussion and not as a basis for the charter itself; (b) the French Provisional Government must be allowed to make a unilateral statement reserving the right to offer certain amendments to the Dumbarton Oaks proposals. French officials were known to be particularly anxious for recognition of the principle that bilateral security agreements - such as the pact between France and the U.S.S.R. - should function automatically at critical periods without the necessity for a special decision by the Security Council permitting them to come into operation as part of the general effort to maintain peace.

On February 28 the French Provisional Government issued a unilateral declaration agreeing to become one of the inviting Powers but asking for alteration of the text of the invitations. To this the Governments of the United Kingdom and United States agreed. Soviet officials refused, however, on the ground that this would involve alteration of decisions taken during the Crimea Conference. Although additional time was allowed for the French to reconsider their position, the invitations were finally sent out on March 5 without French sponsorship. On March 7 the French Provisional Government announced, nevertheless, that it would participate in the San Francisco Conference and collaborate fully in the working of the new pact.

The United Kingdom Government desired that France might be associated with the three principal Powers even more fully than the Yalta declaration proposed. Mr. Eden expressed to M. Bidault the hope that the latter might be invited to meet regularly with the three Foreign Secretaries, beginning with their first session after

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

the San Francisco Conference. The War Cabinet also suggested that the French Provisional Government should be represented on the Reparation Commission in Moscow. In discussions on the status of France which took place at Yalta, however, Mr. Churchill was unable to persuade either Marshal Stalin or President Roosevelt to make any more substantial move toward recognizing French claims to be considered a first-class Power. Both were resolutely opposed to giving any more assistance to France in this connection than was absolutely necessary. After the conference, moreover, M. Maisky went so far as to question the right of France even to claim reparations from Germany, on the ground that the French had not borne the main burden of the war, or suffered 'heaviest losses' or organized victory over the enemy.

The status of the French Provisional Government in relation to plans formulated during the Crimea Conference is thus still far from settled, although some clarification has taken place during the five weeks which have elapsed since General de Gaulle refused to meet President Roosevelt at Algiers as the latter was on his way home to Washington from the conference.

EPM/NT. March 25, 1945.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

the San Francisco Conference. The War Cabinet also suggested that the French Provisional Government should be represented on the Reparation Commission in Moscow. In discussions on the status of France which took place at Yalta, however, Mr. Churchill was unable to persuade either Marshal Stalin or President Roosevelt to make any more substantial move toward recognizing French claims to be considered a first-class Power. Both were resolutely opposed to giving any more assistance to France in this connection than was absolutely necessary. After the conference, moreover, M. Maisky went so far as to question the right of France even to claim reparations from Germany, on the ground that the French had not borne the main burden of the war, or suffered 'heaviest losses' or organized victory over the enemy.

The status of the French Provisional Government in relation to plans formulated during the Crimea Conference is thus still far from settled, although some clarification has taken place during the five weeks which have elapsed since General de Gaulle refused to meet President Roosevelt at Algiers as the latter was on his way home to Washington from the conference.

EPM/NT. March 25, 1945.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

ODS/ET
9 Dec.1940

DS/Geneva

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER: C267702

Re; WRONG

I regret to note that an error was made in the despatch of a telegram prepared two weeks ago. I had O.K.'d it for coding,but by some oversight,whether on my part or on the part of someone else, it was not sent. I dictated a reminder on Saturday and it was then discovered that the November 26th telegram had not been sent.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA

TO: THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN LONDON

PERSONAL

PERSONAL

CODE OTTAWA, December 7th, 1940.

UNNUMBERED

Personal. Following from Skelton for Wrong, Begins:

1. Your telegrams November 1st and November 19th and letter of July 2nd have been discussed with Prime Minister. Conclusions are set forth below.

2. Provision for Geneva Office was omitted from Estimates for 1941-42 because of difficulty of defending provision for representation at Geneva in view of decline of League activities and transfer of International Labour Office and sections of Secretariat to this continent. We are continuing provision for proportion of League contribution next year. As regards your salary, the Geneva Vote would of course be available till end of March next and it was considered that before that time question of any further post would have been determined.

3. The Prime Minister is entirely prepared to recommend your appointment either as Minister to Japan or Minister to Brazil or Minister to Argentina.

4. There is no present opening in the Department at Ottawa nor any post abroad to which a senior official here could be transferred at present. As to internment work it would be necessary to make decision at once as Paterson, United Kingdom Liaison Officer, who arrived two weeks ago has begun active effort to clear up the refugee situation.

5. There would be no difficulty in arranging leave of absence if you so desired. We would much regret to see you leave the Service and the Prime Minister is quite prepared to grant leave for the present and to welcome you back later. Ends.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Note. Above telegram was approved November 26th but through oversight which I much regret was not despatched. I may now add that internment work is being increasingly looked after by Stethem and Paterson and Secretary of State would like to make definite decision at once as to organization.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

CL/hw

NAR/SR
23.6.42

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER

C267705

I thought you might like to see the very nice letter which Lord Halifax sent to Mr. McCarthy about Hume Wrong's departure. Wrong did a great deal to put the working relations between the Embassy and Legation staffs on a better footing of friendly collaboration than they had been in the years immediately before the war, and this note is an acknowledgement of it.

Read

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COPY

C267706

BRITISH EMBASSY
WASHINGTON, D.C.

16th June, 1942.

My dear McCarthy,

Thank you very much for your letter of June 13th telling me that Mr. Pearson has taken up his post as Minister Counsellor at the Legation in place of Mr. Hume Wrong. I look forward to the pleasure of making Mr. Pearson's acquaintance. The Embassy will always be most happy to discuss matters of mutual interest with him as they did with his predecessor.

May I take this opportunity to say how much I and the members of my staff regret the departure of Mr. Hume Wrong, with whom this Embassy has so long a tradition of happy and confident collaboration. We have highly appreciated the assistance and advice he was always so ready to give us during the periods in which he served in Washington.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) "HALIFAX".

The Honourable
Leighton McCarthy, K.C.,
Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary,
Canadian Legation,
Washington, D.C.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL

OFFICE OF THE PRIME MINISTER

MEMORANDUM for the Prime Minister:

C267707

Re: Yale Constituency

-- Attached is a copy of Tom Reid's Secret report furnished by Senator McKeen, who also sent a letter he had received from Senator King enclosing a letter from Frank Guimont, of Penticton, which wholly corroborates what is said by Tom Reid.

J.W.D.

December 15, 1947.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COPY C267708

THE SENATE

CANADA

Speaker's Chambers
Ottawa.
December 12th,
1 9 4 7.

Honourable Senator S. S. McKeen,
The Senate,
O t t a w a, Ontario.

My dear Senator:-

I am enclosing copy of a letter I have received from Frank Guimont, of Penticton, British Columbia, for your information.

Guimont was our candidate in the East Kootenay in 1930. He is now a despatcher with the Canadian Pacific Railway in Penticton. He is an aggressive Liberal, and a fairly good observer. He discussed the situation in the Okanagan country recently with me in Vancouver, and from his letter you will see he has written to me sizing up the matter as he sees it. I think it is well for you to be informed of his views.

With kindest personal regards, I remain

Yours very truly,

J. H. King

Speaker of the Senate of Canada.

Enclosure.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COPY

C267709

Box 173,
Penticton, B.C.
Dec. 8th, 1947.

Dear Doctor King:-

After our short visit in Vancouver, I made it a point to see E.J. Chambers, upon my return here, and found that he could be persuaded to be our candidate, and would be a most popular one. However there has been some opposition developed account of his age (72), but even at that there are many who think that he is our only hope in this bye-election. I need not go into any further details concerning him, other than to point out that he went over the whole situation with J.G. Turgeon in Vancouver, and was informed that his views would be presented at Ottawa. We are all getting anxious to know the exact situation, and Mr. Chambers has asked me to write you in this connection; so that if you will confer with Gray you will be in a position to advise me of the situation there. In the event of this prospect falling through, I think, that with the help of Dr. Knox, I can get Mr. Lloyd, head of the Tree Fruits Board; whom the Tories asked to run for them but were turned down, and that, I believe, would make the headlines across Canada, and a sure winner. My thought being that if we defeat the Conservatives, in this fight, they will be looking for a new leader, as their present candidate was nominated with a lot of fanfare when Mr. Bracken was here. Failing this last thought, which is all my own, and still a secret, the decision should be up to the Gov't. as I feel quite sure we could not elect any second-rate candidate, but would merely assure the election of the C.C.F. candidate. My contention being that it would be better to swallow the hard pill that this is a strong Tory riding, and we concede them the seat rather than elect a CCF. and give that party the much needed boost it needs right now. I would like your views in the matter, as any seeking the nomination at the present time are very second-rate, and we might as well save any funds for later and better purposes.

Unless we went back to the "Good Old Days" and see that our candidate was assured that the many pressing problems facing us in Yale would be straightened out, such as improved Post-Office accommodation, badly needed here, Kelowna and Vernon. Flood water control, which has been reported on by an International waterways board of engineers, and pigeon-holed. All these things are outstanding necessities and should be done, which would give our candidate lots of ammunition to work on. Personally that is the kind of a fight I would like to have tackled at this time.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Renumeration will have to be undertaken and our own organization perfected before any election is thought of. If it is to be Chambers a short quick election is best, if Lloyd a bit more time to fully cover the district.

I will be anxious to hear from you, and will follow your advice in the matter. Personally I don't know why I can't keep out of this (It's the old Kootenay Spirit).

Kindest personal regards,

(Sgd) J. Frank Guimont.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Renumeration will have to be undertaken and our own organization perfected before any election is thought of. If it is to be Chambers a short quick election is best, if Lloyd a bit more time to fully cover the district.

I will be anxious to hear from you, and will follow your advice in the matter. Personally I don't know why I can't keep out of this (It's the old Kootenay Spirit).

Kindest personal regards,

(Sgd) J. Frank Guimont.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COPY

Nov. 3rd, 1947.

C267711

SECRET AND CONFIDENTIAL

REPORT OF TRIP TO YALE RIDING.

I left home Wednesday morning, October 29th, arrived in Kelowna 7:30 same evening, immediately contacted Dr. Knox and discussed with him the situation, generally. Requested from him the names of several Liberals in town with a view of discussing, personally, a possible candidate.

Thursday I interviewed six leading citizens of Kelowna, some of whom were not members of the Liberal Association, but all well known Liberals and supporters of the King Government.

At Twelve Noon was met by Mr. Howard Thornton of Vernon, President of the Yale Federal Liberal Constituency, and in company with him many interviews took place.

Thursday evening a dinner meeting was held in the Royal Ann Hotel of members and friends comprising Yale Liberal Executive following which I attended a general public meeting as principle speaker. The meeting was well attended, the attendence by actual count, 97. Election of officers took place following my one hour address, which, by all appearance, went over fairly well. At the dinner meeting I explained to the twenty-two members of the Liberal Executive and some friends who were present the purpose of my visit was to survey and look over the situation from a Liberal point of view and in the light of the possible chance for a Liberal candidate, reminding them that I was not there to, in any

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

way, to dictate to them who the candidate should be. The fact, however, was stressed for the chosing of a suitable candidate, especially if we expected to win, which was of the greatest importance. This point was stressed in the light of past elections, and particularly in the light of the 1945 election, where with an increased vote of 2480 over that of 1940, the vote for the Liberal candidate was 1469 less than obtained in the previous 1940 election. As a matter of fact the Liberal candidate in 1945 lost his deposit. It was further pointed out that the Constituency has been represented by a Conservative since as far back as 1911, and that unless we could choose a candidate of outstanding merit and ability and one who would be likely to receive Conservative support, the nominating of any other kind of candidate would be very doubtful, indeed.

Friday morning I left for the City of Vernon and was met by Mr. Thornton, President of the Yale Federal Liberal Constituency. The evening before I had requested Mr. Thornton to gather together a number of Liberal friends in Vernon to provide me with an opportunity of hearing their views and expressions of opinions in regard to a candidate or candidates. This meeting took place in the Kala Malka Hotel at which were present some fourteen persons, three of them ladies. Believe it only fair to say that I was disappointed to learn, much to my annoyance, and following the meeting with them, that Mr. Thornton had gathered together a group

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

of persons who, with the exception of two or three, were not actively connected with the Liberal Association. Amongst the group was Mayor Howrie, Aldermen Harwood and Johnstone of Vernon. The gathering together of this group by Mr. Thornton aroused the ire of quite a few Liberals in the City of Vernon who sent word to me to meet them at half past three. At the gathering was the President of the Vernon Liberal Association, Lionel Valair, one of the few Liberals who had attended the meeting earlier in the day. The Liberals at this afternoon conference were most emphatic in their denunciation at the tactics used by Mr. Howard Thornton in calling together such a group of people to meet me, and who, they declared, were not friends of the Party. They also informed me in strong terms that they would not support Mr. Thornton if his name went before the convention. They pleaded for a postponement of the Nomination Convention which is slated for November 12th, and giving as their opinion that the only one, whom they believed, could win the Riding was a Mr. Chambers. Following my return that evening to Kelowna I immediately contacted Dr. Knox and had a long conference with him regarding what had transpired during my visit to Vernon. Dr. Knox seemed very appreciative of the information which I had obtained at Vernon, especially in the light of the fact that Mr. Thornton had intimated his intention of being a candidate at the Nominating Convention on November 12th.

Saturday I left Kelowna at 7:45 a.m. for a meeting at

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Penticton. This meeting had been arranged by myself as I wanted to obtain the views from those living in all the important centres. I arrived in Penticton at 9 o'clock, and immediately convened the meeting which was held at the Incola Hotel. Fourteen persons in all attended the meeting, which, so early in the morning, would indicate considerable interest. being taken by our friends in Penticton regarding the By-election. Here again I placed the seriousness and importance of the entire political situation before them from the Liberal Party point of view. I requested from them to speak out and speak freely as without the same it would be difficult for me to obtain a true and correct picture of the entire situation. The concensus of opinion at that meeting was that it would be unwise to proceed with the Convention. They advocated the postponing of the Convention until it could be definitely known whether Mr. Chambers would accept the nomination. The meeting was practically unanimous in support of Mr. Chambers and openly stated that the other candidates mentioned, namely, Mr. A.W. Gray, the candidate who ran in 1945, and Mr. Howard Thornton, the President, were not suitable or heavy enough to win the seat.

I left Penticton at 10:30 a.m. and headed south for a meeting at Osoyoos where I met a delegation from Grand Forks and Greenwood. The delegation included Mr. McArthur of Grand Forks, Mr. D.F. McDonald, President of the Association and Mr. A. L. Lloyd,

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Secretary of Greenwood Liberal Association. Mr. McArthur of Grand Forks, who has taken a leading part in Liberal affairs over a long period, expressed it as his opinion that the Nominating Convention should be postponed. He came out even in the presence of Mr. Thornton and stated that in his opinion neither Mr. Gray nor Mr. Thornton were strong enough candidates to win. They favoured Mr. Chambers or Mr. A.K. Lloyd, President of the B.C. Fruit Tree Growers Association.

Having covered all the important points of the Riding, including Vernon, Kelowna, Penticton, Oliver and Osoyoos, I then headed for home arriving back late Saturday evening. A most thorough and careful investigation of the entire Yale Constituency was made and on which I have the following comments and recommendations to make,-

It is my opinion it would be extremely difficult, if at all possible, to elect a Liberal Candidate unless he was outstanding and one that could command the support from those of Conservative leanings.

A slate of seven names were mentioned during my trip of investigation and are as follows:- A.W. Gray who ran in the election of 1945 and lost by 4,426; Mr. Howard Thornton, a teacher of Agriculture and a returned soldier who has recently been elected as President of the Yale Federal Liberal Association;

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267716

Mr. Chambers, who was in charge of Agricultural controls during the war, and one highly regarded by the people, generally, irrespective of politics; Mr. A. K. Lloyd, an outstanding man who, in my opinion, if he could be prevailed upon to accept the nomination would, from what information has been given me, win the seat for the Liberals. Captain Bull, former M.L.A., well liked in Kelowna, not very keen to accept the nomination but who, I believe, would be prevailed upon to run were it desired to have him do so; Mr. McGinnis, a lawyer of Penticton whose name was only mentioned by one or two in that City, but practically unknown in other parts of the Riding. The other name mentioned was that of Mr. Roland, Editor of the Penticton Paper, but who, it is stated, is not seeking the nomination. In my opinion the Nomination Convention set for November 12th is being run in the interests of Messrs. Gray and Thornton. If the Nomination Convention goes forward and only these two men are in the field, it would be far better, in my opinion, not to run any candidate, but rather to withdraw entirely. If either of these two men run, I am afraid the C.C.F. might win the seat over that of the Conservative and Liberal. Bear in mind, that this Constituency has been Conservative since 1911. The figures for the General Election of 1940 show the Liberals in third place, the C.C.F. in second and Mr. Stirling leading with the following vote, - Conservative 7,100, C.C.F. 6,700; Liberal 5,700. The Liberal candidate on that occasion

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267717

being Mr. Chas. Morrow, now M.L.A. in the Provincial House. In 1945 the general vote of the Riding was increased by 2,180 of which Mr. Stirling received 8,657, the C.C.F. 6,704, the Liberal 4,231, Social Credit 1,655 and L.L.P. 733. It should be noted that in the General Election of 1945 the Conservatives increased their vote by 1,557, the C.C.F, strangely enough only increased their vote by 4, whilst the Liberal candidate received only 4,231 votes, or a decrease of 1,469 over that of the Liberal Candidate in the 1940 General Election. This, to me shows a terrible state of affairs in 1945 when it is considered that of the general vote in the Riding increased by almost 2,500 votes, nevertheless, the Liberal candidate, on that occasion, not only did not pick up any of the extra votes cast, but actually went further down by 1,469. Personally, I am of the opinion if Mr. A.K. Lloyd or Mr. Chambers could be induced to accept the nomination our chances to snatch a victory would be excellent, in fact, with the government in power it is my opinion -- we should win.

If we cannot get either of these two gentlemen to accept the nomination, then, after a most careful investigation, am of the opinion we should withdraw and support the Conservative candidate rather than, not only be badly defeated, but, at the same time, make chances for the C.C.F. that much better by having a light weight Liberal candidate in the field. I advised when in the Riding and when leaving that consideration be given to the postponing of the

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Nominating Convention. Understand they are calling an Executive meeting to reconsider the matter, and trust that this may be arranged so as to give further time for such a thought and with a view of obtaining the consent of Mr. Chambers or Mr. Lloyd. It is my opinion also that if a Nominating Convention is not postponed it will be due to the personal aspirations and ambitions of Messrs. Gray and Thornton, both of whom, it has been freely stated, have not a chance on earth of being elected.

In closing, believe it only fair to say that every courtesy was extended to me by all our friends in Yale Constituency, and especially by Dr. Knox, our Provincial President.

Tom Reid, M.P.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267719

MEMORANDUM FOR MR. KING:

I have obtained the following information from Mr. Pearson's office, regarding Mr. Shigeru Yoshida:

Mr. Yoshida entered the Japanese diplomatic service in 1906; long career culminating in being appointed Ambassador to the Court of St. James, 1936-1939. In retirement during war years. He is reported to have advised Emperor to start peace negotiations after capture of Singapore in 1942. Formed "peace faction" later in war with other senior statesmen. Imprisoned for short time in 1945 for plotting peace. He was Foreign Minister in first post-war Japanese Cabinet. He was made Prime Minister in 1948 (May). There was a change of government for a short time. Became Prime Minister second time in October 1948. He was re-elected third time in February 1949.

Mr. Yoshida is head of what used to be called "Liberal Party", now called "Democratic Liberal Party" (since August 1946).
Mrs. Yoshida died before end of war. Daughter is hostess and said to be power behind throne. L.B.Feb.18 1950

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Mr. Turnbull:
For your information,
- please.

C267720

Y-202
1942
Off + Confl.

Y-102
Off + Confl.

D-360-N
(Off + Confl)
National Federation

January 11
1943

For Mr. Heeney:

Re: Meeting of Council on Thursday last - Jan. 7th.

re Health and Youth Movement.

Messrs. Mackenzie, LaFleche, Macdonald, Michaud and Mitchell (I think) St-Laurent were appointed a sub-committee to look into the question of youth movement. The matter of a conference on the problems of youth was brought up by LaFleche.

Health Insurance being dealt with by Mackenzie, and some compensation matter.

Please speak to me of this.

W.L.M.K.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COPIE

Tout indique que nous entrons, si non dans la dernière, du moins dans la phase décisive de la guerre. Ceci nous oblige d'indiquer clairement et d'une manière précise nos buts de guerre et de souligner les grandes lignes de notre politique. Des conversations one déja eu lieu entre notre Gouvernement et le Gouvernement britannique pour synchroniser l'activité de notre guérilla avec une action militaire des Alliés dans les Balkans. Mais il ne suffit pas de coordonner l'activité militaire, il faut intensifier la coordination de notre activité politique en encadrant les buts de guerre de la Yougoslavie dans la politique des grands Alliés.

Nos buts de guerre sont fixés par les évènements eux-mêmes. Après l'asservissement et le démembrement de la Yougoslavie, tout Gouvernement yougoslave ne peut avoir qu'une politique: la libération de la Yougoslavie et le rétablissement de son unité étatique. C'est aujourd'hui le besoin vital de tous les Yougoslaves, c'est ce qu'exigent les principes de justice internationale pour la réalisation desquels les Nations Unies luttent. Le Gouvernement yougoslave a quitté le pays parce qu'il a voulu continuer jusqu'au bout la lutte contre l'ennemi et parce qu'il voulait rester solidaire avec les Démocraties occidentales. Il a, de ce fait même, clairement indiqué ses buts de guerre et souligné d'une manière précise les lignes essentielles de sa politique.

Malgré toutes nos différences d'opinion, nous sommes convaincus que nous nous rendons aujourd'hui tous compte, comme nous nous en sommes rendus il y a deux ans, qu'il n'y a que la politique yougoslave qui soit possible. En servant l'idée yougoslave, nous servons le mieux les intérêts bien conçus des Serbes, des Croates et des Slovènes. Il est vrai, qu'après l'expérience des deux dernières décades, beaucoup de gens pensent qu'ils est impossible de restaurer la Yougoslavie sur la base de l'unité ethnique complète des Serbes, des Croates et des Slovènes. Mais si l'expérience nous a prouvé qu'il existe un nationalisme serbe, un nationalisme croate et un nationalisme slovène dont il faut tenir compte, il n'en découle pas qu'il faut décomposer la Yougoslavie pour former à sa place un état serbe, un état croate et un état slovène. Il y a vingt-cinq ans que les Serbes, les Croates et les Slovènes, en luttant chacun chez eux pour leurs libertés particulières, se sont rendus compte qu'ils ne pouvaient garantir leurs libertés particulières qu'en unissant leurs forces. Aujoud'hui, cela est encore plus évident qu'il y a vingt-cinq ans. Nous entrons dans l'ère des grands groupements politiques et économiques, dans l'ère des unions et des blocs. Si le plan de séparer les Serbes. les Croates et les Slovènes, conçu par nos ennemis venait à réussir, il est certain qu'aussi bien les uns que les autres seraient attirés dans une communauté plus étroite ou plus large avec un autre ou avec plusieurs autres états. Il est de même certain que les Serbes, les Croates et les Slovènes auraient dans une telle ou dans de telles communautés de moins bonnes conditions pour leur développement national individuel qu'en Yougoslavie, qui, tout en n'étant pas/

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

pas l'expression de leur complète unité ethnique, est celle de leur grande ressemblance ethnique. Dans une occasion, un Serbe a employé la formule suivante: un serbisme puissant dans une puissante Yougoslavie, - ce qui veut dire qu'il n'y a pas de Yougoslavie puissante sans un puissant serbisme et de même qu'il ne peut y avoir de serbisme puissant sans une puissante Yougoslavie. Cette même formule pourrait être employée par les Croates pour le croatisme et les Slovènes pour le slovénisme.

Plus nous nous rapprochons de la phase décisive de la guerre, plus nous devons appuyer auprès de nos Alliés et auprès de notre peuple sur ces idées fondamentalles. Nous devons toutefois avoir en vue les circonstances suivantes. Pendant sa longue durée, cette guerre a changé pour toutes les Nations Unies, le caractère qu'elle avait eu au début. Cette guerre n'est plus seulement une guerre défensive contre l'Axe; c'est une guerre pour un ordre nouveau qui donnera d'un côté aux peuples les garanties nécessaires qu'il n'y aura plus de nouvelles guerres - c'est-à- dire la paix internationale - et de l'autre qu'il n'y aura plus de crises économiquesni de chômage - c'est-a-dire la paix sociale. Pour pouvoir compter sur l'aide totale des Alliés, la Yougoslavie doit montrer qu'elle désire et qu'elle est on état de collaborer avec eux à la construction de cet ordre nouveau. Elle devra, dans ce but, comme les autres Nations Unies, soumettre ses institutions à une révision fondamentale, et cela dans l'esprit d'une démocratie rajeunie et révisée. Le peuple lui même aura à dire le mot décisif dans cette révision des institutions. Mais, selon le cours actuel des évènements. il est permis de prévoir que l'ère de l'unitarisme est passée et que l'avenir appartient à une solution plus ou moins fédéraliste qui permettra aux Serbes, aux Croates et aux Slovènes de collaborer simultanément à la réalisation de leurs buts politiques communs, sans toutefois renoncer à leur individualité ethnique. Une telle organisation répondrait le plus à l'idéologie démocratique telle que la conçoivent aujourd'hui les Nations Unies.

On doit mentioner à la fin que la Yougoslavie est entrée dans cette guerre sans esprit de conquête. Mais, la Charte de l'Atlantique lui donne le droit de demander que lui soient rattachées toutes les provinces qui ont indubitablement le caractère yougoslave et qui, pour le moment, se trouvent sous une domination non seulement étrangère mais aussi bien hostile.

La restauration d'une Yougoslavie plus grande et plus forte que dans le passé et organisée dans un esprit plus démocratique, voilà les buts de guerre que tout Gouvernement yougoslave doit avoir en vue. Ces buts ont été mentionnés à plusieurs reprises dans les déclarations du Roi et du Gouvernement. Ils ont surtout été soulignés dans le discours fait par S.M. le Roi le Ier décembre 1942. Mais aujourd'hui, quand nous entrons dans la phase décisive de la guerre, il est de notre devoir d'accentuer de nouveau ces buts comme l'idéal commun autour duquel tous les Serbes, tous les Croates et tous les Slovènes doivent se grouper dans ces moments historiques.

++++++++++++++++++

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

MEMORANDUM

IMPORTANT. MOST SECRET.
(Circular Z.85.)

Summary of report from His Majesty's Minister at Belgrade despatched March 25th is as follows.

(1). There are signs of great dissatisfaction and anxiety in Yugo-Slavia at the signature of the pact but the Government may be able partly to dispel this by skilful presentation of Yugo-Slavia's accession as harmless if not indeed beneficial to the interests of the country.

(2). Failing the establishment of alternative civil or military government immediately, this might be possible at the next favourable opportunity e.g. if the Germans were to demand the demobilisation of the army or to make early attack on Salonica.

(3). German infiltration into the whole of the Yugo-Slav administrative system may however be rapid. Croatia offers a fertile field for this and it is probable that the leaders of the Croatian peasant party will be pushed more towards separation.

(4). The whole country might still be rallied by early German action which contravened the agreement or roused strong resentment but it seems more probable that by the time this occurs, disintegration will have gone far in the northern provinces at least.

(5). Croat and Slovene political leaders have been in favour of an agreement with Germany and our main hope lies in our being able to stiffen Serb resistance the more so as south Serbia is a vital point for us and Greece.

/(6).

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267723A

(6). There are rumours that a government of "national confidence" will be formed after the signature of the pact though it would be unwise to expect better things of such a Government. There is however a bare possibility that the existing or a reconstructed Government might carry out the professed intention of resisting German demands in excess of the pact.

26th March, 1941

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Y-5

C267724

OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER
FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM,
Earnscliffe,
OTTAWA.

IMPORTANT.
MOST SECRET & PERSONAL.

26th March, 1941.

My dear Prime Minister,

With reference to my letter of yesterday enclosing a message (Circular Z.83) regarding the Balkans, I have received a telegram from the Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs asking me to communicate to you for your most secret and personal information the enclosed further message on the subject.

Yours sincerely,

W. C. Hankinson.

The Right Honourable W. L. Mackenzie King, M.P.,
Secretary of State for External Affairs,
O T T A W A.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Balkans

Office of the High Commissioner
for the United Kingdom,
Ottawa.

C267725

28th March, 1941.

MOST IMMEDIATE.

SECRET.

My dear Prime minister,

I have received a telegram from the Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs asking me to communicate to you at once the enclosed message regarding the situation in Belgrade.

Yours sincerely,

W. C. Hankinson.

The Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, M.P.,
Secretary of State for External Affairs,
OTTAWA.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

MOST IMMEDIATE.

SECRET.

Circular Z.91.

M E M O R A N D U M.

1. His majesty's minister at Belgrade states that it is most important at the present juncture to avoid taking the line that the coup d'etat is a British victory. Emphasis should be laid on its Yugo-Slavian character.

2. His majesty's minister has received specific request that broadcasts should be moderate in tone and states that the Government are wisely taking steps to moderate demonstrations which up to the present are wildly enthusiastic and strongly anti-German.

3. His Majesty's Minister adds that the new Government must obviously take a little time to get into the saddle and it is essential that we should taken no action which would bring the Germans down upon Yugo-Slavia before they have made all preparations they can do to meet the attack which may well come at an early stage.

4. His majesty's minister reports that the German minister has been summoned to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs where it was explained to him that the change of Government was an internal affair and that the policy of the new Government was one of neutrality and peace, and that the Italian Minister is to be informed.

28th March, 1941.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267727

Y-5

OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER
FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM.
Earnscliffe,
OTTAWA.

MOST SECRET AND PERSONAL. March 28th, 1941.

IMMEDIATE.

My dear Prime Minister,

With reference to my letter of yesterday, (Circular Z. 90) I have received a telegram from the Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs asking me to communicate to you for your most secret and personal information the enclosed further message regarding events in Yugo Slavia.

Yours sincerely,

W. C. Hankinson.

The Right Honourable W.L. Mackenzie King, M.P.,
Secretary of State for External Affairs,
Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Circular Z. 92.

MOST SECRET. IMMEDIATE.

1. News from Belgrade is coming in bit by bit and we hope soon to send you an appreciation of the position. Meanwhile the following information may be of interest.

2. The coup d'état appears to have been carried out without bloodshed and to have been accepted in the provinces as well as the capital. H.M.'s Consul-General at Zagreb reported on the evening of March 27th that Croatia was very quiet and that no internal trouble was expected. In Southerly Slovenia there had been manifestations of a patriotic nature in favour of the present Government.

3. H.M. Air Attaché at Belgrade when visiting the War Office on the morning of March 27th saw General Kositch chief of general staff arrive in uniform under arrest. Ex-ministers Rudovetkevitch and Markovitch were waiting in an ante-room and said to be feeling uneasy which was not surprising as crowds were occasionally calling out for their heads.

4. H.M.'s Consul-General sends reports that Prince Paul was stopped on instructions from Belgrade at Zagreb at 7 a.m. on March 27th on the journey to Brdo. He was given full assurances for personal safety before leaving for Belgrade at noon. He is reported to have said that he was anxious to leave the country at once, both for personal reasons and in order to avoid giving the impression that he was influencing the young king. He appeared to be taking the situation philosophically maintaining that he could not have acted otherwise than he had done without splitting the country. His efforts were then bent on influencing Croatia to co-operate in the new Government. Subsequent reports indicate that the new Government is fully representative of all parties.

5/.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

5. The ~~composite~~ composition of the new Government as announced in the press is confirmed in reports from Belgrade. The new Minister of Justice, Markovitch, stated to His Majesty's Air Attaché on the morning of March 27th that the new Government would take two or three days to settle down. The atmosphere in the War Office was described by the Air Attaché as decisively purposeful and friendly towards us.

6. It is understood that the Yugo Slav Government's proclamation of the wish to remain neutral has been made in order to gain a few days time and that in fact the Army and the new Government are entirely pro-British. General Ilitch, the new Minister of War, has assured H.M. Minister that demobilization would not take place and that any incursion by the Germans will be resisted. The report from the Air Attaché indicated that a messenger from high authority has informed him that concentration of the Army in the South has already begun and that the Yugo-Slav authorities hope that this will be completed before war begins.

7. We hope to arrange meetings with the Yugo Slav authorities in the immediate future and the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs is returning to Athens for the purpose.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267730

OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER
FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM,
Earnscliffe,
OTTAWA.

MOST SECRET AND PERSONAL. March 31st, 1941.

IMPORTANT.

Dear Mr. Prime Minister,

With reference to Circular telegram M.44 of the 28th March, I have received a telegram from the Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs asking me to convey to you for your most secret and personal information the enclosed message regarding reports from H.M. Ambassador at Angora concerning developments arising out of recent events in Yugo Slavia.

Yours sincerely,

I M R Machtman

The Right Honourable W.L. Mackenzie King, M.P.,
Secretary of State for External Affairs,
Ottawa.

The Department of External Affairs
MAR 31 1941
Canada.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267731

MOST SECRET AND PERSONAL.

IMPORTANT.

Circular Z. 98.

1. H.M. Ambassador at Angora reported on March 29th that the Yugo-Slav Ambassador at Angora had been summoned at once to Belgrade.

2. In connection with paragraph 1 of telegram Z. 93 (Mr. Hankinson's letter of the 28th March) H.M. Ambassador had an interview on March 29th with the Turkish Minister for Foreign Affairs who was seeing the Yugo-Slav Ambassador immediately before and after the interview. The Minister for Foreign Affairs told H.M. Ambassador (a) that he had already given the Yugo-Slav Ambassador full details of the Turkish Government's previous attempt to make contact with the Yugo-Slav Government. (b) that he was about to give the Yugo-Slav Ambassador the Cyprus message (telegram Z.74 - Mr. Hankinson's letter of 20th March) which the Ambassador could convey to his Government on arrival; he was quite prepared to enter into conversations with the Yugo-Slav Government though he stopped short of declaration of war in connection with Salonika.

3. H.M. Ambassador gave the Minister for Foreign Affairs a general review of the position at Belgrade, emphasising the Yugo-Slav attitude regarding Salonika (Circular telegram M.44 paragraph (a)), and indicating that the Yugo-Slav Minister for Foreign Affairs had decided to discuss the matters with the Turkish Ambassador at Belgrade. The Minister for Foreign Affairs thought that sooner or later Yugo-Slavia would be involved in war but that recent events might prove a deterrent to German invasion of the Balkans. H.M.Ambassador said that we now had a good chance of preventing this and that after contact with the Yugo-Slav Government we hoped to be able to exchange views further with/

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

with the Turkish Government. Yugo-Slav Ambassador subsequently informed H.M. Ambassador that Turkish Minister for Foreign Affairs had spoken to him on the lines of paragraph 2 above indicating that "if Yugo-Slav Government were interested" the attitude of the Turkish Government remained as stated. Ends.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267733

OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER
FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM,
OTTAWA.

March 31st, 1941.

MOST SECRET AND PERSONAL.

IMPORTANT.

Dear Mr. Prime Minister,

We have received in a telegram from the Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs the enclosed message, for your personal and most secret information, concerning a report dated 28th March from H.M. Minister at Belgrade.

Yours sincerely,

I M R Malcolm

The Right Honourable W.L. Mackenzie King, M.P.,
Secretary of State for External Affairs,
Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Circular Z. 95.

MOST SECRET.

IMPORTANT.

Briefly the situation has changed in our favour to this extent that the new Government seems to be ready to consider immediate action if Salonika is attacked and to be prepared for discussion with the Turks on this basis. As far as we know, the question of how to deal with the position created by the signature of the tripartite pact is still under consideration. There is no certainty that this pact will be denounced; the policy might be one of non-application or alternatively the Government might be prepared to substitute a non-aggression pact. / H.M. Minister reports that he argued with the Minister for Foreign Affairs on March 27th against signing anything with the Germans as there are enough old men in the Government to make a policy on the above line possible. With all this it is possible that they are playing for time but in the meantime we have received indications that they would resent the assumption that they had chosen definitely to range themselves with the democracies and still more that such an idea should be put about. On the present showing there is serious danger that if we were to try to push them into our camp they would merely dig in their toes.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

E. R.

B/Ys

Office of the High Commissioner
for the United Kingdom,
Ottawa.

C267735

16th April, 1941.

MOST SECRET.

My dear Prime Minister,

I enclose two messages regarding the situation in the Balkans which Lord Cranborne has asked me by telegraph to convey to you. The longer one, Z. 116, was received at a late hour last night and the shorter one, Z. 118, this morning,

Yours sincerely,

Malcolm MacDonald

The Right Honourable W. L. Mackenzie King, M.P.,
Secretary of State for External Affairs,
O T T A W A.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267736

M E M O R A N D U M.

MOST SECRET.
Circular Z. 118.

His Majesty's Minister in Yugo-Slavia in a telegram despatched 4.00 p.m. April 15th, reports that the Yugo-Slav Government capitulated in the evening of April 15th. Terms unknown. Yugo-Slav officer was being sent to arrange military terms. His Majesty's Minister at Athens in a telegram despatched at 11.00 p.m. April 15th, reports that General Simovitch and most of the Yugo-Slav Government except Macek held in Croatia have arrived in Greece in Yugo-Slav military aircraft. General Simovitch appears to believe that such Yugo-Slav forces as are still in being will continue to fight under two leaders specially appointed.

16th April, 1941.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

G.R.

C267737

IMPORTANT.

MOST SECRET.

Circular Z 116. MEMORANDUM.

My telegram No.62 M.

1. Military developments in Yugo-Slavia during the past week so far as known to us have been reported to you in daily D W telegrams. Yugo-Slav internal communications have been seriously affected by enemy action and the Yugo-Slav Government have been moving from place to place in order to avoid enemy air attacks.

2. His Majesty's minister has apparently been in touch with the Yugo-Slav minister for Foreign Affairs since April 8th and has transmitted to us a number of urgent requests from the Yugo-Slav authorities for military and economic assistance. We have given all air assistance which we can allot to this theatre but possibilities of military and economic assistance have been limited not only by the refusal of the Yugo-Slav Government before the outbreak of hostilities to make common plan but also by the difficulties of establishing communication with Yugo-Slav military commanders and by the impossibility in view of the air position of sending surface vessels up the Adriatic to Yugo-Slav ports.

3. His Majesty's minister reported that though the possibility of capitulation had been discussed by the Yugo-Slav Government prior to April 12th they had rejected it and that the Minister for Foreign Affairs was showing good spirit. The Minister for Foreign Affairs said he had realized the consequences of a stand but had chosen it for the sake of Yugo-Slavia's future and the cause of the democracies. The Minister for Foreign Affairs added that blocking of the Danube alone had made resistance worth while in his eyes. (We have not yet received any information as to what was done on the Danube but it is hoped the minister for Foreign Affairs' remark indicates that serious effect on German transportation system has been achieved.)

4. His Majesty's minister also reported that on April 12th it appeared that it might be soon necessary for the Yugo-Slav Government to leave the country in order to make sure of having a legal government functioning abroad which is essential for the future. Amongst their requests to us the Yugo-Slav Government had asked for surface transports to be sent to Kotor so that they and their army might fall back on that port and be evacuated if necessary. We have had no alternative to explaining to them that this was impracticable but we offered submarine or aircraft transport for limited numbers. We also stressed the possibilities of defence in the mountains and urged that apart from this the Yugo-Slav army must get into touch with our supplies by land by establishing contact with the Greeks in Albania.

5/

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

5. We have now learned that the King of Yugo-Slavia accompanied by staff of three persons arrived at Athens by air last night and that some men of Yugo-Slav Government were expected to arrive by air in North West Greece last night or this morning. Both these facts are of course being kept extremely secret and we have no confirmation as yet of arrival of members of Yugo-Slav Government.

15th April,1941.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R

B/45

C267739

OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER
FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM,
OTTAWA.

April 17th, 1941.

MOST SECRET. IMPORTANT.

My dear Prime Minister,

Lord Cranborne has asked me to communicate to you the enclosed message regarding Yugo-Slavia, in continuation of his message Circular Z.118, the substance of which I communicated to you in my letter of yesterday.

Yours sincerely,

Malcolm MacDonald

The Right Honourable W.L. Mackenzie King, M.P.,
Secretary of State for External Affairs,
Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267740

MOST SECRET. Circular Z.120.

IMPORTANT.

H.M. Minister at Athens has now seen General Simovitch and Yugo-Slav Minister for Foreign Affairs. Latter explained that owing to the disloyalty of Croats further resistance by the Yugo-Slav Army had become impossible and the King and Government had left the country after authorising General Kalohowovitch to conclude an armistice. Yugo-Slav Government wish to leave Greece immediately with the King and to establish themselves elsewhere as symbol of Free Yugo-Slavia.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

MEMORANDUM FOR THE
PRIME MINISTER:

NAR/ET
14 May, 1941

C267741

Mr. Constantin Fotitch, the Yugoslav Minister in Washington, who is in Ottawa today, accompanied by his Military Attaché, Colonel Burya, has been instructed by his Government in exile to report on the possibility of training Yugoslav flyers in Canada to reinforce the Yugoslav air squadrons who are now fighting with the army in Egypt.

Dr. Keenleyside and I saw him this morning at ten and explained that with the Joint Air Training Plan going at full blast, aerodrome facilities in Canada were now fully used, trainer aircraft were short of requirements, and instruction personnel was already heavily taxed. In these circumstances there was not much encouragement that could be held out to them. It was suggested that they might wish to explore the possibility of civilian flying training for Yugoslav pilots in the United States, along the lines of the scheme which the United Kingdom is working out. I have arranged a meeting for them with Air Minister Power and Air Commodore Leckie at twelve o'clock.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

45

C267742
THIS DOCUMENT IS THE PROPERTY OF HIS BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT

BALKAN STATES. August 14, 1941.

CONFIDENTIAL. SECTION 1.

[R 7747/1195/92] Copy No. 069

Mr. Eden to Mr. Rendel.

(No. 30.)

Sir, Foreign Office, August 14, 1941.

DR. KRNJEVIĆ, Deputy Prime Minister of Yugoslavia, who is himself a Croat, called to see me this afternoon. He gave me verbally the attached message from Dr. Matchek for the Prime Minister.

I thanked Dr. Krnjević for this message and asked him whether he could give me any information of Dr. Matchek's present whereabouts. Dr. Krnjević replied that Dr. Matchek was now in Germany, though he did not know exactly where. After the German entry into Croatia the German general in command had sent for Dr. Matchek and asked him to assume office. The latter had refused, and as a consequence had been removed in custody to Germany. The Quislings now in power in Croatia were completely isolated. Almost all Croatia was against them. Pavelitch was the creature of Mussolini, as he always had been. He had pledged his country to political and economic unity with Italy, but there was a German garrison to-day in Zagreb.

The Croats, Dr. Krnjević continued, were the natural allies of Great Britain. If Britain was powerful in the Mediterranean, then the Croats had no anxiety for Dalmatia. If Italy were powerful, the Croats recalled her ambition to control the whole Dalmatian coast. Conditions in Croatia to-day were terrible. On one occasion alone 2,000 Croats had been arrested and imprisoned, and 180 of these summarily executed within a few hours. Dr. Krnjević said he would give me one example of the conditions prevailing in Croatia. On the 9th July a police officer was found murdered in a ditch outside Zagreb. Without attempting to investigate the crime, ten leading citizens of Zagreb were arrested and executed.

Dr. Krnjević said that he wished to make an appeal. He hoped that after the war His Majesty's Government would not disinterest themselves in the fate of South-Eastern Europe. Had I yet considered the form of a settlement in these regions and the question of political boundaries? I replied that after this war we should certainly be interested in the peace settlement of Europe and I fully realised the importance of the South-Eastern problem. At the same time, I had been careful to undertake no commitments in respect of frontiers towards any Power, nor was I prepared to do so. I felt sure that Dr. Krnjević, were he in my place, would understand the importance of our keeping our hands free against the hour when Europe was liberated and these problems had to be dealt with in another atmosphere. Dr. Krnjević did not dissent, but begged me again to believe that we should always find in the Croats a friendly people who greatly admired the liberties and institutions which we enjoyed in Great Britain.

I am, &c.
ANTHONY EDEN.

Enclosure.

DR. MATCHEK remains with his people, which he regards as his first duty.

2. Croatia remains as democratic as it has ever been. It would be a great mistake to identify the puppet Government of Pavelitch with the Croatian people.

3. Dr. Matchek wished to express his admiration for all sections of the British people and for their Prime Minister, Mr. Winston Churchill, their Foreign Secretary and other members of the Government, and his loyalty to their cause, which is also that of the Croat people.

4. Dr. Matchek hopes that he in person and the Croat people will be useful to the Allied cause by pursuing a policy of non-co-operation and of resistance to the imposed régime.

5. Dr. Matchek asked that his greetings and remembrances of his friendship should be conveyed to Mr. Churchill and Mr. Eden.

[20—48]

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

SFR
3.2.42

C267743

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER

You will recall the previous difficulties we have had in arranging for a meeting between yourself and the Governor General and the Yugoslav Ministers now in Canada. On December 19 last I wrote to the Yugoslav Consul General, Mr. Vukmirovic, and suggested that an appointment might be made for the first week in January. At that time, however, the Yugoslav Ministers had already left for the United States and it was impossible to complete these arrangements. I have now had a further letter from Mr. Vukmirovic indicating that the Yugoslav Ministers are returning to Canada in the first week of February, and that they are awaiting our advice with regard to a suitable date for an early meeting in Ottawa. If you would indicate a date which would be convenient next week I shall write to Mr. Vukmirovic accordingly.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

R

DS/YS NAR/ET
17th May, 1942

C267744

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER:

When the new Yugoslav Minister, Dr. Cankar, calls on you, he will almost certainly mention the desire of the Yugoslav Ministers, who were in Montreal during the winter and now have their headquarters in New York, to come to Ottawa to pay their respects to you and to the Governor-General. You will recall the difficulties we had last fall and winter trying to find a mutually convenient date for their reception here. Misunderstandings at the time led to some hurt feelings, but these have been satisfactorily straightened out.

Dr. Cankar asked me on Saturday whether it would be in order for the Yugoslave Ministers to offer lunch or dinner to the Government of Canada in gratitude for the asylum which had been given them here. I told him I did not think any such gesture would be necessary, that the Government had been glad to welcome to Canada representatives of an ally, and that when the Ministers were able to come to Ottawa, you and the Governor-General would I knew be very glad to receive them.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

NAR/ET
5th June, 1942

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER:

C267745

The Yugoslav Minister, Dr. Cankar, came to see me this week about arrangements for the forthcoming visit to Ottawa of the Yugoslav Cabinet Ministers, whose headquarters were in Montreal last winter but who are now resident in New York. They will be coming to Ottawa on Thursday, June 25th, when the Governor General will receive them during the day. They wish to pay their respects to you and wanted to offer a luncheon or dinner to the Government of Canada in appreciation of the hospitality they had received. I told Dr. Cankar that while the Yugoslav Ministers were in Ottawa the Canadian Government wished to entertain them - whether at lunch or dinner could be settled later.

Dr. Cankar is going to communicate with his Ministers in New York, and will advise us what Ministers will be coming to Ottawa and whether they will be accompanied by their wives.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

VYS

NAR/ET
17th June, 1942

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER:

C267746

Dr.Cankar(pronounced 'Sankar'),the new Yugo-Slav Minister,has for some years been the Yugo-Slav representative in Buenos Aires,where he met Judge Turgeon and knew Norman Armour,the United States Ambassador,very well. Dr.Cankar was Professor of Aesthetics and English Literature at the University of Ljubljana, before he entered his country's Diplomatic Service. In his academic period he translated the "Tale of Two Cities" into Slovene.

He will have on his mind the visit to Ottawa of the Yugo-Slav Ministers,who were in Montreal last winter. They are expected here on Thursday,June 25th. Arrangements have been made for their reception by the Governor General and yourself, and plans have been made to give a small Government dinner in their honour. Dr.Cankar is planning to leave for New York in the morning to complete arrangements for this visit.

The Minister may not know about the plans for his King's visit to this continent. The advice that we have received from the High Commissioner in London is that King Peter is expected to arrive on this side about June 23rd. We have no information as to what plans have been made for his visit to the United States,and assume that he will be coming to Canada probably about the middle of July.

I should think it quite possible that the Yugo-Slav Ministers,who had planned to come to Ottawa on the 25th June, may wish to wait in New York to meet their King. In this case it might be mutually convenient to combine the visit to Canada of the King and his Ministers.

WLK

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

UKYJ

SFR/SR
9.7.42

C267747

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER

Visit of King Peter and Yugoslav Officials.

I understand that Mr. E.K. Brown has already sent you a note with some information regarding King Peter and the Yugoslav Minister to Canada, Mr. I. Cankar, but I thought you would wish to have a word about the chief Ministers with this party.

You will recall that in July, 1941, the United Kingdom Government asked us to admit an official Yugoslav mission, among whom were the following members of the Yugoslav Government:-

Hon. I. Subasic, Governor of Croatia, - Croat

Hon. B. Markovic, Minister of State, - Serb

Hon. M. Trifunovic, Minister of Education, - Serb

Hon. B. Jevtic, Minister of State, - Serb

Hon. Dr. Cubrilovic, Minister of Agriculture, - Serb

Hon. S. Kosanovic, Minister of State, - Serb

Hon. F. Snoj, Minister of State - Slovene.

All of these individuals are part of the King's party. They continue to hold office in the Yugoslav Cabinet, the seat of which has been in London. They were resident in Montreal for four or five months last winter, but now they are making their headquarters in New York.

In addition to the Ministers now resident in North America, the King will be accompanied by M. Nincic (Serb), Minister for Foreign Affairs and formerly leader of the Serb Radical Party. In a Foreign Office telegram of June 16th from Eden to Halifax, Nincic is said to have engineered this visit in opposition to several members of the Government. There has been a good deal of criticism of the fact that the Croat element is so greatly under-represented in the party. Mr. Nincic is said to be critical of the United Kingdom Government's attitude in regard to the Yugoslav Army crisis in the Middle East, and there is some danger of his trying to play off the United States against the United Kingdom. In this connection you will recall the Yugoslav Cabinet difficulties last January, in which General Simovic was replaced by Mr. Yovanovic, the President of the Council, and following which General Mihailovic (now in Yugoslavia) was named

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Minister of War. This crisis indicated the deep cleavages which continue to exist between Serbs, Croats and Slovenes, and resulted in a good deal of difficulty for the United Kingdom Government in controlling dissident Yugoslav military officials in the Middle East.

M. R. Knezevic (Serb), Minister of the Court. Knezevic holds an important position as the link between the Court and the Cabinet, and although not in the Cabinet himself, is said to exert a decisive influence in Yugoslav politics. He took a prominent part in the coup d'etat of March, 1941.

From a Canadian point of view, one of the chief questions in which the group will be interested is the question of Yugoslav recruitment in Canada. Permission has been given to the Yugoslav Government to enlist their own nationals in Canada on a voluntary basis. The Canadian census of 1931 showed only 9,432 whose mother tongue was Serb, Croat or Slovene. Over three-quarters of this group entered Canada during the decade 1921-31, driven here by the repressive rule of the Serb majority, and it is probable that the great majority of Yugoslavs in Canada are of Croat origin.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

4S

C267743

THIS DOCUMENT IS THE PROPERTY OF HIS BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT

[U 1512/617/70] Copy No. 068a

Sir G. Rendel to Mr. Eden.—(Received April 3.)

British Embassy to Yugoslavia,
45 Lowndes Square, S.W. 1,
March 27, 1943.

(No. 7.)

Sir,

I HAVE been giving much thought to the problem of the future of Yugoslavia and of South-Eastern Europe generally, more especially in relation to the probable attitude of the Soviet Union. In the hope of obtaining at least some further data on the problem, I recently decided to seek an interview with my Soviet colleague—whom I had not seen for some time and with whom I am on very friendly terms—and to try to obtain some indication of his views.

2. I saw M. Bogomolov on the 16th March and did what I could, without expressing any particular views of my own, to elicit an expression of opinion from him on the Yugoslav situation. It was, however, with no surprise that I found myself confronted with the usual blank wall of official formulæ. M. Bogomolov took the line that the Soviet Government were not interested in the internal affairs of Yugoslavia and that the relations between the various groups within that country were no concern of theirs. They had officially recognised the Yugoslav Government, and it was therefore with considerable surprise that they had received "an enquiry" from that Government as to their attitude towards one of its members, General Mihailović. For the Soviet Government to adopt any particular attitude towards the general would be as unsuitable as it would be for the Yugoslav Government to adopt a particular attitude towards a member of the Soviet Government or towards some local Soviet authority in Russia. The most fantastic stories were circulating about Soviet intervention in Yugoslav affairs; it had, for instance, been freely said that a M. Levidieff, who had been Counsellor of the Soviet Legation in Belgrade, was leading partisan bands in Yugoslavia under the absurd name of Tito. M. Bogomolov, on his recent visit to Moscow, had met M. Levidieff, and they had enjoyed a hearty laugh together over this particular myth. M. Bogomolov, more especially in his insistence on the detachment of the Soviet Government from all internal Yugoslav affairs, gave me the impression of overplaying his hand. I did not, however, wish to give him the impression that I was cross-questioning him, and therefore decided not to press him further. I should certainly not have got anything more out of him if I had.

3. The question now arises whether any further progress can be made at this stage in estimating the probable future course of events in Yugoslavia and the neighbouring areas of South-Eastern Europe—more especially in so far as this is likely to be affected by the attitude of the Soviet Union.

4. I would emphasise first that my fears are not so much of direct Russian intervention as of a movement growing up spontaneously in the countries of South-Eastern Europe tending to bring them organically into the Russian orbit, quite independently of any initiative on the part of the Soviet Government itself. The danger of direct intervention by the Soviet Government may, of course, also exist. Should the military situation in Russia develop favourably, the possibility cannot, I imagine, be altogether excluded of the Soviet Government seeking to establish itself militarily in the Balkans, if only by the acquisition of bases in Bulgaria. If such a possibility does exist, however, it could no doubt be dealt with by the negotiation of some form of non-intervention agreement with the Soviet Union—although it is a little difficult to see what the Soviet Union, assured as it already is of our lasting goodwill, would gain by tying its hands, even to this limited extent.

5. On the other hand, the possibility of the development of a spontaneous Soviet movement in Yugoslavia and the neighbouring countries, without any direct intervention by the Soviet Government, seems to me a far more serious one—and all the more so now that the situation of the exiled Yugoslav Government and the prospects of the maintenance of Yugoslav unity both seem to be

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267750

steadily deteriorating. It is already, I think, generally agreed that the pre-war nationalist system can never be re-established in its entirety in South-Eastern Europe. The process of political and social disintegration, which seems already to have begun in Yugoslavia, is likely to be speeded by the ruin and misery which Axis occupation and tyranny has brought in its train. Such vested interests as previously existed are likely to have disappeared before the country can be finally liberated, and the former social structure of the State may well be shattered beyond hope of repair. Meanwhile, admiration for Russia, and above all for the achievements of the Soviet Union in mobilising its national resources—human and material—with such triumphant efficiency and unity of purpose, in its resistance to Nazi aggression, will be dominant factors in the minds of the surviving population. Other complexes will play their part—e.g., reaction against the past and all that it is thought to stand for; admiration for a system which has always put in the forefront of its programme " a square deal for the underdog "; and, probably, suspicion of the returning exiled Government, who will be accused of having lived in comparative safety and comfort during the period of their country's martyrdom, and may be represented as having fallen too completely under foreign influence. All these factors are likely to play their part, and it may well be that after the war the dominating impulse in the minds of the people of South-Eastern Europe—as of many other countries—will be to say, as did the Strelsau crowd to Rudolf Rassendyl in The Prisoner of Zenda, " If he's Red, he's right."

6. It is sometimes argued that no spontaneous and indigenous Soviet movement is likely to develop in the southern Slav countries without a strong man to give it a lead, and that no such leader has yet emerged. Surely, however, strength of personality would be required on the legitimist rather than on the revolutionary side, since the former would exact greater sacrifices and need more complicated organisation, while the latter could offer far more alluring prospects and promises to people who have little left to lose. In any case, the highly successful autonomous Soviet republics of Transcaucasia and Central Asia, and even the somewhat artificially created Soviet republics of the former Baltic States, have not needed the help of any outstanding personalities in order to establish themselves and to cement their connexion with the Soviet Union. Moreover, as suggested in my despatch under reference, defeat is likely to do much to smooth the path of revolution in such satellites of the Axis as Bulgaria and Hungary; and, once a Soviet system is firmly established in these two key positions on Yugoslavia's flanks, her own chances of resistance to the spontaneous growth of a Soviet movement on her own soil are likely to be much reduced.

7. Should these forecasts prove justified and indigenous Soviet republics spring up among the South Slav communities of South-Eastern Europe, it is hardly conceivable that they would not immediately apply for protection by, and affiliation to, the Soviet Union. Nor does it seem reasonable to expect the Soviet Government to refuse, or to pledge themselves to refuse, to respond to such an appeal. The reasons, in fact, in favour of their keeping their hands free towards any such movements seem overwhelming. Ex hypothesi the Soviet Government must consider—and with genuine conviction—that their system is the best which has yet been produced for the Government of modern communities. Certainly previous systems—at least in South-Eastern Europe—have not made a very good showing. The Soviet Government will hardly need officially to intervene to deal a death blow to the old order. All they need do is to stand sympathetically by. It is surely a case where Clough's words are particularly appropriate: " Thou shalt not kill—but needst not strive officiously to keep alive." And if there is to be a change of régime, what could be more right and fitting, from the Soviet Government's point of view, than a general adoption of the Soviet system.

8. Assuming then that we win the war and that the Soviet Union shares fully in that victory, I am convinced that, in the ordinary and normal course, we shall be faced not so much with Soviet intervention but with the spontaneous establishment of a number of small indigenous Soviet republics extending from Trieste to Varna and Dubrovnik to Dedeagatch. It is legitimate to argue that this might be no bad way of dealing with what has long been a peculiarly intractable series of problems. If this view is taken there is no reason why His Majesty's Government should consider trying to secure any other solution. It would, indeed, from many point of view, be both orthodox and popular. But I cannot help feeling that—attractive as the prospect may appear at first sight—this solution would be to the ultimate advantage neither of the countries concerned nor of the British Empire. If this view is adopted, the question arises whether His Majesty's Government can take any practical action to forestall the

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

establishment of such a system in South-Eastern Europe, or to give another turn to the march of events.

9. It may be that His Majesty's Government have already considered this question in all its bearings and that they already know what kind of alternative political, economic and social structure they would like to see established in South-Eastern Europe. They may, from the vantage ground of their own detached and objective position, have already decided on the form of organisation and government for South-Eastern Europe which they consider most likely to further the cause of the peace, prosperity and sound development of the various peoples concerned—a cause which, in the last analysis, is, I believe, that best calculated to serve their own interests as well. In particular, I am aware that the most careful consideration has been given to the possibility of a regrouping of the existing States of Eastern and South-Eastern Europe in one or more wider confederations. But, as the problem has presented itself in a slightly new form since the recent differences developed between the Yugoslav and the Soviet Governments, I am venturing—with all due diffidence, and conscious that the problem may already have been exhaustively studied on quite other lines—to suggest the following general axioms on which any further examination of this question might be based :—

10.—(a) South-Eastern Europe (i.e., the area lying south of the pre-war northern frontiers of Yugoslavia and Bulgaria) possesses sufficient geographic, economic, historic and cultural unity for it to be possible to treat it as a single area, consisting of a group or groups of closely interdependent units, for the future organisation of which certain general principles can be laid down.

(b) It is not to the interest of the communities inhabiting these areas, of Great Britain, or of Europe as a whole, that any or all of them should fall under the exclusive political or ideological control of an external or alien Power, whether in Central or Eastern Europe.

(c) The system of sovereign, autarkic and wholly independent nationalist States, which was accepted as axiomatic until comparatively recently, is inapplicable to this area of Europe. A redefinition and regrouping of the interdependent units of which it consists will probably be required, and their future constitutional relationship to each other should be very carefully worked out. There is no reason why certain units or groups of units within the larger area should not enjoy a monarchical form of government if this is in conformity with their traditions. A constitutional or hereditary monarchy may, in fact, present great advantages as a stabilising and unifying factor in countries without a sound political tradition. Many of the communities at present constituting Yugoslavia could no doubt be included in a revived federal Yugoslav monarchy. The question whether it is desirable in principle that Bulgaria should remain a monarchy, and, if so on what conditions, will need special consideration.

(d) The whole pre-war conception of boundaries as between the various units within the major groups should be reconsidered—and more especially that of "strategic frontiers." It seems legitimate to doubt whether frontiers drawn on purely strategic grounds are likely in future to prove of any real military value—particularly since armed conflicts have become "three-dimensional" with the development of air power, and "total" with the development of economic warfare; while it is, I think, now generally agreed that when they clash with geographical and ethnographical principles, as they usually do, they normally serve as among the most effective of political irritants.

(e) The new units or groups of units should be designed neither on a purely nationalistic basis, nor (as in the case of King Alexander's attempt at the forcible unification of Yugoslavia) purposely to cut across traditional divisions. They should be based on a careful weighing and balancing of geographic, economic, cultural, historic and religious factors. I believe that if the problem is approached objectively from the outside these various factors will prove to be less irreconcilable than is generally supposed. But no impartial balancing of these factors can be expected from a native of any of the territories concerned.

(f) While certain particularly difficult problems may be soluble by the violent surgery of exchange of transfer of populations, I believe that this method—so popular with totalitarian rulers—is a fundamentally vicious one and as often as not does more harm than good. It tends to perpetuate the disadvantages and dangers of exaggerated nationalism. I have reason to know that it almost inevitably leaves one party—if not both—with a grievance. It leaves each civilisation the poorer by removing a valuable element from it. And it generally makes the future co-operation of the different communities in a common loyalty much more difficult to achieve.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

(g) The new units should be so constituted as to ensure as far as possible that each community possesses more than one loyalty. It is now generally agreed that one of the most vicious elements in the totalitarian régimes has been their insistence on a single exclusive loyalty to the sole national unit. The system which has so happily developed in the British Commonwealth, where quite distinct but not incompatible loyalties can co-exist—e.g., to a Dominion and to the Empire—is a far sounder basis for a true new order. Similarly, in the south Slav countries there is no reason why an organisation should not be developed in which it would be possible to combine a local loyalty to, say, a Croat or Macedonian unit with a major loyalty to the South-Eastern European group, provided the unit is so constituted, and its relations with the group are so devised as to ensure that these loyalties are capable of combination and are not inevitably bound to clash.

(h) If Bulgaria is not to become a province and spearhead of the Soviet Union in the Balkans, she must be in some way associated with, and included in, the new South-East European group before she has had time to throw herself into the arms of Russia.

(i) Finally, certain practical principles must obviously be applied to the entire group of small units constituting the new major international unit or confederation. These should include a customs union; a very carefully planned and energetically developed system of communications, for which generous external finance may be necessary (an important point, but one which may lead to considerable difficulty); a system of joint boards of investigation or control for dealing with questions where the interests of the units might conflict; and a carefully planned organisation for co-ordinating internal production and marketing, and possibly also for regulating foreign trade.

11. The obvious answer to these suggestions is that it is not our business to plan in detail for countries over which we neither wish, nor are likely to be able, to exercise any effective authority—at least for longer than a period of military occupation—and that it is for the peoples concerned and their Governments, or the Governments they set up, to decide freely and without outside interference what the structure of the future State or States shall be. Unfortunately, long experience has shown that the peoples of South-Eastern Europe and the Governments they set up normally lack most of the qualifications required for such a task. Apart from natural ignorance and inexperience, they are for the most part so deeply committed to some particular national or party cause as to be incapable of taking a sufficiently wide and objective view to enable them to devise a sound solution of their problems for themselves. On the other hand, I am rash enough to believe—partly as a result of my own personal experience abroad—that the rank and file of the people in any country which has not been systematically corrupted by a false and vicious system are capable of much clearer appreciation of what is just, fair and reasonable than they are usually credited with. Though I doubt whether I shall carry general conviction, I personally believe that this is true even of the communities of South-Eastern Europe. I believe, therefore, that, if a just, sound, clear and comprehensive scheme for a new structure for South-Eastern Europe were worked out and put before the various peoples concerned in its broad outlines, at the right moment, with reasonable tact and care, and with the authority of Great Britain and the United States behind it, it would meet with a much less unfavourable reception than is generally assumed.

12. Even if we did not take the first initiative in putting some such scheme forward, it seems to me that the problem would be greatly simplified if we were in a position to put forward, whenever the time comes, a clear and detailed scheme of our own embodying what we should like to see done. I am convinced that if they are left to themselves the people of South-Eastern Europe, particularly after what they have been through, will be wholly incapable of deciding their own fate without plunging their countries into anarchy or civil war.

I have, &c.
G. W. RENDEL.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267753

THIS DOCUMENT IS THE PROPERTY OF HIS BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT

[R 758/44/92] Copy No. 068a

Mr. Eden to Mr. Stevenson (Cairo).

(No. 10.)

Sir, Foreign Office, 12th January, 1944.

THE Yugoslav Ambassador asked to see me to-day. Though he is not, I think, an ardent admirer of the Government which he is now serving, he had many complaints to make. First he maintained that we had not allowed his Government to establish a base at Bari as they had asked. We would not even allow them to send money to help their people there. Meanwhile, his Government had learnt that some fifteen supporters of the Yugoslav National Committee who were at Bari had been put in prison by us. He did not know why this was and asked for information.

2. In a more general discussion of the situation the Ambassador fully admitted that we should support Tito, and though he made excuses for Mihailovic's inactivity he did not deny the contrast between the activities of the two commanders. He maintained, however, that our propaganda had too much of a Left-ward tinge and was in fact doing the work of Moscow. There was no doubt that this in turn was having a bad effect not only upon Mihailovic but upon many of our friends in his area. The Ambassador referred to some of our friends in this area whose loyalty to the Allied cause, he said, could not be doubted. They felt themselves abandoned by us. He also mentioned that some of his own friends had been shot by partisans. He thought that the tenor of our broadcasts was perhaps due to the fact that some of those we employed to put them across were Communists, and added that we were wrong if we thought that they were pro-British.

3. His Excellency, who was obviously distressed at the way things were developing, begged that we should try to reduce the strength of our propaganda a little. He admitted that his people had wrongly thought at the time of the fall of Mussolini that the war was nearly over. As a result internal dissensions had broken out and both sides had been trying to take position for post-war control of the country. He hoped that we would not completely throw in our lot with one or other of the parties or one of the contestants but keep contact with both. He did not of course know what reports we were receiving from our liaison officers with Mihailovic. His Excellency said he could not believe that the latter could still have contact with Nedic, still less with the Germans, though it was quite possible that he had contact with some of the men in Nedic's so-called army, for no doubt they would wish to get their help when the time came finally to turn the Germans out.

4. I could give the Ambassador no help in all this and told him that we had to give our support to those who were fighting the Germans. No other policy was conceivable at a time like this.

I am, &c.
ANTHONY EDEN.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267754

THIS DOCUMENT IS THE PROPERTY OF HIS BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT

[R 3716/850/92] Copy No. 068a

Mr. Eden to Mr. Stevenson (Cairo).

(No. 42.)

Sir, Foreign Office, 7th March, 1944.

THE Yugoslav Ambassador asked to see me this afternoon, when he said that he was glad to hear that King Peter and M. Puric were shortly expected in this country. His Excellency said that he had become increasingly anxious at recent developments and most unhappy in considering the fate of his country, which he felt, unless we were very careful, must now be torn by civil war. He understood the need to supply Tito with arms. Nobody quarrelled with that, but why did we carry our propaganda so much further? Why was it necessary on the B.B.C., for instance, to speak not only of the military but of the "social" importance of his movement? We sometimes seemed to think that we knew more of Yugoslavia than the Yugoslavs themselves. He begged me to believe that there were others besides Tito in the country who wanted to fight the Germans. What was required was that the whole national movement of liberation should be co-ordinated and the King and the Yugoslav Government allied to play their proper part in it.

2. In reply, I explained once again the principles on which we were working, and added that the reasons for our support of Tito were military; that he was containing fifteen German divisions. Mihailovic, on the other hand, was inactive and had been inactive for a long time, while a number of his officers had been in contact with the enemy, both Italian and German. The Ambassador seemed considerably distressed at this statement. He could not believe that Mihailovic himself had done anything of this kind. He had himself many friends and relations in Yugoslavia now, some of whom were in prison, having been placed there by the Germans, and it could not be thought that they were prepared to collaborate with the Germans.

3. I said that unfortunately the evidence was cumulative and did not, in our judgment, admit of any doubt. I reminded the Ambassador that the Prime Minister had warned M. Puric about Mihailovic's position many months ago at Cairo. M. Puric had not been convinced. Of course we did not pretend to know more about Yugoslavia than the Yugoslavs themselves, but our information was from our own liaison officers in the country. When King Peter and the Yugoslav Prime Minister arrived we would discuss the whole situation with them and tell them how we saw the position. We should then have to decide what steps, if any, could be taken to increase the measure of national unity against the enemy.

4. The Ambassador said that he felt the position of his country very keenly. They were suffering because they were fighting the enemy. Nearly all the other occupied countries were not doing so, and those did not have to undergo the terrible trials which had fallen on the Yugoslav people. The King was not only a young ruler, he was also a symbol of Yugoslav national life. He clearly thought that we attached too much importance to the ability of Tito's movement to control the situation. He said that, of course, it was for us to decide our own policy, and he would not for a moment attempt to give us advice, yet he did not see what Great Britain could hope to get by the line we were now pursuing. He wondered whether, perhaps, it was the outcome of Russian pressure.

5. I replied emphatically that it was not. We had, in fact, sent a mission to Tito long before the Russians had done so and the Russians had asked us from time to time for information about Yugoslavia, including General Mihailovic and his movement. Our decisions, whether right or wrong, had been our own decisions and the Russians had never asked or advised us to take any particular course of action.

6. The Ambassador said that he had consulted, as far as he could, all Yugoslavs here who had come out of the country, many of whom had been members of the previous Yugoslav Governments. They were all united in their support of the King. He hoped that the results of our talks would be to clarify the position and perhaps enable an agreed policy to be reached. I said I shared his wish, though I had also no doubt of the difficulties.

I am, &c.
ANTHONY EDEN.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Y/S

C267755

THIS DOCUMENT IS THE PROPERTY OF HIS BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT

[R 5605/439/92] Copy No. 068a

Mr. Broad to Mr. Eden.—(Received 8th April.)

(No. 117.)

Sir, British Embassy to Yugoslavia, 29th March, 1944.

I HAVE the honour to report that the news of the marriage of His Majesty King Peter to Princess Alexandra of Greece on the 20th March caused considerable surprise in local Yugoslav circles, as it was generally believed that it would be indefinitely postponed. This belief was confirmed by reports from London published in the local press on the very morning of the wedding to the effect that the marriage would be deferred for political reasons.

2. The Serbian elements in the local Yugoslav colony have been especially critical. Their comments on what they term a "fateful step" by King Peter can be summarised as follows:—

(a) At a time when the Yugoslav nation, and particularly (they say) the Serbian section of the population, is suffering at the hands of the enemy, the young King, instead of fighting, has chosen to follow the call of his heart and disregard the advice of all responsible people around him, including his mother.

(b) On the Serbs at home the news of the marriage is bound to have produced the worst possible impression, and it may even make it difficult for King Peter to return to his country.

(c) Queen Marie of Yugoslavia has very wisely, in the interests of the dynasty, dissociated herself from her son's unpopular step by declining to be present at the wedding. She has thereby left the door open for her second son, Tomislav, to ascend the throne in the event of King Peter becoming utterly compromised.

(d) The Serbs do not want a Greek Queen, as Greek women have played a fatal rôle in the recent history of Yugoslavia. It is regarded as sinister that not only Prince Paul but the Yugoslav quislings Stojadinović and Cincar Marković were married to Greek wives.

3. Among sympathisers with the Partisans, on the other hand, the news of the marriage was received with cynical amusement. It is hoped that by this step King Peter will make himself unacceptable to sections of the Serbian population in Yugoslavia, with the result that a number of Mihailovic's Chetniks may be expected to join the Partisans. It is also argued that General Mihailovic has been compromised in the eyes of his own people by sending a "special envoy" to the wedding in the person of Major Lukacevic.

4. General Zivkocić, at one time generally regarded as the power behind the throne, is among the more violent critics of King Peter's action, and has declared that, in the interests of the country, King Peter should abdicate in favour of his brother, Prince Tomislav.

5. So far little direct news has been received of reactions in Yugoslavia itself, but it is probable that among the Serbs these are likely to be on the same lines as the reactions of this section of the community here. Among the Partisans the feeling naturally is that the King has further compromised himself, as was communicated in a message from Brigadier Maclean, which I reported in my telegram No. 279 of the 23rd March.

6. The above will have made it clear that comments generally have been very unrestrained and that in the excitement of the moment undue political importance has been attached to the event. Criticism may be expected to die down in time, but on the other hand it is likely that some feeling of resentment will remain. Certainly the fact that King Peter should have married outside his own country and during wartime has to some extent prejudiced his position.

7. I am sending a copy of this despatch to His Majesty's Ambassador to the Greek Government in Cairo.

I have, &c.
P. BROAD.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

YS

[This Document is the Property of His Britannic Majesty's Government, and should be kept under Lock and Key.]

C267756

[EN CLAIR] POLITICAL DISTRIBUTION

FROM MOSCOW TO FOREIGN OFFICE

Sir A. Clark Kerr D. 11.18 p.m. 4th May, 1944.
No. 1162
4th May, 1944. R. 4.55 a.m. 5th May, 1944.

0 0 0 0

Pravda of May 3rd publishes Tass message from Cairo quoting communiqué of Yugoslav National Liberation Army reporting defeat of Mikhailovic's Chetniks by Marshal Tito's forces near Jablonica.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

24 May, 1944

C267757

MOST SECRET

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER:

26 April 1944

I think you will be interested in reading the attached despatch, written by Mr. Rae in Algiers, reporting a discussion on the state of affairs inside that part of Yugoslavia which is held by the Partisans. Rae's informant is Colonel Deakin, who was highly praised, without being named, by Mr. Churchill recently in the House of Commons. We had something to do with him in this Department when he was stationed in New York, and found him very intelligent and also sober in his judgment.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COPY

OFFICE OF THE REPRESENTATIVE OF CANADA TO THE FRENCH COMMITTEE OF NATIONAL LIBERATION ALGIERS
26 April, 1944

C267758

No.64.

MOST SECRET

Sir:

I have the honour to report briefly on a recent conversation with Lieut-Colonel William Deakin regarding the present situation in Yugoslavia.

2. Lieut-Colonel Deakin is "the young man" to whom the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom referred in the House of Commons on February 22nd as "a man of great guts", following his announcement that Deakin had been the first British liaison officer to establish direct contact with Marshall Tito and the Partisan armies in Yugoslavia. Deakin, who is now 32 years old, was formerly a lecturer in history at Wadham College, Oxford. After joining the British Army in 1939, he was seconded for service with the British Security Coordination in New York city where he specialized in the study of European foreign born groups in the United States. In the course of his work he made several visits to the Department, during which he met the Under-Secretary, Mr. T.A. Stone, and a number of other officers. In June 1942 he left New York for Cairo and in May 1943, after a special course of training he parachuted into Tito's headquarters, then established in Montenegro. He spent the next eight months in various parts of Yugoslavia, returning to Cairo in January this year. He is now in Algiers together with Brigadier Fitzroy Maclean, the head of the British Liaison Mission in Yugoslavia, and Mr. Phillip Broad, a member of the Foreign Office, who is shortly proceeding to Bari to act as political liaison officer on Yugoslav affairs. Discussions are now proceeding at Allied Force Headquarters in Algiers dealing with the supply of munitions and other forms of assistance to the Partisan forces. The Partisans are represented in these discussions by General Velebit, a Serb career officer, and Major Vogelnik, a Slovene officer from Ljubljana, who are now in Algiers with a small military staff.

3. Deakin's description of his visit to Yugoslavia in May 1943 is a most exciting xxxxxx story. His aircraft left from Derna in North Africa, and after two abortive attempts, succeeded on the third night in landing two British officers, Deakin and a Canadian of Yugoslav origin named Stewart, and three other ranks. Contact was established at once with Partisan units who had been guarding the landing field, and who had fought off the Germans for three days and sustained a number of casualties to ensure the safe arrival of the British officers. Deakin and Stewart were conducted within a few hours to Tito's headquarters. Stewart, who spoke Serb and Croat fluently, was unfortunately killed in an enemy bombardment shortly after the arrival of the party, leaving Deakin, who spoke only German and French, to carry on. For two months, he followed Tito's headquarters as the Partisan forces fought a rear-guard action against the Germans. On the occasion of the Italian armistice, Deakin accompanied a small force of Partisans to the coastal town of Split where improvised peace terms were hurriedly drawn up with the extremely harassed Italian Divisional Commander who had been in charge of the garrison in the town. In a subsequent bombardment both Tito and Deakin who "lived around the same tree", were slightly injured. In January of this year Deakin left Yugoslavia for Cairo, arriving in Algiers about ten days ago.

4. Lieut-Colonel Deakin described the Partisan movement as a genuine popular movement united against the German invader. The Partisan army, which now numbers roughly 200,000 men, had managed to weld Serbs, Croats and Slovenes into keen fighting units. If the war were to end tomorrow, Tito and the Partisans would be in effective control of most of Slovenia, Croatia, Bosnia, Dalmatia, and Slavonia, and in virtual control of most of Montenegro and Herzegovina. While there was no doubt that Communist cadres supplied the majority of army leaders, the prestige which the Communists enjoyed was due largely to the fact that they had been most active in opposing the Germans. Mihailovich, on the other hand, represented the pre-war tradition of Serb domination. He

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

might be described as the representative of King Peter in Serbia. Most of his officers were Yugoslav officers of career with a stake in the restoration of a Serb-controlled Yugoslav state as it existed before the war. The essential reason for Mihailovich's eclipse was the fact that he had evidently decided that the Partisans were more dangerous than the Germans,and for many months his forces had taken no offensive action against the enemy. It should not be forgotten that British liaison officers were posted with Mihailovich as well as with Tito.

5. Tito himself was a remarkable man. Born of a Croat family in Zagreb, he had originally been a metal worker. In the Great War he was captured in 1916 by the Russians, and was subsequently trained in Russia in Communist theory and tactics which he later put to practical use in the Balkans,in France and in Spain. Deakin described him as a Yugoslav patriot with a fair and supple mind. Completely self-educated, he had read most of the British and American economists and was familiar with English,French and German,as well as Yugoslav and Russian. He was strongly nationalist,but had not neglected to establish close contact with guerilla and resistance groups in Bulgaria,Albania,and Roumania. Tito,who was himself an excellent military strategist,had also selected able lieutenants.

6. Among the lesser-known personalities working closely with Tito were: General Jovanovic, a Montenegram, and a most capable staff officer; and two able military Commanders, a Serbian Communist named Popovic,the son of a rich lawyer in Belgrade,educated in France and Germany,who subsequently became a staff officer with the Spanish Republican army,and Dubchevic,also a Montenegran,who commanded a battalion in Spain,and whom Deakin described as a ruthless and tough military leader. All were members of the Yugoslav Communist party. On the political side,he mentioned Alexander Rankewic, a Serb,who has the nom-de-guerre of "Marco", the energetic Secretary of the Yugoslav Communist party; and the Minister of Propaganda, a Serb named Vladimir Ribnikar, formerly the proprietor of the Belgrade newspaper "Politika", and described as a "Balkan Liberal". Although the Communists were in a good many of the key positions,mass support for the Croat Peasant Party of Dr.Matchek had increased considerably. This party might be regarded as a counterweight to the Communists.

7. In reply to a question,Deakin felt sure that King Peter could not be returned peacefully to power in Yugoslavia,although there was still a good deal of support for him in Serbia. His recent marriage had not improved his prospects,particularly among the Croat section of the population. He was categorical in asserting that the present Government in Cairo was completely out of touch with the situation in Yugoslavia,and could only re-establish themselves with Allied military support. The present situation was extremely confused and difficult. The Partisans were doing all the fighting against the German and satellite divisions, and supply talks concerning further assistance were now proceeding with Tito's representatives on the military level. On the other hand,the Allied Governments continued to extend formal recognition to the Cairo Government which was wholly unrepresentative of Yugoslav opinion. At best,continued support of Peter and the Cairo government could only result in the establishment of an "independent" and isolated Serbia in the midst of a bloc of neighbour countries which were bound to move towards the left as soon as the Germans and their puppet regimes had been driven out. As a consequence of this dual policy, British prestige throughout the Balkans and Greece was on the decline. The Partisan movement and the Communist Party of Yugoslavia were by no means identical. Yet there was a great deal of admiration among the mass of the people for the Soviet Union and its military achievements. The Soviet Union,however,had extended only propaganda support to the Partisans, the task of supplying arms and essential materials having been borne by the British Services at Bari. Indeed the Soviet liaison officers now with Tito had been wholly dependent at the outset on the British Services. With the despatch of the Partisan military mission to Moscow in recent weeks, the possibility of obtaining material aid from the Soviet Union had been considerably improved,and might possibly be followed up by unilateral recognition of Tito by the Government of the U.S.S.R. The Prime Minister of the United Kingdom felt a sense of personal responsibility for King Peter's future, and with the added fact that the Foreign Office was still opposed to recognition,Deakin was afraid the United Kingdom authorities would not act boldly until it was too late.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

8. An informal meeting was arranged at Cheragas at which General Velebit, Major Vogelnik, and four representatives of the French Resistance movement in the Assembly were present. I was extremely interested to see how eager the French representatives were to hear Velebit's account of present day conditions in Yugoslavia. A short summary of his views appeared in the local newspapers of April 27th, in the form of a statement attributed to "a Soviet envoy of Marshal Tito", and I am enclosing a copy of "La Depeche Algerienne" for this date.

9. Mr. Phillip Broad and Colonel Deakin are proceeding to Bari at once to maintain closer contact with internal Yugoslav affairs. They will be responsible to the British Resident Minister in Algiers, Mr. Harold Macmillan. I gather that Deakin expects he will be sent again into Yugoslavia at some future date with the first British diplomatic mission to enter the country.

I have the honour to be,
Sir,
Your obedient servant,

S.F.Rae

for Canadian Representative

Secretary of State for External Affairs,
Ottawa, Canada

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

8. An informal meeting was arranged at Cheragas at which General Velebit, Major Vogelnik, and four representatives of the French Resistance movement in the Assembly were present. I was extremely interested to see how eager the French representatives were to hear Velebit's account of present day conditions in Yugoslavia. A short summary of his views appeared in the local newspapers of April 27th, in the form of a statement attributed to "a Soviet envoy of Marshal Tito", and I am enclosing a copy of "La Depeche Algerienne" for this date.

9. Mr. Phillip Broad and Colonel Deakin are proceeding to Bari at once to maintain closer contact with internal Yugoslav affairs. They will be responsible to the British Resident Minister in Algiers, Mr. Harold Macmillan. I gather that Deakin expects he will be sent again into Yugoslavia at some future date with the first British diplomatic mission to enter the country.

I have the honour to be,
Sir,
Your obedient servant,

S.F.Rae

for Canadian Representative

Secretary of State for External Affairs,
Ottawa, Canada

REPEAT
REPETER

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Safety file DS/YS BT

NAR/ET
18 July, 1944

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER:

C267761

Dr.Izidor Cankar, the former Yugoslav Minister, is in town today and tomorrow. I had dinner with him and Mrs.Cankar last night. As you may have seen from the press last week, Cankar has been named Minister of Public Instruction in the new Yugoslav Cabinet which Mr.Soubasitch has formed to try to carry out the policy of collaboration agreed on between the King and Marshal Tito.

Cankar himself has received no direct word of his nomination as Minister, but two or three days ago he received a message through Malcolm MacDonald asking him to come to London as quickly as possible to confer with Soubasitch. This he proposes to do.

As Cankar will tell you, the great difficulty in forming a representative Yugoslav Government at this time is to secure adequate representation for the Serbs, who in bulk still back Mihailovitch and oppose the union of forces with Tito.

Cankar is staying at the Chateau for the next day or two and would like very much to have a word with you before he leaves for London. I told him how very busy you were, but said I was sure you would wish to see him sometime before he left.

Personal call
19-7-44
WLMK

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER
FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM
EARNSCLIFFE
OTTAWA

C O P Y

950H/428

23rd August, 1944.

TOP SECRET

Dear Mr. Robertson,

With reference to my letter of the 2nd August, I enclose for the secret and personal information of the Prime Minister a copy of a further Foreign Office print containing an account of the journey of King Peter and Dr. Subasic, Prime Minister of Yugoslavia, to the Mediterranean Theatre in June last.

Yours sincerely,

(Signed) Malcolm MacDonald

N.A. Robertson, Esq.,
Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs,
Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267763

THIS DOCUMENT IS THE PROPERTY OF HIS BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT

TOP SECRET. Copy No. 42

[R 10457/8/G]

Report by Mr. R. C. Skrine Stevenson on the Journey of His Majesty King Peter and Dr. Subasic, Prime Minister of Yugoslavia, to the Mediterranean Theatre—10th–25th June, 1944.

Members of the Party:—

His Majesty King Peter II.
Dr. Subasic, Yugoslav Prime Minister.
Mr. R. C. Skrine Stevenson, His Majesty's Ambassador to Yugoslavia.
Colonel Bailey (who came at the request of King Peter).
Lieutenant-Colonel Skrivanic, A.D.C. to King Peter.
Lieutenant-Commander Marquis de Bona, A.D.C. to King Peter.
M. Sepic, Chef de Cabinet of the Yugoslav Prime Minister.
Mme. Magaziner, confidential typist and translator.

Itinerary:—

June 10th.—Party left Northolt at 11 p.m.
June 11th.—Morning. Party arrived at Gibraltar.
Midday. Party arrived at Algiers.
Evening. Party arrived at Malta.
June 12th.—Dr. Subasic, Mr. Skrine Stevenson, Lieutenant-Colonel Skrivanic, M. Sepic and Mme. Magaziner left Malta by air for Bari. King Peter, Colonel Bailey and Marquis de Bona remained in Malta.
June 13th.—Evening. Prime Minister's party left Bari by destroyer for the island of Vis.
June 14th.—2 a.m. Prime Minister's party arrived at Vis.
June 17th.—King Peter, Colonel Bailey and Marquis de Bona flew from Malta to Caserta.
June 19th.—Prime Minister's party returned by destroyer from Vis to Bari.
June 20th.—Prime Minister's party joined King Peter at Caserta.
June 21st.—Party flew to Rome.
June 24th.—Party left Rome for London via Naples and Gibraltar.
June 25th.—Party arrived at Northolt at 6·45 a.m.

The first important conference attended by King Peter and Dr. Subasic was that with General Wilson and Mr. Macmillan at Algiers. Here a tentative programme for the visits was laid down, and it was decided after some discussion that, if a meeting between King Peter and Marshal Tito proved possible, it would be advisable to hold it elsewhere than at the island of Vis. This decision proved correct. The situation in Vis was found by us on our arrival there to be such that, if an attempt had been made to bring King Peter to the island against the wishes of the Partisans, there would have been little hope of any kind of an agreement with Tito.

2. At Malta, where we were the guests of the Governor, Viscount Gort, at San Antonio Palace, the party split into two. King Peter stayed there until the 17th June, when he flew to Caserta. During the time he was in Malta he inspected the Yugoslav naval units and training establishment there. The men received him well and they made a good impression from the point of view of discipline and training. King Peter informed me later that these men would be ready to serve in the Adriatic or anywhere else against the Germans, provided that—

(i) They were instructed to do so by His Majesty;
(ii) Their ships flew the Royal Yugoslav flag; and
(iii) They were under the operational command of the Commander-in-chief, Mediterranean.

3. Dr. Subasic, his staff and I left on the 12th June for Bari by air, accompanied by Lieutenant-Colonel Skrivanic, who had been detailed by

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

King Peter to keep a friendly eye on Dr. Subasic's activities. Lieutenant-Colonel Skrivanic's presence did not prove in any way embarrassing. He was well received by the Partisans and was much impressed with the strength of their movement. He was in entire accord with the agreement eventually reached by Dr. Subasic.

4. At Bari the Yugoslav Prime Minister was met by the Air Officer Commanding Balkan Command, Air Vice-Marshal Elliot, by the General Officer Commanding No. 2 Area, by Mr. Broad and others. He was lodged in a hotel where elaborate security precautions were taken. During his stay in Bari he had conversations with M. Topalovic, who had come out from Serbia armed with full powers from General Mihailovic, and with M. Yancikovic, representative of the Croat Peasant party.

5. The new Balkan Command, which has been instituted with headquarters at Bari, seems to be a satisfactory step. It co-ordinates both special operations and ordinary military, naval and air operations in the Adriatic and the Balkans and simplifies procedure. A Balkan Policy Committee has been set up, of which Mr. Broad is a member. This committee is the highest local authority under the Commander, Air Vice-Marshal Elliot. On a lower level there is a Working Committee, which meets daily and on which Mr. Broad is represented, and a number of sub-committees dealing with particular aspects of the work. On these latter sub-committees Mr. Broad can also be represented if necessary.

6. The journey from Bari to Vis in H.M.S. Blackmore, escorted by H.M.S. Eggesford, was uneventful. The kindness and the hospitality shown by the officers and ship's company of H.M.S. Blackmore to the party were deeply appreciated by the Yugoslav Prime Minister.

7. On his arrival at the island of Vis Dr. Subasic was met by Marshal Tito's Chief of General Staff (Lieutenant-General Arso Yovanovic), by other high officers and by a number of members of the National Committee of Liberation. There was a guard of honour of about 100 men. A villa had been provided for Dr. Subasic and his staff, and later in the morning he started his conversations with Marshal Tito.

8. Brigadier Maclean kindly accommodated me in the villa allotted to his mission.

9. It is typical of the respective attitudes of the British and Soviet missions that Brigadier Maclean should have immediately installed himself comfortably on his arrival in Vis, though he was some miles from Marshal Tito's headquarters, while the Soviet mission, torn between their desire for comfort and their desire to cling closely to Tito's coat-tails, had camped uncomfortably in a tent on the slope of an inhospitable mountain. The Soviet mission rapidly found that they were gaining nothing by this and followed Brigadier Maclean's example in finding a villa for themselves.

10. On my arrival I expressed the hope to Major-General Velebit that there would be no difficulty in my keeping in close touch with both Dr. Subasic and Marshal Tito. He assured me that the whole island was a network of telephones. The trouble was, however, as I speedily found out, that the net did not work very well. It was a Herculean labour to get into touch with anyone by telephone. This did not inconvenience me much, as I remained in the background during the negotiations between Dr. Subasic and Marshal Tito and had no difficulty in seeing them when I judged it necessary to do so.

11. The island of Vis is about 10 miles wide by 8 miles across. It rises to about 2,000 feet in one place, the mountain of Hum, on which Marshal Tito's headquarters are located in a series of caves. The island has two ports, Comisa, where we landed from Bari, and Vis. The coast is rocky and precipitous. There are not many trees and every available space on the hillsides and slopes is covered with vines. The defences of the island are extremely strong. There is an air strip capable of handling three or four squadrons of Spitfires. There are plenty of anti-aircraft guns and some field artillery, in addition to mortars and anti-tank guns. The British troops on the island consist of a battalion of infantry and other troops, such as artillery and engineers, totalling about 4,000 or 5,000. The Partisans' troops number 9,700. All round the island the rocky slopes facing the sea are heavily mined. Every hundred yards or so there are machine-gun posts, anti-tank gun and mortar posts and rifle posts. A sharp watch is kept from them during the day and they are fully manned at night. Partisan soldiers are very light on the trigger and moving about the island during the hours of darkness or approaching the coasts is a hazardous business. A shot across the bows of any vessel in the offing is followed by a demand to show pre-arranged signal lights. These, whether correct or not, inevitably seem to be taken as a target for a general bombardment with all available arms. On the whole it is safer not to skirt the coasts of the island by night.

12. The relations between our troops and those of the Partisans seem to be excellent. This may be in part due to the fact that there are but few women on the island. The Partisans, though very appreciative of our assistance, do not seem to regard us as anything but junior partners in the defence of the island. Marshal Tito's own position in the movement and his influence over it do not seem to have been altered by his move from the mainland. He has the unswerving loyalty and complete devotion of all the members of the movement and seems to be regarded with something approaching real veneration. The main impression left by the Partisan troops is one of extremely strict discipline and of their evolution from a guerrilla to a regular army. The clenched fist salute has been done away with, the men keep themselves clean and reasonably smart and their weapons appear to be in good order. The spirit which permeates them is one of blazing keenness.

13. Brigadier Maclean's mission is housed in a villa on the edge of a pleasing and innocent-looking cove with paths leading up the slopes of the surrounding hills through the vineyards. The small beach and the vineclad slopes are heavily mined and a step off the path is liable to lead to a quick trip into eternity.

14. In response to my request for an interview with Marshal Tito on the day of our arrival I was invited, together with Brigadier Maclean, to a "gala" dinner. Dr. Subasic and his staff and Lieutenant-General Korneyev, the officer commanding the Soviet mission, were present at the dinner, as were also all members of the National Committee of Liberation who were present on the island. These latter are not very impressive, with the exception perhaps of "Marco," whose real name is Alexander Rankovic. He is a Communist and is said to be the secretary-general of the Serbian Communist party. He has a talent for organisation and is one of Marshal Tito's closest advisers.

15. Marshal Tito himself makes a favourable impression. He struck me as an eminently practical individual. He is quick to take a point and will either accept it or produce a plausible reason for not doing so. He is supremely self-confident, but makes no parade of it. He has a direct and simple manner. In appearance he is of medium size and thick set and his hair is plentiful and tinged with grey. He has rather a fine head with deep-set and piercing eyes, but a very short neck, with the result that his head seems to sit down too closely on his shoulders. He received me very cordially, speaking fluent but not very cultured German. His Russian, I am told, is good and he understands and reads both English and French, though he will talk neither of them.

16. The dinner, which was very indifferent, was served in a farmhouse on the slopes of the hill in which Marshal Tito's headquarters is situated. After it I had about 20 minutes' conversation with Marshal Tito alone. I handed to him Mr. Winston Churchill's letter and did my best to impress upon him the importance attached by His Majesty's Government to a satisfactory agreement between him and the Royal Yugoslav Government and to a friendly and informal meeting between him and His Majesty King Peter. Marshal Tito said that he was confident that a satisfactory agreement could be reached. Otherwise he would not have expressed his willingness to meet Dr. Subasic. As regards the King, he did not exclude the possibility of a meeting a little later on, provided that an agreement were reached with the Royal Yugoslav Government.

17. The following three days were spent by Dr. Subasic in arguing with Marshal Tito and his advisers. There were times when he was tired and discouraged. I saw him frequently, and did what I could to hearten him and to encourage him to persist in the line which he was following. Powerful impulse was given to his determination to come to an agreement by the message which he received from M. Molotov through the Soviet mission in Vis. This message was in reply to one which he had sent to Moscow suggesting the improvement of relations between the Soviet Government and the Royal Yugoslav Government. In his reply M. Molotov made it quite clear that he would be ready to enter closer relations with the Royal Yugoslav Government provided that the latter came to a satisfactory agreement with Marshal Tito.

18. During this time I visited the Partisan "naval dockyard" at the port of Vis. Here Partisan mechanics and workmen are labouring feverishly to repair broken-down coasting and fishing vessels of all kinds. The keenness of the men was admirable, and their pathetic attempts to make do with the primitive material at their disposal were altogether praiseworthy. The officer in command, who had been a regular officer of the Royal Yugoslav navy, told me

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

that he had at his disposal about 200 men, including mechanics, who would be suitable for manning M.Ls. or M.G.Bs. These are the vessels which they desire above all, as they are highly suitable in their view for the raiding of territory held by the enemy and for attacking his coastal shipping.

19. During these days I also had another meeting with Marshal Tito. This time we met in his mountain headquarters, which consist of a series of caves blasted out of the mountain side. I again did my best to encourage him to come to an agreement with Dr. Subasic and renewed my attempts to bring him to meet the King. He explained to me, as he had already explained to Dr. Subasic, that he personally had nothing against His Majesty. He realised that the acts committed in the King's name in Yugoslavia by Mihailovic and his lieutenants were either acquiesced in by His Majesty through ill advice or were done without his knowledge and approval. But the people in Yugoslavia could not understand this. If, however, it were possible to show them that the King was adopting a helpful and constructive attitude towards their efforts at liberating the country, their opinions would probably change. If an agreement were reached between him and Dr. Subasic it would probably prove possible a little later for him to meet the King, as suggested by Mr. Churchill. After our conversation I dined with Tito and his staff in one of the caves. The dinner was simpler and a great deal better than the "gala" meal given us on the first day. I had twitted the Marshal on the lightness of the Partisan sentries' trigger fingers, with the result that after dinner he had me escorted back to Brigadier Maclean's headquarters by Major-General Velebit and a heavily armed guard.

20. By the evening of the 16th June Dr. Subasic had reached an agreement with Marshal Tito. This was signed the following day. I attach a copy of it to this report as Annex A. By this agreement the Marshal recognises the Royal Yugoslav Government, and the latter undertakes to recognise the provisional administration now established in the country as the executive organ of the Partisan movement. Both sides agree to co-ordinate their efforts and thus pave the way to the speedy establishment of a single representation of the State. The agreement provides for declarations by both Dr. Subasic and Marshal Tito. Important features of the agreement are, first, the improvement, to some extent, of the King's position by reason of the recognition of his Government by Marshal Tito, and, secondly, the fact that Marshal Tito's declaration will include an undertaking to postpone all political issues until after the war. In other words, that he will not attempt to use his position to impose communism on the country in general and on the Serbs in particular.

21. Dr. Subasic and Marshal Tito also agreed to issue a joint communiqué. I attach a copy hereto as Annex B. This communiqué is all that they intend to publish until the declarations provided for in the agreement are made.

22. The 17th June was passed in the discussion of certain practical questions by Dr. Subasic and Marshal Tito. As a result of this discussion it was decided that two members of the Partisan movement would accept portfolios in the Royal Yugoslav Government; that a functionary would be appointed to act as liaison officer between the National Committee of Liberation and the Royal Yugoslav Government; that all Yugoslav naval vessels, whether manned by Partisans or not, would fly the Royal Yugoslav flag; that Yugoslav soldiers who volunteered to fight the enemy under Partisan leadership should wear the Yugoslav cockade if they so wished instead of the Red Star; that Tito would be the supreme Commander-in-chief of Yugoslav naval, air and land forces, and, finally, that the National Committee of Liberation would raise no objection to the use by the Royal Yugoslav Government of the funds of the Yugoslav National Bank.

23. It was during this talk that Marshal Tito told Dr. Subasic that he was expecting at any moment the arrival at his headquarters of M. Kosutic. the vice-president of the Croat Peasant party. Marshal Tito assured Dr. Subasic that he fully intended to reach an agreement with M. Kosutic and was confident of being able to do so in a few hours. Marshal Tito also spoke of Dr. Macek, and—rather disingenuously, in view of his all-powerful position—gave Dr. Subasic to understand that he had not been in favour of the anti-Macek propaganda of the Partisan movement. He had added that if an agreement were reached with the Croat Peasant party through M. Kosutic, the situation in regard to Dr. Macek would probably change.

24. On the whole it may be said that the success of Dr. Subasic's negotiations surpassed expectations. His objects were—

(1) To restore as far as possible the position of King Peter and his Government;

(2) To make the Government more representative of the country;
(3) To unite the forces of resistance in Yugoslavia itself; and
(4) To remove the likelihood of widespread civil war in Yugoslavia after the liberation of the country.

The agreement reached with Tito goes some way towards attaining all these points, but it is, as Dr. Subasic and Marshal Tito both admit, only the first step towards their full attainment. It is a pity, perhaps, that it was not possible to arrange an immediate meeting between King Peter and Tito. But from Tito's general attitude on the matter, Dr. Subasic is confident that such a meeting can be brought about fairly soon, possibly on the occasion of the proposed conference between General Wilson and Marshal Tito (see paragraph 33 below). The main criticism of the agreement is that it does not seem to take sufficient account of the situation in Old Serbia. In this respect Dr. Subasic appears to have accepted the Partisan view of that situation. He therefore expects that the effect of the agreement, and particularly of the declarations provided for therein, to which will be added an appeal by the King himself, will be so to weaken Mihailovic's position that he ceases to count as an important factor, and will rally the Serbian people to take an active part in the struggle for liberation. In this connexion he intends to induce Marshal Tito to be more explicit in his declaration (article E of the agreement) in setting forth the aims of the Partisan movement, with a view to convincing the Serbs that no attempt will be made to impose a Communist régime on the country either now or hereafter.

25. Marshal Tito's estimate of the situation in Serbia may prove correct, but there is at least a substantial doubt whether the various declarations and appeals will effectively reach the ears of the people. The local means of dissemination of news are either in the hands of Mihailovic or of Nedic and the Germans, who will probably take the line that King Peter is a prisoner of the British and the Croats. Persistent dissemination of the declarations by the B.B.C. and repeated dropping of leaflets over a wide area may do something to enlighten the Serbs. I think that His Majesty's Government should do what they can to help in this direction and in framing their propaganda to Serbia so as to support Dr. Subasic's efforts. It will be necessary for the success of these efforts that Dr. Subasic should persuade one or more Serbs to participate in his new Government.

26. We were due to leave the island on the afternoon of the 18th June, but a sudden and severe rain storm rendered the landing strip unserviceable, and it became necessary to arrange for our transport by sea. This the naval authorities kindly undertook and we were able to leave by destroyer early the following morning. Before departure we were given a final "gala" luncheon by Marshal Tito. It was on the same culinary level as the "gala" dinner with which we were greeted.

27. During this luncheon I had a conversation with Marshal Tito in the course of which he referred to the number of women in the ranks of the Partisan forces. He told me that at one time in Montenegro the Partisan troops contained almost 40 per cent. of women. They made excellent soldiers, but their stamina was not quite equal to that of the men. They were extremely brave and their casualties were proportionately higher. The situation had gradually changed so that now there were not more than 12 per cent. of women throughout the Partisan fighting forces. These he was now withdrawing as quickly as possible and turning them into nurses, messengers, signallers, cypher staff, &c.

28. On the occasion of this luncheon Marshal Tito handed to me his reply to Mr. Winston Churchill's letter, of which I had been the bearer.

29. As a sequel to the luncheon Marshal Tito's guests were entertained by a choir of singers with singularly beautiful voices. Their songs were a great improvement on the doleful dirges which the rank and file of the Partisan movement seem to enjoy intoning. Of these latter a typical example is one which consists of five words repeated over and over again. A literal translation of it runs:—

"Greetings Partisans,
Greetings Commissars,
Greetings, greetings, greetings,
Greetings, greetings Comrades."

The effect of this ditty when sung over and over again for what seems to be hours on end is particularly depressing to the hearer.

30. On the return of our party to Bari Dr. Subasic again saw MM. Topalovic and Yancikovic. His conversation with the former seems to have been confined

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

to drawing his attention to the communiqué and politely cutting short any argument. Dr. Subuasic has no very high opinion of M. Topalovic and regards him, I gather, as a rather woolly individual. It is possible, however, that he may be useful later on. M. Yancikovic seems to have been pleased with the results of the discussions at Vis and particularly with the possibility of an agreement between the Partisans and the Croat Peasant Party.

31. The following morning, the 20th June, was taken up with a visit to the installations on the Adriatic coast occupied with the preparation and packing of material dropped by parachute into Yugoslavia. Dr. Subasic was deeply impressed by the scope of this work and particularly by the figures of successful drops during June. These were some 1,200 tons in the first 18 days. It was pointed out to him, however, that these successful results depended to a very great extent on the weather.

32. In the afternoon the Prime Minister's party arrived at Caserta, where King Peter was waiting. Dr. Subasic reported to him personally and after dinner I was received by His Majesty and discussed the agreement with him. He expressed himself as highly satisfied with the results of Dr. Subasic's efforts.

33. The next morning a meeting took place between Dr. Subasic, General Wilson, Admiral Cunningham, Air Marshal Slessor, Brigadier Maclean, Mr. Makins and myself. Dr. Subasic explained the agreement and a discussion followed, as a result of which it was decided that it would be necessary to arrange for a meeting in two or three weeks' time between General Wilson and Marshal Tito which Dr. Subasic would attend. In the course of this discussion Dr. Subasic made it clear how anxious both he and Marshal Tito were to have M.Ls. and M.G.Bs. for use among the islands off the Dalmatian coast. The Commander-in-chief Mediterranean pointed out that if it proved possible to provide such vessels these and the other naval forces would have to be under his operational command.

34. Later in the day the King and his two aides-de-camp, Dr. Subasic and I left for Rome by air, flying over the Cassino battlefield, which presents a picture of utter devastation. The Litorio airfield at which we arrived in Rome provided a good example of precision bombing by Allied air forces. The administrative buildings were almost completely destroyed, yet few houses in the neighbourhood were touched.

35. At the airfield His Majesty was met by Major-General Johnson of the United States army, the General Officer Commanding Allied troops in Rome. Luxurious accommodation was provided for the party in the Grand Hotel and most elaborate security precautions were taken.

36. In the evening King Peter, Dr. Subasic and I were entertained at dinner by General Alexander at his headquarters. The following day the King was supposed to have visited the battlefields and General Kesselring's secret headquarters, but His Majesty was unwell and the plan was dropped. In the afternoon he had a strictly private audience with His Holiness the Pope which appears to have gone very well. No mention of it was allowed to appear in the Roman press. The 23rd June, the last day of our visit, was passed by the King and the Prime Minister in a series of interviews with Yugoslavs formerly under detention by the Italians and now free in Rome. Mr. Myron Taylor was also in Rome that day and was entertained by King Peter at dinner.

37. The return journey from Rome passed without incident. The party returned to Naples in the morning of the 24th June and left there in a York aircraft at 3·45 p.m., arriving in the United Kingdom at 6·45 p.m., the 25th June.

Foreign Office, 30*th June*, 1944.

Annex A.

Text of Agreement between the Yugoslav Prime Minister and Marshal Tito, signed on the 17*th June.*

(Translation.)

A. The Yugoslav Government abroad must be composed of progressive democratic people who have not been compromised by taking part in the fight against the National Liberation Movement. The main task of this Government should be the organisation of Allied assistance to the National Liberation army and to all those who, in future, will fight with the same firm determination against the common enemy of our country, in order to unite all forces in a single national front. It will also be the duty of the Royal Government to organise the supply of food for the population of Yugoslavia, and to bring into accord the work of Yugoslavia's representation abroad and of the international organisations with the safeguarding of national rights, with the needs of the people and with the National Liberation Fight in the country.

B. The National Liberation Committee of Yugoslavia and the Royal Government of Dr. Subasic will establish organs for the co-ordination of their efforts in the fight against the enemy, in reconstruction work and in foreign policy; these organs should also pave the way to the speedy establishment of a single representation of the State.

C. The National Liberation Committee of Yugoslavia considers that, at the present moment, it is unnecessary to stress and to aggravate the problem of the King and the monarchy because, to-day, this question does not represent an obstacle to the collaboration between the National Liberation Committee of Yugoslavia and the Royal Government of Dr. Subasic, since both sides have accepted the principle that the peoples of Yugoslavia themselves shall, after the conclusion of the war, finally decide upon the organisation of the State.

D. The Royal Government of Dr. Subasic will issue a declaration in which they will—

(1) Recognise the national and democratic achievements won by the nations of Yugoslavia in the course of their three years' fight, which represent the basis of the democratic and federal organisation of our State community; and also recognise the provisional administration now established in the country as the executive organ of the Anti-Fascist Council of the National Liberation of Yugoslavia and the National Liberation Committee of Yugoslavia.

(2) Give full acknowledgment to the national fighting forces organised in the National Liberation Army under the command of the Marshal of Yugoslavia, Josip Broz-Tito; and definitely condemn all national traitors who have openly or secretly collaborated with the enemy.

(3) Call upon the whole people to unite all fighting forces with the National Liberation Army within a single front.

E. On the other hand, the Marshal of Yugoslavia, Josip Broz-Tito, will issue a declaration on the collaboration with the Royal Government, in his capacity as President of the National Liberation Committee of Yugoslavia, and will once more state that, for the duration of the war, the question of the final organisation of the State will not be discussed.

Annex B.

Communiqué.

The "New Yugoslav" news agency has been authorised to issue the statement: "From the 14th to the 17th June discussions have been going on in liberated territory of Yugoslavia between the President of the National Liberation Committee of Yugoslavia, Marshal Josip Broz-Tito, and the Prime Minister of the Royal Yugoslav Government, Dr. Subasic. Several members of the National Liberation Committee of Yugoslavia and of the Presidium of Anti-Fascist Council of National Liberation, Yugoslavia, took part in these discussions. These negotiations have been led from both sides in a spirit of mutual effort towards strengthening the liberation fight of the nations of Yugoslavia and with the aim of achieving broadest unity of the national forces. Agreement and mutual accord was reached regarding many questions. This will undoubtedly help to strengthen still further our relations with the Allies and help the peoples of Yugoslavia to liberate their country as speedily as possible."

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COPY C267770

THE SAVE THE CHILDREN FUND

Athens, September 6, 1945.

Dr. Singer, Vivian Imber and Louisa Stevens have started work at last in Yugoslavia. Dr. Singer wrote on August 8th:-

"We left with Denis Greenwood's team from Bari dock on August 4th. We had to leave our ambulance behind because it was too big for the ship's hold and we unloaded all the valuables on the dock and reloaded into a 30cwt, with Italians shouting and bouncing the morphia about, so that my heart just dropped. We actually lost nothing except some personally owned whisky and nothing got broken except a thermos! We are hoping that the ambulance will arrive eventually and preferably full of dried milk.

Dubrovnik was lovely after the burning heat of the Italian sirocco and we had two lovely days there during which we got our passes and bathed. We got extra help from the FAU stationed at Dubrovnik, and one of our trucks took much of our stuff which had had to go loose in the hold owing to the loss of the ambulance.

We came over with a jeep and 2 30cwt trucks---

We made Sarajevo in one day without any punctures or difficulties. It is a long and dusty journey, but such superb scenery that tiredness is not noticed. The roads mostly have a bad loose surface and there are some very stiff climbs, especially for our old heavily laden trucks. We brought with us a ton of dried milk which I arranged to get whilst I was in Belgrade. It was Yugoslav Red Cross milk and we loaded it at Bari---

Sarajevo is a fascinating place, full of mosques and narrow streets with steps. It is not really like Cairo at all, despite its Moslem population, partly because the architecture is different, including the type of mosques, partly because it is built on hills, but chiefly because it is clean. It has been bombed a fair bit, and windows are missing and walls have holes in them. It is such a beautiful setting, 1500 feet up in a valley surrounded by mountains. On our drive here we had the most lovely bathe in a river and washed off our dust and dirt and hope that tomorrow being Sunday, that we will be able to find another river near here. There is very little in the shops--food is scarce though apples (not good) and grapes and tomatoes are in season. In the UNRRA Villa Mendic we live in comfort (though I expect it will be bitterly cold in winter) and Mary Oxford has taken over the catering and cook and other domestic help has been got and generally we are more comfortable than we have been since we left home (barring the YWCA in Rome).

The day after we arrived we went to see Dr. Zec (Min. of Health) and arranged about our work. For the time being we are all three working at the Institute of Child Health - Louisa in the "milkbar" and Vivian and I in the clinic. We got down to work right away and our first day was i in the sick children's clinic and our second (to-day) in the ante-natal clinic, all part of the same building. The place is well equipped

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

though the refrigerator and the artificial sunlight lamps do not work. There are fine lecture and demonstration rooms for teaching mothers and nurses but they are not used as they lack the teaching personnel. For four years there has been only one doctor for all the maternity and child welfare work in this city of 106,000 people, now they have two more, one of them being me! We were greeted with genuine warmth and friendliness which went a long way helping us to plunge straight into work and we have a scheme of starting a new dispensary, all three of us together, as soon as we get into the way of working here and as soon as premises can be found. Living accomodation is very short as thousands of refugees poured into the city when the Ustashis swept over the surrounding villages and burned and destroyed everything. These people are still in Sarajevo (the refugees not the Ustashis) as they are quite homeless. Most of them are Moslems and all of them peasants, and now that Ramadan has started they are eating even less, if possible, than before. I have never seen so many severe rickets in one morning as I saw yesterday and there were many cases of children brought in who were just dying of starvation; nothing but a pot belly and skin and bone. The hospital is too full to take anything but acute cases.

Chronic cases of inanition just have to be left to die. In all six months in Italy, and I visited children's hospitals, I did not see so much malnutrition as I saw in one morning here. I would like people to know also that though Bosnia is bad there are areas in Yugoslavia which are worse and where people are living on leaves and grass, e. g. in the Lika. When you know that the community is at the starvation level, and when you find osteomalachia in pregnant women you are taken back to Austria 1918 and wonder for a moment whether all that science has done has not been in vain. Still, I really know that that is not so, and I am sure that we can do a good job of work, particularly when we have got hold of the language which in this area is the only stumbling block, for everyone is so pleased to have us and so helpful. This is in large part due to Barrett Brown who has got on excellently with all the Yugoslav authorities and is persona grata everywhere----"

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

THE COUNCIL OF CANADIAN SOUTH SLAVS---

319 Bay Street, Room 108,
Toronto 1, Ontario,
September 12th, 1945.

On August 30th the following news item was published by several daily newspapers (Toronto Daily Star, Toronto Evening Telegram, etc.):

> "Montreal, Aug. 30-(BUP)- Marshal Tito's insistence that the Yugoslav government control distribution has led to the suspension of relief work for that country by the Canadian Friends of Yugoslavia.
>
> "By unanimous decision, the organization of which W.M. Birks, Montreal, is chairman, decided to cease further purchases of goods until the situation is clarified, and referred the matter to the external affairs department in Ottawa.
>
> "Of a fund of $600,000 allocated for the purpose by the United Allied relief body, the Canadian Friends of Yugoslavia to date had bought $275,000 worth of goods. However, Tito insisted that the organization cede all control over the distribution of goods when they reach Yugoslavia, the body was informed."

The Council of Canadian South Slavs immediately issued a statement criticizing the Canadian Friends of Yugoslavia for the following reasons:

(1) The demand that the Yugoslav Government should cede its internationally recognized rights of relief distribution to an outside body is an attempt to interfere in the internal affairs of Yugoslavia;

(2) The Canadian Friends of Yugoslavia is recognized as an official relief agency and its action could effect the relations between Canada and Yugoslavia;

(3) Since some leading members of the Canadian Friends of Yugoslavia are connected with the reactionary anti-Tito elements in U.S.A,

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

who are carrying a most vicious campaign against the present Yugoslav Government, this suspension of relief shipments can be considered as a part of that campaign;

(4) The CFY, although in existence for four years, has not raised any funds or other kind of aid for Yugoslavia. It has refused co-operation with Canadian Yugoslavs, including the Council of Canadian South Slavs, whose members, during the past 15 months contributed nearly $300,000.00. This shows that the CFY has all along stood in the way of more effective aid to the Yugoslav people. Therefore, their present action can be looked upon as a continuation of their past policies.

The Council of Canadian South Slavs has demanded immediate government investigation. Pending such an investigation their charter should be suspended and all funds or goods at present under their control be turned over to the Canadian Red Cross for shipment to Yugoslavia.

On September 4th, after the protest of the Council was made public, leading members of the CFY issued a statement to The Gazette (Montreal), saying that suspension of shipments was made because of the high shipping charges. There is no reference to the original report. In view of this the Council of Canadian South Slavs sent a letter to the Honorary Chairman, W.M. Birks, and Deputy Chairman, O.W. Rodomar, of the CFY requesting the following information:

Did CFY officially issue a statement to the BUP to the effect that shipment was suspended because they did not want the Yugoslav Government to control the distribution? If not, was such a statement given to the news agency by some member of the Executive without the knowledge of the organization as a whole, since a member of the Executive is also director of the BUP? If such a statement was not given officially or by any member of the Executive have any steps been taken to investigate why the BUP released such a report to the press? If not, is any investigation being contemplated?

So far no reply has been received to our letter.

We consider that not only the Council of Canadian South Slavs, but also the general Canadian public is entitled to an answer to these questions. Because if it is not true that shipment of relief to Yugoslavia was suspended for political purposes then somebody was indulging in vicious anti-Tito, anti-Yugoslav propaganda, and the Canadians should know who and why.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267773

COUNCIL OF CANADIAN SOUTH SLAVS

319 Bay Street, Rm. 108,
Toronto 1, Ontario.
August 31st, 1945.

Statement of the Executive Committee of the Council of Canadian South Slavs concerning suspension of relief to Yugoslavia by the Canadian Friends of Yugoslavia.

The Council of Canadian South Slavs, an organization composed of Yugoslavs who are now Canadian citizens, takes issue with the Canadian Friends of Yugoslavia, Montreal, in their determination to withold $600,000.00 aid from the starving people of Yugoslavia. Their action is unjustified and the basis for it unsound. The Tito Government is the proper agent to supervise the distribution of this aid. This is the method adopted in other countires. Why should there be an exception in Yugoslavia?

The Council of Canadian South Slavs has thus far witheld criticism of the Montreal organization, but we now feel that a complete statement of the inner features in the case should be made to the people of Canada.

The Canadian Friends of Yugoslavia are in close connection with the reactionary, anti-Tito, elements in U.S.A. These elements have at their head the notorious pro-fascist Constantine Fotich, former Yugoslav ambassador to the United States. They are carrying a vicious campaign against Yugoslavia. Fotich organized the American Friends of Yugoslavia whose activities were directed to aid the traitor Mihailovich, The Canadian Friends of Yugoslavia is a duplicate of the Fotich crowd and is under his beneficial influence. Several of the officials of Canadian Friends of Yugoslavia are known as reactionaries in their sympathies. Professor Watson Kirkconnell, one of its members, has publicly attacked Marshal Tito in his speeches and writings. Vice-chairman Radomar is a former Russian White Guard, a devotee of the czar.

During five years of its existence the Canadian Friends of Yugoslavia has not raised one cent to aid the people of Yugoslavia. The

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

funds they are now trying to use to aid the Yugoslav reactionaries in theircampaign against Yugoslavia were contributed last March by the Canadian people for the purpose of relief during the campaign of the Canadian Red Cross Society and the Canadian United Relief Fund, and were given to the Canadian Friends of Yugoslavia because they are the only officially recognized body for relief to Yugoslavia. This was a grave error.

The Canadian Friends of Yugoslavia has consistently refused co-operation with the various organizations of the Canadian Yugoslavs, whose interests in helping their brothers in Yugoslavia can best be illustrated by the fact that, although only numbering 20,000, they have, during the last year, contributed through the Council of Canadian South Slavs, $300,000.00 in cash. There is not today one organization or individual of the Yugoslav origin in Canada associated with the Canadian Friends of Yugoslavia.

The Council of the Canadian South Slavs with the help and co-operation of the Canadian Red Cross Society has sent nearly 600 tons of food, clothing, drugs and other supplies, and also $130,000.00 in cash to the representative of the Yugoslav Red Cross in London. We are determined to continue with this work in spite of all obstacles placed in our way by the Canadian Friends of Yugoslavia.

We demand that the Canadian Government make full investigation into this action and all past activities of the Canadian Friends of Yugoslavia, and also that the unspent portion of the $600,000.00, as well as goods bought but not shipped, be turned over to the Canadian Red Cross for immediate shipment to the Yugoslav Red Cross.

The people of Yugoslavia urgently need aid. In the struggle for their liberation, and to save mankind from fascist slavery nearly 2,000,000 of her best sons and daughters have given their lives. We hope that all real friends of Yugoslavia will join us in asking the Canadian Government that relief be sent immediately, and that the so-called "friends" of Yugoslavia be stopped from using it for the purposes of political blackmail.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267775

THIS DOCUMENT IS THE PROPERTY OF HIS BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT

BALKAN STATES. January 24, 1946.

SECRET. SECTION 2.

Refer to P.M. (first part) June

[R 1226/65/92] Copy No. 068

Mr. Stevenson to Mr. Bevin.—(Received 24th January.)

(No. 5. Secret.)

Sir, Belgrade, 7th January, 1946.

AS suggested in Sir O. Sargent's letter of the 24th November, 1945, I have the honour to submit to you the accompanying report on Yugoslavia. It is as comprehensive and as nearly up to date as is possible in the circumstances. I am particularly indebted to Mr. F. W. Deakin, first secretary, and Messrs. J. P. E. C. Henniker-Major and D. Haldane-Porter, second secretaries, for their work in preparing this report, which, as you will observe, consists of a general memorandum and a number of annexures dealing more fully with specific subjects.

2. The report is of necessity a long one and it may therefore be convenient if I set forth as briefly as possible the conclusions to be drawn from it. They are, in my view, as follows :—

(i) Yugoslavia is, in fact, if not in name, a one-party State, built on the foundation of a national liberation movement. In it the Communist party has gained a monopoly of leadership and control. Under this leadership the régime still has the drive and enthusiasm which made the liberation movement a success. The régime is still free from the corruption which seemed to be endemic in pre-war régimes, and it should be given full credit for the efforts it has made towards reconstructing and rehabilitating the country. It is clear that there is at present no possible alternative régime.

(ii) There are no signs as yet that the leaders are prepared to contemplate the establishment of an independent Opposition within the framework of the new State.

(iii) Every agency at the disposal of the régime is being used to bring up a new generation moulded on Communist lines. Every effort will be made to survive the transitional period until this carefully conditioned generation can take over.

(iv) The façade of unity and strength, of which so much is made by the National Front, is in some respects misleading. The long-term programme of the régime is meeting with varying resistance not only from the much-abused "social opposition," but from the Catholic Church and certain sections of the peasantry. It is by no means clear whether the Communist minority will be able to retain the monopoly of power which at the moment is theirs, but at the same time it is impossible as yet to judge what form and significance the traditionally anti-Government and anti-centralisation forces in Yugoslavia may have.

(v) In the last resort the strength of the régime rests on the prestige of the resistance tradition as largely embodied in the army. The cadre of the army is Communist, but the political training of that cadre is hurried and superficial and the rank and file are peasants.

(vi) The workers of the towns are being schooled for the task of providing a safe Communist élite, but they are not sufficiently numerous to defend the achievements of the revolution against peasant resistance. The Russian parallel does not fit.

(vii) The work of U.N.R.R.A. in Yugoslavia has had a decisive influence in the shaping of the new Yugoslav society. It has given the régime control of the machinery of agricultural production and, through industrial rehabilitation, control also of the future industrial organisation of the country. The use of the co-operatives to distribute U.N.R.R.A. goods has enabled the régime to secure a firm grip on the co-operative movement. As was in fact inherent in the mere existence of U.N.R.R.A., it has had the inevitable effect of giving the régime the necessary breathing-space not only to make more secure its hold on the country but to further very substantially its ideological aims.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

(viii) There is no doubt whatever that the régime is proceeding as fast as its limited capacity and lack of trained and reliable officials permit in the direction of an orthodox Communist society. How fast and how far it will be able to go in this direction depends to a considerable extent on the reaction of the elements and forces mentioned in (iv) above. But even if the nationalisation of industry is virtually completed and if the fundamental step of collectivisation of the land is eventually achieved, the stability of the State in its present form is not assured. The country is not self-sufficient and it cannot do without foreign assistance, not only for the work of reconstruction, but in the future development of its natural resources. The vital decision on what form, if any, economic relations with the Western democracies will take has not yet been made.

3. A further aspect of the régime, which has not been brought out in the attached memorandum as it does not strictly fall within the limits of the ground covered therein, is the marked anti-British attitude maintained by Yugoslav officialdom. Public expression of this attitude is referred to in Annexure C dealing with the Yugoslav press, where it is shown that no opportunity is lost of decrying anything British or American and of showing Great Britain and the United States in the worst possible light. Of recent weeks this habit has been exercised to a marked extent against Great Britain alone. So obvious has been this campaign that more than one of my foreign diplomatic colleagues have questioned me on the reasons for it. I have been unable to enlighten them as I have never succeeded in eliciting any satisfactory explanation from the leaders of the régime, who never fail to assure me that their dearest wish is to improve relations between Yugoslavia and Great Britain. In view of the rigid control over all forms of publicity exercised by the régime, there can be no shadow of doubt that the constant attacks on us are carried out in obedience to directions from some central authority. But it is not only in the press that an anti-British attitude is manifest; the lectures given to the army by the political commissars, the speeches at local political meetings and the teaching in the schools abound with instances, both overt and covert, of hostility to Great Britain. All means of political instruction, whether by press, radio or the spoken word, are the peculiar province of the Communist party, and I can only assume that it is the Central Committee of that party that is responsible for the directions on which this campaign is based.

4. Although many, if not most, of the individual leaders of the régime are correct and even friendly in their personal relations with me and my staff, and although the mass of the people remain as always very well disposed towards us, the atmosphere in which we have to work is not altogether agreeable. The deliberate ignoring by the "party" propagandists of anything we may have done to help Yugoslavia either before or since her liberation together with the calculated belittling of any help which it is impossible to hide, are often translated on the middle and lower levels of officialdom into petty and exasperating obstructionism.

5. It is difficult for me to contrast, as Sir O. Sargent suggests, the circumstances prevailing in Yugoslavia and Greece as I am not sufficiently familiar with the latter. It is nevertheless clear that Yugoslavia enjoys certain advantages of a practical nature over Greece, which should tend to make her initial recovery more rapid. In the first place Yugoslavia's natural resources are much greater and she has a larger supply of man-power at her disposal, not only owing to her greater population but owing to the presence in the country of considerable numbers of German and Italian prisoners of war, not to mention her own political prisoners. In the second place a strong and ruthless central Government in Yugoslavia makes up by its relative effectiveness for its lack of popularity. It has the fervid support of a minority and the acquiescence of the majority of the people because there is no alternative régime capable of dealing with the problems confronting the country. It still has the prestige of a successful liberation movement and is unhampered by any democratic scruples or bourgeois prejudices in favour of individual rights. These are very solid advantages over a naturally poorer country like Greece where the resistance movement was comparatively weak and where since the liberation of the country we have felt bound to insist on the rights and liberties of the individual being respected.

6. It is perhaps inevitable that our policy in Greece should appear to be based on the expectation that the people will act as if they were civically mature and capable of individual and collective self-discipline. As a long term policy this may well be the right one as being likely eventually to foster the growth of

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

these virtues but it cannot be expectd to show quick results. The rulers of this country, basing themselves on the experience and example of the Soviet Union, evidently consider that they cannot afford to spend time in encouraging the growth of civic virtues and that the interests of the country will best be served by enforcing discipline on all and sundry. At the risk of being platitudinous, I would say that in the war-torn countries of Europe the moral is " no quick recovery without strict discipline."

7. I am sending copies of this despatch to His Majesty's Ambassadors at Washington, Moscow, Paris, Rome, Athens, Prague, Warsaw, to His Majesty's political representatives at Sofia, Bucharest, Budapest, Vienna and to Mr. Broad at Caserta.

I have, &c.
R. C. SKRINE STEVENSON.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267778 Y/S

THIS DOCUMENT IS THE PROPERTY OF HIS BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT

[R 2972/406/92] Copy No. 668a

Mr. Stevenson to Mr. Bevin.—(Received 25th February.)

(No. 38.)

Sir, Belgrade, 5th February, 1946.

I HAVE the honour to enclose herein a record of an interesting and useful conversation which Mr. F. W. Deakin, D.S.O., first secretary at this embassy, had with Marshal Tito on the 30th January.

2. Mr. Deakin, who, as you are aware, is shortly leaving this post, spoke well and it is good that Marshal Tito should have heard at first hand of the disappointment and disillusionment of one whom he knows from personal experience to be an old friend and admirer of the original partisan movement. In this connexion I draw your particular attention to the ante-penultimate paragraph of Mr. Deakin's record. I am convinced that Marshal Tito was not merely speaking for effect when he stressed the difficulty which he is having with his own people, the Communist party. I am sure that he, personally, and some, at any rate, of his collaborators, really are anxious to improve relations with Great Britain. The general attitude of the Communist party here, however, appears to be based on what they judge, from the propaganda issued from Moscow, to be the attitude of the Soviet Union toward Great Britain. This, as I have indicated in other despatches from this post, is translated on the official level into obstruction and scarcely veiled hostility.

3. A further point of interest to which I draw your attention is the passage dealing with the relations between the Yugoslav Government and the Catholic Church. The press has of late been conducting a regular campaign against the Catholic Church in general and Archbishop Stepinac in particular, and has been making the most of the discovery of gold and jewellery buried by the Ustashi within the precincts of the archbishop's palace at Zagreb.

I have, &c.

R. C. SKRINE STEVENSON.

Enclosure.

I CALLED on Marshal Tito this morning to take leave of him and stayed to lunch. We had about an hour's conversation. There was no one else present.

We talked at first exclusively about the military past and about common experiences of the days of fighting in 1943. It was not for some time that I had an opportunity to turn the conversation on to the points which I wished to make clear to him before my departure. He even gave the definite impression that he preferred to keep the conversation on to non-controversial subjects mostly relating to the past. At one stage, however, he asked me about the whereabouts of a Canadian of Yugoslav origin who accompanied me on the original mission to Yugoslavia. I replied that the man in question had been in prison in Split for three months and had only just been released last week. Upon this he jumped to his feet and asked why I had not previously informed him direct of this case. I explained that I could produce some twenty cases weekly of a similar nature for his personal inspection if he so wished, but that I had tried to deal with these matters through routine channels, and this particular instance had, in fact, already been settled.

Having been given this opening, I then suggested that as I was leaving the country for good I would like to talk to him on an open and unofficial basis without regard either to his present position or my own.

For about twenty minutes I attempted to enforce the following points :—

(1) Most of the officers who came here in the early days to establish contact with the Yugoslav partisans and who had returned since the liberation of the country were not impressed by the way in which the general

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

situation in Yugoslavia had developed. This was not only a question of personal disillusionment but a feeling that the Yugoslavs had produced no concrete signs of goodwill or of a desire to promote good relations with Great Britain. I personally was going back with a most adverse impression of the state of affairs in Yugoslavia in so far as the British were concerned.

(2) At first, speaking for myself, I was prepared to believe that the difficulties which have been experienced by the British Embassy in Belgrade in their relations with the Yugoslav authorities were largely due to an inefficient Yugoslav Administration and a lack of trained personnel. I was, however, now quite convinced that most of the troubles were due to a planned and deliberate campaign organised within the party machinery of the régime to denigrate the British on every possible occasion, and that while I was sure that the senior leaders and the common peasants or workmen were quite willing to be friendly and accommodating to the British, I was sure the deliberate anti-British propaganda was being put out among the members of official Yugoslav organisations and ministries. If necessary, I was prepared to cite concrete examples.

(3) There were so many cases of ill-will and obstruction on the official level that I could only quote a few, such as the refusal to replace essential technical staff for the Royal Air Force at Zemun Airport maintaining operation of the courier service to Italy, the restrictions placed on the movements of our consuls, the fantastic behaviour of O.Z.N.A. in the event of a journey by any British or Dominions soldier of Yugoslav origin on leave in this country, the daily hostility of the petty Yugoslav official to any request from the British authorities.

Marshal Tito replied that he was fully aware that relations between our two countries left much to be desired, but he could only assure me that as far as he personally was concerned he had always stressed the need for a closer understanding. I interjected that this was, unfortunately, not sufficient and that unless he was prepared to issue a clear and categorical directive to all subordinate ministries and agencies that in future Great Britain should not be regarded as "the enemy," I saw little hope for any improvement, and I repeated that, anyway, so far as I was concerned, I was convinced that the anti-British campaign was deliberate and organised.

Among general subjects which arose in the conversation, Marshal Tito stressed particularly the question of relations between the Yugoslav State and the Catholic Church. He complained that in May he had seen Archbishop Stepinac and had made a definite and concrete offer upon the basis of which a reasonable arrangement with the Catholic Church could have been reached. Archbishop Stepinac, however, failed to follow this up and had maintained a consistent attitude of hostility and obstruction to the Government. In fact, only yesterday a cache of gold, including jewellery, gold teeth and precious stones, had been unearthed within the precincts of the archbishop's palace at Zagreb. This cache had presumably been buried by the Ustashi before their departure. In any case he, Marshal Tito, was fully convinced of the complicity of Archbishop Stepinac with the Pavelić Government. I asked him whether it would not be simpler to enter into direct negotiations for a concordat with the Vatican, and he replied that recently he had summoned the Yugoslav Chargé d'Affaires at the Vatican, M. Moscatello, and had charged him with the task of attempting to prepare the way for such talks. So far he had received no concrete reply to this démarche. He understood, however, that the former apostolic vicar in Zagreb, Mgr. Marconi, was about to return there. He had had previous conversations with him in Zagreb in May last and he hoped to renew these conversations now. I asked him about the arrival of the papal nuncio from America, Mgr. Hurley, and he told me that the latter had reached Zagreb yesterday but that he had little hopes of reaching any satisfactory agreement with an American on Church matters in Yugoslavia as it was unlikely that such a person would have any knowledge of the existing situation. I pointed out that Mgr. Hurley in the States was regarded as a "Liberal" and that even if such a term in Yugoslavia were considered reactionary I considered that possibly an outsider fresh to the Yugoslav scene might well be an appropriate person with whom to discuss the whole matter frankly.

The conversation also turned on to the question of Anglo-Yugoslav trade talks. The Marshal said that he was told by his Minister of Trade that the Yugoslav trade delegation was leaving in a few days for London and that a mixed

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

commission to discuss British property in Yugoslavia was on its way here. I asked him whether he realised that prior to the setting up of any mixed commission His Majesty's Government had insisted on the inspection of properties here by representatives of the firms concerned. I also pointed out that, in spite of his own assurance to His Majesty's Ambassador two weeks ago, the embassy had still not received any of the entry permits for these representatives. The Marshal was clearly not aware either of the conditions stated by His Majesty's Government or of the delay in granting these permits. He was undoubtedly annoyed and made a written note of what I had just said. It is quite clear to me that the Yugoslav Ministries interested in this subject have deliberately misled Marshal Tito and will avoid co-operating with us if they possibly can do so.

As a general impression, I would say that Marshal Tito is harassed and unsure of the turn which events are now taking. He stressed the fact that he was having considerable trouble with his own people and that they lacked balance and experience. He indicated that he was having great difficulty in making them work together, particularly in the sphere of foreign relations. He could only emphasise that as far as he personally was concerned he would make every effort to see that relations with Great Britain were improved.

We later had luncheon, when only his son and two aides-de-camp were present.

On taking leave of him he remarked that he hoped I was not leaving the country with too bad an impression. I replied that I had two quite distinct sets of impressions: those of a liaison officer and those of a diplomat. The former I would always respect and remember, the latter I preferred to forget.

F. W. DEAKIN.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267781 Y/S

THIS DOCUMENT IS THE PROPERTY OF HIS BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT

[R 3697/196/92] Copy No. 668

Mr. Bevin to Mr. Stevenson (Belgrade).

(No. 285.)

Sir, Foreign Office, 6th March, 1946.

THE Yugoslav Minister of Foreign Trade, M. Petrović, called on me on the 6th March, accompanied by the Yugoslav Ambassador and by the head of the British Section of the Yugoslav Ministry for Foreign Affairs.

2. In reply to my enquiry about the progress of the trade discussions, M. Petrović said that difficulties had arisen, particularly in connexion with the shipping hire and insurance monies held by the Ministry of War Transport and with the Yugoslav assets blocked by the Custodian of Enemy Property. He said that these sums, which amounted in all to over £3 million, were of great importance to Yugoslavia in her present economic state, and that the Yugoslav war debts to this country, for which we claimed £1,500,000, were more than Yugoslavia could afford to pay. I promised to look into this matter and to see if there was anything I could do to help.

3. I raised with M. Petrović the question of British property in Yugoslavia, and in particular the facilities required by representatives of Trepca Mines and other British firms to inspect their properties before the Mixed Commission met in Belgrade to discuss their return. M. Petrović said that he thought matters would go more smoothly if the Mixed Commission could meet at once in Belgrade before the properties were inspected. After it had met formally, the British representatives would be given the necessary facilities to inspect their properties and they would then return to discuss the terms on which the properties should be handed back. I promised to consider this suggestion.

4. I protested vigorously against the attitude of the Yugoslav press to this country and asked why Great Britain should be singled out for abuse. In particular I mentioned caricatures of British troops which had been published and which bore an astonishing resemblance to German cartoons of the war period. M. Petrović said that this whole question ultimately depended on the settlement of Yugoslav frontier claims in Venezia Giulia. I replied that I had not expressed any opinion on the validity of these claims. I had heard the evidence from both sides and I was awaiting the report from the commission which had just left for Trieste. All I wanted to know was whether Yugoslavia wished to be friendly with this country or not. This country had a Socialist Government which had done nothing to deserve such abuse as was being thrown at it, and I could not pass over these press attacks in silence. M. Petrović said that he would draw the attention of his Government to my feelings, but that he was convinced Yugoslavia wished to be on friendly terms with this country, and, indeed, would be very short-sighted if she did not.

5. I mentioned the recent Yugoslav troop movement in Venezia Giulia, which, according to my information, included the arrival of six new divisions. I repeated that the commission had only gone out to Trieste to attempt to reach a fair solution of the problems involved, and said that we did not like to be treated with suspicion in this way. I also mentioned the Yugoslav Ambassador's note about the alleged flight of British aircraft over Venezia Giulia, and said that I would let his Excellency have a reply as soon as I could ascertain the facts.

6. I next referred to the navigation of the Danube and suggested that the opening of the river for international trade, which I had already suggested to Marshal Stalin, would be to the advantage of the riparian States and, indeed, of the whole world. I had no ulterior motive in making this suggestion; my only purpose was to get goods moving and to free international trade. I had recently helped to re-establish the International Commission on the Rhine, where things appeared to be going very well, and I had also tried to help the Czechs to open the Elbe. Similar treatment of the Danube would raise the standard of life of all concerned and would be an admirable contribution to getting rid of the effects of war in that part of the world. M. Petrović agreed about the importance of this matter. He said he had no instructions on the subject, but he would raise

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

it with his Government. Meanwhile, however, he would like to mention that there were 200 Yugoslav barges held on the Danube in the American Zone of Austria. I said that I knew about this and had already spoken to Mr. Byrnes on the subject in Moscow. I would see whether there was anything further I could do to help the Yugoslav Government in this matter, and, meanwhile, I hoped that they would assist my endeavours to open up the Danube to all concerned.

7. Lastly, I turned to the subject of civil aviation. I explained that the progress of demobilisation meant that Transport Command would soon disappear and that the negotiation of a peace treaty with Italy would mean the removal of the Royal Air Force base at Bari. In these circumstances His Majesty's Government were anxious to put civil aviation on to a civilian basis, which would be better both for commerce and for confidence. I was not asking for unilateral favours. We should be prepared to accept a reciprocal service from Yugoslavia and, if the Yugoslav Government so wished, we might be able to help them to procure the necessary aircraft. I hoped that it would be possible to undertake early discussions in Belgrade about a reciprocal commercial service and that the Yugoslav Government would consider our proposals in the perfectly frank spirit in which they were put forward. M. Petrović promised to report what I had said to his Government.

8. The discussion was throughout on a friendly basis and M. Petrović appeared to sympathise with many of the arguments which I put forward. I emphasised that my only interest in this matter was to enable both countries to contribute to the improvement of each other's standards of life, and to establish, through mutually profitable trade, the good relations which were traditional between our two countries.

9. I am sending copies of this despatch to His Majesty's Ambassadors at Washington, Moscow and Rome, and to the political representative at Vienna.

I am, &c.

ERNEST BEVIN.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267782

it with his Government. Meanwhile, however, he would like to mention that there were 200 Yugoslav barges held on the Danube in the American Zone of Austria. I said that I knew about this and had already spoken to Mr. Byrnes on the subject in Moscow. I would see whether there was anything further I could do to help the Yugoslav Government in this matter, and, meanwhile, I hoped that they would assist my endeavours to open up the Danube to all concerned.

7. Lastly, I turned to the subject of civil aviation. I explained that the progress of demobilisation meant that Transport Command would soon disappear and that the negotiation of a peace treaty with Italy would mean the removal of the Royal Air Force base at Bari. In these circumstances His Majesty's Government were anxious to put civil aviation on to a civilian basis, which would be better both for commerce and for confidence. I was not asking for unilateral favours. We should be prepared to accept a reciprocal service from Yugoslavia and, if the Yugoslav Government so wished, we might be able to help them to procure the necessary aircraft. I hoped that it would be possible to undertake early discussions in Belgrade about a reciprocal commercial service and that the Yugoslav Government would consider our proposals in the perfectly frank spirit in which they were put forward. M. Petrović promised to report what I had said to his Government.

8. The discussion was throughout on a friendly basis and M. Petrović appeared to sympathise with many of the arguments which I put forward. I emphasised that my only interest in this matter was to enable both countries to contribute to the improvement of each other's standards of life, and to establish, through mutually profitable trade, the good relations which were traditional between our two countries.

9. I am sending copies of this despatch to His Majesty's Ambassadors at Washington, Moscow and Rome, and to the political representative at Vienna.

I am, &c.

ERNEST BEVIN.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267783 Y/S

THIS DOCUMENT IS THE PROPERTY OF HIS BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT

[R 5578/58/92] Copy No. 068a

Mr. Stevenson to Mr. Hayter.—(Received 10th April.)

My dear Hayter, Belgrade, 2nd April, 1946.

THE capture at long last of Mihailović is for Balkan amateurs something of a landmark and as we both may possibly be regarded as falling within this category of persons, you may be interested to read the lucubrations that follow.

An immense number of extremely good stories have been circulating through Belgrade about how he was captured. One of the best is that the Yugoslavs gathered together a number of jeeps, painted them with the British colours, manned them with Ozna agents dressed up in British battle dress, and pretended to be an Allied expeditionary force coming to rescue Yugoslavia from Tito's tyranny. Mihailović is said to have fallen for the ruse and come out of his cave to meet the liberators of his country. Another similar story is that Ozna agents dressed up in British battle dress descended by parachute and captured him in a somewhat similar fashion. A third story is that his courier service was penetrated and he was asked to meet the British and American Ambassadors to arrange a meeting with Tito who was alleged to be ready to come to terms with him for a broadening of the régime. Mihailović fell into the trap and came to the rendezvous where he met two Ozna agents dressed up as myself and Patterson in immaculate western morning dress!

What, however, seems to be the likely story is as follows. Some time ago eleven Ozna agents were detailed to capture Mihailović dead or alive. They proceeded to Raška in the Sandjak where they succeeded in capturing one of Mihailović's commanders, Colonel Kalabić. They took him back to Belgrade and put him through the third degrée with the result that he agreed to betray his leader (some confirmation is given to this part of the story by the fact that since Kalabić's capture, some five weeks ago, we received reports that he had betrayed Draža). Two of the Ozna agents, together with Kalabić, then returned to the Sandjak disguised as Četniks and Kalabić led the two to the cave where Mihailović was living with eleven followers. They received a warm welcome but at some stage in the proceedings when they were all together in the cave a carefully staged coup de main took place. One of the agents let loose with his tommy gun and shot all eleven of the Četniks and Kalabić as well, while the second Ozna man threw himself on Mihailović and handcuffed him. Mihailović was then taken to Belgrade. This story has reached us in the present version from a source who is believed to be reliable. What is fundamentally the same story, only the place of capture and other details are different, has, however, also reached us from an entirely different source.

A certain mystery still, however, hangs round Mihailović's capture and must continue to do so until we hear the official account. For one thing there is the extraordinary delay between his capture on the 13th March and its announcement by Ranković on the 24th March. Presumably Tito, who had left Belgrade on the 12th for Warsaw, had to be consulted. But I strongly suspect that the Yugoslavs also felt it incumbent on them to ask Moscow what they should do. Moscow presumably replied that they should try him as a traitor. If they did so my own opinion, as you will see later, is that they made a profound mistake and that it would have been far better for the régime if the Government had been able to announce that he had been killed while running away to evade capture and then have paraded his corpse through the streets of Belgrade. The alternative of liquidating him and saying nothing about it would obviously have been dangerous for Mihailović might then have become a second Barbarossa. If I am right in assuming that the Russians gave this bad advice I have no doubt that they assumed that a trial of this nature would be useful internal propaganda for the budding Communist régime. I am not sure, however, that the Russians know half as much as they think they do about the Balkans.

I do not think anyone can claim that Mihailović was ever a great man. Those who knew him in Sofia when he was assistant military attaché, and Hudson who

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

knew him in the mountains, all agree that he was a plain simple soldier with very little ambition. He was a typical old-fashioned Serb with narrow views and certainly not what it might be imagined a great leader would be. On the other hand, by a set of fortuitous circumstances, he has twice been made a figure of legendary greatness quite out of relation to his own intrinsic personal or military importance. When he first took to the hills in 1941 and became Minister of War in the Royal Yugoslav Government he was by dint of our own and the Yugoslav Government's propaganda turned into a romantic and important figure. When he was dropped by the Allies, this legend was exploded but he did not relapse into obscurity because, equally erroneously, he was turned into another form of legend by the partisans. He became instead of a legendary hero, a legendary monster symbolising reaction, tyranny and Serb particularism. In such guise he proved very useful to the present régime for his continued liberty was the excuse for a number of oppressive measures against political opponents and his fictitious troops were the excuse for the maintenance of a standing army of quite unnecessary size, but essential to establish the Communist régime in Yugoslavia.

The announcement of his capture with only eleven followers has once again exploded this legend. His disappearance from the scene will, however, do something else which perhaps the régime do not yet realise. For one thing it may make the Opposition a little more self-reliant. They will cease to look for and expect a deus ex machina who, with foreign aid, will suddenly come to liberate Yugoslavia each year " when the leaves come on the trees." The number of people who thought that Mihailović might still stage a coup was really quite preposterously high and so long as such a state of mind prevailed in Opposition circles, opposition to the régime could never be effective. Now the Opposition will have to look among their own ranks to find their saviour. Furthermore, Mihailović personally was, in my opinion, a definite obstacle to the formation of an effective Opposition in this country. He was much too much of a particularist and a pan-Serb to become a national leader who would win the whole-hearted loyalty of all parts of the country. He was also, as we knew from the past, completely hopeless as a politician.

On the other hand, I am not so sure that this man, once he is dead, may not become for the third time a legend and that dead he will be what he never was when alive, a great man. If there is any spark of greatness in him and he is really brought to trial, the opportunity before him is immense. He can plead that throughout the war he opposed all usurpers in Yugoslavia; how he fought them was his business as the legally appointed commander-in-chief. If he was passive towards the Germans, that was because he knew that they would be beaten and that far worse than a German invader was the native tyrant, the Ustaš or the partisan. The danger he had to guard against was that while he was fighting the Germans the partisans would stab him in the back. He had never believed in the so-called democratic declarations of the partisans and he always knew that they would try to impose the alien tyranny of communism on Yugoslavia and that Tito was not really interested in expelling a German tyrant except in order to impose his own tyranny. All Yugoslava could now witness that he was right. He could then declare that he would die as a martyr for a free Yugoslavia.

Whether or not Mihailović will take this line or whether he will just denounce Tito as a scoundrelly Croat remains to be seen. Nor do I know whether the Yugoslav authorities will give him a chance to say anything at all. With American intervention on his behalf and the world interest which his trial will probably arouse it will be very difficult for the Yugoslav authorities not to allow him to have some sort of say. At this stage, moreover, it will be difficult for them to arrange a suicide and even if they decide to do so, coming as it would on top of Nedić's suicide, it might be as equally unfortunate as the potential risks of a trial.

The idea of the martyr Mihailović is, however, already taking shape and General Simović, for instance, now speaks of him in private conversation in language so extravagant that he might be talking of Christ. The authorities have themselves inadvertently by their own actions helped in the creation of this new legend. I enclose copies of photographs(1) which have been published of Mihailović in prison. Two are just rather pathetic pictures of a dignified prisoner. The third, which appeared in Politika (and I cannot understand how the authorities ever released it) has, however, impressed everyone who has seen it. You will notice that it is half-face and the whole pose is the traditional one of (1) Not reproduced.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

the Man of Sorrows, i.e., the mocking and crowning with thorns. As regards the effect it has had on people, I might only mention that the servant girl of one of the members of the United States Embassy (a Slovene incidentally) happened to see it and was so overcome with emotion that she was unable any longer to wait at table. The Yugoslav Ministry of Information have, however, now ceased to distribute it.

Powerful as legends have been in history, and they have often been among the most powerful factors, they require a man to exploit them. Thus, though Mihailović may for the third time turn himself into a legend, he will only be a legend affecting the history of Yugoslavia if there is some man or some body of men inside or outside the country to whom the legend is revealed and who know how to use it. He or they are not yet known to me.

Yours, &c.

RALPH SKRINE STEVENSON.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

the Man of Sorrows, i.e., the mocking and crowning with thorns. As regards the effect it has had on people, I might only mention that the servant girl of one of the members of the United States Embassy (a Slovene incidentally) happened to see it and was so overcome with emotion that she was unable any longer to wait at table. The Yugoslav Ministry of Information have, however, now ceased to distribute it.

Powerful as legends have been in history, and they have often been among the most powerful factors, they require a man to exploit them. Thus, though Mihailović may for the third time turn himself into a legend, he will only be a legend affecting the history of Yugoslavia if there is some man or some body of men inside or outside the country to whom the legend is revealed and who know how to use it. He or they are not yet known to me.

Yours, &c.

RALPH SKRINE STEVENSON.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267786 Y/S

THIS DOCUMENT IS THE PROPERTY OF HIS BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT

[R 8377/4775/92] Copy No. 638a

Mr. Clutton to Mr. Bevin.—(Received 5th June.)

(No. 155. Secret.)

Sir, Belgrade, 28th April, 1946.

WITH reference to Sir R. Stevenson's despatch No. 88 of the 14th March, I have the honour to transmit herewith a copy of the Ljubljana Political Report for the month of March.(1)

2. As you are aware, the source from which section A of this report comes is considered to be a good one, and while M. Kidrič does not himself appear to carry much weight in the party hierarchy, he would presumably be speaking from a central directive on an occasion such as that on which his speech was made. Section A, therefore, seems to be a fairly authoritative account of Communist policy as expounded to the middle levels of the party in this country.

3. Paragraph 13 provides confirmation of the gloomy predictions concerning the Control Commissions which were made in Belgrade despatch No. 115. I shall be surprised if other federal units are not adopting much the same form of "control" as Slovenia.

4. A copy of this despatch, together with section A only of the enclosure, is being sent to Vienna, Caserta, Trieste, Sofia, Bucharest, Budapest, Athens, Rome and Moscow.

I have, &c.
GEORGE CLUTTON.

Enclosure.

Ljubljana Political Report, March 1946.

A.—Foreign Politics—The Party Line.

ABOUT the middle of March President Kidrič made a speech before the Plenum of the Political Bureau of the Communist party of Slovenia which, I feel, justifies an unabridged reproduction of the report thereon which I have received. He stated that the difficulties facing communism in Europe should not be underestimated. The enemies of communism were very stubborn and enjoyed the full support of the Western Powers. There were pessimists in the Communist ranks who regarded every step back as a battle lost. But, things were not so bad as that. The only country where things were going really badly for communism was Austria. There the reaction had succeeded in obtaining power and the situation of communism there was very bad. It was, therefore, their duty to support their comrades in Austria with all means in their power. In special Communist schools they had a large number of Austrian prisoners of war trained for propaganda work in their own country, and some hundreds of these men were already at work in Austria. The Yugoslav Communists had good and continuous contacts with them.

2. In Hungary, too, the Communist cause had been in a bad position to start with. The victory of the Smallholders' party, the united party of Hungarian reaction, had robbed the Communist party of the initiative, but the latter had already gone over to the offensive again. The position in Hungary was made easier by the continuing Russian occupation. For that reason the Communists must work quickly in Hungary. Pressure on the Smallholders' party was already showing good results, the party having already been split by Communist tactics and the interference of the Russian authorities. The Communist party of Hungary had infiltrated into the Smallholders' party experienced Communists who would continue the work of disintegration. The Communists had, therefore, not abandoned their cause in Hungary, and their position was much better than

(1) Section A only printed.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267?87

some weeks before. There were plans for the further undermining of the reaction in Hungary, and they might hope there too to get the upper hand. There was therefore no reason for pessimism.

3. In Roumania communism still stood firm. Communist tactics there had proved very sound. All the attacks of England and America had been fruitless. The Communists had certainly taken a few steps back here and there, but they had remained in control. They had succeeded in compromising their opponents. Their tactics had been on the same lines as those formerly used in Yugoslavia against Mihailović. As they made a traitor of Mihailović, so would they make traitors of Maniu and the other leaders of the Roumanian bourgeois parties. His audience knew the technique well enough. (Laughter.) He was, therefore, able to declare that they would never lose their grip on Roumania, whatever might happen. Roumania was their link between Yugoslavia and the Soviet Union.

4. They were following the same tactics in Bulgaria. Pressure from England and America was very strong there, but the Communists were not yielding nor would they yield. The Soviet Union considered Bulgaria as the most important bulwark of their cause in the Balkans, as a guarantee of the Yugoslav position, on the one side, and as a method of holding Turkey in check, on the other.

5. It was equally important to have a Communist régime in Bulgaria on account of Greece. There they had, it was true, provisionally lost the battle, but by no means abandoned the struggle. If the English thought that they would hold Greece they were very much mistaken. Let them but leave Greece and they would see at once how strong the Communists were. A new civil war would find every protagonist of communism in the Balkans in Greece, and the puppets of the English would be driven into the sea. The English wished to use Greece in order to bar to communism the way to the Mediterranean through the Ægean and Adriatic Seas, but their efforts would be fruitless. The Communists needed the whole Balkan Peninsula in order to cut England's Mediterranean line of communication.

6. He need waste no words over Albania Albania stood under their patronage and they would never allow her to slip away. In Albania their Russian supervisers were continually at work, watching over all political events. Albania was as firmly in their hands as Yugoslavia.

7. If, as his audience saw, they sometimes gave way formally somewhere or other, that was only in accordance with their Communist tactics. But these tactics were always aimed at one goal : Communist world revolution. But the preparation for this revolution required first the weakening and disintegration of the chief enemies, England and America. They must never leave them at peace anywhere. The Communists would certainly co-operate in the organisation of the United Nations, but only in order to control the organisation and to make impossible any move by the organisation against their plans. To keep the world political situation in a state of unrest, that was their policy, for only in a disunited world could arise proper conditions for the spread of communism over the globe.

8. In this connexion he felt that he should give his audience some information about their tactics in the Julian March. There were those in their ranks who said that their tactics towards the English and Americans in Trieste and Zone A were wrong. But these tactics were in complete accord with universal Communist tactics throughout the world. These tactics were prescribed to them in Moscow. The main object of these tactics is to force the English and Americans in Trieste into such a position as to enable the Communists to show them to the democratic world as the supporters of fascism. And in that they had succeeded. The greater part of public opinion throughout the world had thereby been incited against the English and American rulers. Even in England and America millions of people were on the side of the Communists. In the Labour party itself a large number of Members of Parliament were opposed to Mr. Bevin's policy. All these people were moving down the road which the Communists would point out to them—the road of dissatisfaction which leads to communism. But Communist propaganda there was otherwise very difficult, and, if they wanted, nevertheless, to attain their goal, they must proceed by indirect ways. It was, indeed, true that they might lose temporarily in the Julian March by such tactics, but even if they did not get Trieste they would thereby establish a focus of new unrest continually to weaken the power of English and American reaction. As his audience saw, there were greater things at stake than a mere local question, and when it was a question of world tactics they must, with strict discipline, follow orders from above. He who was not ready to do that was no Communist, and would be thrust aside.

×

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

YS

NAR/SR
3.5.46

C267788

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER

I had a call this morning from two young R.C.A.F. fliers - Bradshaw and Reid - whose plane was forced down over Yugoslavia in May, 1944, while returning from a bombing raid on Roumania. They were rescued and protected for more than three months by Yugoslav Chetniks, followers of General Mikhailovitch. They were flown out to Italy in August, 1944, along with some 600 American air crew who had been forced down in Chetnik territory and protected by Mikhailovitch.

One of the charges on which Mikhailovitch is to be tried as a war criminal by the Yugoslav Government is that his forces handed over Allied airmen to the Germans. This, my visitors strenuously denied. Their experience and that of all the American airmen whom they knew had been that Mikhailovitch had been loyal and helpful. They feel they owe their lives to his assistance and are anxious to go back to Yugoslavia to testify in his defence.

The United States Government has interested itself in the question of Mikhailovitch's trial, and has enquired whether defence witnesses and counsel could come from the United States to his support. Their first representations in this sense have been rejected by the Yugoslav Government. I understand that the United States are planning further and stronger representations.

I told the delegation that I thought the Canadian Government would put no difficulty in the way of their giving whatever evidence they had to offer, but I did not think there were any positive steps that could be taken by our Government, which had no diplomatic representation in Yugoslavia.

In the circumstances, however, I think we might write a letter to the Yugoslav Charge d'Affaires, asking him to inform his Government that these Canadian airmen, rescued in Yugoslavia, wish to give evidence at the trial of Mikhailovitch, and enquire whether an opportunity could be afforded them of doing so.

PM is content to act on Under-Secretary's judgment in this matter/ DC noted

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

DS/YS

C267789 NAR/SR 24.6.46

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Cabric, the Yugoslav Charge d'Affaires, in conversation this morning said he had been instructed by his Government to do all he could to facilitate cooperation between the Canadian and Yugoslav delegations at the forthcoming Peace Conference. Yugoslavia was itself a "Middle Power", but one in a rather special position vis-a-vis one of the Great Powers. Canada was another Middle Power, with especially close relations with two others of the Great Powers. Our delegations, working closely together, might be able to help bridge the growing gap between the Great Powers.

I promised Cabric that I would pass on to you this message from his Government. Although couched in very broad and general terms, I suspect it means that the Yugoslav Government hope to get Canadian support for their case for Trieste.

noted Read Hume 29-6-46

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267790

C O P Y

Legation of Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia in Canada

P. br. 59

The Legation of Yugoslavia presents its compliments to the Department of External Affairs, and has the honour to announce the appointment by the Government of the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia of Mr. Zako Popovic as Consul-General of Yugoslavia in Canada. Until recently, Mr. Popovic was acting in a provisory capacity on the staff of the United Nations in New York. Before that time, he held the post of Vice-Consul-General of Yugoslavia at Marseilles, France, and later was Counsellor in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Belgrade.

The Consulate-General of Yugoslavia will continue to be located at 1440, St. Catherine St. West, Montreal, and Mr. Popovic is expected to arrive there shortly.

Ottawa, 24th February, 1947.

To the Department of External Affairs,
O t t a w a.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267791

C-45-29
1947.

C O P Y

Department of External Affairs

The Department of External Affairs presents its compliments to the Legation of Yugoslavia and has the honour to acknowledge the Legation's note of February 24th, 1947, announcing the appointment of Mr. Zako Popovic as Consul General of Yugoslavia in Canada.

It is presumed that a request for his provisional recognition will be made pending his definitive recognition which will be granted upon receipt of his Commission of Appointment.

It is noted that the Consulate General of Yugoslavia will continue to be located at 1440 St. Catherine Street West, Montreal, and that Mr. Popovic is expected to arrive there shortly.

O t t a w a,

February 26th, 1947.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267792

C-45-29
Tan

File

Date - March 25, 1947.

Name and address -

Miss Norma Grannary, Secretary,
Miss Rita McGowan, President,
Union of Parish Sodalities of the Archdiocese of Montreal,
Montreal, P.Q.

Subject -

Letter protesting newspaper article by the Yugoslav Consul-General accusing His Holiness the Pope and the Catholic Church of misrepresentation.

Referred to -

Secretary of State for External Affairs.

Date of referral -

March 28, 1947.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267793 C-45-29
1947

Copy

Department of External Affairs

The Department of External Affairs presents its compliments to the Legation of Yugoslavia and has the honour to acknowledge the Legation's note of April 5th, 1947, informing the Department that Mr. Branko Vukelic, Attaché of the Legation, will be in charge of the Consulate General of Yugoslavia in Montreal.

Ottawa,
April 12th, 1947.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

YS ~~A. Gibson~~

C267794 ~~L. St~~

For release when statement made by Mr. St. Laurent in House of Commons

DEPARTMENT OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

May 23, 1947.

STATEMENT TO BE DELIVERED IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS BY THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, ON EMIGRATION TO YUGOSLAVIA OF CERTAIN RESIDENTS OF CANADA

On May 20th several questions were directed by Honourable Members to the Right Honourable the Prime Minister, the Honourable the Minister of Finance and to me concerning the emigration to Yugoslavia of certain residents of Canada. As all the questions are related, the Prime Minister informed the House on May 21st that I would make a comprehensive statement on the subject.

The first suggestion that a group of Yugoslav nations might leave Canada for Yugoslavia was made by the Chargé d'Affaires of the Yugoslav Legation in Ottawa in a letter, dated March 5th, 1946. In this letter he stated that there were a number of Yugoslav nationals who wished to return to Yugoslavia when transportation facilities became available. He also raised the question of export permits for various Canadian products on behalf of the nationals concerned. The Chargé d'Affaires was subsequently advised of the export regulations.

In June, 1946, passports were granted to four Canadians of Yugoslav origin for the purpose of proceeding to Yugoslavia. The passports were granted subsequent to a written request from the Chargé d'Affaires of the Yugoslav Legation in which he stated that the applicants wished to proceed to Yugoslavia to make arrangements for certain

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Yugoslav nationals or Canadian citizens of Yugoslav descent who "were planning to return to Yugoslavia for the purpose of lending their skill and assistance in the reconstruction of the country".

Subsequent to the return of these persons to Canada a good deal appeared in the Yugoslav-Canadian press about the return of Yugoslavs and Canadians of Yugoslav descent to Yugoslavia and it appears that funds were collected in connection with the proposed emigration.

In regard to the export of capital the regulations of the Foreign Exchange Control Board provide that persons leaving Canada for permanent residence elsewhere are provided with sufficient foreign exchange to pay their passages and reasonable expenses en route. They are allowed to export personal and household effects, and their remaining cash assets up to a maximum of $25,000 are transferable in Canadian funds.

A proposal was made by the Yugoslav Charge d'Affaires under which the resources of the emigrants, within the policy stated above, would be pooled through a central organization known as the Council of Canadian South Slavs. This body, instead of withdrawing the funds from Canada, would use them to make bulk purchases in Canada of goods suitable to trades in which the emigrants would engage upon their return to Yugoslavia.

This proposal was approved and bank accounts were established by the Council of Canadian South Slavs under the supervision of the Foreign Exchange Control Board. Although up-to-date figures are not available at present, deposits to the accounts have amounted to approximately $1,000,000.

In this connection export permits have been granted by the Department of Trade and Commerce for the export of material from Canada to Yugoslavia to the amount of

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

$345,918. Some permits were granted to individuals direct; other permits were granted to Canadian manufacturers who apparently received orders for direct shipment.

Settlers' effects are not under export permit control. A farmer leaving Canada, therefore, would be free to take his farming equipment without the necessity of an export permit and, in a similar way, a machanic would be free to take the tools of his trade. Undoubtedly the total value of settlers' effects would be considerable, but it is difficult to estimate the exact value involved.

It is also difficult to estimate the total number of persons leaving Canada under the auspices of the Council of Canadian South Slavs since passports would be applied for by the individuals concerned, if they are Canadians, and Yugoslavs would travel on Yugoslav passports. There is, of course, no regulation or law which prevents a Canadian or an alien leaving Canada of his own free will. The legal position of an alien leaving Canada is governed by the Immigration Act which provides that an alien acquires Canadian domicile "only by having his domicile for at least five years in Canada after having been landed therein". He loses his domicile by "voluntarily residing out of Canada with the present intention of making his permanent home out of Canada and not for a mere special or temporary purpose."

Thus a Yugoslav citizen, regardless of the length of time he has lived in Canada, will lose his right to re-enter Canada if he goes to Yugoslavia with the intention of making his permanent home in Yugoslavia. Should he change his mind and wish to re-enter Canada, he would have no right to re-enter Canada and would have to apply for admission as any other prospective immigrant.

Moreover, if he should be re-admitted to Canada, he could not count his previous stay in Canada for the acquisition of Canadian domicile. In order to become a citizen of

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT.
Epreuve illisible

C267797

Canada, he would, after his return, have to remain in Canada for five years.

The legal position of a Canadian citizen by naturalization leaving Canada is governed by Sections 20 and 21 of the Canadian Citizenship Act. Section 20 reads in part as follows: "A Canadian citizen, other than a natural-born Canadian citizen.... ceases to be a Canadian citizen if he resides outside Canada for a period of at least six consecutive years," subject to various provisos. Section 21 provides inter alia for cancellation of citizenship by Order-in-Council if a naturalized citizen "out of Canada has shown himself by act or speech to be disaffected or disloyal to His Majesty."

It is important to note that a warning appears at the back of the current Canadian passport, which reads as follows: "Canadian citizens by naturalization certificate or citizenship certificate should bear in mind that unless under the laws of the state to which they originally belonged or by the provision of a treaty, they have ceased to be subjects of that state, their certificates have no effect within its boundaries nor can the good offices of His Majesty's representatives be extended to them there".

If, therefore, any Canadian citizen by naturalization who goes to Yugoslavia is, under Yugoslav law, a citizen of Yugoslavia, the Canadian Government will not be able to grant him any measure of protection as long as he remains in Yugoslavia.

The group, which is now assembled in Montreal, have satisfied the various regulations applicable to their movement to Yugoslavia both in regard to themselves and to goods purchases by them. No doubt they are aware of their possible loss of status under Canadian law but they are free to go to Yugoslavia or to any other country if they so wish.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

On May 21st the Honourable Member for York West asked whether I would take steps to see that the Canadian passports carried by the expatriate Yugoslavs now in process of returning to their homeland be protected in such a way as to prevent their alteration or transference to other persons, and ensure that each Canadian passport issued to this group will be easily identifiable on its re-entry to Canada. I can assure the Honourable Member that every effort will be made to guard against the misuse of these passports.

Allegations have been made in the press that improper methods have been used to persuade residents of Canada to return to Yugoslavia or to contribute to the funds which have been raised to finance the return of other residents of Canada. Should any evidence come to hand as to the methods used in these or any other cases which would warrant action by the Government, it will not hesitate to take such action.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267799

YUGOSLAV POSITION ON THE REPORT OF THE UN COMMISSION INVESTIGATING GREEK FRONTIER INCIDENTS

Statement by Dr. Joza Vilfan,
Permanent Representative of the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia
To the United Nations Security Council
Tuesday, July, 1947.

The Yugoslav Government is of the opinion that the report of the Commission of Investigation should be studied in detail, with attention paid to the second part of the report, which is entitled "Survey of Evidence Submitted to the Commission"; with more attention to Part 3 of the report, called "Conclusions", which should be derived from Part 2, from impartially registered evidence and, finally, with attention to Part 4 - to the recommendations which should provide appropriate measures, in accordance with the impartially established and appraised facts.

CHARGES AND COUNTER-CHARGES

It is the seriousness of the matter which necessitates such procedure. Whatever our opinion of the situation which has been created in Greece and its frontiers, and the causes of that situation, an extraordinarily important precedent for the organization of the United Nations is in question, and the honor of three nations is at stake. The Greek government charged Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria with having given aid in the civil war and, at the same time, with having provoked frontier incidents. These three countries, on their part, submitted numerous charges against the Greek government. Yugoslavia submitted to the Commission of Investigation, evidence and witnesses regarding the systematic extermination of the Macedonian minority in Macedonia; about the gathering and using of war-criminals, traitors and "Quislings" for anti-Yugoslav and anti-Democratic purposes; about systematic frontier provocations by the Greek government - all of which Yugoslavia stressed was a consequence and manifestation of Greek internal policy. An investigation of this question was made, voluminous material was amassed and numerous witnesses heard, and facts and conclusions regarding this are noted in the report of the Commission. There is still much to be said about these questions.

For this reason first of all, we listened with surprise to the statement of the United States delegate, according to which, conclusions drawn without reservation by only six of the eleven members of the Commission of Investigation, were adopted in their entirety, before the countries most concerned were given the possibility to be heard, and in which statement, it is suggested that no discussion be had, although the last word regarding the appraisal of the situation belongs to the Security Council as a whole.

When such matters are in question as in this case, speed must not be used at the expense of thorough consideration. The impression could be created that conclusions are drawn, not on the basis of consideration of facts, but on the basis of a judgment created in advance and of special interests. It is not necessary for me to emphasize how much such an impression could harm the prestige of the organization of the United Nations and the confidence it enjoys.

STATEMENTS OF U. S. A. DELEGATE

For these reasons first of all, which are important because they represent matters of principle, and which are far removed from being merely procedural questions, the statement of the United States delegate provoked great astonishment and recalled to us the impression which the statement of Mr. Mark Ethridge, Delegate

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

of the United States to the Commission of Investigation, left upon us. Mr. Ethridge, immediately after his return to the United States declared to the press, among other things: "There is no question in my mind that Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, and Albania, are arming, training, supplying and giving hospitalization and refuge to Guerrilla forces operating in Northern Greece. There is no question that Greece would have gone over to the Communist minority had not the United Nations stepped in."

YUGOSLAV PROTEST

On this occasion, the Ambassador of Yugoslavia, Mr. Kosanovic, addressed a letter to the Secretary-General of the United nations, Mr. Trygve Lie, in which he called his attention to the impropriety of such an action.

"His views, as expressed to the press, must throw a peculiar light on whatever proposals, acts, resolutions and reports emanate from the Commission as a consequence of Mr. Ethridge's initiative. His conduct in this instance makes it permissible to conclude that what he presents to the Security Council will not be the objective finding of an investigator seeking to help the Security Council by ascertaining the facts and therefore making it possible to adopt the right solution for a most important problem, but a very prejudiced report with a specific political aim."

But our surpise was all the greater because we have, it is understood, thoroughly studied all of the material which the Commission of Investigation has amassed, and we have studied the conclusions of the majority in the light of this material. We consider that the Security Council should do the same, but unfortunately, the delegate of the United States has failed to do so.

Namely, there are a few instances which at first glance must shake the conviction which the United States delegate seems to hold: that the conclusions of the majority of the Commission of Investigation are well-founded and definitive. I wish to call the attention of the Council to these instances:

COMMISSION'S TASK

The Commission of Investigation was given the task of elucidating the causes and nature of the border violations and disturbances. It was entitled "The Commission of Investigation concerning Greek Frontier Incidents"; its report has been published under the same title. Precisely, the incidents should have been, if not the only, at least the principle subject of its investigation. If it is true that Yugoslavia has provoked civil war in Greece, if it is true that it has trained and supplied Greek Guerrilla forces with arms, and given refuge to them on its territory, then the border incidents which would have resulted from such actions, must be concrete manifestations of Yugoslavia's policy. If it is true that Yugoslavia employs a policy of force by devious methods infiltration, intimidation and subterfuge, then the border incidents furnish an opportunity to catch Yugoslavia in flagranti, since there is no possibility of concealment in such incidents.

On the other hand, if it is true as Yugoslavia states, that such incidents as incidents involving aid to Greek guerrillas do not exist, and if there are border violations provoked by the Greek government, which are the consequence of the internal policy of the Greek government and of its aggressive foreign policy then again the incidents are a very important question.

It was indeed not without reason that the Commission was called "Commission of Investigation concerning Greek Frontier Incidents".

Now I beg you to take the Report of the Commission, the part which deals with the amassed evidence and then the Conclusions of the Majority of the Commission, and to observe how this central question of the investigation has been treated.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ALL CHARGES
NOT INVESTIGATED

First of all, it is obvious that of 57 incidents presented by the Greek government as incidents involving aid to Greek guerrillas and because of which the Greek government has charged Yugoslavia, the Commission has examined only four. These are, as can be seen from Volume 1, Part 2, Article 16 and 18, Chapter 3, Section C. Page 98 - 102, the incidents at: Aghia Paraskevi, Sourmena, Skra and Idomeni. There is an odd discrepancy between the number of quoted incidents and the significance of this problem on the one hand, and the number of incidents examined, on the other.

The second point that strikes one, is that despite the fact that Yugoslavia has made the accusation that the Greek government in the period from May 1945 to December 1946, provoked 79 incidents of a military nature against Yugoslavia, and despite the fact that the Yugoslav representative in the Commission of Investigation, by his letter of March 11, 1947 (S/AC.4/115), stressing in it, the importance of this question; asked that at least four of the incidents be examined - in spite of all that, the Commission has examined not a single incident of this nature. There exists therefore, in regard to the incidents - which is the central question - a clear and consistent conduct of the investigation in accordance with the statements of only one side.

The third thing that strikes one, is that in the most important part of the Report, in the conclusions, disproportionately small space is given by the majority to the investigated incidents - the incidents involving aid to Greek guerrillas - that is, only one sentence is used, and that only incidentally, as an illustration. In contrast to this, incidents which, in connection with Yugoslavia were not investigated at all, although the Yugoslav representative insisted that they be investigated - incidents of a military nature - were given three whole pages of a total of fifteen, in the conclusion of the report. So an unexpected circumstance exists - that which is investigated is not mentioned in the conclusions at all, and that which, in connection with Yugoslavia is not investigated at all, is elaborated upon in several pages. This was done in such an arbitrary way that it could result in a formulation in support of the Greek government's position.

This matter is so delicate and so serious, that I do not wish to confine myself to general statements, but I will progress to detailed exposition.

The incidents which are quoted against Yugoslavia are mentioned in only one place in the conclusions. Volume 1, Part 3, Chapter 1, Section 8, Point 2C, page 168 reads: "According to the evidence, Yugoslav frontier guards permitted guerrilla bands to escape into Yugoslavia when pursued by the Greek army. This was clearly demonstrated to the Commission by its investigation of the incidents at Sourmena and Idomeni." That is all.

In this way, only incidentally, the most important question is disposed of in the conclusions. Two investigated incidents are mentioned only incidentally, the third and fourth are passed over tacitly. Does not this method of mentioning incidentally, and passing over tacitly, show that the Greek government could not succeed in proving its statements and that, therefore, we can conclude that there were no incidents at all?

We must really come to this conclusion, if we look at the results of the investigation. I wish to review the four incidents for you.

INCIDENT OF IDOMENI

According to Greek documents, an alleged Partisan group of 15 people, after an attack on the frontier post, Idomeni, openly passed into Yugoslav territory (Greek White Book, page 53, No. 9).

In connection with this incident, three witnesses appeared before the Commission.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

The witness, Gjumurtagjoglu (S/AC.4/PV/57H) was not accepted by the Commission becuase, in the opinion of the American delegate himself the testimony of the witness was not of interest to the Commission.

The witness, Tsakiropoulos, declared that the Partisans awoke him and asked him to carry a wounded Partisan, along with other Partisans, to the Yugoslav frontier where they met two Yugoslav soldiers whom he allegedly recognized by their uniforms as Yugoslavs. The soldiers were in the dark, at a distance of five to seven meters from them.

The witness, Gikoudis, together with the witness, Tsakiropoulos, carried another wounded person to the same place, and he said that he was vis-a-vis with the soldiers, but, as it was dark, he could not see their uniforms. His written deposition was given to the Commission with the comment that it was made under oath. When asked about it, he denied it, and to the question if he would swear another oath, he answered: "No, I can not". (S/AC.4/PV.57th).

The whole commotion about the border incident at Idomeni is hereby finished. The whole story of the open passing of Partisan troops on Yugoslav territory is reduced to the very indefinite and contradictory deposition of two peasants who carried two wounded Partisans on a dark night about thirty meters into Yugoslav territory, and this on a spot between two frontier posts. Most amazing of all is the testimony of a witness that, on a dark night, he recognized Yugoslav soldiers by their uniform. How can one reconcile this with the general Greek statement that Greek partisans wore Yugoslav uniforms?

INCIDENT AT SURMENA

This incident allegedly consists of the following: Partisans came from Yugoslavia on September 16, 1946, and attacked the Greek garrison in Surmena. The Partisans, after the battle, retired to Yugoslav territory, when they were called and gestured at by the Yugoslav frontier guard; the Yugoslav frontier guard covered under fire the retreat of the Partisans into Yugoslav territory, and Yugoslav soldiers entered Greek territory to protect the Partisans (See Greek White Book, page 42, No. 2.)

In the Greek document submitted to the Security Council, the accusation was even stronger, and it is said that the Partisans retired into the Yugoslav frontier post itself (Point 1695).

This alleged incident was the subject of a diplomatic exchange. The Yugoslav Government, knowing that at that time, and in that place, there had been no incident at all, refused the note of the Greek Government. This attitude of the Yugoslav Government - that there had been no incidents was confirmed by the official communique of the Third Army Corps of the Greek Army, which communique appeared in the Greek press on September 22, 1946. It is probable that in Greece there were various rumors, even as there are today, so the Headquarters considered it necessary to publish the following communique:

"The mopping-up operations undertaken against anarchist groups in the Doiran sector (confluence of the three borders) ended on 20 September (morning) when the above anarchists flew towards the Yugoslav border. Some of the figures published are exaggerated.

The Yugoslav frontier guards did not open fire on Greek units. The population must keep calm."

Nevertheless, the Greek representative asked for the investigation of that incident, and the Commission accepted his suggestion, although it was acquainted with the denial. Knowing full well that investigation of such an incident was absurd, the Greek representative hurriedly, on the day of the investigation, prepared a survey entitled "The Sourmena Incident", according to which,

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

nine alleged incidents, totally unconnected to each other, were to be accepted and investigated. It was clear that this maneuver was aimed at preventing a thorough and detailed investigation of that incident which had been proposed and accepted for investigation.

WITNESSES CONCEALED

Another thing is worth stressing in connection with this incident. At this investigation, which had finally been started after repeated demands by the Yugoslav representative, the most important witnesses were purposely concealed from the Commission of Investigation. We refer to just those witnesses whose depositions were quoted before the Security Council by Mr. Tsaldaris on December 12, 1946, as being the most important.

These important witnesses are the following:

The captured Partisan, Konstantinides, an actual witness of the movement of the Partisan Group before the action and during the action, when he allegedly was captured;

The peasant, Antoniodes, who according to the Greek White Book (Page 159), was a guide for that group of Greek soldiers which gave the most information;

The Greek soldier, Soumanis Georghios, who allegedly was captured by the Partisans, kept for four days and then escaped. He was the most important witness as to the point in which direction the Partisans went after the fight;

The Greek soldier, Pericles Soumanis, a member of the most important military group, consisting of thirty soldiers, which allegedly came into contact with the Yugoslav frontier guards;

Lieutenant Sardiniadis, who was the first to give a report of the whole event, which report, along with other depositions, was cited before the Security Council in December, 1946, as the sole evidence.

Not one of these key witnesses appeared before the Commission.

It is very strange that all eye-witnesses, without exception, were concealed from the Commission of Investigation, although their depositions were sent to the Security Council in December as the sole evidence as to the occurrence of the incident.

Therefore, it is clear why the Greek delegation tried to avoid a detailed and thorough investigation of this incident by creating a story of eight incidents. It is all the clearer why such ridiculous contradictions arose among the new Greek witnesses: Captain Nikitas, Lieutenant Berovalis, Private Sotirios A. Balis, and the peasant Hadzopulos.

MADE LIARS OF THE GREEK GOVERNMENT

The worst of it is that the Greek officers, Captain Nikitas and Lieutenant Berovalis, declared and confirmed before the Commission of Investigation that they personally had given the order to their units to shoot at the Yugoslav frontier posts during the so-called incident.

On one hand, they made liars of the Greek government and the Greek General Staff, who spoke about opposite orders to the Greek Army; but, on the other hand, something more has been shown, and that is, that the Greek government insisted on its claim that these incidents occurred, even at the expense of being accused of provoking incidents.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

The heard Yugoslav witnesses, frontier guards Private Kiro Jordanovski, and Corporal Djordje Ilijevski, who, on the very day of the battle of the Greek Partisans against the Greek army, stood guard at just those places from which Yugoslavs allegedly fired, and to which the Greek Partisans allegedly retreated-declared openly and soberly:

That they observed the battle from a distance of a few kilometers, and heard the firing; that, at a certain moment during the battle, a Greek officer with a platoon of soldiers approached them, with the request that they be allowed to make, from the Yugoslav territory, an encircling maneuver, and that they did reject that request; finally, that, with this, the matter was finished, and that neither did anybody shoot at them, nor did they fire upon anybody. This is fully in accord with the quoted communique of the headquarters of the Third Army Corps of the Greek Army.

THE INCIDENT
AT SKRA

In this alleged incident, the Partisans supposedly came from Yugoslavia and launched an attack upon Skra, while the Greek General Ioannou declared before the Commission that Yugoslavs also took part in the attack. Furthermore, the Greek government asserts that the Partisans, after the action, allegedly left for Yugoslavia, while General Ioannou declared before the Commission that the Partisans retreated to a "hill over Skra".

In the Document handed to the Commission by Greece, there was even the allegation that Yugoslav officers commanded the operations.

Before the Commission, nobody was able to say anything of an arrival of Yugoslav soldiers. The witness, Kouris, himself challenged the allegation about the participation of Yugoslav soldiers. As to the commanding of the operations, Lieutenant Kouris declared that that was only his personal opinion, because only Yugoslav officers could have organized such a good operation.

As to the arrival of Partisans from Yugoslavia, not a single witness of the Greek Government was able to say anything. In the same way, not a single witness confirmed the retreat of Partisans units to Yugoslavia.

In connection with this incident, witnesses Lieutenant Kouris and Andreadis were heard. Lieutenant Kouris not only failed to confirm the Greek allegations, but did, as a matter of fact, challenge them. Then was heard the witness Andreadis, a peasant who, from a distance of seven kilometers, allegedly observed the movements of masses of people, including men under arms, and cattle in the Yugoslav territory and, may I stress, on a hilly terrain, upon which such an observation is, of course, incredible and impossible.

The third witness heard in this connection was Tsembis, who was, on that occasion, allegedly taken up to the frontier by the Partisans, and kept for four days in the Greek territory, and nothing else.

THE INCIDENT
AGHIA PARASKEVI

According to Greek allegations, this incident consisted of an attack, on July 24, 1946, with automatic arms upon Greek frontier post number fifty-five, from the Yugoslav territory, and in an attack of the Partisans on the same night upon the Gendarmerie Station in Kato Klinai and Aghia Paraskevi. The Partisans allegedly then retreated to Yugoslavia and were received and assisted by Yugoslav frontier guards.

Furthermore, on August 7, 1946, during the night, thirty Partisans, with the assistance of Yugoslav frontier guards, allegedly fired upon Greek frontier post number fifty-five, attacked on the same night the Gendarmerie Station in Kato Klinai and Aghia Paraskevi, and then openly retreated to Yugoslav territory.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267805

Witnesses Lieutenant Stefanidis and soldier Tsirigos were the only witnesses produced to prove the Greek charge. Neither of them confirmed with a single word, the Greek allegations, or even mentioned that the Greek frontier post number fifty-five was attacked from the Yugoslav territory; or that the Greek Partisans, after the battle of July 24, 1946, retreated to Yugoslavia with the help of the Yugoslav frontier guard; or that groups of Partisans, after the attack of August 7, 1946, retreated to Yugoslavia.

The witness, Tsirigos, concretely stated, "It was night. I saw people approaching; I shouted 'Halt!'; I didn't know who they were. Perhaps they were civilians working in the fields."

Upon the question as to whether they were in uniform, he answered: "How could I see whether they were in uniform or not?"

Upon the question whether he knows the place where the Partisans crossed the frontier, he answered: "Frontier guard number fifty-five could tell you that."

Unfortunately - I don't know whether by chance or not - the Greek delegate did not invite anybody from that frontier post, in order to inform the Commission, nor did he take the members of the Commission to see the frontier post. Is this avoidance of hearing eye-witnesses not strange?

Upon the question as to where the agressors retreated after the battle, the Greek witness, Tsirigos, answered: ".....About four in the morning, they separated into two groups - one group left for Ethnico, and the other one for Aghia Paraskevi."

That is all, literally all, that the key Greek witness is able to say of this incident. May I still stress that he is also the only so-called direct witness and eye-witness in this incident.

The second witness, Stefanidis, was only able to say that, at the moment of the retreat of the Partisans, he heard one rifle-shot from their side and immediately following, one shot from the side of the Yugoslav frontier post. This is the most important and the only thing, in connection with this incident, that this witness was able to tell the Commission of Investigation.

However, with this, the question of the incident of Aghia Paraskevi and Kato Klinai is not terminated. This question is not terminated simply with the fact that the investigation did, in fact, belie the Greek allegation. In this question, there is another side to the picture, which is of the greatest and prime interest for the explanation of the real character and background of the whole action of the Greek Government with so-called border incidents.

ROLE OF THE BRITISH VICE-CONSUL

It is the following:
A considerable number of witnesses who were either in Greek prisons or, if not in prisons, living under conditions which no doubt impart to their declarations the greatest value - I repeat, a considerable number of those witnesses produced, upon their own initiative, before the Commission of Investigation, data as to how the Greek military and police authorities organized raids. The role of the British vice-consul in Florina, Mr. Hill, and of the personnel of the Consulate, will be seen in subsequent expositions. These Greek authorities organized, through armed balists (Albanian fascists and notorious collaborators) and chetniks, systematic, terroristic raids against the democratic population in the district of Florina, and along the Greek-Yugoslav frontier - exactly at the times and places when and where the Greek-alleged incidents of Aghia Paraskevi and Kato Klinai were occurring.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ATTACKS ON YUGOSLAVIA

The interned Greek citizens, Ifantis and Apostolos Vitaniotis, handed the group of the Commission of Investigation, on February 20, 1947, in Ikarija, a memorandum containing also the following data: "1) Armed balists, who crossed the frontier, were received by the Greek authorities. The authorities did not disarm them. They walk, armed with revolvers, through the city and squares of Florina. 2) Armed chetniks, coming from Yugoslavia, often cross the border. They regularly walk freely, in groups, and bearing arms..... These groups participated in controlling the district in cooperation with the gendarmes."

In another part of this memorandum, it is stated: "That on the Greek-Yugoslav frontier in Aghia Paraskevi, there are gendarmes, together with balists. Once, they started to fire on the villages. They surrounded whole villages, ransacked the houses, arrested and maltreated the population....."

These statements are in full accord with data delivered to the Commission of Investigation in the memorandum of the District Committee of EAM for Florina. I quote: "Balists and chetniks who escaped the rage of the people by fleeing to Greece, found both arms and refuge. Mr. Hill gathered them and put them at the disposal of the Greek authorities for night-patrolling in Florina and in villages along the frontier, that is, Kato Klinai, Cratero, Ethnico, etcetera....."

The District Committee of NOF for the same district, in the memorandum handed to the Commission of Investigation, says literally: "In July and August, 1946, in Kajmakcalan, there was a frontier post in which were placed twenty-two balists. They used to cross to the Yugoslav territory, and terrorized the population of the village of Ahlada, which fled to the mountains. In the village of Kato Klinai, balists, together with Greek gendarmes, carried out night patrols and terrorized the population.

"In the village of Cratero, there was a group of balists for the purpose of assisting Hill's agents to cross the border and assist refugees from Yugoslavia."

TOLD TRUTH - EXECUTED !

These data were fully confirmed by the testimony of Dr. Efthimios Ioannidis, who was recently executed by the Greek authorities, for just such testimony.

These data were confirmed from the prison in Salonika, in a letter dated March 14, 1947, addressed to public opinion and to the Commission of Investigation, by the imprisoned teacher, Mihail Servinis.

These same data were confirmed by the witness, Papadopoulos Pashalis, a Greek refugee in Buljkes, in his memorandum addressed to the Commission of Investigation.

The same data were confirmed by the testimony of the witness, Nazmi Emini Azemi, and by the testimony of other witnesses heard by the Commission of Investigation Yugoslavia.

In this analysis of the state of facts, one has to bear in mind that the Greek Government selected and proposed for the investigation just the most important and the biggest incidents, so that the results of the investigation of these incidents, presented as typical incidents, would be generally applied to all other alleged incidents which have not been examined by investigation. As a matter of fact, the Commission of Investigation conceived the problem in this way. Meanwhile, we did see in what the investigation of these selected incidents resulted. This investigation showed that there were no incidents. We must conclude therefrom, that there were no incidents either in the alleged cases which were not examined. Incidentally, we did assert, from the very first, that all these incidents were invented by the Greek Government.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267807

FALSE GREEK WITNESS

In order to prove the non-existing facts, the Greek Government, during the work of the Commission of Investigation, and in general, as well as in cases of this instance, bolstered its thesis with false witnesses. We reserve the right to return, to the extent necessary, to the question of the credibility of the Greek witnesses.

It was asserted before the Commission, in regard to the witnesses:

That they were systematically instructed as to what to say; that they were exposed to physical torture and moral pressure; that the majority of the witnesses were recruited from among persons who had been in the hands of the Greek police force or under trial. Regarding some witnesses, it was asserted that they were professional murderers, that among them were war criminals, traitors, quislings, etc, etc. Therefore, it is quite natural that during the work of the Commission of Investigation it was established, as regards a great number of written depositions submitted, that they were false and fabricated by the Greek authorities. The remaining depositions were full of contradictions, obviously false statements and absurdities.

It is a fact that the conclusions of the majority of the Commission avoided the central question of the investigation, that is, incidents involving aid to Greek guerrillas. How is this to be explained? There is only one possible explanation. This is an indirect admission by the majority that, after the results of the investigation, they did not have anything to say concerning this question. That means that there is no problem of incidents involving aid to Greek guerrillas, as such incidents never occurred. Our conviction is supported by the fact that the majority of the Commission of Investigation, also, in its conclusions (Section 6, No. 9), quotes all fifty-seven incidents announced by the Greek Government in the category of mere military frontier incidents and not in the category of incidents involving aid to Greek guerrillas. One is unable to explain, in any other way, the place and part which are dedicated to this problem in the conclusions of the majority. We naturally would not have any objection to the attitude adopted by the majority in the conclusions. On the other hand, the majority tries to avoid a direct conclusion on so important a question, by an incidental reference in its formulation, and by an indirect conclusion. In this indirect formulation, the majority has tried to take another attitude. It mentions these incidents in order to prove that Yugoslavia has given assistance to the insurgents in Greece, although it is contrary to the results of the investigation. It has done this contrary to its objective admission. This is reflected in its avoidance of a direct conclusion in this category of incidents.

BORDER PROVOCATIONS

In addition to the category of incidents with which we have been dealing until now, there was before the Commission of Investigation, a problem of incidents of another category. These are military-border provocations, by the Greek Government against Yugoslavia, and other Greek neighbors. Seventy-nine such incidents were brought by Yugoslavia, for the period from May, 1945 until December 1945, before the Commission of Investigation.

Yugoslavia proposed that the following be investigated:

1. The attempts of forced passage from Yugoslavia into Greece by a group of fifteen chetniks on May 18, 1946, on the Mountain of Belasica.
2. The ambush set up against Yugoslav patrol by eight Greek soldiers on July 23, 1946, on the slopes of the Mountain of Kozuh.
3. The attack by machine guns on the Yugoslav frontier post of the Mountain of Kozuh by Greek air force on November 20, 1946.
4. The attack by machine guns and bombing of another Yugoslav frontier post on the Mountain of Kozuh by Greek air force on November 20,1946.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

From the Greek side, not a single incident was presented as such, or proposed for investigation. The Commission of Investigation did not accept the Yugoslav request for the investigation of a single one of the incidents which had been proposed for investigation. Therefore, as to the Yugoslav-Greek border, this problem was brought up only by Yugoslavia, but was not investigated.

Nevertheless, let us see the conclusions to this question.

Volume I, Part III, Chapter I, Section C, under the heading: "Frontier violations not involving aid to Greek guerrillas", reads: "The Greek Government charged that Albania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia were deliverately provoking incidents on their common frontier. Albania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia made accusations against Greece. In each case, a substantial number of witnesses were heard by the Commission, as well as extensive documentation to support the charges."

WHITEWASHING THE GREEK GOVERNMENT

The majority of the Commission, as we see, asserts, first, that Greece charged Yugoslavia also for these incidents of a military nature, and secondly, that the Commission examined also the incidents of such character. But, as it appears from what I have said, with respect to Yugoslavia, neither the one nor the other is true. But, after this error, the majority of the Commission, quite naturally, committed another error, even more serious. Without having received any Greek allegation in this respect, but not having considered any of the Yugoslav requests, although there were seventy-nine incidents enumerated, and investigation for at least four of them requested, not having heard any of the witnesses, the Commission asserts:

".....No evidence of probative value was introduced which tended to indicate that the frontier violations not connected with guerrilla activities were deliberately provoked, either by the governments of the northern neighbors or by that of Greece, or that there was any policy of systematic provocation on either side, or that the incidents themselves were evidence of the aggressive intentions of either country."

The only aim of the whole exposition of the Commission of Investigation, on three full pages - an unfounded exposition, and full of serious contradictions - this aim is to becloud and confuse the issue, and to save the Greek government from the justified accusations made by her northern neighbours.

It goes, therefore, without saying, that the following conclusion emanates: the treatment of this subject is not yet finished. The conclusions cannot be accepted so lightly, particularly since we have reason to state that the examples quoted of superficial and incorrect examination, were not exceptions. The conclusions of the majority, as a whole, are of such character. To better illustrate this assertion of ours, I quote one more example of unfounded conclusions by the majority of the Commission.

"EVIDENCE" RE-ARMING GUERRILLAS

Volume I, Part III, Chapter I, Section A, point 2a alleges that Greek guerrillas were being supplied with arms in Yugoslavia. The same assertion is repeated in point (c). It is not necessary to waste too many words on the importance of this problem. If it is asserted that Yugoslavia has provoked the civil war in Greece, and that the battles which now involve whole regions of Greece are a consequence of Yugoslavia's interference, then the question whether Yugoslavia supplied Greek guerrillas with arms, is one of the main questions. What did the Commission bring out in this respect?

Volume I, Part II, Chapter I, Section C, Point 15a, III states: "Supply of arms. The witness Theodorou Vassilov stated that he had been issued with a Sten gun in Yugoslavia

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267809

by a certain Lazaros before re-entering Greece, (GWB-I, pp 104-105) and this evidence was restated before Team 1a at Florina on March 11th. Valtadoros stated that when he was on Greek territory, "the commander of his groups proposed that the witness should go to the nearest Yugoslav post and get ammunition." This proposal was not carried out but the witness added that another group-leader "Prossos" told him that many times he used to go to the Yugoslav frontier posts and get ammunition there." The Yugoslav national Kosta Cuparikov stated that "The chief of his own brigade was transporting munition into Greece." May we complete these allegations by recalling that Vassilov, according to his own statement, received the rifle in order to protect himself from wolves.

CONCLUSIONS OF THE MAJORITY UNJUSTIFIED

That is the whole material which the Commission was able to bring up in this question. Of course, nobody can blame the Commission for having registered also such material, as this material was delivered by the Greek Government. But, the majority of the Commission should not have, and was not authorized to base its weighty and categorical conclusion - accusing Yugoslavia of having supplied the Partisan movement in Greece with arms - on such unfounded, unverified, and insignificant testimony. Even if what the Commission registered as testimony of witnesses were true, even in that case, this does not represent the basis which would justify the conclusions made by the majority of the Commission. Nevertheless, the majority of the Commission calls it a considerable amount of evidence by testimony and by deposition. Indeed, here is not only a lack of logic, but also of impartiality.

We consider that we are fully justified in making the final conclusion that, on the part of Yugoslavia, on the Greek-Yugoslav frontier, there were no border incidents and no activity whatsoever, in connection with the arming of the Greek Partisan movement. We are most deeply convinced that anybody who would endeavor to study the material and the report of the Commission of Investigation would come to this natural and simple conclusion.

After all that, we have to refer to the last statement of the Representative of the United States on this question. The Representative of the United States has, on one hand, on the most important questions, literally repreated just those formulations from the conclusions of the majority which we proved today are not founded in the least degree. Suffice it to refer to the passage regarding the arming of Greek Partisans by Yugoslavia.

On the other hand, in the speech of the Representative of the United States, we meet the same attitude towards the central question of the investigation, I mean towards the question of incidents in general, which we find in the conclusions of the majority of the Commission, and which we have discussed at such length in our statement of today.

INACCURATE ASSERTIONS BY USA DELEGATE

This is manifested in the speech of the Representative of the United States, even when he quotes the name and the tasks of the Commission of Investigation. The Representative of the United States, for instance, does not quote that according to the Resolution of the Security Council the first task of the Commission was "of elucidating the causes and nature of the border violations and disturbances."

On the contrary, he inaccurately asserted that the Commission received the task as he asserts "To ascertain the facts relating to the situation complained of by the Greek Government." He forgets that the Commission was directed to investigate the question, not only on the basis of the Greek assertions, but on the basis of the assertions of Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria, as well. In these discrepancies contained in the statement of the representative, there is not only the question of changing conventional terms, but a tendency to change the character of the whole question which is under discussion today.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Since the border incidents and armament have not been found, and could not have been found, the Representative of the United States was compelled to give another definition of the idea of using force against the territorial integrity of another state, an idea different from that which has been generally accepted until now. He found the formula of infiltration, intimidation and subterfuge.

Who among the Yugoslavs, except traitors, Quislings and war criminals during the last two years infiltrated into Greece from Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria? It is a well-known fact that there is still today intensive infiltration from other sides into the whole structure of Greek life, which fact even the Commission of Investigation has noted.

INTIMIDATION - YES
BUT BY WHOM?

We agree that most recently there exist in international relations methods of intimidation - not only concealed intimidation, as stated by the representative of the United States - but even open intimidation. In any event, Yugoslavia is the last country which could be accused of intimidation. But as to intimidation, the Balkan countries can tell much.

By such vague formulations, to which subterfuge belongs, the basic facts which have been elaborated can not be concealed. These and other formulations of this kind only confirm that on the Yugoslav side there were no frontier incidents nor were supplies given to guerrillas.

There is, in addition, one reason more why we consider it so essential that a thorough and conscientious analysis of the report of the Commission be made by discussing each question separately, in order to establish a complete and unequivocal picture of the true state of affairs. That is - that the interest of peace, the prestige of the United Nations and the honor of my country demand it.

Therefore, we address the Security Council with a formal proposal to institute a discussion in this sense.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267811

YUGOSLAV NEWSLETTER

No. 2 July 15, 1947.

WHY YUGOSLAVIA REFUSED PARTICIPATION AT THE PARIS CONFERENCE?

There are several reasons why Yugoslavia refused to participate in the conference convened by Great Britain and France in Paris on July 12.

In the first place, the Yugoslav Government informed the two sponsoring powers on June 28, that Yugoslavia wishes to take part in the preliminary talks which will decide the principles and the form of organization. However, those decisions were made by Great Britain and France alone. The Yugoslav Government in its second note, dated July 9, states that such action "violates the cooperation among the sovereign states" and expresses the amazement that they should ignore in such a way the states which suffered most during the war.

PROGRAM ENDANGERS INDEPENDENCE

Yugoslavia could neither accept the program as stated in the letter of the sponsoring powers on July 4, because it enables some powers to interfere in the internal economic life of other participating countries to such an extent that it can endanger their economic and political independence.

Furthermore, Yugoslavia considers that this program will also endanger the economic clauses of the peace treaties and the agreement concerning Germany, including the obligations arising from those treaties and the agreement, especially if Great Britain and France should insist on the inclusion of the western zone of Germany in the plan.

YUGOSLAVIA BUILDS BY OWN EFFORTS

"The Yugoslav Government has concluded long term agreements for economic cooperation with several countries",- states the Yugoslav reply, - "and has done much by its own efforts for the reconstruction of its war torn economy. Therefore, it cannot accept as a program for Europe's reconstruction the program which denies the most devastated countries the right to express their own opinion, and which would in practice retard the rebuilding of their economic life".

----------///----------

TANJUG'S COMMENT

Following commentary on Paris Conference was written by Foreign Editor of the Yugoslav news agency TANJUG on July 9:

In order to see the real aims and the character of this "conference" it is necessary to point out certain facts. In the first place Britain and France or to be more precise Bevin and Bidault have already established an organization or "working committee" with the task of drafting "the general European economic plan" and submitting it to United States as basis upon which she will extend

PUBLISHED by the PRESS OFFICE of the LEGATION OF FEDERAL PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF YUGOSLAVIA, OTTAWA CAN

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

her aid to Europe. In view of that the Paris meeting on July 12 is not a conference where the invited countries will have full right of discussion and decision. On the contrary, the task of this "conference" is merely to formalise the participation of other countries in an organization already set-up and headed by Britain and France, who are acting as trustees for the American businessmen.

The other participating countries will be a sort of decoy with the purpose of giving the "conference" and the organization a democratic face. As is well known from the British and French stand at the recent Paris conference of the three Foreign Ministers, this organization or committee is to manage the economic life of the European countries. According to the British and French plan the committee will have so far reaching power that it can order each individual country what to produce and how much to spend. In other words, the committee will have the power of dictating the economic development of the European countries, which in the final analysis means not only interference in their internal affairs, but also the curtailment of national sovereignty and independence.

Expecially conspicious is the haste with which Messrs. Bevin and Bidault are calling this "conference". Why are these gentlemen in such a hurry? Better than all their phrases about "the mutual aid" and "Marshall's generosity" that question is answered by the British Conservative organ, the Yorkshire Post, which writes that "Great Britain and France and other European countries are faced with a catastrophe which can be avoided only by quick use of the offered American aid."

The haste is even more significant when it is known that the American economic circles and the American Government are asking for speedy adoption of "the general European economic plan". The American businessmen and their press do not hide their wishes for haste. Certain American papers are saying openly that it is in the interest of the American economy to get a quick solution of the "European aid" question. Why? The American economy is faced with a crisis. In order to avoid or at least temporarily forestall the crisis, the United States is looking for new markets. Europe with over 200 millions of population can be a very good market for the American products. But in order to be able to purchase the American goods Europe needs the American dollars with which to make payments. The United States is ready to loan these countries the dollars for that purpose, as in the end the Americans will get back their dollars plus interest. But there is also another catch in it, namely, the United States is willing to grant loans only to those European countries which accept the Bevin - Bidault "working committee", which is to dictate the development of the European economy and through it, naturally, the political life of those countries. So what we have here is an attempt by the United States to better her own position at the expense of war torn Europe. The American monopolists, the real bosses of the "working committee", will gain enormous profits. But for many European countries the "aid" signifies the loss of their economical and political independence and sovereignty. Of course, for such countries as Turkey, Portugal and others which co-operated until a short time ago with the German fascism, it is not hard to sacrifice their problematical independence, and the governments a la Tsaldaris and the like, which always worshiped the dollar diplomacy, will not hesitate to put their countries at the mercy of the American businessmen. But that is not the case with the countries and the peoples which gained their freedom and independence through the struggle and the blood of millions of their freedom and independence for the sake of few dollars, which will eventually end in the pockets of the American capitalists. Among such countries is Yugoslavia, which during the war in Hitler's "Europe Fortress" stood at the forefront of resistance, and which today is building a new and happier life, based on the full freedom and independence. The Yugoslav peoples cannot and will not give up their political and economical independence for any price.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

LB/SR
25.9.47

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER

Agrément of Mr. Mato Jaksic, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of Yugoslavia in Canada

At my request, the Yugoslav Chargé d'Affaires, Mr. Lukin, came to my office this morning, and Mr. Watkins of the Second Political Division and I received him.

I told him that I was glad to hand him the formal notification of agrément by His Majesty the King to the appointment of Mr. Jaksic as Yugoslav Minister to Canada. I then went on, speaking to him almost word for word as follows:

"You are aware of the reasons for the delay, which were outlined by the Under-Secretary orally to you on the 15th July. In the light of the conversation at that time you may realize (or appreciate) that the Canadian Government wished to be cautious. It was feared that the appointment would be a source of controversy in Canada.

It is the view of the Canadian authorities that controversy may still take place. Your Government has, however, felt itself obliged to proceed with the nomination of Mr. Jaksic and therefore is apparently willing to take the risk of a controversy arising. There has been some criticism in the press of this nomination. How the press became aware of it is not known.

In the event of controversy the Canadian authorities might well be unable to modify or stop it. At the same time, naturally, Mr. Jaksic would take every precaution to avoid taking part in such a controversy, in view of his appointment as the diplomatic representative of the Yugoslav Government.

I wish to refer in this connection to the position of foreign language groups in Canada. It is desired that such persons who have come to Canada with the intention of remaining here and making this country

25/9/9

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

their home, should dissociate themselves from internal political issues in their country of origin and should participate as fully as possible in the life of the community where they have made their homes. (They can maintain of course the fullest possible knowledge of their cultural traditions). The Canadian authorities assume that the new Minister will be prepared to support this attitude in regard to persons of Yugoslav origin.

I can assure you of the earnest desire of the Canadian Government to entertain with your Government the best possible relations to the mutual advantage of our two countries."

Mr. Lukin said he was thankful to receive this notification of agrément, and that the Yugoslav Government would wish to do everything possible to improve relations with the Canadian Government. As regards the question of controversy, he put forward the query as to what was exactly meant by this question of controversy.

Mr. Watkins and I mentioned again that we meant press controversy, in view of the fact that there had already been some criticism in the press of this nomination. Mr. Lukin said that this criticism had come from a newspaper of Croatian thought, which was trying to impair good relations between Canada and Yugoslavia.

The Yugoslav Government have, therefore, been warned twice of the dangers in this case, first before the agrement was granted, when we suggested to the Chargé d'Affaires that the Yugoslav Government might wish to withdraw this particular nomination, and second immediately after the notification of agrement had been given.

Laurent Beaudry

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

C267815

GOVERNMENT OF CANADA

PRESS RELEASE

INFORMATION DIVISION
DEPARTMENT OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS
OTTAWA - CANADA

No. 65

For immediate publication.

Ottawa, November 27, 1947.

The Department of External Affairs today announced that a translation of the text of a summons concerning the conversion of pre-war Yugoslav State Internal Debts has been received. The summons calls on all legal and physical persons who have not yet submitted owners' declarations in respect of State papers of value which they have deposited with former banking institutions to submit declarations to the National Bank of Yugoslavia as soon as possible in order that the bank may hand such declarations to the State Investment Bank (Debts Directorate) at the latest by December 31st, 1947.

The declarations should read as follows: "In connection with the Law regarding the Conversion of Pre-war Internal State Debts and Liabilities of July 30th, 1946 (Official Gazette of FNRJ No. 61/46) I submit within the meaning of Article 7 of Regulations regarding the Execution of the said Law (Official Gazette No. 73/46) the following registration for papers of value (State bonds) which I have deposited in due time (state the institution with which former papers of value have been deposited) and which contain the following details."

(1) Specify what papers (State securities) are with the Bank and for what amount.

(2) It should be stated whether any other papers of value, or alternatively certificates (i.e., receipts for papers of value) will be deposited on the owner's behalf by another institution (which institution, and for what amount) or by himself personally and for what amount.

(3) Indicate whether a declaration is also being submitted under Article 6 of the Regulations concerning claims against the State (name which State Institution) which have originated up to the 18th April 1941 inclusive.

(4) State whether property has been confiscated.

Declarations should be completed in duplicate and in legible form and must be signed with the full name (patronymic and family name) of the applicant and/or owner, place of residence, street, house number, and also, in the case of villages, the county.

The bank has issued a warning that declarations will not be received after December 31st, 1947, and that if declarations are not submitted before that time the deposited papers of value will become State property.

The names of the former banking institutions which are given are The Co-operative and Agricultural Bank (formerly the Privileged Agrarian Bank), the Artisan Bank, the Yugoslav Bank, and the Postal Savings Bank.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

DATE OF MINUTE
July 22nd, 1948

INITIALS OF AUTHOR
B.A. Wallis/EMC

DEPARTMENT OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS SECRET

MINUTE

Yugoslavia

ON Despatch No. 1353 of July 17th, 1948, from the High Commissioner for Canada in the United Kingdom on the Yugoslav-Soviet crisis. C267816

Insert particulars of despatch, memorandum or other attached document.

CIRCULATION

The High Commissioner reports that the Foreign Office believes that a static period is likely to set in in the Yugoslav-Soviet crisis at least until after the Yugoslav Communist Party Congress on July 22nd. The Foreign Office considers that there are three possible moves that Moscow can make:

(a) Stalin may receive Tito back into his good graces. (This, however, in the opinion of the High Commissioner, would mean a rebuff to Zhdanov and Malenkov, to the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, and to the satellite Communist Parties, and would be a setback for Soviet policy in the Balkans.)

(b) Moscow may force Yugoslavia to submit, by all means within its disposal - by economic sanctions, by stirring up revolt, by military pressure, etc. (Economic sanctions, however, would cut across the Soviet schemes for reconstructing the orbit countries and moulding their economies to that of the Soviet Union.)

(c) Moscow may simply sit tight and wait until the majority of Yugoslav Communists realize that Yugoslavia cannot continue as a Communist state in isolation from Moscow. Pressure may appear from below to remove Tito.

THIS MINUTE TO BE STAPLED TO, AND FILED WITH, THE DOCUMENT TO WHICH IT REFERS, UNDER THE DATE OF THE DOCUMENT.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

DATE OF MINUTE

INITIALS OF AUTHOR

DEPARTMENT OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

MINUTE

ON C267817

Insert particulars of despatch, memorandum or other attached document.

CIRCULATION

The Foreign Office considers this the likeliest Soviet policy.

2. The Foreign Office believes that Albania would not have attacked Tito so vehemently unless Hoxha had received prior approval and support from Moscow.

3. According to information reaching the Foreign Office, there has yet been no visible sign of opposition to Tito in Yugoslavia. There have been indications that the Yugoslav crisis has had a disturbing effect on the Roumanian Communist leadership, who know that their grip on Roumania cannot be consolidated unless there is a long period of peace. In Hungary, Rakosi, in violation of his solemn promises to the peasants over the past year, has bluntly announced that collectivisation of the land would be completed in two years. In Czechoslovakia, the Communist Party has announced that it does not intend to press for collectivisation. On the other hand, the Party has decided, in accordance with other aspects of the Cominform communiqué, to reduce the Party from a "mass" Party to a "cadre" Party and to conduct a "campaign of ideological clarification". The Polish Communist Party seems to have been proceeding more cautiously than the

THIS MINUTE TO BE STAPLED TO, AND FILED WITH, THE DOCUMENT TO WHICH IT REFERS, UNDER THE DATE OF THE DOCUMENT.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

DATE OF MINUTE

INITIALS OF AUTHOR

DEPARTMENT OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

MINUTE

ON

C267818

Insert particulars of despatch, memorandum or other attached document.

CIRCULATION

others, although it was announced that the Party would be setting up village cooperatives.

4. The Foreign Office is inclined to believe that the crisis may lead Moscow to follow a tough line in Berlin because the Kremlin cannot afford to lose face in Berlin as well as in Belgrade and because of the belief that a threat of war might lead the Yugoslav Communist Party to submit and return to the fold.

THIS MINUTE TO BE STAPLED TO, AND FILED WITH, THE DOCUMENT TO WHICH IT REFERS, UNDER THE DATE OF THE DOCUMENT.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

SECRET

C267819

Office of the
HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA,
CANADA HOUSE,
LONDON, S.W.1.
July 17th, 1948.

No. 1353.

Sir,

I have the honour to refer to my telegram No. 1093 of the 13th July and other correspondence concerning the expulsion of the Jugoslav Communist Party from the Cominform. I do not propose to examine in detail the documents in the case; that has been done admirably by Mr. Holmes in his despatch from Moscow, No. 269 of the 5th July. I have tried to keep you informed of the first reactions of the Foreign Office, and of public opinion. In this despatch I should like to give you the latest ideas of the Foreign Office on the subject and add a few of our own reflections.

2. The Foreign Office believe that a static period is now likely to set in and that no important development is to be expected in the immediate future, or at least until after the Jugoslav Communist Party Congress on the 22nd July. Wallinger, head of the Southern Department of the Foreign Office, thinks that there are three possible moves which Moscow can make:

(a) Stalin may still, at this comparatively late date, come down out of the clouds, rebuff the Cominform and receive Tito back into the good graces of the Kremlin. In support of this hypothesis is the fact that the Soviet press has made the minimum of publicity out of the affair; that the satellites seem to have been encouraged to take the initiative in attacking Tito, making it almost appear like a quarrel between them and Jugoslavia; and that the Jugoslav press has not in the last week or so attacked either the Soviet Union or the All-Union Communist Party. It has in fact gone out of its way to differentiate between the "unworthy" action of the neighbouring Communist Parties and the great Soviet Union. Despite this evidence I am inclined to think it unlikely that Stalin would intervene from above the battle because this would mean a sharp rebuff to Zhdanov and Malenkov, the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and to all the Communist parties in and out of the Cominform which have severally and after varying intervals endorsed its commination against the Jugoslav Communist Party. Furthermore, even the Russians are not likely to expect Tito and his henchmen to be taken in by any soft words now, as past history has shown pretty clearly the fate which would eventually be in store for them even given a temporary reconciliation. Finally, such a move would represent a set-back for Soviet policy in the Balkans and an admission of failure to coerce a recalcitrant satellite.

....

The Secretary of State for External Affairs,
Ottawa, Canada.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

(b) The second move open to Moscow is to attempt by all means at its disposal to force Jugoslavia to submit. These would include the combined hostility of the international Communist world, economic sanctions, attempts to infiltrate "sound" Communists into Jugoslavia to stir up revolt, political assassination, and perhaps as a last resort military pressure. Economic sanctions, however, it should be pointed out, would cut across all the schemes for reconstructing the orbit countries and for moulding their economies to that of the Soviet Union.

(c) Finally there is the alternative of just sitting tight and letting relations between Moscow and Belgrade become static. Wallinger thinks this is the policy that the Russians are most likely to adopt and to justify it he argues that if the Russians allow the sting of some of their more stupid accusations to be forgotten. (i.e. the accusation that the Partisans were unimportant in freeing Jugoslavia) then the patriotic sentiment aroused by the controversy will die down, and with time the majority of Jugoslav Communists will come to realise that they cannot continue as a Communist state in isolation from Moscow and the rest of the Communist world. Then pressure will appear from below to remove Tito and his supporters as the sole obstacles to their return to the bosom of Mother Church. In such a struggle Wallinger thinks Moscow would eventually win. In this argument, however, I think the Foreign Office is acting on the assumption that the Russians are logical people who have never heard of Henry the Eighth. I cannot see how Moscow can permit the present stalemate to continue over a long period in the hope that eventually the Jugoslavs will return to the fold. The longer Jugoslavia remains independent of Russia, the lower Soviet prestige in the Balkans will sink, and the more difficult it will become to maintain that absolute control which it seems to have been Moscow's aim to secure by precipitating the crisis with Tito.

3. One of the most puzzling aspects of the affair has been Albania's part in the quarrel. In view of Albania's military and economic dependence on Jugoslavia, the Foreign Office is inclined to think Hoxha would not have attacked Tito with such abandon unless he had received the previous approval of Moscow plus an assurance that his economic necessities would be forthcoming from Russia. On the other hand, the Albanian reaction is a natural one in view of the detestation the Albanians have always had for the Serb, and the restlessness of Hoxha under the tutelage of Tito. In fact one can almost imagine the Cominform indictment being received as a sort of "coup de joie" in Tirana, with the resulting moves. To complicate the affair further, the Communist Party of the People's Republic of Macedonia has issued a statement violently accusing Bulgaria and Albania of aggressive nationalism, of following anti-Macedonian policies which have done incalculable harm, and warning them that the Communist Party of the People's Republic of Macedonia will continue to fight mercilessly against these efforts. One source from inside Jugoslavia claims that the real reason for the whole dispute lies in the desire of the Cominform to set up an independent Macedonia headed by Markos. Bulgaria, it is claimed, had agreed to cede her portion but Tito had refused to follow suit. The Foreign Office is treating this story with some reserve. The Times suggests that here we may have one of the keys to the whole quarrel, inasmuch as the Macedonians will probably only be satisfied with a Balkan Federation in which they can play an adequate role.

.....

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267821

4. Some interesting information has just come to light on the history of the Balkan Federation which seems to be one of the major factors in the quarrel between Tito and Moscow. In December, 1944, the United Kingdom Embassy in Moscow received a note from the Soviet Foreign Office to the effect that Tito and Dimitrov had asked for Moscow's blessing on a plan to form a federated South Slav State. In view of the United Kingdom's interest in the matter, the Narkomindel wished to know what attitude London would take towards such a move. The United Kingdom Embassy eventually replied that it was the view of the United Kingdom Government that this question should be left in abeyance until after the end of hostilities when the respective governments of Jugoslavia and Bulgaria would then be in a better position to commit their peoples to a merger of sovereignty. So far as the United Kingdom is concerned, nothing more was heard of the matter until this winter when the question was again raised in the Balkans and resulted in a public denouncement of the scheme by Moscow.

5. Wallinger told Ford that a Bulgarian Communist who recently left the party, and Bulgaria, has informed them that the movement towards a Balkan federation originated during the war among the partisan movements in Jugoslavia and Bulgaria. The intention was to create a federal state with Tito as president, Dimitrov first vice-president and Subasic as second vice-president. They were suddenly informed one day by Moscow that the United Kingdom Government disapproved of the scheme, and as the Soviet Government could not proceed without the consent of its ally, therefore it would be best to forget plans for a federation. It is now obvious that Moscow used the excuse of the United Kingdom note on the subject to put the brakes on a scheme which it was not prepared to condemn outright itself. I have the impression this must have been only one facet of the whole question of Eastern European political cooperation and/or federation which came up during 1943-4.

6. Information reaching the Foreign Office is that inside Jugoslavia there has been as yet no visible sign of opposition to Tito, and in this connection I am sending you copies of three interesting articles by Alexander Werth, who is now the Manchester Guardian's special correspondent in Belgrade. From the other satellite capitals there come conflicting reports. A member of the Bulgarian Legation here, who is friendly to the west, reports that a recent courier from Sofia carried stories of considerable unrest among the peasants, and also a good deal of feeling favourable to Tito within the Government ranks. This does not mean that there is any likelihood of an overthrow of the Dimitrov regime, but is interpreted as an indication that Tito's stand is not without some sympathy in Bulgaria.

7. There have been indications similarly that the Jugoslav crisis has had a disturbing effect on the Roumanian Communist leadership. According to information available here there have been for some time past signs that the party is suffering from serious strain in its attempt to control the Roumanian people and that at present it disposes of only the slenderest means of making its rule successful or attractive. There is, of course, no chance of the regime being openly opposed, let alone overthrown from within, but

....

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

it appears that the Communist leadership is nervous because it knows that its grip on the country can be consolidated only if a long period of relative peace permits it to pursue its policies of communisation undisturbed. Any large scale crisis,military or economic, would so inflate its problems that it might hardly be able to cope with them. Since many of the ideological accusations hurled against Tito might also be applied to Bucharest, the nervousness in Roumanian circles is not surprising. There has been no disclaimer of the intention to collectivise agriculture, and at the same time the Party has indicated that the example of the Communist Party of the U.S.S.R. must be followed more closely.

8. As Mr. Holmes suggests, the lead in keeping up the attack on Tito seems to have been entrusted to Mr. Rakosi and the Hungarian Party, which was probably not unhappy, in any case, to indulge in the ancient Magyar sport of jumping on the Serb. In addition Rakosi has bluntly announced that collectivisation of the land would be complete within two years. This is in flagrant contradiction to a number of most solemn promises he has made over the past year to the peasants. I am attaching a number of these statements in case you may wish to use these contradictions as background for the press, or in some other way. This about face on the part of Rakosi seems to have come as a real shock in Hungary and torn away the last illusions that compromise with Communism is possible. On the other hand it does not seem likely that Dinnyes or the other remaining Small Holders will resign, but that, apparently paralysed by fear of the Communists, they will wait dully to be finally pushed out when their usefulness is over.

9. The Foreign Office is of the opinion that in spite of brave appearances there is a certain amount of concern in Communist circles in Budapest. The Government already has on its hands a serious quarrel with the Catholic Church to which has now been added the hostility of the peasants. Under present circumstances, obedience to the will of Moscow was inevitable but if Tito should stand firm and continue to receive the whole-hearted support of the Jugoslav Communists, and particularly if signs should develop of Communist wavering elsewhere, there is a possibility of an interesting situation developing in Hungary.

10. In Czechoslovakia, the Communist Party has announced that it did not intend to press for collectivisation, but on the other hand the Presidium of the Central Committee of the Czech Communist Party has, I understand, decided to act on other aspects of the Cominform 'communique, to reduce the party to a "cadre" party and to conduct a "campaign of ideological clarification". The Presidium announced that some Party organisations had accepted new members in violation of the Bolshevik principle of verifying the suitability of each individual application for membership and resolved:

(a) that mass recruiting of party members has to cease;

(b) that there must be strict adherence to the principle of individual verification and acceptance;

(c) that the regulation requiring the candidate for the party to account for his past and be sponsored by two members of not less

....

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

than two years standing who have to give oral evidence before the party committee concerned must be adhered to;

(d) that should a candidate be considered insufficiently familiar with the principles and aims of the party or if he has not worked actively in some mass organisation he will have to work for half a year or year in an extra-party organisation like the Union of Czech Youth, the Czechoslovak Soviet Friendship League or a Co-operative or Trades Union etc. during which time he will be watched and guided;

(e) that preference should be given to members of the working classes and care exercised not to accept opportunists or persons from the remnants of the capitalist class.

The Foreign Office thinks the other satellite parties will probably take similar steps to change from "mass" parties to "cadre" parties, to purify themselves ideologically, and in general to imitate slavishly the Communist Party of the Soviet Union.

11. The Polish Party seems to have been proceeding more cautiously than the others though it was announced on the 13th July that a main political aim of the party would be the setting up of village co-operative networks.

12. In general the Foreign Office is not yet prepared to hazard a guess as to what effect the quarrel with Tito may have on Soviet foreign policy. They are inclined to believe that it may lead Moscow to follow a tough line in Berlin and elsewhere for two reasons: firstly, because Moscow cannot afford to lose face in Berlin as well as in Belgrade; and secondly, in the belief that a seeming threat of war may lead the Jugoslav Communists to close ranks against the Imperialist powers and forget doctrinal differences in the face of a greater threat from the West.

13. I am sending copies of this despatch, with enclosures, to our missions in Paris, Berlin, Rome, Moscow, Athens, Belgrade, Prague and Warsaw.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your obedient servant,

(Sgd.) N.A. Robertson
High Commissioner.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

EXTRACT FROM "THE MANCHESTER GUARDIAN", July 9th, 1948.

YUGOSLAVIA UNDISMAYED

NO INTERNAL OPPOSITION TO TITO

From Alexander Werth

Belgrade, July 6.

It all looks extraordinarily different from here than from outside. There is no atmosphere of alarm or even anxiety.. There is, however, a distinct feeling of injury at what is considered a grave injustice towards Yugoslavia on the part of the Soviet Central Committee of the Communist party - not the Soviet Union or the Soviet Government, which are being studiously and consciously kept out of the whole affair as though it did not concern them. But at the same time there is, as far as one can judge, virtually complete unanimity behind Marshal Tito among the rank and file of the Communist party and all the local Communist organisations, and if there is any dissent it is only on a small scale and on the plane of academic discussions.

The stories one heard in Prague about the possibility of a civil war in Yugoslavia between Titoites and anti-Titoites are complete fantasy. There is no organised or even unorganised anti-Tito opposition inside the Communist party, still less anything that could start civil war. The Yugoslav nation appears to be more united to-day than ever before. It is believed, however - and the Yugoslav reply to the Cominform resolution clearly alludes to it, - that the Russians tried to organise some such opposition, and the indictment of Hebrang and Zujovic, who have been expelled from the Central Committee of the Yugoslav Communist party and will be tried by a tribunal, probably openly for sabotage, is widely thought to have had something to do with it.

FIRM REPLIES.

The newspapers of Belgrade are full of resolutions from all over the country supporting the present Central Committee in its stand- with Tito, Kardelj, and Gjilas at their heads. The party congress meets on the twenty-first, and it is generally believed that Tito will receive about 100 per cent support. Yugoslav replies to polemics by the Communist parties other than the Russians are marked with condescension and sarcasm bordering on contempt, the keynote being, "Who are you to tackle the Yugoslav Communist party like that?" And if the argument that Rakosi, Gottwald, and others spent the war years in Moscow while Tito and other Yugoslav leaders fought inside Yugoslavia carries little weight in Moscow (where, no doubt, it is said that they could not have learnt much about Marxist dialectics in the wilds of Bosnia), it carries enormous weight with the Yugoslav people.

At the same time there is unquestionably great regret at the Russian attitude, and the line officially taken is that it is most regrettable and deplorable that the Russians are so misinformed on the real state of Yugoslavia. They must have been misinformed by people like Herbrang and Zujovic and Professor Yudin, the editor of the Cominform paper which has now

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

been moved to Bucarest. But the truth of the matter is that the Yugoslavs feel they can afford to take this independent stand, being economically little dependent on Eastern Europe, least of all, perhaps, on Russia. Also they are geographically better placed to resist any kind of pressure. The Yugoslavs are certainly not in a state of jitters and are expecting the Russians sooner or later to change their tune. The fact that Dimitrov commissioned some underlings to attack Yugoslavia while himself rather sitting on the fence is considered a good sign.

The contrast between Belgrade as seen from here and from outside is truly comic. I came from Prague by train by way of Hungary. At Budapest all the passengers left the carriage except myself and a Belgian business man who said he had not read any papers for a fortnight. The Czech guard remarked, "People are scared to go into Yugoslavia." Yet nothing was calmer and more routine-like than the passport examination at the Yugoslav frontier or more casual than the Customs examination. As through the boundless Hungarian plains so also through the rich farmlands of Northern Yugoslavia, where the wheat is already cut and the maize high (though not high enough, owing to cool rainy weather), the train travelled normally, arriving at Belgrade on the dot. There were crowds at all the stations, with Tito slogans everywhere. There were no signs of any trouble (as reported abroad) at Novy Sad. Belgrade is lively with posters of Tito and other posters promoting the present internal loan, which is a great success. The streets and cafes are busy. Generally speaking, however, the food situation is rather difficult and this year's harvest, owing to an excess of rain, hail, and thunderstorms, will probably be worse than was expected some time ago. Manufactured goods are also short and, when sold without rations in "commercial shops" after the Russian model, they are most expensive - a cotton shirt costing £4. "The successful conclusion of the Five-year Plan means good living to you all," the slogans say. And Yugoslavia has not been getting enough from Eastern Europe greatly to facilitate the progress of the Five-year Plan. This does not mean that Yugoslavia has gone "anti-Russian." On the contrary, the Yugoslav press still publishes Tass news items debunking the Marshall Plan and even articles attributing penicillin to a Russian scientist. But there is clearly no desire on Yugoslavia's part to have her hands too closely tied by the East in economic matters. Also she wants to treat with Russia and the other Cominform countries on a level of complete equality.

A HAND-PICKED PARTY.

There has been some misconception abroad about the nature of the Yugoslav Communist party. It is not a mass party in the sense that the Rumanian and Czechoslovak parties have become mass parties. On the contrary, it is numerically much smaller and, with just under half a million members, it has about the same proportion to the population as the six millions of Russian Communists. The proportion of "cadre" members in the party is very high. Tito to the Yugoslav Communists is very much what Stalin is to Russian Communists, and the Yugoslav Communists may be said to be the most hand-picked party of all the East European parties and with probably universal allegiance to Marshal Tito.

The Yugoslavs do not think a Communist campaign of denunciation throughout Eastern Europe would shake the Yugoslav people, and they doubt whether the Russians can afford it. They think

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

it much likelier that the Soviet Government will realise that the Cominform "experiment" in putting pressure on Yugoslavia has failed, and will take a more reasonable view of their future relations with the Yugoslav Government and the Yugoslav Communist party. In short, the Yugoslavs hope that the Russian Government will patch things up, and that the Cominform will have, to some extent, to eat its own words. But whether the Yugoslavs are readmitted or not into the Cominform seems to be the least of their worries. Judging from some of their outbursts against the minor members of the Cominform, such as Rakosi, they do not seem to think it is such a very respectable bunch of people to be seen with anyway. But although Stalin, as a member of the Central Committee of the Soviet Communist party, naturally had much to do with the Cominform step neither the nor Molotov are considered "directly" involved, and Stalin's picture is still displayed in many places in Belgrade.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

REPEAT
REPETER

it much likelier that the Soviet Government will realise that the Cominform "experiment" in putting pressure on Yugoslavia has failed, and will take a more reasonable view of their future relations with the Yugoslav Government and the Yugoslav Communist party. In short, the Yugoslavs hope that the Russian Government will patch things up, and that the Cominform will have, to some extent, to eat its own words. But whether the Yugoslavs are readmitted or not into the Cominform seems to be the least of their worries. Judging from some of their outbursts against the minor members of the Cominform, such as Rakosi, they do not seem to think it is such a very respectable bunch of people to be seen with anyway. But although Stalin, as a member of the Central Committee of the Soviet Communist party, naturally had much to do with the Cominform step neither the nor Molotov are considered "directly" involved, and Stalin's picture is still displayed in many places in Belgrade.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

From THE MANCHESTER GUARDIAN, July 12th, 1948.

C267827

THE COMINFORM'S THREAT TO WORKING-CLASS UNITY

How Yugoslavs View the Split

From Alexander Werth

Belgrade, July 11

The Yugoslav Communists are now, more strongly than ever, taking the line that the Cominform has blundered, and that it is playing a game which may "endanger the whole unity of the working-class movement of the world". It is on this note of severe warning that Mr. Pijade concludes his article in "Borba", entitled "The unprincipled struggle for so-called principles."

Far from being "neutral", as observers abroad seemed to believe, Pijade has come out with a slashing attack on the Cominform. This is all the more important because Pijade's verdict was awaited with great interest, 68-year-old Pijade being the great Marxist theorist of the Yugoslav Communist party, the translator of Marx and Lenin. In the true sense an "old Bolshevik", he spent fifteen years in prison and has a party record far longer than Tito's.

"Libels" on Yugoslavia

Here are some of the main points the "grand old man" of the Yugoslav Communist party makes:

1. What exactly do the Cominform people want? What were they hoping to result from their attacks? Obviously what they were hoping for has not come off.

2. The Communist papers abroad, such as "Humanite", have already started reproducing with relish "De Gaullist" libels on Yugoslavia to the effect that Yugoslavia wants to become a Marshall country. This is a lie. But, if "Humanite" believes this, why does it not concentrate on the "outrageous" facts that Poland and Czechoslovakia asked for and received loans from the International Bank, and that Poland is doing a large amount of business with Britain? In short, the whole argument that Yugoslavia is looking to the West more than Czechoslovakia and Poland are doing has not a leg to stand on. But there is no reason why she should not look to the West for part of her trade.

3. The Cominform attacked Yugoslavia for being boastful and conceited. It was not Yugoslavia but Yugoslavia's present prosecutor, Professor Yudin, of the Cominform, who wrote last February that Yugoslavia "was achieving such successes in Socialist development that before long she would surpass Great Britain". The Yugoslavs never made such silly boasts. The Cominform accused Yugoslavia of employing Turkish terrorist methods. Is it not the Yugoslavs in Hungary who are being put in prison to-day for not subscribing to this Cominform condemnation of the Yugoslav Communist party? Is it not a member of the Yugoslav minority who has just been expelled from the Hungarian Parliament? Who then are the Turkish terrorists?

4. The Yugoslav Communist party has followed more closely than any other in the footsteps of the Soviet Communist Party and it is now a Rumanian, George Dej, who has the effrontery to attribute to the Yugoslavs the idea that "they can do without close collaboration with the East European countries and the Soviet Union".

...

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"The resolution of the Cominform", says Mr. Pijade, "also appealed to so-called healthy working-class elements in Yugoslavia to rebel against the party and State leadership." He adds with significant sarcasm: "This is done to please some of those leaders of the new democracies who reached their countries in aeroplanes, smoking their pipes, after talking to their people over the radio for four years instead of doing what the Yugoslavs did. These fought for the freedom of their country and met the Red Army as one Allied army meets another, both with a five-pointed star on their caps."

And finally, comes this severe warning to the Cominform - to stop pursuing a path which can only lead to the destruction of the international working class movement. "At present", he says, "it is hard to suppose that they will stop. But it must happen, and we are not losing faith and patience."

Yugoslav Unity

His line, it may be assumed, will be fully endorsed by the Yugoslav Communist Congress when it meets next week. The unanimity of the Yugoslav Communists and people is very striking indeed. Even assuming that one would not hear of any dissenting voices inside Yugoslavia - the numerous working class people I have talked to are certainly all for Tito without exception - there is not a single piece of evidence of any Yugoslavs abroad disowning Tito.

Most impressive are the messages published to-day from the Yugoslav students of the three military academies in Moscow, where, heaven knows, they must have been put under considerable pressure to jump precisely the other way. Their condemnation of the Cominform is complete, and they consider the Cominform statement all the more unfair as they think of all their comrades "who died with the names of Stalin and Tito on their lips."

A strong note running through all the comments is that the Yugoslav Government is a Government of the people and not a Government, such as one finds elsewhere, which was "brought there in aeroplanes" after the fighting was over. The general feeling here is that the Kremlin will have to think very hard because, if Yugoslavia is to be ostracised by the Eastern Powers, the stand she is taking now will have far-reaching results inside these countries, where at heart many people agree with the main points of Jilas's proposals last week.

1. The problem is not whether, but how, to co-operate.

2. Account must be taken of the degrees of development in each particular country and of its particular traditions.

3. Co-operation must be on a basis of mutual confidence and of voluntary agreements.

4. The pre-eminence of the Soviet Union is not denied, but there must be no interference, and the degrees of co-operation must be mutually agreed upon. Yugoslavia is thus not a vassal State but an equal partner, and it is recalled that this idea of equality and sovereignty was whole-heartedly endorsed by Stalin himself in his speech to the Finnish Government delegation in Moscow recently.

....

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

The inference of many of the comments is that Russia is less to blame than the Communist leaders of some of the neighbouring countries, who grossly misinformed the Russian Communists on the state of affairs in Yugoslavia: these were Rumanians and Hungarians, especially, who want to be crystal pure in the eyes of the Kremlin.

Thorough Answers

The Yugoslavs are certainly going out of their way to answer the Cominform charges thoroughly. "Borba" to-day publishes a very detailed article answering the charges that the Yugoslav Government is encouraging the growth of capitalism in the villages and showing exactly how, with a steep progressive scale of taxation and fruit deliveries going up to 85 per cent of a farm's output, a class of Kulaks, or "capitalist peasants", has no chance whatsoever of developing; also the maximum acreage allowed to each farm in Yugoslavia is much smaller than in Poland and Czechoslovakia.

On the other hand everybody here realises that collectivisation in the Russian sense would at the present stage throw the country into a state of chaos.

As regards the towns, the feeling here in Belgrade is that the Government has, if anything, proceeded too drastically over the nationalisation of small shops, with unfavourable effect on distribution.

What, then, if Moscow does not admit its errors? One suggestion is that there may be strong infiltrations over a certain period of "Cominform agents" into Yugoslavia who would try to crystallise some kind of Left-Wing opposition to the Government. In this connection it is perhaps significant that the papers should publish prominently a long statement showing how in Croatia numerous gangs of displaced Chetniks, Ustashi, and other terrorists were all held up in recent months and arrested at the frontier as they were trying to cross - the suggestion being that the Yugoslav intelligence service will be able to cope adequately with any infiltration tactics.

The impression one has is that there is in Yugoslavia, as in all countries, a certain riff-raff element which would co-operate with anybody - just as they co-operated with the Germans, Italians, and Quisling Governments in Croatia and Serbia. But the people of Yugoslavia, though tired and overworked after the stupendous amount of work done in the last three years and not too well fed (indeed badly fed in the towns), and at times even very discontended, are, according to all indications, now solidly behind the Government. Even with the malcontents who consider themselves more or less disinherited by the regime Tito has now gained new prestige as a national leader.

It is recalled that in a statement in 1945 Tito said that although Yugoslavia had the deepest friendship for the Soviet Union which had grown even stronger during the war, there was nothing exclusive about it and "if it were it might easily be suicidal", and he added that Yugoslavia would never become "a satellite of the Soviet Union". The Russians can scarcely have liked this statement even though it fits in precisely with what Stalin recently said to the Finns.

....

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267830

The next question is: How, if at all, will or can the Russians turn on the heat on the eve of the Communist Congress of the 21st?

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267831

From THE MANCHESTER GUARDIAN, July 13th, 1948.

KEEPING FOREIGN OPINION OUT OF YUGOSLAVIA

The Country United for Tito

From Alexander Werth

Belgrade, July 12.

The central streets of Belgrade were thronged last night with thousands of people who waved and cheered as the six or seven thousand Yugoslav athletes back from the Sokol rally in Prague paraded through the streets singing partisan songs in praise of Tito and scanning the words, "Tito Partija, Tito Partija." - that is, Tito and the Communist party.

The athletes were preceded by detachments of Yugoslav marines in spick-and-span white uniforms, and at the head of the procession young men carried a gigantic portrait of Tito decorated with flowers. It must be said, however, that the cheering was "routine" and did not portray any exceptional or unusual depths of emotion. The athletes to whom I spoke were reticent about the atmosphere in Prague, except that President Gottwald, they said, had been very amiable and friendly to all the foreign delegations at the Sokol rally.

No Criticism of Russia.

As before, the Yugoslav press is not saying anything against Russia or even against the Soviet Communist party, and when it attacks the Cominform it nearly always singles out the junior non-Russian members of the Cominform for abuse and criticisms.

To-day's press publishes a significant resolution by the central committee of the Communist party of Macedonia, in which the whole war record of the Bulgarian Communists is painted in colours far from attractive. Thus, it is claimed that while in 1942 the Bulgarian Communists had called for the withdrawal of the Bulgarian troops from Serbia, they failed to demand their withdrawal from those areas of Macedonia which were, and are again, part of Yugoslavia.

The resolution also suggests that the Bulgarian Communist party has not finally abandoned territorial claims and ambitions on parts of Macedonia belonging to Yugoslavia. The Macedonian Communists express complete solidarity with the Yugoslav Communist party.

A curious aspect of the situation here is that little or nothing at all is able to disturb, or in any way undermine, the existing feeling of national solidarity. In a way, a sort of vacuum has been created round Yugoslavia in the sense that few outside voices, which would perhaps arouse some doubts, penetrate from outside. "We are all behind Tito on the issue" is something that is so obvious to the mass of the people that no doubts arise spontaneously and no scepticism is allowed to be created artificially by foreign sources.

Communists Not Informed

Letters and airmail from abroad are exceedingly slow to come, wireless sets are not numerous, and foreign

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

REPEAT
REPETER

From THE MANCHESTER GUARDIAN, July 13th, 1948.

KEEPING FOREIGN OPINION OUT OF YUGOSLAVIA

The Country United for Tito

From Alexander Werth

Belgrade, July 12.

The central streets of Belgrade were thronged last night with thousands of people who waved and cheered as the six or seven thousand Yugoslav athletes back from the Sokol rally in Prague paraded through the streets singing partisan songs in praise of Tito and scanning the words, "Tito Partija, Tito Partija." - that is, Tito and the Communist party.

The athletes were preceded by detachments of Yugoslav marines in spick-and-span white uniforms, and at the head of the procession young men carried a gigantic portrait of Tito decorated with flowers. It must be said, however, that the cheering was "routine" and did not portray any exceptional or unusual depths of emotion. The athletes to whom I spoke were reticent about the atmosphere in Prague, except that President Gottwald, they said, had been very amiable and friendly to all the foreign delegations at the Sokol rally.

No Criticism of Russia.

As before, the Yugoslav press is not saying anything against Russia or even against the Soviet Communist party, and when it attacks the Cominform it nearly always singles out the junior non-Russian members of the Cominform for abuse and criticisms.

To-day's press publishes a significant resolution by the central committee of the Communist party of Macedonia, in which the whole war record of the Bulgarian Communists is painted in colours far from attractive. Thus, it is claimed that while in 1942 the Bulgarian Communists had called for the withdrawal of the Bulgarian troops from Serbia, they failed to demand their withdrawal from those areas of Macedonia which were, and are again, part of Yugoslavia.

The resolution also suggests that the Bulgarian Communist party has not finally abandoned territorial claims and ambitions on parts of Macedonia belonging to Yugoslavia. The Macedonian Communists express complete solidarity with the Yugoslav Communist party.

A curious aspect of the situation here is that little or nothing at all is able to disturb, or in any way undermine, the existing feeling of national solidarity. In a way, a sort of vacuum has been created round Yugoslavia in the sense that few outside voices, which would perhaps arouse some doubts, penetrate from outside. "We are all behind Tito on the issue" is something that is so obvious to the mass of the people that no doubts arise spontaneously and no scepticism is allowed to be created artificially by foreign sources.

Communists Not Informed

Letters and airmail from abroad are exceedingly slow to come, wireless sets are not numerous, and foreign

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

papers are almost impossible to obtain in Belgrade. In the last week or so, Russian newspapers have become extremely hard to come by - why exactly is not stated. The vast majority of Yugoslavs, and even the majority of the Communist party members, are therefore totally unaware of the violent war of nerves conducted against their country by Moscow radio.

Whether this Russian agitation will have any effect on the Yugoslav Communist party congress next week remains to be seen, but it seems doubtful at present. With Hebrang, and especially a strong personality like Zujovic, in prison, the rallying-point for an anti-Tito opposition, which would be more amenable to the desires of Moscow, seems for the present to have been eliminated.

There continues to be no confirmation of economic sanctions being taken against Yugoslavia by the East European countries.

A question which seems to be causing some concern and annoyance to the Yugoslav Government is the wild rumour-mongering about all sorts of alleged conflicts inside Yugoslavia that is being done in centres like Vienna. This is attributed largely to displaced Yugoslavs. Hence absurd stories such as the story of Tito's assassination and the like.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

SECRET

5th July, 1948.

Recent statements by Communist and other leaders of Hungary promising not to collectivise the land:

1. Rakosi at Saraspotak April 4th: the new farmers' ownership of land must be recorded in land register so that he may really feel that the land is his own private property. The Communist Party is doing everything so that land may safely and securely remain in his hands and develop into a prosperous holding."

2. Rakosi to small holders party's Congress April 17th: "reactionaries keep on threatening our peasants with 'tale of Kolkhoz'. They say that after nationalisation of industry the turn of the small-holdings has come. I take this opportunity to stress that no leader of our Hungarian democracy has anything like that in mind. On the contrary, our Communist Party has repeatedly emphasised that it will not brook any action against the peasants' holdings."

3. Rakosi at Mezohegyes April 25th after inveighing against the rumour-mongers scaring the farmers about nationalisation: "as Secretary General of the Communist Party I use this opportunity to refute these rumours and reassure everybody that in future also we shall defend by means the land and private property of the working peasant."

4. Veres, the Minister of Defence and leader of the National Peasant Party to party congress on April 4th: "The question of ownership of land has been definitely settled. Everything belongs to the people now and for ever. The land reform has been completed, the land register made. Now holdings must be effectively protected through legislation.....".

5. Bognar Mayor of Budapest, Smallholders' Party Congress April 18th: "Our democracy is in the service of 'the small people' and their properties. This system made it possible for us now to have 600,000 peasants with private holdings. It is a friend to private property and confessedly aims to have as many small people as possible with private properties."

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

DATE OF MINUTE

July 22nd, 1948.

INITIALS OF AUTHOR

B.A. Wallis/EMC

DEPARTMENT OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

Yugoslavia

MINUTE

ON Despatch No. 269 of July 5th from the Canadian Embassy, Moscow, regarding the estrangement between Yugoslavia and the Soviet Union. C267834

Insert particulars of despatch, memorandum or other attached document.

CIRCULATION

The significance of the Yugoslav schism lies in the fact that it is not confined within the borders of one country (as was the case with the Communist heresies of the past, whether of the so-called Left, i.e. Trotsky, Kamenev, Zinoviev, or of the so-called Right, i.e. Rykhov and Bukharin), but that it is a struggle between two Nationalist Communist Parties. The attack on Marshal Tito in the Cominform communiqué reveals that the basic guide to policy for all the Communist Parties must be the Short History of the Communist Party (Bolsheviks), which sets out the basic Communist theory as expounded and interpreted by Stalin. It would appear that no deviation from strict Russian Communist orthodoxy is to be permitted.

2. The Chargé d'Affaires considers the fundamental charge against Marshal Tito to be the charge of nationalism. It is almost certain that Tito differed from the Kremlin on questions of foreign policy, such as Trieste, Austrian Carinthia, relations with General Markos, the position of Macedonia and Albania, and the question of a Balkan Federation.

3. The Chargé d'Affaires considers the ideological differences to be of secondary importance in explaining the causes of the dispute. Soviet policy appears to be always to hurl abuse at its enemies or rivals. The terms of abuse employed are not always consistent with one another. For example, the Yugoslav heretics are accused of Trotskyite errors, i.e. of Left-Wing diversion, and at the same time, of Bukharinist opportunism, i.e. of Right-Wing diversion. When the Yugoslav Communist Party is accused of not taking a sufficiently revolutionary view of what is required in economic policy, it would appear that the charge is Right-Wing diversion; but the Yugoslav Communist Party is also charged with passing hasty Leftist measures - i.e., Left-Wing diversion. Marshal Tito is attacked for having dismissed Hebrang and Zujovic, but it is not clear whether these men were dismissed for Left-Wing insistence on revolutionary measures against the kulaks and capitalists or for Right-Wing caution about the Leftist nationalization measures passed recently by the Yugoslav Government. Further evidence that the basis of the trouble is not the outraged orthodoxy of the Cominform but national differences, is to be found in the fact that the ideological criticisms made against Yugoslavia could equally well be applied to other Communist Parties. For example, the necessity of domination of the Popular Front by the Communist Party could be directed to other Eastern European states.

4. A further charge against the Yugoslav Communist Party is insubordination. The communiqué reveals that the Communist Party of the Soviet Union is not merely first among equals but is regarded as unique and dominant. The true nature of the Cominform is also made evident. In fact, Section 7 of the Resolution passed at its first meeting in Poland refers to the "indisputable premise" of the Cominform "that any Party must account of itself to the Information Bureau".

5. In agrarian policy, the Yugoslav Communist Party appears to have deviated from orthodoxy in its attitude to the prosperous peasants. The prescribed agrarian policy for satellite countries would appear to be a slow but

THIS MINUTE TO BE STAPLED TO, AND FILED WITH, THE DOCUMENT TO WHICH IT REFERS, UNDER THE DATE OF THE DOCUMENT.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

DATE OF MINUTE

INITIALS OF AUTHOR

DEPARTMENT OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

MINUTE

ON

C267835

Insert particulars of despatch, memorandum or other attached document.

CIRCULATION

deliberate advance towards collectivization through such transitional stages as the expropriation and dividing up of the large estates followed by the establishment of co-operative societies. In this, the support of the poor and medium peasantry must be sought and a wedge driven between them and the rich peasants or kulaks. Tito may have refused to accept the premise that the kulaks must be liquidated. On the other hand, he is accused of too hasty measures in the attempt to liquidate the capitalist elements and kulaks. It would appear that the Yugoslav Communist Party is accused of aiming to liquidate kulaks before the necessary groundwork for such measures has been laid. If, on the other hand the charge is one of moving too slowly towards collectivization, it should be levelled against the other satellite states as well.

6. The Chargé d'Affaires trusts that there will be no hasty inclination to assume that Soviet power in Eastern Europe is disintegrating. It is also to be hoped that the Western powers will not court Tito by crude methods, for any indication that Yugoslavia might become an "imperialist" base would provoke drastic action by the Soviet Union. It is also to be hoped that those who called Tito a tyrant when he was shooting down American 'planes do not now discover that he is a genial father of his people.

THIS MINUTE TO BE STAPLED TO, AND FILED WITH, THE DOCUMENT TO WHICH IT REFERS, UNDER THE DATE OF THE DOCUMENT.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

CONFIDENTIAL

CANADIAN EMBASSY

MOSCOW, July 5th, 1948.

No. 269

Sir:

I have the honour to enclose* a translation of the Communique published in Pravda of 29th June on the conference of the Information Bureau of the Communist Parties in Bucharest dealing with the policy of the Communist Party of Yugoslavia. There is no question that this is one of the most important documents in the history of the Communist Party and that it will be a long time before we have fully comprehended its implications. In this despatch I propose merely to make preliminary comments, many of which may be out of date before this despatch reaches you. Any comment from Moscow at this time must be cautious because of the scarcity of information. What has appeared in the Moscow papers has been of a limited nature. The only news we have received of developments in Yugoslavia itself and of the relations between Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria have been brief reports on the B.B.C., and I shall avoid for the time being, therefore, comment on the international implications.

2. The way in which this subject has been treated by the Soviet press is perhaps not without significance. There was no warning whatsoever to the Russian people that there was trouble with Yugoslavia, although the absence of news about Yugoslavia had probably not remained unnoticed. The Communique itself was published only in Pravda, the organ of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union. Much of the Communique must have been and still remains unintelligible to the Soviet reader, for it assumes some acquaintance with correspondence between the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and the Communist Party of Yugoslavia, the contents of which have not been revealed. Since the 29th June Pravda has published each day a summary of statements by foreign Communist parties and opinions expressed by foreign Communist newspapers on the Communique. Only on one day has this summary appeared in papers other than Pravda. On July 2nd all papers reported that the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, having heard the report of its delegates at Bucharest, had approved the results of the work of the conference and the resolution concerning the Yugoslav Communist Party. It is noteworthy, however, that there has been no editorial comment whatsoever by Pravda or by any other Soviet paper, although Communist papers in other countries have been free to express their opinions. These opinions, as reported by Tass, seem to be nothing more than reaffirmations of the arguments in the resolution. They are even more parrot-like than usual and suggest both timidity and ignorance of the "score" on the part of the editors. The

* Not attached.

The Right Honourable
The Secretary of State
for External Affairs,
Ottawa, Canada.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

satellite editors have concentrated on the "nationalism" of the Yugoslav Communist Party and the "conceit" of Tito. They also criticize frequently the Yugoslavs' claim that they had played the major role in their own liberation, a claim which was not specifically mentioned in the Communique of the Cominform. Presumably the authorities in Moscow think it better that the satellites rather than they themselves should condemn the Yugoslavs for their ingratitude to the Soviet Army. The satellite Communists pay less attention in their comment to the embarrassing question of the deviations from orthodoxy of the Yugoslav leaders.

3. In the absence of comment in the press there is no way of knowing anything about the Russian response to these developments. Among the diplomats in Moscow there has been considerable excitement. Few, however, are prepared to talk rashly as yet about Belgrade as the "new Byzantium", a term which has been used by the United Kingdom Ambassador in Belgrade. The Yugoslav Ambassador in Moscow, General Popovich, left Moscow on June 16th, and it has been assumed that he is in Belgrade. He is believed to have been a member of Marshal Tito's entourage, and there is much speculation as to whether he will return to Moscow. The first occasion after the publication of the communique on which the Diplomatic Corps assembled was at the July 1st reception in this Embassy. Unfortunately I was not in a position to do more on that occasion than mutter politely, but some of my United Kingdom colleagues reported interesting conversations. They said that the Yugoslav Charge d'Affaires spoke quite frankly and bitterly about the action of the Cominform. In his view the Yugoslavs had been let down by Moscow. The Polish Ambassador, not surprisingly, took an orthodox line. The views of the Yugoslav Charge d'Affaires have since been affirmed as strongly by the Yugoslav First Secretary in a talk with the New Zealand Third Secretary, who has been on friendly terms with him.

4. There is no doubt that this blunt action by the Cominform came as a surprise, even though the fact that there was trouble with the Yugoslav Government was an open secret. On second thought, however, this breach in the Communist front is not surprising. It is by no means the first breach in the Communist Party, which has been rent by schism since its earliest days. This split is, in fact, along conventional lines. It may be compared with the schism which troubled the Communist Party of the Soviet Union in the 'twenties'. The position of the so-called oppositionists of those days, led by Trotsky and joined later by Kamenev and Zinoviev, is in some ways not unlike that of the Yugoslavs. What is interesting, however, is that the criticisms now levelled by the Cominform against the Yugoslavs are the criticisms which Trotsky levelled against Stalin. Trotsky, you will recall, complained of the excessive bureaucracy in the Communist Party and of the absence of democracy. He complained of the adulation of the leader. It was he who, towards the end of the N.E.P. period, complained that Stalin was making a fatal error in seeking to conciliate the kulaks. Trotsky also pressed for careful economic planning and "super-industrialisation". There is a similarity also between Trotsky's view that socialism would not be established in one country and the Cominform's criticism of Yugoslavia for thinking they would achieve socialism by their own exertions. The fact that these are the arguments now used by Stalin and his Cominform seems less extraordinary if one remembers that Trotsky had no sooner been expelled from the Communist Party than Stalin himself launched the first Five Year Plan and set out to liquidate the kulaks, as Trotsky had advocated.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Schisms both of the so-called Left, i.e. Trotsky, Kamenev and Zinoviev and later of the so-called Right, i.e. Rykhov and Bukharin, and divergencies between Moscow and Leningrad Communists, continued until the purges of 1936-8 established discipline and at least a facade of unity by the brutalest of measures.

5. Heresies and schisms are implicit in the nature of the Communist Party, and there is no reason to believe that they have ceased since 1938, just because they have not been made public. Even if the acknowledged goal is the same, there will always be a divergence between those who are temperamentally opportunists and those who are temperamentally theorists. Diversionaries in the Soviet Union have been both of the Right and of the Left, and the actual policy of the Soviet Communist Party has been formulated by a mixture of theory and opportunism. When the Yugoslavs are now accused of being disloyal to the principles of Marxism-Leninism, they are not necessarily any more disloyal than was Trotsky or Bukharin. What is now called Marxism-Leninism is, in fact, a kind of ex post facto rationalisation of Stalin's policy as set out in the Short History of the Communist Party and other gospels. This new orthodoxy represents an amalgam of wisdom derived from the Russian experience with Marxism. That it is necessarily applicable without considerable room for deviation to other Communist states is questionable. Officially the Communists here admit frequently the validity of the Leninist principle that there will be local variations in interpretation and differences in timing. In fact, it appears that the fanaticism associated with the name of Zhdanov is prevailing and that other Communist states will be forced to follow a strict line of Russian orthodoxy. One has only to read the Belgrade Cominform Organ to realise that the basic guide to policy must be the history of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union. Herein seems to lie the seed of much trouble. A basic principle of Bolshevik policy, for instance, has been the militant alliance of workers and peasants, with the proletarian workers always in the dominant position. Such a relationship may have been possible in the Soviet Union where the industrial proletariat, although greatly outnumbered by the peasantry, had some basis of strength. It is questionable, however, whether it has much chance of success in countries like Bulgaria, Albania, or even Yugoslavia, where the industrial proletariat is infinitesimal. At the other end of the scale it is equally questionable whether an advanced industrial country like Czechoslovakia will be able to accept the Russian pattern of agrarian policy throughout.

6. The significance of this schism as compared with previous schisms is that it is not confined within the borders of one country, but is between two national Communist parties. There have previously been differences between national Communist parties, but this is the first time that so much dirty linen has been washed in public - and in which the heretic has shown so little sign of submission. Aside from Trotsky, the Russian heretics recanted once or several times, and not only when in the shadow of the firing squad. The reasons for these recantations are much disputed, but one probable explanation is that they were made in obedience to a kind of higher patriotism. Whether that patriotism was to international Communism or to Russia is hard to say. Students of Russia and

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

particularly of Russian religion have pointed out that this desire to submit oneself to the common will rather than to live outside one's own "congregation" is deeply embedded in the Russian character. Foreign Communists have often in the past shown a similar disposition to bow to the will of Moscow, but these questions of higher loyalties become more uncertain when the national interests of two proud peoples are involved.

7. The fundamental charge against Marshal Tito and the Yugoslav Communist Party is, I think, the charge of nationalism. The first criticism listed in the Resolution is that of pursuing a policy unfriendly to the Soviet Union and the C.P.S.U. and an unworthy policy of vilifying Soviet military specialists and discrediting the Soviet Army. Tito, according to recent editorials in the Belgrade Cominform Organ and in subsequent comment of Communist papers, is considered to have ideas too big for him. He is, after all, the only Communist leader in a satellite country who could be said to have fought his own way to the top and not to have been infiltrated into control by Moscow. He is a rival power. He has a strong personality and popular appeal, and has even been adored in other satellite countries as second only to the great Stalin. It is almost certain, furthermore, that he has differed with Moscow on questions of foreign policy, for example, over Trieste and the Danubian conference (my letter of June 25th to Mr. Pearson). There is much speculation here in Moscow as to the differences which there have probably been also over relations with General Markos, the position of Macedonia, the position of Albania, and the question of Balkan federation, but no one with whom I have come in contact has any concrete information on this subject. The Greek Charge d'Affaires, when I talked to him, admitted that he could do no more than speculate. That Moscow has disapproved of Balkan federation, or at least of the public proclamation of this as an ultimate goal, was made clear when Pravda rebuked Dimitrov last winter (my despatch No. 75 of February 5th, 1948). Nevertheless, Dimitrov on June 2nd of this year said to a United Press Correspondent in Sofia that the Bulgarian and Yugoslav peoples were preparing a federation of their People's Republics, the final realisation of which would take place when the two Governments considered the question ripe in all respects. These words were published without rebuke and presumably with approval in the Moscow papers. The relationship between Tito and Dimitrov on this and other issues is an important question on which I regret that I can shed no light. One might take for granted that the Yugoslavs have been in favour of federation with Bulgaria because they would no doubt dominate such federation. One might also take for granted that two such strong personalities as Tito and Dimitrov would not be on the best of terms. On the other hand, one is inclined to suspect that both Tito and Dimitrov, being the most famous Communist leaders outside the Soviet Union, are viewed with some suspicion by Moscow and that there would be a temptation, therefore, for the two of them to work together, at least in conditional alliance, towards a Balkan federation which would strengthen their own independent base. My impression, from reading the Moscow press and the Belgrade Organ, is that the favourite son of the Kremlin is now Rakosi, whose role seems to be to interpret the pure doctrine on behalf of his Moscow masters.

8. The impudence of the Yugoslavs is best shown in their spying upon Soviet representatives in Yugoslavia. No aspect of this affair has been the cause of more gratification

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

and amusement among foreigners in Moscow. As for the situation here, we have assumed that our colleagues from the satellite countries were treated by the M.V.D. very much as we ourselves. All the evidence seems to suggest that the satellite diplomatic missions receive few, if any, special privileges. Soviet citizens do not seem to be allowed to associate with them much more than with Westerners, and they have the same difficulty getting out their Soviet wives. All this is, I think, indicative of what seems to be the crass stupidity of the Russians in handling their brothers. There is rarely the slightest concession to the legitimate national pride of these countries. They, like the Uzbeks and the Ukrainians, may continue their own folkways, but they must always acknowledge that the Russians are greater and better than they. Never, on May 1st or on any other occasion, have I seen a Polish, a Yugoslav, or a Czechoslovak flag in Moscow, except in very small and limited quantities at railway stations when visiting statesmen are expected. It is only arrogance, stupidity, or insensitivity that leads the Russians to humiliate so proud a people as the Yugoslavs by forcing them to admit that their own partisan activities during the War were of minor importance. Here, it seems likely, is the root of the present trouble and, one should expect, the root of further trouble. The prospects of the Russians holding the loyalty of these people by love rather than by force seems small.

9. Although the implications of the ideological comments in the Communique are extremely interesting, their importance in explaining the causes of the dispute are probably secondary. The purist will find it difficult to classify the ideological basis of the Communique. The Yugoslav heretics are accused of Trotskyite errors - in other words of Left Wing diversionary thoughts. At the same time they are accused of the errors of Bukharinist opportunism - in other words, of Right Wing diversion. In addition they are called petty bourgeois nationalists, and one of the French Communist leaders has called them Bonapartists. The only charge they seem to have escaped is that of formalism. The explanation, I think, is that it has always been Soviet policy to hurl names indiscriminately at an enemy. If one studies the Short History of the Communist Party, one finds it very difficult to disentangle from the epithets the threads of Trotskyite or Bukharinist thought. All the enemies are lumped together and are called anything from "fascists" to "capitalist revivalists". There is, of course, a basis of truth in that, in their opposition to Stalin, the Right Wing and Left Wing in the Soviet Union did at times work together, and if any credence whatsoever is to be placed in the evidence of the Moscow trials, with fascist agents abroad as well. All this, I think, points to the conclusion that ideological differences are not nearly so great as the strength of the language used would suggest. Many reputable students of Soviet affairs state that they can find no important ideological variation between the views of Stalin and Trotsky. The popular view is that Trotsky was in favour of more drastic measures in the Soviet Union and emphasised the necessity of world revolution, whereas Stalin favoured an opportunistic policy at home and argued the possibility of building socialism in one state. In fact, after Trotsky's expulsion, Stalin pressed on with a drastic industrial and agrarian policy, and he never ceased to work for world revolution. It is not suggested that the many arguments

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267841

over policy were meaningless, but rather that they were secondary to personal differences.

10. Looking at the situation from Moscow and without at present much information on the situation in Yugoslavia, it is difficult to decide whether Tito's is a Right Wing or a Left Wing diversion. Our understanding, before the Communique, was that Hebrang and Zujovic had been dismissed from the Yugoslav Cabinet for wanting to go slow in economic policy. The Cominform resolution, however, seems to accuse the Yugoslav Government of not taking a sufficiently revolutionary view of what was required in the way of economic policy. By criticising the dismissal of the two Ministers, it seems to identify them with the Left and Tito with the Right. It is not clear, however, whether these men were dismissed for a Left Wing insistence on revolutionary measures against the kulaks and capitalists, or for a Right Wing caution about the extreme and hasty Leftist measures which the Yugoslav Government are accused of having passed recently. One's first impression of the document is that the charge against Tito is of Right Wing opportunism. It is possible, however, to read the charge as one of haste and carelessness, of not fomulating a sound long-term plan and of not initiating long-range measures in order to lay a firm basis for socialism. If, as we sometimes hear, the economic situation in Yugoslavia is deteriorating, the Cominform may thus be putting itself in a position to argue that it is not socialism which has failed in Yugoslavia, but those who have wrongly applied the principles of socialism.

11. Further evidence that the basis of the trouble is not the outraged orthodoxy of the Cominform, but rather national differences between Yugoslavia and the Soviet Union is to be found in the fact that the ideological criticisms which are made against the Yugoslavs could be applied equally well to other Communist Parties. It is true that the principles proclaimed in the Resolution are all currently orthodox. The Cominform Organ and the Moscow press for months have been harping on the necessity for more democracy within the Party, for the need to strengthen the alliance between the workers and the peasants, and for the necessity on the part of the Communist Party to maintain domination within a coalition. The argument against the Popular Front and the necessity of domination by the Communist Party is one which, in particular, could be directed towards other Communist leaders. Most of the other Communist parties in the satellite countries are, of course, working swiftly to eliminate their allies, and it may be that the complaint against Tito is that he has not been taking similar measures. On the other hand, the Communist parties in many countries, for example Italy and Canada, are still working hard to maintain, or at least to forge an alliance with Left Wing Socialists. The fact that the Communist leaders can now come out in the open as to the real role of the Communist Party in coalition, may well be an indication of their confidence that the transitional stage has been successfully passed and that their domination is now so complete in the satellite countries that they need not worry about the Social Democrats any longer. On the other hand, they might have been more considerate of the unfortunate Signor Nenni in Genoa and of Tim Buck in Toronto.

12. The complaint of bureaucracy and an absence of democracy in the Yugoslav Communist Party seems the most preposterous of all the charges, coming as it does from quarters not distinguished for their democratic methods. It is monstrous that the Soviet Communist Party, which has

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

REPEAT
REPETER

over policy were meaningless, but rather that they were secondary to personal differences.

10. Looking at the situation from Moscow and without at present much information on the situation in Yugoslavia, it is difficult to decide whether Tito's is a Right Wing or a Left Wing diversion. Our understanding, before the Communique, was that Hebrang and Zujovic had been dismissed from the Yugoslav Cabinet for wanting to go slow in economic policy. The Cominform resolution, however, seems to accuse the Yugoslav Government of not taking a sufficiently revolutionary view of what was required in the way of economic policy. By criticising the dismissal of the two Ministers, it seems to identify them with the Left and Tito with the Right. It is not clear, however, whether these men were dismissed for a Left Wing insistence on revolutionary measures against the kulaks and capitalists, or for a Right Wing caution about the extreme and hasty Leftist measures which the Yugoslav Government are accused of having passed recently. One's first impression of the document is that the charge against Tito is of Right Wing opportunism. It is possible, however, to read the charge as one of haste and carelessness, of not fomulating a sound long-term plan and of not initiating long-range measures in order to lay a firm basis for socialism. If, as we sometimes hear, the economic situation in Yugoslavia is deteriorating, the Cominform may thus be putting itself in a position to argue that it is not socialism which has failed in Yugoslavia, but those who have wrongly applied the principles of socialism.

11. Further evidence that the basis of the trouble is not the outraged orthodoxy of the Cominform, but rather national differences between Yugoslavia and the Soviet Union is to be found in the fact that the ideological criticisms which are made against the Yugoslavs could be applied equally well to other Communist Parties. It is true that the principles proclaimed in the Resolution are all currently orthodox. The Cominform Organ and the Moscow press for months have been harping on the necessity for more democracy within the Party, for the need to strengthen the alliance between the workers and the peasants, and for the necessity on the part of the Communist Party to maintain domination within a coalition. The argument against the Popular Front and the necessity of domination by the Communist Party is one which, in particular, could be directed towards other Communist leaders. Most of the other Communist parties in the satellite countries are, of course, working swiftly to eliminate their allies, and it may be that the complaint against Tito is that he has not been taking similar measures. On the other hand, the Communist parties in many countries, for example Italy and Canada, are still working hard to maintain, or at least to forge an alliance with Left Wing Socialists. The fact that the Communist leaders can now come out in the open as to the real role of the Communist Party in coalition, may well be an indication of their confidence that the transitional stage has been successfully passed and that their domination is now so complete in the satellite countries that they need not worry about the Social Democrats any longer. On the other hand, they might have been more considerate of the unfortunate Signor Nenni in Genoa and of Tim Buck in Toronto.

12. The complaint of bureaucracy and an absence of democracy in the Yugoslav Communist Party seems the most preposterous of all the charges, coming as it does from quarters not distinguished for their democratic methods. It is monstrous that the Soviet Communist Party, which has

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

not held a Party Congress since before the War, should complain that the Yugoslav Communist leaders had set themselves off from the people. It is true, nevertheless, that the Soviet Party press has been carrying on a long campaign for more "democracy" within the Party and accusing local Party leaders of losing touch with the people. No theme in all Communist publications is more constantly emphasised than that of the need for criticism and self-criticism. What this means is hard to say. It is not all camouflage. Such propaganda is in accordance with the continued emphasis on the education of Party members and the need to sustain their interest and alertness. During the War in this country, and shortly after the War in the satellite countries, the membership of the Party increased much too rapidly. The emphasis now is everywhere on weeding out the faint-hearted and unreliable and disciplining the minds of those who remain. What the Communist leaders seek to achieve, when they call for more democracy, may be simply to excite the enthusiasm and the ambitions of all Party members without, however, disturbing the fundamental basis of Party authority, which, in fact, flows out from rather than into the centre. The reason, however, for making this charge against the Yugoslav leaders may be a good deal simpler. The Communique ends with what is virtually a call for rebellion on the part of the members of the Communist Party in Yugoslavia. One of the best ways of encouraging rebellion is to persuade the members that they have been shabbily treated by their leaders.

13. A further charge against the Yugoslavs, in addition to nationalism, unorthodoxy and undemocratic habits, is insubordination. The initiative in this matter was taken not by the Cominform, but by the C.P.S.U. Such an initiative may have been justified if the principal charge was anti-Soviet activity, but not if the principal charge was diversion from the principles of Marxism-Leninism. Throughout the Communique and in the comments on it by satellite Communists there is little attempt to pretend that the C.P.S.U. is merely primus inter pares; it is unique and dominant. From the point of view of Communist propaganda this is perhaps the most damaging aspect of the affair. The ruthless treatment of a member who shows signs of independence is bound to shock anyone who was not impressed by the Prague coup. On this subject the final chapter remains to be written. We shall not know just how ruthless the Soviet Communists are determined to be until we know whether Tito is allowed to get away with his behaviour. One thing, however, has become clear, and that is the true nature of the Cominform. In the preliminary editorials in the "Belgrade Organ" reference was made to the fact that the French and Italian Communist leaders had had the error of their ways pointed out at the first Cominform meeting, had duly confessed and promised a new life. Section 7 of the Resolution refers to the "indisputable premise" of the Cominform "that any Party must account of itself to the Information Bureau". I need not labour the implication of such a revelation at a time when the propaganda of the Soviet Union is directed toward proving their respect for the sovereignty and equality of nations and alleging interference and domination of the crudest kind on the part of the United States.

14. For the student of Communist policy the most interesting section of the Communique is undoubtedly that which deals with agrarian policy. This is worthy of closer examination, not only because of its intrinsic interest as an indication of agrarian policy, but also because it reveals most clearly the way in which the Soviet Union is determined to impose its own methods on its satellites. In order to

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

understand wherein the Yugoslavs have erred, it is necessary to recall the developments of agrarian policy within the Soviet Union. These were roughly as follows:-

(1) 1917-21. The dividing up of big estates and the establishment of poor and needy peasants on them;

(2) 1921-27, New Economic Policy. Encouragement of the enterprising farmer or kulak to produce and sell as much as possible;

(3) 1927-30. The encouragement of collectivisation and a policy of "restricting" the kulaks;

(4) 1930 on. Drastic measures to assure collectivisation and the "liquidation" of the kulak.

These developments in the Soviet Union were the results of twists and turns, the application of theory at one time and opportunistic decisions at another to achieve an end which was prescribed from the beginning. Now, the separate steps are all set out pat in the Short History of the Communist Party, as a guide for "new democracies". The history is, of course, not objective history. It is, insofar as possible, an account of what would have happened if the Bolsheviks had always known as much as they know now. The N.E.P. period, for instance, is dismissed somewhat apologetically and the implication is that this stage may be minimised or missed entirely by those setting out anew on the path.

15. The prescribed agrarian policy for satellite countries, if one may judge from many statements by Cominform leaders, is that they should proceed slowly but deliberately towards collectivisation as an eventual goal. The first stage of expropriation and dividing up the big estates has been completed. The present stage is one of the development of co-operative methods in order to train the peasants in habits which will lead them to accept collectivisation. Lenin, as quoted in the Short History of the Communist Party, speaks of co-operative societies "as a means of transition - a means within the reach and understanding of the peasant millions - from small individual farming to large-scale producing associations or collective farms". Co-operative institutions of all kinds have been established in the satellite countries, but except in isolated cases and for special purposes there seem to have been no collective farms. The exact difference between a "co-operative" and a "collective" is not entirely clear, but the co-operative seems to be, at least ostensibly, a more voluntary organisation. To judge, however, from descriptions by Communist leaders themselves and in particular from an eye-witness report of a Yugoslav farm by a British expert in the Spectator of June 25th, the satellite Communist parties are endeavouring to develop, in the guise of a co-operative farm, something very similar to a kolkhoz - including even the familiar cultural and propagandist features of the latter. The Communist leaders have been careful to avoid the term "collective farm" in order not to frighten the Eastern European peasants, but no one with any knowledge of the history of Communist policy in the Soviet Union could have the slightest doubt as to what is eventually intended. There is nothing more clear in Marxist-Leninist-Stalinist doctrine than the belief that the individual peasant farmer will prove a last-ditch capitalist and must be eliminated if socialism is to be secure.

16. It is in their attitude to the prosperous

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

peasant that the Yugoslav Communists seem to have gone wrong. According to what evidence is available, including the article in the Spectator mentioned above, the Yugoslav Communists have endeavoured, like the Communists in other satellite countries, to develop co-operative enterprises and educate their peasants in the advantages of large-scale farming. In this they seem to have moved quite as fast towards the ultimate goal as any of the other satellite countries. It appears, however, that they have departed from one basic thesis of Stalinist doctrine on this subject. Orthodox Communists are prepared to conceal from the kulak for a time his ultimate fate, but they must not abandon their long-range endeavour to drive a wedge between the kulak or rich peasant on the one hand and the so-called "poor and medium peasants" on the other. The "poor" peasants are considered the only reliable allies of the working class, and the "medium" peasants as allies who may be won over. The kulak, however, is a hopeless case and must be destroyed. The Russians themselves encouraged the kulak to grow food during the years of hardship after 1921, only to exterminate him later. Tito, it would appear from the Communique, has refused to accept the premise that the kulak is inevitably an enemy. In a country like Yugoslavia he may well feel that the industrial proletariat is scarcely strong enough to fight the kulak and by no means confident of the support in such a struggle of the "poor and medium peasant" who, as often happened in the Soviet Union, tends to identify his interests with those of other peasants, whether rich or poor.

17. The evidence in the Communique, however, is conflicting. There is some reference to hasty measures against the kulaks taken by the Yugoslav leaders after the criticism by the C.P.S.U. This intention to "liquidate the capitalist elements in the present conditions of Yugoslavia and consequently the kulaks, too, as a class", is described by the Cominform as "adventurous and un-Marxist". There is an apparent contradiction here, as Tito seems to have been accused earlier of not being sufficiently ruthless towards the kulaks. In the first place, one must admit the possibility that the Cominform is genuinely concerned about what seem to them unwise policies which would not only fail in Yugoslavia but which would discredit socialism elsewhere. They seem to be complaining that the Yugoslavs are mixing up their stages and setting out to liquidate the kulaks before stage 4 (as in the Soviet Union) has been reached. Contrary to what seems to have been a first impression abroad, the Communique does not state that the Yugoslavs should speed up collectivisation. It demands only that they should proceed with the "long preliminary, preparatory work with regard to restricting capitalist elements in the countryside, consolidating the union of the working class and the peasantry under the direction of the working class, developing socialist industry capable of organising the production of machinery for the collective method of agriculture." The Yugoslavs are, in fact, accused of inordinate haste rather than tardiness, their recent measures indicating their intention to liquidate the kulaks as in stage 4, when they are still only in something which might be called the early phases of stage 3. The Communists know only too well from their own Russian experiences the terrible cost of violent agricultural changes before the ground has been suitably prepared, and they do not wish the Yugoslavs to make similar errors. If this were all that the Cominform had on its mind, a sensible enough case could be made out for their arguments.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

18. If the charge, on the other hand, is one of moving too slowly towards collectivisation rather than of deviation from the pattern, then it could surely have been levelled against other satellite countries, in particular Poland, Czechoslovakia, and Hungary. The Czech Communist leaders, so far as I am aware, have never admitted that collectivisation was even their ultimate aim. I tried several days ago to get a little information about agrarian policy in Czechoslovakia from the new Czechoslovak Ambassador in Moscow, who is generally believed to be a good follower of the Party line. I approached the question ingenuously enough - from the weather to the harvest prospects, to the organisation of Czech farming. When I merely said that I assumed they had been developing co-operatives in Czechoslovakia since the War, Mr. Lastovicka was roused to categorical denial. I had deliberately used the word "co-operative" and not the dangerous word "collective", but I was told that nothing whatsoever had been done about furthering co-operative measures; the Czechs had simply divided up the land, too much of which had belonged to big landowners and the church. When I pressed, it was admitted that machine-tractor-stations had been set up, and the Ambassador finally said that perhaps sometime, eventually, there would be "co-operatives". I note that the Czechoslovak Prime Minister is reported by the B.B.C. to have denied that collectivisation of farms would be proceeded with in Czechoslovakia. According to the B.B.C., the Prime Minister said that the land in Czechoslovakia would for all time belong to those who till it. This is indeed a sinister phrase for the peasant farmer, because it is exactly the same phrase which was used as a slogan in the early days of the Soviet Union. It is not considered incompatible with collectivisation, because the Communist theory is that the kolkhoz does, in fact, belong to those who till it.

19. This subject is too large to be dealt with at once, and I assume that we shall be examining its implications in all phases of Soviet policy for some time to come. The above comments are preliminary, and I expect to be writing further when more information is available about the state of affairs in Yugoslavia itself. Little evidence has yet reached us of the attitude of the Western public to these events. I trust that there is no hasty inclination to assume that Soviet power is disintegrating or the Eastern bloc breaking up. The breach in the Cominform could seriously weaken international Communism, but it is much too early to take anything for granted. It is to be hoped also that the Western powers do not court Tito by crude methods, for any indication at this point that Yugoslavia might become an "imperialist" base would provoke drastic action by the Russians. For the sake of our moral cause it is also to be hoped that those who called Tito a ruthless tyrant when he was shooting down American 'planes do not now discover that he is a genial father of his people.

20. I am sending copies of this despatch (without enclosure) to London, Paris, Belgrade, Prague and Warsaw.

I have the honour to be,
Sir,
Your obedient servant,

(signed) J.W. Holmes

Charge d'Affaires a.i.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

DS/YS

NAR/ET
31 July, 1942

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER:

C267846

Mr. Gavrilovic, the new Counsellor of the Yugoslav Legation, who has just arrived after a year as Yugoslav Consul-General in South Africa, called at the Department this afternoon. He spoke very warmly of the courtesy and cooperation he and the Yugoslav Ministers had received from Dr. Laureys while they were in South Africa on their roundabout journey to this continent. I have written Laureys conveying the Yugoslavs' appreciation of the assistance he was able to give them.

Mr. Gavrilovic asked me to give you a personal message from M. Nintchic, who greatly appreciated a personal letter he had received from you on his return to New York. Mr. Nintchic left for the United Kingdom very shortly after receiving your letter. He told Mr. Gavrilovic that he is looking forward to writing to you from London.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

NAR/SR
21.12.42

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER

C267847

The fire, reported in this morning's papers, in the Yugoslav Legation was not in the Minister's residence on Laurier Avenue but in the house they have rented for their Legation offices at 259 Daly Avenue. I understand from Mr. Gavrilovic, the Charge d'Affaires, that their official papers were saved, thanks to the quick work of the local firemen, and that damage to the property is quite limited.

Dr. Cankar, who has been in England consulting his Government, is expected back within a few days.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

DS/Yugoslavia LBP/SR
9.9.47

C267848

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER

You will recall that there has been some difficulty and delay over the request for the agrément for Mr. Jaksic, who has been nominated by his Government as Yugoslav Minister to Canada. The difficulties in this matter were increased by a report from Belgrade, which appeared some time ago in the press, that Mr. Jaksic's appointment had been confirmed. Mr. Lukin, the Yugoslav Chargé d'Affaires, however, has informed us that this report was entirely unauthorized, and must have been the result of a leakage in Belgrade; that they are still waiting to hear from the Canadian Government whether Mr. Jaksic's appointment would be acceptable.

I have talked over the whole matter with Mr. St. Laurent, and he feels that, in the circumstances, it would now be desirable to accept this appointment; especially as we have now asked the Yugoslav Government to accept Mr. Emile Vaillancourt as the first Canadian Minister.

There are obvious disadvantages in this course, but those disadvantages would, I think, be even greater if we refused, formally, the request for agrément (something which has been very rarely done in diplomatic history), and then accepted another appointment, which would probably not be any improvement over Jaksic.

L.B.P.

Read
12-F-47

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Memorandum re Meeting of the Prime Minister with Deputations - Requests for Interviews P-100-C 1944

JWP/JMC
7.4.44.

C267849

Memorandum re Meeting of the Prime Minister with a delegation of the Canadian Palestine Committee, held in the Prime Minister's Office, East Block, Ottawa, on Friday, March 31st, 1944 at 10.30 a.m.

The following represented the Canadian Palestine Committee:

Robert Fennell, K.C., President, Board of Trade, Toronto

A. R. Mosher, Esq., Canadian Congress of Labor, Ottawa.

P. R. Bengough, Esq., Canadian Trades and Labor Congress, Ottawa.

Senator Cairine Wilson, Ottawa.

Miss Catherine Mackenzie, B.C., Principal, Montreal High School.

Arthur Roebuck, Esq., K.C., M.P., Toronto.

Rev. Dr. D. L. Ritchie, Emeritus Principal, United Church Theological College, Montreal.

M. J. Coldwell, M.P.

J.H. Blackmore, M.P.,

Henry Janes, Esq., Toronto, Secretary, Christian Council on Palestine.

H. A. Mowat, Esq., Toronto, Executive Secretary, Canadian Palestine Committee.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Volume Meeting - Delegation re Palestine P-100-C 1944

JWP/JMC
7.4.44.

C267849

Memorandum re Meeting of the Prime Minister with a delegation of the Canadian Palestine Committee, held in the Prime Minister's Office, East Block, Ottawa, on Friday, March 31st, 1944 at 10.30 a.m.

The following represented the Canadian Palestine Committee:

Robert Fennell, K.C., President, Board of Trade, Toronto

A. R. Mosher, Esq., Canadian Congress of Labor, Ottawa.

P. R. Bengough, Esq., Canadian Trades and Labor Congress, Ottawa.

Senator Cairine Wilson, Ottawa.

Miss Catherine Mackenzie, B.C., Principal, Montreal High School.

Arthur Roebuck, Esq., K.C., M.P., Toronto.

Rev. Dr. D. L. Ritchie, Emeritus Principal, United Church Theological College, Montreal.

M. J. Coldwell, M.P.

J.H. Blackmore, M.P.,

Henry Janes, Esq., Toronto, Secretary, Christian Council on Palestine.

H. A. Mowat, Esq., Toronto, Executive Secretary, Canadian Palestine Committee.

Reading Room
P-211
v.1

REPEAT
REPETER

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

The delegation was supported by a committee representing the Zionist Organisation of Canada, composed of the following:

S. J. Zacks, Esq., Toronto, Co-President.

Mrs. David Dunkelman, Toronto, Chairman of Youth Immigration, representing Hadassah, Women's Zionist Organization.

Harry Batshaw, K.C., Montreal Vice-President.

E. E. Gelber, Esq., Toronto, Vice-President.

The delegation was introduced by Mr. Arthur Roebuck, M.P., and a verbal presentation made by Mr. Herbert A. Mowat, Executive Secretary of theCanadian Palestine Committee in the absence of Mr. B. K. Sandwell, who had been detained in Toronto by the pressure of editorial duties.

The delegation undertook to submit a detailed written brief which was received at the Prime Minister's Office on April 6th, 1944. This brief contains an accurate summary of the verbal presentation and the Prime Minister's reply.

J.W.P.

---ooo---

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Mr. King - Requests for Interviews re Palestine

OFFICE OF THE PRIME MINISTER

MEMORANDUM

C267851

R-100-M 1945

R-100-H 1945

R-100-R 1945

R-100-Z 1945

For the Prime Minister.

(3)

Mr. Herbert A. Mowat telephoned from Toronto to ask if on Wednesday of next week or the following Monday you could see Mowat, with Sir Ellsworth Flavelle, Mr. Roebuck, M.P., and Mr. Zacks of the Zionist organization, to present a memorandum dealing with Palestine. The purpose would be that, if you saw fit, the memorandum could then be forwarded for consideration at the forthcoming meeting between Churchill, Roosevelt and Stalin.

Mr. Mowat hopes to have some word from you during the course of Monday, at Adelaide 8797.

W.J.T.

January 20, 1945.

P-200 V.L

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Confidential

RGR:MCK

C267852

2-10-G

1948

(3)

Memorandum for the Prime Minister:

Mr. David Croll, M.P., approached me a day or two ago with regard to the possibility of arranging an interview with you for Dr. Nahum Goldman, who is the chief liaison officer in Washington for the Jewish Agency. Dr. Goldman would like to come to Ottawa at any time that would suit your convenience.

I spoke to Mr. Pearson with regard to this matter, and he has had the attached note prepared on Dr. Goldman and on the probable purpose of his interview. I understand that Dr. Goldman was an originally one of the moderate Zionists and rather pro-British but has of late become more extreme in his views and somewhat anti-British, although he is still among the less extreme elements in the Zionist Group.

You might perhaps wish to speak to Mr. Pearson further about this.

I understand Mr. Croll wishes to see him
If he is to see anyone J.L.I.
it should be Mr. Pearson

13-2-48 lc

13th February, 1948.

Canadian Foreign Policy
Mr King - Interviews
Palestine

Feb. 16. 48

for copy
see 4-25-10

Same date.

I suggested Croll should see Pearson & suggest Pearson get in touch with Goldman & let me know.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R-10-4
1948

February 12, 1948.

NOTE ON DR. NAHUM GOLDMAN

Dr. Goldman is an active member of the Jewish Agency Executive. His mission to Ottawa is presumably for the purpose of winning Canada's support for the programme now being put forward at Lake Success by Mr. Moshe Shertok, spokesman for the Jewish Agency before the United Nations. The three most urgent demands put forward this week by Mr. Shertok have been:

(a) Arms for Palestinian Jews and their denial to the Arabs;

(b) Immediate creation of a Jewish Provisional Council of Government in Palestine;

(c) Security Council authorization of an international army to support the U.N.Commission while it proceeds with the partitioning of Palestine.

Dr. Goldman has presumably been selected by the Jewish Agency to contact Canadian officials because for some time he was the Jewish Agency's representative in London and he is better able than some of his colleagues to speak a language members of the British Commonwealth would understand.

For copyright
4-12-60

12.2.17(NS)

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

REPEAT
REPETER

P-10-g
1948

February 12, 1948.

NOTE ON DR. NAHUM GOLDMAN

Dr. Goldman is an active member of the Jewish Agency Executive. His mission to Ottawa is presumably for the purpose of winning Canada's support for the programme now being put forward at Lake Success by Mr. Moshe Shertok, spokesman for the Jewish Agency before the United Nations. The three most urgent demands put forward this week by Mr. Shertok have been:

(a) Arms for Palestinian Jews and their denial to the Arabs;

(b) Immediate creation of a Jewish Provisional Council of Government in Palestine;

(c) Security Council authorization of an international army to support the U.N.Commission while it proceeds with the partitioning of Palestine.

Dr. Goldman has presumably been selected by the Jewish Agency to contact Canadian officials because for some time he was the Jewish Agency's representative in London and he is better able than some of his colleagues to speak a language members of the British Commonwealth would understand.

For copy sent 4-2-48

12.2.17(HS)

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

10.11.41
W.H.M.

C267854

Confidential

file

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER

EMPRESS ZITA

Government House are using the following title:

Her Imperial Majesty the Empress Zita.

Empress Zita was born in 1892 in Italy, Princess of Bourbon de Parme. She was one of seventeen children.

In 1911 she married Charles of Hapsburg, who in 1916 succeeded his grand-uncle Francis Joseph, as Emperor of Austria.

Empress Zita has eight children of whom the Prime Minister has met, I think, the eldest son, Prince Otto of Hapsburg (29) and probably Prince Felix (25) who have visited Ottawa several times. She has established herself at Quebec where some of her children are attending Catholic schools.

Prince Otto has been busy in United States and Canada organizing the so-called Free Austrian Movement, which has ~~is~~ anti-Nazi, aims, but naturally is not indifferent to the eventual restoration of the fortunes and ~~rules~~ throne of the Hapsburg dynasty.

Another of Empress Zita's sons, Archduke Robert, is active in this movement in the United Kingdom. Mr. Massey has reported that the Foreign Office do not object to the activities of the Hapsburg Archdukes. In a recent despatch Mr. Massey said:

"The Archdukes themselves seem sensible and reasonably moderate in their views, but the Foreign Office add a word of caution about Empress Zita who is apparently not particularly sensible, very far from moderate and apt to be a general nuisance".

Empress Zita is a widow. Her husband, Emperor Charles died in Madeira in 1922.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

One of Empress Zita's nine brothers married Charlotte, Grand-Duchess of Luxembourg. His name is Felix; his title is the Prince of Luxembourg(this Felix should not be confused with Zita's son Felix aged 25).

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

One of Empress Zita's nine brothers married Charlotte, Grand-Duchess of Luxembourg. His name is Felix; his title is the Prince of Luxembourg(this Felix should not be confused with Zita's son Felix aged 25).

REPEAT
REPETER

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

One of Empress Zita's nine brothers married Charlotte, Grand-Duchess of Luxembourg. His name is Felix; his title is the Prince of Luxembourg(this Felix should not be confused with Zita's son Felix aged 25).

REPEAT
REPETER

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Austria

OFFICE OF THE PRIME MINISTER

MEMORANDUM

C267855 A

For the Prime Minister

re Empress Zita

Mr. Measures understands that as the Empress herself entertains great pretensions to the throne for her family she would probably most like to be addressed as

Her Imperial and Royal Highness

However, when Mr. Measures some years ago asked Baron Silvercruys about this particular matter it was suggested that although the Empress might prefer such a form of address, in these days such a form appears rather ridiculous if not fantastic, and if circumstances suggest the use of any title the word

"Highness" might be considered both harmless and convenient. "Your Highness" in the present circumstance might, therefore, appropriately be used.

- - - - - - - - -

Mr. Measures understands also that the Apostolic Delegate is to be present tonight

The address of Excellency would be appropriate (being the form agreed upon by the Canadian government).

DR

June 19, 1945

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 381, pages C267261-C267855

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

W.L.M. KING PAPERS

Memoranda and Notes

1940-1950

MG 26 J 4 Volume 382

Pages C267856-C268549

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

FILE: C267856

MILITARY CO-OPERATION WITH UNITED KINGDOM

A I R T R A I N I N G

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER
FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM,
Earnscliffe,
OTTAWA.

516X/52

10th January, 1939

My dear Prime Minister,

In your letter of the 31st December, 1938, you were good enough to inform me of the views of the Canadian Government on the revised proposals which I communicated to you on behalf of the Government of the United Kingdom, in my letter of the 9th December and its enclosure, regarding the training in Canada of pilots for the Royal Air Force. I reported these views at once to the United Kingdom Government from whom I have now received a reply.

I should like at the outset to refer to a point arising out of the suggestion made in your letter of the 9th December that the revised proposals mentioned above amounted to a reversal of the idea as originally broached during the visit of the Weir Mission in the spring of last year. At that time, as you will recall, stress was laid by the United Kingdom authorities on the great assistance which would be afforded by a scheme for training pilots for the Royal Air Force in Canada through the relief which would thereby be given to the existing training facilities in the United Kingdom which have become subject to continually increasing pressure and congestion. This consideration has throughout been present in the minds of the United Kingdom authorities. In framing the proposals set forth in my letter and memorandum/

The Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, M.P.,
Secretary of State for External Affairs,
OTTAWA.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

C267858

randum of the 9th December they were actuated by the belief that the pressure could be relieved directly, and thus with advantage to all concerned, if it could be arranged that, before proceeding to the United Kingdom, all candidates from Canada for a period of commissioned service in the Royal Air Force under existing schemes would be given at least certain stages of training in Canada, under the auspices of the Department of National Defence.

The United Kingdom authorities note with regret that the proposals which they had drawn up with a view to proceeding on this basis are unacceptable to the Canadian Government, but at the same time they have given careful consideration to the procedure which, it is stated in your letter of the 31st December, commends itself to the Canadian Government as being the most appropriate and effective. The basis of this procedure consists of a renewal of the offer of the Canadian Government, originally put forward by you in the House of Commons on the 1st July, 1938, to afford facilities, as far as practicable, for the training in Canada, under either Canadian or United Kingdom instructors, and under the final direction and control of the Minister of National Defence, of pilots recruited in the United Kingdom for the Royal Air Force. You referred moreover in your letter to the two further schemes already in operation. Under the first of these, 15 candidates of Canadian origin are trained each year in Canada to take five-year commissions in the Royal Air Force. Under the second scheme, as the result of arrangements reached early last year, the Canadian Government have agreed to test the fitness/

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

C 267859

fitness, from medical and other aspects, of Canadians applying for entrance into the Royal Air Force up to the number of 120 annually, these candidates then proceeding at once to the United Kingdom for training. Both these schemes would, it is understood, remain in force.

I am now in a position to inform you that the United Kingdom authorities are most grateful for the renewed offer of the Canadian Government made in your letter of the 31st December. They will be happy to avail themselves of it and to discuss definite arrangements for giving effect to it on the basis of the immediately preceding paragraph of the present letter. For this purpose they would, I understand, desire in the first place to receive further information on certain detailed points, and I assume that it would be in accordance with your wishes that I should discuss these questions with the Minister of National Defence and the officials of his Department. If so, perhaps you will be good enough to let me know.

Yours sincerely,

Vincent Massey.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

COPY

C 267860

TELEGRAM

FROM: THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

SECRET

CYPHER London, September 4, 1939

No. 343

No. 343. Secret. Wing Commander Heakes, Canada Air Liaison Officer, tells me that he has reason to believe United Kingdom Government will be proposing to Government of Canada recruitment and training in Canada of large numbers of pilots, possibly two thousand per year, in addition to air crews and maintenance personnel. He has communicated direct with his own Headquarters on this subject. Should such a proposal be actually made and favourably considered by the Canadian Government, I believe that Air Ministry would accept a plan which would maintain Canadian personnel as a distinct Canadian Air Force in the field, avoiding loss of identity which would be the case of Canadians joining the Royal Air Force as individuals. I understand that such a condition is being laid down in Australia in connection with arrangements being made for recruitment for Royal Air Force in that Dominion. I would be glad to have any instructions or information that you may care to send me in connection with this matter.

HIGH COMMISSIONER .

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COPY

C267861

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

IMMEDIATE

SECRET

CODE

No. 63

LONDON,
September 6, 1939

No. 63. Secret. Your telegram 31st August No. 52.

Air Ministry gratefully accept offer to give advanced flying training to ten officers who have completed their intermediate training; it will accordingly not be necessary for these officers to proceed to England until their advanced training is completed.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

Rec'd. Ottawa: 4.50 P.M., D;S.T.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

R

Air Training release

C 267862

Extract from Memorandum, enclosed with letter of September the 6th, from High Commissioner for the United Kingdom

MEMORANDUM

SECRET AND IMMEDIATE

(c) Air Force

16. A general reconnaissance squadron of eastern air command to co-operate with forces at Halifax. (see paragraph 7 above)

17. The United Kingdom authorities anticipate real difficulty in meeting personnel requirements if, as seems likely intensive air operations develop in Western Europe. It is suggested therefore that the best way way in which Canada could assist would be to concentrate first on the individual training of pilots, observers, and particularly air gunners and W/T operators, rather than by forming and training complete units for despatch to Europe (Canadian expeditionary force units excepted). When sufficient officers and personnel were available in England and France the aim would be to form a Royal Canadian Air Force contingent.

18. If this suggestion is acceptable the first step would be to adopt an intensified war training scheme with existing resources with a view to an immediate increase in existing output of 120 pilots a year.

19. Further steps:

(a) the rapid expansion of present training facilities using civil aerodromes with the aim of 2,000 pilots a year.

(b) the training of as many observers and air gunners as possible perhaps by using existing service squadrons.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C 267863

(c) the immediate enlistment of skilled mechanics both for Canadian expansion and for Royal Air Force.

(d) at a later stage it may be desirable if possible to transfer at least 4 Royal Air Force flying training schools to sites in Canada.

20. Supplies. The technical mission from the United Kingdom now on its way to Canada (some members of which left September 2nd) has full details. The most important items are aero-engines and alloys.

Generally speaking, and where points contained in this memorandum are acceptable to the Canadian authorities, Departments in the United Kingdom would like to get into direct touch with Canadian services as regards further details.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C 267864

CANADA

MINISTER OF NATIONAL DEFENCE

September 10, 1939.

The Department of External Affairs, Canada. SEP 11 1939

Secret.

Dear Dr. Skelton,

With reference to the despatch of the 6th September from the High Commissioner for the United Kingdom, and particularly to that part of the memorandum, attached thereto, dealing with the Air Force, it is suggested that a communication in the sense of the following should be despatched to the United Kingdom authorities indicating in broad outline the plan which it is thought could be put into effect if acceptable.

"The rapid expansion of Royal Canadian Air Force training facilities for officers and airmen is being put in hand immediately with the object of providing the maximum possible numbers of trained pilots, observers, air gunners, W/T operators and tradesmen.

"A number of Canadian Officer pilots with considerable flying experience on civil types but untrained in service duties, plus a number of newly enlisted airmen of various trades, can be made available for despatch to the United Kingdom within six weeks. These Canadian personnel, if desired, can be made available on loan for supplementing Royal Air Force Establishments. Indications of the numbers of personnel available for early despatch will follow.

"It is the desire of this Government that Canadian Air Force units be formed as soon as sufficient trained personnel are available overseas for this purpose, such squadrons to be manned by and maintained with Canadian

Dr. O.D. Skelton,
Under Secretary of State
for External Affairs,
Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

personnel at the expense of the Canadian Government. Owing to the shortage of service equipment in Canada, Canadian squadrons overseas would require to be completely equipped by the United Kingdom authorities, at Canada's expense.

"The reaction of the United Kingdom authorities to these proposals would be welcomed. Should they prove acceptable, it is recommended Air Ministry officials be authorized to get into direct touch with the Chief of the Air Staff, Royal Canadian Air Force."

Yours very truly,

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Air. T. Scheme

"R"

TELEGRAM

C267866

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

CYPHER

LONDON, September 26th, 1939.

NO. 428.

No. 428. With reference to secret unnumbered telegram today on air matter from Prime Minister to Prime Minister, part two follows in my immediately following telegram.

MASSEY

Received Ottawa 4.10 p.m. E.S.T.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

air-training scheme

TELEGRAM

C267867

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

CODE

UNNUMBERED

LONDON, September 26, 1939.

PART 2 (Part 2 of D.O. Unnumbered Message of September 26, 1939.)

Part 2.

Unnumbered Message. I have been requested by technical authorities here to bring to your attention certain questions of detail upon which it is thought the Canadian Government might be good enough to provide information pending their decision on the larger issues involved. It is felt that if information could be secured at once on these questions and other similar ones which may later be submitted, much valuable time would be saved if the Canadian Government accepts the programme suggested.

The points which I have been asked to bring to your attention, and on some of which information may be already available, are:

(1) How many civil aerodromes in Canada already exist suitable for service training, bearing in mind civil traffic requirements? Could any aerodromes not now suitable be made so by improvements and extensions and, if so, at what cost.

(2) Could a survey be made of existing service training and operational aerodromes to see whether these could take further training units in their present state? If not, what improvements or extensions are necessary and at what cost?

(3) Could provisional sites already earmarked in Canada as aerodromes for future use be investigated, and where possible, could preliminary steps be taken for the acquisition of land and laying it out before winter arrives.

(4) If the above steps do not produce an adequate number of aerodromes for the 25 advanced schools suggested and such of the elementary schools as Canada is likely to require, could further survey be made for the purpose of selecting new sites.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

TELEGRAM

C 267868

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON,

(5) Could an industrial survey be made of material available for quick hangars and technical accomodation and housing for personnel after a decision has been reached as to the form construction should take, with due regard to need for economy and speed. It is suggested that there should be a standard station lay out in order that building work, supervision and purchasing should be centralized and standardized as far as possible.

(6) Could a survey be made of personnel to see to what extent instructors outside the Royal Canadian Air Force were available? Is there a roster of such instructors with a view of their undertaking instruction work when required?

(7) Could a survey of available ground personnel be made? Are there ground engineers who could be diverted from civil aviation, always having regard to present and future calls of aircraft construction on skilled personnel?

(8) Could a census be made of aircraft mechanics who served in the last war and who are at present otherwise employed with a view as to earmarking those likely to be useful as mechanics after a refresher training.

Read 6 Nov Board of Trade Sept 28.

MASSEY

Rec'd Ottawa 8:30 P.M. E.S.D.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Air T.

"R"

TELEGRAM C 267869

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA.

MOST SECRET AND PERSONAL

CYPHER

UNNUMBERED

LONDON, September 26th, 1939

Unnumbered Message. Most Secret and Personal. Following for Prime Minister from my Prime Minister. Begins:

I am sure that you will agree that the scheme outlined in the following message is of first importance. For this reason, and because it invites cooperation with Canada to a very special degree, I want to make a special personal appeal to you about it. I feel that so far reaching a project will strike your imagination particularly as it concerns an all important field of war activity in which Canada has already made so striking and gallant an individual contribution. May I therefore ask that the matter should receive very urgent attention?

1. During the last few days the War Cabinet have been considering the whole problem of future requirements in air strength and the nature of the effort likely to be required. The conclusion reached is that the problem is one of vital importance especially in the light of the success obtained by the German air force in helping to achieve the rapid subjugation of Poland. It is now abundantly clear that an overwhelming air force will be needed in order to counter German air strength and, in combination with other military measures and economic pressure, to bring ultimate victory.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

TELEGRAM

C267870

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA.

LONDON.
LONDON,

2. With this in view the War Cabinet have sanctioned immediate measures here directed to further expansion of aircraft production and training. Objective is to build up gradually and maintain in continuous operation a greatly enlarged air force. In view of the unfortunate fact that wastage rate of air force when engaged in continuous heavy operations is exceedingly high it is expected that there would be required not less than 20,000 pilots and ~~another~~ 30000 personnel of air crews annually for maintenance of this enlarged force. To provide for these, it is estimated that about 90 elementary and advanced flying training schools with some subsidiary air crew and ground schools would be necessary.

3. In this respect we find ourselves under a grave disability in that the training organization now required is more than twice the entire training capacity available in the United Kingdom, having regard to limited space, operational restrictions and vulnerability to air attack.

4. It seems to us that this is a problem in the solution of which the overseas parts of the Empire may well be able to play a decisive part. If about one half of this vast training organization, say fifty flying training schools (of which twenty-five would be for advanced training) with some subsidiary

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

LONDON,

schools could be built up elsewhere than the United Kingdom, it would be, in our judgment, of inestimable value to the common cause. We have therefore been thinking over lines on which such an effort might be realized and venture to put forward for the consideration of Your Government a scheme of which the following is an outline.

5. Schools for elementary training would be established in each Dominion according to its capacity. Whilst all Dominions enjoy equal immunity from the risk of enemy interference, Canada has special advantages of nearness to the United Kingdom, greater potentialities for manufacture of service type of aircraft and proximity to the vast resources of the United States of America. For this reason the conception of the scheme involves general agreement on the part of all Governments concerned that advanced training for trainees from elementary training schools should be centred in Canada. There would be a continuous flow of trained personnel from elementary training schools in Canada to theatres of operations. It would also be our intention that a number of those who have completed elementary training in the United Kingdom should receive their advanced training in Canada.

6. We appreciate that any such scheme of nationalized training must depend on adequate provisions for training types and advanced service types of aircraft. It is our hope that existing resources of

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

TELEGRAM C267872

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA.

LONDON,

the Dominion for production of trainers and their engines will be fully utilized and expended to meet the requirements of elementary schools as determined by the extent to which each Dominion may decide to participate in the general scheme of training. It would not be the intention to retard or interfere in any way with projects already embarked on for Dominion production of service types. We are working out numbers and types of aircraft, both training and advanced, that we think would be required and we should be in a position to let you have particulars at an early date.

7. We should wish to do everything in our power as for example by the loan of personnel, to help in the building up of the organization outlined above.

8. It is of course contemplated that the first call on Dominion personnel who had received their training in schools under scheme would be for such air force units of Dominions as the participating Dominion Governments might be prepared to provide and maintain.

9. If a scheme on the above lines is acceptable in principle to your Government we suggest

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549.

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

TELEGRAM C 267873

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA.

LONDON,

as a first step joint discussions between experts. We think that these discussions might most conveniently take place in Canada. We ourselves are ready at very short notice to send to Canada a mission of high standing specially qualified for this particular purpose and we hope that it might be possible for it to discuss questions of fact with similar missions from other Governments concerned.

10. We hope that you will agree as to the immense influence which the development and realization of such a great project as that outlined in this telegram may have upon the whole course of the war; it might even prove decisive. We trust therefore that this co-operative method of approach to the problem will appeal to your Government. The knowledge that a vast air potential was being built up in the Dominions where no German air activity could interfere with expansion, might well have a pyschological effect on the Germans equal to that produced by the intervention of the United States in the last war with its vast resources.

11. It would be most helpful if you could let me know at the earliest possible moment whether your Government approved the suggested scheme in principle and whether they are agreeable to joint discussions in Canada in order that immediate arrangements may be made to that end.

12. I have conveyed the substance of the above scheme to the Prime Ministers of Australia and New Zealand also. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

"R"

TELEGRAM

C267874

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

MOST SECRET AND PERSONAL LONDON, September 26th, 1939.

CYPHER

UNNUMBERED.

Unnumbered Message. Most Secret and Personal. Following for Prime Minister from my Prime Minister, Begins:

I am sure that you will agree that the scheme outlined in the following message is of first importance. For this reason, and because it invites cooperation with Canada to a very special degree, I want to make a special personal appeal to you about it. I feel that so far reaching a project will strike your imagination particularly as it concerns an all important field of war activity in which Canada has already made so striking and gallant an individual contribution. May I therefore ask that the matter should receive very urgent attention?

1. During the last few days the War Cabinet have been considering the whole problem of future requirements in air strength and the nature of the effort likely to be required. The conclusion reached is that the problem is one of vital importance especially in the light of the success obtained by the German air force in helping to achieve the rapid subjugation of Poland. It is now abundantly clear that an overwhelming air force will be needed in order to counter German air strength and, in combination with other military measures and economic pressure, to bring ultimate victory.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

TELEGRAM

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON,

2. With this in view the War Cabinet have sanctioned immediate measures here directed to further expansion of aircraft production and training. Objective is to build up gradually and maintain in continuous operation a greatly enlarged air force. In view of the unfortunate fact that wastage rate of air force when engaged in continuous heavy operations is exceedingly high it is expected that there would be required not less than 20,000 pilots and ~~anchor~~ 30,000 personnel of air crews annually for maintenance of this enlarged force. To provide for these, it is estimated that about 90 elementary and advanced flying training schools with some subsidiary air crew and ground schools would be necessary.

3. In this respect we find ourselves under a grave disability in that the training organization now required is more than twice the entire training capacity available in the United Kingdom, having regard to limited space, operational restrictions and vulnerability to air attack.

4. It seems to us that this is a problem in the solution of which the overseas parts of the Empire may well be able to play a decisive part. If about one half of this vast training organization, say fifty flying training schools (of which twenty-five would be for advanced training) with some subsidiary

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

TELEGRAM C267876

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON,

schools could be built up elsewhere than the United Kingdom, it would be, in our judgment, of inestimable value to the common cause. We have therefore been thinking over lines on which such an effort might be realized and venture to put forward for the consideration of Your Government a scheme of which the following is an outline.

5. Schools for elementary training would be established in each Dominion according to its capacity. Whilst all Dominions enjoy equal immunity from the risk of enemy interference, Canada has special advantages of nearness to the United Kingdom, greater potentialities for manufacture of service type of aircraft and proximity to the vast resources of the United States of America. For this reason the conception of the scheme involves general agreement on the part of all Governments concerned that advanced training for trainees from elementary training schools should be centred in Canada. There would be a continuous flow of trained personnel from elementary training schools in Canada to theatres of operations. It would also be our intention that a number of those who have completed elementary training in the United Kingdom should receive their advanced training in Canada.

6. We appreciate that any such scheme of nationalized training must depend on adequate provisions for training types and advanced service types of aircraft. It is our hope that existing resources of

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

TELEGRAM

C 267877

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON,

the Dominions for production of trainers and their engines will be fully utilized and expended to meet the requirements of elementary schools as determined by the extent to which each Dominion may decide to participate in the general scheme of training. It would not be the intention to retard or interfere in any way with projects already embarked on for Dominion production of service types. We are working out numbers and types of aircraft, both training and advanced, that we think would be required and we should be in a position to let you have particulars at an early date.

7. We should wish to do everything in our power as for example by the loan of personnel, to help in the building up of the organization outlined above.

8. It is of course contemplated that the first call on Dominion personnel who had received their training in schools under scheme would be for such air force units of Dominions as the participating Dominion Governments might be prepared to provide and maintain.

9. If a scheme on the above lines is acceptable in principle to your Government we suggest

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

TELEGRAM

C 267878

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON,

as a first step joint discussions between experts. We think that these discussions might most conveniently take place in Canada. We ourselves are ready at very short notice to send to Canada a mission of high standing specially qualified for this particular purpose and we hope that it might be possible for it to discuss questions of fact with similar missions from other Governments concerned.

10. We hope that you will agree as to the immense influence which the development and realization of such a great project as that outlined in this telegram may have upon the whole course of the war; it might even prove decisive. We trust therefore that this co-operative method of approach to the problem will appeal to your Government. The knowledge that a vast air potential was being built up in the Dominions where no German air activity could interfere with expansion, might well have a psychological effect on the Germans equal to that produced by the intervention of the United States in the last war with its vast resources.

11. It would be most helpful if you could let me know at the earliest possible moment whether your Government approved the suggested scheme in principle and whether they are agreeable to joint discussions in Canada in order that immediate arrangements may be made to that end.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

TELEGRAM

C 267879

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON,

12. I have conveyed the substance of the above scheme to the Prime Ministers of Australia and New Zealand also. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

Received Ottawa 3.15 p.m. E.S.T.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Air T. Scheme

~~C 267880~~ C 267880

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS OTTAWA

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS LONDON

TELEGRAM Ottawa, September 28th, 1939

UNNUMBERED

MOST SECRET AND PERSONAL

CYPHER

Unnumbered message of September 26th. Most secret and personal. Following for Prime Minister from Prime Minister. Begins.

1. I have received and discussed with colleagues the situation outlined in your telegram under reference. ~~We are fully conscious of the vital importance of the questions raised and have therefore given them immediate attention.~~

2. We have noted the conclusion of the War Cabinet that a greatly enlarged air force, in combination with other military measures and economic pressure, is of vital importance for victory over Germany. In view of the experience of the Polish campaign and the situation created by the subjugation, neutrality or hostility of the various Eastern countries which were counted upon to give aid against Germany, we can realize the force of this conclusion. We appreciate also the serious difficulties that would be met if an air force of the dimensions indicated had to be trained solely in the United Kingdom.

~~5.~~ 3. ~~We~~ I have therefore given immediate consideration to ~~the question of~~ to the part Canada could play in recruiting and training pilots and other personnel on the co-operative plan proposed. I can say at once that our Government fully agree that Canadian co-operation in this field would be particularly appropriate and probably the

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267881

most effective in the military sphere which Canada could furnish. We would therefore be prepared in principle to accept the scheme.

4. There are necessarily certain important points which would have to be considered ~~before a definite conclusion could be reached.~~

5. The first requirement to ensure maximum effectiveness is the provision of sufficient planes to permit training the large numbers contemplated. This hinges in the first place on the availability of United States equipment. We understand that the Administration at Washington is confident that in spite of the increased vigor of the opposition the embargo will be repealed in a few weeks. Even so, United States plants are engaged far ahead with domestic and foreign orders, and some recent quotations indicate eighteen months as the minimum time for delivery of new orders. We believe this could be speeded up, but it is necessary to consider alternatively what planes, particularly for intermediate and advanced training, the United Kingdom could provide, and what expansion of Canadian production could be effected, possibly by the transfer of United Kingdom plants to Canada. Examination is being made here of the possibility of speeding up the establishment of engine-building plants here but the views of the United Kingdom Government on the above points would be very helpful.

6. As to instructors available here, full details will be sent very shortly. It is however plain that the number at present available is far below what would be necessary for rapid and effective execution of the project, and that the loan of personnel from the United Kingdom at the outset would be ~~cumulatively helpful~~ essential in ensuring the training of maximum numbers in minimum time. Particulars on this point would therefore be of great assistance. The facts as to existing and potential aerodromes

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267882

and training stations are being collected and will be furnished shortly.

7. A third point of importance is the financial aspect. After full consideration of the financial and other factors involved, our Government drew up last week a programme indicating the direction and extent of the military and economic co-operation which it considered Canada could offer in the coming year. ~~This programme was announced in general terms.~~ In order to decide ~~what further participation Canada could undertake~~ it would be necessary to be informed in general terms what financial basis your Government have in mind for the air training scheme.

8. We are entirely in agreement as to the desirability of joint discussions in Canada between experts at the earliest possible date. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

air training scheme file

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA.

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS, LONDON.

TELEGRAM Ottawa, 28th September, 1939.

UNNUMBERED

MOST SECRET AND PERSONAL

CYPHER

C267883

Unnumbered message of September 26th. Most secret and personal. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister, Begins:

1. I have received and discussed with colleagues the situation outlined in your telegram under reference.

2. We have noted the conclusion of the War Cabinet that a greatly enlarged air force, in combination with other military measures and economic pressure, has become of vital importance. We have therefore given immediate consideration to the scheme outlined in your telegram and in particular to the part Canada could play in recruiting and training pilots and other personnel on the cooperative plan proposed.

3. I can say at once that our Government fully agree that Canadian cooperation in this field would be particularly appropriate and probably the most effective in the military sphere which Canada could furnish. We would therefore be prepared to accept the scheme in principle.

4. There are necessarily certain important points which would have to be considered in determining what on our part may be possible.

5. The first requirement to ensure maximum effectiveness is the provision of sufficient planes to permit training the large numbers contemplated. Canadian aircraft production is only just beginning to expand and

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

cannot hope to provide the aircraft necessary for home defence and the initial supply of intermediate and advanced training aircraft in time for the scheme to develop quickly. Therefore these initial aircraft for this scheme must come from Britain or the United States. Canadian production could probably look after subsequent replacement aircraft. Canada can provide a surplus of elementary trainers which would be available for other Dominions. Engines are not available in Canada at present and must be supplied from Britain or the United States. Canadian manufacture of engines, if started now, could hardly produce useful results in less than eighteen or twenty months. It would be desirable to consider whether it would be possible to expand Canadian production by the transfer of some United Kingdom plant to Canada.

As regards the United States, it is unlikely to provide either airframes or engines in large quantities for quick delivery, except by diversion to Canada of aircraft now ordered by Britain. In the event of the repeal of the arms embargo, United States plants will still be engaged far ahead with domestic and foreign orders, including orders from neutral countries. Some recent quotations indicate eighteen months as the minimum time for delivery of new orders, though we believe this could be speeded up.

The views of the United Kingdom Government on all the above points would be very helpful.

6. As to instructors available here, full details will be sent very shortly. It is however plain that the number at present available is far below what would be necessary for rapid and effective execution of the project, and that the loan of personnel from the United Kingdom at

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C 267885

the outset would be essential in ensuring the training of maximum numbers in minimum time. Particulars on this point would therefore be of great assistance. The facts as to existing and potential aerodromes and training stations are being collected and will be furnished shortly.

7. A third point of importance is the financial aspect. In order to decide the possible extent of our participation in the proposed air-training plan, and in the light thereof to review the plans already made for military and economic cooperation, it will be necessary to be informed in general terms what your government has in mind as to the distribution of costs of the air-training scheme among the several co-operating governments. I should perhaps mention that the question of financing British purchases in this market, to which reference was made in our telegram No. 82 of September 21st, is still unsettled, though we hope that Treasury representatives will be able to discuss it with us in the course of the next few days.

8. We are entirely in agreement as to the desirability of joint discussions in Canada between experts at the earliest possible date and would be pleased to receive the mission from the United Kingdom suggested in your telegram, and also similar missions from other members of the Commonwealth. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

Read by Cowell Aff'rs IC

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COPY

C 267886

FROM THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

MOST SECRET

CYPHER LONDON 29th September, 1939

UNNUMBERED

Unnumbered. Most Secret. Following from Prime Minister for Prime Minister, begins:

We deeply appreciate speedy and sympathetic consideration which you and your colleagues have given to proposals set out in my telegram of September 28th, and are very gratified to learn that they are acceptable in principle.

We will examine at once detailed questions raised and will communicate as soon as possible with you on these points and also on question of date for arrival of suggested Mission.

In the meantime, it would be most helpful if other Prime Ministers concerned could be informed of attitude which Canadian Government are adopting. Would you prefer to do this yourself or would you like me to do so? Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

Received Ottawa
7:50 p.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Air T. Scheme

C 267887

Ottawa, September 28th, 1939.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER IN COUNCIL:

Mr. Campbell and Mr. Vaughan of the War Supply Board have been conferring with Air Vice Marshall Croil and officials of the Department of National Defence, concerning air co-operation, and will be sending along, shortly, a memorandum of their suggestions with respect to the answer which might be sent to Mr. Chamberlain's message.

Dr. Skelton feels that it would be well to hold the draft telegram in reply, until we have seen what the memorandum from the War Supply Board and the Department of National Defence suggests, in this respect.

A. D. P. H.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Air training scheme

C 267888

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS CANADA

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS LONDON

Ottawa, 29th September, 1939

Telegram

Unnumbered

Most Secret and Personal

CYPHER

Our unnumbered message of September 28th. Most Secret and Personal. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister. Begins.

In the event of our finding it possible, as we hope, after examination of the financial and time factors, to participate in an air-training scheme on a scale to be agreed upon, and in the event of the Governments of Australia and New Zealand coming to a similar conclusion, we consider it would be advisable that an announcement of this fact should be made at the earliest possible moment thereafter. We assume the British Government would desire to state that the air-training plan was the most effective form which cooperation could take in the light of the developments which have already taken place and probable future developments, We assume that the time and terms of such a statement would be agreed upon in advance.

Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C 267889

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE

OTTAWA, Sept 30 1939

MEMORANDUM FOR

outline of co-operative measures by Canada ~~already made~~ announced

Copy of which was sent to Dom. office represented an outlay which after the fullest ~~consideration~~ and most careful consideration to Canada's ~~would tax our~~ financial resources.

C 267890

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE

OTTAWA, ... 193.....

MEMORANDUM FOR

represented the very maximum which Canadian resources could encompass without serious, and it was feared irreparable weakening to the economic fabric of the country as ~~to conduct~~ for the Continuance

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267891

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE

OTTAWA,.....193.....

MEMORANDUM FOR

~~What is~~ increased and effective participation ~~in what it is to be based~~ ~~is to be vital~~ which seems most vital. Consequently readjustment of plans must be within financial limits

C267892

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE

OTTAWA,.....193.....

MEMORANDUM FOR

~~Already~~ encouraged by plans already outlined.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

MEMORANDUM C 267893 1st file

Department of External Affairs

Air Personnel Ottawa, Sept 11

Draft letter based on Mr Mackenzie's letter.

S.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Air Training

ODS/HMP.
September 29th, 1939.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE

PRIME MINISTER -

C 267894

AIR TRAINING SCHEME

The Canadian Government have indicated acceptance of the United Kingdom scheme in principle. We have pointed out the difficulty in obtaining at an early date an adequate number of training craft and instructors, and have stated that in order to decide the possible extent of our participation in the proposed air training plan, we should like information as to distribution of costs of the air training scheme.

The question arises how far we can inform the British Government of our definite acceptance even in principle or have any statement made to the public, before there has been further consideration as to its feasibility. There is no doubt ~~question~~ that one of Canada's most effective and decisive contributions can be made in the air - whether in recruiting airmen, training them, or maintaining an air force at the front. But in deciding upon the present British scheme it is necessary to consider:-

(1) Is the size of the British training project, namely, the training of "not less than 20,000 pilots and 30,000 personnel of air crews annually", a fixed and essential feature, the minimum which the British Government considers is required for achieving victory over Germany?

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C 267895

2. If this is the British view, the next question arising is the general one of war objectives and war policy. The same British authorities planned six months ago to stop Hitler by forming an East Europe coalition against him. There was no doubt about the desirability of stopping Hitler; there was grave doubt as to their wisdom in trying to stop him in Poland. Their efforts completely failed; a European war was made more rather than less certain and in the event of war coming it was clear there was no certainty of any effective anti-German action from the Eastward. The events since the war have made the failure plain and even more complete than could have been forecast. Now it is admitted France and Britain are not equal to Germany in the air. They have not and are not likely to have that overwhelming strength on land necessary for a successful offensive in the existing circumstances. Fortunately they have overwhelming strength at sea. They have much greater economic staying power. They have the moral sympathy of most free countries. Now they call on the Dominions to take the place of the United States in the last war and of Poland, Russia, Rumania, Greece, Turkey etc., etc., in the present war, by sharing in a colossal air attack. Should not there be consultation on objectives and policy, and not merely instructions as to how to help them in a policy they have formed?

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C 267896

3. Time factor.

What would be the minimum time, with most advantageous conditions as to provision of aircraft and instructors, in which a scheme such as is envisaged could be carried out?

4. Money factor.

What would be the total training cost? Cost of providing aerodromes and ground equipment? Cost of training planes? Cost of maintenance and instruction? etc. What would be the cost involved under most favourable conditions in, say, the first six months, the first year, the second year? It will clearly be huge; 4000 or 5000 training planes alone would run well over a billion dollars, I would guess. Of course a great part of this total cost will be borne by the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand. The total cost and the distribution cannot be known until a reply is received from Britain and perhaps not till after the missions arrive and go into it, but if any statement is to be made before they leave, it is clearly essential to have some rough idea of how many hundred millions are involved. It is also necessary to bear in mind that if Britain needs Canadian credits for buying wheat, she will ask for credits for her air expenditures here: some offset could be secured from purchase of equipment and Canadian force expenditures in England.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C267897

Again, it is not merely an air training scheme. It is an expeditionary air force scheme on a colossal scale.* It would be difficult to train tens of thousands of Canadians as pilots and gunners, etc., and then restrict ourselves to sending over a dozen squadrons. We would be ~~led into~~ faced with trying to maintain in France a Canadian Air Force ~~of thousands of planes~~. What would be the cost of this?

The purpose of this note is merely to emphasize what is undoubtedly in the Government's mind - the necessity of an immediate study by National Defence and the War Supply Board and possibly Finance, of the expenditures involved, so that there would be some approximate idea of what acceptance of the plan would mean before a definite commitment or announcement was made.

---

* See paragraph 8 of Dominions Office telegram: "It is of course contemplated that the first call on Dominion personnel who had received their training in schools under the scheme would be for such air force units of Dominions as the participating Dominion Governments might be prepared to provide and maintain."

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

"R"

Air T. Scheme

TELEGRAM C267898

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

MOST SECRET

CYPHER

UNNUMBERED

LONDON, 29th September, 1939

Unnumbered. Most Secret. Following from Prime Minister for Prime Minister, Begins:

We deeply appreciate speedy and sympathetic consideration which you and your colleagues have given to proposals set out in my telegram of September 26th, and are very gratified to learn that they are acceptable in principle.

We will examine at once detailed questions raised and will communicate as soon as possible with you on these points and also on question of date for arrival of suggested Mission.

In the meantime, it would be most helpful if other Prime Ministers concerned could be informed of attitude which Canadian Government are adopting. Would you prefer to do this yourself or would you like me to do so? Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS.

Received Ottawa
7:50 p.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

"R"

C 267899

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS OTTAWA

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS LONDON

TELEGRAM

UNNUMBERED

MOST SECRET

CYPHER

Ottawa, September 30th, 1939.

Following from Prime Minister to your Prime Minister, Begins:

1. I wish to thank you for your message of appreciation regarding our telegram of September 28th. I note that the detailed questions raised are being examined and that you will shortly communicate with us further. We are continuing to make a similar examination here and when all the information is available, hope to be in a position to decide promptly on what scale we could cooperate in any joint plan that might be agreed upon.

2. We had already in mind the desirability of communicating with the Governments of Australia and New Zealand and have today informed them of the substance of my telegram of September 28th. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

sent/s C 267900

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS OTTAWA

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS LONDON.

Ottawa, 30th September, 1939

TELEGRAM

UNNUMBERED

MOST SECRET

CYPHER

Following from Prime Minister to your Prime Minister. Begins.

1. I wish to thank you for your message of appreciation regarding our telegram of September 28th, ~~and~~ note that the detailed questions raised are being examined and that you will shortly communicate with us further. We are continuing to ~~give~~ make a similar examination here and when all the information is available, hope to be in a position to decide promptly on what scale we could cooperate in any joint plan that might be agreed upon.

2. We had already in mind the desirability of communicating with the Governments of Australia and New Zealand and have today informed them of the substance of my telegram of September 28th. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Mil. Co-op Air T. Scheme
"Air" ODS/ET
30 Sept. 1939

MEMORANDUM FOR THE
PRIME MINISTER:

C 267901

29 Sept. Attached is another air proposal from the United Kingdom, also a draft of a letter which I thought might be sent immediately, mainly for the purpose of underlining the fact that our acceptance in principle of the air training scheme left us free to decide in the light of the facts on the scale on which we could participate. As regards the present proposal, it would apparently be feasible to draw upon Canadian airmen now in the Royal Air Force.

Hall Camp Head 28/30. agreed a letter may send campbell & Hall at once before dept & Parl. sessions Yukon matter in Sept. & end of Ceremonial. &c K.
Sept 30-39.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C 267902

TELEGRAM

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA

TO: THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN, LONDON

SECRET

CODE

UNNUMBERED

Ottawa, September 30, 1939.

Your telegram unnumbered September 26th.

The questions submitted by United Kingdom technical authorities have been considered by Department of National Defence. The replies hereunder are numbered to correspond with the queries raised.

(1) Bearing in mind civil traffic requirements, available civil aerodromes may require some further development to be suitable for service training. In explanation, it is stated that requirements have been judged to be runways of 4000 feet with clear approaches.

Canadian aerodromes are normally developed only to provide 3000 foot runways. At least fifteen such aerodromes, presently lacking accommodation and services, are judged to be available, the aerodrome surfaces of which could be extended and improved at an average cost of $210,000 per aerodrome, buildings and services extra. No estimate can be given of the cost of providing for an air firing and bombing range adjacent to these aerodromes, but in most cases cost of land will not be large.

(2) A survey of existing service training and operational aerodromes indicates that none could take further training units in their present state. Only one could be improved and extended at a cost of $250,000 plus buildings. Accommodation available consists of one hangar only, size 75' x 225'. Further accommodation would have to be provided.

(3) Yes. Certain provisional sites could be investigated, laid out and acquired provided requirements are known at an early date.

(4) Yes, but survey would be restricted by the arrival of winter conditions.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C 267903

(5) A general industrial survey of material available can be undertaken. A standard station layout has been drafted and costed on a basis of temporary frame construction and has been estimated to cost an average of $998,000 per service training aerodrome for accommodation.

(6) A survey of instructors outside the Royal Canadian Air Force has been completed and a roster is maintained. Practically all are qualified for elementary instruction only. Very few are unemployed. Those employed, generally speaking, are either instructors with Flying Clubs or commercial schools, or are occupying positions with the Department of Transport or with Trans Canada Airways. Those unemployed, for the most part, lack recent instructional experience.

(7) A complete list of all licenced air engineers in Canada is maintained. In round figures these total 700 of whom approximately 100 might be expected to be available for service.

(8) A census of aircraft mechanics who served in the last war and who are at present otherwise employed will be compiled by advertising and calling on them to report by letter or in person and indicating their availability for service. The number is not believed to be substantial.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Sent O.S.

C267904

FROM: THE PRIME MINISTER OF CANADA OTTAWA

TO: " " Australia, Canberra

also to " " New Zealand, Wellington with variation in par. 4.

TELEGRAM

UNNUMBERED

Ottawa, 30th September, 1939.

SECRET AND PERSONAL

CYPHER

1. We have received from the Government of the United Kingdom a communication regarding the possibility of participation in a large expansion of training of air personnel. We understand a similar communication has been sent to you.

2. We have informed the United Kingdom that we consider that cooperation on our part in this field would be particularly appropriate and that in principle we would be prepared to cooperate in a scheme of training largely increased numbers of pilots and other air crews personnel. We have further stated that there are necessarily certain important points to be considered in determining what might be possible so far as we are concerned,

First, the question of obtaining promptly sufficient planes particularly for intermediate and advanced training.

Second, the availability of additional instructors, and Third, the financial aspect, as to which we have indicated that in order to decide the possible extent of our participation in the plan and in the light thereof to review the plans already made for military and economic cooperation, we should like to be informed as to what the Government of the United Kingdom have in mind regarding distribution of costs of the scheme among the several cooperating Governments.

3. In the meantime we are examining these questions here, and when the necessary information is available, will be in a position to decide on what scale we could cooperate in any joint plan that might be agreed upon.

4. We agree as to the desirability of joint discussions by experts at earliest possible date and would be much pleased to welcome a mission from {the Commonwealth of Australia / New Zealand} if your Government decided to take this action.

5. We shall be glad to be informed of the view of your Government on the air training scheme.

PRIME MINISTER

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Mil. Co-ops. Air T. Scheme "Air"

DRAFT.

MOST SECRET

Ottawa, 30th September, 1939

C 267905

My dear Sir Gerald,

I am in receipt of your letter of the 29th September, 1939, regarding Air Force proposals. It is noted the Air Council would welcome the formation of a Royal Canadian Air Force squadron overseas at the earliest possible date.

The proposal is being brought to the attention of the Prime Minister and the Minister of National Defence.

As you indicate, a comprehensive scheme for the training of an air force in Canada has been drawn up by the Government of the United Kingdom and is now receiving consideration. The Government have indicated their readiness in principle to join in a cooperative scheme for the training of an enlarged air personnel, and in the light of the examination now being made here and of the information expected from London as to availability of instructors and training planes, and the financial arrangements involved, they will be able shortly to decide on what scale they could cooperate in a comprehensive plan. This will obviously have a bearing on the present proposal, but I have no doubt the Government will wish to give immediate and simultaneous consideration to the latter suggestion.

Yours sincerely,

O.D. Skelton

Sir Gerald Campbell, K.C.M.G.,
High Commissioner for the United Kingdom,
Earnscliffe,
Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

R.

Air T.

Shelton's comments on Churchill statement for publication Oct

C267906

I could not let this occasion pass without reciprocating the courtesy of our London cousins by paying a tribute, in our turn, to the British statesmen whose sublime and effortless assurance, coupled with a gentlemanly vagueness on the sordid questions of finance and a unique eminence in diplomacy, which if in some slight measure not so completely successful as usual in the European field, has retained its full potency among the native tribes, has done so much to lead us to concur in this great undertaking.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COPY

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS OTTAWA

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS LONDON

C 267907

TELEGRAM

UNNUMBERED

MOST SECRET

CYPHER

Ottawa, September 30th, 1939.

Following from Prime Minister to your Prime Minister, Begins:

1. I wish to thank you for your message of appreciation regarding our telegram of September 29th. I note that the detailed questions raised are being examined and that you will shortly communicate with us further. We are continuing to make a similar examination here and when all the information is available, hope to be in a position to decide promptly on what scale we could cooperate in any joint plan that might be agreed upon.

2. We had already in mind the desirability of communicating with the Governments of Australia and New Zealand and have today informed them of the substance of my telegram of September 29th. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Oct 2 Air Training

C 267908

MEMORANDUM TO MR. PICKERSGILL:

Re: Air force training, etc.

I can see that there is likely to be much discussion on the public platform and probably in Parliament concerning the Government's action with respect to the air force.

It is advisable, therefore, that at as early a date as possible, the exact facts with regard to this matter should be collected and made available in a form in which they can be either (a) used in debate, or (b) given to the public or to the press, as may be thought advisable. It would be well to have the date assembled in a ring binder, in which the material could be brought together in proper sequence.

The following material should be included:

(1) a brief history of the air force itself, its inauguration, appropriations with respect to the same, etc. prior to the coming into office of the Liberal Administration in 1921, and in the years of the Administration until 1930.

(2) The position of the force during the years of the Conservative Administration (under Mr. Bennett). There is much material in Hansard making clear the protest of the Liberal Opposition, in particular Colonel Ralston and myself at the cutting down of the air force.

(3) The development of the force since we assumed office in 1935.

Particular data in this connection as to amounts voted for necessary supplies, aircraft, with whom placed, length of time required for filling of orders, etc. should also be brought together. Mention might also be made of the intended purchase under the War Measures Act of planes in the U.S. at this time a year ago; the order was passed prior to the Munich Pact and after the pact, was cancelled.

In particular, all correspondence regarding the Air Mission which visited Canada a year ago should

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

be brought together, and, in particular, the correspondence with Floud and the debate in the House of Commons on the last day of the Session. The question at issue which was a constitutional question, and the exact statement of the Government's position as given by myself. These papers are, I think, all together but should be assembled on the one file.

Press references now appearing which are significant should be pasted on individual sheets and kept in the ring binder.

I attach two clippings that are much to the point. They are from the "Citizen" of September the 30th.

W. L. M. K.

October 2, 1939

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R" C267910 Air T. Scheme.

FROM: THE ACTING PRIME MINISTER OF NEW ZEALAND, WELLINGTON.

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA.

SECRET AND PERSONAL

CYPHER WELLINGTON, October 3rd, 1939.

Secret and Personal. Your telegram unnumbered September 30th. Training of air personnel. Following telegram has been despatched today to Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, Begins:

His Majesty's Government in New Zealand approve in principle the suggestion that experts from the United Kingdom, Australia, Canada and New Zealand should meet in Canada to discuss the proposals outlined in your most Secret and Personal telegram of September 26th. The representatives from New Zealand can leave on October 16th by S.S. "Monterey" and will be available in Canada about November 4th. His Majesty's Government in New Zealand are prepared to cooperate in any scheme ultimately decided upon but suggest that a scheme must inevitably take some time before it can be fully implemented. In the meantime His Majesty's Government in New Zealand intend to push on the expansion of existing training scheme already indicated to His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom. This organization can at a later date be modified without difficulty to fit in with any plan decided on as a result of the conference in Canada. Copies of this reply have been forwarded to the Prime Ministers of Canada and Australia. Ends.

FRASER

Received Ottawa 11.00 a.m. E.S.T.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

T. Scheme air (in margin)

TELEGRAM C 267911

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

MOST SECRET LONDON, October 4th, 1939.

CYPHER

UNNUMBERED

Most Secret. Following for your Prime Minister from my Prime Minister, Begins:

Thank you for your telegram of September 30th. With reference to your message of September 28th as to the air training scheme, we appreciate importance of points to which you refer as to provisions of aircraft and instructors necessary for the successful working of the scheme. Preliminary survey of these questions, which has been made here suggests, that in respect of aircraft requirements and of requirements in flying instructional personnel, it should be possible on the receipt of substantial assistance from United Kingdom resources, though in other respects the situation here seems to leave no alternative but to look to Dominion resources and other possible channels of supply. The Air Mission which is leaving this week will have full details of requirements in aircraft, instructors, ground personnel and aerodromes to be anticipated as the scheme develops and will be in a position to discuss the whole question. They will also be in a position to discuss financial aspect referred to in paragraph 7 of your message. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

Received Ottawa 10.00 P.M. E.S.T.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COPY

Air Mission

R.

OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER
FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM

16X/88
SECRET

Earnscliffe,

Ottawa, 5th October, 1939

C 267912

My dear Dr.Skelton,

May I invite your reference to the correspondence which has recently been exchanged between the Canadian Government and the United Kingdom Government regarding the establishment in Canada of an air training scheme on a very wide basis?

I would refer in particular to the Canadian Government's telegram of the 28th September, in paragraph 8 of which it is stated that the visit of the proposed Mission from the United Kingdom on this subject would be welcomed.

I should now inform you that I learn that it is contemplated that this Mission should leave for Canada on October 6th or October 7th. I am informed that it will be headed by Lord Riverdale and that it will consist of about fourteen persons.

I am requesting further information from London about the probable date and port of landing in Canada and also about the names of the members of the Mission other than Lord Riverdale. I shall hope to communicate these details to you shortly with a request that the party may receive facilities similar to those so courteously accorded to the United Kingdom Purchasing Mission headed by Colonel Greenly and Sir James Rae.

I have at present no information whether it is contemplated that any public statement should be made in the United Kingdom at an appropriate moment about the Mission's departure for Canada but I am enquiring about this point also.

Yours sincerely,
(sgd) GERALD CAMPBELL

Dr.O.D. Skelton

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Air Min a/T

C 267913

Office of the High Commissioner
for the United Kingdom,
Earnscliffe, Ottawa.

6th October, 1939.

516X/88

SECRET.

My dear Dr. Skelton,

With reference to my letter of the 5th October (516X/8) about the Mission which is to come from the United Kingdom to discuss the establishment in Canada of air training on a very wide basis, I now learn that the Mission will be composed as follows:-

Lord Riverdale, K.B.E.

Air Marshal Sir Christopher Courtney, K.C.B., C.B.E., D.S.O.

Group Captain J.N. Hollinghurst, O.B.E., D.F.C.

Group Captain J.M.Robb, D.S.O., D.F.C.

Group Captain A. Gray, M.C.

Mr. Vann B. Abraham, C.B., Principal Assistant Secretary, Air Ministry.

Mr. Logan R. Howard, Principal, Air Ministry.

Mr. J. Smyth, Principal, Air Ministry.

Mr. A.D. Hayward.

Miss M.A. Wright, shorthand typist.

Miss V.Bennett, shorthand typist.

Mr. Joseph Milner, Private Secretary to Lord Riverdale.

Air Marshal Courtney's servant.

I understand that the foregoing party are sailing today in the S.S. "Duchess of Richmond" which is due at Montreal about the 15th October.

Dr.O.D.Skelton,
Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs,
O t t a w a.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

It is expected that an expert in aircraft production (not yet selected) will probably sail by the next boat thereafter and that Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke Popham will be following later.

It will be greatly appreciated if the Canadian Government will be good enough to accord to the Air Ministry's Mission facilities similar to those which were accorded to the United Kingdom Purchasing Mission headed by Colonel Greenly and Sir James Rae.

I would add in conclusion that I have been promised very shortly a further telegram dealing with the question of a public announcement at the appropriate moment about the Mission's departure for Canada.

Yours sincerely,

(Signed) Gerald Campbell.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

Air T. Scheme

C267915

OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER
FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM.
Earnscliffe,
OTTAWA.

516X/89
SECRET & PERSONAL

7th October, 1939

My dear Prime Minister,

I have been asked to inform you that the Secretary of State for Air is anxious to arrange that Captain Harold Balfour, M.P., Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Air, should pay a short visit to Canada in the near future. Captain Balfour has special experience of air training and production problems and it is considered that it would be of great value that he should be able, if possible, to take part in the discussions which will be taking place between the members of the Air Ministry Mission headed by Lord Riverdale and the Canadian authorities concerned, as well as the corresponding Missions from Australia and New Zealand, on the subject of the establishment in Canada of an air training scheme on a very wide basis.

I should be very grateful if you would be good enough to let me know at the earliest possible moment whether such a visit by Captain Balfour would be welcomed by the Canadian Government and, if so, whether he could be given all appropriate facilities in connection therewith.

I may say that in that event it would be proposed that Captain Balfour should leave for Canada by the next available ship, probably some time next week.

Yours sincerely,

Malcolm Campbell

The Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, M.P.,
Prime Minister of Canada,
Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 267916

ODS/AH
Oct. 7,1939.
11.30

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER.

Sir Gerald Campbell has just brought in the attached communication regarding an air training announcement.

You will note that it is proposed to make an announcement on Tuesday, October 10th, as part of the Air Ministry's review of activities.

Sir Gerald said that his own view was that it lumped the Dominions too much together and did not give sufficient recognition to the much greater contribution which Canada would make under the plan.

At first glance three points present themselves:

1. No consideration has been given to the suggestion which Sir Gerald, I assume, passed on after the discussion which he had with you and also with myself on Thursday evening as to the necessity of making clear that air cooperation was definitely the most effective form of military cooperation.

2. It assumes that a plan on the great ~~scheme~~ scale suggested is going to be carried out. While a scheme of greatly increased training has been accepted in principle by

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Canada and New Zealand (we have no word yet from Australia), the whole question of its feasibility as regards supply of airplanes and of the financial obligations involved remains to be determined. It implies that the task of the Mission was merely to discuss details of the execution of the plan which has already been accepted. It looks very much as if the Air Ministry is endeavouring to rush the public acceptance of ~~the~~ a plan involving "the taking on of airmen amounting to many thousands each month."

3. The announcement on Tuesday will in all probability precede a statement as to peace and war aims. Sir Gerald said, incidentally, that he assumed it was their intention to get this out before the reply was made to Hitler. Such a procedure is definitely open to the objection, to which I referred the other day, that it would be made to appear that "the Dominions" were taking the initiative in rejecting consideration of peace possibilities by putting forward a colossal air scheme at this particular moment.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

If an announcement has to be made before the British Air Mission arrives here, there is no reason why it could not be deferred until after a reply on the peace terms has been made and be made much briefer and less committal than this typical Air Ministry production.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Office of the High Commissioner
for the United Kingdom
Earnscliffe
Ottawa.

7th October, 1939

516X/89
SECRET AND IMMEDIATE

Dear Dr. Skelton,

With reference to my letter of yesterday and previous correspondence on the subject of the despatch of the Air Ministry Mission to Canada, I have now been informed by the Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs that it is desired to make an announcement on the subject in the House of Commons at Westminster on Tuesday, the 10th October, at about 4 o'clock p.m. British summer time.

The text of the proposed statement is given in the enclosed memorandum and I am instructed to ask that I may be informed at the earliest possible moment whether the Canadian Government desire to make any comments upon it.

I may say for your own personal information and that of the Prime Minister that it is expected that the statement will be made by the Secretary of State for Air as part of a general review of air activities similar to that made by the First Lord of the Admiralty a few days ago.

I should add in conclusion that the United Kingdom Government would of course see no objection whatever to a simultaneous statement on similar lines being made in Canada if that is desired.

Yours sincerely,

(sgd) GERALD CAMPBELL

Dr. O. D. Skelton,
Under-Secretary of State
for External Affairs,
Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

MEMORANDUM

I am glad to be able to announce today a development of great importance which I can confidently say is destined to make a most effective contribution to the successful prosecution of the war.

His Majesty's Governments in the United Kingdom, Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia and New Zealand have agreed on arrangements for rapid expansion on a co-operative basis of training organisation for pilots, observers and air gunners required first for considering the enlargement and then for the maintenance on the enlarged basis of the Air Forces of the respective countries. This will be combined with an expansive production of aircraft in the Dominions concerned.

By this agreement the many facilities and the great natural advantages for the training of the pilots and the other personnel and the production of aircraft which the Dominions offer in the areas free from any risk of enemy interference will be utilised to the fullest extent and to the best advantage.

Training schools will be established and maintained in each of these Dominions. The more comprehensive and technical facilities required for the advancement of training apart from those available and to be made available here will in the main be concentrated in Canada. Personnel from elementary training schools in Australia and New Zealand as well as a substantial proportion of young men passing out of similar establishments in this country will proceed to Canada to receive there with similar personnel from schools in Canada the advanced training which will fit them all for service in the line. The young men so trained will join either the Air Force squadrons main-

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

tained by the respective Dominion Governments in the theatre of operations or our own Royal Air Force units; while those from this country who get their final training in Canada will of course come back to join the Royal Air Force squadrons in the field.

The House will form some impression of the magnitude of the plan when I say that as it develops the number of training schools, already large, will be ~~more than doubled~~ approximately trebled and we shall achieve an increased output of first line pilots, observers and air gunners to be counted not in hundreds but in many thousands each month as the war goes on. The aim, in short, is to achieve Empire Air Forces of overwhelming strength.

A Mission from this country - headed by Lord Riverdale, who will be aided by a specially selected technical staff - is already on its way to Canada to meet there corresponding Missions from Australia and New Zealand. These Missions will discuss with the Canadian authorities all further steps that are to be taken for the rapid execution of the plan, including provision of the necessary aircraft instructors, ground personnel and aerodromes.

I need not dwell upon the great significance and far-reaching effect of this development in an all-important field of war activity in which the Dominions have already made individual contributions of a gallant and striking character. It is a notable illustration of the manner in which free and equal members of the British Commonwealth can by discussion and collaboration bring to bear in concert the full weight and might of their individual resources to secure achievement of a common purpose and the success of a common cause.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

I am sure that the House will like to join the Government in paying a tribute to the vision and imagination of the Dominion statesmen who have done so much to help in realising this great conception and who will, I am confident, contribute notably to its achievement. We are most grateful too to the Dominion High Commissioners in London for their helpful co-operation.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

I am sure that the House will like to join the Government in paying a tribute to the vision and imagination of the Dominion statesmen who have done so much to help in realising this great conception and who will, I am confident, contribute notably to its achievement. We are most grateful too to the Dominion High Commissioners in London for their helpful co-operation.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

"R"

TELEGRAM

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

CYPHER LONDON, October 7th, 1939.

NO. 476.

C 267923

No. 476. Your telegram unnumbered September 30th, air training questions. Air Ministry have supplied following brief particulars with regard to aerodrome, etc. requirements.

1. An aerodrome of 1,000 yards square is considered sufficient for intensive flying training at advanced training schools or elementary training schools. It is preferable not to have runways so as to allow a larger front to be worked on. There is however no objection to runways if nature of soil necessitates them.

2. Hangar floor space required at each advanced training school is 225,000 square feet. Hangar floor space required at each elementary flying training school is 90,000 square feet. Doors of hangars should be not less than 20 feet high and 80 feet wide. In order to allow flexibility and interchangeability among stations so that each station is capable of housing the biggest operational aircraft it would be advisable to have door openings 120 feet wide. This however is not a definite requirement for a school.

3. Total accommodation required at each advanced training school is for 150 officers and 800 men; at each elementary school 115 officers and 620 men. These figures include trainees, instructors and maintenance personnel.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

C 267924

TELEGRAM

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON,

4. To enable this large number of personnel to be trained in minimum time, the Air Ministry provide in addition to parent aerodrome two relief landing grounds for each advanced training school and one relief landing ground for each elementary school. These relief landing grounds may be slightly smaller if necessary than the parent aerodrome and require no buildings. The relief landing ground should not be closer than five miles from the parent station so as to avoid air congestion. As to runways confident that 3,000 feet adequate length.

MASSEY

Received Ottawa 4.04 P.M. E.S.T.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Ottawa, October 7, 1939

MEMORANDUM FOR DR. SKELTON:

C 267925

Re Air Training Scheme and Mission

It will be necessary before the Air Mission arrives for Council carefully to consider the constitutional questions likely to arise in connection therewith. Ministerial responsibility will have to be carefully defined as between the several governments concerned.

In Sir Gerald Campbell's letter of October the 4th, regarding the conference of Ministers in London, Sir Gerald says:

> ".....There is and can be no question of departing from the well-recognised principle that executive responsibility remains with the several Governments individually."
>
> ".....This principle has been made abundantly clear by constitutional developments during the last fifteen years and by the passing of the Statute of Westminster. But the fact that this is the position only emphasises the need for constant consultation by all practicable methods, especially when vital issues are at stake and when member nations of the British Commonwealth are concentrating all their energies on a common task".

This quotation is from a communication being given to the press by the British Government. It might well, I think, be made a basis for clearer definition of exact responsibility upon United Kingdom, Canadian, Australian and New Zealand Governments as it may arise in connection with the Air Training Scheme. Before the Mission arrives I think a definite formula should be worked out and approved by the Cabinet which could be presented to and considered by the Mission the moment it arrives.

Speaking generally, I feel that the Canadian government will have to assume primary responsibility for whatever is done in Canada. By that I do not mean that we

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

become immediately responsible but will have to assume responsibility for powers either delegated or not delegated. I should think that the obligation of each government would have to be clearly defined and agreed to by all concerned. Within the sphere of obligations thus set forth each government would be expected to operate. Shortcomings therein would be the fault of the government concerned - not of the government of Canada.

This matter should receive the careful consideration of Council on Tuesday.

W. L. M. K.

MK:MAC

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 267926

become immediately responsible but will have to assume responsibility for powers either delegated or not delegated. I should think that the obligation of each government would have to be clearly defined and agreed to by all concerned. Within the sphere of obligations thus set forth each government would be expected to operate. Shortcomings therein would be the fault of the government concerned - not of the government of Canada.

This matter should receive the careful consideration of Council on Tuesday.

W. L. M. K.

MK:MAC

REPEAT
REPETER

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Air. T. Scheme

C 267927

ODS/SR
8.10.39

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER

You will note that I have indicated (attached) an alternative ending in the letter to Sir Gerald Campbell. I still have some apprehension that an announcement on Tuesday, dressed up as it will in any case be dressed up, might be interpreted as an indication that the Dominions were opposed to any consideration of peace terms even on such lines as you have suggested to Mr. Chamberlain. Announcement on Tuesday would, as you have indicated, be too late to affect the nature of "peace" terms offered by Hitler or his decision to make these proposals. If made later, the announcement should, of course, make clear that decision in principle had been reached last week.

O.D.

I would ask whether for a decision that a Tuesday announcement might be ~~for~~ to ease blame of Britain for continuance of war and a million unemployed Sufferings, at a moment when peace views were being canvassed. I point out views of ~~Simon~~ Lloyd George in the post-Chanak debate as a warning against attempt to reflect ~~(?)~~ in changing position of Britain in Hitler's mind. - I feel strongly announcement should be made, as soon as possible, - would have preferred having had it made before recent crisis arose ~~should~~ broke & Hitler.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R

Draft (I have retained original)

D. of T.
ODS/SR

C 267928

Ottawa, October 8th, 1939.

SECRET
IMMEDIATE

Dear Sir Gerald:

I desire to acknowledge your letter of October 7th (your file 516X/89) stating that it is proposed to make an announcement regarding air training arrangements, on the lines of the memorandum enclosed in your letter, in the House of Commons at Westminster on the afternoon of Tuesday, October 10th.

Your letter and memorandum were at once brought to the attention of the Prime Minister.

I am instructed to state that in the view of the Canadian Government it would be desirable that any statement made should indicate the actual sequence of the discussions on the air training scheme, and should also emphasize the fact that this activity constitutes, in the opinion of the Government of the United Kingdom, the most essential and effective method of military cooperation open to Canada.

It is also considered desirable that it be made clear that no decision has yet been reached or could, under

Sir Gerald Campbell, K.C.M.G., High Commissioner for the United Kingdom,
Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

the circumstances, have been reached, as to the scale of the air recruiting and training which will be found feasible. The Canadian Government are convinced that a greatly increased measure of such training is practicable and desirable, and are determined to join to the fullest extent of their ability in a cooperative plan for carrying on intermediate and advanced training in Canada. It has, however, been indicated in the Prime Minister's telegrams of September 28th and September 30th that the question of the scale upon which this plan could be carried out would depend upon the examination of the technical conditions as to air stations, instructors and training planes, and upon conclusions as to costs and their distribution, which would require consideration in the light of the estimate of other expenditures and of credits in the supply fields to which reference was made. Mr. Chamberlain stated in his reply of October 4th that the Air Mission would be in a position to discuss both the technical and the financial conditions of the scheme. The proposed statement, however, particularly in paragraph 7, appears to assume that agreement has already been reached not only on principle but on the scale suggested in the initial telegram of September 26th. It is therefore the view of the Canadian Government that any statement made should include the following points:

1. Reference to the fact that the proposal was put

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

forward by the Government of the United Kingdom, in September, in the belief that this activity constituted the most necessary and decisive effort which Canada could put forth in the field of military cooperation, and that it has been accepted in principle by Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

2. Outline of the plan of local elementary training in the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and Canada, and advanced training in Canada, indicating that it would involve a great and rapid expansion of air training. (without indicating, until after the Missions have reported and the Commonwealth Governments concerned have reached agreement, the probable scale of the scheme to be adopted).

3. Reference to the coming to Canada of Missions from the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand to examine the detailed requirements.

Yours sincerely,

O. D. Skelton

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

forward by the Government of the United Kingdom, in September, in the belief that this activity constituted the most necessary and decisive effort which Canada could put forth in the field of military cooperation, and that it has been accepted in principle by Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

2. Outline of the plan of local elementary training in the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and Canada, and advanced training in Canada, indicating that it would involve a great and rapid expansion of air training, (without indicating, until after the Missions have reported and the Commonwealth Governments concerned have reached agreement, the probable scale of the scheme to be adopted).

3. Reference to the coming to Canada of Missions from the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand to examine the detailed requirements.

As to the time of the announcement to be made, it is considered that under all the circumstances a slightly later date would be preferable.

Yours sincerely,

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

forward by the Government of the United Kingdom, in September, in the belief that this activity constituted the most necessary and decisive effort which Canada could put forth in the field of military cooperation, and that it has been accepted in principle by Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

2. Outline of the plan of local elementary training in the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and Canada, and advanced training in Canada, indicating that it would involve a great and rapid expansion of air training, (without indicating, until after the Missions have reported and the Commonwealth Governments concerned have reached agreement, the probable scale of the scheme to be adopted).

3. Reference to the coming to Canada of Missions from the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand to examine the detailed requirements.

As to the time of the announcement to be made, it is considered that under all the circumstances a slightly later date would be preferable.

Yours sincerely,

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Air Training -

"R"

THE PRIME MINISTER OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA.

C 267933

SECRET & PERSONAL

CYPHER

CANBERRA, October 9th, 1939.

Secret and Personal. I received your telegram of September 30th and my Government has been considering the question of possibility of participation in large expansion training of air personnel.

We approve aims of air training scheme and would be prepared to send air mission to Canada.

We are grateful for your cooperation and for facilities your country offers.

At present we are not in a position to speak with certainty as to the numbers which could be partly trained and sent away for further training but we may have a shortage of instructors and have a serious shortage of training machines.

On each of these matters we would require assistance, though we are taking immediate steps to examine the possibilities of building certain elementary types in Australia and possibly making purchases from America in the event of neutrality embargo being modified.

We have received an advance copy of a statement which will be made in the House of Commons on October 10th and I propose to make a simultaneous statement on similar lines.

The Australian personnel will be decided in the course of the next few days and as soon as it is available I will communicate it to you. Ends.

PRIME MINISTER OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

Air T.

ODS/AH

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER. Oct. 9,1939.

C267934

Sir Gerald Campbell stated this morning that he had cabled last night the contents of our letter regarding air training, together with some points you had made in conversation with him yesterday.

H e stated that on his own initiative he had cabled some comments on Saturday night and had received a reply late last night. It was indicated in the reply that the background of the Air Ministry's statement was that with the collapse of Poland enemy aircraft might next turn to attacks upon British airplane factories and training fields. It is not even certain yet whether Russian aircraft might not join. It was, therefore, decided it was necessary to impress both the enemy and neutral countries by a statement implying that an air training scheme on a colossal scale was already under way. The effect would be spoiled if it were indicated that the scheme were still to be worked out.

I said to Sir Gerald that we were quite well aware of the probability of German attacks such as he mentioned. Those attacks if they did come would come in the next two or three months. The Germans knew quite as well as we did that no new training scheme could come into operation for a year at least.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

The announcement of a big scheme is just as likely to spur them on to get their bombing in first as it is to deter them. If they could be deterred by an announcement now, that could be done by referring to a "very largely increased training" scheme without trying, incidentally, to tie us down to an acceptance of the precise figures contained in the first London telegram on the subject.

Sir Gerald referred to the emphasis you had laid ~~down~~ on the actual historical sequence, namely, that the United Kingdom had initiated these proposals and that they had been set out as the most important contribution Canada could give. He added that the Air Ministry had apparently preferred to pay a tribute to the far-sighted wisdom of a Dominion statesman. ~~as a tribute~~. I told him that so far as Canada was concerned we preferred facts to soft soap.

OD

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

A.M.T.
ODS/ET
9 Oct.1939

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER:

C 267936

Enclosed is a copy of a letter and memorandum which Sir Gerald Campbell has just brought in, with a note covering a revised Air Ministry announcement regarding air training.

As regards paragraph 3 of the announcement, Sir Gerald said they had endeavoured to meet your point by putting in the word "comparatively" before the words "free of any risk of enemy interference", though their own judgment was the freedom under present circumstances was more than comparative.

In paragraphs 2 and 3 it will be noted they have met the historical sequence suggestion by indicating that the scheme was put forward by the Government of the United Kingdom, and that the Dominion Governments have agreed in principle to these arrangements.

In the last paragraph they had reluctantly omitted the tribute to "the vision and imagination of the Dominion statesmen", and will be quite ready to put it back.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

I told Sir Gerald that on hurried reading, these points seemed adequately covered, but that there were two matters on which our suggestions had not in any way been met. The first one was the desirability from our standpoint of including a statement to the effect that this was the most effective form of military cooperation. I reminded him that ~~that~~ this had several times been brought to their attention, and that it was the understanding on which the Government had agreed to this scheme in principle. He enquired whether I thought this was met by the first sentence in paragraph 6. I said I thought that was all right as far as it went, but that it did not cover the point, with which he frankly agreed. I suggested that it might be met if after the words "all phases of war effort" they should add "and which in the opinion of the Government of the United Kingdom would constitute the most essential and decisive effort that Canada could put forward in the field of military cooperation". Next, I pointed out that in paragraph 5, they had made no alteration whatever in their statement of the scale of the scheme, in spite of our lengthy analysis of the situation in this regard. Sir Gerald said they undoubtedly wished to make the statement as striking as possible. I said we quite recognized and sympathized with that desire, but that they must give some consideration

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

not only to the enemy but to their allies. We had definitely made it clear from the beginning that while we approved a plan of greatly enlarged air training, we could not reach any conclusion on the scale to which we could commit ourselves until we had some careful and expert report on the technical feasibility of a scheme on the scale they had suggested, and particularly as to the financial commitments which had to be considered as part of the whole financial and credit arrangement on which we had been endeavouring for some time to get a complete picture. Further, it was apparent in the telegram from Australia just received this afternoon, that they did not feel they could commit themselves to these huge numbers. It was better from that standpoint not to commit ourselves to an objective which a brief period would show was quite impossible of attainment. If later it appeared that the scheme could be operated on this scale, that could be stated equally effectively when the Missions had made their report.

I did not suggest to Sir Gerald any alteration of this paragraph, but it might perhaps be varied somewhat as follows:

The House will form some impression of the magnitude of the plan when I say that as it develops it would result in a very great and rapid

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

increase in the number of training schools, already large, and that we shall achieve an increased output of first line pilots, observers and air gunners to be counted not in hundreds but in many thousands as the war goes on. (or, to be counted not in hundreds but in thousands each month). (I am a little doubtful about the latter). The aim, in short, is to achieve an ~~air force~~ Empire air force of overwhelming strength.

There is a further minor point in paragraph 2, line 2, as to whether it is sufficient to say "recently put forward", or whether we should say "put forward last month".

Sir Gerald stated he would like to get a telegram off this evening. Perhaps it might be possible for you to telephone me when you have had time to examine the memorandum.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

P.S. It must be borne in mind that if we agree to an objective that we can later not attain, that will enable Senator Meighen to say that if the Government had accepted his recommendations last year and had started air training schools on a huge scale, we would now have been able to meet the United Kingdom demands. It must further be considered that while there are hundreds and thousands of young men in Canada who would make competent pilots and who are willing to volunteer for that purpose, the supply is not unlimited, and presumably it is not desired to introduce conscription for an air force any more than for a military force.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 267941

OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER
FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM.

Earnscliffe,

OTTAWA.

516X/93. 10th October, 1939.

SECRET & IMMEDIATE

Dear Dr. Skelton,

As I said in my earlier letter to-day, I took the earliest opportunity of conveying to the Government of the United Kingdom the observations which, as stated in your letter of the 8th October, the Canadian Government desired to offer upon the draft statement which it is contemplated that the Secretary of State for Air will make on the 10th October, in the course of a general statement on air activity, regarding the Empire air training scheme now under consideration.

These observations have received the fullest and most sympathetic consideration of the United Kingdom Government, and I am now instructed to convey to you the enclosed copy of a redraft of the statement in question, which may be regarded as replacing the draft contained in my letter of the 7th October (516X/89), and which the United Kingdom Government earnestly hope will commend itself to the Canadian Government.

In communicating to me the amendments which have now been incorporated in the revised draft of the statement, the United Kingdom Government enquire whether the Canadian Government contemplate making a similar statement simultaneously, and I should be very grateful to learn as soon as possible what may be intended in this respect.

Yours sincerely,

(sgd) Gerald Campbell

Dr. O. D. Skelton,
Under-Secretary of State
for External Affairs,
OTTAWA.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

M E M O R A N D U M.

1. I am glad to be able to announce to-day a development of great importance which I can confidently say is destined to make a most effective contribution to the successful prosecution of the war.

2. His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland recently put forward for the consideration of His Majesty's Government in Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia and New Zealand an outline of arrangements for rapid expansion on a co-operative basis of training organisation for pilots, observers and air gunners required first for considering the enlargement and then for the maintenance on the enlarged basis of the Air Forces of the respective countries.—This will be combined with an expansive production of aircraft in the Dominions concerned.

3. The Dominion Governments concerned have signified their ready agreement in principle to these arrangements and as a result they and we have ensured that the many facilities and the great natural advantages for the training of the pilots and the other personnel and the production of aircraft which the Dominions offer in areas comparatively free from any risk of enemy interference will be utilised to the fullest extent and to the best advantage.

4. Training schools will be established and maintained in each of these Dominions. The more comprehensive and technical facilities required for the advancement of training apart from those available and to be made available here will in the main be concentrated in Canada. Personnel from elementary training schools in Australia and New Zealand as well as a substantial proportion of young/

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

young men passing out of similar establishments in this country will proceed to Canada to receive there with similar personnel from schools in Canada the advanced training which will fit them all for service in the line. The young men so trained will join either the Air Force squadrons maintained by the respective Dominion Governments in the theatre of operations or our own Royal Air Force units; while those from this country who get their final training in Canada will of course come back to join the Royal Air Force squadrons in the field.

5. The House will form some impression of the magnitude of the plan when I say that as it develops the number of training schools, already large, will be approximately trebled and we shall achieve an increased output of first line pilots, observers and air gunners to be counted not in hundreds but in many thousands each month as the war goes on. The aim, in short, is to achieve Empire Air Forces of overwhelming strength.

6. It will be seen that the special part to be taken by Canada will call from her for a contribution of a high order in line with that which she is making in all phases of war effort. A Mission from this country - headed by Lord Riverdale, who will be aided by a specially selected technical staff - is already on its way to Canada to meet there corresponding Missions from Australia and New Zealand. These Missions will discuss with the Canadian authorities all further steps that are to be taken for the rapid execution of the plan, including provision of the necessary aircraft instructors, ground personnel and aerodromes.

7./

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 267943A

7. I need not dwell upon the great significance and far-reaching effect of this development in an all-important field of war activity in which the Dominions have already made individual contributions of a gallant and striking character. It is a notable illustration of the manner in which free and equal members of the British Commonwealth can by discussion and collaboration bring to bear in concert the full weight and might of their individual resources to secure achievement of a common purpose and the success of a common cause.

8. I am sure that the House will like to join the Government in paying tribute to the Dominion statesmen who have done so much to help in realising this great conception and who will, I am confident, contribute notably to its achievement. We are most grateful too to the Dominion High Commissioners in London for their helpful co-operation.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

AIR TRAINING

United Kingdom Statement as understood from Sir Gerald Campbell.

10.26 A.M.
October 10th,1939.

1. I am glad to be able to announce today a development of great importance which I can confidently say is destined to make a most effective contribution to the successful prosecution of the war.

2. His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland put forward in September for the consideration of His Majesty's Government in Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia and New Zealand an outline of arrangements for rapid expansion on a co-operative basis of training organisation for pilots, observers and air gunners required first for considering the enlargement and then for the maintenance on the enlarged basis of the Air Forces of the respective countries, this to be combined with an expansive production of aircraft in the Dominions concerned.

3. The Dominion Governments concerned have signified their ready agreement in principle to these arrangements and as a result they and we have ensured that the many facilities and the great natural advantages for the training of the pilots and the other personnel and the production of aircraft which the Dominions offer in areas comparatively free from any risk of enemy interference will be utilised to the fullest extent and to the best advantage.

4. Training schools will be established and maintained in each of these Dominions. The more comprehensive and technical facilities required for the advancement of training apart from those available and to be made available here will in the main be concentrated in Canada. Personnel from elementary training schools in Australia and New Zealand as well as a substantial proportion of young men passing out

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

of similar establishments in this country will proceed to Canada to receive there with similar personnel from schools in Canada the advanced training which will fit them all for service in the line. The young men so trained will join either the Air Force squadrons maintained by the respective Dominion Governments in the theatre of operations or our own Royal Air Force units; while those from this country who get their final training in Canada will of course come back to join the Royal Air Force squadrons in the field.

5. The undertaking is of great magnitude. Its development would result in a great and rapid increase in the number of training schools, already large, and achieve an increased output of first line pilots, observers and air gunners which, combined with our own output, would ensure the greatly increased requirements in trained personnel being fully met. The aim, in short, is to achieve (Empire) Air Forces of overwhelming strength.

6. It will be seen that the scheme involves a concentration of air training largely in Canada. With the facilities that Canada possesses, this cooperative effort may, in the opinion of the United Kingdom Government, prove to be of the most essential and decisive character. A Mission from this country - headed by Lord Riverdale, who will be aided by a specially selected technical staff - is already on its way to Canada to meet there corresponding Missions from Australia and New Zealand. These Missions will discuss with the Canadian authorities all further steps that are to be taken for the rapid execution of the plan, including provision of the necessary aircraft instructors, ground personnel and aerodromes.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

7. I should add that for various reasons the Government of the Union of South Africa do not consider this scheme of air training applicable to the circumstances of the Union, and that they consider their air force personnel should receive their full training at home. I am,however, authorized to say that the Union authorities intend to make their training as complete as possible and to expand their air forces to the fullest extent of their resources.

8. I need not dwell upon the great significance and far-reaching effect of this development in an all-important field of war activity in which the Dominions have already made individual contributions of a gallant and striking character. It is a notable illustration of the manner in which free and equal members of the British Commonwealth can by discussion and collaboration bring to bear in concert the full weight and might of their individual resources to secure achievement of a common purpose and the success of a common cause.

9. I am sure that the House will like to join the Government in paying tribute to the vision and imagination of the Dominion statesmen who so promptly recognized the importance of this great conception and who will, I am confident, contribute notably to its achievement. We are most grateful too to the Dominion High Commissioners in London for their helpful co-operation.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R. AirT.

ODS/ LSG

Ottawa, 10th October, 1939.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER:

C 267947

Attached is a revised copy of the press statement. I am sending a copy by hand to Mr. Rogers, with a note.

Sir Gerald Campbell telephoned your revision and said he thought himself it was satisfactory and that the people to whom he talked at the Dominions Office would be prepared to accept it. He said it would have to be brought to the attention of Eden and ~~others in~~ the Air Ministry. They would send a telegram in reply which he expected to arrive by 9.30. Meantime, the statement ~~would stay~~ is being relayed as it stands, and Mr. Trudel will translate it into French. It will be held till the all clear signals come.

S

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS

Office of
The Prime Minister

Name of Publication The Ottawa Evening Citizen

Date October 10, 1939

C 267948

Subject "Air Training"

Empire Air Fighters Will Now be Trained in Canada

Great Britain, Canada, Australia, New Zealand In Co-Operative Plans

Governments Agree On Scheme for Training and Expanding the Air Forces of the Empire.

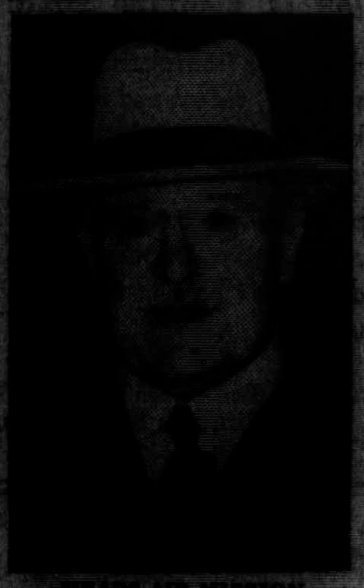
Expanded Production Of Aircraft As Well

Advanced Training of Pilots Will Be Concentrated In Dominion, Premier Announces.

Canada will be the center for training the fighting airmen of the British Empire, according to a plan announced by Prime Minister Mackenzie King here today.

Mr. Mackenzie King's statement was released almost simultaneously with a similar announcement concerning Empire pilots made in the British House of Commons by Sir Kingsley Wood, secretary for air.

The Canadian Prime Minister said the governments of the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and Canada had agreed on a co-operative scheme for training and expanding the air forces of the Empire and that the plan involved concentration of intermediate and advanced training for pilots, observers and air gunners in Canada.



Mr. Mackenzie King described the development as highly important and designed to provide air forces of overwhelming strength.

Expanded Production

Combined with the air training scheme is a plan for expanded production of aircraft about which Mr. Mackenzie King gave no details. Steps have already been taken, however, looking to the manufacture of aircraft and parts in Canada on an expanded scale.

The chief object of the plan is to utilize to the full extent the natural advantages and the facilities existing in the dominions for training airmen and producing aircraft free from danger of enemy interference.

Both Australia and New Zealand will set up training schools and the facilities for advanced training, except those already existing in the United Kingdom, will be provided in Canada.

HEADS AIR MISSION

Lord Riverdale, who with specially selected technical staff, is coming to Canada to meet Australian and New Zealand missions to discuss with dominions authorities steps to expedite plan for training of Empire air fighters in this country.

The minister's announcement of the air training scheme was part of a review of the activities of the R.A.F. since the war began.

Siegfried Line Photographed.

He told the House the Air Force had made a "complete photographic map of the Siegfried line," which forms Germany's westwall fortifications.

He said submarines were sighted by aircraft on 72 occasions during the first four weeks of war and 34 attacks were made, some of which were "undoubtedly successful."

Sir Kingsley said the latest British fighting planes were "definitely better than German counterparts."

In the first two weeks of war 10,000 men were accepted for Air Force duty, he said. More than 100 naval convoys were escorted by Air Force planes in the first four weeks.

Captured German Plane.

Sir Kingsley mentioned "almost daily" clashes between German and British planes and said a German Messerschmidt fighter had fallen intact into French hands, permitting the British authorities to "test our convictions" that British fighters were better.

As evidence of British air power he told of British planes covering "the whole length of Germany, from the Saar to the North Sea, all without serious interruption" on a scouting flight.

The planes landed safely in England, he said, and photographs taken on the flight went into maps.

Must Be Heavy Sleepers

The air minister referred ironically to German comment on a British night flight over Berlin. He quoted a German official as saying Berlin citizens "slept quietly during its progress."

"Our airmen, on their return, spoke of the firing and the searchlights that they encountered, so we can only conjecture that the people of Berlin must be very heavy sleepers."

Sir Kingsley added that he hoped Berliners were wakeful enough the next day to read British propaganda leaflets which "Hitler describes as these 'wretched leaflets.'"

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS

Office of
The Prime Minister

Name of Publication The Ottawa Evening Citizen

Date October 10, 1939

C 267948

Subject 'Air Training'

Empire Air Fighters Will Now be Trained in Canada

Great Britain, Canada, Australia, New Zealand In Co-Operative Plans

Governments Agree On Scheme for Training and Expanding the Air Forces of the Empire.

Expanded Production Of Aircraft As Well

Advanced Training of Pilots Will Be Concentrated In Dominion, Premier Announces.

Canada will be the center for training the fighting airmen of the British Empire, according to a plan announced by Prime Minister Mackenzie King here today.

Mr. Mackenzie King's statement was released almost simultaneously with a similar announcement concerning Empire pilots made in the British House of Commons by Sir Kingsley Wood, secretary for air.

The Canadian Prime Minister said the governments of the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and Canada had agreed on a co-operative scheme for training and expanding the air forces of the Empire and that the plan involved concentration of intermediate and advanced training for pilots, observers and air gunners in Canada.

Mr. Mackenzie King described the development as highly important and designed to provide air forces of overwhelming strength.

Expanded Production

Combined with the air training scheme is a plan for expanded production of aircraft about which Mr. Mackenzie King gave no details. Steps have already been taken, however, looking to the manufacture of aircraft and parts in Canada on an expanded scale.

The chief object of the plan is to utilize to the full extent the natural advantages and the facilities existing in the dominions for training airmen and producing aircraft free from danger of eneemy interference.

Both Australia and New Zealand will set up training schools but the facilities for advanced training, except those already existing in the United Kingdom, will be concentrated in Canada.

(Continued on Page 12, Col 3.)

HEADS AIR MISSION

Lord Riverdale, who with specially selected technical staff, is coming to Canada to meet Australian and New Zealand missions to discuss with dominions authorities steps to expedite plan for training of Empire air fighters in this country.

The minister's announcement of the air training scheme was part of a review of the activities of the R.A.F. since the war began.

Siegfried Line Photographed.

He told the House the Air Force had made a "complete photographic map of the Siegfried line," which forms Germany's westwall fortifications.

He said submarines were sighted by aircraft on 72 occasions during the first four weeks of war and 34 attacks were made, some of which were "undoubtedly successful."

Sir Kingsley said the latest British fighting planes were "definitely better than German counterparts."

In the first two weeks of war 10,000 men were accepted for Air Force duty, he said. More than 100 naval convoys were escorted by Air Force planes in the first four weeks.

Captured German Plane.

Sir Kingsley mentioned "almost daily" clashes between German and British planes and said a German Messerschmidt fighter had fallen intact into French hands, permitting the British authorities to "test our convictions" that British fighters were better.

As evidence of British air power he told of British planes covering "the whole length of Germany, from the Saar to the North Sea, all without serious interruption" on a scouting flight.

The planes landed safely in England, he said, and photographs taken on the flight went into maps.

Must Be Heavy Sleepers

The air minister referred ironically to German comment on a British night flight over Berlin. He quoted a German official as saying Berlin citizens "slept quietly during its progress."

"Our airmen, on their return, spoke of the firing and the searchlights that they encountered, so we can only conjecture that the people of Berlin must be very heavy sleepers."

Sir Kingsley added that he hoped Berliners were wakeful enough the next day to read British propaganda leaflets which "Hitler describes as these 'wretched leaflets.'"

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R" C 267949

FROM: THE PRIME MINISTER OF NEW ZEALAND

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

MOST SECRET

CYPHER

Wellington, October 10, 1939

Most Secret. His Majesty's Government in New Zealand advise that New Zealand's representatives to confer at Ottawa are: Group Captain H. W. I. Saunders, Chief of the Air Staff and Mr. T. A. Barrow, Air Secretary, who will leave Auckland by S.S. "Monterrey" on October 16, arriving in Ottawa about the 2nd November. This information has been forwarded to the Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs.

PRIME MINISTER OF NEW ZEALAND.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

RELEASED 10 A.M. E.S.T. OCTOBER 10TH

The following statement was issued to the press by the Prime Minister this morning:

The Governments of the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and Canada have recently reached agreement upon a development of great importance, which they believe is destined to make a most effective contribution to the successful prosecution of the war.

His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom put forward in September for the consideration of His Majesty's Governments in Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia and New Zealand an outline of arrangements for rapid expansion of air training on a co-operative basis. The arrangements provide a training organisation for pilots, observers and air gunners, required first for the enlargement and then for the maintenance on an enlarged basis of the Air Forces of the respective countries, this to be combined with an expanded production of aircraft.

The Governments of Canada, Australia and New Zealand signified their agreement in principle to these arrangements. It has thus been ensured that the many facilities and the great natural advantages for the training of the pilots and the other personnel and the production of aircraft which these countries offer in areas comparatively free from any risk of enemy interference will be utilised to the fullest extent and to the best advantage.

Training schools will be established and maintained in each of these countries. The more comprehensive and technical facilities required for the advanced training apart from those available and to be made available in the United Kingdom will in the main be concentrated in Canada. Personnel from elementary training schools in Australia and New Zealand as well as a substantial proportion of young men

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

passing out of similar establishments in the United Kingdom will proceed to Canada to receive with similar personnel from schools here the advanced training which will fit them all for service in the line. The young men so trained will join either the Air Force squadrons maintained by their respective Governments in the theatre of operations or the United Kingdom Royal Air Force units; while those from the United Kingdom who get their final training in Canada will go back to join the Royal Air Force squadrons in the field.

The undertaking is one of great magnitude. Its development would result in a great and rapid increase in the number of training schools, already large, and achieve an increased output of first line pilots, observers and air gunners which combined with the output in the United Kingdom, would ensure the greatly increased requirements in trained personnel being fully met. The aim, in short, is to achieve by cooperative effort Air Forces of overwhelming strength.

A Mission from the United Kingdom headed by Lord Riverdale, who will be aided by a specially selected technical staff - is already on its way to Canada to meet here corresponding Missions from Australia and New Zealand. These Missions will discuss with the Canadian authorities all further steps that are to be taken for the rapid execution of the plan, including provision of the necessary aircraft instructors, ground personnel and aerodromes.

It will be seen that the scheme involves a concentration of air training largely in Canada. The Government of the United Kingdom has indicated its opinion that with the facilities which Canada possesses this cooperative effort may prove to be of the most essential and decisive character. The Canadian Government concurs in this view, and has accordingly decided to participate in the plan ~~of greatly increased air training~~.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Brit. Air Mission

"R" C267932

FROM: THE PRIME MINISTER OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA.

CYPHER

UNNUMBERED

CANBERRA, October 11th, 1939.

October 11th. My telegram 9th October, Secret. Commonwealth Delegation will comprise the following:-

Honourable J.V. Fairbairn, Minister for Civil Aviation, accompanied by George Jones, Air Adviser, and Minister's Private Secretary, Richard Andoord.

They will leave by "Monterey" disembarking at Los Angeles travelling by air to New York and thence to Ottawa. Australian Counsellor at Washington making arrangements for travel across America. Details of travel are being kept secret.

THE PRIME MINISTER OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA

Received Ottawa 11.40 A.M. E.S.T.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R 1

COPY

re air Mission

C 267953

Office of the High Commissioner
for the United Kingdom
Earnscliffe,
Ottawa,
11th October, 1939

516X/99

IMMEDIATE

Dear Dr. Skelton,

The High Commissioner requests me to inform you that he has just received a telegram from the Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs, stating that the Secretary of State for Air was to be questioned in Parliament at Westminster this afternoon as to whether he could give details of the composition of the Mission which is proceeding to Canada in connection with air training.

Sir Kingsley Wood's answer was to have been as follows:-

"The composition of the Mission to which the Honourable Member refers is as follows:- The leader is Lord Riverdale and the other two members are Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke Popham and Mr.F.T.Hearle, the Managing Director of the De Havilland Aircraft Company. The Mission is accompanied by technical and other advisers.

"I have also arranged for my Honourable and Gallant Friend, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Air, to proceed to Canada at an early date to assist in framing arrangements to be made between the Canadian authorities and the Missions from Australia and New Zealand and this country. The Canadian Government have indicated that they would welcome his participation."

It is understood that Captain Balfour and Mr. Hearle will be sailing by theS.S. "Duchess of York" which will probably leave for Montreal on Friday the 13th October, and that Sir Robert Brooke Popham will not be coming until a still later date, until when Sir Christopher

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 267954

Courtney will act for him. The other members of the party, given in the High Commissioner's letter of the 6th October (516X/88), will also be coming as already announced in an advisory capacity.

Yours sincerely,

PAUL MASON.

Dr.O.D.Skelton,
Under-Secretary of State
for External Affairs,
Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

C 267955

FROM: THE PRIME MINISTER OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA, CANBERRA.

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA.

re Air Mission

SECRET

CYPHER

Canberra, October 13th, 1939.

October 13th. Secret. My telegram 6th October. Following telegram has been sent to the Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs, Prime Minister of New Zealand and Prime Minister of the Union of South Africa.

"Right Honourable R.G. Casey has been asked by me to act as Commonwealth Minister. He will be accompanied by Major General J. Northcott, Deputy Chief of the General Staff, Group Captain W.D. Bostock, Assistant Chief of the Air Staff, Mr. N.K.S. Brodribb, Controller General of Munitions Supply and probably Private Secretary. They will leave by flying boat from Sydney October 19th. No announcement in regard to names of advisers or date of departure will be made here until some time after party has left".

PRIME MINISTER OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA

Rec'd Ottawa 11:30 A.M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

R.T. Scheme

ODS/AH

Oct. 13, 1939.

re "Air Training Scheme"

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER.

C267936

After consulting with Mr. Rogers I arranged this morning for Mr. Read to call a small committee, consisting of Orde and Walsh of National Defence, Johnson of Finance and someone from Justice, to consider the question of the basis of the relationship between the various governments and units involved in the air training scheme. They will consider in the first instance from the legal and general administrative standpoint. It may be necessary later to enlarge or vary the committee or set up some other machinery so as to ensure consideration of the technical defence administrative questions and the financial obligations involved.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

P.

file C 267937

ODS/AH

Oct. 13th, 1939.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE
PRIME MINISTER.

Arrival of United Kingdom Air Training Mission.

They are expected to reach Quebec Saturday night or Sunday morning.

The District Officer Commanding in Quebec and Breadner of the Air Force will welcome them there. Wiseman, British Trade Commissioner at Montreal, will act for Campbell.

They will have ordinary transportation to Ottawa. Do you think it will be desirable to have a car and meals en route? Clyde Scott and Measures could look after it.

S

Yes car & lunch both ways necessary – Billy Bruce cars for Ministers & Mrs Bruce
Oct 13. 39

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

file
air training

CONFIDENTIAL

Ottawa, October 14th, 1939.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER:

C 267938

Re: Cabinet War Committee

Attached is a copy of the memorandum which I prepared, following the meeting of this Sub-Committee of Cabinet, on September the 28th, to consider the proposed air training scheme.

The name of the Sub-Committee has not yet been changed from "Emergency Council (Committee on General Policy)", and the Cabinet Defence Committee, with similar personnel, still exists.

Mr. King may wish to have an Order-in-Council passed at a convenient time, abolishing the Emergency Council and the Defence Committee, to be combined under some such term as "War Committee".

Copies are also being sent to Dr. Skelton and the Minister of National Defence. The original is being kept on a special Confidential fyle, with previous Minutes.

A. D. P. H.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

CABINET WAR COMMITTEE

STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL — Ottawa, September 28,1939.

MEMORANDUM:

Re Emergency Council
(Committee on General Policy) of Cabinet

A meeting of this special Cabinet Sub-Committee, with certain additional Ministers named by the Prime Minister, was held in the Prime Minister's Office in the East Block, at 10.30 a.m., today. There were present the following Members of the Cabinet:

The Prime Minister,
Senator Dandurand,
Mr. Lapointe,
Mr. Crerar,
Mr. Rogers,
Mr. Power,
Mr. Ralston.

There were also present the following heads of Services:

Chief of the General Staff (Military Branches)
Major General T. V. Anderson;
Chief of the Naval Staff (Naval Branch)
Rear-Admiral P. W. Nelles;
Senior Air Officer (Air Force Branch)
Air Vice-Marshal G. M. Croil.

The Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs and the Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister were also present.

1. The Prime Minister read to the meeting the long Secret telegram of September the 26th, which he had received from the Prime Minister of Great Britain, outlining a proposal for a greatly increased air training scheme, in which Canada, as well as the other Dominions, would play a large part. The scheme envisaged the training of not less than 20,000 pilots and 30,000 personnel of air crews, annually, to provide for which it was estimated that about ninety elementary and advanced training schools, with some subsidiary air crew and ground schools would be necessary. It was

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

contemplated that about one-half of this training organization should be built up outside of the United Kingdom, particularly in Canada. It was asked by the Prime Minister of Great Britain whether the Canadian government would approve the scheme in principle and be agreeable to joint discussions in Canada with a view to making immediate arrangements for its being put into operation.

2. The Prime Minister stated that he had called the Chiefs of Staff before the Sub-Committee in order to discuss the scheme with them, in general terms, and to hear their comments upon it from the technical point of view.

Mr. King said that the attitude which the Canadian government would adopt in relation to an air training scheme, of the magnitude of that proposed, would have an important bearing upon the decision to be taken with respect to Canadian Expeditionary Forces. Any announcement to be made to the public, in the latter respect, would require to be considered in the light of the decision reached upon the scheme under discussion.

3. Mr. Ralston agreed that the greatly increased emphasis upon the air arm, evident from Mr. Chamberlain's cable, and the part that Canada might be called upon to play in that sphere, might result in considerable modifications of the Canadian war programme in other respects.

4. Mr. Crerar felt that the Canadian reply should be affirmative and that our co-operation might be made most effective in the matter of air forces for which we have the natural facilities.

5. Mr. Power enquired of the Senior Air Officer whether the present Canadian training programme could be accelerated if we were able to obtain additional training personnel from the United Kingdom.

6. Air Vice Marshal Croil, in replying to Mr. Power's question, stated that the Canadian programme of training could be enlarged and accelerated if additional training personnel were obtained, provided that we could obtain the additional aircraft which would be required. Canadian manufactured planes were

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

only of the elementary type; planes for advanced training would have to be imported from the United Kingdom or the United States. Another element was the necessity of training adequate ground crews.

Air Vice Marshal Croil described the present position with respect to Canada's own programme, based on the provision of 450 pilots annually. He said that two training schools were now approximately two-thirds completed. The R.C.A.F. now had as many recruits for pilots and airmen as could be handled by existing facilities. The expansion of the programme depended primarily upon two factors:

(a) the availability of additional training personnel, and

(b) the availability of additional planes, particularly for advanced training. He stated that so far as airdromes were concerned, he felt that it would be necessary to take over those operated by the Trans-Canada Air Lines, and mentioned the possibility of developing the partially finished landing fields which were in existence.

7. The Chief of the General Staff said that, in his opinion, the Canadian public would not be satisfied by Canadian participation if it were confined to air activity, even on a greatly enlarged scale. The public, he felt, thought in terms of ground troops and it was important that the military programme should not be interrupted.

8. Senator Dandurand felt that in this respect public opinion might be guided by being informed that what the United Kingdom wished us to provide, namely assistance in the air, would constitute our best contribution. Mr. Lapointe agreed that if the undertaking of the air training scheme were the most effective contribution which Canada could make, the public should be so informed, just as soon as possible.

The Prime Minister agreed that the effect of the announcement of any such large scheme as that contemplated would be very great, both in the United Kingdom and in Canada, and that the announcement should be made as soon as agreement in principle had been reached.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

9. The Prime Minister then read a telegram dated September the 26th from the Canadian High Commissioner in Great Britain, setting out specific enquiries concerning facilities in Canada in relation to the development of the proposed scheme.

Air Vice Marshal Croil undertook to confer with the experts in his department, and the War Supply Board, and prepare, as soon as possible, the reply to the specific enquiries contained in Mr. Massey's telegram.

10. The Prime Minister said that he felt that he could express the opinion that the scheme outlined in Mr. Chamberlain's telegram should be accepted in principle, on three conditions:

(a) That the United Kingdom could provide us with the necessary additional planes;

(b) That the United Kingdom could provide us with the necessary additional training personnel, and

(c) That satisfactory arrangements could be made with respect to financing the cost of the scheme.

11. It was agreed that the reply to the United Kingdom proposals should give as much information as possible as to the present Canadian position, welcome the suggestion that experts proceed to Canada at once for the purpose of consultation and outline the three conditions of acceptance, as stated by the Prime Minister.

12. With respect to the provision of additional aircraft for the training scheme, it was suggested that a whole factory and personnel might be brought over from the United Kingdom.

At the Prime Minister's request, the Chairman and Vice Chairman of the War Supply Board, Mr. W. R. Campbell and Mr. R. C. Vaughan, were invited to join the meeting.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

13. The Prime Minister explained to Messrs. Campbell and Vaughan, the scheme proposed in Mr. Chamberlain's telegram, and invited their comments, particularly with regard to the possibility of increasing Canadian production to meet increased requirements for aircraft and equipment.

Mr. Vaughan said that the principal difficulty was that of production of aircraft engines; that it would take from one to two years for a plant to be put into operation in Canada to manufacture modern engines. The suggestion of bringing out a whole plant and personnel from the United Kingdom was feasible.

14. Mr. Campbell agreed that the transfer of an entire plant and personnel was feasible and thought that production of engines from such a plant might begin after a lapse of, perhaps, nine months. Otherwise it would take from 1½ to 2 years for a Canadian plant to be constructed and reach production.

A rough estimate of the number of planes required for Canadian participation in the scheme, was thought to be some 4,400 annually, with additional airdromes and hangars, and equipment.

15. The Prime Minister directed that the reply to be prepared to Mr. Chamberlain's telegram should mention specifically the matter of engines. He directed Dr. Skelton and Mr. Heeney to draft a reply along the lines set out in paragraph 10, above, after consulting with the War Supply Board and the Senior Air Officers.

At 1 p.m. the meeting adjourned.

A. D. P. H.

AH/R

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ODS/AH

C 267964 Oct. 16, 1939.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER.

Basis of Training for Air Service

Mr. Read's committee is considering this question this afternoon. As I said you wished to consider the matter at once, however, he prepared some notes as a basis of discussion, which I attach.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ODS/AH

C 267964 Oct.16,1939.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER.

Basis of Training for Air Service

Mr. Read's committee is considering this question this afternoon. As I said you wished to consider the matter at once, however, he prepared some notes as a basis of discussion, which I attach.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ODS/AH

C 267964

Oct.16,1939.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER.

Basis of Training for Air Service

Mr. Read's committee is considering this question this afternoon. As I said you wished to consider the matter at once, however, he prepared some notes as a basis of discussion, which I attach.

REPEAT
REPETER

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

JER/S
Oct.16/39

C267965

MEMORANDUM FOR THE UNDER-SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

PROJECT FOR TRAINING AIR SERVICES
OF MEMBERS OF COMMONWEALTH IN CANADA

Legal and Constitutional Questions

1. The project involves the following elements:

(a) Elementary Training.

This will be conducted by each member within its own borders. Canadian responsibility will present no legal or constitutional problems. The only problems involved are those which are inherent in the rapid expansion of this aspect of Air Force work.

(b) Advanced Training.

This will, for the most part, be concentrated in Canada. Personnel from Elementary Training Schools in Canada, the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand will receive their advanced training in Canada.

2. Disregarding elementary training (which presents no legal and constitutional problems), the Project for Advanced Training presents two important aspects which require special consideration:

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

 C 267966

(a) Legal Position of the Schools and Command;

(b) Equipment and Financial Arrangments.

3. The First Aspect, Position of the Schools and Command, will be considered first.

The Schools (and, by this term, all elements in the Advanced Training Project are being included for the purpose of this note) may be on either of two legal bases.

The Schools may be made an integral part of the R.C.A.F., subject to the presidence of the Minister of National Defence.

In the alternative, the Schools may be an integral part of the R.A.F., operating as a "visiting force" present in Canada with the consent of the Canadian Government.

4. Assuming that the Schools are to be a part of the R.C.A.F., they will be organized by the Minister of National Defence (through the Chief of the Air Staff), financed by the Department of National Defence (subject to the financial control of the Minister of Finance), and equipped by the Canadian War Supply Board (or Canadian Ministry of Munitions, if such a ministry is formed).

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267967

Personnel from the R.A.F., R.A.A.F., and R.N.Z.A.F., would include two groups, Instructional Staffs, and Cadets (young men undergoing training).

The first group, Instructional Staffs, might include administrative officers and technicians lent to the project from these other forces to help to make the scheme effective. They, therefore, might well include officers and airmen who were doing work that was not directly instructional.

The instructional staffs and cadets (from the R.A.F., R.A.A.F. and R.N.Z.A.F.) would both be in the same legal position under existing legislation.

While they were in Canada, personnel lent to the Project or sent for instruction would be subject to Section 6 of The Visiting Forces (British Commonwealth) Act 1933 (references to the Act, unless otherwise specified, will be references to this Act). They would need to be attached, temporarily, to the R.C.A.F. by an Order of the Governor-in-Council. They would then be subject to the provisions of Section 6 (3) of the Act, which reads:

> s.6 (3) "Whilst a member of another force is by virtue of this section attached temporarily to a home force, he shall be subject to the law relating to the Naval Service, the Militia, or the Air Force, as the case may be,

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267968

in like manner as if he were a member of the home force, and shall be treated and have powers of command and punishment over members of the home force to which he is attached as if he were a member of that force of relative rank:

"Provided that the Governor in Council may direct that in relation to members of a force of any part of the Commonwealth specified the statutes relating to the home forces shall apply with such exceptions and subject to such adaptations and modificiations as may be so specified."

5. If the Schools are to be a part of the R.A.F., they will be organized and administered by the Secretary of State for Air. They will be financed by the United Kingdom Treasury, and equipped by the United Kingdom Ministry of Supply. Special problems would arise with regard to property and finance, which will be discussed later. The Schools organized upon such a basis would be subject to and controlled by United Kingdom Law.

The Schools would be "visiting forces" under ss. 3 and 4 of the Act. They would be armed with statutory powers, privileges and immunities, corresponding to those which are now enjoyed by the Royal Canadian Air Force. Provision is made, by Section 4 of the Act, to enable the

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Governor-in-Council to authorize the exercise, for the benefit of the Schools, of the ordinary civil powers, in aid, to the same extent as if the R.A.F. Schools were actually R.C.A.F. commands.

6. The Second Aspect of the Problem, Equipment and Financial Arrangements, may now be given a somewhat cursory, preliminary consideration. It must be considered in relation to the basic decision as to whether this is to be a Canadian or a United Kingdom project.

7. Upon the assumption that this is to be a R.A.F. project, no serious problems arise. The responsibility for housing, feeding, equipping, instructing, etc., will all be upon the United Kingdom Government.

Canadian interest would include the following matters:

(a) Adequate check upon costs and apportionment of the Canadian share thereof;

(b) Financial and legal arrangements for constructing Airforce stations and leasing them to the R.A.F. and for leasing existing stations;

(c) Financial and legal arrangements for use of equipment parts, repairs, technical advice, incidental administration and loan of instructional staff.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

8. Upon the assumption that this is to be a Canadian project, a series of important problems arise. The responsibility for housing, equipment, instruction, etc., would then be upon the Canadian Government. Problems arising would include:

(a) Permanent Equipment (e.g. R.C.A.F. stations, practice ranges, etc.):

(i) Existing Plant - This would be upon a straight rental basis.

(ii) Capital Extensions and new Construction and Purchase - Rental upon "x- months purchase basis" (This would be a matter for negotiation. Probably a short term of months with a provision to credit the main account with the amount realized upon the disposition of property remaining over at the conclusion of hostilities, would afford a satisfactory solution. This could be coupled with provisions enabling the Canadian Government to take over at a valuation, crediting the account).

(b) Renewable Equipment (e.g. Air Craft):

(i) Existing equipment - Straight rental basis.

(ii) New Purchases - rental upon a "x- months purchase basis" (See note in brackets above).

(c) Consumable Equipment (e.g. gas, ammunition, etc.) Cost plus basis.

(d) InstructionalStaff - Actual pay and allowances and travelling expenses two ways.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

(e) Instructional Staffs and Cadets. Pay and maintenance of personnel. Both (Instructional Staffs and Cadets) would receive pay and allowances from their Home Government. In the case of Cadets, there would be no charge back or accounting, apart from incidental accounting. They would be in the same position as Canadian officers under instruction in a United Kingdom School. There are abundant precedents over the last twenty years (staff college officers).
In the case of Instructional Staffs, there would be a charge back to the Project.

(f) Independent Audit or Joint Board of Finance. In view of the interest of the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand in the financial aspects, there might be a need for an independent audit, or for the establishment of a joint Board of Finance.

(g) An estimate should be made and each Government should pay monthly (or quarterly) a tentative rate per cadet per month, subject to semi-annual or annual accounting when the actual cost upon a cadet per month basis would be established. Adjustments could then be made and the tentative rate revised. These adjustments would take into account

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C267972

credits from loans of instructional staffs or equipment, e.g. if the United Kingdom had 1,000 cadets for six months, at $500 per month, the United Kingdom account would be debited with $3,000,000. If the United Kingdom had loaned 10 instructors at $500 per month and 100 planes at $50,000 each, the United Kingdom account would be credited with:

Instructors	-	$30,000.
Rental of planes for 6 months (say 30% of $5,000,000)		$1,500,000.
Total Credit	-	$1,530,000.

9. SUMMARY.

(a) It is possible to establish the project as an R.A.F. Command. This would be the easier course and would impose all responsibility upon the United Kingdom.

(b) It is equally possible to establish the project as a R.C.A.F. Command. This would impose all responsibility upon the Minister of National Defence (subject to Cabinet and Parliament). It would avoid possible difficulties that might arise from the functioning of the United Kingdom Military Courts, administering justice and meting out sentences to Canadian Cadets

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

on Canadian soil as well as in other matters.

(c) In the event that Council decides to adopt a Canadian Project, there are ample precedents for working out a scheme involving apportionment of costs along the lines followed in the United Kingom over the last twenty years.

(d) In such an event, financial arrangements should be carefully negotiated so that the net cost to Canada would be equivalent to the net cost of giving advanced training to Canadian Cadets.

(e) There would be no difficulty in arranging for the attachment of the United Kingdom and other instructors.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

MEMORANDUM FOR THE UNDER SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

PROJECT FOR TRAINING AIR SERVICES
OF MEMBERS OF COMMONWEALTH IN CANADA

(First Revision)

Legal and Constitutional Questions

1. The project involves the following elements:

(a) Elementary Training

This will be conducted by each member within its own borders. Canadian responsibility will present no legal or constitutional problems.. The only problems involved are those which are inherent in the rapid expansion of this aspect of Air Force work.

(b) Advanced training

This will, for the most part, be concentrated in Canada. Personnel from Elementary Training Schools in Canada, the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand will receive their advanced training in Canada.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

2. Disregarding elementary training (which presents no legal and constitutional problems), the Project for Advanced Training presents two important aspects which require special consideration:

(a) Legal Position of the Schools and Command;

(b) Equipment and Financial Arrangements.

3. The First Aspect, Position of the Schools and Command, will be considered first.

The Schools (and, by this term, all elements in the Advanced Training Project are being included for the purpose of this note) may be on either of two legal bases.

The Schools may be made an integral part of the R.C.A.F., subject to the presidence of the Minister of National Defence.

In the alternative, the Schools may be an integral part of the R.A.F., operating as a "visiting force" present in Canada with the consent of the Canadian Government.

4. Assuming that the Schools are to be a part of the R.C.A.F., they will be organized by the Minister of National Defence (through the Chief of the Air Staff),

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 267976

financed by the Department of National Defence (subject to the financial control of the Minister of Finance), and equipped by the Canadian War Supply Board (or Canadian Ministry of Munitions, if such a ministry is formed).

Personnel from the R.A.F., R.A.A.F., and R.N.Z.A.F., would include two groups, Instructional Staffs, and Cadets (young men undergoing training).

The first group, Instructional Staffs, might include administrative officers and technicians lent to the project from these other forces to help to make the scheme effective. They, therefore, might well include officers and airmen who were doing work that was not directly instructional.

The instructional staffs and cadets (from the R.A.F., R.A.A.F., and R.N.Z.A.F.) would both be in the same legal position under existing legislation.

While they were in Canada, personnel lent to the Project or sent for instruction would be subject to Section 6 of The Visiting Forces (British Commonwealth) Act 1933 (references to the Act, unless otherwise specified, will be references to this Act). They would need to be attached, temporarily, to the R.C.A.F. by an Order of the Governor-in-

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Council. They would then be subject to the provisions of Section 6 (3) of the Act, which reads:

s.6(3) "Whilst a member of another force is by virtue of this section attached temporarily to a home force, he shall be subject to the law relating to the Naval Service, the Militia, or the Air Force, as the case may be, in like manner as if he were a member of the home force, and shall be treated and have powers of command and punishment over members of the home force to which he is attached as if he were a member of that force of relative rank.

"Provided that the Governor-in-Council may direct that in relation to members of a force of any part of the Commonwealth specified the statutes relating to the home forces shall apply with such exceptions and subject to such adaptations and modifications as may be so specified."

5. If the Schools are to be a part of the R.A.F., (and, in such an event, all Canadian Advanced Training would be conducted in the R.A.F. Schools) they will be organized and administered by the Secretary of State for Air. They will be financed by the United Kingdom Treasury, and equipped by the United Kingdom Ministry of Supply. Special problems would then arise with regard to property and finance, which will be discussed later. The Schools organized upon such a basis would be subject to and controlled by United Kingdom Law.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

The Schools would be "visiting forces" under ss. 3 and 4 of the Act. They would be armed with statutory powers, privileges and immunities, corresponding to those which are now enjoyed by the Royal Canadian Air Force. Provision is made, by Section 4 of the Act, to enable the Governor-in-Council to authorize the exercise, for the benefit of the Schools, of the ordinary civil powers, in aid, to the same extent as if the R.A.F. Schools were actually R.C.A.F. commands.

It should, however, be noted that the "Visiting Forces Statutes" (in Canada, the United Kingdom &c.) make no provision for certain contingencies that would arise in the event of the establishment of R.A.F. Schools in Canada. Adequate provisions are available to cover the functioning of R.A.F. Schools as such, and the position of R.A.F. personnel, whether "Instructional" or "Cadet". There are, however, no adequate provisions to cover the cases of Canadian, Australian or New Zealand personnel attached to such Schools. To take a concrete case, a visiting Cadet from Australia could be attached to a R.C.A.F. School in Canada (it is a "Home Force" within the meaning of the Act). It could be attached to a R.A.F. School in England (where it would be a "Home

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Force"). There is no provision for attaching a visiting cadet to a visiting force. Similarly, there is no provision for attaching a home force personnel to a visiting force. Concurrent legislation by the Parliaments of Canada, the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand, would be necessary. (In Canada it could be accomplished by an Order-in-Council under the War Measures Act.)

6. The Second Aspect of the Problem, Equipment and Financial Arrangements, may now be given a somewhat cursory, preliminary consideration. It must be considered in relation to the basic decision as to whether this is to be a Canadian or a United Kingdom project.

7. Upon the assumption that this is to be a R.A.F. project, no serious problems arise. The responsibility for housing, feeding, equipping, instructing, etc., will all be upon the United Kingdom Government.

Canadian interest would include the following matters:

(a) Adequate check upon costs and apportionment of the Canadian share thereof;

(b) Financial and legal arrangements for constructing Airforce stations and leasing them to the R.A.F. and for leasing existing stations;

(c) Financial and legal arrangements for use of equipment, parts, repairs, technical advice, incidental administration and loan of instructional staff.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 267980

8. Upon the assumption that this is to be a Canadian project, a series of important problems arise. The responsibility for housing, equipment, instruction, etc., would then be upon the Canadian Government. The following tentative suggestions are submitted with a view to indicating the sort of problems that would require consideration:

(a) Permanent Equipment (e.g. R.C.A.F. stations, practice ranges, etc.):

(i) Existing Plant - This might be upon a straight rental basis.

(ii) Capital Extensions and new Construction and Purchase - Rental upon "x- months purchase basis" (This would be a matter for negotiation. Probably a short term of months with a provision to credit the main account with the amount realized upon the disposition of property remaining over at the conclusion of hostilities, would afford a satisfactory solution. This could be coupled with provisions enabling the Canadian Government to take over at a valuation, crediting the account.)

(b) Renewable Equipment (e.g. Air Craft):

(i) Existing equipment - Straight rental basis.

(ii) New Purchases - rental upon a "x-months purchase basis" (See note in brackets above).

(c) Consumable Equipment (e.g. gas, ammunitions, etc.)

Cost plus basis.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

(d) Instructional Staff - Actual pay and allowances and travelling expenses two ways would be charged to the Project by all co-operating governments.

(e) Pay and Maintenance of Personnel. Special problems relating to exchange and the need for avoiding serious discrepancies in pay of personnel from different services would require special consideration.

(f) Independent Audit or Joint Board of Finance. In view of the interest of the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand in the financial aspects, there might be a need for an independent audit, or for the establishment of a joint Board of Finance.

(g) An estimate might be made and each Government might pay monthly (or quarterly) a tentative rate per cadet per month, subject to semi-annual or annual accounting when the actual cost upon a cadet per month basis would be established. Adjustments could then be made and the tentative rate revised. These adjustments would take into account credits from loans of instructional staffs

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 267982

or equipment, e.g. if the United Kingdom had 1,000 cadets for six months, at $500 per month, the United Kingdom account would be debited with $3,000,000. If the United Kingdom had loaned 10 instructors at $500 per month and 100 planes at $50,000 each, the United Kingdom account would be credited with:

Instructors	-	$30,000.
Rental of planes for 6 months (say 30% of $5,000,000)	-	$1,500,000.
Total Credit	-	$1,530,000.

(N.B. The foregoing suggestions are submitted, not as recommendations, but as points requiring discussion. Undoubtedly, further study will add many items to the list and may well indicate that there are preferable solutions for those already included).

9. SUMMARY

(a) It is possible to establish the project as an R.A.F. Command. This would be the easier course and would impose all responsibility upon the United Kingdom. It would, however, involve the need for changes in the legislation in Canada, the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

(b) It is equally possible to establish the project as anR.C.A.F. Command. This would impose all responsibility upon the Minister of National Defence (subject to Cabinet and Parliament). It would avoid possible difficulties that might arise from the functioning of the United Kingdom Military Courts, administering justice and meting out sentences to Canadian Cadets on Canadian soil as well as in other matters. Also, it would avoid the legal complication which would arise, with respect to R.C.A.F., R.A.A.F., and R.N.Z.A.F. serving in Canada in an R.A.F. establishment, for which the Visiting Forces Acts make no provision.

(c) In the event that Council decides to adopt a Canadian Project, there are ample precedents for working out a scheme involving apportionment of costs along the lines followed in the United Kingdom over the last twenty years.

(d) In such an event, financial arrangements should be carefully negotiated so that the net cost to Canada would be equivalent to the net cost of giving advanced training to Canadian Cadets.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 267984

(e) There would be no difficulty in arranging for the attachment of the United Kingdom and other instructors.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Air T.

PRESS CLIPPINGS

C267935

Office of The Prime Minister

Name of Publication Quebec Chronicle Telegraph

Date October 16, 1939

Subject "Eight-Man British Air Mission Headed by Lord Riverdale Arrives en route to Ottawa Conference."

Eight-Man British Air Mission Headed By Lord Riverdale Arrives En Route To Ottawa Conference

Headed by Lord Riverdale, an eight-man British mission arrived here Saturday on its way to Ottawa to discuss with dominion authorities methods for empire air-strength coordination.

A communique handed newspapermen said that "one of the primary objections of the discussion will x x x be to concert measures for enabling each member of the commonwealth to take over that part of the common task which by reason of its industrial capacity, its man-power and its geographical position it is best suited to undertake."

With Lord Riverdale were Air Marshal Sir C. L. Courtney; J. B. Abraham, permanent assistant secretary of the British Air Ministry; Group Captain A. Gray, Group Captain L. N. Hollinghurst, Group Captain J. M. Robb; F. R. Howard, mission secretary, and J. R. Smyth of the Air Ministry's financial division.

The press communique said:

"The mission is visiting Canada for the purpose of discussing with representatives of the Dominions of Canada, Australia and New Zealand, the methods to be adopted for coordinating with the home country's air effort the contributions which those dominions have so generously expressed the desire to make towards increasing as speedily as possible the air strength which the empire as a whole can bring to bear against the common enemy."

Concerting of measures for enbling the commonwealth's members "to take over that part of the common task x x x it is best suited to undertake," the communique said, "involves on the one hand the recruitment and training of the personnel required, and on the other hand the production of the necessary aircraft and equipment."

The communique said that Australian and New Zealand missions were expected to arrive at Ottawa "at an early date" for the discussions.

"The problems involved will entail far-reaching investigations and detailed study; but, with the cooperation of the Governments of the Dominions—which is already assured it is confidently hoped to devise plans for building up combined empire air forces which will play a decisive part in the war," it said.

"The aim will be to produce powerful and ever-growing air forces, manned by highly-trained pilots and crews, and provided with the very best aircraft and equipment that scientific and engineering skill can produce."

Three other members of the mission have not yet arrived in Canada.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS

C267983

Office of
The Prime Minister

Name of Publication Quebec Chronicle Telegraph

Date October 16, 1939

Subject "Eight-Man British Air Mission Headed by Lord Riverdale Arrives en route to Ottawa Conference."

Eight-Man British Air Mission Headed By Lord Riverdale Arrives En Route To Ottawa Conference

Headed by Lord Riverdale, an eight-man British mission arrived here Saturday on its way to Ottawa to discuss with dominion authorities methods for empire air-strength co-ordination.

A communique handed newspapermen said that "one of the primary objections of the discussion will x x x be to concert measures for enabling each member of the commonwealth to take over that part of the common task which by reason of its industrial capacity, its man-power and its geographical position it is best suited to undertake."

With Lord Riverdale were Air Marshal Sir C. L. Courtney; J. B. Abraham, permanent assistant secretary of the British Air Ministry; Group Captain A. Gray, Group Captain L. N. Hollinghurst, Group Captain J. M. Robb; F. R. Howard, mission secretary, and J. R. Smyth of the Air Ministry's financial division.

The press communique said:

"The mission is visiting Canada for the purpose of discussing with representatives of the Dominions of Canada, Australia and New Zealand, the methods to be adopted for co-ordinating with the home country's air effort the contributions which those dominions have so generously expressed the desire to make towards increasing as speedily as possible the air strength which the empire as a whole can bring to bear against the common enemy."

Concerting of measures for enbling the commonwealth's members "to take over that part of the common task x x x it is best suited to undertake," the communique said, "involves on the one hand the recruitment and training of the personnel required, and on the other hand the production of the necessary aircraft and equipment."

The communique said that Australian and New Zealand missions were expected to arrive at Ottawa "at an early date" for the discussions.

"The problems involved will entail far-reaching investigations and detailed study; but, with the co-operation of the Governments of the Dominions—which is already assured it is confidently hoped to devise plans for building up combined empire air forces which will play a decisive part in the war," it said.

"The aim will be to produce powerful and ever-growing air forces, manned by highly-trained pilots and crews, and provided with the very best aircraft and equipment that scientific and engineering skill can produce."

Three other members of the mission have not yet arrived in Canada.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS C 267936 Office of The Prime Minister

Name of Publication Ottawa Morning Journal

Date October 16, 1939

Subject "Air Scheme Biggest Thing in Empire" - Air Training

Air Scheme Biggest Thing In Empire

Lord Riverdale Says Training To Start in Month —Canada in Full Control

"By far the biggest thing yet in the British Empire", was how Lord Riverdale, head of the British Air Mission to Canada, described to The Journal on Sunday the scheme under which thousands of pilots will be trained in this Dominion for air forces of Great Britain, Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

The noted British industrialist headed a party of 13 which arrived here Saturday evening. He said he hoped a start would be made next month in establishment of schools which when fully in operation will have a capacity for training some 20,000 to 25,000 pilots, observers, gunners and wireless operators.

Winter No Barrier.

Training would go ahead despite Winter conditions and the scheme would be administered, controlled and carried out by Canadians.

Three other members of the mission are now on their way over: Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, Captain Harold H. Balfour, Under-Secretary for Air, and F. T. Searle, managing director of the de Haviland Aircraft Company.

"People perhaps don't yet realize what an enormous undertaking this is", said Lord Riverdale. "It is going to win the war, if we can get everybody to go at it bald-headed.

"The psychological effect on the Germans has been tremendous. Here we are building up an organization, which means that as their forces get weaker and weaker, ours are continually rising.

Response Magnificent.

"The Canadian response has been magnificent."

With Lord Riverdale are Air Marshal Sir Christopher L. Courtney; Group Captains A. Gray, L. N. Hollinghurst and J. M. Robb; J. B. Abraham, C.B., and F. L. R. Howard, both of the British Air Ministry; J. R. Smyth, of the financial division of the Air Ministry; A. D. Hayward; J. Milner, private secretary to Lord Riverdale, and two stenographers.

Asked what would be the capacity of the air force training schools to be established here, Lord Riverdale said:

"It depends how fast we can establish them, but when we once get going we shall run into very big figures—something like 20,000 to 25,000. This includes not only pilots but observers, gunners and wireless operators. The schools will be turning out a continuous stream of completed units."

He emphasized that the figure of 20,000 to 25,000 did not represent the sum total of men to be turned out, but the numbers of those who would be in training when the schools were at capacity.

Roughly six months would be the average period for training of pilots. Other types of personnel, such as wireless operators, could be turned out more quickly.

"We hope to get the scheme going by next month", he added. "None of us know whether we are permanent or fixtures or movable, but we're certainly going to stay here till we get the job started.

"We shall be able to do a great deal of work on details for the Canadian portion of the scheme, which is by far the biggest portion."

Australia and New Zealand would carry out their own initial training of flyers, but all advanced training would be done in Canada.

British Pilots Will Come.

"Initial training of British pilots will be done over there, but if we find you (in Canada) want pupils for your advanced training schools we'll send you as many as you want. We will see that your schools are always full. If you have space for our men, they'll come.

If men wanted to come from the States and enlist, there would be no objection. Thousands of mechanics would be needed, and the States had a lot of mechanics who were "enterprising lads, and will say, 'This is an idea'."

Proportion of pilots to men on the ground such as mechanics and fitters was about 50-50, but it must be borne in mind that the pilot class were always moving while the others more or less "stayed put" at their work of servicing.

Lord Riverdale gave an affirmative answer to a question whether it would be practicable to train throughout the Winter.

"Yes, it is practicable to operate the schools during the Winter in Canada. We have looked into that and we know it can be done. Of course, they won't operate as well as at more favorable seasons, but we can't have everything just as we want it."

A big factor in the training of flyers in Canada was the "complete security". "The enemy can't do anything over here."

Asked if the scheme would entail an increase in the output of 'planes in this country, the industrialist replied: "Definitely. Your aircraft construction here has developed considerably, and this is going to put a lot more people in the business from the point of view of repairs. You're going to have a whole raft of people servicing thousands of 'planes.

"Instructors are available in England, if you should need them. 'Planes, if you need them."

So far as raw material was concerned, Canada could meet requirements adequately. Not much would be wanted from Great Britain. "The sky's the limit", was Britain's motto insofar as the raw material program for the army, navy or air force was concerned.

"We want everything you can make. You are going to see a tremendous boom in trade in Canada. You're bound to see it.

A Canadian Scheme.

"This is a Canadian scheme, lock, stock and barrel, and all we are going to do is to help you to carry it out. It will be administered, controlled and carried out by Canada in co-operation with Australia and New Zealand.

A per capita grant would be made by Australia and New Zealand, and likewise by Great Britain, for each man sent to Canada. This grant, made in a lump sum, would cover the entire cost of training and maintenance.

A communique handed newspapermen said that "one of the primary objects of the discussions will . . . be to concert measures for enabling each member of the Commonwealth to take over that part of the common task which by reasons of its industrial capacity, its manpower and its geographical position, it is best suited to undertake.

"The mission is visiting Canada for the purpose of discussing with representatives of the Dominions of Canada, Australia and New Zealand the methods to be adopted for co-ordinating with the home country's air effort the contributions which those Dominions have so generously expressed the desire to make towards increasing as speedily as possible the air strength which the Empire as a whole can bring to bear against the common enemy."

Concerting of measures for enabling the Commonwealth's members "to take over that part of the common task . . . it is best suited to undertake", the communique said, "involves on the one hand the recruitment and training of the personnel required, and on the other hand the production of the necessary aircraft and equipment".

Australian and New Zealand missions were expected to arrive at Ottawa "at an early date" for the discussions.

"The problems involved will entail far-reaching investigations and detail study; with the co-operation of the governments of the Dominions—which is already assured—it is confidently hoped to devise plans for building up combined Empire air forces which will play a decisive part in the war.

"The aim will be to produce powerful and ever-growing air forces, manned by highly trained pilots and crews, and provided with the very best aircraft and equipment that scientific and engineering skill can produce."

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS C 267986 Office of The Prime Minister

Name of Publication Ottawa Morning Journal

Date October 16, 1939

Subject "Air Scheme Biggest Thing in Empire" - Air Training

Air Scheme Biggest Thing In Empire

Lord Riverdale Says Training To Start in Month —Canada in Full Control

"By far the biggest thing yet in the British Empire", was how Lord Riverdale, head of the British Air Mission to Canada, described to The Journal on Sunday the scheme under which thousands of pilots will be trained in this Dominion for air forces of Great Britain, Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

The noted British industrialist headed a party of 13 which arrived here Saturday evening. He said he hoped a start would be made next month in establishment of schools which when fully in operation will have a capacity for training some 20,000 to 25,000 pilots, observers, gunners and wireless operators.

Winter No Barrier.

Training would go ahead despite Winter conditions and the scheme would be administered, controlled and carried out by Canadians.

Three other members of the mission are now on their way over: Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, Captain Harold H. Balfour, Under-Secretary for Air, and F. T. Searle, managing director of the de Havilland Aircraft Company.

"People perhaps don't yet realize what an enormous undertaking this is", said Lord Riverdale. "It is going to win the war, if we can get everybody to go at it bald-headed.

"The psychological effect on the Germans has been tremendous. Here we are building up an organization, which means that as their forces get weaker and weaker, ours are continually rising.

Response Magnificent.

"The Canadian response has been magnificent."

With Lord Riverdale are Air Marshal Sir Christopher L. Courtney; Group Captains A. Gray, L. N. Hollinghurst and J. M. Robb; J. B. Abraham, C.B., and F. L. R. Howard, both of the British Air Ministry; J. R. Smyth, of the financial division of the Air Ministry; A. D. Hayward; J. Milner, private secretary to Lord Riverdale, and two stenographers.

Asked what would be the capacity of the air force training schools to be established here, Lord Riverdale said:

"It depends how fast we can establish them, but when we once get going we shall run into very big figures—something like 20,000 to 25,000. This includes not only pilots but observers, gunners and wireless operators. The schools will be turning out a continuous stream of completed units."

He emphasized that the figure of 20,000 to 25,000 did not represent the sum total of men to be turned out, but the numbers of those who would be in training when the schools were at capacity.

Roughly six months would be the average period for training of pilots. Other types of personnel, such as wireless operators, could be turned out more quickly.

"We hope to get the scheme going by next month", he added. "None of us know whether we are permanent or fixtures or movable, but we're certainly going to stay here till we get the job started.

"We shall be able to do a great deal of work on details for the Canadian portion of the scheme, which is by far the biggest portion."

Australia and New Zealand would carry out their own initial training of flyers, but all advanced training would be done in Canada.

British Pilots Will Come.

"Initial training of British pilots will be done over there, but if we find you (in Canada) want pupils for your advanced training schools we'll send you as many as you want. We will see that your schools are always full. If you have space for our men, they'll come.

If men wanted to come from the States and enlist, there would be no objection. Thousands of mechanics would be needed, and the States had a lot of mechanics who were "enterprising lads, and will say, 'This is an idea'."

Proportion of pilots to men on the ground such as mechanics and fitters was about 50-50, but it must be borne in mind that the pilot class were always moving while the others more or less "stayed put" at their work of servicing.

Lord Riverdale gave an affirmative answer to a question whether it would be practicable to train throughout the Winter.

"Yes, it is practicable to operate the schools during the Winter in Canada. We have looked into that and we know it can be done. Of course, they won't operate as well as at more favorable seasons, but we can't have everything just as we want it."

A big factor in the training of flyers in Canada was the "complete security". "The enemy can't do anything over here."

Asked if the scheme would entail an increase in the output of 'planes in this country, the industrialist replied: "Definitely. Your aircraft construction here has developed considerably, and this is going to put a lot more people in the business from the point of view of repairs. You're going to have a whole raft of people servicing thousands of 'planes.

"Instructors are available in England, if you should need them. 'Planes, if you need them."

So far as raw material was concerned, Canada could meet requirements adequately. Not much would be wanted from Great Britain. "The sky's the limit", was Britain's motto insofar as the raw material program for the army, navy or air force was concerned.

"We want everything you can make. You are going to see a tremendous boom in trade in Canada. You're bound to see it.

A Canadian Scheme.

"This is a Canadian scheme, lock, stock and barrel, and all we are going to do is to help you to carry it out. It will be administered, controlled and carried out by Canada in co-operation with Australia and New Zealand.

A per capita grant would be made by Australia and New Zealand, and likewise by Great Britain, for each man sent to Canada. This grant, made in a lump sum, would cover the entire cost of training and maintenance.

A communique handed newspapermen said that "one of the primary objects of the discussions will . . . be to concert measures for enabling each member of the Commonwealth to take over that part of the common task which by reasons of its industrial capacity, its manpower and its geographical position, it is best suited to undertake.

"The mission is visiting Canada for the purpose of discussing with representatives of the Dominions of Canada, Australia and New Zealand the methods to be adopted for co-ordinating with the home country's air effort the contributions which those Dominions have so generously expressed the desire to make towards increasing as speedily as possible the air strength which the Empire as a whole can bring to bear against the common enemy."

Concerting of measures for enabling the Commonwealth's members "to take over that part of the common task . . . it is best suited to undertake", the communique said, "involves on the one hand the recruitment and training of the personnel required, and on the other hand the production of the necessary aircraft and equipment".

Australian and New Zealand missions were expected to arrive at Ottawa "at an early date" for the discussions.

"The problems involved will entail far-reaching investigations and detail study with the co-operation of the governments of the Dominions—which is already assured—it is confidently hoped to devise plans for building up combined Empire air forces which will play a decisive part for the war.

"The aim will be to produce powerful and ever-growing air forces, manned by highly trained pilots and crews, and provided with the very best aircraft and equipment that scientific and engineering skill can produce."

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

OFFICE OF THE PRIME MINISTER

MEMORANDUM

Note for fyle. C267987

Handed personally to the Prime Minister by Lord Riverdale. Meeting at Prime Minister's Office, October 17.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Oct. 17 A.T. Scheme

C67938

MOST SECRET.

DOMINION TRAINING SCHEME.

1. It is estimated that the Imperial air effort will eventually require some 20,000 pilots and 30,000 air crews per year.

2. Four/ninths of these numbers can, it is hoped, be trained in the United Kingdom ultimately, but the limitations imposed by operations, the size of the country, and considerations of security make it necessary to look to the Dominions for the training of the remaining five/ninths. This proportion involves the production of trained personnel every four weeks as follows :-

850 pilots
510 air observers
870 air gunners

3. The tentative proposal is that Canada, Australia and New Zealand should endeavour to recruit these men in the proportion of 48%, 40% and 12% respectively, that the elementary training of pilots should be carried out in the three Dominions and that the Service training of pilots and all air crew training should be done in Canada.

4. The numbers to be recruited every four weeks would be :-

	Pilots.	Air Observers.	Air Gunners.	Total.
Canada ...	576	302	518	1,396
Australia ...	480	252	432	1,164
New Zealand ...	144	76	130	350
	1,200	630	1,080	2,910

The total numbers could perhaps be reduced by about 10% to allow for the absorption as air observers and air gunners respectively of a proportion of those who failed to qualify as pilots and /air....

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

air observers. Also, to the extent that the Dominions found themselves unable to recruit the required numbers of the necessary standard, the balance would have to be found in the United Kingdom.

5. If a scheme on these general lines were accepted, the following training organisation would be required in Canada :-

(a) For pilot training :-

12 Elementary Flying Training Schools, each producing 40 pupils per four weeks;

25 Service Flying Training Schools, each producing 34 pupils per four weeks.

(b) For air crew training :-

1 Wireless School, producing 900 pupils per four weeks, and instructors and maintenance personnel;

15 Observer Schools, each producing 36 pupils per four weeks;

15 Bombing and Gunnery Schools, each producing 93 pupils per four weeks;

3 Air Navigation Schools, each producing 175 pupils per four weeks, and instructors ;

1 Armament School, producing instructors and maintenance personnel.

(c) For maintenance purposes :-

Repair Depots (or equivalent capacity in industry);

Equipment Depots;

Aircraft Storage Units;

Recruit Depots;

Schools of Technical Training;

School of Aeronautical Engineering;

Equipment and Accountant School;

School of Administration;

Record Office, etc.

6. Training and Maintenance Units already in existence or projected for the Royal Canadian Air Force will, of course, go towards the complete scheme, since it is contemplated that

/the....

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

the proposed Training organisation in Canada should be part of the Royal Canadian Air Force, which would itself have first call on the Canadians trained under the scheme.

7. Though it is essential that the whole organisation should be completed as early as possible, it is of course appreciated that time will be required for the construction of additional aerodromes, for the production of the necessary aircraft and for the training of instructors and maintenance personnel.

8. Appendices are attached shewing the system of training which it is suggested should be adopted and giving estimates of aircraft and personnel required.

13th October, 1939.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 267991

APPENDIX 'A'.

P I L O T T R A I N I N G.

Weeks 0	Initial Training	4 Elementary Training	12 Service Training 28
Initial Training Schools in Canada.		No. 1 E.F.T.S.	No. 1 S.F.T.S.
		No. 2 "	No. 2 "
		No. 3 "	No. 3 "
		No. 4 "	No. 4 "
		No. 5 "	No. 5 "
		No. 6 "	No. 6 "
		No. 7 "	No. 7 "
		No. 8 "	No. 8 "
		No. 9 "	No. 9 "
		No. 10 "	No. 10 "
		No. 11 "	No. 11 "
		No. 12 "	No. 12 "
Initial Training Schools in Australia.		Ten Elementary Flying Training Schools in Australia.	No. 13 "
			No. 14 "
			No. 15 "
			No. 16 "
			No. 17 "
			No. 18 "
			No. 19 "
			No. 20 "
			No. 21 "
			No. 22 "
Initial Training Schools in New Zealand.		Three Elementary Flying Training Schools in New Zealand.	No. 23 "
			No. 24 "
			No. 25 "

	Intake.	Output.	Intake.	Output.
Per month, per School	48	40	40	34
Per month, Canada Schools	576	480	1,000	850
" " Australia "	480	400	-	-
" " New Zealand "	144	120	-	-
" " All Schools	1,200	1,000	1,000	850
WASTAGE	16 2/3%		15%

29% on original elementary school intake.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

APPENDIX 'B'.

A I R O B S E R V E R T R A I N I N G.

Weeks	0	4	16	22	26
Initial Training Schools in Canada.		No. 1 Observer School	No. 1 B.G.S.
		No. 2 " "	No. 2 "
		No. 3 " "	No. 3 "
		No. 4 " "	No. 4 "	No. 1 A.N.S.
		No. 5 " "	No. 5 "
		No. 6 " "	No. 6 "
		No. 7 " "	No. 7 "
Initial Training Schools in Australia.		No. 8 " "	No. 8 "	No. 2 A.N.S.
		No. 9 " "	No. 9 "
		No. 10 " "	No. 10 "
		No. 11 " "	No. 11 "
		No. 12 " "	No. 12 "	No. 3 A.N.S.
		No. 13 " "	No. 13 "
Initial Training Schools in New Zealand.		No. 14 " "	No. 14 "
		No. 15 " "	No. 15 "

	Intake	Output	Intake	Output
Per School, per month.	42	35	35	34	170	170
All Schools, per month.	630	525	525	510	510	510

WASTAGE 16 2/3% 3%

19%

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

APPENDIX 'C'.

AIR GUNNER TRAINING.

Weeks	0	4	26	30
Initial Training Schools in Canada.		Wireless School (22 weeks)		NO. 1 B.G.S.
				No. 2 "
				No. 3 "
				No. 4 "
				No. 5 "
				No. 6 "
				No. 7 "
				No. 8 "
Initial Training Schools in Australia.				No. 9 "
				No. 10 "
				No. 11 "
				No. 12 "
				No. 13 "
Initial Training Schools in New Zealand.				No. 14 "
				No. 15 "

	Intake	Output	Intake	Output
Per School, per month.	1,080	900	60	58
All Schools, per month.			900	870

WASTAGE 16 2/3% 3 1/3%

19 1/2%

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

APPENDIX 'D'.

AIRCRAFT REQUIREMENTS.

The aircraft required for the Schools in Canada when the full scheme is in operation are as under :-

Type and Purpose.	Quantity (includes 50% Immediate Reserve).	Annual production required to make good estimated wastage of 33 1/3% (i.e. complete "write-offs") of Initial Equipment.	Proposed sources of Supply.
Moths and/or Fleets. for E.F.T.S.'s	648	144	Canada as far as possible. Engines for Moths to be supplied from U.K.
Harvard for Service F.T.S.'s.	1,125	250	Harvards from U.S.A. if Neutrality Act is repealed; otherwise from Canada.
Ansons for Service F.T.S.'s, Ob. S's, and A.N.S.'s	2,151	478	U.K. Wings to be made in Canada.
Battles for Air Armt. School, and Bombing and Gunnery Schools.	1,165	257	U.K.
	5,089	1,129

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

APPENDIX 'D'.

AIRCRAFT REQUIREMENTS.

The aircraft required for the Schools in Canada when the full scheme is in operation are as under :-

Type and Purpose.	Quantity (includes 50% Immediate Reserve).	Annual production required to make good estimated wastage of 33 1/3% (i.e. complete "write-offs") of Initial Equipment.	Proposed sources of Supply.
Moths and/ or Fleets for E.F.T.S.'s	648	144	Canada as far as possible. Engines for Moths to be supplied from U.K.
Harvard for Service F.T.S.'s.	1,125	250	Harvards from U.S.A. if Neutrality Act is repealed; otherwise from Canada.
Ansons for Service F.T.S.'s, Ob. S's, and A.N.S.'s	2,151	478	U.K. Wings to be made in Canada.
Battles for Air Armt. School, and Bombing and Gunnery Schools.	1,165	257	U.K.
	5,089	1,129

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

APPENDIX 'E'.

P E R S O N N E L R E Q U I R E M E N T S.

The following personnel (other than under instruction) will be required in Canada when the full scheme is in operation :-

OFFICERS :-

General Duties (Flying)	1,987
Administrative	394
Armament	136
Engineer	283
Navigation	119
Signals	28
Accountant	162
Equipment	270
Medical	137
Various	197	... 3,713
AIRMEN PILOTS :	1,124
OBSERVERS :	194

AIRMEN :-

Group I trades :-

Draughtsmen	31
Fitters I	5,848
Fitters II	4,997
Fitters Arm.	732
Inst. Makrs.	699
M.T.S. & O.	264
Metal Wkrs.	460
Wireless & Elec. Mech.	1,180	... 14,211

/Group II trades.....

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

AIRMEN (contd.) :-		b/f:-	...
Group II trades :-		(1,124	(Airmen pilots)
		(194	(Observers)
Armourers	1,303	(14,211	(Group I trades)
Carpenters	618
Electricians	1,118
Flt. Mechs.	5,342
Flt. Riggers	3,570
Inst. Reprs.	523
Photographers	302
W. Operators	1,120	13,896
OTHER GROUPS :		24,578 ...	54,003

The above is based on United Kingdom establishments and assumes that all flying and maintenance units are manned with Service personnel. If any of the schools are on a civilian basis, or repair work is undertaken by contract, a considerable reduction in personnel will be effected.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Air. T. Scheme

C267997

file

Ottawa, October 17th, 1939.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER:

Re: British Air Mission

Members now in Canada -

Lord Riverdale, K.B.E., LL.D., Head of the Mission;

Air Marshal Sir Christopher L. Courtney, K.C.B., C.B.E., D.S.O.; War Air Force Member of the Mission

J. B. Abraham, Esq., C.B., Permanent Assistant Secretary, Air Ministry;

J. R. Smythe, Esq., of the Financial Division of the Air Ministry;

Group Captain J. M. Robb, D.S.O., D.F.C.; R.A.F. Training Staff;

F. L. R. Howard, Esq., Secretary to the Mission;

Group Captain L. N. Hollinghurst, O.B.E., D.F.C., R.A.F. Organization Staff;

Group Captain A. Gray; R.A.F. Training Staff;

A. D. Hayward, Esq., Code and Cipher Officer;

J. Milner, Esq., Lord Riverdale's Secretary.

Members expected shortly -

Captain Harold H. Balfour, M.C., M.P., Under-Secretary for Air;

Air Chief Marshal Sir H. R. M. Brooke-Popham, G.C.V.O., K.C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O.;

F. F. Searle, Esq., Managing Director of the de Haviland Aircraft Company.

A. D. P. H.

A. D. P. H.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Air Training.

ODS/AH

Oct.17,1939.

C 267?98

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER.

Air Training Mission.

From the attached clipping you will see that Lord Riverdale has been talking pretty largely to reporters, and that someone from Ottawa has been putting a guess of $700,000,000 expenditure by the four Governments in the first year.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 267999

DEPARTMENT OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

Subject

Date Oct. 16, 1939 Publication Montreal Gazette

AIR PLAN COST IS $700,000,000 FOR FIRST YEAR

Canada Stands to Benefit Enormously Under Empire Scheme

14,375 MORE AVIATORS

Riverdale Mission Arrives, Reveals Start Will Be Made Almost At Once

By F. C. MEARS.
(Gazette Resident Correspondent.)

Ottawa, October 15.—The first year of the British Empire air training scheme will involve the expenditure by the four Governments concerned of $700,000,000 an official source disclosed at the week-end.

Canadians have as yet little conception of the magnitude of the task ahead or the enormous effect it will have on the nation as a whole. When the job is done Canada's importance as a belligerent government will rank extremely high because at present this nation's war effort is limited to the sending of supplies and a small expeditionary force.

The Government has authorized, or will soon authorize, the creation of a new air establishment of 1,375 officers and 13,000 men.

These figures are large when compared with the present strength of the Royal Canadian Air Force. At the last regular session of Parliament $6,000,000 was voted for training pilots and this sum was considered large at the time.

It is difficult yet to get any breakdown of the sums to be spent, but it is pointed out that the air training to be given in Canada will be the most advanced and therefore will require advanced equipment, including hundreds of the most modern fighting and bombing planes.

The expansion of Canadian industry to a point where these modern planes can be manufactured in the country will cost millions. The building of plants and hangars and barracks and fields will cost millions more.

Over 25,000 to Be Trained

By JOHN R. STURDY.
(Gazette Staff Reporter.)

Quebec, October 15.—The number of pilots to be trained in Canada for the Royal Air Force under the plan agreed upon by the British and Dominions governments will be "much more" than the 25,000 reported last week, it was announced here yesterday by Baron Riverdale, head of a mission sent to Ottawa by the British Air Ministry.

The plan, which will make Canada the air training centre for the Empire, will go into operation almost immediately and should reach its peak in about 18 months, Lord Riverdale said.

"I foresee a great industrial expansion in Canada as a result of this plan," he added. "It is one of the biggest things that the Empire has ever done."

Lord Riverdale headed a group of air experts, which included Air Marshall Sir C. L. Courtney, K.C.B., C.B.E., D.S.O. The mission left for Ottawa yesterday and will start to work Monday morning.

"I hope the training will begin this month," the mission's head stated. "We ceraintly want to get things operating before the winter sets in."

He announced that the training of pilots would complement the scheme to build military aircraft in Canada for the British Air Ministry.

"If the United States repeals the embargo legislation," he said, "it will make things easier for us, because we will be able to import airplane engines from that country. At any rate, we'll see that sufficient machines are available for training purposes."

Pilots will come from Australia, New Zealand and Great Britain to complete their training on Canadian fields. Preliminary instruction will be given them at home, so that Canada will be in the nature of a "finishing" school for the fliers.

"We're extremely enthusiastic about this plan," Lord Riverdale told reporters. "It is going to have a wide effect on Canadian industry, and I don't mean only the aircraft industry."

He said that Great Britain realized the importance of air strength in the present war with Germany. "Poland was an example of the effectiveness of fighting planes. The Germans walked through Poland in a very short time, due to the assistance of their forces in the air."

"This plan to train fliers here is not only a war measure," Lord Riverdale stated. "By that I mean that it need not stop with the ending of hostilities, for commercial aviation is still only young, and this country can become a centre for peacetime training and manufacture of aircraft."

The British industrialist, who is perhaps better known to Canadians as Sir Arthur Balfour, of Sheffield, was asked for his opinions on the war.

He said he believed the possibility of a crackup in Germany. "I don't think it will come—if it does—for another six months," he added. "and in the meantime there is going to be a terrible amount of blood spilled. For Hitler is reaching the point of desperation. He will throw lives away in an effort to smash the Allies."

Lord Riverdale agreed that Russia was moving in the direction of Germany, probably hoping to stir up a Bolshevik revolution within the Reich.

"It is not impossible," he declared, "that some day Britain and France will find themselves lined up against Russia. That may be the next war. But, of course, it is foolish to make any prophesies. For no one knows what Russia intends to do. She continues to be the big question mark."

Despite the sinking of the Courageous and Royal Oak, it will be the British navy which will win this war for the democracies, in Lord Riverdale's opinion. "The navy, with the help of the air force, will crack Germany, and the effect of the blockade is already being felt in that country."

Reverting to the plan to train pilots in Canada, he said that the announcement of the scheme had had a psychological effect in Germany, and would continue to work on the German morale.

"The scheme is a great thing for the Empire," he declared. "It will bring the peoples of the Dominion closer together, for you will have Australia and New Zealand fellows out here, living and training with you, and you'll get to know one another."

The Dominions will contribute most of the men to be trained in Canada, he explained. "Our training facilities in England are very large and well organized, and we can continue to instruct a great number of our own fliers at home. Those we can't accommodate, we'll send over to this country."

"I'm going to stay here until this thing is working like clockwork," he declared. "I've never taken hold of anything about which I was more enthusiastic. And I have a splendid group of experts with me—the top men in their fields. I think we've got something this time, something big."

In Ottawa, the British mission will hold discussions with representatives of Canada, Australia and New Zealand. The plan has already been organized in the preliminary stages, and the men expect it to be in operation within a short time.

Others in the British group, besides Lord Riverdale and Air Marshall Sir C. L. Courtney, are J. B. Abraham, permanent assistant secretary of the Air Ministry; Group Captain A. Gray and Group Captain J. M. Robb of the R.A.F. training staff; Group Captain L. N. Hollinghurst, of the organization staff, J. R. Smyth, of the financial division of the Air Ministry, and F. R. Howard, secretary to the mission.

Due in Ottawa shortly to join the others are Air Chief Marshall Sir Robert Brooke-Popham and F. F. Searle, managing director of the De Haviland Aircraft Company.

Cost to Be Divided

Ottawa, October 15.—(CP)—Full control of the co-operative air training scheme will be in the hands of Canadian authorities, Lord Riverdale, head of the British air training mission, said on his arrival here today.

Financial arrangements for the scheme which Lord Riverdale described as the biggest thing the Empire has ever attempted, have not been worked out in detail. He expected, however, that the participating other governments, those of the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand, would pay the Canadian Government so much per man trained.

The amount would be based on the cost of operating the schools, which will probably be spread all across Canada, he said.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ODS/HMP.
OCTOBER 30th, 1939

C 268000

MEMORANDUM FOR THE

PRIME MINISTER -

In making a call this morning Lord Riverdale, whom I met for the first time, seemed at pains to emphasize the very reasonable character of their financial proposals regarding the air training scheme. He emphasized particularly the fact that, while we would be meeting the cost of air training, the United Kingdom would be meeting the much heavier cost of maintaining the pilots so trained at the front - a cost which at the peak might run to one ~~hundred~~ thousand million dollars a year. I told him that my recollection was that the United Kingdom in their telegraphed proposals had left it open whether the United Kingdom or the Dominions were to maintain the men at the front. He said the United Kingdom would be quite prepared to maintain them. I told him this might well be the understanding now, but we must face the fact that there would be great pressure in Canada for maintaining a big Royal Canadian Air Force at the front, not merely four or five squadrons, once we had the men trained, and that we might therefore find that we had committed ourselves now to the bigger end of the training and later to the very big end of the maintenance at the front.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268001 A

COST OF PROPOSED TRAINING SCHEME.

		$
Total Capital Expenditure shown in R.C.A.F. Estimate	...	400,000,000
Deduct Capital contributed by Great Britain in the form of equipment (allowing for Anson wings being made in Canada)	...	140,000,000
		260,000,000
	$
Total Maintenance Expenditure (as estimated by R.C.A.F.) for a period of 3½ years, say to the 31st March 1943.	508,500,000
Deduct value of equipment supplied by Great Britain to replace wastage ...	51,500,000
	457,000,000
Deduct also difference between cost of running Elementary Flying Schools, Observer Schools, and Equipment Depots on a civilian instead of on a Service basis ...	20,000,000
		437,000,000
Total of complete capital Expenditure and of maintenance Expenditure up to 31st March 1943		697,000,000

Incidence of the above cost.

	Gross.	Net (i.e. after making deductions referred to above).
	$	$
Fiscal year 1939-40 :
Capital ...	15,000,000	10,000,000
Maintenance ...	8,500,000	8,500,000
Fiscal year 1940-41 :
Capital ...	160,000,000	120,000,000
Maintenance ...	65,000,000	50,000,000
Fiscal year 1941-42 :
Capital ...	180,000,000	110,000,000
Maintenance ...	190,000,000	165,000,000
Fiscal year 1942-43 :
Capital ...	45,000,000	20,000,000
Maintenance ...	245,000,000	213,500,000
	908,500,000	697,000,000

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268002 B

UNITED KINGDOM AIR MISSION

ESTIMATED COST OF PROPOSED TRAINING SCHEME

	$
Total Capital Expenditure shewn in R.C.A.F. Estimate ...	400,000,000
Deduct Capital to be contributed by Great Britain in the form of equipment (allowing for Anson wings being made in Canada) ...	140,000,000
	260,000,000
Total Maintenance Expenditure (as estimated by R.C.A.F.) for a period of 3 5/12 years, up to 31st March, 1943 ...	508,500,000
Net Total of Capital Expenditure and of Maintenance Expenditure up to 31st March, 1943	768,500,000
Deduct difference between cost of running Elementary Flying Schools, Observer Schools and Equipment Depots on a civilian instead of on a Service basis	20,000,000
Net Total of Capital Expenditure and of Maintenance Expenditure up to 31st March, 1943, after allowing for possible savings ...	748,500,000

INCIDENCE OF THE ABOVE COST

	Gross Totals		Net Totals (i.e. after making deductions referred to above.)
	$	$	$	$
Fiscal year 1939-40 :
Capital ...	15,000,000	23,500,000	10,000,000	18,500,000
Maintenance ...	8,500,000		8,500,000
Fiscal year 1940-41:
Capital ...	160,000,000	225,000,000	120,000,000	181,000,000
Maintenance ...	65,000,000		61,000,000
Fiscal year 1941-42:
Capital ...	180,000,000	370,000,000	110,000,000	292,000,000
Maintenance ...	190,000,000		182,000,000
Fiscal year 1942-43;
Capital ...	45,000,000	290,000,000	20,000,000	257,000,000
Maintenance ...	245,000,000		237,000,000
	908,500,000		748,500,000

Notes.

(1). The above estimates exclude import duty and sales tax on those items of capital and maintenance expenditure on which the impositions can be identified. The total amount so excluded is $55,000,000.

(2). The allocation of expenditure over fiscal years is based on the assumption that the first Initial Training Wing will open on 1st April, 1940 and that schools for instructor and maintenance personnel will open as soon as possible before that date.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268003

Navy, Army and Air Force Expenditure of Great Britain

1934 - 1939

(in millions of pounds = £m.)

Service.	1934.	1935.	1936.	1937.	1938. (Estimate).	1939. (Estimate).
	£m.	£m.	£m.	£m.	£m.	£m.
Navy	56½	65	81	102	126	149 (a).
Army.	39½	44½	55	63½	106½	227 (a).
Air Force	17	27	49	80	123½	243 (a).
Total.	113	136½	185	245½	356	619 (a).

(a). These figures represent the sums granted before the outbreak of war. On 3rd September, a Vote of Credit of £500 millions was passed to provide for further expenditure during the financial year on Navy, Army and Air Force services and also on certain civil services connected with the prosecution of the war (e.g. Air Raid Precautionary Services). In introducing the revised Budget the Chancellor of the Exchequer estimated the total national expenditure for the year at £2,000,000,000; and this amount included about £1,300,000,000 for Defence Services.

31st Oct. 1939

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ODS/ET
1 Nov.1939

C68004

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER:

AIR TRAINING DISCUSSION.

(Interview)

Sir Gerald Campbell at noon today, when calling on another subject, referred to the discussion with the Cabinet committee yesterday on air training.

He said that he and all the members of the Mission had felt blue and depressed as the result of the discussion and the observations of the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance. They had planned to take up matters of detail and expense with the individual Ministers, and it was only when it was indicated that it was the Prime Minister's wish that there should be a discussion with the full committee that they had taken steps to make their presentation definite by getting further instructions from London. They had pared down the original proposals in costs, and were surprised to learn that they were not considered within "shooting distance". Lord Riverdale had prepared his statements in the condensed form in which a business man would, and had been quite prepared

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

to explain them in an appropriate fashion, but had been rather knocked off his base by Colonel Ralston's interjection about this being the first time there had been any suggestion of the proportion into which the costs were to be divided, and had not recovered himself. Sir Gerald said he thought this was the explanation of his somewhat unfortunate phrase "free gift from Britain"; what he obviously meant was Great Britain's contribution to the co-operative effort.

I told Sir Gerald I had not been in close touch with the discussions since our exchange of letters on the occasion of the Air Minister's speech, but I believed it was clear that any difficulty that existed had arisen as the result of a change by the United Kingdom representatives in the programms put forward by the United Kingdom the end of September, and which the Canadian Government had accepted in principle, and also from some indiscreet statements to the press. I understood the Government had in mind that the Minister of National Defence, the Minister of Finance and the Minister of Transport would meet the members

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

of the Mission to go into details, and doubtless a clear understanding as to what each had in mind could then be attained.

Sir Gerald said there were two points he felt it desirable to mention.

First was the remark of the Prime Minister "This is not our war", which had been a matter of great surprise to all the United Kingdom members present, who had individually commented upon it after leaving the meeting. He believed a reference to this statement had been included in the report which had been sent to London, and he did not know what they would think of it there, or just what it meant. One of the members of the Mission had wondered whether the Prime Minister intended to make a similar statement in the House. I said to Sir Gerald that I had no knowledge other than was open to him or anyone else as to the meaning of the phrase, but I should have thought it was perfectly obvious. It certainly was not Canada's war in the sense that the war did not originate in any German threat against Canada or in any Canadian pledge in Eastern Europe. This of course did not mean that Canada had not made Great Britain's and France's cause her own. Every member of the Cabinet had backed

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Canada going into the war and would favour carrying it on to the fullest extent possible. As regards any statement in Parliament, that might safely be left to the Prime Minister.

(b)

The further point was as to whether Colonel Ralston, in speaking of various additions made from time to time to the Canadian military programme, had in mind undertaking to maintain the Canadian trained flyers at the front. If so, that would very greatly alter the financial picture. I said that was not my understanding. Colonel Ralston had referred to the fact that after an extended programme of military effort had been drawn up by the Canadian Government following consultation with the United Kingdom, and one which it was thought would strain our financial resources, there had come continuous supplementary requests from the United Kingdom - an air squadron for the West Indies, railway and other units, etc., crowned by this tremendous air training scheme. I did not understand that Colonel Ralston had indicated any intention on the part of the Canadian Government to maintain at the front all the Canadian pilots trained under the new scheme. On

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

the contrary, my recollection was that he had picked up and approved Lord Riverdale's statement that the United Kingdom would have to undertake the cost, which would be heavy, of maintaining the trained men at the front. The Prime Minister, incidentally, speaking on the same subject, had referred to the necessity of keeping in mind before any final commitments on air training were made, the possibility that public opinion might force us to maintain as an independent Canadian force a considerable proportion of the new pilots. Mr. Rogers had pointed out that, if ~~this~~ as had been under consideration ~~and~~, three Canadian squadrons were maintained by Canada at the front, the cost of that would be in addition to the figures set out by Lord Riverdale. This, however, was a matter that would be gone into by the Cabinet committee and doubtless a definite understanding would be reached on it later.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

OFFICE OF THE PRIME MINISTER

MEMORANDUM

C268009

Free consultations Est Bn

Capt Balfour
Chancellor Est

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ODS/ET
2 Nov.1939

AIR TRAINING DISCUSSION OF OCTOBER 31st. C268010

Following my report to the Prime Minister yesterday of Sir Gerald Campbell's remarks on some phases of the above discussion, I spoke to Sir Gerald again today. I said that when he referred to the comments of various members of the British Mission on a phrase of the Prime Minister's - "This is not our war" - I did not at the moment recall the context of the phrase as it had not seemed at the time to have any special significance. I had mentioned the matter to the Prime Minister,who had, I might say, expressed great surprise at the significance which had been attached to the phrase and at the obvious mis-interpretation which had taken place. Mr.King at once pointed out the context in which the phrase was used. In replying to Lord Riverdale,he had quoted the latter's sentence that the United Kingdom was making "a free gift to you" of certain equipment. Mr.King replied "It is not a gift to Canada. It is not our war" - that all Canadian contributions were free contributions to the common cause and any contribution which Canada might

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268011

make with respect to air training would be a free contribution to a common scheme.

Sir Gerald recognized that it was essential to consider any such phrase in its context and said that he would explain the matter to the members of the Mission who had spoken to him. I told him it was hardly an explanation - it was simply pointing out what should have been obvious to anyone present.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

Air T.

"R"

C 268012

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA

TO: THE HONOURABLE VINCENT MASSEY, HIGH COMMISSIONER, LONDON.

CYPHER

PERSONAL

OTTAWA, November 3rd, 1939.

I should like you and Mr. Crerar to note particularly personal telegram I have sent Prime Minister today regarding air-training and finance.

Rec'd Nov 5-39 pc

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R. A

R Air T Par. 7 approved by Mr Robertson.

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA.

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS, LONDON

SECRET C68013

PERSONAL

CYPHER Ottawa, November 3rd, 1939.

Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister, Begins:

1. My colleagues and I believe it desirable to bring to the attention of your Government some questions which are causing difficulty and which we believe should be given early consideration to ensure full effectiveness and the promptest action in our joint war efforts.

2. The immediate question has to do with the air training proposals. Since their arrival on October 14, the members of the United Kingdom Air Training Mission have been actively at work in consultation with our technical experts in examining the detailed basis of a cooperative training scheme. Discussions this week between the heads of the Mission with your High Commissioner and a committee of our Cabinet have however indicated what we consider a fundamental misunderstanding as to the basis of and responsibility for the project.

3. Your telegram of September 26th indicated that the War Cabinet of the United Kingdom in planning a rapidly expanding air force had found that because of limitations of space and vulnerability to attack, it would be impossible to carry on in the United Kingdom the full training

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268014

organisation required. The Government of the United Kingdom therefore proposed that a large part of the training should be transferred to Canada, Australia and New Zealand, the advanced training to be given in Canada to men who would have received their elementary training in the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and Canada. The Canadian Government replied that it believed cooperation in such a plan was a most effective form of war effort, and accepted it in principle, subject to examination of the scale upon which such a project could be fitted into our war programme.

4. The proposals put forward by the United Kingdom Mission this week, however, appeared to imply that a United Kingdom project for reinforcing the Royal Air Force had become a Canadian plan, with corresponding assumption by Canada of the major provision of recruits and major proportion of the cost which detailed study now indicates would be of huge magnitude. It was immediately apparent that the share suggested for Canada, when added to existing commitments and plans, indicated expenditures and financing quite beyond our financial resources.

5. As we set forth in our reply of September 28th, the extent of our participation in an air-training plan would depend on the total cost and its allocation among the several cooperating governments, the extent of our other war commitments, and the total of the financial undertakings required, including provision for financing British purchases in this market. It is not possible to reach a conclusion on the scope of our air-training participation without relating it to our whole national war programme and its financial implications. When

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268015

we speak of financial requirements, we do not imply any thought on the part of the Government or the people of Canada of stinting or sparing efforts or resources. We are determined to throw ourselves into the war to our utmost capacity. We must, however, consider the extent of that capacity in order to determine how the national effort can be directed most effectively. Assumption of tasks beyond that capacity would lead inevitably to failure and serious prejudice to the common cause.

In terms of the financing to be done that capacity can best be assessed by relating it to the national income, which has recently been carefully computed in other connections. Our people, like those of other countries, realize and admire the courage and devotion which the people of the United Kingdom have shown in providing such tremendous sums for carrying on the war. Without comparing our limited war programme to that great effort we may yet point out that it is probably not generally recognized in the United Kingdom or elsewhere how great a proportion of Canada's national income is being devoted to public purposes for peace and war. In this country of vast area, small population and federal structure, governments have found it necessary,in orderto provide the basis for a common national life, to assume and carry on widespread activities which are less essential in older lands. Taking into account the existing federal, provincial and municipal peace-time commitments, less any possible war-time savings, and adding the provision for the military programme previously planned for the first year of the war, it is clear that it would not be possible to provide both for the air-training addition and the credits for the United Kingdom which it has been indicated

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268016

will be required, without raising the percentage of the national current income taken from the people in the first year of the war to a level probably higher than that of the United Kingdom itself. You will of course realise that the fundamentally different conditions obtaining as between the United Kingdom and Canada would make it quite impossible for Canada to divert to war and other governmental expenditure at all as large a proportion of its national income.

6. In estimating the national income we have made allowances for purchases by the United Kingdom on approximately the scale indicated by your Treasury authorities, but we must add that unless this whole subject of supplies dealt with in my telegram No. 91 of October 10th and other communications can be approached with more appreciation of the Canadian situation, our reduced national income and increased governmental burdens may seriously jeopardize our present commitments and plans.

7. Our discussions in connection with the air training programme have emphasized the need for a fuller appreciation of the Canadian situation, and the urgent necessity of a speedy and definite settlement of the various aspects of the financial problem. We have endeavoured to make clear to Mr. Osborne the facts in regard to our financial capacity, the measure of the financial burden involved in our existing commitments, the possible margin available for financing British purchases here (which margin will, of course, be reduced by the extent of any direct contribution to the air training programme), and the manner in which the measure of our aggregate contribution will be expanded or reduced by the volume and character of British orders and the promptness with which they are placed. I believe that Mr. Osborne has an appreciation of these various factors as well as of the needs and difficultie

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268017

of the United Kingdom but it is not apparent that either through our discussions with him or by our direct communications we have been able to convey a full understanding to your Government and particularly to its various agencies concerned with the purchase of Canadian products or with making arrangements in regard to the various aspects of our military contribution. I may instance the fact that while the British Air Mission are pressing us in regard to their air training proposals which would involve a substantial increase in Canada's direct military expenditures, we on our part have for many weeks been pressing without satisfactory result for a decision in regard to wheat purchases which is the biggest single item in our whole economic programme and the most far-reaching in its public consequences. In our opinion the questions of military and economic participation in the war effort are inextricably intertwined and cannot be dealt with separately. Until some understanding evolves from the discussions either here or in London, I frankly cannot see how a decision can be arrived at in regard to the proposals for the special air training programme, although, of course, the discussions are proceeding meanwhile with the United Kingdom Air Mission. We are most anxious, as you are, that speedy decisions on all these matters should be reached and would greatly appreciate anything you can do or any suggestions which you can make to bring about a prompt determination of these problems.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

R. Air T.

R

TELEGRAM

68018

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

SECRET AND PERSONAL

CYPHER

LONDON, November 7th, 1939.

Secret and Personal. Following for your Prime from my Prime Minister, Begins:

Your personal and secret telegram of November 3rd regarding air-training scheme and other financial and economic questions is under urgent consideration and in accordance with a message received through Mr. Massey, I have made a copy available to Mr. Crerar.

Mr. Crerar was present at a meeting last week with the Chancellor of the Exchequer when many aspects of our own war finances, some of them directly relevant to Canadian situation, were under review. The questions dealt with in your telegram will be discussed fully with Mr. Crerar as soon as possible after his return from visit to British Expeditionary Force next week, and I am hopeful that this will contribute to a clarification of the issues with which we are both faced.

I am glad to note from the last paragraph of your telegram that in the meantime discussions at Ottawa on air-training scheme are proceeding. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

Received Ottawa 5.40 p.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

Air T.

TELEGRAM

C268019

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON, November 11, 1939.

CYPHER

No. 636

No. 636. Following for Chief of the Air Staff from Air Commodore BREADNER, Begins:

Consider situation brighter than some reports in Canada indicated. While Germany numerically superior in aircraft, Air Staff considers this advantage largely offset by superior armament and / or performance of Franco-British aircraft. I concur in this view. War wastage practically nil and German passivity providing much needed opportunity to British and French to increase strength and accumulate reserves. This, however, is not being accomplished as rapidly as might be expected, because while aircraft production as a whole reported since the war to have increased, blackout conditions are hampering production. One manufacturer has attributed 15 per cent decrease in his plant to this cause. Shortage of aircraft and / or engines is a limiting factor on the re-equipment of squadrons. While formation of new squadrons also hampered in this respect, main difficulty is reported to be maintenance of crews, air observers and W/T operators. No apparent shortage of embryo and would-be pilots as pools and initial training schools are crowded and output is slowed by relatively small capacity for training.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

TELEGRAM

C 268020

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON,

Establishment's transition from peace to war training, while according to plan, did cause temporary upset, which has now been overcome, and increased training is under way. As offensive cannot be initiated by the Allies until air strength increased and taking into account conditions known here, consider training scheme and aircraft production in Canada must be pushed with the utmost vigour. Ends.

Read Nov 16-39

MASSEY.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPING C 268021 Office of The Prime Minister

Name of Publication Ottawa M. Journal

Date November 15, 1939

Subject Air Training

Air Scheme Is Discussed At Conference

Prime Minister And Lord Riverdale Highly Pleased With Progress

Satisfaction with the progress being made in working out the Empire air training scheme in Canada was expressed officially following a conference Tuesday between Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Lord Riverdale, head of the British Air Mission.

Lord Riverdale, accompanied by Captain Harold Balfour, Under-Secretary of State for Air in the United Kingdom, called on the Prime Minister in the afternoon.

Satisfied With Progress.

Following the conference a brief joint statement was issued saying the meeting had been held and that "all parties expressed themselves as entirely satisfied with the progress being made".

Lord Riverdale and the British Mission have been in Ottawa since early in October working out the basic plans under which advanced training will be provided in Canada for the British, Australian and New Zealand air forces.

Missions from Australia and New Zealand arrived subsequently and a constant series of conference has been held with the Dominion Government experts. Under the scheme, Canada will provide the facilities for advanced training and be reimbursed by the other members of the commonwealth.

Extent of the program will be dependent upon the length of the war and the necessity for trained air personnel but it is understood provision will be made to train up to 25,000 men a year.

Already progress has been made in mapping out the location of airdromes of which many will be needed throughout Canada.

Use T.C.A. Fields.

Trans-Canada Air Lines landing fields will be utilized where necessary and will be made available at once. Construction of additional fields is expected to start this Winter.

Discussion of the financing of this huge project is understood to be occupying the conference delegates at the moment. Once the basic details have been decided upon it is expected there will be a plenary conference of all the missions and the Dominion cabinet sub-committee on air training with the Prime Minister presiding.

Such a meeting would be for the purpose of reaching agreement on a formal contract under which the training would be carried out. So far as could be learned no date has yet been fixed for the final, full meeting of all the parties.

Late in the afternoon, Mr. Mackenzie King also received Sir Gerald Campbell, British High Commissioner, and Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, British Air Chief Marshal, who arrived in Ottawa Monday night from England and joined the United Kingdom mission. It was said to be a "courtesy call" to enable Sir Robert to meet the Prime Minister.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS C 268023

Office of
The Prime Minister

Name of Publication Ottawa M. Journal

Date November 15, 1939

Subject Air Training

Air Scheme Is Discussed At Conference

Prime Minister And Lord Riverdale Highly Pleased With Progress

Satisfaction with the progress being made in working out the Empire air training scheme in Canada was expressed officially following a conference Tuesday between Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Lord Riverdale, head of the British Air Mission.

Lord Riverdale, accompanied by Captain Harold Balfour, Under-Secretary of State for Air in the United Kingdom, called on the Prime Minister in the afternoon.

Satisfied With Progress.

Following the conference a brief joint statement was issued saying the meeting had been held and that "all parties expressed themselves as entirely satisfied with the progress being made".

Lord Riverdale and the British Mission have been in Ottawa since early in October working out the basic plans under which advanced training will be provided in Canada for the British, Australian and New Zealand air forces.

Missions from Australia and New Zealand arrived subsequently and a constant series of conference has been held with the Dominion Government experts. Under the scheme, Canada will provide the facilities for advanced training and be reimbursed by the other members of the commonwealth.

Extent of the program will be dependent upon the length of the war and the necessity for trained air personnel but it is understood provision will be made to train up to 25,000 men a year.

Already progress has been made in mapping out the location of airdromes of which many will be needed throughout Canada.

Use T.C.A. Fields.

Trans-Canada Air Lines landing fields will be utilized where necessary and will be made available at once. Construction of additional fields is expected to start this Winter.

Discussion of the financing of this huge project is understood to be occupying the conference delegates at the moment. Once the basic details have been decided upon it is expected there will be a plenary conference of all the missions and the Dominion cabinet sub-committee on air training with the Prime Minister presiding.

Such a meeting would be for the purpose of reaching agreement on a formal contract under which the training would be carried out. So far as could be learned no date has yet been fixed for the final, full meeting of all the parties.

Late in the afternoon, Mr. Mackenzie King also received Sir Gerald Campbell, British High Commissioner, and Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, British Air Chief Marshal, who arrived in Ottawa Monday night from England and joined the United Kingdom mission. It was said to be a "courtesy call" to enable Sir Robert to meet the Prime Minister.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS C268022 Office of The Prime Minister

Name of Publication Toronto Telegram

Date November 15, 1939

Subject Air Training

Imperial Air Conference Once More Breaks Down As Ottawa Balks On Cost

Parley on Final Details Postponed as Premier Unwilling to Co-operate on Financing

By L. M. McKECHNIE
Telegram Staff Reporter

Ottawa, Nov. 15—The Imperial Air Conference broke down again yesterday because of the unwillingness of the Mackenzie King Government to co-operate with Great Britain on the question of financing the air training scheme.

Lord Riverdale had summoned Empire delegates to a round-table discussion on final details for this mighty project which will make the Empire invincible in the air. At the last moment, however, formal conversations had to be postponed because of the attitude adopted by the Canadian Government.

Instead of general meeting of all four governments, Lord Riverdale was forced to pay a personal visit to Prime Minister Mackenzie King. After this meeting both the British and Canadian air missions announced they were entirely satisfied with progress being made, but every intelligent observer in Ottawa knew that Canada was still haggling over costs.

WAITING FOR MR. KING

In the meantime the Australians and the New Zealanders are here twiddling their thumbs waiting for W. L. M. King to decide what Canada wants to do.

Yesterday the only definition of the progress made was contained in an unsigned press release which appeared mysteriously in the press gallery.

"Lord Riverdale, chairman of the United Kingdom air mission, accompanied by Captain Harold Balfour, Under-Secretary for Air in the United Kingdom, this afternoon conferred with the Prime Minister and members of the Government. Following the meeting all parties expressed themselves as entirely satisfied with the progress being made," it said.

Another "press release" describes the construction program on the Trans-Canada Airways for 1939.

This release says:

"The eastern section between Montreal and Moncton is now under regular operation by Trans-Canada Air Lines for carriage of mail during daylight hours. Work is proceeding on the lighting of the air ports on this portion of the route so that it may be operated during the hours of darkness. It is expected that regular operations for passengers, mail and express, either in daylight or darkness as may be required by the mail schedules, will be possible in December.

"Three new radio ranges are now in operation at Megantic, P.Q., Blissville, N.B., and Moncton, N.B.

IMPROVEMENTS IN EAST

"To give connections to other cities in the Maritime Provinces improvement have been made to the municipal airports at Halifax and Saint John. A radio range station is under construction at Halifax. A new airdrome and radio range station are being built at Charlottetown, P.E.I. Improvement of the air port at New Glasgow is proceeding. Surveys for new airdromes have been made at Summerside and Amherst.

"At St. Hubert airport, Montreal, a new runway has been built. Older runways have been strengthened to handle the heavier aircraft now coming into use.

"Many improvements have been made to the airdromes west of Montreal on those sections of the line which are now in regular operation so as to increase the efficiency and safety of the trans-continental service.

SPEED UP TORONTO SERVICE

"A new radio range is under construction at Stirling, Ontario, some 20 miles north of Trenton, that planes on the Montreal-Ottawa-Toronto section may proceed direct from Ottawa to Toronto and save the detour occasioned by following the present trans-continental route to Killaloe and Muskoka. This will shorten the time in transit on this service by 20 minutes.

"In Western Ontario new airdromes and radio ranges are being constructed at London and Windsor, Ontario, to give service to the south-western part of the province.

"North Bay is an important junction point on the trans-continental service. Construction on this airport was sufficiently far advanced to enable it to be used in the fall of 1939. Great improvements have been made during the year to the runway and lighting systems. A hangar is under construction there to house planes held there by weather or other causes.

"In Northern Ontario increased passenger accommodation has been provided at Kapuskasing and Wagaming. The landing areas at all principal fields have been increased and improved by new hard surfaces; and the intermediate fields at Earlton, Porquis, Pagwa, Nakina, Sioux Lookout and Kenora have also been enlarged and improved by additional pavements, new buildings, better lighting."

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R

PRESS CLIPPINGS C268022 Office of The Prime Minister

Name of Publication Toronto Telegram

Date November 15, 1939

Subject Air Training

Imperial Air Conference Once More Breaks Down As Ottawa Balks On Cost

Parley on Final Details Postponed as Premier Unwilling to Co-operate on Financing

By L. M. McKECHNIE
Telegram Staff Reporter

Ottawa, Nov. 15—The Imperial Air Conference broke down again yesterday because of the unwillingness of the Mackenzie King Government to co-operate with Great Britain on the question of financing the air training scheme.

Lord Riverdale had summoned Empire delegates to a round-table discussion on final details for this mighty project which will make the Empire invincible in the air. At the last moment, however, formal conversations had to be postponed because of the attitude adopted by the Canadian Government.

Instead of general meeting of all four governments, Lord Riverdale was forced to pay a personal visit to Prime Minister Mackenzie King. After this meeting both the British and Canadian air missions announced they were entirely satisfied with progress being made, but every intelligent observer in Ottawa knew that Canada was still haggling over costs.

WAITING FOR MR. KING

In the meantime the Australians and the New Zealanders are here twiddling their thumbs waiting for W. L. M. King to decide what Canada wants to do.

Yesterday the only definition of the progress made was contained in an unsigned press release which appeared mysteriously in the press gallery.

"Lord Riverdale, chairman of the United Kingdom air mission, accompanied by Captain Harold Balfour, Under-Secretary for Air in the United Kingdom, this afternoon conferred with the Prime Minister and members of the Government. Following the meeting all parties expressed themselves as entirely satisfied with the progress being made," it said.

Another "press release" describes the construction program on the Trans-Canada Airways for 1939.

This release says:

"The eastern section between Montreal and Moncton is now under regular operation by Trans-Canada Air Lines for carriage of mail during daylight hours. Work is proceeding on the lighting of the airports on this portion of the route so that it may be operated during the hours of darkness. It is expected that regular operations for passengers, mail and express, either in daylight or darkness as may be required by the mail schedules, will be possible in December.

"Three new radio ranges are now in operation at Megantic, P.Q., Blissville, N.B., and Moncton, N.B.

IMPROVEMENTS IN EAST

"To give connections to other cities in the Maritime Provinces improvement have been made to the municipal airports at Halifax and Saint John. A radio range station is under construction at Halifax. A new airdrome and radio range station are being built at Charlottetown, P.E.I. Improvement of the air port at New Glasgow is proceeding. Surveys for new airdromes have been made at Summerside and Amherst.

"At St. Hubert airport, Montreal, a new runway has been built. Older runways have been strengthened to handle the heavier aircraft now coming into use.

"Many improvements have been made to the airdromes west of Montreal on those sections of the line which are now in regular operation so as to increase the efficiency and safety of the trans-continental service.

SPEED UP TORONTO SERVICE

"A new radio range is under construction at Stirling, Ontario, some 30 miles north of Trenton, that planes on the Montreal-Ottawa-Toronto section may proceed direct from Ottawa to Toronto and save the detour occasioned by following the present trans-continental route to Killaloe and Muskoka. This will shorten the time in transit on this service by 20 minutes.

"In Western Ontario new airdromes and radio ranges are being constructed at London and Windsor, Ontario, to give service to the south-western part of the province.

"North Bay is an important junction point on the trans-continental service. Construction on this airport was sufficiently far advanced to enable it to be used in the fall of 1939. Great improvements have been made during the year to the runway and lighting systems. A hangar is under construction there to house planes held there by weather or other causes.

"In Northern Ontario increased passenger accommodation has been provided at Kapuskasing and Wagaming. The landing areas at all principal fields have been increased and improved by new hard surfaces, and the intermediate fields at Earlton, Porquis, Pagwa, Nakina, Sioux Lookout and Kenora have also been enlarged and improved by additional pavements, new buildings, better lighting."

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS C268023 Office of The Prime Minister

Name of Publication Toronto Star

Date November 15, 1939

Subject Air Training

AGREE ON EMPIRE AIR COSTS DECLARES BRITISH DELEGATE

London and Canadian Delegates "Entirely Satisfied"— National Identity Kept

NO DIFFICULTIES

Special to The Star

Ottawa, Nov. 14.—British and Canadian delegates are "entirely satisfied with the progress being made" on the huge empire air training plan, it was announced in a joint communique issued last night.

For two hours late yesterday afternoon and another hour last evening, Lord Riverdale, chairman of the United Kingdom air mission, and Capt. Harold Balfour, British under-secretary of state for air in the United Kingdom, conferred with Prime Minister King and members of the dominion cabinet. At the close of the discussions the brief joint statement was issued.

"An announcement of the full details of the whole plan, financial and otherwise, will be forthcoming sometime next week," Lord Riverdale stated later. "Everything is running smoothly. When you are embarking on a scheme of this magnitude naturally there is a lot of final details to be worked out.

"Conferences are going on all the time, with rapid progress being made. We have had a number of conferences with the Australian and New Zealand delegates as well and they have had conferences with the Canadians representatives. There have also been informal conferences at which representatives of the four countries have all participated."

Lord Riverdale said agreement had been "practically reached" as to how the cost would be apportioned. "There is no difficulty on that score," he declared.

Identity will be maintained as far as practical of fliers from the four countries given final training in Canada as the new empire air centre, it is learned. For instance, should they be placed in the Royal Air Force, they will be labelled as Canadian, British, Australian and New Zealand squadrons.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Épreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS C26803

Office of
The Prime Minister

Name of Publication [illegible]

Date [illegible]

Subject [illegible]

AGREE ON EMPIRE AIR COSTS DECLARES BRITISH DELEGATE

London and Canadian Delegates "Entirely Satisfied"— National Identity Kept

NO DIFFICULTIES

Special to The Star

Ottawa, Nov. 14.—British and Canadian delegates are "entirely satisfied with the progress being made" on the huge empire air training plan, it was announced in a joint communique issued last night.

For two hours late yesterday afternoon and another hour last evening, Lord Riverdale, chairman of the United Kingdom air mission, and Capt. Harold Balfour, British under-secretary of state for air in the United Kingdom, conferred with Prime Minister King and members of the dominion cabinet. At the close of the discussions the brief joint statement was issued.

"An announcement of the full details of the whole plan, financial and otherwise, will be forthcoming sometime next week," Lord Riverdale stated later. "Everything is running smoothly. When you are embarking on a scheme of this magnitude naturally there is a lot of final details to be worked out

"Conferences are going on all the time, with rapid progress being made. We have had a number of conferences with the Australian and New Zealand delegates as well and they have had conferences with the Canadians representatives. There have also been informal conferences at which representatives of the four countries have all participated."

Lord Riverdale said agreement had been "practically reached" as to how the cost would be apportioned. "There is no difficulty on that score," he declared.

Identity will be maintained as far as practical of fliers from the four countries given final training in Canada as the new empire air centre, it is learned. For instance, should they be placed in the Royal Air Force, they will be labelled as Canadian, British, Australian and New Zealand squadrons.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS

C268023

Office of
The Prime Minister

Name of Publication Ottawa Le Citizen

Date November 16, 1939

Subject Air Training

Working Agreement On Empire Air Force Plan Now Near Completion

"I Plan To Be Home By Christmas---There's Your Answer!" Declares Lord Riverdale When Questioned on Progress of Great Undertaking.

Negotiations Going On "Very Satisfactorily"

Great Britain and Dominions Are Reaching Understanding On Training Project in "Phenomenally Short Time."

Early completion of a final working agreement under which advanced training will be provided in Canada for air force personnel of Great Britain, Australia and New Zealand, was forecast last night by Lord Riverdale, head of the British Air Mission.

Home By Christmas

"I plan to be home by Christmas—there's your answer," Lord Riverdale said, when asked of the prospects of an early agreement.

Division of costs for the huge training scheme which involves construction of many air fields and purchase of hundreds of machines, is being worked out now, he said.

Reaching Agreement

"Negotiations are going on very satisfactorily. Through the help of the Royal Canadian Air Force we are reaching an agreement in a phenomenally short time.

"It takes a long time to prepare for war. In 1914 it took us six months. Now we are going to do it in three months."

No differences of opinion existed as between the contracting parties over sharing the costs, Lord Riverdale said.

"Anything Great Britain undertakes she will be ultimately responsible for. Great Britain will pay her share of the training scheme and there is no question and no difficulty over costs.

"Of course there must be discussions as to what we will send to Canada in kind in order to get away from the question of dollars and cents. We will supply machinery and aircraft for training purposes, and other goods.

"All these things have to be worked into the whole picture of costs as between the countries concerned and it takes time. But there has been no difficulty at all.

"Our negotiations have been perfectly businesslike and normal, and we have had excellent advice from the Canadian government. And that goes also for Australia and New Zealand."

For Long Period

Lord Riverdale said he was not in a position to discuss details of the cost-sharing plan at this moment. The scheme is for a long period, covering three years and three months in the initial planning.

Under the scheme being worked out, student airmen of Great Britain, Australia and New Zealand will come to Canada for their advanced training for service in actual warfare overseas.

It has been stated that provision would be arranged for turning out each year 25,000 trained pilots, observers, machine gunners and craftsmen required for maintaining and operating aircraft in the field.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R. D.T.

PRESS CLIPPINGS C268024 Office of The Prime Minister

Name of Publication Ottawa M. Citizen

Date November 16, 1939

Subject Air Training

Working Agreement On Empire Air Force Plan Now Near Completion

"I Plan To Be Home By Christmas—There's Your Answer!" Declares Lord Riverdale When Questioned on Progress of Great Undertaking.

Negotiations Going On "Very Satisfactorily"

Great Britain and Dominions Are Reaching Understanding On Training Project in "Phenomenally Short Time."

Early completion of a final working agreement under which advanced training will be provided in Canada for air force personnel of Great Britain, Australia and New Zealand, was forecast last night by Lord Riverdale, head of the British Air Mission.

Home By Christmas

"I plan to be home by Christmas—there's your answer," Lord Riverdale said, when asked of the prospects of an early agreement.

Division of costs for the huge training scheme which involves construction of many air fields and purchase of hundreds of machines, is being worked out now, he said.

Reaching Agreement

"Negotiations are going on very satisfactorily. Through the help of the Royal Canadian Air Force we are reaching an agreement in a phenomenally short time.

"It takes a long time to prepare for war. In 1914 it took us six months. Now we are going to do it in three months."

No differences of opinion existed as between the contracting parties over sharing the costs, Lord Riverdale said.

"Anything Great Britain undertakes she will be ultimately responsible for. Great Britain will pay her share of the training scheme and there is no question and no difficulty over costs.

"Of course there must be discussions as to what we will send to Canada in kind in order to get away from the question of dollars and cents. We will supply machinery and aircraft for training purposes, and other goods.

"All these things have to be worked into the whole picture of costs as between the countries concerned and it takes time. But there has been no difficulty at all.

"Our negotiations have been perfectly businesslike and normal, and we have had excellent advice from the Canadian government. And that goes also for Australia and New Zealand."

For Long Period

Lord Riverdale said he was not in a position to discuss details of the cost-sharing plan at this moment. The scheme is for a long period, covering three years and three months in the initial planning.

Under the scheme being worked out, student airmen of Great Britain, Australia and New Zealand will come to Canada for their advanced training for service in actual warfare overseas.

It has been stated that provision would be arranged for turning out each year 25,000 trained pilots, observers, machine gunners and craftsmen required for maintaining and operating aircraft in the field.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS

C 268025 Office of The Prime Minister

Name of Publication The M. Journal

Date November 16, 1939

Subject "Air Training Scheme" - Interview to the Press - Lord Riverdale.

Expect to Sign Air Agreement At Early Date

No Difficulty About Division of Costs But Details Require Much Work Says Riverdale

Early completion of final working agreement under which advanced training will be provided in Canada for air force personnel of Great Britain, Australia and New Zealand, was forecast Wednesday night by Lord Riverdale, head of the British Air Mission.

"I plan to be home by Christmas —there's your answer", Lord Riverdale said, when asked of the prospects of an early agreement.

Working Out Cost Division.

Division of costs for the huge training scheme which involves construction of many air fields and purchase of hundreds of machines, is being worked out now, he said.

"Negotiations are going on very satisfactorily. Through the help of the Royal Canadian Air Force we are reaching an agreement in a phenomenally short time.

"It takes a long time to prepare for war. In 1914 it took us six months. Now we are going to do it in three months."

No differences of opinion existed as between the contracting parties over sharing the costs, Lord Riverdale said. "Anything Great Britain undertakes she will be ultimately responsible for. Great Britain will pay her share of the training scheme and there is no question and no difficulty over costs.

"Of course there must be discussions as to what we will send to Canada in kind in order to get away from the question of dollars and cents. We will supply machinery and aircraft for training purposes, and other goods.

"All these things have to be worked into the whole picture of costs as between the countries concerned and it takes time. But there has been no difficulty at all.

"Our negotiations have been perfectly businesslike and normal, and we have had excellent advice from the Canadian Government.

Concluded on Back Page, Col. 6.

Expect to Sign Air Agreement Soon

Continued from Page One.

And that goes also for Australia and New Zealand."

Lord Riverdale said he was not in a position to discuss details of the cost-sharing plan at this moment. The scheme is for a long period, covering three years and three months in the initial planning.

The British mission has been in Ottawa since the first of October but the Australian and New Zealand missions came within the past fortnight.

Under the scheme being worked out, student airmen of Great Britain, Australia and New Zealand will come to Canada for their advanced training for service in actual warfare overseas.

It has been stated that provision would be arranged for turning out each year 25,000 trained pilots, observers, machine gunners and craftsmen required for maintaining and operating aircraft in the field.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS C 268027

Office of
The Prime Minister

Name of Publication The E. Journal

Date November 16, 1939

Subject "Air Training Scheme" - Interview to the Press - Lord Riverdale.

Expect to Sign Air Agreement At Early Date

No Difficulty About Division of Costs But Details Require Much Work Says Riverdale

Early completion of final working agreement under which advanced training will be provided in Canada for air force personnel of Great Britain, Australia and New Zealand, was forecast Wednesday night by Lord Riverdale, head of the British Air Mission.

"I plan to be home by Christmas —there's your answer", Lord Riverdale said, when asked of the prospects of an early agreement.

Working Out Cost Division.

Division of costs for the huge training scheme which involves construction of many air fields and purchase of hundreds of machines, is being worked out now, he said.

"Negotiations are going on very satisfactorily. Through the help of the Royal Canadian Air Force we are reaching an agreement in a phenomenally short time.

"It takes a long time to prepare for war. In 1914 it took us six months. Now we are going to do it in three months."

No differences of opinion existed as between the contracting parties over sharing the costs, Lord Riverdale said. "Anything Great Britain undertakes she will be ultimately responsible for. Great Britain will pay her share of the training scheme and there is no question and no difficulty over costs.

"Of course there must be discussions as to what we will send to Canada in kind in order to get away from the question of dollars and cents. We will supply machinery and aircraft for training purposes, and other goods.

"All these things have to be worked into the whole picture of costs as between the countries concerned and it takes time. But there has been no difficulty at all.

"Our negotiations have been perfectly businesslike and normal, and we have had excellent advice from the Canadian Government.

Concluded on Back Page, Col. 6.

Expect to Sign Air Agreement Soon

Continued from Page One.

And that goes also for Australia and New Zealand."

Lord Riverdale said he was not in a position to discuss details of the cost-sharing plan at this moment. The scheme is for a long period, covering three years and three months in the initial planning.

The British mission has been in Ottawa since the first of October but the Australian and New Zealand missions came within the past fortnight.

Under the scheme being worked out, student airmen of Great Britain, Australia and New Zealand will come to Canada for their advanced training for service in actual warfare overseas.

It has been stated that provision would be arranged for turning out each year 25,000 trained pilots, observers, machine gunners and craftsmen required for maintaining and operating aircraft in the field.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

DEPARTMENT OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS C268026

Ottawa, NOV 20 1939

To THE PRIME MINISTER

FOR INFORMATION

Based on Council decision and letter from Rahaie Affairs

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Épreuve illisible

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

12.

DEPARTMENT OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS C268026

Ottawa, NOV 20 1939

To THE PRIME MINISTER

FOR INFORMATION

Based on Council decision and letter from National Defence

REPEAT
REPETER

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Air Training.

JER/
S

C 268027

Secret

Important

Ottawa, November 18, 1939.

Dear Sir Gerald,-

May I refer to your letter, dated the 7th November, 1939, with regard to the application to Newfoundland of the Empire Air-Training Scheme.

The Canadian Government will be very glad to co-operate in any arrangement that the United Kingdom authorities may formulate, concerning the inclusion of personnel from Newfoundland, in their quota for the Empire Training Scheme.

It is assumed that the responsibility for their emoluments, effective and non-effective, including disability pensions, etc., will be the responsibility of the Government of the United Kingdom, under the same procedure as will be arranged for the pupils from the British Isles.

Yours sincerely,

O.D. SKELTON

Under-Secretary of State
for External Affairs.

The High Commissioner for the United Kingdom,
Earnscliffe,
Ottawa, Canada.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Air Training

PRESS CLIPPINGS C 268028 Office of The Prime Minister

Name of Publication Ottawa M. Journal

Date November 22, 1939

Subject "Air Scheme May well Prove Determining Factor in Outcome."

Air Scheme May Well Prove Determining Factor in Outcome

Captain Harold Balfour Warns About "Comfortable Thoughts" of Impending Internal Trouble in Germany

The Imperial air training scheme centred in Canada may well be the determining factor in successful outcome of present hostilities, Captain Harold Balfour, M.C., M.P., assured the Canadian Club at a luncheon meeting in the Chateau Laurier, Tuesday. Captain Balfour, Under Secretary of State for Air and Vice-President of the Air Council in the Government of the United Kingdom, is now attached to the British air mission in Ottawa.

Guests at the head table included His Excellency, the Governor General; Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Lord Riverdale, Count Robert de Dampierre, Air Marshal Sir Christopher Courtney, Baron Robert Silvercruys, Hon. Norman Rogers, Wallace R. Campbell, chairman of the War Supply Board; Commander Edson Sherwood, R.C.N., Major General A. G. L. McNaughton, Senator Raoul Dandurand, Air Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, Sir Shuldham Redfern, Captain J. Fergus Grant, Dr. Charles Camsell and Dr. Alex. Johnston, president of the club.

Immediate Effect.

Mere announcement of the air training program had an immediate effect in Germany, according to Captain Balfour, who went on to discuss the scope of Britain's war effort.

"We, like you, are determined to see this thing through, and we are united in our country as in our Empire, in our determination to achieve victory. It is clear this is not a war of our seeking, and that all nations that take part in it will be material losers thereby.

"This is a war in a cause above materialism. It is a war for right and justice."

In England it had been called an "exclusive" war—very hard to get into. Policy of the Government was to prepare for a long and arduous war, probably lasting for three years.

Captain Balfour voiced emphatic warning against "comfortable thoughts" of impending internal trouble in Germany, calling it wishful thinking.

It Is Dangerous.

"I submit to you it is dangerous to let such thoughts enter our minds, as they can have only one effect—to allow us to hedge, to reduce our efforts and to alter our plans."

Today the war front of battle was in the English countryside and in the English city. Petrol and coal had been rationed, and food was to be rationed. Taxation had mounted to unheard of levels. Yet scarcely a person was not facing cheerfully all they were called upon to face.

"It is an Englishman's right to grouse; we shall continue to exercise that right at home."

Captain Balfour, discussing criticism of the Ministry of Information, noted the immensity of its task, when policy was based on the assumption war would mean the immediate beginning of bombing raids on England.

"I do maintain my Government was entirely right in making preparations for an eventuality, even if it did not occur."

Diplomatic Contest.

So far the war had been largely a diplomatic contest, in a political phase, giving the British Government time to publish documents setting out events leading to war.

"Germany, during the first political phase made her great gamble—the Soviet pact—in an attempt to terrorize the Allies at the very outset."

Captain Balfour noted it was still undecided whether Germany had a friend or foe on her eastern frontier.

Germany's war wastage in aircraft and men in the Polish campaign was cited, as an indication of increasing weakness of the Nazi forces and growing strength of the Allied armies. Captain Balfour predicted beginning of the war's second phase, active large-scale military operations, but he could not say when or where such operations would start.

No one could tell whether Germany would violate neutral territory or rain bombs on British cities, but it was recalled Britain's resistance was never stronger in the last war than when London was subjected to Zeppelin attacks.

Cannot Under-rate Enemy.

Even better aircraft than the British planes now battling the German air arm were predicted, but Captain Balfour warned it would be a fatal mistake to underestimate the enemy strength or the bravery of their pilots.

"There are bound to be dark days ahead in this war, and there will likely be heavy casualties and much punishment. We shall attain eventual victory, but in achieving this we must be prepared for sombre passages.

"Our object in this war is to destroy Hitlerism and Nazi-ism forever. But I cannot agree that our war is only against Hitlerism and Nazi-ism. I cannot agree that the German people can be absolved from responsibility for accepting Nazi doctrine and Nazi rule.

"It is absurd to say all Germans are bad. Some are cruel and dominating, others are weak in allowing themselves to be dominated. Both are dangerous to the rest of the world.'

"We are free, we are united and unbeatable."

Captain Balfour was introduced and thanked by Dr. Johnston, who presided.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS C 266[illegible]

Office of
The Prime Minister

Name of Publication Ottawa E. Journal

Date November 22, 1939

Subject "Air Scheme May well Prove Determining Factor in Outcome."

Air Scheme May Well Prove Determining Factor in Outcome

Captain Harold Balfour Warns About "Comfortable Thoughts" of Impending Internal Trouble in Germany

The Imperial air training scheme centred in Canada may well be the determining factor in successful outcome of present hostilities, Captain Harold Balfour, M.C., M.P., assured the Canadian Club at a luncheon meeting in the Chateau Laurier, Tuesday. Captain Balfour, Under Secretary of State for Air and Vice-President of the Air Council in the Government of the United Kingdom, is now attached to the British air mission in Ottawa.

Guests at the head table included His Excellency, the Governor General; Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Lord Riverdale, Count Robert de Dampierre, Air Marshal Sir Christopher Courtney, Baron Robert Silvercruys, Hon. Norman Rogers, Wallace R. Campbell, chairman of the War Supply Board; Commander Edson Sherwood, R.C.N., Major General A. G. L. McNaughton, Senator Raoul Dandurand, Air Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, Sir Shuldham Redfern, Captain J. Fergus Grant, Dr. Charles Camsell and Dr. Alex. Johnston, president of the club.

Immediate Effect.

Mere announcement of the air training program had an immediate effect in Germany, according to Captain Balfour, who went on to discuss the scope of Britain's war effort.

"We, like you, are determined to see this thing through, and we are united in our country as in our Empire, in our determination to achieve victory. It is clear this is not a war of our seeking, and that all nations that take part in it will be material losers thereby.

"This is a war in a cause above materialism. It is a war for right and justice."

In England it had been called an "exclusive" war—very hard to get into. Policy of the Government was to prepare for a long and arduous war, probably lasting for three years.

Captain Balfour voiced emphatic warning against "comfortable thoughts" of impending internal trouble in Germany, calling it wishful thinking.

It Is Dangerous.

"I submit to you it is dangerous to let such thoughts enter our minds, as they can have only one effect—to allow us to hedge, to reduce our efforts and to alter our plans."

Today the war front of battle was in the English countryside and in the English city. Petrol and coal had been rationed, and food was to be rationed. Taxation had mounted to unheard of levels. Yet scarcely a person was not facing cheerfully all they were called upon to face.

"It is an Englishman's right to grouse; we shall continue to exercise that right at home."

Captain Balfour, discussing criticism of the Ministry of Information, noted the immensity of its task, when policy was based on the assumption war would mean the immediate beginning of bombing raids on England.

"I do maintain my Government was entirely right in making preparations for an eventuality, even if it did not occur."

Diplomatic Contest.

So far the war had been largely a diplomatic contest, in a political phase, giving the British Government time to publish documents setting out events leading to war.

"Germany, during the first political phase made her great gamble—the Soviet pact—in an attempt to terrorize the Allies at the very outset."

Captain Balfour noted it was still undecided whether Germany had a friend or foe on her eastern frontier.

Germany's war wastage in aircraft and men in the Polish campaign was cited, as an indication of increasing weakness of the Nazi forces and growing strength of the Allied armies. Captain Balfour predicted beginning of the war's second phase, active large-scale military operations, but he could not say when or where such operations would start.

No one could tell whether Germany would violate neutral territory or rain bombs on British cities, but it was recalled Britain's resistance was never stronger in the last war than when London was subjected to Zeppelin attacks.

Cannot Under-rate Enemy.

Even better aircraft than the British planes now battling the German air arm were predicted, but Captain Balfour warned it would be a fatal mistake to underestimate the enemy strength or the bravery of their pilots.

"There are bound to be dark days ahead in this war, and there will likely be heavy casualties and much punishment. We shall attain eventual victory, but in achieving this we must be prepared for sombre passages.

"Our object in this war is to destroy Hitlerism and Nazi-ism forever. But I cannot agree that our war is only against Hitlerism and Nazi-ism. I cannot agree that the German people can be absolved from responsibility for accepting Nazi doctrine and Nazi rule.

"It is absurd to say all Germans are bad. Some are cruel and dominating, others are weak in allowing themselves to be dominated. Both are dangerous to the rest of the world.

"We are free, we are united and unbeatable."

Captain Balfour was introduced and thanked by Dr. Johnston, who presided.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Air Training

R.

TELEGRAM C268029

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

CODE LONDON, November 23rd, 1939.

No. 689.

No. 689. Following from Crerar to Rogers, Begins:

Please cable fully as soon as possible present position of negotiations on Air Training Scheme. Have been asked to urge our Government proceed immediately with preparatory work considered urgent pending initialling of agreement reached as any avoidable delay in getting on with such work may have serious results. When is agreement likely to be initialled. Ends.

Read Mills

MASSEY

Rec'd Ottawa: 5.35 P.M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268030 R. . . file re air training

MEMORANDUM. 020805

Copies being sent the three Ministers of the U.K. High Commr.

O.D.

Copy of your Saturday telegram to Mr Cresar will Ottawa, NOV 27. 19 follow

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268031

"R"

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA.

TO: THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA, LONDON.

IMPORTANT

SECRET

CYPHER

Ottawa, November 25, 1939.

UNNUMBERED

Following for Mr. Crerar, Begins:

1. Negotiations for air training have been proceeding continuously and in spite of difficulty created by sudden Australian change of position prospects are good for early agreement on terms. Last week we informed British mission that our concurrence would be subject to two conditions, first that we should receive from the United Kingdom Government an assurance, which we would be free to make public if considered desirable, that Air Training scheme had preference or priority over any defence action by Canada other than existing commitments and second that discussions now taking place in London in which you would be joined by Towers on question of economic war time relations should lead to mutual and reasonably satisfying agreement. The British Mission agreed to recommend their Government to accept these stipulations.

2. Through the United Kingdom High Commissioner we have now been informed that his Government and the Mission here desire us to sign agreement on understanding that its operation will be made subject to settlement between the two Governments later of the matters covered in our two conditions. The reasons advanced are desire of members of various missions to return home, delay in settlement of financial questions owing to postponement of Towers departure, and fact that British War Cabinet has not yet considered first condition.

3. Whole Cabinet have taken view that no agreement could be made until we had a definite answer from the

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

United Kingdom on these two important points. We are anxious to expedite conclusion of agreement, but cannot sign anything until answer is received from the United Kingdom.

4. I would like you to impress this on British Government. Might also add presence of Towers was only suggested as further means of impressing upon British Government the financial position which had already been fully explained in our direct telegrams and your personal representations. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

C 268033

OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER
FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM.
Earnscliffe,
OTTAWA.

SECRET & IMMEDIATE.

25th November, 1939.

My dear Prime Minister,

The negotiations on the subject of the Empire Air Training Scheme have now reached the stage where the United Kingdom representatives have felt it desirable to seek final instructions from the Government of the United Kingdom who have throughout been kept fully apprised of the progress made.

2. The United Kingdom representatives have taken into full consideration the desirability on all grounds of an agreement being reached, at any rate in principle, upon the main outlines of the Scheme, with all possible speed, and they have also had regard to the importance of an early public pronouncement upon the subject.

3. The United Kingdom representatives have felt justified in submitting the position, as now reached, to the United Kingdom Government with a recommendation that the progress now made is such as to justify receiving their agreement in principle.

4. At the same time the United Kingdom representatives have been careful to keep before the mind of the United Kingdom Government the fact that, at the meeting of the United Kingdom delegates with the representatives of the Canadian Government on the 14th November, the Canadian Government's agreement to a basis for the elaboration of an Empire Air Training Scheme was stated to be dependent on the two/

The Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, M.P.,
Prime Minister of Canada,
OTTAWA.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268034

two following considerations

(a) that the Canadian Government should receive an assurance, which they would be at liberty to announce if they so wished, that in the opinion of the United Kingdom War Cabinet the Empire Air Training Scheme had preference over any other commitments in Canada's war efforts, other than those already entered into:

(b) that the financial discussions now taking place in London with Mr. Crerar, who is to be joined by the Governor of the Bank of Canada, on the question of economic war time relations should lead to a mutually and reasonably satisfying agreement.

5. Bearing in mind all these matters the United Kingdom representatives were in further consultation with the United Kingdom Government on the 24th November. As the result of this consultation I am now able to say that the United Kingdom representatives have been authorised to initial a memorandum of agreement covering the broad outlines of an Empire Air Training Scheme.

6. The United Kingdom representatives have also received the instructions of the United Kingdom Government upon the two matters reserved by the Canadian Government and referred to in paragraph 4 above.

7. As regards point (a) the United Kingdom representatives are authorised to propose, for the consideration of the Canadian Government, that, at the time of initialling the memorandum of agreement, a letter should be addressed to the Canadian Government on their behalf, stating that the operation of the agreement is subject to consideration by the Canadian Government and by the United Kingdom War Cabinet, and/

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

and to subsequent agreement thereon between the two Governments. In such further consideration the views expressed by the Canadian Government would naturally be given the fullest possible weight.

8. As regards point (b) the United Kingdom representatives are authorized to propose that a similar letter should be simultaneously addressed to the Canadian Government stating that the operation of the agreement is subject to the settlement between the two Governments of comprehensive financial questions, including that arising from the purchase of wheat from Canada, adding that these matters are at present under discussion in London with the Canadian Minister of Mines and Resources who is shortly to be joined by the Governor of the Bank of Canada.

9. The United Kingdom representatives earnestly hope that the proposals outlined in the present letter will commend themselves to the Canadian Government.

10. In that event the question of some form of publicity will naturally arise. The United Kingdom Government feel sure that the Canadian Government will agree that no details of any agreement reached between the Governments concerned should be published until after the matters referred to in paragraph 4 above have been arranged between the Canadian Government and the United Kingdom Government.

11. The United Kingdom Government would, however, be entirely agreeable to an announcement being made, at the time of initialling the memorandum of agreement, to the effect that an agreement had been reached, initialled, and referred to the/

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

the respective Governments for final approval. The details and synchronisation of such an announcement could be settled separately.

12. I shall be grateful to learn the views of the Canadian Government on the foregoing matters at the earliest possible moment.

Yours sincerely,

W. Lyon Mackenzie King.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268037

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

MK/EH

C O N F I D E N T I A L

(Dictated by the Prime Minister) November 25, 1939 C268038

RE: AIR TRAINING SCHEME

At 11.30 this morning, Sir Gerald Campbell came to see me by appointment at Kingsmere. He went over verbally what appears in the attached communication, a copy of which was left with Dr. Skelton this morning and the original of which he gave me in the course of the interview.

Having outlined the contents of the communication, he went on to express regret that Towers had not found it possible to reach England before this; that it was not Towers' fault; there had been difficulties over the plane, but that this made it impossible for any settlement on financial matters to be reached at once. That the British Government were most anxious to have an agreement initialled before Australians and New Zealanders left; that their leaving without this being done might create an impression that there had been differences of views which were responsible for their leaving so soon. He went on to say that Balfour and Riverdale had succeeded in having Fairbairn remain over till Monday night. They had succeeded in this by offering him some reservations already made by the British in a plane that was to go on Wednesday, but he wanted to leave Monday night so as to be sure to be in plenty of time for the plane on Wednesday.

Sir Gerald then went on to say that Saunders too had received word from his government to hurry along. That he would be leaving probably on Tuesday. He followed this up by saying that he, Sir Gerald, had been talking the matter over with Balfour and thought Balfour should go on a plane on Wednesday so as to discuss the matters with the British Government. That he would be in a position to take up the questions, with them, that were outstanding and help to reach a settlement. That Lord Riverdale would remain.

In the course of his remarks, Sir Gerald also said that he thought Australians had been a little put out that I had not invited them and New Zealanders to discuss matters with the British Mission and our government, sooner than we did, which meant following after a further conference, regarding details, with the British Mission.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

I took up each of these points in turn in replying to Sir Gerald. First, as to the members of the different Missions leaving. I said on our part, we were somewhat surprised that more consideration had not been shown Canada by the other Missions in helping to meet the difficulties of the situation with which she was faced, by leaving in the manner in which he was indicating they were about to leave. In the first place, neither Australians nor New Zealanders nor any member of the British Mission that I knew of, had asked us whether it would inconvenience us or prove embarrassing to us, if any members of the Mission left before the agreements were initialled. That I thought Australia and New Zealand would do whatever the British Government wished in the matter of delaying a day or two, and that, of course, Captain Balfour could regulate his own actions. That I was amazed, last night, when listening to Fairbairn's broadcast, to hear him say that Australia had agreed to do all that was suggested at the outset, and even to go further and indicate that they were doing something over and above that, whereas he, Sir Gerald, knew the whole negotiations had had to be revised twice because of the objections raised by Australia, and that what these obligations involved in the way of additional obligations to Canada had not apparently been considered, or, if considered, any attention paid to consideration.

I said that so far as any of the different Missions leaving before any initialling of the agreement took place, I thought all of that could be avoided by the British Government itself agreeing at once to the conditions set forth, and which had been recommended to them by their own Mission. They had had the situation before them now for many weeks. They understood it and could as well determine the matter at once as some weeks later if they really intended to meet it in the end. If they did not intend to meet the conditions in the end, I did not feel we could defend our position before Parliament and the Canadian people in making vast financial commitments without regard to the means by which they were subsequently to be met.

As to Towers, I said I thought it was most unfair for Sir Gerald or members of the British Mission or the British Government to suggest for a moment that

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

the matter could not be settled because of his delay in getting across. That, as a matter of fact, it did not require Towers' presence at all in England to have the matter settled. It was really to oblige the British Mission in helping to impress upon the financial authorities of the British Government the truth of Canada's position as the Mission itself here had seen it; that, at great sacrifice to all of us and to himself we had asked Towers to take on this effort of helping to explain Canada's financial position to the British authorities. That Towers, going at this time, placed an increasing burden upon Ralston, as Minister of Finance, who already was heavily burdened with questions on which he would wish to counsel with Towers. That it placed a heavy burden on officials of the Bank of Canada, who, as he knew, had heavy exchange problems to cope with and, above all, added heavily to Towers own duties and obligations at a moment when, if anything, he was entitled to some respite from them.

I pointed out that the British Government had the word of our Department of Finance as to what we could and could not do, and what we need not to have done in order to assume additional obligations, which we were only too willing to undertake if we could see our way thereto. That Crerar was there to help to make our position clear. That Massey, our High Commissioner, had presented the same, and that the real purpose of Towers going was really to have the financial authorities realize that, if they could not accept the representations of the government through the Finance Department, through Crerar, as representing the Cabinet, and through Massey, as High Commissioner, that perhaps they would accept the view of the Governor of the Bank of Canada. I added that this was in addition to accepting the view of their own Missions as its members had confessed they had come to see them and realized what they were.

I said to Sir Gerald that if the British Government, in the matter of the conditions set forth, were not prepared to accept the views of our Government, they might perhaps be prepared to accept the recommendation of their own Mission. That I understood from him, and from his letter, that the Mission itself had recommended that the course suggested should be followed.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268041

Sir Gerald spoke about the acceptance in principle of an agreement. I told him that we had accepted the principle of a training agreement before the Missions had left for Canada; that the whole purpose of their being here was the working out of the terms. I then asked what he understood by principle of the agreement to be further decided. He said that they would include questions of numbers, financial conditions, etc. I said, precisely, financial conditions - that is the one thing we are trying to settle so that we can initial an agreement; that I did not see how we could initial any agreement until we had this point settled.

I said to Sir Gerald that he knew very well that I had taken strong exception to the view that the Cabinet's decision depended upon the wish or the view of any one man. That I had always decried the idea of a one-man government. That I had an immediate loyalty to my colleagues, and an equal loyalty to the Canadian people in regard to all obligations we were placing upon them and that I did not intend to betray that loyalty. I said I might say to him quite frankly that the Cabinet had considered this matter very fully at its meeting on Thursday and that it had been there agreed that we would use all expedition in getting messages across but that we must have direct understanding between the British Government and ourselves on the two conditions mentioned before we could sign any agreement. That that was simply carrying out the undertaking reached in my office several days ago, when part of the Cabinet met Lord Riverdale, Capt. Balfour, and himself. I said I might tell him frankly that the entire Cabinet were dismayed when they learned about the possible immediate departure of Fairbairn and of the additional demands which appeared to be coming up anew prior to any final settlement being reached.

I said it was quite openly stated that the mistake we had made was not in going ahead with our own training scheme ourselves, rather than to have ourselves placed in to a false position both as regards delays, contributions, etc., through the way in which matters appeared to be developing at this particular time. I said I doubted very much whether the British Government or the British Mission had appreciated what an extra load had been imposed upon our ministers, in particular the Ministers of Finance, Defence, and Transport, and upon the Public Service immediately concerned by the time and

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268042

attention we had all been giving to the work of the Mission, which was over and above all the work they had to assume responsibility for in connection with Canada's own war effort at this time. That I thought the ministers and the officials had been brought almost to the breaking point by the efforts they had put forward to assist the Missions, but, apparently, the only thanks they were now receiving was that pressure was being put on in the way it was to have some agreement initialled before its terms were finally agreed upon.

In reply to what Sir Gerald Campbell had said as to the Australians being put out at not being invited sooner to meet my colleagues and myself, along with the British Mission, I said there could not be any ground for any feeling of slight or occasion for disappointment in that regard. That I had, the minute I saw Fairbairn after his arrival, and later Saunders, said to each of them that I regretted, in order to get matters under way, we had found it necessary to go ahead and meet the British Mission and get under way with our agreement with them before they, the Australians and New Zealanders, had arrived. We had mentioned, however, the matter to the British Mission before the Australians and New Zealanders arrived, and we were agreed that the British Mission would wish to meet with the Australians and with the New Zealanders before we met with them and take up with them, and as they had taken up with us, the matter of the terms of the agreements to be worked out. That once preliminaries had been worked out between the different governments and the British Government, it had been understood that all Missions would meet together for the purpose, so to speak, of confirming the arrangement as each had understood it separately and as all were prepared to confirm it collectively. That, as he would recall, the only reason it was suggested there should be a meeting with the British delegates again prior to the meeting of all Missions combined was that we wished to be sure, before all meeting together, that there was no misunderstanding as between the British Government and ours as to our particular understanding and terms, just as we knew they would wish to have no misunderstanding between themselves and the British Mission at the time we might all be meeting together.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

As to initialling any agreement at this time, I said we were ready to initial today, tomorrow, or any day, once we received word from the British Government that they were prepared to accept the recommendation of the British Mission as understood many days ago, but that all we asked was to be in the same position as Australia and New Zealand.

Apparently, from what Fairbairn had said over the radio, there was a complete understanding between the British Government and the Australian as to what they were agreed to do. I gathered from Sir Gerald himself that there had been no misunderstanding at any time between the New Zealand government and the British government as to what their mutual obligations were; that all we wished was to be in the same position as New Zealand and Australia before we initialled any agreement.

I said to Sir Gerald that we knew in addition that the British Government were prepared to stand behind the New Zealand government financially to enable them to perform their part, and we understood the same might be the case with regard to the Australian government. We were not asking the British government to stand behind us in meeting our part of the undertaking. On the other hand, we felt we could not give that undertaking until we were in a position ourselves to see how we were going to be able to meet it, and that the British government had known from the beginning that that would not be possible until the terms we had spoken of were met.

I said that he, Sir Gerald, had said to me he was sorry the British government could not get matters settled and understand our position over there. That Lord Riverdale had said the same; that he was being embarrassed. That Balfour had said the same to me. That Greenly had said the same. That they were all admitting to us here that they could not understand why the British government should not settle definitely these matters of credit, contract, etc., on which we could base our undertaking. Sir Gerald said that of course they had many problems there and great difficulties. I said that we equally had great problems here and difficulties.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268044

He said he thought it was a matter of their several departments. I said I regarded it as a matter of Cabinet policy; that all that was necessary was for the War Cabinet to authorize, between now and Monday, agreement to these two clauses, and we would then be in a position to set forth the terms of agreement on which we were ready to go ahead. I said a good many of us felt, not only surprised, but hurt; that, in the endeavour to do all we could to help the British Government in this great scheme. matters should be so construed at this stage as to try and throw on to us the onus for delays, which we had done everything possible to avoid, and for which we were not responsible, and to leave us before our own Parliament and the country in the position where we would be justly liable to censure, if we incurred obligations without seeing how we were going to find it possible to meet them.

I said to Sir Gerald that Fairbairn's statement last night, about having matters settled so far as Australia was concerned, and what he had told me about New Zealand having the same belief, made the matter of initialling of any joint agreement, from our point of view, quite secondary. That, evidently, there was the equivalent to an initialling and an understanding between the British Government, Australia, and New Zealand, and that all we asked was a like degree of confirmation of agreement between ourselves and the British Government. I added that our Parliament would be meeting now in a few weeks and that I could not afford the risk of being asked about the agreement when Parliament met and not being in a position to state the basis or the terms on which it had been made. That if the British Government intended to meet our conditions, which now had become the recommendation of their own Mission, they could do so at any meeting of the War Cabinet as well as at some months hence. That we were ready to agree to initial an agreement the moment these matters were settled, but that he would have to tell his Government, until they were settled, I could not alter the position which our Cabinet had agreed was the only one on which we would be prepared to initial an agreement.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

I then said to Sir Gerald there was one other matter which I thought would have to be understood before any agreement could be signed, if ~~it were,~~ there was doubt in the minds of ~~everyone~~ one concerning it, and that was as to administration of the scheme so far as training of Canadian airmen were concerned. Sir Gerald said that he did not think there was possibility of any misunderstanding on this; that he had discussed the matter with both Lord Riverdale and Captain Balfour, and had said from the start that administration would have to be under the Canadian Department of Defence. That he did not see how it could be otherwise. I told him that I could not see how it could be otherwise; that the position was much the same as that of Canadian forces in Great Britain. That we could not undertake to take responsibility here for operations in Britain. Similarly, our government would have to take responsibility for operations in Canada.

In discussing the matter of principle of the air training scheme, Sir Gerald did not raise the point which I myself had detected in looking at the communication received from him, namely, that the latter was so worded as to indicate principle of agreement with respect to operation as distinguished from agreement as to air training scheme. He put the matter as indicated above on the basis of numbers, finances, etc. which, of course, is not a principle but the details which result from acceptance of a principle and which represent not the principle but the scheme itself. Sir Gerald did not raise this point, and I, myself, did not raise it.

Before leaving, Sir Gerald said he was sorry that I felt about the matter as I did. I said to him that I did not see why he was sorry I felt about the matter as I did; that I thought the true presentation of the situation would be that he might feel sorry that the British Government were unable to meet the recommendations of their own Mission, and to see matters as he, himself, saw them. He then said he was sorry the situation was what it is at the moment. I said I could agree with that, but that I felt quite clear in my own mind as to there being no responsibility on our government for any delays or willingness to do what was obviously fair to

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

all concerned.

He then said he would have to see Riverdale and Balfour and see what he could do. I told him that he must make it plain to them and to the British Government that I would not, myself, make any decision on the matter of initialling the agreement until there was time for me to meet with my colleagues, and have the matter approved by them. That the necessity for the whole Cabinet considering the matter would not arise if the conditions agreed to and explained at Thursday's meeting of the Cabinet were met.

I stressed again that there was no need of waiting for Towers' arrival in London to settle that aspect. That if Balfour felt that it would require his personal explanation to get the matter cleared up, that was, of course, for him to decide.

In the course of our conversation, I spoke twice of the responsibility the government had to Parliament and through Parliament, to the people. I said I thought Ralston's statement last night would give the people a pretty clear understanding of the extent of obligations we had already assumed, and they would be quick to realize why we could not enter into indefinite commitments or taking on obligations of present scheme without having some assurance which we would be able to give to Parliament and the country that this was regarded as more important than anything which might subsequently be requested, and also that we had settled the financial matters on which our ability to carry out our part in the undertaking was necessarily based. That if the plan could not go through because of our unwillingness to initial an agreement without these understandings being reached, we would just have to give the explanation to Parliament and to the people. That I knew the Canadian people well enough to know what their attitude would be to the whole matter when fully explained; that I thought they had sufficient trust in my loyalty and integrity to know that my action in a matter of this kind would be based on what I felt was owing to our own people and our own country in the effort it was putting forth at this time.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

When Sir Gerald mentioned that there might be misunderstandings about Fairbairn and others leaving before an agreement was initialled, I said to him that I thought the British Government could avoid anything of the kind by requesting these gentlemen to remain until they had had time themselves to settle the points that we had raised, but that if they were unable to do this, I thought we would just have to let the people themselves know exactly why it had not been possible to initial an agreement all around, and that this, of course, we would be prepared to make clear if the necessity arose.

Sir Gerald spoke as he was going away about his own difficulties and the way in which the Britigh Government pressed him. I told him I thought that was unnecessary and unfair; that I saw no reason why they should not communicate in despatches direct to our government; that I would like him to understand and also to make perfectly clear to the British Government that I could not make decisions myself without a chance of conferring with my colleagues concerning them, and did not wish to depart from that practice. To please keep this in mind in anticipating situations that might from time to time arise.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA C 268048

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS, LONDON.

IMPORTANT

SECRET

CYPHER

NO. 118.

OTTAWA, November 27th, 1939.

Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister, Begins:

Discussions regarding Air Training Scheme have been proceeding favourably but we were not in a position to initial the agreement today as suggested. After consideration by the several Air Training Delegations today it was, however, agreed to make the following announcement which will appear in tomorrow's press:

"The Missions and Committees representing the Governments of the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and Canada have completed their discussions with regard to the joint Air Training Scheme. They have worked out a basis of agreement which is now being referred to their respective Governments for decision."

With reference to your telegram of today I shall reply after consultation with colleagues tomorrow. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

(Corrected Copy)

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

TELEGRAM

C 268049

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON, November 27th, 1939.

MOST IMMEDIATE

SECRET

CYPHER

No. 111

file re

No. 111. Secret. Most Immediate. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister, Begins:

As I understand the full reports which have reached me from Air Mission now at Ottawa we are within sight of agreement on Air Training Scheme which, with modifications now being made to meet points most recently raised by Australian and New Zealand delegations, retains its cooperative character as a Scheme of most far reaching importance. We are grateful for all that you and your Ministers have done to ensure success of these negotiations and we also appreciate greatly the cooperation extended to Mr. Osborne in the financial discussions which have proceeded the same time on wider aspects of our war-time economic relations. These we hope to bring to a mutually satisfactory conclusion as soon as possible after Mr. Graham Towers has joined Mr. Crerar here.

2. I fully understand that contribution from Canada which Draft Scheme contemplates has been proposed subject to these financial discussions leading to a mutually and reasonably satisfying agreement and, given the good will which exists on both sides, there is no reason to suppose that such an agreement will not be reached.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

TELEGRAM

C 268030

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON,

3. I understand that, before initialling the agreement, you wish to have an assurance from us that the Canadian Government's views as to preference of effort are primarily for themselves to decide and that we would accept their decision in that spirit. I have no hesitation in giving this assurance as I entirely agree that it is for Canada to decide

NO

Must be passed post haste — Hon Ministers will be considered — or many friends to anything that may be subsequently put forward by Mr Gouk —

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

TELEGRAM

C268051

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON,

on priority of her effort and therefore it could not think of interfering in it whatever our own opinions might be.

4. I should explain that we ourselves have attached the highest priority to this training scheme, as indeed to our air effort as a whole, which we believe may be a decisive factor in the war. If the Canadian Government decided to contribute to the scheme on the scale contemplated, their policy will be in the closest correspondence with our own. But we should not have liked to emphasize the priority of the training scheme lest it should have embarrassing effects on our relations with the French who are pressing us strongly to increase our effort on land.

5. I hope that what I have said will remove any misapprehensions which may exist as to the extent Canada would be committed by the initialling of the air training agreement before the Australian and New Zealand delegates leave Ottawa. In the circumstances I should like to appeal to you to agree to initial the agreement with us so that we may now take this essential step forward in our joint war effort. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R. "R" Ans T.

file re

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA.
TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS, LONDON.

C 268032

Telegram No. 120

SECRET

CYPHER

IMMEDIATE

Ottawa, November 28th, 1939.

Your telegram No. 111. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister, Begins:

1. I am much obliged by your observations on the two points which it was indicated the Canadian Government regarded as an integral part of an agreement on the joint air training scheme.

2. The position of the Government of the United Kingdom as indicated in your telegram and in communications from the United Kingdom High Commissioner has been considered by our Cabinet today.

3. As regards the necessity which we have been emphasizing for some weeks of reaching conclusions on the general financial and economic requirements before it could be determined how the air training scheme would fit into the arrangements, we have noted your conclusion that there is no reason to suppose that a mutually and reasonably satisfying agreement will not be reached.

4. As regards the question of priority of military efforts, there appears to be some misunderstanding of our position. Your telegram indicates that your Government understands that what is desired is an assurance that the Canadian Government's views as to preference of effort are primarily for ourselves to decide. We of course recognize that we, like the other Governments of the Commonwealth, must assume the primary responsibility for the nature and extent of the contribution we are to make to the joint war effort. We also believe, however, that it is essential to consult with our associates in the conflict, and it was for this purpose that from the outset we requested the opinion particularly of the Government of the United Kingdom as to what would be the most effective form

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268053

our effort could take, and as far as conditions permitted, we have adopted the measures proposed.

5. After a programme largely based on the recommendations of the United Kingdom Government had been drawn up and was being put into force, your telegram of September 26th was received suggesting as an addition to the programme the air training scheme as being of vital and decisive importance. In our reply we indicated that we agreed that Canadian co-operation in this scheme would be particularly appropriate and probably the most effective military co-operation which Canada could furnish, and we would, therefore, be prepared to accept the scheme in principle and in the light of the scheme to review the plans already made for military and economic co-operation. We have on several occasions since indicated our view that an essential factor in our acceptance of the air training scheme would be an indication by the United Kingdom Government of its view that the proposed effort was the most essential military action that Canada could take. On November 14th at a meeting between the War Committee of the Cabinet and Captain Balfour and Lord Riverdale it was stated that as it was on the strong representations of the United Kingdom as to the vital necessity and decisive effect of this project that we had agreed in principle to undertake so great a task, we considered it essential to the agreement which we hoped to be able to reach that the United Kingdom Government would be prepared to have it made known that considering present and future requirements they felt that participation in the Air Training Scheme would provide more effective assistance than any other form of co-operation which Canada could give. It was entirely understood by the United Kingdom representatives that this was an essential factor in our concurrence in the scheme.

6. With regard to the possibility of difficulty with France, to which reference is made in your telegram, I may add that we had not intended to suggest that the United Kingdom should indicate in the statement the order of preference to be attached to its own war efforts.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

7. The question of administration and also the question of identity and command of formations and units in the field have been discussed by the Minister of National Defence with Captain Balfour and we have every reason to believe that agreement will be reached on these points. On agreement being reached as to these points and as to the statement as to participation in the scheme providing most effective form of our co-operation, the Minister feels that he will be in a position to recommend our acceptance of the agreement. Ends. Message ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

268035

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS OTTAWA

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS LONDON.

Ottawa, 28 November, 1939

Telegram No.

Secret

Cypher

Immediate.

7 other copies

Your telegram No. 111. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister. Begins.

I am much obliged by your observations on the two points which it was indicated the Canadian Government regarded as an integral part of an agreement on the joint air training scheme.

The position of the Government of the United Kingdom as indicated in your telegram and in communications from the United Kingdom High Commissioner have been considered by our Cabinet today.

As regards the necessity which we have been emphasizing for some weeks of reaching conclusions on the general financial and economic requirements before it could be determined how the air training scheme would fit into the arrangements, we have noted your conclusion that there is no reason to suppose that a mutually and reasonably satisfying agreement will not be reached.

As regards the question of priority of military efforts, there appears to be some misunderstanding of our position. Your telegram indicates that your Government understands that what is desired is an assurance that the Canadian Government's views as to preference of effort are primarily for ourselves to decide. We of course recognize that we, like the other Governments of the Commonwealth, must assume the primary responsibility for the nature and extent of the contribution to be made to the joint war effort. We also believe, however, that it is essential to consult with our associates in the conflict, and it was for this purpose that from the outset we requested the opinion particularly of the Government of the United Kingdom as to what would be the most effective form our effort could take, and as far as conditions permitted, we have adopted the measures proposed.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268056

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COPY

C 268057

S E C R E T

MEMORANDUM FOR UNITED KINGDOM MISSION PRESENTED ON BEHALF OF AUSTRALIAN MISSION AND SUBMITTED TO CANADIAN SUB-COMMITTEE ON NOVEMBER 22, 1939.

In the original proposal for an Empire Air Training plan to train annually 20,000 pilots and 30,000 aircrew personnel, it was proposed by the United Kingdom that four ninths of the personnel should be trained in the United Kingdom by the United Kingdom, and the remaining five ninths of the personnel should receive its service training in Canada. The Canadian Government should undertake to produce 48% of the personnel and bear 48% of the residuary cost of the scheme after allowing for contributions by the United Kingdom; that Australia should similarly undertake to produce 40% of the personnel and bear 40% of the residual cost; and that New Zealand should undertake to produce 12% of the personnel and bear 12% of the residual cost. This allotted to Australia and New Zealand a considerably greater proportion than their share on a population basis. On behalf of the Australian Government I pointed this out immediately to the United Kingdom Mission, but said that Australia would examine the position carefully and see if it was physically possible for it to undertake this high proportion of the scheme. The Australian Government has now reviewed the position and has decided that it is not possible for Australia to produce more than its population proportion of the pilots and aircrews that the United Kingdom has suggested that the three Dominions should produce and train: But although the task of raising in three years from a small community of seven millions even its proportion computed on a population basis, namely 26,000 personnel of the high standard required is a colossal one, Australia is prepared to attempt it.

To lessen the dollar exchange difficulty and to reduce somewhat Canada's problem of producing ground personnel and for various other reasons, Australia has decided that of the share it is prepared to bear, it will undertake to completely train seven ninths in Australia, sending two ninths to Canada for service training. In effect Australia will undertake to set up nine elementary pilot training schools and seven service pilot training schools in Australia, and a similar proportion of schools for observers and air gunners and will send the personnel for two service training schools to Canada, and a corresponding number of observers and air gunners. Australia is prepared to undertake this proportion of pilot and aircrew training in Canada on the general terms and conditions set out in a draft memorandum that was submitted by the United Kingdom Mission after arriving at more or less agreement with the Canadian Cabinet on the share Canada could do, with the exception that Australia

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

contends that the cost of transport of Australian and New Zealand personnel to Canada be included in the costs of Canadian training which are to be borne by the respective Governments in proportion approximately to numbers trained.

The Australian Government wishes as far as possible for Australian personnel to retain its Australian identity on joining the Royal Air Force; to be grouped as far as possible into squadrons which will bear the name of "Australia", and also to wear some indication on their uniforms of their Australian identity. Also as far as is practicable Australian regular officers will, on exchange with Royal Air Force Officers, command Australian units. Although Australia wishes this to be done to the greatest extent practicable, it will not insist on anything that makes organization difficult.

Australia undertakes the financial burden of the Canadian training on the assumption that the United Kingdom will help it to overcome the dollar exchange problem, as owing to Australia's adverse trade balance with Canada and the United States, it is impossible for Australia to produce any Canadian dollars.

Australia will undertake the proportion of training suggested above in Australia on the assumption that the United Kingdom will give to Australia all the assistance in aircraft equipment and instructor personnel, that it has agreed to provide for the Canadian training scheme in the same proportions.

If the above proposal by the Australian Government does not fit itself in with the ideas of the United Kingdom, Canadian and New Zealand Governments, Australia will attempt the whole of its population proportion of the training in Australia.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R. J

C 268039

FOR THE PRIME MINISTER

memo - 22nd.

FOR COUNCIL: November 23rd, 1939.

SUBJECT: Air Training Scheme;

REMARKS: Copy of Secret Memorandum from Australian Mission attached.

CONSIDERED BY COUNCIL:

ACTION TAKEN:

DISPOSED OF:

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

2. Under the ~~Agreement~~, ~~Canadians, Australians, and New Nealandens are to be identified~~ with their respective Dominions in a manner to be agreed upon between each separate Dominion and the United Kingdom.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Air T.

C 268061

Memorandum of Agreement between the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand relating to training of pilots and aircraft crews in Canada and their subsequent service.

---

1. It is agreed between the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand that there shall be set up in Canada a co-operative air training scheme as set out in this agreement, and that the personnel so trained shall be allocated in accordance with Articles 14 and 15.

2. This Agreement shall become operative at once and shall remain in force until 31st March, 1943; unless, by agreement between the Governments concerned, it be extended or terminated at an earlier date.

3. The Government of Canada will act as administrator of the scheme for itself and the other Governments concerned, as hereinafter provided, and it is understood that the undertakings given herein by the Government of Canada to the other Governments concerned are respectively subject to the due performance on the part of such Governments of their several undertakings given herein in support of the scheme.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

4. The Government of Canada acting as administrator as aforesaid will take the measures it considers necessary for the setting up of an organisation which, when fully developed, will be capable of completing the training of the following numbers every four weeks:-

Pilots (elementary flying training) 520

Pilots (Service flying training) 544

Observers 340

Wireless operator-air gunners 580

The Government of Canada will, moreover, endeavour to complete the organisation it considers necessary to give the above outputs so as to accord as nearly as may be found practicable with the programme of development set out in Appendix I.

5. (a) The Governments of Australia and New Zealand will endeavour to send from time to time enough pupils for training to Canada to keep filled the following proportions of places in the appropriate training schools, as shown in Tables A, B and C of Appendix I, which proportions will be allotted to them for this purpose :-

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268063

Australia

Pilots (Service flying training).....2 16ths.

Observers.....1 10th.

Wireless operator-air gunners.....1 10th.

New Zealand

Pilots (Service flying training).....1 16th.

Observers.....1 10th.

Wireless operator-air gunners.....1 10th.

(b) The Government of Canada will endeavour to provide from time to time enough pupils for training in Canada to keep filled the following proportions of places in the appropriate training schools as shown in Tables A, B and C of appendix I, less the ten per cent or portion thereof supplied by the Government of the United Kingdom under the provisions of clause (c) hereof:-

Pilots (elementary flying training)..... The whole.
Pilots (Service flying training)..... 13/16 ths.

Observers..... 8/10 ths.

Wireless operator-air gunners..... 8/10 ths.

(c) The Government of the United Kingdom may send and the Government of Canada undertakes, as administrator of the scheme to receive

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268064

pupils for pilot and observer training in Canada in numbers not exceeding ten per cent of the intake of the elementary flying training schools and air observer schools in Canada; and in addition the Government of the United Kingdom will endeavour to send and the Government of Canada undertakes as administrator of the scheme to receive pupils for training in Canada in sufficient numbers to keep filled any deficiency in the supply of such pupils from Australia, New Zealand and Canada. The numbers sent by the Government of the United Kingdom may also include pupils from Newfoundland.

(d) The numbers, and the categories of pupils sent, may be varied from time to time by agreement between the Governments concerned.

(e) It is agreed that if the Governments of Canada, Australia and New Zealand fail to keep filled the training places allotted to them respectively they will nevertheless bear their full respective shares of the costs and expenses as provided for in Article 10.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

6. Pupils sent for training in Canada under the provisions of Article 5 will receive pay, allowances and other emoluments in accordance with the provisions set out in Appendix II to this Agreement.

7. The training to be given shall be in accordance with the syllabus of instruction laid down for each similar course of training in the United Kingdom.

8. To assist in the carrying-out of the training scheme, the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand will lend personnel in such ranks and in such numbers as may be agreed upon with the Government of Canada as administrator of the scheme.

9. The share of the cost of the scheme to be borne by the Government of the United Kingdom will take the form of contributions in kind, to be delivered at such times and in such numbers as may be required for the efficient carrying out of the scheme in accordance with the programme of development set out in Appendix I as follows :-

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

(a) Engines for Moth airframes manufactured in Canada up to a maximum of 50% of the total number of aircraft required for the initial equipment and immediate reserve establishments for the full training capacity, in accordance with Appendix I, of the elementary flying training schools.

(b) All the Anson aircraft without wings) that may be required for the initial equipment and immediate reserve establishments for the full training capacity, in accordance with Appendix I, of the advanced flying training schools, the air observers schools and the air navigation schools.

(c) All the Battle aircraft that may be required for the initial equipment and immediate reserve establishments for the full training capacity, in accordance with Appendix I, of the bombing and gunnery schools and the air armament school.

(d) The appropriate initial stock of spare parts for the airframes and engines to be supplied under the provisions of clauses (a), (b) and (c).

(e) Such numbers of airframes and engines as may be required from time to time to replace the wastage resulting from loss or damage beyond economical repair of the airframes and engines to be supplied under the provisions of clauses (a), (b) and (c).

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

(f) An appropriate stock of spare parts for the running maintenance of the airframes and engines to be supplied under the provisions of clauses (a), (b) and (c).

(g) 533 Harvard airframes, 666 Wasp Engines and the appropriate share of the stock of spare parts, which have already been ordered for use in advanced flying training schools.

In addition, the Government of the United Kingdom will bear the cost of packing, loading and transporting to Canada the airframes, engines and equipment to be supplied under the provisions of clauses (a), (b), (c), (d), (e), (f) and (g) above. The cost of unloading and of transportation in Canada will be borne by the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme.

The types of aircraft and aircraft engines and spare parts to be supplied by the United Kingdom Government under the foregoing arrangements may be varied from time to time by agreement between the Governments concerned.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268068

10. The Governments of Canada, Australia and New Zealand agree that costs and expenses paid or incurred by the Government of Canada as administrator of the scheme (exclusive of the contribution in kind and expenses to be made and borne by the Government of the United Kingdom as provided for in Article 9) shall be apportioned between them as follows :-

(a) The Government of Canada will bear the whole costs and expenses of the Initial Training and Elementary Flying Training.

(b) The costs and expenses remaining will be apportioned in the following percentages :-

Canada..... 80.64
Australia..... 11.28
New Zealand..... 8.08

The foregoing percentages are based on the allocations of training places mentioned in Article 5; and it is agreed that if any substantial changes in these allocations are made by mutual agreement between the Governments concerned the percentages will be reviewed.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268069

11. (a) Except for any advances made by the other Governments concerned as provided for in clause (b) of this Article, the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, will in the first instance advance all the costs and expenses incurred as such administrator under the provisions of this Agreement, and the Governments of Australia and New Zealand will repay to the Government of Canada, as herein provided for, in Canadian dollars, their share of the amounts so advanced, in the proportions specified in Article 10.

(b) The Governments of the United Kingdom, Australia, and New Zealand will make advance payments necessary for pay and allowances, transportation charges, and other expenses during the journey to Canada in respect of pupils sent to Canada by such Governments for training, and for such other costs and expenses as may be agreed to from time to time; and the Governments of the United Kingdom, Australia, and New Zealand will, immediately after the end of each month, notify the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, of the amounts of any advance payments made by them during such month and will, as soon as possible thereafter, send to the Government of Canada a detailed statement in respect of such advance payments.

(c) In connection.....

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

(c) In connection with the repayments to be made by the Governments of Australia and New Zealand, as provided for in clause (a), due allowance will be made for any advance payments made and notified by the Governments of Australia and New Zealand under the provisions of clause (b).

(d) The Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, will refund to the Government of the United Kingdom any advance payments made by that Government under the provisions of clause (b), and the amount of such refunds shall be included in the costs and expenses of the scheme to be apportioned between the Governments of Canada, Australia, and New Zealand, as provided for in clause (a) and in Article 10.

(e) In this Agreement the term "costs and expenses" shall mean all expenditures, costs, charges and liabilities made or incurred by the Government of Canada as administrator of the scheme, and without restricting the generality of the foregoing shall include :-

(i) Pay, allowances, and other expenses of the personnel lent under the provisions of Article 8 and a cash contribution (computed in accordance with recognized practice as between Governments in such cases) towards the future non-effective benefits of such personnel.

(ii) Pay,.....

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268071

revised pay

(ii) Pay, allowances, transportation charges, and other expenses connected with the training of Canadian pupils in Canada from the dates of their enlistment to the dates of their embarkation in Canada under the provisions of Article 16 or, in the case of Canadian pupils taken to fill vacancies in the Home Defence Squadrons of the Royal Canadian Air Force as provided for in Article 14, to the dates of their being so taken.

(iii) Pay and allowances, transportation charges, and other expenses connected with the training of pupils in Canada from the dates of their leaving the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand or Newfoundland for the purpose of taking up training in Canada to the dates of their embarkation in Canada under the provisions of Article 16.

But the term "cost and expenses" shall not include:-

(iv) The contribution in kind and expenses to be made and borne by the Government of the United Kingdom as provided for in Article 9.

(v) Costs and expenses of clothing and personal equipment of pupils other than such replacements as may be necessary during the period of training and other than flying clothing and equipment.

(vi) Pensions or allowances to personnel lent under the provisions of Article 8 and to /pupils or.....

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268072

pupils or their dependants in respect of disability or death.

The costs and expenses mentioned in (v) and (vi) above will be borne by the Governments lending the personnel and sending the pupils in respect of whom such costs, expenses, pensions or allowances are incurred.

12. The Governments of Australia and New Zealand will from time to time, within one month after a summarized statement of accounts has been presented to them (showing the payments made during the preceding month by the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, and taking account of any receipts, and of any advance payments made and notified, as provided for in Article 11(b), by the Governments of Australia and New Zealand, and also of any adjustments in respect of previous months) pay or cause to be paid to the Government of Canada their due proportion as agreed upon in Article 10 of the costs and expenses of the scheme as shown by such statement.

These monthly payments will be regarded as advances on account, and the costs and expenses of the scheme as at the end of each financial year will be finally adjusted and paid when the accounts for such year have been audited.

13. (a) The Government of Canada will, in consultation with the other Governments concerned, appoint an officer to act as its Financial Adviser in carrying out its functions as administrator of the scheme. Such proposals for expenditure as the said Financial Adviser may require shall be referred to him for approval and no expenditure on such proposals shall be incurred until his approval has been given.....

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268073

been given. Any proposal disapproved by the Financial Adviser may at the instance of the officers responsible therefor be referred to the Minister of National Defence for final decision. Any reports made by the Financial Adviser shall be made available by the Government of Canada to all the other Governments concerned, and these latter shall be entitled to obtain from the Financial Adviser information on all matters affecting the cost of the scheme and their participation in it.

(b) Monthly financial statements shall be furnished by the Government of Canada to the Governments of Australia and New Zealand.

(c) A record of all expenditure and all sums received in connection with the training of pupils in Canada under this shceme will be maintained by the Comptroller of the Treasury of the Government of Canada, and will be audited by the Auditor General of Canada. This record will be made available after audit for examination by representatives of the Governments concerned.

(d) The Government of Canada shall make available to the Governments of Australia and New Zealand, as early as possible after the close of each financial year ending the 31st March, a statement, accompanied by a certificate of the Auditor General, of the receipts and payments in connection with the scheme showing the expenditure under appropriate heads.

14. It is agreed that the Government of Canada may, out of the Canadian pupils who complete their training under this scheme, fill vacancies which occur in the Home Defence Squadrons of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

/Provided,.....

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Provided, however, that the numbers so disposed of shall not exceed the following :-

Pilots.....	136 a year
Air Observers.....	34 a year
Wireless operator-air gunners	58 a year

All the other pupils, on completion of their training, will be placed at the disposal of the Government of the United Kingdom, subject to that Government's making the arrangements indicated in Article 15, and bearing liability as provided for in Articles 16 and 17 of this Agreement.

15. The United Kingdom Government undertakes that pupils of Canada, Australia and New Zealand shall, after training is completed, be identified with their respective Dominions, either by the method of organizing Dominion Units and formations or in some other way, such methods to be agreed upon with the respective Dominion Governments concerned. The United Kingdom Government will initiate inter-governmental discussions to this end.

16. The Government of the United Kingdom will, subject to the provisions of Article 17, provide the pay, allowances, pensions and other non-effective benefits, maintenance and other expenses of the pilots and aircraft crews who are trained in Canada (other than those made available for service with the Royal Canadian Air Force in accordance with the provisions of Article 14) with effect from the dates of their embarkation in Canada for service with or in conjunction

/with the Royal.....

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268075

with the Royal Air Force. The Government of the United Kingdom also undertakes to arrange for those pupils who are made available for service with, or in conjunction with, the Royal Air Force, to be embarked as speedily as possible after the completion of their training, and to defray the cost of their passages to the stations to which they are appointed on leaving Canada.

17. The pay, allowances, pensions and other non-effective benefits, maintenance and other expenses, for which the Government of the United Kingdom undertakes liability under the provisions of Article 16 will be as laid down in Royal Air Force regulations. If it should be decided by the Government of Canada, the Government of Australia, or the Government of New Zealand to supplement the amounts so issued, any such supplement will be borne by the Government concerned.

18. The Government of Canada as administrator of the scheme will have charge of the assets acquired for the purposes of the scheme. On the termination of this Agreement such of the said assets as have been acquired and paid for as part of the cost of the scheme will be disposed of as follows:-

(a) Any land, but not buildings, structures or fixtures thereon, acquired or improved for the purpose of the scheme will become the property of the Government of Canada.

(b) The assets acquired for the purposes of the Initial Training Schools and the Elementary Flying Training Schools will /become the property....

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268076

become the property of the Government of Canada.

(c) All other assets, except those contributed in kind by the Government of the United Kingdom, will be shared between the Governments of Canada, Australia and New Zealand in the same proportions as are laid down in Article 10 for the apportionment of the costs.

(d) Any of the assets contributed by the Government of the United Kingdom which remain will revert to that Government.

The distribution of the assets under the above arrangements may be made in kind or otherwise, as may be agreed upon.

19. Arrangements will be made between the Governments concerned to facilitate communications between them under this Agreement or otherwise in connection with the Scheme either by means of cable or through representatives in Canada to be named by them.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

APPENDIX I.

Programme of development of the training scheme in Canada.

To produce the output given in paragraph 3 of the Agreement, the following schools will be necessary in Canada:

Initial Training Schools.....	3
Elementary Flying Training Schools....	13
Service Flying Training Schools.....	16
Air Observer Schools.....	10
Bombing and Gunnery Schools.....	~~14~~
Air Navigation Schools.....	2
Wireless Schools.....	4

2. The organisation of these schools is shown on Tables A to C attached to this Appendix. A target programme showing dates of opening of the schools is attached at Table D.

3. The flying training and air observer schools will be developed at rates which will provide for their peak capacity for training pupils being reached by the following number of weeks after the date of opening:-

Elementary Flying Training Schools	4 weeks
Service Flying Training Schools	12 "
Air Observer Schools	6 "

The remaining schools will open at full capacity.

4. It will also be necessary to establish :-

(i) Schools for the training of the staffs of the schools given in paragraph 1, and for the organisation at (ii) below.

(ii) An appropriate command, recruiting and maintenance organisation.

These will include -

(iii)	Air Armament School 1
(iv)	School of Aeronautical Engineering 1
(v)	School of Administration 1
(vi)	Equipment and Accountant School ... 1
(vii)	Flying Instructors' School 1
(viii)	Recruit Depots 2
(ix)	Technical Training Schools 2
(x)	Repair Depots 3
(xi)	Equipment Depots 3
(xii)	Record Office 1	(or enlargement of existing organisation).

The dates of formation and rate of development of these units will be governed by the dates of opening of the pilot and air training schools. (iii) to (ix) will cease to function, or will be reduced to the size necessary to meet wastage, as the scheme develops.

5. Tables E and F show the requirements in aircraft and personnel when the scheme is in operation.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

TABLE 'A'.

PILOT TRAINING.

Weeks	Initial Training	Elementary Training 4	Service Training 12 28
	Initial Training Schools in Canada or United Kingdom.	No. 1 E.F.T.S.	No. 1 S.F.T.S. (Canada)
		No. 2 "	No. 2 " "
		No. 3 "	No. 3 " "
		No. 4 "	No. 4 " "
		No. 5 "	No. 5 " "
		No. 6 "	No. 6 " "
		No. 7 "	No. 7 " "
		No. 8 "	No. 8 " "
		No. 9 "	No. 9 " "
		No. 10 "	No. 10 " "
		No. 11 "	No. 11 " "
		No. 12 "	No. 12 " "
		No. 13 "	No. 13 " "
	The initial training and elementary flying training of pupils for No. 14 S.F.T.S. will be carried out in New Zealand, and that for Nos. 17 and 18 S.F.T.S.s in Australia.		No. 14 " "
			No. 17 " "
			No. 18 " "

	Intake	Output	Intake	Output
Per four weeks, per school.....	48	40	40	34
Total all schools in Canada.....	624	520	640	544

Wastage .... $16^{2}/3\%$ 15%

29% on original elementary school intake.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

TABLE 'B'.

AIR OBSERVER TRAINING.

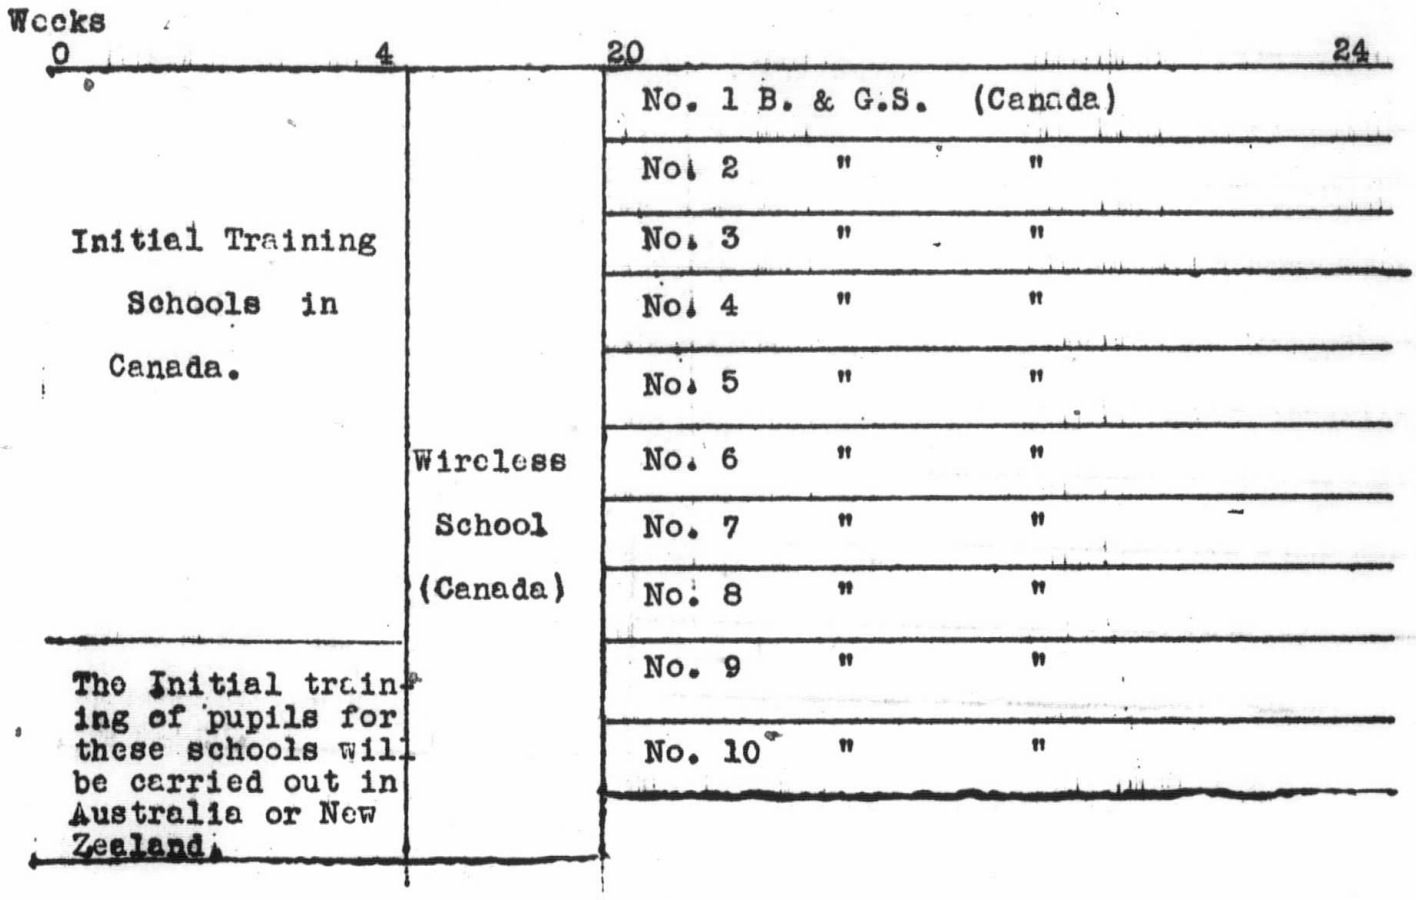
Weeks 0	4	16	22	26
Initial Training Schools in Canada (or U.K. for air observers from U.K.)	No. 1 Observer School (Canada)	No. 1 B.G.S. (Canada)	No. 1 A.N.S. (Canada)
	No. 2 " "	No. 2 "
	No. 3 " "	No. 3 "
	No. 4 " "	No. 4 "
	No. 5 " "	No. 5 "
	No. 6 " "	No. 6 "	No. 2 A.N.S. (Canada)
	No. 7 " "	No. 7 "
	No. 8 " "	No. 8 "
The initial training of pupils for these schools will be carried out in Australia or New Zealand	No. 9 " "	No. 9 "
	No. 10 " "	No. 10 "

	Intake	Output	Intake	Output	Intake	Output
Per school per four weeks.	42	35	35	34	170	170
Total per four weeks for schools in Canada	420	350	350	340	340	340

Wastage..... $16^{2}/3\%$ 3%

19%

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549



PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268080

TABLE 'C'

AIR GUNNER TRAINING.

	In-take	Out-put	Intake	Output
Per school per four weeks	720	600	60	58
Total per four weeks	720	600	600	580
Wastage	16 2/3%		3 1/3%

19½%

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

TABLE 'D'.

Programme showing dates of opening of pilot and air crew training schools.

Date.	Initial Training School.	Elementary Flying Training School.	Service Flying Training School.	Air Observer School.	Bombing and Gunnery School.	Wireless School.	Air Navigation School.
1940
Apl.	-	-	-	-	-	-	-
May	1	1	-	1	-	1	-
June	-	1	-	-	-	-	-
July	-	-	1	1	-	-	-
Aug.	-	1	1	-	1	-	-
Sept.	1	-	1	1	-	-	-
Oct.	-	1	1	-	1	-	1
Nov.	-	-	-	1	-	1	-
Dec.	-	1	1	-	1	-	-
1941
Jan.	-	-	1	1	-	-	-
Feb.	-	1	1	-	1	-	-
Mar.	-	1	-	1	-	-	-
Apl.	-	1	2	1	1	1	-
May	-	-	1	-	1	-	-
June	-	1	1	-	-	-	-
July	1	-	-	-	1	-	1
Aug.	-	1	1	1	-	-	-
Sept.	-	-	-	-	-	-	-
Oct.	-	1	1	1	-	-	-
Nov.	-	-	-	-	1	1	-
Dec.	-	1	1	1	-	-	-
1942.
Jan.	-	-	-	-	1	-	-
Feb.	-	1	1	-	-	-	-
Mar.	-	-	-	-	1	-	-
Apl.	-	-	1	-	-	-	-
Total	3	13	16	10	10	4	2

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

TABLE 'E'.

AIRCRAFT REQUIREMENTS.

The airframes and engines required for the initial equipment and immediate reserve of the schools in Canada when the full scheme is in operation are as under.

Type and Purpose.	Airframes (includes 50% immediate reserve).	Engines. (includes 100% immediate reserve).
CANADA.
Moths and/or Fleets for Elementary Flying Training Schools	702	936
Harvards for Service Flying Training Schools.	720	960
Ansons for Service Flying Training Schools, Observer Schools, and Air Navigation Schools.	1368	3648
Battles for Bombing and Gunnery Schools.	750	1000

Note: Aircraft required for the Flying Instructors School, the Air Armament School and the Instructors sections of the Air Navigation Schools are not included in the above. These Schools and Sections are disbanded as the scheme approaches completion, and the aircraft used by them in the early stages are absorbed into other units.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

TABLE 'F'.

PERSONNEL REQUIREMENTS.

The personnel required to man the schools etc. in Canada when the scheme is in full operation is as under.

	Officers.	Airmen.	Civilians.	Works Maintenance personnel
Commands and Groups, and Extra Headquarters organisation.	288	603	134
Initial Training Schools	39	393	-	36
Service Flying Training Schools	752	11,376	64	320
Air Observer Schools	250	2,470	-	100
Bombing and Gunnery Schools	450	6,920	-	150
Elementary Flying Training Schools	351	4,134	-	130
Wireless Schools	96	1,284	-	80
Air Navigation Schools	126	1,278	-	40
Repair Depots	51	141	1,308	36
Equipment Depots	66	228	3,318	60
Technical Training Schools	41	627	-	45
Records Office	14	277	-	-
Recruit Depots	28	424	-	40
Recruiting Organisation	134	211	105
	2,686	30,366	4,929	1,037

(a) Civilians may replace a proportion of the airmen in certain units.

(b) The above table does not include schools etc. which close as the scheme approaches completion; the personnel from these schools will be absorbed into other units.

(c) Some, or all, of the Elementary Flying Training Schools and Air Observer Schools may be organised on a civilian basis.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

APPENDIX II.

C 268084

CONDITIONS OF SERVICE OF PILOTS AND AIRCRAFT CREWS.

(a) PUPILS FROM CANADA.

Enlistment.

Pupils will be enlisted in the Royal Canadian Air Force as aircraftmen, Class II (standard group).

Rank during Training in Canada.

Course.	Rank.
Initial ground training	Aircraftman, Class II (standard group)
Pilot	Leading aircraftman " "
Observer	" " " "
Wireless operator (air crew)	Aircraftman, Class II " "
Air gunner	" " " " "

Rank on completion of Training.

Duty.	Rank.
Pilot	*Sergeant (group B)
Observer	*(Acting Sergeant (group C) / Sergeant (group B))
Wireless operator (air crew)	(L.A.C., A.C.I. or A.C.II (group B), according to percentage of marks obtained on passing out of training
Air gunner	(L.A.C., A.C.I. or A.C.II (standard group), according to percentage of marks obtained on passing out of training.

Pay and additional pay will be at the rates and subject to the conditions laid down from time to time in Financial Regulations and Instructions for the Royal Canadian Air Force on Active Service.

During service in Canada, allowances etc. will be admissible under the conditions laid down in Financial Regulations and Instructions for the Royal Canadian Air Force on Active Service.

---

*A number of pilots and observers will be selected, on passing out of training, for commissioned rank in the Royal Canadian Air Force (General List). Observers will be on probation as acting observer for a period (normally six months) after passing out of training.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268085

Pay, allowances, etc. during service with, or in conjunction with, the Royal Air Force.

On embarkation for service with, or in conjunction with, the Royal Air Force, officers and airmen will, subject to the conditions laid down in King's Regulations and Air Council Instructions, receive from the appropriate Royal Air Force paying authority the pay, allowances, etc. of the rank and branch (or group) in the Royal Air Force corresponding to that held in the Royal Canadian Air Force, except that the following special arrangements will be made in regard to the issue of allowances to dependants in Canada.

The allowances and compulsory allotment from pay in respect of family or other dependants which may be payable under Royal Air Force regulations will, if the family or other dependants reside in Canada, be credited to the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, who will issue to the family or other dependants the allowance and assigned pay which may be payable under Royal Canadian Air Force regulations.

If the pay and allowances admissible under Royal Canadian Air Force regulations should exceed those admissible under Royal Air Force regulations, the difference (after taking into account the payment made under the preceding paragraph) will be issued by the Government of Canada as deferred pay, either on termination of service or otherwise in special circumstances.

Personnel will not be insured under United Kingdom insurance schemes, and any insurance contributions (employers and employees shares) necessary to ensure benefits under Canadian schemes will be paid by the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, who will arrange with the Government of the United Kingdom to recover from pay any employees' shares of such contributions so recoverable.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268086

(b) PUPILS OTHER THAN THOSE ENLISTED IN THE ROYAL CANADIAN AIR FORCE THE ROYAL AUSTRALIAN AIR FORCE AND THE ROYAL NEW ZEALAND AIR FORCE.

Pupils other than those enlisted in the Royal Canadian Air Force, the Royal Australian Air Force and the Royal New Zealand Air Force will be enlisted in the Royal Air Force.

For the period of the journey to Canada, airmen of the Royal Air Force will receive pay, allowances, etc. at the rates and subject to the conditions laid down from time to time in King's Regulations and Air Council Instructions for the Royal Air Force.

During service in Canada, airmen of the Royal Air Force will be attached to the Royal Canadian Air Force, and, subject to the conditions laid down in Financial Regulations and Instructions for the Royal Canadian Air Force on Active Service, they will receive from the appropriate Royal Canadian Air Force paying officer the pay, allowances, etc. of the rank and group in the Royal Canadian Air Force, as appropriate under (a) above, except that the following special arrangements will be made in regard to the issue of allowances to family or other dependants outside Canada.

The allowances and compulsory allotment from pay in respect of family or other dependants which would be appropriate under Royal Air Force regulations will, if the family or other dependant reside outside Canada, be issued by the Government of the United Kingdom, who will reclaim from the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, the amount so issued. The Royal Canadian Air Force officer paying the airmen will deduct from the airmen's pay the amount of the assigned pay under Royal Canadian Air Force regulations.

Airmen will not be insured under Canadian insurance schemes and any insurance contributions (employers and employees shares) necessary to ensure benefits for United Kingdom airmen under United Kingdom schemes will be paid by the Government of the United Kingdom, who will arrange with the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, for the recovery from pay of any employees shares of such contributions so recoverable.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268087

(c) PUPILS SENT BY AUSTRALIA AND NEW ZEALAND.

Pupils sent by Australia and New Zealand will be enlisted in the Royal Australian Air Force and in the Royal New Zealand Air Force, respectively.

Pay Allowances, etc. for the period of journey to Canada.

For the period of the journey to Canada, airmen of the Royal Australian Air Force and of the Royal New Zealand Air Force will receive pay, allowances, etc. at the rates and subject to the conditions laid down from time to time in the Regulations for the Royal Australian Air Force and the Royal New Zealand Air Force, respectively.

Pay, allowances, etc. during service in Canada.

During service in Canada, airmen of the Royal Australian Air Force and of the Royal New Zealand Air Force will be attached to the Royal Canadian Air Force, and, subject to the conditions laid down in Financial Regulations and Instructions for the Royal Canadian Air Force on Active Service, they will receive from the appropriate Royal Canadian Air Force paying officer the pay, allowances, etc. of the rank and group in the Royal Canadian Air Force, as appropriate under (a) above, except that the following special arrangements will be made in regard to the issue of allowances to family or other dependants outside Canada.

The allowances and compulsory allotment from pay in respect of family or other dependants which would be appropriate under Royal Australian Air Force or Royal New Zealand Air Force regulations will, if the family or other dependants reside outside Canada, be issued by the Government of Australia or the Government of New Zealand, who will reclaim from the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, the amount so issued. The Royal Canadian Air Force officer paying the airman will deduct from the airman's pay the amount of the assigned pay chargeable under Royal Canadian Air Force regulations.

Airmen will not be insured under Canadian insurance schemes, and any insurance contributions (employers and employees shares) necessary to ensure benefits for Australian or New Zealand airmen under Australian or New Zealand schemes will be paid by the Government of Australia or the Government of New Zealand, who will arrange with the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, for the recovery from pay of any employees' shares of such contributions so recoverable.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268088

Pay, allowances, etc. during service with the Royal Air Force.

On embarkation for service with the Royal Air Force, officers and airmen will be attached to that force, and, subject to the conditions laid down in King's Regulations and Air Council Instructions, they will receive from the appropriate Royal Air Force paying authority the pay, allowances, etc. of the rank and branch (or group) in the Royal Air Force corresponding to that held in the Royal Australian Air Force or in the Royal New Zealand Air Force, except that the following special arrangements will be made in regard to the issue of allowances to family or other dependants in Australia or New Zealand.

The allowances and compulsory allotment from pay in respect of family or other dependants which may be payable under Royal Air Force regulations will, if the family or other dependants reside in Australia or New Zealand, be credited to the Government of Australia or to the Government of New Zealand, who will issue to the family or other dependant the allowance and compulsory allotment from pay which may be payable under Royal Australian Air Force or Royal New Zealand Air Force regulations.

If the pay and allowances admissible under Royal Australian Air Force or Royal New Zealand Air Force regulations exceed those admissible under Royal Air Force regulations, and the Government of Australia or the Government of New Zealand decide that this difference is to be credited to the officer or airman, the difference (after taking into account the payment made under the preceding paragraph) will be issued by the Government of Australia or the Government of New Zealand as deferred pay, either on termination of service or otherwise in special circumstances.

Personnel will not be insured under United Kingdom insurance schemes, and any insurance contributions (employers and

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268089

employees shares) necessary to ensure benefits under Australian or New Zealand schemes will be paid by the Government of Australia or the Government of New Zealand, who will arrange with the Government of the United Kingdom to recover from pay any employees' shares of such contributions so recoverable.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

C268089A

OFFICE OF THE PRIME MINISTER

MEMORANDUM

memo. Nov. 30 - '39

December 2, 1939.

For the Prime Minister:

Re Air Training Scheme

-- Attached is a revised Memorandum of Agreement just received from the Secretary of the British Mission. This will replace the memorandum which the Prime Minister already has.

Just

J. W. P.

for A. D. P. H.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

30/11/39. C 268090

Memorandum of Agreement between the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand relating to training of pilots and aircraft crews in Canada and their subsequent service.

---

1. It is agreed between the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand that there shall be set up in Canada a co-operative air training scheme as set out in this agreement, and that the personnel so trained shall be allocated in accordance with Articles 14 and 15.

2. This Agreement shall become operative at once and shall remain in force until 31st March, 1943; unless, by agreement between the Governments concerned, it be extended or terminated at an earlier date.

3. The Government of Canada will act as administrator of the scheme for itself and the other Governments concerned, as hereinafter provided, and it is understood that the undertakings given herein by the Government of Canada to the other Governments concerned are respectively subject to the due performance on the part of such Governments of their several undertakings given herein in support of the scheme.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

4. The Government of Canada acting as administrator as aforesaid will take the measures it considers necessary for the setting up of an organisation which, when fully developed, will be capable of completing the training of the following numbers every four weeks:-

Pilots (elementary flying training)	520
Pilots (Service flying training)	544
Observers	340
Wireless operator-air gunners	580

The Government of Canada will, moreover, endeavour to complete the organisation it considers necessary to give the above outputs so as to accord as nearly as may be found practicable with the programme of development set out in Appendix I.

5. (a) The Governments of Australia and New Zealand will endeavour to send from time to time enough pupils for training to Canada to keep filled the following proportions of places in the appropriate training schools, as shown in Tables A, B and C of Appendix I, which proportions will be allotted to them for this purpose :-

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268092

Australia

Pilots (Service flying training).....$\frac{2}{16}$ ths.

Observers.....$\frac{1}{10}$ th.

Wireless operator-air gunners.....$\frac{1}{10}$ th.

New Zealand

Pilots (Service flying training).....$\frac{1}{16}$ th.

Observers.....$\frac{1}{10}$ th.

Wireless operator-air gunners.....$\frac{1}{10}$ th.

(b) The Government of Canada will endeavour to provide from time to time enough pupils for training in Canada to keep filled the following proportions of places in the appropriate training schools as shown in Tables A, B and C of appendix I, less the ten per cent or portion thereof supplied by the Government of the United Kingdom under the provisions of clause (c) hereof:-

Pilots (elementary flying training)..... The whole.
Pilots (Service flying training)..... $\frac{13}{16}$ ths.

Observers..... $\frac{8}{10}$ ths.

Wireless operator-air gunners..... $\frac{8}{10}$ ths.

(c) The Government of the United Kingdom may send and the Government of Canada undertakes, as administrator of the scheme to receive

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

pupils for pilot and observer training in Canada in numbers not exceeding ten per cent of the intake of the elementary flying training schools and air observer schools in Canada; and in addition the Government of the United Kingdom will endeavour to send and the Government of Canada undertakes as administrator of the scheme to receive pupils for training in Canada in sufficient numbers to keep filled any deficiency in the supply of such pupils from Australia, New Zealand and Canada. The numbers sent by the Government of the United Kingdom may also include pupils from Newfoundland.

(d) The numbers, and the categories of pupils sent, may be varied from time to time by agreement between the Governments concerned.

(e) It is agreed that if the Governments of Canada, Australia and New Zealand fail to keep filled the training places allotted to them respectively they will nevertheless bear their full respective shares of the costs and expenses as provided for in Article 10.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

6. Pupils sent for training in Canada under the provisions of Article 5 will receive pay, allowances and other emoluments in accordance with the provisions set out in Appendix II to this Agreement.

7. The training to be given shall be in accordance with the syllabus of instruction laid down for each similar course of training in the United Kingdom.

8. To assist in the carrying-out of the training scheme, the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand will lend personnel in such ranks and in such numbers as may be agreed upon with the Government of Canada as administrator of the scheme.

9. The share of the cost of the scheme to be borne by the Government of the United Kingdom will take the form of contributions in kind, to be delivered at such times and in such numbers as may be required for the efficient carrying out of the scheme in accordance with the programme of development set out in Appendix I as follows :-

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

(a) Engines for Moth airframes manufactured in Canada up to a maximum of 50% of the total number of aircraft required for the initial equipment and immediate reserve establishments for the full training capacity, in accordance with Appendix I, of the elementary flying training schools.

(b) All the Anson aircraft (without wings) that may be required for the initial equipment and immediate reserve establishments for the full training capacity, in accordance with Appendix I, of the advanced flying training schools, the air observers schools and the air navigation schools.

(c) All the Battle aircraft that may be required for the initial equipment and immediate reserve establishments for the full training capacity, in accordance with Appendix I, of the bombing and gunnery schools and the air armament school.

(d) The appropriate initial stock of spare parts for the airframes and engines to be supplied under the provisions of clauses (a), (b) and (c).

(e) Such numbers of airframes and engines as may be required from time to time to replace the wastage resulting from loss or damage beyond economical repair of the airframes and engines to be supplied under the provisions of clauses (a), (b) and (c).

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

(f) An appropriate stock of spare parts for the running maintenance of the airframes and engines to be supplied under the provisions of clauses (a), (b) and (c).

(g) 533 Harvard airframes, 666 Wasp Engines and the appropriate share of the stock of spare parts, which have already been ordered for use in advanced flying training schools.

In addition, the Government of the United Kingdom will bear the cost of packing, loading and transporting to Canada the airframes, engines and equipment to be supplied under the provisions of clauses (a), (b), (c), (d), (e), (f) and (g) above. The cost of unloading and of transportation in Canada will be borne by the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme.

The types of aircraft and aircraft engines and spare parts to be supplied by the United Kingdom Government under the foregoing arrangements may be varied from time to time by agreement between the Governments concerned.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268097

10. The Governments of Canada, Australia and New Zealand agree that costs and expenses paid or incurred by the Government of Canada as administrator of the scheme (exclusive of the contribution in kind and expenses to be made and borne by the Government of the United Kingdom as provided for in Article 9) shall be apportioned between them as follows :-

(a) The Government of Canada will bear the whole costs and expenses of the Initial Training and Elementary Flying Training.

(b) The costs and expenses remaining will be apportioned in the following percentages :-

Canada.....	80.64
Australia.....	11.28
New Zealand.....	8.08

The foregoing percentages are based on the allocations of training places mentioned in Article 5; and it is agreed that if any substantial changes in these allocations are made by mutual agreement between the Governments concerned the percentages will be reviewed.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268098

11. (a) Except for any advances made by the other Governments concerned as provided for in clause (b) of this Article, the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, will in the first instance advance all the costs and expenses incurred as such administrator under the provisions of this Agreement, and the Governments of Australia and New Zealand will repay to the Government of Canada, as herein provided for, in Canadian dollars, their share of the amounts so advanced, in the proportions specified in Article 10.

(b) The Governments of the United Kingdom, Australia, and New Zealand will make advance payments necessary for pay and allowances, transportation charges, and other expenses during the journey to Canada in respect of pupils sent to Canada by such Governments for training, and for such other costs and expenses as may be agreed to from time to time; and the Governments of the United Kingdom, Australia, and New Zealand will, immediately after the end of each month, notify the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, of the amounts of any advance payments made by them during such month and will, as soon as possible thereafter, send to the Government of Canada a detailed statement in respect of such advance payments.

(c) In connection.....

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268099

(c) In connection with the repayments to be made by the Governments of Australia and New Zealand, as provided for in clause (a), due allowance will be made for any advance payments made and notified by the Governments of Australia and New Zealand under the provisions of clause (b).

(d) The Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, will refund to the Government of the United Kingdom any advance payments made by that Government under the provisions of clause (b), and the amount of such refunds shall be included in the costs and expenses of the scheme to be apportioned between the Governments of Canada, Australia, and New Zealand, as provided for in clause (a) and in Article 10.

(e) In this Agreement the term "costs and expenses" shall mean all expenditures, costs, charges and liabilities made or incurred by the Government of Canada as administrator of the scheme, and without restricting the generality of the foregoing shall include :-

(i) Pay, allowances, and other expenses of the personnel lent under the provisions of Article 8 and a cash contribution (computed in accordance with recognized practice as between Governments in such cases) towards the future non-effective benefits of such personnel.

(ii) Pay,.....

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268100

(ii) Pay, allowances, transportation charges, and other expenses connected with the training of Canadian pupils in Canada from the dates of their enlistment to the dates of their embarkation in Canada under the provisions of Article 16 or, in the case of Canadian pupils taken to fill vacancies in the Home Defence Squadrons of the Royal Canadian Air Force as provided for in Article 14, to the dates of their being so taken.

(iii) Pay and allowances, transportation charges, and other expenses connected with the training of pupils in Canada from the dates of their leaving the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand or Newfoundland for the purpose of taking up training in Canada to the dates of their embarkation in Canada under the provisions of Article 16.

But the term "cost and expenses" shall not include:-

(iv) The contribution in kind and expenses to be made and borne by the Government of the United Kingdom as provided for in Article 9.

(v) Costs and expenses of clothing and personal equipment of pupils other than such replacements as may be necessary during the period of training and other than flying clothing and equipment.

(vi) Pensions or allowances to personnel lent under the provisions of Article 8 and to /pupils or.....

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268101

pupils or their dependants in respect of disability or death.

The costs and expenses mentioned in (v) and (vi) above will be borne by the Governments lending the personnel and sending the pupils in respect of whom such costs, expenses, pensions or allowances are incurred.

12. The Governments of Australia and New Zealand will from time to time, within one month after a summarized statement of accounts has been presented to them (showing the payments made during the preceding month by the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, and taking account of any receipts, and of any advance payments made and notified, as provided for in Article 11(b), by the Governments of Australia and New Zealand, and also of any adjustments in respect of previous months) pay or cause to be paid to the Government of Canada their due proportion as agreed upon in Article 10 of the costs and expenses of the scheme as shown by such statement.

These monthly payments will be regarded as advances on account, and the costs and expenses of the scheme as at the end of each financial year will be finally adjusted and paid when the accounts for such year have been audited.

13. (a) The Government of Canada will, in consultation with the other Governments concerned, appoint an officer to act as its Financial Adviser in carrying out its functions as administrator of the scheme. Such proposals for expenditure as the said Financial Adviser may require shall be referred to him for approval and no expenditure on such proposals shall be incurred until his approval has been given.....

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268102

been given. Any proposal disapproved by the Financial Adviser may at the instance of the officers responsible therefor be referred to the Minister of National Defence for final decision. Any reports made by the Financial Adviser shall be made available by the Government of Canada to all the other Governments concerned, and these latter shall be entitled to obtain from the Financial Adviser information on all matters affecting the cost of the scheme and their participation in it.

(b) Monthly financial statements shall be furnished by the Government of Canada to the Governments of Australia and New Zealand.

(c) A record of all expenditure and all sums received in connection with the training of pupils in Canada under this shceme will be maintained by the Comptroller of the Treasury of the Government of Canada, and will be audited by the Auditor General of Canada. This record will be made available after audit for examination by representatives of the Governments concerned.

(d) The Government of Canada shall make available to the Governments of Australia and New Zealand, as early as possible after the close of each financial year ending the 31st March, a statement, accompanied by a certificate of the Auditor General, of the receipts and payments in connection with the scheme showing the expenditure under appropriate heads.

14. It is agreed that the Government of Canada may, out of the Canadian pupils who complete their training under this scheme, fill vacancies which occur in the Home Defence Squadrons of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

/Provided,.....

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268103

Provided, however, that the numbers so disposed of shall not exceed the following :-

Pilots.....	136 a year
Air Observers.....	34 a year
Wireless operator-air gunners	58 a year

All the other pupils, on completion of their training, will be placed at the disposal of the Government of the United Kingdom, subject to that Government's making the arrangements indicated in Article 15, and bearing liability as provided for in Articles 16 and 17 of this Agreement.

15. The United Kingdom Government undertakes that pupils of Canada, Australia and New Zealand shall, after training is completed, be identified with their respective Dominions, either by the method of organizing Dominion Units and formations or in some other way, such methods to be agreed upon with the respective Dominion Governments concerned. The United Kingdom Government will initiate inter-governmental discussions to this end.

16. The Government of the United Kingdom will, subject to the provisions of Article 17, provide the pay, allowances, pensions and other non-effective benefits, maintenance and other expenses of the pilots and aircraft crews who are trained in Canada (other than those made available for service with the Royal Canadian Air Force in accordance with the provisions of Article 14) with effect from the dates of their embarkation in Canada for service with or in conjunction

/with the Royal.....

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

with the Royal Air Force. The Government of the United Kingdom also undertakes to arrange for those pupils who are made available for service with, or in conjunction with, the Royal Air Force, to be embarked as speedily as possible after the completion of their training, and to defray the cost of their passages to the stations to which they are appointed on leaving Canada.

17. The pay, allowances, pensions and other non-effective benefits, maintenance and other expenses, for which the Government of the United Kingdom undertakes liability under the provisions of Article 16 will be as laid down in Royal Air Force regulations. If it should be decided by the Government of Canada, the Government of Australia, or the Government of New Zealand to supplement the amounts so issued, any such supplement will be borne by the Government concerned.

18. The Government of Canada as administrator of the scheme will have charge of the assets acquired for the purposes of the scheme. On the termination of this Agreement such of the said assets as have been acquired and paid for as part of the cost of the scheme will be disposed of as follows:-

(a) Any land, but not buildings, structures or fixtures thereon, acquired or improved for the purpose of the scheme will become the property of the Government of Canada.

(b) The assets acquired for the purposes of the Initial Training Schools and the Elementary Flying Training Schools will /become the property....

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268105

become the property of the Government of Canada.

(c) All other assets, except those contributed in kind by the Government of the United Kingdom, will be shared between the Governments of Canada, Australia and New Zealand in the same proportions as are laid down in Article 10 for the apportionment of the costs.

(d) Any of the assets contributed by the Government of the United Kingdom which remain will revert to that Government.

The distribution of the assets under the above arrangements may be made in kind or otherwise, as may be agreed upon.

19. Arrangements will be made between the Governments concerned to facilitate communications between them under this Agreement or otherwise in connection with the Scheme either by means of cable or through representatives in Canada to be named by them.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

APPENDIX I.

Programme of development of the training scheme in Canada.

To produce the output given in ~~paragraph 6~~ Article 4 of the Agreement, the following schools will be necessary in Canada:

Initial Training Schools.....	3
Elementary Flying Training Schools....	13
Service Flying Training Schools.....	16
Air Observer Schools.....	10
Bombing and Gunnery Schools.....	19
Air Navigation Schools.....	2
Wireless Schools.....	4

2. The organisation of these schools is shown on Tables A to C attached to this Appendix. A target programme showing dates of opening of the schools is attached at Table D.

3. The flying training and air observer schools will be developed at rates which will provide for their peak capacity for training pupils being reached by the following number of weeks after the date of opening:-

Elementary Flying Training Schools	4 weeks
Service Flying Training Schools 12	"
Air Observer Schools 6	"

The remaining schools will open at full capacity.

4. It will also be necessary to establish :-

(i) Schools for the training of the staffs of the schools given in paragraph 1, and for the organisation at (ii) below.

(ii) An appropriate command, recruiting and maintenance organisation.

These will include -

(iii)	Air Armament School 1
(iv)	School of Aeronautical Engineering 1
(v)	School of Administration 1
(vi)	Equipment and Accountant School ... 1
(vii)	Flying Instructors' School 1
(viii)	Recruit Depots 2
(ix)	Technical Training Schools 2
(x)	Repair Depots 3
(xi)	Equipment Depots 3
(xii)	Record Office 1	(or enlargement of existing organisation).

The dates of formation and rate of development of these units will be governed by the dates of opening of the pilot and air training schools. (iii) to (ix) will cease to function, or will be reduced to the size necessary to meet wastage, as the scheme develops.

5. Tables E and F show the requirements in aircraft and personnel when the scheme is in operation.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268107

TABLE 'A'.

P I L O T T R A I N I N G.

Weeks	Initial Training	Elementary Training 4	Service Training 12 28
	Initial Training Schools in Canada or United Kingdom.	No. 1 E.F.T.S.	No. 1 S.F.T.S. (Canada)
		No. 2 "	No. 2 " "
		No. 3 "	No. 3 " "
		No. 4 "	No. 4 " "
		No. 5 "	No. 5 " "
		No. 6 "	No. 6 " "
		No. 7 "	No. 7 " "
		No. 8 "	No. 8 " "
		No. 9 "	No. 9 " "
		No. 10 "	No. 10 " "
		No. 11 "	No. 11 " "
		No. 12 "	No. 12 " "
		No. 13 "	No. 13 " "
	The initial training and elementary flying training of pupils for No. 14 S.F.T.S. will be carried out in New Zealand, and that for Nos. 17 and 18 S.F.T.S.s in Australia.		No. 14 " "
			No. 17 " "
			No. 18 " "
		Intake Output	Intake Output
	Per four weeks, per school.....	48 40	40 34

Total all schools in Canada.....	624	520	640	544
Wastage		$16^{2}/_{3}\%$		15%

29% on original elementary school intake.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

TABLE 'B'.

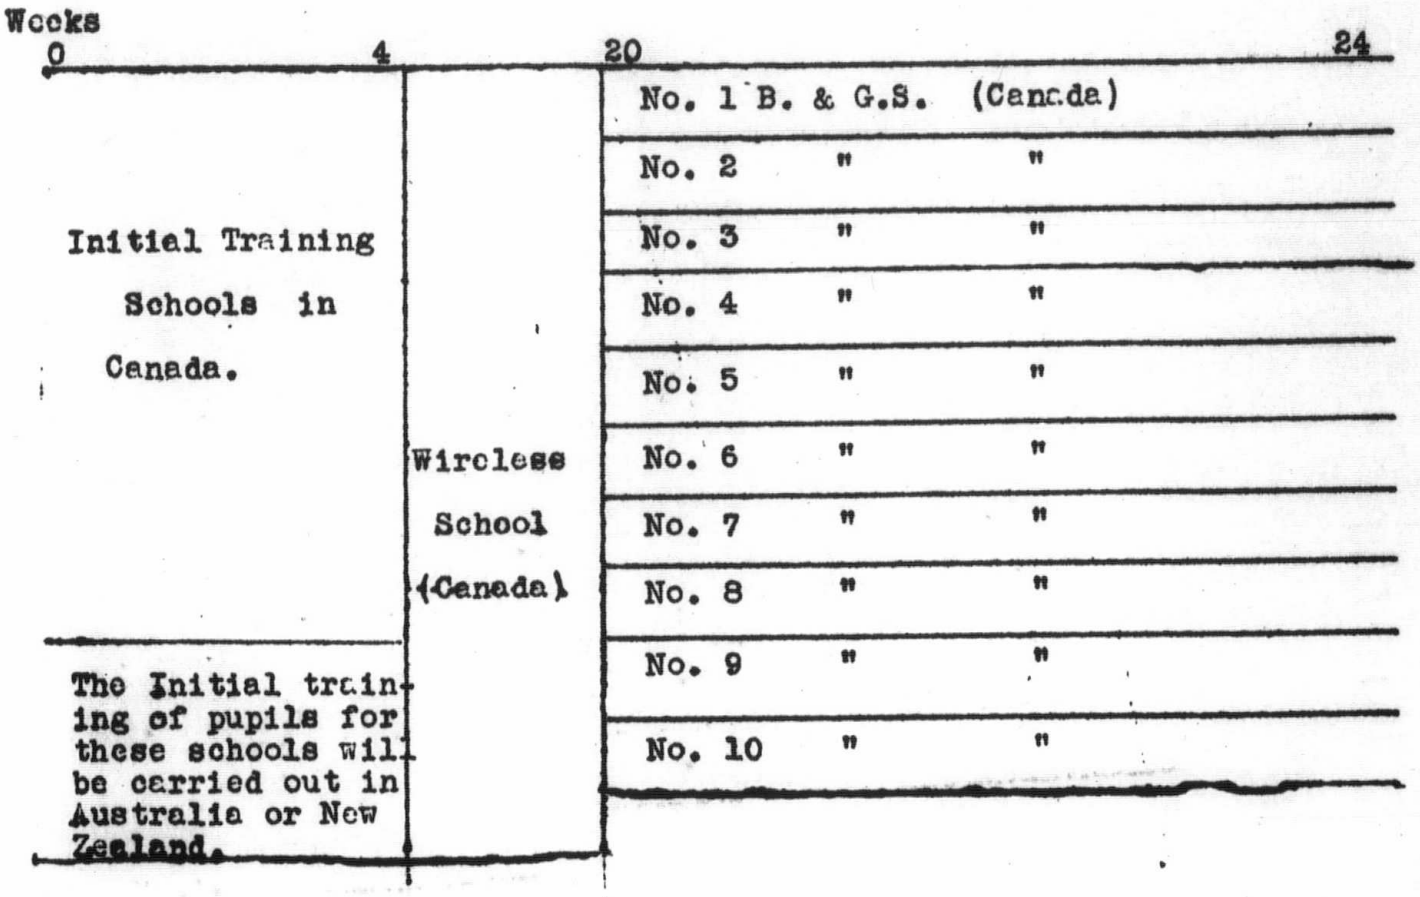
AIR OBSERVER TRAINING.

Weeks 0	4	16	22	26
Initial Training Schools in Canada (or U.K. for air observers from U.K.)	No. 1 Observer School (Canada)	No. 1 B.G.S. (Canada)	No. 1 A.N.S. (Canada)
	No. 2 " "	No. 2 "
	No. 3 " "	No. 3 "
	No. 4 " "	No. 4 "
	No. 5 " "	No. 5 "
	No. 6 " "	No. 6 "	No. 2 A.N.S. (Canada)
	No. 7 " "	No. 7 "
	No. 8 " "	No. 8 "
The initial training of pupils for these schools will be carried out in Australia or New Zealand	No. 9 " "	No. 9 "
	No. 10 " "	No. 10 "

	Intake	Output	Intake	Output	Intake	Output
Per school per four weeks.	42	35	35	34	170	170
Total per four weeks for schools in Canada	420	350	350	340	340	340

Wastage..... $16^{2}/_{3}\%$ 3%

19%



W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

TABLE 'C'

AIR GUNNER TRAINING.

	In-take	Out-put	Intake	Output
Per school per four weeks	720	600	60	58
Total per four weeks	720	600	600	580
Wastage	16 2/3%		3 1/3%

19½%

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

TABLE 'D'.

Programme showing dates of opening of pilot and air crew training schools.

Date.	Initial Training School.	Elementary Flying Training School.	Service Flying Training School.	Air Observer School.	Bombing and Gunnery School.	Wireless School.	Air Navigation School.
1940
Apl.	-	-	-	-	-	-	-
May	1	1	-	1	-	1	-
June	-	1	-	-	-	-	-
July	-	-	1	1	-	-	-
Aug.	-	1	1	-	1	-	-
Sept.	1	-	1	1	-	-	-
Oct.	-	1	1	-	1	-	1
Nov.	-	-	-	1	-	1	-
Dec.	-	1	1	-	1	-	-
1941
Jan.	-	-	1	1	-	-	-
Feb.	-	1	1	-	1	-	-
Mar.	-	1	-	1	-	-	-
Apl.	-	1	2	1	1	1	-
May	-	-	1	-	1	-	-
June	-	1	1	-	-	-	-
July	1	-	-	-	1	-	1
Aug.	-	1	1	1	-	-	-
Sept.	-	-	-	-	-	-	-
Oct.	-	1	1	1	-	-	-
Nov.	-	-	-	-	1	1	-
Dec.	-	1	1	1	-	-	-
1942.
Jan.	-	-	-	-	1	-	-
Feb.	-	1	1	-	-	-	-
Mar.	-	-	-	-	1	-	-
Apl.	-	-	1	-	-	-	-
Total	3	13	16	10	10	4	2

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

TABLE 'E'.

AIRCRAFT REQUIREMENTS.

The airframes and engines required for the initial equipment and immediate reserve of the schools in Canada when the full scheme is in operation are as under.

Type and Purpose.	Airframes (includes 50% immediate reserve).	Engines. (includes 100% immediate reserve).
CANADA.
Moths and/or Fleets for Elementary Flying Training Schools	702	936
Harvards for Service Flying Training Schools.	720	960
Ansons for Service Flying Training Schools, Observer Schools, and Air Navigation Schools.	1368	3648
Battles for Bombing and Gunnery Schools.	750	1000

Note: Aircraft required for the Flying Instructors School, the Air Armament School and the Instructors sections of the Air Navigation Schools are not included in the above. These Schools and Sections are disbanded as the scheme approaches completion, and the aircraft used by them in the early stages are absorbed into other units.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PERSONNEL REQUIREMENTS.

The personnel required to man the schools etc. in Canada when the scheme is in full operation is as under.

	Officers.	Airmen.	Civilians.	Works Maintenance personnel
Commands and Groups, and Extra Headquarters organisation.	288	603	134
Initial Training Schools	39	393	-	36
Service Flying Training Schools	752	11,376	64	320
Air Observer Schools	250	2,470	-	100
Bombing and Gunnery Schools	450	6,920	-	150
Elementary Flying Training Schools	351	4,134	-	130
Wireless Schools	96	1,284	-	80
Air Navigation Schools	126	1,278	-	40
Repair Depots	51	141	1,308	36
Equipment Depots	66	228	3,318	60
Technical Training Schools	41	627	-	30
Records Office	14	277	-	-
Recruit Depots	28	424	-	40
Recruiting Organisation	134	211	105
	2,686	30,366	4,929	1,022

(a) Civilians may replace a proportion of the airmen in certain units.

(b) The above table does not include schools etc. which close as the scheme approaches completion; the personnel from these schools will be absorbed into other units.

(c) Some, or all, of the Elementary Flying Training Schools and Air Observer Schools may be organised on a civilian basis.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

APPENDIX II.

CONDITIONS OF SERVICE OF PILOTS AND AIRCRAFT CREWS.

(a) PUPILS FROM CANADA.

Enlistment.

Pupils will be enlisted in the Royal Canadian Air Force as aircraftmen, Class II (standard group).

Rank during Training in Canada.

Course.	Rank.
Initial ground training	Aircraftman, Class II (standard group)
Pilot	Leading aircraftman " "
Observer	" " " "
Wireless operator (air crew)	Aircraftman, Class II " "
Air gunner	" " " " "

Rank on completion of Training.

Duty.	Rank.
Pilot	*Sergeant (group B)
Observer	*(Acting Sergeant (group C) / Sergeant (group B)
Wireless operator (air crew)	(L.A.C., A.C.I. or A.C.II (group B), according to percentage of marks obtained on passing out of training
Air gunner	(L.A.C., A.C.I. or A.C.II (standard group), according to percentage of marks obtained on passing out of training.

Pay and additional pay will be at the rates and subject to the conditions laid down from time to time in Financial Regulations and Instructions for the Royal Canadian Air Force on Active Service.

During service in Canada, allowances etc. will be admissible under the conditions laid down in Financial Regulations and Instructions for the Royal Canadian Air Force on Active Service.

---

*A number of pilots and observers will be selected, on passing out of training, for commissioned rank in the Royal Canadian Air Force (General List). Observers will be on probation as acting observer for a period (normally six months) after passing out of training.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

 C268114

Pay, allowances, etc. during service with, or in conjunction with, the Royal Air Force.

On embarkation for service with, or in conjunction with, the Royal Air Force, officers and airmen will, subject to the conditions laid down in King's Regulations and Air Council Instructions, receive from the appropriate Royal Air Force paying authority the pay, allowances, etc. of the rank and branch (or group) in the Royal Air Force corresponding to that held in the Royal Canadian Air Force, except that the following special arrangements will be made in regard to the issue of allowances to dependents in Canada.

The allowances and compulsory allotment from pay in respect of family or other dependents which may be payable under Royal Air Force regulations will, if the family or other dependents reside in Canada, be credited to the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, who will issue to the family or other dependents the allowance and assigned pay which may be payable under Royal Canadian Air Force regulations.

If the pay and allowances admissible under Royal Canadian Air Force regulations should exceed those admissible under Royal Air Force regulations, the difference (after taking into account the payment made under the preceding paragraph) will be issued by the Government of Canada as deferred pay, either on termination of service or otherwise in special circumstances.

Personnel will not be insured under United Kingdom insurance schemes, and any insurance contributions (employers and employees shares) necessary to ensure benefits under Canadian schemes will be paid by the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, who will arrange with the Government of the United Kingdom to recover from pay any employees' shares of such contributions so recoverable.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268115

(b) PUPILS OTHER THAN THOSE ENLISTED IN THE ROYAL CANADIAN AIR FORCE THE ROYAL AUSTRALIAN AIR FORCE AND THE ROYAL NEW ZEALAND AIR FORCE.

Pupils other than those enlisted in the Royal Canadian Air Force, the Royal Australian Air Force and the Royal New Zealand Air Force will be enlisted in the Royal Air Force.

For the period of the journey to Canada, airmen of the Royal Air Force will receive pay, allowances, etc. at the rates and subject to the conditions laid down from time to time in King's Regulations and Air Council Instructions for the Royal Air Force.

During service in Canada, airmen of the Royal Air Force will be attached to the Royal Canadian Air Force, and, subject to the conditions laid down in Financial Regulations and Instructions for the Royal Canadian Air Force on Active Service, they will receive from the appropriate Royal Canadian Air Force paying officer the pay, allowances, etc. of the rank and group in the Royal Canadian Air Force, as appropriate under (a) above, except that the following special arrangements will be made in regard to the issue of allowances to family or other dependants outside Canada.

The allowances and compulsory allotment from pay in respect of family or other dependants which would be appropriate under Royal Air Force regulations will, if the family or other dependant reside outside Canada, be issued by the Government of the United Kingdom, who will reclaim from the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, the amount so issued. The Royal Canadian Air Force officer paying the airmen will deduct from the airmen's pay the amount of the assigned pay under Royal Canadian Air Force regulations.

Airmen will not be insured under Canadian insurance schemes and any insurance contributions (employers and employees shares) necessary to ensure benefits for United Kingdom airmen under United Kingdom schemes will be paid by the Government of the United Kingdom, who will arrange with the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, for the recovery from pay of any employees' shares of such contributions so recoverable.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268116

(c) PUPILS SENT BY AUSTRALIA AND NEW ZEALAND.

Pupils sent by Australia and New Zealand will be enlisted in the Royal Australian Air Force and in the Royal New Zealand Air Force, respectively.

Pay, allowances, etc. for the period of journey to Canada.

For the period of the journey to Canada, airmen of the Royal Australian Air Force and of the Royal New Zealand Air Force will receive pay, allowances, etc. at the rates and subject to the conditions laid down from time to time in the Regulations for the Royal Australian Air Force and the Royal New Zealand Air Force, respectively.

Pay, allowances, etc. during service in Canada.

During service in Canada, airmen of the Royal Australian Air Force and of the Royal New Zealand Air Force will be attached to the Royal Canadian Air Force, and, subject to the conditions laid down in Financial Regulations and Instructions for the Royal Canadian Air Force on Active Service, they will receive from the appropriate Royal Canadian Air Force paying officer the pay, allowances, etc. of the rank and group in the Royal Canadian Air Force, as appropriate under (a) above, except that the following special arrangements will be made in regard to the issue of allowances to family or other dependants outside Canada.

The allowances and compulsory allotment from pay in respect of family or other dependants which would be appropriate under Royal Australian Air Force or Royal New Zealand Air Force regulations will, if the family or other dependants reside outside Canada, be issued by the Government of Australia or the Government of New Zealand, who will reclaim from the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, the amount so issued. The Royal Canadian Air Force officer paying the airman will deduct from the airman's pay the amount of the assigned pay chargeable under Royal Canadian Air Force regulations.

Airmen will not be insured under Canadian insurance schemes, and any insurance contributions (employers and employees shares) necessary to ensure benefits for Australian or New Zealand airmen under Australian or New Zealand schemes will be paid by the Government of Australia or the Government of New Zealand, who will arrange with the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, for the recovery from pay of any employees' shares of such contributions so recoverable.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Pay, allowances, etc. during service with the Royal Air Force.

On embarkation for service with the Royal Air Force, officers and airmen will be attached to that force, and, subject to the conditions laid down in King's Regulations and Air Council Instructions, they will receive from the appropriate Royal Air Force paying authority the pay, allowances, etc. of the rank and branch (or group) in the Royal Air Force corresponding to that held in the Royal Australian Air Force or in the Royal New Zealand Air Force, except that the following special arrangements will be made in regard to the issue of allowances to family or other dependants in Australia or New Zealand.

The allowances and compulsory allotment from pay in respect of family or other dependants which may be payable under Royal Air Force regulations will, if the family or other dependants reside in Australia or New Zealand, be credited to the Government of Australia or to the Government of New Zealand, who will issue to the family or other dependant the allowance and compulsory allotment from pay which may be payable under Royal Australian Air Force or Royal New Zealand Air Force regulations.

If the pay and allowances admissible under Royal Australian Air Force or Royal New Zealand Air Force regulations exceed those admissible under Royal Air Force regulations, and the Government of Australia or the Government of New Zealand decide that this difference is to be credited to the officer or airman, the difference (after taking into account the payment made under the preceding paragraph) will be issued by the Government of Australia or the Government of New Zealand as deferred pay, either on termination of service or otherwise in special circumstances.

Personnel will not be insured under United Kingdom insurance schemes, and any insurance contributions (employers and

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

employees shares) necessary to ensure benefits under Australian or New Zealand schemes will be paid by the Government of Australia or the Government of New Zealand, who will arrange with the Government of the United Kingdom to recover from pay any employees' shares of such contributions so recoverable.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ODS/ET
28 Nov.1939
C 268119

2.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE
PRIME MINISTER:

re air training

Sir Gerald Campbell has given me the attached copy of the note which Colonel Ralston made of the discussion in the War Cabinet yesterday as to the summary of the statement that Canada would like to obtain from the United Kingdom Government. He states that in the telegram which he sent to Mr.Chamberlain last night, he quoted this sentence as embodying the Canadian request. He noted from your telegram of today that you are going to send a further telegram after Council,and hoped that there would not be too much divergence between the form used in your telegram and the form(i.e. the attached sentence) which he had represented to his Government as being the Canadian Government's view.

OSK.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Considering present and future requirements we feel that participation in the Air Training Scheme would provide more effective assistance than any other form of co-operation which Canada could give.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

November 28th,1939.

Discussion as to priority of Air Training Scheme.

1. Initial United Kingdom Proposal. Mr.Chamberlain's telegram of September 26th stated that the scheme was of "first importance" and that the problem of matching German air strength was of "vital importance" and that an overwhelming air force would be needed "in combination with other military measures and economic pressure to bring ultimate victory". The project would have immense influence. "It might even prove decisive". It was added that "in a solution of this problem the overseas parts of the Empire may well be able to play a decisive part."

2. Canadian Reply, September 28th. It refers to War Cabinet's conclusion that a greatly enlarged air force has become of vital importance and adds that Canadian Government fully agrees that Canadian cooperation in this field would be particularly appropriate and probably the most effective in the military sphere which Canada could furnish. We would,therefore,"he prepared to accept the scheme in principle." It was added, after considering the extent of Canadian participation in the proposed air training plan, that it would be necessary in the light thereof to review the plans already made for military and economic cooperation .

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

3. On September 29th a draft telegram was prepared on the subject of an announcement of the scheme containing the following sentence:

> "We assume the British Government would desire to state that the air training plan was the most effective form which cooperation could take in the light of the developments which have already taken place and probable future developments."

It was decided not to send this telegram.

4. In connection with the announcement to be made by the Secretary of State for Air in the British House of Commons on the 10th October, the Prime Minister orally emphasized to Sir Gerald Campbell the desirability of including a statement as to this being the most effective form of military cooperation.

In a letter of the 9th October to Sir Gerald Campbell it was stated that the draft speech did not meet the point which had been indicated on several occasions and which was an essential factor in the decision of the Canadian Government to agree in principle to a scheme of greatly enlarged air training. It was suggested that the following revised paragraph should be included:

> "It will be seen that the scheme involves a concentration of air training largely in Canada. With the facilities which Canada possesses, this would in the

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268123

opinion of the Government of the United Kingdom constitute the most decisive and essential effort that Canada could put forward in the field of military cooperation."

On the 10th October after consulting London by telephone Sir Gerald Campbell stated that the United Kingdom were not prepared to include a statement to the above effect, presumably on the ground that they did not wish to indicate to the Germans that our overseas military force would be in any way less than our air contribution. They were including in the place of the second sentence quoted immediately above the following:

> "With the facilities that Canada possesses, this effort by Canada may in the opinion of the United Kingdom Government prove to be a contribution of the most essential and decisive character."

This suggestion was accepted and Sir Kingsley Wood's statement was made in these terms. The statement did not include any reference to the relative importance of the plan.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268124

5. November 14th. At a meeting between the War Committee of the Cabinet and Lord Riverdale and Captain Balfour, it was stated by Canadian Ministers that the proposed agreement was subject first, to the satisfactory outcome of the discussions between the United Kingdom and Canada on financial and economic war problems, and second, to the United Kingdom stating their opinion that Canadian participation in the air training scheme should take priority over all other Canadian commitments not already entered into. Captain Balfour and Lord Riverdale ~~concurred.~~ agreed that the Agreement was subject to these two conditions

The substance of these two conditions was communicated to London by the British Mission in a telegram which was shown to Dr.Clark and Mr. Heeney and which in their opinion fairly represented the Canadian position.

6. November 27th, Mr.Chamberlain's reply.

Economic relations - Hopes discussions would be brought to a mutually satisfactory conclusion as soon as possible after Mr. Towers had joined Mr. Crerar - Fully understands such Canadian contribution to air training scheme is subject to such an agreement being reached and forecasts that given goodwill that exists on both sides, there is no reason to suppose that such an agreement would not be reached.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268125

Regarding priority, Mr. Chamberlain assumes that what the Canadian Government wished was an assurance that their views as to preference of effort was primarily for themselves to decide. Mr.Chamberlain states he entirely agrees that it is for the Canadian Government to decide on priority of her effort and the United Kingdom could not think of interfering whatever their own opinions might be. Mr.Chamberlain adds that "we ourselves have attached the highest priority to our training scheme, as indeed to the air effort as a whole, which we believe may be a decisive factor in the war." He concludes the discussion on this point with the following sentence:

> "But we should not have liked to emphasize the priority of the training scheme lest it should have embarrassing effects on our relations with the French who are pressing us strongly to increase our effort on land."

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

RR

PRESS CLIPPINGS C268126

Office of The Prime Minister

Name of Publication Ottawa M.Citizen

Date November 28, 1939

Subject "Air Training"

Basis Reached For Agreement On Empire Plan

Formal Announcement Is Made Concerning Air Training. Proposals Sent To Respective Govts.

Formal announcement was made last night from the office of Prime Minister Mackenzie King that basis of agreement had been worked out between the missions and committees representing the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and Canada on the establishment of an Empire air training center in Canada.

Referred to Govts.

This basis for agreement is now being referred to the respective governments concerned for their approval. The announcement was made following a meeting of the missions and the Dominion cabinet.

Formal discussions on the project were initiated here early in October by the British mission headed by Lord Riverdale. Later a mission came from Australia headed by Hon. J. V. Fairbairn, then minister of civil aviation and now minister for air, and a third mission from New Zealand headed by Group-Captain H. W. L. Saunders.

Mr. Fairbairn left for Australia last night, accompanied by his secretary, R. E. Elford. The New Zealand mission will probably leave Wednesday night and the British mission heads will follow shortly after.

Staff Organizations

All three countries will later establish staff organizations here to administer their individual parts in the air training scheme.

Canada's representatives in the discussions were Defence Minister Rogers, Transport Minister Howe and Finance Minister Ralston, with Prime Minister Mackenzie King as chairman, assisted by departmental experts.

Official Announcement

Yesterday afternoon's final conference included the mission heads and chief advisers with the entire cabinet. The following official announcement was made:

"The missions and the committees, representing the governments of the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and Canada, have completed their discussions with regard to the joint air training scheme. They have worked out a basis of agreement which is now being referred to the respective governments for decision."

Australia and New Zealand will send airmen with preliminary training to complete their instruction in Canada before going overseas, under the scheme shortly to be launched.

Great Britain will also send partly trained personnel and probably a large number of instructors, the former to complete their training here and the latter to aid in the instruction of fliers.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Épreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS C268176

Office of
The Prime Minister

Name of Publication Ottawa Citizen

Date November 25, 1939

Subject Air Training

Basis Reached For Agreement On Empire Plan

Formal Announcement Is Made Concerning Air Training. Proposals Sent To Respective Govts.

Formal announcement was made last night from the office of Prime Minister Mackenzie King that basis of agreement had been worked out between the missions and committees representing the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and Canada on the establishment of an Empire air training center in Canada.

Referred to Govts.

This basis for agreement is now being referred to the respective governments concerned for their approval. The announcement was made following a meeting of the missions and the Dominion cabinet.

Formal discussions on the project were initiated here early in October by the British mission headed by Lord Riverdale. Later a mission came from Australia headed by Hon. J. V. Fairbairn, then minister of civil aviation and now minister for air, and a third mission from New Zealand headed by Group-Captain H. W. L. Saunders.

Mr. Fairbairn left for Australia last night, accompanied by his secretary, R. E. Elford. The New Zealand mission will probably leave Wednesday night and the British mission heads will follow shortly after.

Staff Organizations

All three countries will later establish staff organizations here to administer their individual parts in the air training scheme.

Canada's representatives in the discussions were Defence Minister Rogers, Transport Minister Howe and Finance Minister Ralston, with Prime Minister Mackenzie King as chairman, assisted by departmental experts.

Official Announcement

Yesterday afternoon's final conference included the mission heads and chief advisers with the entire cabinet. The following official announcement was made:

> "The missions and the committees, representing the governments of the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and Canada, have completed their discussions with regard to the joint air training scheme. They have worked out a basis of agreement which is now being referred to the respective governments for decision."

Australia and New Zealand will send airmen with preliminary training to complete their instruction in Canada before going overseas, under the scheme shortly to be launched.

Great Britain will also send partly trained personnel and probably a large number of instructors, the former to complete their training here and the latter to aid in the instruction of fliers.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS C268126

Office of The Prime Minister

Name of Publication Ottawa M. Citizen

Date November 28, 1939

Subject "Air Training"

Basis Reached For Agreement On Empire Plan

Formal Announcement Is Made Concerning Air Training. Proposals Sent To Respective Govts.

Formal announcement was made last night from the office of Prime Minister Mackenzie King that basis of agreement had been worked out between the missions and committees representing the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and Canada on the establishment of an Empire air training center in Canada.

Referred to Govts.

This basis for agreement is now being referred to the respective governments concerned for their approval. The announcement was made following a meeting of the missions and the Dominion cabinet.

Formal discussions on the project were initiated here early in October by the British mission headed by Lord Riverdale. Later a mission came from Australia headed by Hon. J. V. Fairbairn, then minister of civil aviation and now minister for air, and a third mission from New Zealand headed by Group-Captain H. W. L. Saunders.

Mr. Fairbairn left for Australia last night, accompanied by his secretary, R. E. Elford. The New Zealand mission will probably leave Wednesday night and the British mission heads will follow shortly after.

Staff Organizations

All three countries will later establish staff organizations here to administer their individual parts in the air training scheme.

Canada's representatives in the discussions were Defence Minister Rogers, Transport Minister Howe and Finance Minister Ralston, with Prime Minister Mackenzie King as chairman, assisted by departmental experts.

Official Announcement

Yesterday afternoon's final conference included the mission heads and chief advisers with the entire cabinet. The following official announcement was made:

"The missions and the committees, representing the governments of the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and Canada, have completed their discussions with regard to the joint air training scheme. They have worked out a basis of agreement which is now being referred to the respective governments for decision."

Australia and New Zealand will send airmen with preliminary training to complete their instruction in Canada before going overseas, under the scheme shortly to be launched.

Great Britain will also send partly trained personnel and probably a large number of instructors, the former to complete their training here and the latter to aid in the instruction of fliers.

REPEAT
REPETER

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

AIR TRAINING SCHEME

	Original	Final
1. Total cost of Scheme:	Millions 888	Millions 607
2. Total cost by years:
1939-40	27	28
1940-41	203	188
1941-42	333	214
1942-43	288	164
3. Total cost to Canada:	374	353
1939-40	10	18
1940-41	75	94
1941-42	135	109
1942-43	135	122
4. Total annual output in pilots and air-crews:	28,990	18,980
Canada's share -	13,915	15,314
Australia's share -	11,596	2,028
New Zealand's share -	3,479	1,638

5. Total annual output under final scheme:

	Pilots	Observers	Gunners
May 1st 1940-41	850	612	1,160
" 1941-42	5,372	3,111	5,452
" 1942-43	7,072	4,388	7,540

(of these approximately 80% will be Canadians)

Note - Above figures are approximate only.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

6. Total number of schools in Canada under final scheme:

Inital Training Schools - ✓	3
Elementary Flying Training Schools ✓	13
Service Flying Training Schools	16	Now (with 2)
Air Observer Schools	10	"
Bombing and Gunnery Schools	10	"
Air Navigation Schools	2	"
Wireless Schools	4	"
Total	58

It will also be necessary to establish in Canada approximately 16 schools and depots for the training of the staffs of the 58 schools above, and for organization, recruiting and maintenance purposes.

(Will now undertake)

A.D.P.H.

A. D. P. H.

November 29th, 1939;

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R. Air Training

OFFICE OF THE PRIME MINISTER

MEMORANDUM

November 30th, 1939.

Strictly Confidential

C268129

For the Prime Minister:

Re: Air Training Scheme - administration and organization.

Attached are copies of correspondence exchanged between Mr. Rogers and Captain Balfour, Mr. Fairbairn and Group Captain Saunders. These are for the Prime Minister's information and subsequent fyling with war records at Laurier House.

A. D. P. H.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268130

Note

"Mr. Rogers is proposing to Captain Balfour two slight revisions in the text of his letter, namely, in paragraph (4) line 1, substitute "supervision" for "direction"; in paragraph (7) line 1, substitute "supplementary" for "separate".

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268131

COPY

Ottawa, November 27, 1939.

Dear Captain Balfour,

Since your arrival in Ottawa, you and I have had a number of discussions with respect to the future administration and organization of the air training plan in Canada. I now have pleasure in confirming my understanding of the conclusions we have reached regarding the recommendations we should make to our respective Governments.

(1) The air training plan in Canada will be administered through the organization of the R.C.A.F. and the executive command shall be in the hands of the R.C.A.F.

(2) You will recall that I pointed out to you that the R.C.A.F. command will be concentrated largely on the training scheme. As a result of this fact the work relating to administration, supply and operation for our other squadrons at home and abroad will be a comparatively small task in relation to that of the training plan.

(3) You readily accepted the view that, so far as the training plan operates within the boundaries of Canada, the Canadian Government must be responsible.

(4) For the general direction of the air training plan it is proposed to set up a Supervisory Board in Canada. The main duties of this Board would be generally to supervise the financial administration of the plan and to watch and check from time to time the progress that is being made in setting up the organization which, when fully developed, will be capable of completing the training of the desired number of pilots and crews.

(5) The Supervisory Board will be under the chairmanship of the Minister of National Defence and will include the following members:

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Minister of National Defence,

Minister of Finance,

Minister of Transport,

Representatives of the United Kingdom Government, the Australian Government and the New Zealand Government,

Deputy Minister for Air, Department of National Defence,

Chief of Air Staff.

(6) The contact between this Board and the Government would be through the Chairman of the Board, and the contact with the R.C.A.F. would be through the Chief of Air Staff.

(7) Provision will be made for a separate financial control of the expenditures in accordance with the general agreement and arrangements will be made to keep the Board informed.

(8) It is understood that you will be making provision for the appointment of a Liaison Officer in Chief R.A.F. in Canada. This officer will, if you desire, have a seat on the Board as the United Kingdom representative. It is assumed that the other interested Governments will make similar appointments.

(9) It is understood that the Liaison Officer in Chief will be free to report to your own Government in regard to the progress of the plan.

(10) He would have authority to visit any stations or units of the plan at any time.

(11) He would make any criticisms or suggestions to the Board having first given notice of his intention to do so to the Chief of Air Staff, in so far as they related to service matters.

(12) He would assist in keeping the R.C.A.F. advised as to any new developments in training technique.

(13) It is understood that Liaison Officers appointed by the Governments of Australia and New Zealand would have

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268134

similar privileges and duties.

(14) With respect to the loan of staff and instructional personnel I made it clear to you during our discussions that we would appreciate the full co-operation of the various Governments concerned. Having regard to the proportions of the air training plan, we readily understand that we would require the loan of considerable numbers of R.A.F. personnel who would hold staff and instructor appointments within the Canadian organization. This will be not only necessary for the successful working of the air training plan, but will also express our mutual desire for continuing co-operation in the successful conduct of the plan.

(15) It is also hoped that officers for similar duties will be obtained from the Australian and New Zealand Air Forces.

Our discussions on these questions of administration and organization have been most valuable. I feel sure that any further points which may arise as the training plan develops will be settled on the same basis of consultation and co-operation by the Governments concerned.

Yours sincerely,

(Sgd) Norman McL. Rogers.

Captain H. H. Balfour, M.C., M.P.,
Under-Secretary of State for Air,
His Majesty's Government of the United Kingdom,
Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268135

COPY

UNITED KINGDOM AIR MISSION

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Ottawa, November 27th, 1939.

Honourable Norman McL. Rogers, M.P.,
Minister of National Defence,
Ottawa.

Dear Mr. Rogers:

Thank you for your letter of November the 27th on the question of the future administration and organization of the Air Training Scheme in Canada. Its contents confirm the general conclusions we have reached during our discussions since I have been in Ottawa.

I leave for England early tomorrow morning and amongst other matters, which I shall place before my government, I shall submit our proposals and take steps immediately to let your government know, through the High Commissioner in the United Kingdom, whether the conclusions we have come to are acceptable.

Yours sincerely,

(Sgd) Harold Balfour.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R

C 268136

COPY

Ottawa, November 29, 1939.

Dear Mr. Fairbairn,

I enclose herewith copies of letters exchanged between Captain Balfour and myself on the administration and organization of the Air Training Plan in Canada. Captain Balfour informed me that he had discussed with you and Group Captain Saunders the general principles set out in my letter and that he believed the proposed arrangements would be acceptable to the Australian and New Zealand Missions as proposals which they would submit to their respective Governments.

If these proposals are acceptable to the Governments concerned, the present understanding with respect to the administration and organization of the Air Training Plan in Canada can then be given formal expression as a supplement to the general Memorandum of Agreement if its terms are found acceptable.

I am proposing to Captain Balfour two slight revisions in the text of my letter. In paragraph (4) line 1, substitute "supervision" for "direction"; in paragraph (7) line 1, substitute "supplementary" for "separate".

Yours sincerely,

The Honourable J. V. Fairbairn,
Australia House,
LONDON.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268137

COPY

Ottawa, November 29, 1939.

Dear Group Captain Saunders,

I enclose herewith copies of letters exchanged between Captain Balfour and myself on the administration and organization of the Air Training Plan in Canada. Captain Balfour informed me that he had discussed with Mr. Fairbairn and youself the general principles set out in my letter and that he believed the proposed arrangements would be acceptable to the Australian and New Zealand Missions as proposals which they would submit to their respective Governments.

If these proposals are acceptable to the Governments concerned, the present understanding with respect to the administration and organization of the Air Training Plan in Canada can then be given formal expression as a supplement to the general Memorandum of Agreement if its terms are found acceptable.

I am proposing to Captain Balfour two slight revisions in the text of my letter. In paragraph (4) line 1, substitute "supervision" for "direction"; in paragraph (7) line 1, substitute "supplementary" for "separate".

Yours sincerely,

Group Captain H. W. L. Saunders,
New Zealand Air Mission,
Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Copy of letter to Capt. Balfour from Mr Rogers, Min Nat Def. Nov. 27

Memorandum re

air training administration

C 268138

During the last few days you and I have had a number of discussions with respect to the future administration and organization of the air training scheme in Canada. I now have pleasure in confirming my understanding of the conclusions we have reached regarding the recommendations we should make to our respective Governments.

(1) It is the intention that the air training scheme in Canada will be administered through the organization of the R.C.A.F. and that the executive command shall be in the hands of the R.C.A.F.

(2) You will recall that I pointed out to you that the R.C.A.F. command will largely be concentrated on the training scheme. As a result of this fact the work relating to administration, supply and operation for our other squadrons at home and abroad will be a comparatively small task in relation to that of the training plan.

(3) You readily accepted the view that so far as the training plan operates within the boundaries of Canada, the Canadian Government must be responsible.

(4) For the general supervision direction of the air training

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

scheme it is proposed to set up a Board of Management in Canada. The main duties of this Board would be generally to supervise the financial administration of the scheme and to watch and check from time to time the progress that is being made in setting up the organization which, when fully developed, will be capable of completing the training of the desired number of pilots and crews.

(5) The Board of Management will be under the chairmanship of the Minister of National Defence and will be composed of the following members:

Minister of National Defence

Minister of Finance

Minister of Transport

Representatives of the United Kingdom Government, the Australian Government and the New Zealand Government

Deputy Minister for Air, Department of National Defence

Chief of Air Staff

(6) The contact between this Board and the Government would be through the Chairman of the Board, and the contact with the R.C.A.F. would be through the Chief of Air Staff.

(7) Provision will be made for a ~~separate~~ financial control of the expenditures in accordance with the general

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

agreement, and arrangements will be made to keep the Board informed.

(8) It is understood that you will be making provision for the appointment of a Liaison Officer in Chief R.A.F. in Canada. This officer will, if you desire, have a seat on the Board as the United Kingdom representative. It is assumed that the other interested Governments will make similar appointments.

(9) It is understood that the Liaison Officer in Chief will be free to report to your own Government from time to time in regard to the progress of the scheme.

(10) He would have authority to visit any stations or units of the scheme at any time.

(11) He would make any criticisms or suggestions to the Board having first given notice of his intention to do so to the Chief of Air Staff, in so far as they related to service matters.

(12) He would assist in keeping the R.C.A.F. advised as to any new developments in training technique.

(13) It is understood that Liaison Officers appointed by the Governments of Australia and New Zealand would have similar privileges and duties.

(14) With respect to the loan of staff and instructional personnel I made it clear to you during our discussions

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

that we would appreciate the full co-operation of the various Governments concerned. Having regard to the proportions of the air training scheme, we readily understand that we would require the loan of considerable numbers of R.A.F. personnal who would hold staff and instructor appointments within the Canadian organization. This will be not only necessary for the successful working of the air training plan, but will also express our mutual desire for continuing co-operation in the successful conduct of the plan.

(15) It is also hoped that officers for similar duties will be obtained from the Australian and New Zealand Air Forces.

Original cable from Ottawa read & approved by Council with changes
Nov 28-39

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

SECRET AND PRIVATE

C26814

MEMORANDUM FOR DR. SKELTON:

Re: Telegram No. 116, Section 5

I would suggest that the word "military" be inserted before the word "cooperation" in line 6 thereof, so as to make clear that military co-operation is not regarded as more important than economic co-operation. Members of the financial mission, in particular, have stressed the great importance of not permitting skilled mechanics to leave industrial establishments to enter any of the military services, repeatedly stating that the economic effort will probably count for most in the end.

I would also suggest that, at the beginning of the last line, the words "at the earliest possible moment" should be inserted. These are the words with which paragraph 4 concludes. Apart from mention of military and psychological points of view, they clearly indicate the importance attached by both the British and the French to a land force from Canada reaching the theatre of war at the earliest moment. It is only in that connection that the British Government have thus far expressed their desire for a land force from Canada. Indeed early despatches indicated that men were seeking to enlist much too rapidly and that the sending of too many men overseas would be an embarrassment. Not to insert these words is to destroy altogether the significance of any statement as to priority in its relation to the air training scheme as providing the most effective assistance towards ultimate victory.

It might be well to get from the Chief of Staff of the Department of Defence, an exclusive statement as to the significance of the word "military" as applied to all defence services, as applicable to army, navy and air services alike, and as distinguished from economic forms of war effort.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

The word "would" in the second last line of the 5th paragraph should perhaps be changed to "will" in consequence of the other changes.

In a word, I am quite in favour of the British Government's position as stated in paragraph 4, and all that I would ask is that the British Government's position with respect to the matters referred to in paragraph 5 should not differ in possible meaning or emphasis from the meaning as set forth in paragraph 4. It is, of course, desirable that before any reply is finally despatched, that it should be approved by members of the government who have had most to do with the negotiations to date.

W. L. M. K.

December 1, 1939

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

Mil. Co-op. ~~Expend. Fund~~
Air Training

TELEGRAM

C 268144

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

MOST IMMEDIATE LONDON, December 1, 1939.

CYPHER

No. 116

No. 116. Your telegram No. 120, November 28th. Following for your Prime Minister from my Prime Minister, Begins:

1. I am very grateful to you for the full statement of your views which greatly clarifies the position.

2. I am satisfied that no question of principle divides us. Our common approach to the problem expressed most clearly in your personal and secret telegram of November 4th proceeds on basis that there is no thought on the part of our Governments or our people of stinting or sparing our efforts or resources and that we are determined to throw ourselves into the war to our utmost capacity.

3. There are obvious limits to the efforts of which Canada is capable, as indeed there are to the resources of all parts of the British Commonwealth and our common concern is to put these resources to the best use in the prosecution of the war until victory is achieved.

4. I now understand that you consider it essential to publish the opinion of the United Kingdom Government that the Air Training Scheme should have priority in Canada's war effort. This is, in fact, our view and we have no objection to its being made public, provided it is made clear at the same time that we also attach very great importance both from a military and a psychological point of view to the presence of Canadian land

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

TELEGRAM

C 268145

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON,

forces in the theatre of war at the earliest possible moment.

5. We would therefore suggest that the announcement should be in the following terms. "The United Kingdom Government have informed us that, considering present and future requirements, they feel that participation in the Air Training Scheme would provide for more effective assistance towards our ultimate victory than any other form of cooperation which Canada can give. At the same time they would wish it to be clearly understood that they would welcome no less heartily the presence of Canadian land forces in the theatre of war." Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS.

Received Ottawa 11.55 a.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

TELEGRAM

C 268145

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON,

forces in the theatre of war at the earliest possible moment.

5. We would therefore suggest that the announcement should be in the following terms. "The United Kingdom Government have informed us that, considering present and future requirements, they feel that participation in the Air Training Scheme would provide for more effective assistance towards our ultimate victory than any other form of cooperation which Canada can give. At the same time they would wish it to be clearly understood that they would welcome no less heartily the presence of Canadian land forces in the theatre of war." Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS.

Received Ottawa 11.55 a.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R" C 268146 Pt.

FROM: THE PRIME MINISTER OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA, CANBERRA.

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA.

SECRET

CYPHER CANBERRA, December 2nd, 1939.

Secret. Members of Australian Mission Empire Air Training Conference now all travelling en route to Australia and cannot be contacted. Would appreciate information on scheme as follows:-

(a) What is progression of observer through Training School from initial ground training centre to active service.

(b) In general what subjects are taught in Observers' School of Wireless, Air Gunners' School, Bombing and Gunnery School and Air Navigation School.

(c) Was any rate of wastage for replacement of gift aircraft from United Kingdom funds submitted at Conference.

(d) Are you able yet to say what numbers of each class of personnel you will train in Canada up to March 1943 and time table arrival Canada to begin training.

(e) Earliest possible advice desired regarding relevant Canadian rates of pay, allowance, pension, etc. Ends.

Read Mackenzie 2-12-39

PRIME MINISTER OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA

Rec'd Ottawa: 2.37 A.M., December 2nd, 1939.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

C 268147 ODS/AH

December 4th, 1939.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER.

Air Training.

Sir Gerald Campbell called yesterday after his return from Halifax to enquire whether any reply had been sent to Mr. Chamberlain's telegram No. 116. I told him that the matter was before the Prime Minister and the three Ministers immediately concerned. The Minister of National Defence, however, would not be returning until Monday night. The question would be considered on Tuesday and a reply sent then.

Sir Gerald said he had been glad to see that the sentence suggested regarding the air training priority had been agreed to. He admitted that at first glance he had been somewhat uncertain as to the effect of the second sentence, which no doubt had been put in by "honest Halifax" for fear of the effect on French opinion. On reflection, however, it seemed to him entirely clear that the sentence was meant to deal with present plans for sending a division to France rather than to apply to the future. (I did not tell him that the Prime Minister had considered emphasizing this present phase of the situation by suggesting the insertion of the words "at the earliest possible moment" found in paragraph 4 of Mr. Chamberlain's telegram). Sir Gerald referred to press

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268148

articles, including the one in the Montreal Star of Saturday, referring to the scheme as costing eight hundred million dollars and Canada's share as being 80% as a reason for reaching conclusions as early as possible to avoid too erroneous guesses.

I told him that I understood it was still necessary to obtain the consent of Australia and New Zealand. Sir Gerald said that Fairbairn had sent a letter to Lord Riverdale authorizing him to initial the agreement provided no changes of any importance were made, and that Saunders had sent a letter to Lord Riverdale and himself to the same effect just before leaving. I said I was not clear whether their initialing meant final consent from the two Governments. He thought it did, but he would send us copies of Fairbairn's and Saunders' letters. He added he understood from Lord Riverdale that Colonel Ralston had gone over the agreement again and that any changes that would be made were clerical and not of importance.

In connection with revision of this second sentence, its application to the present could be made doubly clear if instead of saying that "they would welcome no less

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

heartily the presence" they could say that "they have welcomed no less heartily the presence (or the arrival),etc." This phrasing, of course, would only be possible if the announcement were not being used until the actual arrival of the first division in England and if England can be called the "theatre of war".

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

file re

C 268130

Confidential

Ottawa, December 5th, 1939.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER:

Re: Air Training Scheme

Attached are copies of letters exchanged between Lord Riverdale and Mr. Ralston, with respect to the provision of Canadian dollars by the United Kingdom government for the Australian and New Zealand contributions, under the Scheme, if required.

At Mr. Ralston's request, the original of Lord Riverdale's letter and a copy of Mr. Ralston's reply, have been sent to Dr. Skelton, to be kept with the records of the department, pending disposition of the proposed Memorandum of Agreement.

A. D. P. H.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268151

COPY

MINISTER OF FINANCE

CANADA

Ottawa, December 4, 1939.

The
Lord Riverdale,
United Kingdom Air Mission,
House of Commons,
Ottawa.

Dear Lord Riverdale:

I acknowledge with thanks your letter of December 3rd, respecting the provision by the Government of the United Kingdom of Canadian dollars for the Australian and New Zealand Governments on the latter's request, in connection with the proposed Memorandum of Agreement in regard to the scheme for the training of pilots and aircraft crews in Canada, which is now under discussion.

Yours sincerely,

(Sgd) J. L. Ralston.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

UNITED KINGDOM AIR MISSION C 268152

Strictly Confidential

House of Commons,
Ottawa.
3rd December, 1939.

Dear Colonel Ralston:

In the course of our discussions about the proposed Memorandum of Agreement in regard to the scheme for training of pilots and aircraft crews in Canada, the question was raised as to difficulties which the Governments of Australia and New Zealand might experience in raising the Canadian dollars necessary to make the payments which under the scheme they undertake to make from time to time to the Canadian Government as the administrator of the scheme.

I am authorised by the Government of the United Kingdom to confirm what I told you when you last mentioned this point to me, namely, that the Government of the United Kingdom will be prepared, in case such difficulties arise, to find for the Australian and New Zealand Governments, if they so request, the Canadian dollars which will be required for this purpose.

Yours sincerely,

(Sgd) Riverdale.

Col. the Hon. J. L. Ralston
Minister of Finance
Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

ODS/HMP.
December 6th, 1939.

C 268133

MEMORANDUM FOR THE

PRIME MINISTER -

Attached is the Air Training telegram sent last night.

Sir Gerald Campbell called up to inquire if a decision had been reached. I told him that a slight modification in the announcement had been proposed. He did not think there would be any difficulty about it, but he went on to say that he assumed if a reply could be received on these points this afternoon, it would be possible to initial the agreement. I told him this did not necessarily follow. I then got in touch with Mr. Rogers to ascertain whether any decision had been made in Council other than as regards the announcement. He told me that it had not and that the matters of administration and organization were still outstanding. He suggested that, if necessary, we could indicate acceptance of the agreement "subject to confirmation of letters exchanged between the Minister of National Defence and Captain Balfour, regarding administration and organization of training plan in Canada, and to further assurance that the United Kingdom will accept the principle that Canadian personnel from the training plan will, on request from the Canadian Government, be organized in R.C.A.F. units and formations in the field."

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

As I did not know what was in either the letter or the agreement, I thought it simpler at this stage to add the final sentence in the telegram attached, regarding an answer to our other points. At the same time I suggested to Sir Gerald Campbell, who was saying Lord Riverdale was anxious to go out of town, that the best way to speed up the matter would be for him to telegraph immediately to his Government, reminding them of the points still outstanding. At the same time I read him the sentence above that Mr. Rogers had suggested.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

C 268155

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS, LONDON

IMMEDIATE

CYPHER

NO. 125

Ottawa, December 5th, 1939.

Your telegram No. 116, December 1st. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister, Begins:

1. My colleagues and I have noted with pleasure the confirmation given by your telegram of the common approach made by the Governments of the United Kingdom and Canada to the problem of ensuring the most effective utilization of the resources available for the successful prosecution of the war.

2. We appreciate the importance you attach to including in any public statement a reference to the presence in the theatre of war of Canadian land troops at the earliest possible moment. We quite concur in the inclusion of such a reference, and would suggest the incorporation in the announcement as set forth in paragraph 5 of your telegram the phrase at the end of paragraph 4, that is, after the concluding words of paragraph 5,"in the theatre of war", add "at the earliest possible moment." We would also suggest a further clarifying modification in the first sentence of the announcement, by inserting the word "military" before "cooperation." With these modifications the announcement would be entirely acceptable to us. I assume a communication on the other points mentioned in paragraph 7 of my telegram No. 120 of November 28th will be sent as soon as there has been an opportunity of consulting with Captain Balfour. Ends.

Dec 5. 39.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

"R"

TELEGRAM

C 268156

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

IMMEDIATE

LONDON, December 7th, 1939.

SECRET

CYPHER

NO. 120.

No. 120. Secret. Your telegram No. 125 of December 6th. Following for Prime Minister from my Prime Minister, Begins:

1. We are willing in the circumstances to accept two modifications suggested in paragraph 2 of your telegram and are happy to think that this point is now disposed of to our mutual satisfaction.

2. As regards questions mentioned in paragraph 7 of your telegram No. 120 of November 28th, we shall examine proposals being brought by Captain Balfour immediately he arrives and will communicate with you about them as soon as possible. He has unfortunately been delayed by bad weather and has not yet arrived. Ends.

SECRETA Y OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

C 268137

Ottawa, December 6th, 1939.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER:

Re: Air Training Scheme

Following the Prime Minister's direction, I suggested to the U. K. Air Mission that they mark a copy of the final version of the Memorandum, indicating such portions which, in their opinion, should, for military or other reasons, remain secret.

This has now been done, and I propose to pass similarly marked copies of the Memorandum to the Minister of National Defence and the Minister of Finance, for their confidential comment in case their departments may have other ideas as to portions of the document inappropriate to be made public.

Is it the Prime Minister's wish that the Memorandum of Agreement should now be printed, and if so, should expurgated and unexpurgated editions be made?

Would the Prime Minister wish me to obtain the views of Mr. Rogers and Mr. Ralston with regard to printing?

A. D. P. H.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

TELEGRAM

C 268158

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

IMMEDIATE

SECRET

CYPHER

NO. 120.

LONDON, December 7th, 1939.

No. 120. Secret. Your telegram No. 125 of December 6th. Following for Prime Minister from my Prime Minister, Begins:

1. We are willing in the circumstances to accept two modifications suggested in paragraph 2 of your telegram and are happy to think that this point is now disposed of to our mutual satisfaction.

2. As regards questions mentioned in paragraph 7 of your telegram No. 120 of November 28th, we shall examine proposals being brought by Captain Balfour immediately he arrives and will communicate with you about them as soon as possible. He has unfortunately been delayed by bad weather and has not yet arrived. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

Rec 'd Ottawa: 11.55 A.M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

"R"

Air Training

C 268159

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS OTTAWA

TO: THE PRIME MINISTER OF AUSTRALIA, CANBERRA.

Ottawa, 7th December, 1939

Telegram No 23

Secret

Cypher

Most Immediate

Your telegram December 2nd regarding air training information. Following information is furnished by Department of National Defence. Begins.

(a) The progression of observers through Training Schools is:

Initial training	-	4 weeks
Air Observers	-	12 weeks
Bomber and Gunnery	-	6 weeks
Air Navigation School	-	4 weeks.

(b) For subjects taught in Observers School of Wireless, Air Gunners' School, Bombing and Gunnery School and Air Navigation School, see W.T.O.S.D.138, parts one and two.

(c) The rate of wastage for the replacement of Gift Aircraft from United Kingdom fund was set at twenty five per cent initial equipment, Engines twenty per cent initial equipment, Appendix "A" Equipment twenty per cent initial equipment.

(d) Assuming "Z" Day 1st May, 1940, monthly intake and commencement training in Canada of Australian personnel as follows:-

Pilots	- 40 from 21st August, 1940 80 from 11th December, 1940
Air Observers	- 42 from 16th October, 1940
Air Gunners	- 72 from 16th October, 1940

Output Australian personnel by March, 1943, after deducting wastage

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268160

during training as follows:-

Pilots - 1836
Air Observers - 816
Air Gunners - 1508

(e) Advice regarding relevant Canadian rates of pay,allowances,pensions,etc., will be sent at the earliest moment.

Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

Air Training

2nd Draft

Proposed Press release

C 268161

CONFIDENTIAL

December 8, 1939

BRITISH COMMONWEALTH AIR TRAINING PLAN

Agreement has now been reached by the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand on a Co-operative Air Training Plan. The details of the agreement were under discussion for several weeks at Ottawa. They have since been approved by the Governments concerned.

The purpose of the plan, as it will be recalled, is to achieve, by co-operative effort within the British Commonwealth, air forces of overwhelming strength. The many varied details of a plan of the magnitude proposed have necessarily been the subject of prolonged and careful scrutiny.

The air training programmes of the several countries have been so planned that full advantage will be taken of their existing establishments and, in particular, of the special facilities and great natural advantages for air training possessed by Canada.

The development of the plan will result in an extensive establishment of air training schools particularly in Canada. It will achieve a steadily increasing output of pilots, observers and air gunners which combined with the output in the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand, will enable the four countries to meet the greatly increasing requirements of trained personnel for their respective air forces.

Schools for pilots will be set up in all the participating Dominions. Schools for air observers and wireless operator-air gunners will be set up in Canada and Australia only. All pupils in the categories of air observers and wireless operator-air gunners from New Zealand, and some of the pupils in these categories from Australia will be trained in Canada. Some of the pupils from Australia

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

and New Zealand will get their advanced flying training in Canada. Pupils from the United Kingdom and Newfoundland will also be sent to Canada for training.

As a result of the discussion, it was realized that the training facilities required in Australia and New Zealand would be capable of training a larger personnel than was needed to maintain the air forces of the two countries. It was agreed that their facilities for training in excess of local needs should be used to train Australians and New Zealanders for service overseas in furtherance of the common cause.

The joint training will be carried on in Canada. The training in Australia and New Zealand will be confined to pupils from those countries. Training for the Royal Canadian Air Force will be merged with the joint training programme. Canada will necessarily have the predominant part in the joint training programme and Canada's participation will be a correspondingly decisive factor in its success. The joint training programme will be administered by the Canadian Government.

Steps are being taken to ensure that the plan in all its aspects, as regards both the training of personnel and the provision of the aircraft required, will be brought into full operation with all possible speed. In a short time many thousands of young men from different parts of the Commonwealth will be working and training side by side in the common effort to which they and their countries have devoted themselves.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

With the completion of these negotiations, the world has once more been given a stirring proof of the manner in which the members of the British Commonwealth of Nations are determined to co-operate with each other and with their Allies to the full to ensure that the great causes for which they are contending shall prevail.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

Keep for Mr. Rogers
Air Training

UNITED KINGDOM AIR MISSION C 268184

House of Commons
Ottawa.

8th December, 1939.

Dear Mr. Rogers,

I have considered your letter of today's date, about the interpretation of paragraph 15 of the Memorandum of Agreement between the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand, relating to training of pilots and aircraft crews in Canada, and I do not think that it would be in conflict with the provisions of paragraph 14 of that Agreement, in which it is stated that the pupils who complete their training, other than those placed at the disposal of the Government of Canada for the filling of vacancies which occur in the Home Defence squadrons of the Royal Canadian Air Force, will on completion of their training be placed at the disposal of the Government of the United Kingdom, for me to assure you that paragraph 15 of the Agreement implies that requests by the Canadian Government for the incorporation in Royal Canadian Air Force units in the field of Canadian pupils who have been trained in Canada under the Dominion Air Training Scheme will, in all circumstances in which it is feasible, be readily accepted by the Government of the United Kingdom.

Yours sincerely,

(sgd.) Riverdale.

The Hon. Norman McLeod Rogers,
Minister of National Defence,
O t t a w a.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268165

CONFIDENTIAL

December 8, 1939

BRITISH COMMONWEALTH AIR TRAINING PLAN

Agreement has now been reached by the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand on a Co-operative Air Training Plan. The details of the agreement were under discussion for several weeks at Ottawa. They have since been approved by the Governments concerned.

The purpose of the plan, as it will be recalled, is to achieve, by co-operative effort within the British Commonwealth, air forces of overwhelming strength. The many varied details of a plan of the magnitude proposed have necessarily been the subject of prolonged and careful scrutiny.

The air training programmes of the several countries have been so ~~planned~~ coordinated that full advantage will be taken of their existing establishments and, in particular, of the special facilities and great natural advantages for air training possessed by ~~Canada~~ the Dominions and the production of aircraft.

The development of the plan will result in an extensive establishment of air training schools particularly in Canada. ~~It~~ The present plan aims at will achieve a steadily increasing output of pilots, observers and air gunners ~~which combined with the output in the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand,~~ outside and will enable the four countries to meet the greatly increasing requirements of trained personnel for their respective air forces.

Schools for pilots will be set up in all the participating Dominions. Schools for air observers and wireless operator-air gunners will be set up in Canada and Australia only. All pupils in the categories of air observers and wireless operator-air gunners from New Zealand, and some of the pupils in these categories from Australia will be trained in Canada. Some of the pupils from Australia

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

and New Zealand will get their advanced flying training in Canada. Pupils from the United Kingdom and Newfoundland will also be sent to Canada for training.

~~As a result~~ of the ~~discussion~~, it was realized that the training facilities required in Australia and New Zealand would be capable of training a larger personnel than was needed to maintain the air forces of the two countries. It was agreed that their facilities for training in excess of local needs should be used to train Australians and New Zealanders for service overseas in furtherance of the common cause.

~~The joint training will be carried on in~~ Canada. The training in Australia and New Zealand will be confined to pupils from those countries. Training for the Royal Canadian Air Force will be merged with the joint training programme. ~~Canada will necessarily have the predominant part in the joint training programme and Canada's participation will be a correspondingly decisive factor in its success.~~ The joint training programme will be administered by the Canadian Government.

Steps are being taken to ensure that the plan in all its aspects, as regards both the training of personnel and the provision of the aircraft required, will be brought into full operation with all possible speed. In a short time many thousands of young men from different parts of the Commonwealth will be working and training side by side in the common effort to which they and their countries have devoted themselves.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268167

With the completion of these negotiations, the world has once more been given a stirring proof of the manner in which the members of the British Commonwealth of Nations are determined to co-operate with each other and with their Allies to the full to ensure that the great causes for which they are contending shall prevail.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

FOURTH DRAFT STATEMENT RE ~~CO-OPERATIVE~~ AIR TRAINING ~~PROGRAMME~~

Agreement has now been reached by the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand on a Co-operative Air Training ~~Programme in Canada~~. The agreement is based on an outline of arrangements for the rapid expansion of air training on a co-operative basis, proposed to the Governments of Canada, Australia and New Zealand, toward the end of September, by the Government of the United Kingdom.

The undertaking ~~proposed~~ is one of great magnitude. Its development will result in a rapid increase in the number of air training schools in Canada, and achieve a steadily increasing output of pilots, observers and air gunners, which, combined with the output in the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand, will enable the four ~~nations~~ countries to meet the greatly increasing requirements of trained personnel for their respective air forces. The aim, in short, is to achieve, by co-operative effort, air forces whose co-ordinated strength will be overwhelming.

A few days after receiving the proposal, the Governments of Canada, Australia and New Zealand signified their agreement in principle. No time was lost in making

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

MEMORANDUM

Office of the Prime Minister C268169

Ottawa, Dec 8

Prime Minister

This is the revision of the draft Communiqué re Air Training Scheme handed me by P.M. after approval by Council last evening.

A.D.M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

1st read by P.M.

CONFIDENTIAL December 8, 1939 C 268170

THE BRITISH COMMONWEALTH AIR TRAINING PLAN

Agreement has now been reached by the governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand on a co-operative air training plan. The details of the agreement were under discussion for several weeks at Ottawa. They have since been approved by the governments concerned.

The purpose of the plan, as it will be recalled, is to achieve, by co-operative effort within the British Commonwealth, air forces of overwhelming strength. The many varied details of a plan of the magnitude proposed have necessarily been the subject of prolonged and careful scrutiny.

The development of the plan will result in the establishment of training schools for pilots, air observers and wireless operator-air gunners.

The air training programmes of the several countries have been so planned that full advantage will be taken of the special facilities and great natural advantages for air training possessed by Canada.

Schools for pilots will be set up in all the participating Dominions. Schools for air observers and wireless operator-air gunners will be set up in Canada and Australia only. All pupils in the categories of air observers and wireless operator-air gunners from New Zealand, and some of the pupils in these categories from Australia will be trained in Canada. Some of the pupils from Australia and New Zealand will get their advanced flying training in Canada. Pupils from the United Kingdom and Newfoundland will also be sent to Canada for training.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268471

As a result of the discussion, it was realized that the training facilities required in Australia and New Zealand would be capable of training a larger personnel than was needed to maintain the air forces of the two countries. It was agreed that their facilities for training in excess of local needs should be used to train Australians and New Zealanders for service overseas in furtherance of the common cause.

The joint training will be carried on in Canada. The training in Australia and New Zealand will be confined to pupils from those countries. Training for the Royal Canadian Air Force will be merged with the joint training programme. Canada will necessarily have the predominant part in the joint training programme and Canada's participation will be a correspondingly decisive factor in its success. The joint training programme will be administered by the Canadian Government.

Steps are being taken to ensure that the pla in all its aspects, as regards both the training of personnel and the provision of the aircraft required, will be brought into full operation with all possible speed. In a short time many thousands of young men from different parts of the Commonwealth will be working and training side by side in the common effort to which they and their countries have devoted themselves.

With the completion of these negotiations the world has once more been given a stirring proof of the manner in which the members of the British Commonwealth of Nations are determined to co-operate with each other and with their Allies to the full to ensure that the great causes for which they are contending shall prevail.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Second revise of draft statement prepared by United Kingdom Mission for simultaneous release.

J.W.P.
7.12.39

O/Bruce telegram Dec 8 '39

British Commonwealth Air Training Plan C 268172

Agreement has now been reached by the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand, on a Co-operative Air Training ~~Programme~~ plan in Canada. The details of the agreement ~~which have been~~ under discussion for several weeks at Ottawa by some time have been approved by the Governments concerned.

2. ~~It will be recalled that~~ The purpose of the ~~proposed programme now agreed upon was to~~ plan achieve, by co-operative effort within the British Commonwealth, air forces of overwhelming strength. As a result of the discussions, it was realized that the training facilities required in Australia and New Zealand would be capable of training a larger personnel than was needed to maintain the air forces of the two countries. It was agreed that their facilities for training, in excess of local needs, should be used to train Australians and New Zealanders for service overseas in furtherance of the common cause. The air training programmes of ~~both~~ the several countries have ~~therefore~~ been ~~integrated with the Co-operative Air Training Programme in Canada, so~~ planned so that full advantage ~~is~~ could be taken of the special facilities and great natural advantages for air training possessed by all ~~three countries.~~

3. ~~In a general statement of the present kind it is not possible to enter at length into~~ The many varied details of a ~~programme~~ plan of ~~this~~ magnitude ~~and importance~~ have necessarily been the subject of prolonged and careful scrutiny. In a word

4. It may be said that the agreement will result in ~~the~~ establishment of training schools for pilots, air observers and wireless operator-air gunners. Schools for pilots will be set up in all three Dominions, ~~but~~ some of the pupils from Australia and New Zealand will get their advanced flying training in Canada. Schools for air observers and wireless operator-air gunners will be set up in Canada and Australia only, ~~and~~ all the pupils of these categories from New Zealand and some of the pupils from Australia will be trained in Canada. Pupils from the United Kingdom and Newfoundland will

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268173

also be sent to Canada for training.

5. While the training in Australia and New Zealand will be confined to pupils from those countries, the co-operative training will be carried on in Canada. Training for the Royal Canadian Air Force will be merged with the ~~Co-operative~~ Training Programme. ~~Because of the parallel training programmes in Australia and New Zealand~~, Canada will have the predominant part in the joint training programme in Canada, ~~which~~ will be administered by the Canadian government, ~~and her~~ participation will be a correspondingly decisive factor in its success.

6. Steps are being taken to ensure that the ~~scheme~~ plan in all its aspects, both as regards the training of personnel and the provision of the aircraft required, will be brought into full operation with all possible speed. In a short time many thousands of young men from different parts of the Commonwealth will be working and training side by side in the common effort to which they and their countries have devoted themselves.

7. With the completion of these negotiations the world has once more been given a stirring proof of the manner in which the members of the British Commonwealth of Nations are determined to co-operate with each other and with their Allies to the full to ensure that the great causes for which they are contending shall prevail.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Mr King - Joint Statement

C 268174

December , 1939.

BRITISH COMMONWEALTH AIR TRAINING PLAN

Agreement has now been reached by the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand on a Co-operative Air training Plan. The details of the agreement were under discussion for several weeks at Ottawa. They have since been approved by the Governments concerned.

The purpose of the plan, as it will be recalled, is to achieve, by co-operative effort within the British Commonwealth, air forces of overwhelming strength. The many varied details of a plan of the magnitude proposed have necessarily been the subject of prolonged and careful scrutiny.

The plan agreed upon will achieve a steadily increasing output of pilots, observers and air gunners, and will also enable the four countries to meet the greatly increasing requirements of trained personnel for their respective air forces.

The air training programmes of the several countries have been so coordinated that full advantage will be taken of their existing establishments and, in particular, of the special facilities and great natural advantages for air training and the production of aircraft possessed by the Dominions.

The development of the plan will result in an extensive establishment of air training schools particularly in Canada. Schools for pilots will be set up in all the participating Dominions. Schools for air observers and wireless operator-air gunners will be set up in Canada

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268175

and Australia only. All pupils in the categories of air observers and wireless operator-air gunners from New Zealand, and some of the pupils in these categories from Australia will be trained in Canada. Some of the pupils from Australia and New Zealand will get their advanced flying training in Canada. Pupils from the United Kingdom and Newfoundland will also be sent to Canada for training.

It was realized in the course of the conferences that the training facilities in Australia and New Zealand could be expanded quickly so as to render them capable of training a larger personnel than was needed to maintain the air forces of the two countries and it was agreed that the facilities which could be made available for training in excess of local needs would be used to train Australians and New Zealanders for service overseas in furtherance of the common cause. The training in Australia and New Zealand will be confined to pupils from those countries.

An outstanding feature of the plan is the programme of joint training. Of the joint training programme, Canada will be the focus. The effort which the Canadian Government will accordingly be called upon to make will constitute a correspondingly decisive factor in the success of the plan. The joint training programme will be administered by the Canadian Government. Training for the Royal Canadian Air Force will be merged with the joint training programme.

Steps are being taken to ensure that the plan, as regards both the training of personnel and the provision of the aircraft required, will be brought into full operation with all possible speed.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

In a short time many thousands of young men from different parts of the Commonwealth will be working and training side by side in the common effort to which they and their countries have devoted themselves.

With the completion of these negotiations, the world has once more been given a stirring proof of the manner in which the members of the British Commonwealth of Nations are determined to co-operate with each other and with their Allies to the full to ensure that the great causes for which they are contending shall prevail.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

2nd revision Mackenzie Dec 8-39

CONFIDENTIAL

December 8, 1939

BRITISH COMMONWEALTH AIR TRAINING PLAN

Agreement has now been reached by the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand on a Co-operative Air Training Plan. The details of the agreement were under discussion for several weeks at Ottawa. They have since been approved by the Governments concerned.

The purpose of the plan, as it will be recalled, is to achieve, by co-operative effort within the British Commonwealth, air forces of overwhelming strength. The many varied details of a plan of the magnitude proposed have necessarily been the subject of prolonged and careful scrutiny.

The air training programmes of the several countries have been so planned that full advantage will be taken of their existing establishments and, in particular, of the special facilities and great natural advantages for air training possessed by Canada.

The development of the plan will result in an extensive establishment of air training schools particularly in Canada. It will achieve a steadily increasing output of pilots, observers and air gunners which combined with the output in the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand, will enable the four countries to meet the greatly increasing requirements of trained personnel for their respective air forces.

Schools for pilots will be set up in all the participating Dominions. Schools for air observers and wireless operator-air gunners will be set up in Canada and Australia only. All pupils in the categories of air observers and wireless operator-air gunners from New Zealand, and some of the pupils in these categories from Australia will be trained in Canada. Some of the pupils from Australia

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268178

and New Zealand will get their advanced flying training in Canada. Pupils from the United Kingdom and Newfoundland will also be sent to Canada for training.

As a result of the discussion, it was realised that the training facilities required in Australia and New Zealand would be capable of training a larger personnel than was needed to maintain the air forces of the two countries. It was agreed that their facilities for training in excess of local needs should be used to train Australians and New Zealanders for service overseas in furtherance of the common cause.

The joint training will be carried on in Canada. The training in Australia and New Zealand will be confined to pupils from those countries. Training for the Royal Canadian Air Force will be merged with the joint training programme. Canada will necessarily have the predominant part in the joint training programme and Canada's participation will be a correspondingly decisive factor in its success. The joint training programme will be administered by the Canadian Government.

Steps are being taken to ensure that the plan in all its aspects, as regards both the training of personnel and the provision of the aircraft required, will be brought into full operation with all possible speed. In a short time many thousands of young men from different parts of the Commonwealth will be working and training side by side in the common effort to which they and their countries have devoted themselves.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

With the completion of these negotiations, the world has once more been given a stirring proof of the manner in which the members of the British Commonwealth of Nations are determined to co-operate with each other and with their Allies to the full to ensure that the great causes for which they are contending shall prevail.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

(ii)

C 268180

CONFIDENTIAL

December 8, 1939

BRITISH COMMONWEALTH AIR TRAINING PLAN

Agreement has now been reached by the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand on a Co-operative Air Training Plan. The details of the agreement were under discussion for several weeks at Ottawa. They have since been approved by the Governments concerned.

The purpose of the plan, as it will be recalled, is to achieve, by co-operative effort within the British Commonwealth, air forces of overwhelming strength. The many varied details of a plan of the magnitude proposed have necessarily been the subject of prolonged and careful scrutiny.

The plan agreed upon will achieve a steadily increasing output of pilots, observers and air gunners, and will enable the four countries to meet the greatly increasing requirements of trained personnel for their respective air forces.

The air training programmes of the several countries have been so coordinated that full advantage will be taken of their existing establishments and, in particular, of the special facilities and great natural advantages for air training and the production of aircraft possessed by the Dominions.

The development of the plan will result in an extensive establishment of air training schools particularly in Canada. Schools for pilots will be set up in all the participating Dominions. Schools for air observers and wireless operator-air gunners will be set up in Canada

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268181

and Australia only. All pupils in the categories of air observers and wireless operator-air gunners from New Zealand, and some of the pupils in these categories from Australia will be trained in Canada. Some of the pupils from Australia and New Zealand will get their advanced flying training in Canada. Pupils from the United Kingdom and Newfoundland will also be sent to Canada for training.

It was realized in the course of the conferences that the training facilities required in Australia and New Zealand would be capable of training a larger personnel than was needed to maintain the air forces of the two countries. It was later agreed that their facilities for training in excess of local needs would be used to train Australians and New Zealanders for service overseas in furtherance of the common cause. The training in Australia and New Zealand will be confined to pupils from those countries.

An outstanding feature of the plan is the programme of joint training. Of the joint training programme, Canada will be the focus. The effort which the Canadian Government will accordingly be called upon to make will constitute a correspondingly decisive factor in the success of the plan. The joint training programme will be administered by the Canadian Government. Training for the Royal Canadian Air Force will be merged with the joint training programme.

Steps are being taken to ensure that the plan, as regards both the training of personnel and the provision of the aircraft required, will be brought into full operation with all possible

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268182

speed. In a short time many thousands of young men from different parts of the Commonwealth will be working and training side by side in the common effort to which they and their countries have devoted themselves.

With the completion of these negotiations, the world has once more been given a stirring proof of the manner in which the members of the British Commonwealth of Nations are determined to co-operate with each other and with their Allies to the full to ensure that the great causes for which they are contending shall prevail.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

C 268183

file

Air T

Not to be released in whole or in part until further notice

SUMMARY OF

MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE GOVERNMENTS OF THE UNITED KINGDOM, CANADA, AUSTRALIA AND NEW ZEALAND RELATING TO TRAINING OF PILOTS AND AIRCRAFT CREWS IN CANADA AND THEIR SUBSEQUENT SERVICE.

---

1. It is agreed between the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand that there shall be set up in Canada a co-operative air training scheme as set out in this agreement, and that the personnel so trained shall be allocated in accordance with Articles 14 and 15.

2. This Agreement shall become operative at once and shall remain in force until 31st March, 1943; unless, by agreement between the Governments concerned, it be extended or terminated at an earlier date.

GOVERNMENT OF CANADA THE ADMINISTRATOR

3. The Government of Canada will act as administrator of the scheme for itself and the other Governments concerned, as hereinafter provided, and it is understood that the undertakings given herein by the Government of Canada to the other Governments concerned are respectively subject to the due performance on the part of such Governments of their several undertakings given herein in support of the scheme.

4. The Government of Canada, acting as administrator, will endeavour to complete, as quickly as possible, the organisation it considers necessary to give outputs of pupils in the numbers and at the rates agreed upon.

AGREEMENT AS TO PUPILS AND INSTRUCTION

5. (a) The Governments of the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand will endeavour to send from time to time enough pupils for training to Canada to keep filled the agreed proportions of places in the various training schools in Canada. The numbers sent by the United Kingdom may include pupils from Newfoundland. The Government of the United Kingdom will also endeavour to send and the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, undertakes to receive pupils for training in Canada in sufficient numbers to keep filled any deficiency in the supply of such pupils from Australia, New Zealand and Canada.

(b) The numbers, and the categories of pupils sent, may be varied from time to time by agreement between the Governments concerned.

(c) It is agreed that if the Governments of Canada, Australia and New Zealand fail to keep filled the training places allotted to them respectively they will nevertheless bear their full respective shares of the costs and expenses.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

6. Pupils sent for training in Canada under the provisions of Article 5 will receive pay, allowances and other emoluments in accordance with the provisions set out in Appendix II to this Agreement.

7. The training to be given shall be in accordance with the syllabus of instruction laid down for each similar course of training in the United Kingdom.

8. To assist in the carrying out of the training scheme, the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand will lend personnel in such ranks and in such numbers as may be agreed upon with the Government of Canada as administrator of the scheme.

AGREEMENT AS TO COSTS AND EXPENSES

9. The share of the cost of the scheme to be borne by the Government of the United Kingdom will take the form of contributions in kind, to be delivered at such times and in such numbers as may be required for the efficient carrying out of the scheme. In addition, the Government of the United Kingdom will bear the cost of packing, loading and transporting to Canada the supplies she contributes in kind. The cost of unloading and of transportation in Canada will be borne by the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme.

The supplies to be provided by the United Kingdom Government under the foregoing arrangements may be varied from time to time by agreement between the Governments concerned.

10. The Governments of Canada, Australia and New Zealand agree that costs and expenses paid or incurred by the Government of Canada as administrator of the scheme (exclusive of the contribution in kind and expenses to be made and borne by the Government of the United Kingdom as provided for in Article 9) shall be apportioned between them as follows:—

(a) The Government of Canada will bear the whole costs and expenses of the Initial Training and Elementary Flying Training.

(b) The costs and expenses remaining will be shared between the Governments of Canada, Australia and New Zealand, in agreed percentages based on the numbers and categories of pupils they are entitled to have trained in Canada; and it is agreed that if any substantial changes in the allocations of training places are made by mutual agreement between the Governments concerned the percentages will be reviewed.

11. (a) Except for any advances made by the other Governments concerned, as provided for in clause (b) of this Article, the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, will in the first instance advance all the costs and expenses incurred as such administrator under the provisions of this Agreement, and the Governments of Australia and New Zealand will repay to the Government of Canada, as herein provided for, in Canadian dollars, their share of the amounts so advanced, in the agreed proportions.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

(b) The Governments of the United Kingdom, Australia, and New Zealand will make advance payments necessary for pay and allowances, transportation charges, and other expenses during the journey to Canada in respect of pupils sent to Canada by such Governments for training, and for such other costs and expenses as may be agreed to from time to time; and the Governments of the United Kingdom, Australia, and New Zealand will, immediately after the end of each month, notify the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, of the amounts of any advance payments made by them during such month and will, as soon as possible thereafter, send to the Government of Canada a detailed statement in respect of such advance payments.

(c) In connection with the repayments to be made by the Governments of Australia and New Zealand, as provided for in clause (a), due allowance will be made for any advance payments made and notified by the Governments of Australia and New Zealand under the provisions of clause (b).

(d) The Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, will refund to the Government of the United Kingdom any advance payments made by that Government under the provisions of clause (b), and the amount of such refunds shall be included in the costs and expenses of the scheme to be apportioned between the Governments of Canada, Australia, and New Zealand, as provided for in clause (a) and in Article 10.

(e) In this Agreement the term "costs and expenses" shall mean all expenditures, costs, charges and liabilities made or incurred by the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, and without restricting the generality of the foregoing shall include:—

(i) Pay, allowances, and other expenses of the personnel lent under the provisions of Article 8 and a cash contribution (computed in accordance with recognized practice as between Governments in such cases) towards the future non-effective benefits of such personnel.

(ii) Pay, allowances, transportation charges, and other expenses connected with the training of Canadian pupils in Canada from the dates of their enlistment to the dates of their embarkation in Canada under the provisions of Article 16; or, in the case of Canadian pupils taken to fill vacancies in the Home Defence Squadrons of the Royal Canadian Air Force as provided for in Article 14, to the dates of their being so taken.

(iii) Pay, allowances, transportation charges, and other expenses connected with the training of pupils in Canada from the dates of their leaving the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand or Newfoundland for the purpose of taking up training in Canada to the dates of their embarkation in Canada under the provisions of Article 16.

But the term "costs and expenses" shall not include:—

(iv) The contribution in kind and expenses to be made and borne by the Government of the United Kingdom as provided for in Article 9.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268186

(v) Costs and expenses of clothing and personal equipment of pupils other than such replacements as may be necessary during the period of training and other than flying clothing and equipment.

(vi) Pensions or allowances to personnel lent under the provisions of Article 8 and to pupils or their dependents in respect of disability or death.

The costs and expenses mentioned in (v) and (vi) above will be borne by the Governments lending the personnel and sending the pupils in respect of whom such costs, expenses, pensions or allowances are incurred.

METHOD OF PAYMENT AND ACCOUNTING

12. The Governments of Australia and New Zealand will from time to time, within one month after a summarized statement of accounts has been presented to them (showing the payments made during the preceding month by the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, and taking account of any receipts, and of any advance payments made and notified, as provided for in Article 11 (b), by the Governments of Australia and New Zealand, and also of any adjustments in respect of previous months) pay or cause to be paid to the Government of Canada their due proportion as agreed upon in Article 10 of the costs and expenses of the scheme as shown by such statement.

These monthly payments will be regarded as advances on account, and the costs and expenses of the scheme as at the end of each financial year will be finally adjusted and paid when the accounts for such year have been audited.

13. (a) The Government of Canada will, in consultation with the other Governments concerned, appoint an officer to act as its Financial Adviser in carrying out its functions as administrator of the scheme. Such proposals for expenditure as the said Financial Adviser may require shall be referred to him for approval and no expenditure on such proposals shall be incurred until his approval has been given. Any proposal disapproved by the Financial Adviser may, at the instance of the officers responsible therefor, be referred to the Minister of National Defence for final decision. Any reports made by the Financial Adviser shall be made available by the Government of Canada to all the other Governments concerned, and these latter shall be entitled to obtain from the Financial Adviser information on all matters affecting the cost of the scheme and their participation in it.

(b) Monthly financial statements shall be furnished by the Government of Canada to the Governments of Australia and New Zealand.

(c) A record of all expenditure and all sums received in connection with the training of pupils in Canada under this scheme will be maintained by the Comptroller of the Treasury of the Government of Canada, and will be audited by the Auditor General of Canada. This record will be made available after audit for examination by representatives of the Governments concerned.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268187

(d) The Government of Canada shall make available to the Governments of Australia and New Zealand, as early as possible after the close of each financial year ending the 31st March, a statement, accompanied by a certificate of the Auditor General, of the receipts and payments in connection with the scheme showing the expenditure under appropriate heads.

TRAINING FOR R.C.A.F. MERGED WITH JOINT TRAINING

14. It is agreed that the Government of Canada may, out of the Canadian pupils who complete their training under this scheme, fill vacancies which occur in the Home Defence Squadrons of the Royal Canadian Air Force. All the other pupils, on completion of their training, will be placed at the disposal of the Government of the United Kingdom, subject to that Government's making the arrangements indicated in Article 15, and bearing liability as provided for in Articles 16 and 17 of this Agreement.

MAINTENANCE OF IDENTITY AND CONDITIONS OF SERVICE

15. The United Kingdom Government undertakes that pupils of Canada, Australia and New Zealand shall, after training is completed, be identified with their respective Dominions, either by the method of organizing Dominion units and formations or in some other way, such methods to be agreed upon with the respective Dominion Governments concerned. The United Kingdom Government will initiate inter-governmental discussions to this end.

16. The Government of the United Kingdom will, subject to the provisions of Article 17, provide the pay, allowances, pensions and other non-effective benefits, maintenance and other expenses of the pilots and aircraft crews who are trained in Canada (other than those made available for service with the Royal Canadian Air Force in accordance with the provisions of Article 14) with effect from the dates of their embarkation in Canada for service with, or in conjunction with, the Royal Air Force. The Government of the United Kingdom also undertakes to arrange for those pupils who are made available for service with, or in conjunction with, the Royal Air Force, to be embarked as speedily as possible after the completion of their training, and to defray the cost of their passages to the stations to which they are appointed on leaving Canada.

17. The pay, allowances, pensions and other non-effective benefits, maintenance and other expenses, for which the Government of the United Kingdom undertakes liability under the provisions of Article 16 will be as laid down in Royal Air Force regulations. If it should be decided by the Government of Canada, the Government of Australia, or the Government of New Zealand to supplement the amounts so issued, any such supplement will be borne by the Government concerned.

DISTRIBUTION OF ASSETS UPON TERMINATION OF AGREEMENT

18. The Government of Canada as administrator of the scheme will have charge of the assets acquired for the purposes of the scheme. On the termination of this Agreement such of the said assets as have been

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268188

acquired and paid for as part of the cost of the scheme will be disposed of as follows:—

(a) Any land, but not buildings, structures or fixtures thereon, acquired or improved for the purpose of the scheme will become the property of the Government of Canada.

(b) The assets acquired for the purposes of the Initial Training Schools and the Elementary Flying Training Schools will become the property of the Government of Canada.

(c) All other assets, except those contributed in kind by the Government of the United Kingdom, will be shared between the Governments of Canada, Australia and New Zealand in the same proportions as are laid down in Article 10 for the apportionment of the costs.

(d) Any of the assets contributed by the Government of the United Kingdom which remain will revert to that Government.

The distribution of the assets under the above arrangements may be made in kind or otherwise, as may be agreed upon.

Communications between Governments

19. Arrangements will be made between the Governments concerned to facilitate communications between them under this Agreement or otherwise in connection with the Scheme either by means of cable or through representatives in Canada to be named by them.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268189

APPENDIX I

SUMMARY OF SCHOOLS REQUIRED

Programme of development of the training scheme in Canada

1. To produce the necessary output of pupils, the following schools will be necessary in Canada:—

Initial Training Schools	3
Elementary Flying Training Schools	13
Service Flying Training Schools	16
Air Observer Schools	10
Bombing and Gunnery Schools	10
Air Navigation Schools	2
Wireless Schools	4

2. The Flying Training and Air Observer Schools will be developed at rates which will provide for their peak capacity for training pupils being reached by the following number of weeks after the date of opening:—

Elementary Flying Training Schools	4	weeks
Service Flying Training Schools	12	"
Air Observer Schools	6	"

The remaining schools will open at full capacity.

3. It will also be necessary to establish:—

(i) Schools for the training of the staffs of the schools given in paragraph 1, and for the organization at (ii) below.
(ii) An appropriate command, recruiting and maintenance organization.

These will include—

(iii) Air Armament School	1
(iv) School of Aeronautical Engineering	1
(v) School of Administration	1
(vi) Equipment and Accountant School	1
(vii) Flying Instructors' School	1
(viii) Recruit Depots	2
(ix) Technical Training Schools	2
(x) Repair Depots	3
(xi) Equipment Depots	3
(xii) Record Office	1	(or enlargement of existing organization).

The dates of formation and rate of development of these units will be governed by the dates of opening of the pilot and air training schools. (iii) to (ix) will cease to function, or will be reduced to the size necessary to meet wastage, as the scheme develops.

4. Table A shows the requirements in aircraft and personnel when the scheme is in operation.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

TABLE 'A'

PERSONNEL REQUIREMENTS

THE PERSONNEL REQUIRED TO MAN THE SCHOOLS, ETC. IN CANADA WHEN THE SCHEME IS IN FULL OPERATION IS AS UNDER

—	Officers	Airmen	Civilians	Works Maintenance personnel
Commands and Groups, and Extra Headquarters Organization	288	603	134	.....
Initial Training Schools	39	393	.....	36
Service Flying Training Schools	752	11,376	64	320
Air Observer Schools	250	2,470	.....	100
Bombing and Gunnery Schools	450	6,920	.....	150
Elementary Flying Training Schools	351	4,134	.....	130
Wireless Schools	96	1,284	.....	80
Air Navigation Schools	126	1,278	.....	40
Repair Depots	51	141	1,308	36
Equipment Depots	66	228	3,318	60
Technical Training Schools	41	627	.....	30
Records Office	14	277	.....	.....
Recruit Depots	28	424	.....	40
Recruiting Organization	134	211	105	.....
	2,686	30,366	4,929	1,022

(a) Civilians may replace a proportion of the airmen in certain units.

(b) The above table does not include schools, etc. which close as the scheme approaches completion; the personnel from these schools will be absorbed into other units.

(c) Some, or all, of the Elementary Flying Training Schools and Air Observer Schools may be organized on a civilian basis.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

APPENDIX II

CONDITIONS OF SERVICE OF PILOTS AND AIRCRAFT CREWS

(a). PUPILS FROM CANADA.

Enlistment.

Pupils will be enlisted in the Royal Canadian Air Force as Aircraftmen, Class II (standard group).

Rank during Training in Canada.

Course	Rank
Initial ground training	Aircraftman, Class II (standard group)
Pilot	Leading Aircraftman " "
Observer	" " " "
Wireless operator (air crew)	Aircraftman, Class II " "
Air gunner	" " " " "

Rank on completion of Training.

Duty	Rank
Pilot	*Sergeant (group B)
Observer	*Acting Sergeant (group C) / Sergeant (group B)
Wireless operator (air crew)	L.A.C., A.C. I or A.C. II (group B), according to percentage of marks obtained on passing out of training.
Air gunner	L.A.C., A.C. I or A.C. II (standard group), according to percentage of marks obtained on passing out of training.

Pay and additional pay will be at the rates and subject to the conditions laid down from time to time in Financial Regulations and Instructions for the Royal Canadian Air Force on Active Service.

During service in Canada, allowances, etc., will be admissible under the conditions laid down in Financial Regulations and Instructions for the Royal Canadian Air Force on Active Service.

Pay, allowances, etc., during service with, or in conjunction with, the Royal Air Force.

On embarkation for service with, or in conjunction with, the Royal Air Force, officers and airmen will, subject to the conditions laid down in King's Regulations and Air Council Instructions, receive from the appropriate Royal Air Force paying authority the pay, allowances, etc., of the rank and branch (or group) in the Royal Air Force corresponding to that

* A number of pilots and observers will be selected, on passing out of training, for commissioned rank in the Royal Canadian Air Force (General List). Observers will be on probation as acting observer for a period (normally six months) after passing out of training.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268192

held in the Royal Canadian Air Force, except that the following special arrangements will be made in regard to the issue of allowances to dependents in Canada.

The allowances and compulsory allotment from pay in respect of family or other dependents which may be payable under Royal Air Force regulations will, if the family or other dependents reside in Canada, be credited to the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, who will issue to the family or other dependents the allowance and assigned pay which may be payable under Royal Canadian Air Force regulations.

If the pay and allowances admissible under Royal Canadian Air Force regulations should exceed those admissible under Royal Air Force regulations, the difference (after taking into account the payment made under the preceding paragraph) will be issued by the Government of Canada as deferred pay, either on termination of service or otherwise in special circumstances.

Personnel will not be insured under United Kingdom insurance schemes, and any insurance contributions (employers' and employees' shares) necessary to ensure benefits under Canadian schemes will be paid by the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, who will arrange with the Government of the United Kingdom to recover from pay any employees' shares of such contributions so recoverable.

(b) Pupils other than those enlisted in the Royal Canadian Air Force, the Royal Australian Air Force and the Royal New Zealand Air Force.

Pupils other than those enlisted in the Royal Canadian Air Force, the Royal Australian Air Force and the Royal New Zealand Air Force will be enlisted in the Royal Air Force.

For the period of the journey to Canada, airmen of the Royal Air Force will receive pay, allowances, etc., at the rates and subject to the conditions laid down from time to time in King's Regulations and Air Council Instructions for the Royal Air Force.

During service in Canada, airmen of the Royal Air Force will be attached to the Royal Canadian Air Force, and, subject to the conditions laid down in Financial Regulations and Instructions for the Royal Canadian Air Force on Active Service, they will receive from the appropriate Royal Canadian Air Force paying officer the pay, allowances, etc., of the rank and group in the Royal Canadian Air Force, as appropriate under (a) above, except that the following special arrangements will be made in regard to the issue of allowances to family or other dependents outside Canada.

The allowances and compulsory allotment from pay in respect of family or other dependents which would be appropriate under Royal Air Force regulations will, if the family or other dependent reside outside Canada, be issued by the Government of the United Kingdom, who will reclaim from the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, the amount so issued. The Royal Canadian Air Force officer paying the airman will deduct from the airman's pay the amount of the assigned pay under Royal Canadian Air Force regulations.

Airmen will not be insured under Canadian insurance schemes and any insurance contributions (employers' and employees' shares) necessary to ensure benefits for United Kingdom airmen under United Kingdom schemes

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268193

will be paid by the Government of the United Kingdom, who will arrange with the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, for the recovery from pay of any employees' shares of such contributions so recoverable.

(c) PUPILS SENT BY AUSTRALIA AND NEW ZEALAND.

Pupils sent by Australia and New Zealand will be enlisted in the Royal Australian Air Force and in the Royal New Zealand Air Force, respectively.

Pay, allowances, etc., for the period of journey to Canada.

For the period of the journey to Canada, airmen of the Royal Australian Air Force and of the Royal New Zealand Air Force will receive pay, allowances, etc., at the rates and subject to the conditions laid down from time to time in the Regulations for the Royal Australian Air Force and the Royal New Zealand Air Force, respectively.

Pay, allowances, etc., during service in Canada.

During service in Canada, airmen of the Royal Australian Air Force and of the Royal New Zealand Air Force will be attached to the Royal Canadian Air Force, and, subject to the conditions laid down in Financial Regulations and Instructions for the Royal Canadian Air Force on Active Service, they will receive from the appropriate Royal Canadian Air Force paying officer the pay, allowances, etc., of the rank and group in the Royal Canadian Air Force, as appropriate under (a) above, except that the following special arrangements will be made in regard to the issue of allowances to family or other dependents outside Canada.

The allowances and compulsory allotment from pay in respect of family or other dependents which would be appropriate under Royal Australian Air Force or Royal New Zealand Air Force regulations will, if the family or other dependents reside outside Canada, be issued by the Government of Australia or the Government of New Zealand, who will reclaim from the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, the amount so issued. The Royal Canadian Air Force officer paying the airman will deduct from the airman's pay the amount of the assigned pay chargeable under Royal Canadian Air Force regulations.

Airmen will not be insured under Canadian insurance schemes, and any insurance contributions (employers' and employees' shares) necessary to ensure benefits for Australian or New Zealand airmen under Australian or New Zealand schemes will be paid by the Government of Australia or the Government of New Zealand, who will arrange with the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, for the recovery from pay of any employees' shares of such contributions so recoverable.

Pay, allowances, etc., during service with the Royal Air Force.

On embarkation for service with the Royal Air Force, officers and airmen will be attached to that force, and, subject to the conditions laid down in King's Regulations and Air Council Instructions, they will receive from the appropriate Royal Air Force paying authority the pay, allowances, etc., of the rank and branch (or group) in the Royal Air Force corresponding to that held in the Royal Australian Air Force or in the Royal New Zealand Air Force, except that the following special arrangements will be made in regard to the issue of allowances to family or other dependents in Australia or New Zealand.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268194

The allowances and compulsory allotment from pay in respect of family or other dependents which may be payable under Royal Air Force regulations will, if the family or other dependents reside in Australia or New Zealand, be credited to the Government of Australia or to the Government of New Zealand, who will issue to the family or other dependent the allowance and compulsory allotment from pay which may be payable under Royal Australian Air Force or Royal New Zealand Air Force regulations.

If the pay and allowances admissible under Royal Australian Air Force or Royal New Zealand Air Force regulations exceed those admissible under Royal Air Force regulations, and the Government of Australia or the Government of New Zealand decide that this difference is to be credited to the officer or airman, the difference (after taking into account the payment made under the preceding paragraph) will be issued by the Government of Australia or the Government of New Zealand as deferred pay, either on termination of service or otherwise in special circumstances.

Personnel will not be insured under United Kingdom insurance schemes, and any insurance contributions (employers' and employees' shares) necessary to ensure benefits under Australian or New Zealand schemes will be paid by the Government of Australia or the Government of New Zealand, who will arrange with the Government of the United Kingdom to recover from pay any employees' shares of such contributions so recoverable.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

SUMMARY OF

Memorandum of Agreement between the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand relating to training of pilots and aircraft crews in Canada and their subsequent service.

---

1. It is agreed between the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand that there shall be set up in Canada a co-operative air training scheme as set out in this agreement, and that the personnel so trained shall be allocated in accordance with Articles 14 and 15.

2. This Agreement shall become operative at once and shall remain in force until 31st March, 1943; unless, by agreement between the Governments concerned, it be extended or terminated at an earlier date.

Government of Canada the Administrator

3. The Government of Canada will act as administrator of the scheme for itself and the other Governments concerned, as hereinafter provided, and it is understood that the undertakings given herein by the Government of Canada to the other Governments concerned are respectively subject to the due performance on the part of such Governments of their several undertakings given herein in support of the scheme.

4. The Government of Canada, acting as administrator, will endeavour to complete, as quickly as possible, the organisation it considers necessary to give outputs of pupils in the numbers and at the rates agreed upon.

Agreement as to Pupils and Instruction

5. (a) The Governments of the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand will endeavour to send from time to time enough pupils for training to Canada to keep filled the agreed proportions of places in the various training schools in Canada. The numbers sent by the United Kingdom may include pupils from Newfoundland. The Government of the United Kingdom will also endeavour to send and the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, undertakes to receive pupils for training in Canada in sufficient numbers to keep filled any deficiency in the supply of such pupils from Australia, New Zealand and Canada.

(b) The numbers, and the categories of pupils sent, may be varied from time to time by agreement between the Governments concerned.

(c) It is agreed that if the Governments of Canada, Australia and New Zealand fail to keep filled the training places allotted to them respectively they will nevertheless bear their full respective shares of the costs and expenses.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

6. Pupils sent for training in Canada under the provisions of Article 5 will receive pay, allowances and other emoluments in accordance with the provisions set out in Appendix II to this Agreement.

7. The training to be given shall be in accordance with the syllabus of instruction laid down for each similar course of training in the United Kingdom.

8. To assist in the carrying out of the training scheme, the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand will lend personnel in such ranks and in such numbers as may be agreed upon with the Government of Canada as administrator of the scheme.

AGREEMENT AS TO COSTS AND EXPENSES

9. The share of the cost of the scheme to be borne by the Government of the United Kingdom will take the form of contributions in kind, to be delivered at such times and in such numbers as may be required for the efficient carrying out of the scheme. In addition, the Government of the United Kingdom will bear the cost of packing, loading and transporting to Canada the supplies she contributes in kind. The cost of unloading and of transportation in Canada will be borne by the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme.

The supplies to be provided by the United Kingdom Government under the foregoing arrangements may be varied from time to time by agreement between the Governments concerned.

10. The Governments of Canada, Australia and New Zealand agree that costs and expenses paid or incurred by the Government of Canada as administrator of the scheme (exclusive of the contribution in kind and expenses to be made and borne by the Government of the United Kingdom as provided for in Article 9) shall be apportioned between them as follows:—

(a) The Government of Canada will bear the whole costs and expenses of the Initial Training and Elementary Flying Training.

(b) The costs and expenses remaining will be shared between the Governments of Canada, Australia and New Zealand, in agreed percentages based on the numbers and categories of pupils they are entitled to have trained in Canada; and it is agreed that if any substantial changes in the allocations of training places are made by mutual agreement between the Governments concerned the percentages will be reviewed.

11. (a) Except for any advances made by the other Governments concerned, as provided for in clause (b) of this Article, the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, will in the first instance advance all the costs and expenses incurred as such administrator under the provisions of this Agreement, and the Governments of Australia and New Zealand will repay to the Government of Canada, as herein provided for, in Canadian dollars, their share of the amounts so advanced, in the agreed proportions.

C 268196

(b) The Governments of the United Kingdom, Australia, and New Zealand will make advance payments necessary for pay and allowances, transportation charges, and other expenses during the journey to Canada in respect of pupils sent to Canada by such Governments for training, and for such other costs and expenses as may be agreed to from time to time; and the Governments of the United Kingdom, Australia, and New Zealand will, immediately after the end of each month, notify the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, of the amounts of any advance payments made by them during such month and will, as soon as possible thereafter, send to the Government of Canada a detailed statement in respect of such advance payments.

(c) In connection with the repayments to be made by the Governments of Australia and New Zealand, as provided for in clause (a), due allowance will be made for any advance payments made and notified by the Governments of Australia and New Zealand under the provisions of clause (b).

(d) The Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, will refund to the Government of the United Kingdom any advance payments made by that Government under the provisions of clause (b), and the amount of such refunds shall be included in the costs and expenses of the scheme to be apportioned between the Governments of Canada, Australia, and New Zealand, as provided for in clause (a) and in Article 10.

(e) In this Agreement the term "costs and expenses" shall mean all expenditures, costs, charges and liabilities made or incurred by the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, and without restricting the generality of the foregoing shall include:—

(i) Pay, allowances, and other expenses of the personnel lent under the provisions of Article 8 and a cash contribution (computed in accordance with recognized practice as between Governments in such cases) towards the future non-effective benefits of such personnel.

(ii) Pay, allowances, transportation charges, and other expenses connected with the training of Canadian pupils in Canada from the dates of their enlistment to the dates of their embarkation in Canada under the provisions of Article 16; or, in the case of Canadian pupils taken to fill vacancies in the Home Defence Squadrons of the Royal Canadian Air Force as provided for in Article 14, to the dates of their being so taken.

(iii) Pay, allowances, transportation charges, and other expenses connected with the training of pupils in Canada from the dates of their leaving the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand or Newfoundland for the purpose of taking up training in Canada to the dates of their embarkation in Canada under the provisions of Article 16.

But the term "costs and expenses" shall not include:—

(iv) The contribution in kind and expenses to be made and borne by the Government of the United Kingdom as provided for in Article 9.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

(v) Costs and expenses of clothing and personal equipment of pupils other than such replacements as may be necessary during the period of training and other than flying clothing and equipment.

(vi) Pensions or allowances to personnel lent under the provisions of Article 8 and to pupils or their dependents in respect of disability or death.

The costs and expenses mentioned in (v) and (vi) above will be borne by the Governments lending the personnel and sending the pupils in respect of whom such costs, expenses, pensions or allowances are incurred.

METHOD OF PAYMENT AND ACCOUNTING

12. The Governments of Australia and New Zealand will from time to time, within one month after a summarized statement of accounts has been presented to them (showing the payments made during the preceding month by the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, and taking account of any receipts, and of any advance payments made and notified, as provided for in Article 11 (b), by the Governments of Australia and New Zealand, and also of any adjustments in respect of previous months) pay or cause to be paid to the Government of Canada their due proportion as agreed upon in Article 10 of the costs and expenses of the scheme as shown by such statement.

These monthly payments will be regarded as advances on account, and the costs and expenses of the scheme as at the end of each financial year will be finally adjusted and paid when the accounts for such year have been audited.

13. (a) The Government of Canada will, in consultation with the other Governments concerned, appoint an officer to act as its Financial Adviser in carrying out its functions as administrator of the scheme. Such proposals for expenditure as the said Financial Adviser may require shall be referred to him for approval and no expenditure on such proposals shall be incurred until his approval has been given. Any proposal disapproved by the Financial Adviser may, at the instance of the officers responsible therefor, be referred to the Minister of National Defence for final decision. Any reports made by the Financial Adviser shall be made available by the Government of Canada to all the other Governments concerned, and these latter shall be entitled to obtain from the Financial Adviser information on all matters affecting the cost of the scheme and their participation in it.

(b) Monthly financial statements shall be furnished by the Government of Canada to the Governments of Australia and New Zealand.

(c) A record of all expenditure and all sums received in connection with the training of pupils in Canada under this scheme will be maintained by the Comptroller of the Treasury of the Government of Canada, and will be audited by the Auditor General of Canada. This record will be made available after audit for examination by representatives of the Governments concerned.

C 268197

(d) The Government of Canada shall make available to the Governments of Australia and New Zealand, as early as possible after the close of each financial year ending the 31st March, a statement, accompanied by a certificate of the Auditor General, of the receipts and payments in connection with the scheme showing the expenditure under appropriate heads.

TRAINING FOR R.C.A.F. MERGED WITH JOINT TRAINING

14. It is agreed that the Government of Canada may, out of the Canadian pupils who complete their training under this scheme, fill vacancies which occur in the Home Defence Squadrons of the Royal Canadian Air Force. All the other pupils, on completion of their training, will be placed at the disposal of the Government of the United Kingdom, subject to that Government's making the arrangements indicated in Article 15, and bearing liability as provided for in Articles 16 and 17 of this Agreement.

MAINTENANCE OF IDENTITY AND CONDITIONS OF SERVICE

15. The United Kingdom Government undertakes that pupils of Canada, Australia and New Zealand shall, after training is completed, be identified with their respective Dominions, either by the method of organizing Dominion units and formations or in some other way, such methods to be agreed upon with the respective Dominion Governments concerned. The United Kingdom Government will initiate inter-governmental discussions to this end.

16. The Government of the United Kingdom will, subject to the provisions of Article 17, provide the pay, allowances, pensions and other non-effective benefits, maintenance and other expenses of the pilots and aircraft crews who are trained in Canada (other than those made available for service with the Royal Canadian Air Force in accordance with the provisions of Article 14) with effect from the dates of their embarkation in Canada for service with, or in conjunction with, the Royal Air Force. The Government of the United Kingdom also undertakes to arrange for those pupils who are made available for service with, or in conjunction with, the Royal Air Force, to be embarked as speedily as possible after the completion of their training, and to defray the cost of their passages to the stations to which they are appointed on leaving Canada.

17. The pay, allowances, pensions and other non-effective benefits, maintenance and other expenses, for which the Government of the United Kingdom undertakes liability under the provisions of Article 16 will be as laid down in Royal Air Force regulations. If it should be decided by the Government of Canada, the Government of Australia, or the Government of New Zealand to supplement the amounts so issued, any such supplement will be borne by the Government concerned.

DISTRIBUTION OF ASSETS UPON TERMINATION OF AGREEMENT

18. The Government of Canada as administrator of the scheme will have charge of the assets acquired for the purposes of the scheme. On the termination of this Agreement such of the said assets as have been

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

(v) Costs and expenses of clothing and personal equipment of pupils other than such replacements as may be necessary during the period of training and other than flying clothing and equipment.

(vi) Pensions or allowances to personnel lent under the provisions of Article 8 and to pupils or their dependents in respect of disability or death.

The costs and expenses mentioned in (v) and (vi) above will be borne by the Governments lending the personnel and sending the pupils in respect of whom such costs, expenses, pensions or allowances are incurred.

METHOD OF PAYMENT AND ACCOUNTING

12. The Governments of Australia and New Zealand will from time to time, within one month after a summarized statement of accounts has been presented to them (showing the payments made during the preceding month by the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, and taking account of any receipts, and of any advance payments made and notified, as provided for in Article 11 (b), by the Governments of Australia and New Zealand, and also of any adjustments in respect of previous months) pay or cause to be paid to the Government of Canada their due proportion as agreed upon in Article 10 of the costs and expenses of the scheme as shown by such statement.

These monthly payments will be regarded as advances on account, and the costs and expenses of the scheme as at the end of each financial year will be finally adjusted and paid when the accounts for such year have been audited.

13. (a) The Government of Canada will, in consultation with the other Governments concerned, appoint an officer to act as its Financial Adviser in carrying out its functions as administrator of the scheme. Such proposals for expenditure as the said Financial Adviser may require shall be referred to him for approval and no expenditure on such proposals shall be incurred until his approval has been given. Any proposal disapproved by the Financial Adviser may, at the instance of the officers responsible therefor, be referred to the Minister of National Defence for final decision. Any reports made by the Financial Adviser shall be made available by the Government of Canada to all the other Governments concerned, and these latter shall be entitled to obtain from the Financial Adviser information on all matters affecting the cost of the scheme and their participation in it.

(b) Monthly financial statements shall be furnished by the Government of Canada to the Governments of Australia and New Zealand.

(c) A record of all expenditure and all sums received in connection with the training of pupils in Canada under this scheme will be maintained by the Comptroller of the Treasury of the Government of Canada, and will be audited by the Auditor General of Canada. This record will be made available after audit for examination by representatives of the Governments concerned.

C 268197

(d) The Government of Canada shall make available to the Governments of Australia and New Zealand, as early as possible after the close of each financial year ending the 31st March, a statement, accompanied by a certificate of the Auditor General, of the receipts and payments in connection with the scheme showing the expenditure under appropriate heads.

TRAINING FOR R.C.A.F. MERGED WITH JOINT TRAINING

14. It is agreed that the Government of Canada may, out of the Canadian pupils who complete their training under this scheme, fill vacancies which occur in the Home Defence Squadrons of the Royal Canadian Air Force. All the other pupils, on completion of their training, will be placed at the disposal of the Government of the United Kingdom, subject to that Government's making the arrangements indicated in Article 15, and bearing liability as provided for in Articles 16 and 17 of this Agreement.

MAINTENANCE OF IDENTITY AND CONDITIONS OF SERVICE

15. The United Kingdom Government undertakes that pupils of Canada, Australia and New Zealand shall, after training is completed, be identified with their respective Dominions, either by the method of organizing Dominion units and formations or in some other way, such methods to be agreed upon with the respective Dominion Governments concerned. The United Kingdom Government will initiate inter-governmental discussions to this end.

16. The Government of the United Kingdom will, subject to the provisions of Article 17, provide the pay, allowances, pensions and other non-effective benefits, maintenance and other expenses of the pilots and aircraft crews who are trained in Canada (other than those made available for service with the Royal Canadian Air Force in accordance with the provisions of Article 14) with effect from the dates of their embarkation in Canada for service with, or in conjunction with, the Royal Air Force. The Government of the United Kingdom also undertakes to arrange for those pupils who are made available for service with, or in conjunction with, the Royal Air Force, to be embarked as speedily as possible after the completion of their training, and to defray the cost of their passages to the stations to which they are appointed on leaving Canada.

17. The pay, allowances, pensions and other non-effective benefits, maintenance and other expenses, for which the Government of the United Kingdom undertakes liability under the provisions of Article 16 will be as laid down in Royal Air Force regulations. If it should be decided by the Government of Canada, the Government of Australia, or the Government of New Zealand to supplement the amounts so issued, any such supplement will be borne by the Government concerned.

DISTRIBUTION OF ASSETS UPON TERMINATION OF AGREEMENT

18. The Government of Canada as administrator of the scheme will have charge of the assets acquired for the purposes of the scheme. On the termination of this Agreement such of the said assets as have been

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

acquired and paid for as part of the cost of the scheme will be disposed of as follows:—

(a) Any land, but not buildings, structures or fixtures thereon, acquired or improved for the purpose of the scheme will become the property of the Government of Canada.

(b) The assets acquired for the purposes of the Initial Training Schools and the Elementary Flying Training Schools will become the property of the Government of Canada.

(c) All other assets, except those contributed in kind by the Government of the United Kingdom, will be shared between the Governments of Canada, Australia and New Zealand in the same proportions as are laid down in Article 10 for the apportionment of the costs.

(d) Any of the assets contributed by the Government of the United Kingdom which remain will revert to that Government.

The distribution of the assets under the above arrangements may be made in kind or otherwise, as may be agreed upon.

COMMUNICATIONS BETWEEN GOVERNMENTS

19. Arrangements will be made between the Governments concerned to facilitate communications between them under this Agreement or otherwise in connection with the Scheme either by means of cable or through representatives in Canada to be named by them.

C268198

APPENDIX I

SUMMARY OF SCHOOLS REQUIRED

Programme of development of the training scheme in Canada

1. To produce the necessary output of pupils, the following schools will be necessary in Canada:—

Initial Training Schools	3
Elementary Flying Training Schools	13
Service Flying Training Schools	16
Air Observer Schools	10
Bombing and Gunnery Schools	10
Air Navigation Schools	2
Wireless Schools	4

2. The Flying Training and Air Observer Schools will be developed at rates which will provide for their peak capacity for training pupils being reached by the following number of weeks after the date of opening:—

Elementary Flying Training Schools	4 weeks
Service Flying Training Schools	12 "
Air Observer Schools	6 "

The remaining schools will open at full capacity.

3. It will also be necessary to establish:—

(i) Schools for the training of the staffs of the schools given in paragraph 1, and for the organization at (ii) below.

(ii) An appropriate command, recruiting and maintenance organization.

These will include—

(iii)	Air Armament School	1
(iv)	School of Aeronautical Engineering	1
(v)	School of Administration	1
(vi)	Equipment and Accountant School	1
(vii)	Flying Instructors' School	1
(viii)	Recruit Depots	2
(ix)	Technical Training Schools	2
(x)	Repair Depots	3
(xi)	Equipment Depots	3
(xii)	Record Office	1 (or enlargement of existing organization).

The dates of formation and rate of development of these units will be governed by the dates of opening of the pilot and air training schools. (iii) to (ix) will cease to function, or will be reduced to the size necessary to meet wastage, as the scheme develops.

4. Table A shows the requirements in personnel when the scheme is in operation.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

TABLE 'A'

PERSONNEL REQUIREMENTS

THE PERSONNEL REQUIRED TO MAN THE SCHOOLS, ETC. IN CANADA WHEN THE SCHEME IS IN FULL OPERATION IS AS UNDER

—	Officers	Airmen	Civilians	Works Maintenance personnel
Commands and Groups, and Extra Headquarters Organization	288	603	134	.....
Initial Training Schools	39	393	.....	36
Service Flying Training Schools	752	11,376	64	320
Air Observer Schools	250	2,470	.....	100
Bombing and Gunnery Schools	450	6,920	.....	150
Elementary Flying Training Schools	351	4,134	.....	130
Wireless Schools	96	1,284	.....	80
Air Navigation Schools	126	1,278	.....	40
Repair Depots	51	141	1,308	36
Equipment Depots	66	228	3,318	60
Technical Training Schools	41	627	.....	30
Records Office	14	277	.....	.....
Recruit Depots	28	424	.....	40
Recruiting Organization	134	211	105	.....
	2,686	30,366	4,929	1,022

(a) Civilians may replace a proportion of the airmen in certain units.
(b) The above table does not include schools, etc. which close as the scheme approaches completion; the personnel from these schools will be absorbed into other units.
(c) Some, or all, of the Elementary Flying Training Schools and Air Observer Schools may be organized on a civilian basis.

C 268199

APPENDIX II

CONDITIONS OF SERVICE OF PILOTS AND AIRCRAFT CREWS

(a) PUPILS FROM CANADA.

Enlistment.

Pupils will be enlisted in the Royal Canadian Air Force as Aircraftmen, Class II (standard group).

Rank during Training in Canada.

Course	Rank
Initial ground training	Aircraftman, Class II (standard group)
Pilot	Leading Aircraftman " "
Observer	" " " "
Wireless operator (air crew)	Aircraftman, Class II " "
Air gunner	" " " " "

Rank on completion of Training.

Duty	Rank
Pilot	*Sergeant (group B)
Observer	*{Acting Sergeant (group C) Sergeant (group B)
Wireless operator (air crew)	{L.A.C., A.C. I or A.C. II (group B), according to percentage of marks obtained on passing out of training.
Air gunner	{L.A.C., A.C. I or A.C. II (standard group), according to percentage of marks obtained on passing out of training.

Pay and additional pay will be at the rates and subject to the conditions laid down from time to time in Financial Regulations and Instructions for the Royal Canadian Air Force on Active Service.

During service in Canada, allowances, etc., will be admissible under the conditions laid down in Financial Regulations and Instructions for the Royal Canadian Air Force on Active Service.

Pay, allowances, etc., during service with, or in conjunction with, the Royal Air Force.

On embarkation for service with, or in conjunction with, the Royal Air Force, officers and airmen will, subject to the conditions laid down in King's Regulations and Air Council Instructions, receive from the appropriate Royal Air Force paying authority the pay, allowances, etc., of the rank and branch (or group) in the Royal Air Force corresponding to that

* A number of pilots and observers will be selected, on passing out of training, for commissioned rank in the Royal Canadian Air Force (General List). Observers will be on probation as acting observer for a period (normally six months) after passing out of training.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

held in the Royal Canadian Air Force, except that the following special arrangements will be made in regard to the issue of allowances to dependents in Canada.

The allowances and compulsory allotment from pay in respect of family or other dependents which may be payable under Royal Air Force regulations will, if the family or other dependents reside in Canada, be credited to the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, who will issue to the family or other dependents the allowance and assigned pay which may be payable under Royal Canadian Air Force regulations.

If the pay and allowances admissible under Royal Canadian Air Force regulations should exceed those admissible under Royal Air Force regulations, the difference (after taking into account the payment made under the preceding paragraph) will be issued by the Government of Canada as deferred pay, either on termination of service or otherwise in special circumstances.

Personnel will not be insured under United Kingdom insurance schemes, and any insurance contributions (employers' and employees' shares) necessary to ensure benefits under Canadian schemes will be paid by the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, who will arrange with the Government of the United Kingdom to recover from pay any employees' shares of such contributions so recoverable.

(b) PUPILS OTHER THAN THOSE ENLISTED IN THE ROYAL CANADIAN AIR FORCE, THE ROYAL AUSTRALIAN AIR FORCE AND THE ROYAL NEW ZEALAND AIR FORCE.

Pupils other than those enlisted in the Royal Canadian Air Force, the Royal Australian Air Force and the Royal New Zealand Air Force will be enlisted in the Royal Air Force.

For the period of the journey to Canada, airmen of the Royal Air Force will receive pay, allowances, etc., at the rates and subject to the conditions laid down from time to time in King's Regulations and Air Council Instructions for the Royal Air Force.

During service in Canada, airmen of the Royal Air Force will be attached to the Royal Canadian Air Force, and, subject to the conditions laid down in Financial Regulations and Instructions for the Royal Canadian Air Force on Active Service, they will receive from the appropriate Royal Canadian Air Force paying officer the pay, allowances, etc., of the rank and group in the Royal Canadian Air Force, as appropriate under (a) above, except that the following special arrangements will be made in regard to the issue of allowances to family or other dependents outside Canada.

The allowances and compulsory allotment from pay in respect of family or other dependents which would be appropriate under Royal Air Force regulations will, if the family or other dependent reside outside Canada, be issued by the Government of the United Kingdom, who will reclaim from the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, the amount so issued. The Royal Canadian Air Force officer paying the airman will deduct from the airman's pay the amount of the assigned pay under Royal Canadian Air Force regulations.

Airmen will not be insured under Canadian insurance schemes and any insurance contributions (employers' and employees' shares) necessary to ensure benefits for United Kingdom airmen under United Kingdom schemes will be paid by the Government of the United Kingdom, who will arrange with the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, for the recovery from pay of any employees' shares of such contributions so recoverable.

C 268200

(c) PUPILS SENT BY AUSTRALIA AND NEW ZEALAND.

Pupils sent by Australia and New Zealand will be enlisted in the Royal Australian Air Force and in the Royal New Zealand Air Force, respectively.

Pay, allowances, etc., for the period of journey to Canada.

For the period of the journey to Canada, airmen of the Royal Australian Air Force and of the Royal New Zealand Air Force will receive pay, allowances, etc., at the rates and subject to the conditions laid down from time to time in the Regulations for the Royal Australian Air Force and the Royal New Zealand Air Force, respectively.

Pay, allowances, etc., during service in Canada.

During service in Canada, airmen of the Royal Australian Air Force and of the Royal New Zealand Air Force will be attached to the Royal Canadian Air Force, and, subject to the conditions laid down in Financial Regulations and Instructions for the Royal Canadian Air Force on Active Service, they will receive from the appropriate Royal Canadian Air Force paying officer the pay, allowances, etc., of the rank and group in the Royal Canadian Air Force, as appropriate under (a) above, except that the following special arrangements will be made in regard to the issue of allowances to family or other dependents outside Canada.

The allowances and compulsory allotment from pay in respect of family or other dependents which would be appropriate under Royal Australian Air Force or Royal New Zealand Air Force regulations will, if the family or other dependents reside outside Canada, be issued by the Government of Australia or the Government of New Zealand, who will reclaim from the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, the amount so issued. The Royal Canadian Air Force officer paying the airman will deduct from the airman's pay the amount of the assigned pay chargeable under Royal Canadian Air Force regulations.

Airmen will not be insured under Canadian insurance schemes, and any insurance contributions (employers' and employees' shares) necessary to ensure benefits for Australian or New Zealand airmen under Australian or New Zealand schemes will be paid by the Government of Australia or the Government of New Zealand, who will arrange with the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, for the recovery from pay of any employees' shares of such contributions so recoverable.

Pay, allowances, etc., during service with the Royal Air Force.

On embarkation for service with the Royal Air Force, officers and airmen will be attached to that force, and, subject to the conditions laid down in King's Regulations and Air Council Instructions, they will receive from the appropriate Royal Air Force paying authority the pay, allowances, etc., of the rank and branch (or group) in the Royal Air Force corresponding to that held in the Royal Australian Air Force or in the Royal New Zealand Air Force, except that the following special arrangements will be made in regard to the issue of allowances to family or other dependents in Australia or New Zealand.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268200A

The allowances and compulsory allotment from pay in respect of family or other dependents which may be payable under Royal Air Force regulations will, if the family or other dependents reside in Australia or New Zealand, be credited to the Government of Australia or to the Government of New Zealand, who will issue to the family or other dependent the allowance and compulsory allotment from pay which may be payable under Royal Australian Air Force or Royal New Zealand Air Force regulations.

If the pay and allowances admissible under Royal Australian Air Force or Royal New Zealand Air Force regulations exceed those admissible under Royal Air Force regulations, and the Government of Australia or the Government of New Zealand decide that this difference is to be credited to the officer or airman, the difference (after taking into account the payment made under the preceding paragraph) will be issued by the Government of Australia or the Government of New Zealand as deferred pay, either on termination of service or otherwise in special circumstances.

Personnel will not be insured under United Kingdom insurance schemes, and any insurance contributions (employers' and employees' shares) necessary to ensure benefits under Australian or New Zealand schemes will be paid by the Government of Australia or the Government of New Zealand, who will arrange with the Government of the United Kingdom to recover from pay any employees' shares of such contributions so recoverable.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS

Office of The Prime Minister

C268201

Name of Publication Ottawa Citizen

Date December 9, 1939

Subject Air Training

Canada's Air Training Trust

Perhaps the greatest responsibility ever undertaken by Canada in peace or war is about to be announced. The survival of the British Commonwealth may depend upon the ability of Canada to carry out the air training scheme as it has been agreed upon at the conference of Empire representatives recently concluded in Ottawa.

Various figures have been quoted about the estimated cost of this air training work to be done in Canada. It may amount to more than 700 million dollars to be expended in three years. Canada will undertake to make it possible to train the fighting air forces of the British Commonwealth at the rate of 25,000 pilots annually. Canadian facilities are to provide for the training of young pilots from Australia, New Zealand and the United Kingdom as well as to bring the flower of Canada's youth into the air force.

It has been stated that ten men are needed on the ground to perform the work to maintain one war pilot in the air. For this ground work, most of the men may have to be mechanics or otherwise educated to the standard of technical school or college entrance. It is sufficient to consider this responsibility alone, the necessity of recruiting perhaps 250,000 men in Canada for the air training scheme, to appreciate the magnitude of the task immediately ahead.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS

Office of
The Prime Minister

C 268201

Name of Publication: Ottawa Citizen

Date: December 9, 1939

Subject: Air Training

Canada's Air Training Trust

Perhaps the greatest responsibility ever undertaken by Canada in peace or war is about to be announced. The survival of the British Commonwealth may depend upon the ability of Canada to carry out the air training scheme as it has been agreed upon at the conference of Empire representatives recently concluded in Ottawa.

Various figures have been quoted about the estimated cost of this air training work to be done in Canada. It may amount to more than 750 million dollars to be expended in three years. Canada will undertake to make it possible to train the fighting air forces of the British Commonwealth at the rate of 25,000 pilots annually. Canadian facilities are to provide for the training of young pilots from Australia, New Zealand and the United Kingdom as well as to bring the flower of Canada's youth into the air force.

It has been stated that ten men are needed on the ground to perform the work to maintain one war pilot in the air. For this ground work, most of the men may have to be mechanics or otherwise educated to the standard of technical school or college entrance. It is sufficient to consider this responsibility alone, the necessity of recruiting perhaps 250,000 men in Canada for the air training scheme, to appreciate the magnitude of the task immediately ahead.

At the same time, however, Canada must press on with great new airports, with paved surfaces nearly a mile in length to allow the heavy bombers to operate. No mere level field of turf is adequate for the landing of the gigantic war machines or for the fast fighting aircraft, designed as they are to fly at six miles a minute. During spring months in Canada, melting snow is liable to make training impossible unless landing fields and airports have paved surfaces. The construction work ahead may soon be making a heavy demand on Canadian manual labor.

There is also the actual building of aircraft in Canada to be considered. Perhaps most of the machines for training purposes may have to be imported. Until Canadian factories are turning out more aircraft as ordered, reliance must be largely on outside sources of supply. Eventually, however, Canada has to produce machines as well as to build new airports, keep thousands of aircraft in service and train 25,000 or more pilots annually.

Word is expected at an early date from the responsible authorities. General agreement has already been announced. It is a great trust, with Canada as the key nation in the British Commonwealth's effort to overwhelm the most dangerous challenge ever hurled by the forces of human tyranny against the principle of democracy.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

C 268202 topic

Air Training

DEPT. OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

Prime Minister :-

Sir Gerald Campbell says he has a telegram saying the Canadian Government's views of Yesterday etc re Air Training are now being considered by the U.K. War Cabinet and they will telegraph again later

He asked if you were broadcasting tonight — I said of course not.

OSD

Ottawa, ~~Dec~~ Dec 11
6 15 pm.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

A. & T.

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA

TO: THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

C 268202

CODE

UNNUMBERED

OTTAWA, December 11th, 1939.

Unnumbered message. Following for Mr. Crerar, Begins:

Only point holding up signing of Air Training Agreement by Canada is unwillingness of the United Kingdom Government to accept our proviso that Canadian personnel from the air training plan will on request from the Canadian Government be organized in R.C.A.F. formations in the field. This is what our Government all along has understood. It is, of course, obvious that question of extent and rate at which R.C.A.F. formations would be organized would be question for decision in light of future circumstances. It might save time if you would let the British Government know how strongly our Government feel on this point. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Air Training

C 268204

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA.

TO: THE PRIME MINISTER OF NEW ZEALAND, WELLINGTON.

TELEGRAM

No.

MOST IMMEDIATE

CYPHER

OTTAWA, December 11th, 1939.

Your telegram December 11th received.

I note that your government have approved principles of training agreement, but prefer that signature be made in London after receipt and approval of full text. We are of course quite ready to concur in this arrangement, and after consultation with United Kingdom delegation, propose to arrange for initialling here, to be followed by signature of four copies of agreement. Copies will be sent to London for signature there. As regards making public statement at time you propose, it will not be possible to initial agreement for one or two days longer. As it is desired to make announcements simultaneous in the four countries, we shall endeavour, in consultation with United Kingdom representatives here, to suggest date of public statements and to give adequate notice of such date to other countries concerned.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

Air Training

ODS/ET
11 Dec.1939

MEMORANDUM FOR THE
PRIME MINISTER:

C268205

11 Dec.

Attached is a 'most immediate' telegram which came in last evening indicating New Zealand's full concurrence in the air training announcement. The second sentence is ambiguous; it may mean that they do not intend to give their approval until they receive the full text,(which will be about a week from now when Saunders arrives in New Zealand),and when they have approved, that they will instruct their HighCommissioner in London to sign.

That is a matter,however,which I assume the United Kingdom will deal with. I am notifying Sir Gerald immediately, and also sending copies of the telegram to Defence,Finance and Transport.

If the Prime Minister of New Zealand is not to make a public statement on Tuesday evening, he will have to be notified very shortly,as eight o'clock Tuesday evening in New Zealand is about four o'clock Tuesday morning here. Mr.Savage says he has repeated his statement to London and Canberra.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

C 268206

FROM: THE PRIME MINISTER OF NEW ZEALAND, WELLINGTON

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA.

MOST IMMEDIATE

CYPHER

Wellington, December 11, 1939

New Zealand Government concur in arrangements made for announcement on Training Agreement, principles of which have their full approval. On approval of full text instructions will be issued for signature by the High Commissioner for New Zealand in London. Public statement on lines similar to your own will be made in New Zealand on Tuesday evening. Repeated to London and Canberra.

PRIME MINISTER.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

C 268206

FROM: THE PRIME MINISTER OF NEW ZEALAND, WELLINGTON

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA.

MOST IMMEDIATE

CYPHER

Wellington, December 11, 1939

New Zealand Government concur in arrangements made for announcement on Training Agreement, principles of which have their full approval. On approval of full text instructions will be issued for signature by the High Commissioner for New Zealand in London. Public statement on lines similar to your own will be made in New Zealand on Tuesday evening. Repeated to London and Canberra.

PRIME MINISTER.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268207

CANADA

MINISTER OF NATIONAL DEFENCE

OTTAWA, December 8th, 1939.

Dear Mr. King:-

. I am enclosing herewith copies of correspondence exchanged with Lord Riverdale to-day with reference to paragraph 15 of the Memorandum of Agreement covering the British Commonwealth Air Training Programme.

Yours sincerely,

Norman A. L. Rogers

The Right Honourable
W. L. Mackenzie King,
Prime Minister,
Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COPY

C268208

OTTAWA, December 8, 1939.

My dear Lord Riverdale:

Paragraph 15 of the memorandum of agreement between the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand, relating to training of pilots and aircraft crews in Canada, and their subsequent service, reads as follows:

> "The United Kingdom Government undertakes that pupils of Canada, Australia and New Zealand shall, after training is completed, be identified with their respective Dominions, either by the method of organizing Dominion Units and formations or in some other way, such methods to be agreed upon with the respective Dominion Governments concerned. The United Kingdom Government will initiate inter-governmental discussions to this end."

In accordance with our conversation of yesterday, I understand that you accept as the proper interpretation of this paragraph that Canadian personnel from the training plan will, on request from the Canadian Government, be organized in Royal Canadian Air Force units and formations in the field. I shall be obliged if you will confirm this interpretation of paragraph 15, by letter.

Yours sincerely,

(Sgd.) Norman McL. Rogers

The
Lord Riverdale,
Chairman,
United Kingdom Air Mission,
Room 435, House of Commons,
OTTAWA, Ontario.

ms

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COPY

UNITED KINGDOM AIR MISSION

C 268209

House of Commons
Ottawa

8th December, 1939.

Dear Mr. Rogers,

I have considered your letter of to-day's date, about the interpretation of paragraph 15 of the Memorandum of Agreement between the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand, relating to training of pilots and aircraft crews in Canada, and I do not think that it would be in conflict with the provisions of paragraph 14 of that Agreement, in which it is stated that the pupils who complete their training, other than those placed at the disposal of the Government of Canada for the filling of vacancies which occur in the Home Defence squadrons of the Royal Canadian Air Force, will on completion of their training be placed at the disposal of the Government of the United Kingdom, for me to assure you that paragraph 15 of the Agreement implies that requests by the Canadian Government for the incorporation in Royal Canadian Air Force units in the field of Canadian pupils who have been trained in Canada under the Dominion Air Training Scheme will, in all circumstances in which it is feasible, be readily accepted by the Government of the United Kingdom.

Yours sincerely,

(Sgd) RIVERDALE

The Hon. Norman McLeod Rogers,
Minister of National Defence,
Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268209 A

Points referred to in present memorandum to be brought to the attention of Lord Rennell.

If any question as to meaning of article 15 - this must be cleared up before article 14 can be finally settled by the Cabinet and before any opinion is given as to whether the Agreement - the whole Agreement - is consistent with the provisions of the Statute of Westminster.

If Lord Rennell cannot give the affirmative answer required, he must first be told - and it must be made clear to him - that the Agreement cannot be signed, the matter must be left in doubt - or the possibility of any Commonwealth Cabinet on

Dec 9. 1939

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL

Ottawa, December 11th, 1939.

MEMORANDUM RE:

Air Training Scheme - organization of Canadians in R.C.A.F. units and formations.

1. On Friday evening, December the 8th, Mr. Rogers spoke to me on the telephone concerning the reply which he had just received from Lord Riverdale to his letter of December the 8th, regarding the interpretation of paragraph 15 of the Memorandum of Agreement. Mr. Rogers was sending copies of his letter and Lord Riverdale's reply, to the Prime Minister, and expressed the opinion that the terms of the reply were not satisfactory. I drew this to the attention of Mr. King.

2. On Saturday morning, December the 9th, the Prime Minister told me that he had considered the exchange of letters and agreed with Mr. Rogers that Lord Riverdale's reply was quite unsatisfactory. Before the Canadian government would agree to initial or sign the Memorandum, it would be necessary to obtain, from the United Kingdom Mission, a clear and unequivocal statement that, at the request of the Canadian government, Canadian personnel from the training plan would be organized in R.C.A.F. units and formations in the field. This was a matter of principle which had been discussed on several occasions in the Cabinet, and all members of the government were agreed that it was essential to Canadian participation in the Scheme. If Lord Riverdale was unable to give assurance, in this respect, on behalf of the U.K. government, it would be necessary for the Canadian government to communicate direct, so that there should be no doubt whatever on this point, before the Agreement was signed.

Subsequently I explained the Prime Minister's

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

views to Mr. Ralston and Colonel Maclachlan. Mr. Ralston spoke to Lord Riverdale on the telephone on Saturday afternoon, and subsequently Colonel Maclachlan called on Lord Riverdale and explained the position of the Canadian government, at greater length. He reported to me, later, that Lord Riverdale had said that he would consult his colleagues of the Mission. It was Colonel Maclachlan's impression that the Mission intended to cable their government for instructions on the point.

3. On Sunday morning, December the 10th, Dr. Skelton, Colonel Maclachlan and I met Sir Gerald Campbell in Dr. Skelton's office, to discuss the question further. Sir Gerald urged that the Canadian government should agree to sign, the following day, without insisting upon an undertaking from the U. K. government on the matter of the organization of R.C.A.F. units and formations. The phrase "on request from the Canadian government" raised a difficult question. He had word from his government suggesting that difficulty would, in all probability, be encountered from Australia and New Zealand, if the United Kingdom were to give such an undertaking to Canada which would not extend to the other two Dominions. The United Kingdom were prepared to comply with the Canadian request concerning organization and administration of the plan and had already agreed to make the statement concerning the priority to be given to the Scheme in Canada's war effort. The organization of R.C.A.F. units and formations was a point which could safely be left to subsequent discussion between governments, under the terms of paragraph 15. The Canadian government should have confidence in the U. K. government that such discussions would lead to the "hammering out" of a satisfactory solution of the problem.

It was pointed out to Sir Gerald that the matter under discussion was not as he implied, a new question, but an old one. Colonel Maclachlan said that it had been the subject of discussion from the beginning of the negotiations; that the Canadian viewpoint in this respect had been well known to Captain Balfour, at least as early as November the 2nd, after the arrival of the Australian delegation; that the reason why it had not been covered in terms within paragraph 15 was because it was not possible to find a formula which would fit the

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268212

different views, on this subject, of the three Dominions concerned.

It was emphasized to Sir Gerald that the matter of the identification of Canadian personnel was regarded by the government as an essential feature of Canadian participation; that it had been discussed on many occasions by the Cabinet. Sir Gerald had spoken of confidence between governments in the working out of the plan. It was at least equally true that the United Kingdom should have confidence that the Canadian government would not make requests for the organization of R.C.A.F. units without preliminary exploration of the practical situation from the standpoint of joint military efficiency.

Sir Gerald reiterated the strong feeling of his government that the Memorandum should be signed immediately, particularly in view of the reports which had been made public. Further delay would create an unfavourable impression and might endanger the whole agreement.

Dr. Skelton, Colonel Maclachlan and I said that we would report to the Prime Minister the views of the U. K. government, as set out by Sir Gerald, and get into touch with him later in the day.

4. After lunch, Colonel Maclachlan saw Mr. Rogers at the hospital, and subsequently reported to me. He said that Mr. Rogers remained firmly of the view that a clear understanding should be reached with the U. K. government before the Agreement was signed. Perhaps it was unfortunate that the question had been put as a matter of interpretation of paragraph 15. It was rather that the admission of a principle was asked.

He would be prepared to regard an assurance by the U. K. government, that immediately following signature, an undertaking would be given that any request of the Canadian government concerning the organization of R.C.A.F. squadrons would be met, as sufficient. This might enable the Agreement to be signed at once, as the United Kingdom requested.

5. I reported to the Prime Minister, by telephone, the substance of our interview with Sir Gerald, and the suggestion which Mr. Rogers had made to Colonel Maclachlan.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268213

The Prime Minister was emphatic that he could not and would not sigh any Agreement until a categorical undertaking had been given by the U. K. government with respect to the organization of R.C.A.F. squadrons from Canadian personnel. This matter was regarded by the whole Cabinet as absolutely essential and was a prerequisite to signature by the Canadian government. Trouble had arisen in the last war over exactly the same principle and the Canadian government's attitude must be quite clear and incapable of misunderstanding. If the U. K. High Commissioner and the U. K. Mission could not give the assurances required, the Canadian government would communicate directly with the U. K. government. Mr. Rogers' letter to Lord Riverdale did not represent a new request, but described the Canadian viewpoint which had been well known to those concerned with the negotiations, for some time. It was regarded as a fixed principle by the Cabinet.

6. At the Prime Minister's direction Colonel Maclachlan and I called later in the afternoon upon Sir Gerald Campbell, and explained the attitude of the Canadian government. It was quite impossible for Canada to sign until the point at issue had been completely cleared up. The issue was not a new one, as Sir Gerald appeared to think. Mr. Rogers' letter was simply intended to record an understanding which we had believed to have existed from an early stage of the negotiations. Lord Riverdale's reply to Mr. Rogers' letter came as a shock to the Canadian government, and far from satisfying our contention, it had, by the reservations which it contained, confirmed our view that the principle involved should be settled, quite clearly, before the Memorandum could be signed.

Sir Gerald reiterated what he had said in the morning, urged the importance of immediate signature, and pleaded for confidence that the United Kingdom would respect Canadian feeling in requests for the organization of R.C.A.F. units. He felt that the United Kingdom had already made several concessions in respect of the higher command, the priority to be given to the plan, and in other particulars, though strong arguments could be advanced for the contrary view, in each of these cases. It was impossible to give the assurance requested by Mr. Rogers, without referring further to London, and delay endangered the effect of the announcement of the Agreement.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Sir Gerald was informed that it was quite impossible for the Canadian government to recede from the position which it had taken upon this question. It was a reasonable attitude - it had been taken from the beginning; it was not a new request raised at the last moment; it was essential from the public point of view in Canada. The Canadian government had shown and would continue to show their determination to support the common cause. If the U. K. authorities felt that to admit the principle contended for would hamper efficient military action in the field, they gave little credit to the Canadian authorities who were equally desirous that the joint effort should be just as effective as it could be. Confidence would have to be shown on the side of the U. K. government, as well as on that of the Canadian government.

Sir Gerald said that he would prepare a cable, at once, to his government, setting out the Canadian viewpoint, and that he would report immediately he had word from London.

A. D. P. H.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ODS/ET
12 Dec.,1939

air training

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER:

C 268215

Attached is the telegram which went out last night. I notice the coders have used the word"formations" instead of "units and formations",but that is not of much importance.

Attached also is a telegram from the Prime Minister of New Zealand saying that they have postponed the broadcast by the New Zealand Minister of Defence on Air Effort until a later date. We shall have to try to give New Zealand and Australia adequate notice of the hour set for the press release or broadcasting here,whichever comes first.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

Air T.

"R"

FROM: THE PRIME MINISTER OF NEW ZEALAND, WELLINGTON C 268216

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA.

MOST IMMEDIATE

SECRET

CYPHER

WELLINGTON, December 12th, 1939.

The proposed broadcast by New Zealand Minister of Defence on New Zealand Air Effort has been postponed until a later date.

PRIME MINISTER

Rec 'd Ottawa: 9.30 A.M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

Air T.

Air training

DRAFT CONCLUSION

JWP/MS
13.12.39

C 268217

Air power is essential to Britain and France, for the protection of their people and their industry, on which depends their capacity to carry on the war successfully. In expanding Canada's effort overseas, every dollar we spend on the air arm is likely to add more to the power and strength of Britain and France than the same dollar can add when spent in any other way. Canada is acting, therefore, on the sound military principle of securing the greatest available strength for a given expenditure of effort, in concentrating on the development of that power from the skies, which may be decisive in the present struggle.

It is vital for us to remember that, in the vast expansion of air power which Canada has undertaken, in collaboration with her partners in the British Commonwealth, more than dollars are involved. The greatest of all our assets, the lives of our young men are being pledged. Like our soldiers and our sailors, the pilots and airmen to be trained in thousands in Canada are going forth to battle in the sacred cause of Freedom.

If we fail to use our geographical advantages, our mechanical skill and our material resources effectively, our cause will not prevail. The triumph of our cause will, however, depend even more on the preservation of

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268218

the tremendous moral advantage with which we entered the struggle. It will be fatal to allow our pre-occupation with the means of carrying on the war to obscure the great end for which it is being fought. Young Canadians are preparing to lay down their lives for the preservation of the free civilization which is at stake. All Canadians, young and old, have a duty to safeguard, at home, the freedom of the mind and of the soul, which we have taken up arms to defend.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ODS/AH

December 13th,1939.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER.

C268219

AIR TRAINING.

No direct telegram has yet been received on this subject and I have no communication from Sir Gerald Campbell on the matter.

I am perhaps unduly apprehensive, but I do feel there is a certain ambiguity in our proposal that the United Kingdom agree "that Canadian personnel from the training plan will on request from the Canadian Government be organized in Royal Canadian Air Force units and formations in the field." The arguments used by some of the proponents of this policy would lead logically to our undertaking to organize and maintain at the front all Canadian trainees. In any case there will be real difficulty in insisting on the one hand on our right to organize trainees in Royal Canadian Air Force units and on the other on the United Kingdom meeting the costs of the maintenance. There are, of course, various compromises that can be worked out whether on the line of our paying salaries of the men as distinct from the upkeep of machines or maintaining pilots and observers without ground crews or contenting ourselves with organizing a limited number of squadrons, but I do

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268220

feel from what little I know of the discussions on these points that there is some danger of sliding into a position where we would have no answer either to the British Government or to some vociferous elements in the Canadian public if it were suggested that if we call the tune we should pay the Piper. I understood the eventual Empire Air Force of 196 squadrons would cost six hundred million pounds a year to maintain. Assuming that five-ninths of the men came from the Dominions and slightly over half of these from Canada it would mean £170,000,000 or $750,000,000 a year for this branch alone of our war effort.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

ODS/ET
13 Dec.1939

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER:

Records Room

C 268221

After your telephone conversation at noon today, I telephoned Sir Gerald Campbell, asking him if there was any information yet as to the United Kingdom reply on the air training question. Sir Gerald said "Nothing definite yet". He understood Ministers' Committee had discussed the matter and that the War Cabinet was dealing with it this morning. A telegram would then be framed and we should get it some time this afternoon or evening. I informed him that the Cabinet had endorsed the position taken with regard to the C.A.F. matter. If the United Kingdom reply was in the affirmative, the Prime Minister would be prepared to initial the agreement at once. If it was in the negative, we should like to know exactly what the reasons advanced were so that they might be given immediate consideration.

. S.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Dec 14-39

Several changes agreed to in Cabinet — as presented to Imp. Conference — 2nd par. not needed

In agreements made under Article 15, the United Kingdom Government will accept the principle that when Royal Canadian Air Force personnel ~~both~~ flying ~~and ground~~ are available in sufficient numbers ~~wholly~~ or predominately to man complete units, ~~they~~ shall, ~~at the request of the~~ Canadian Government be organized into units or formations of the Royal Canadian Air Force in the field.

In view of the fact that large numbers of Canadian ground personnel who would otherwise be available to man Royal Canadian Air Force units or formations in the field are absorbed by the requirements of the training scheme, the United Kingdom Government undertakes to help ~~in~~ make possible the formation of Royal Canadian Air Force units and formations either by giving training in the United Kingdom to ground personnel of the Royal Canadian Air Force or, as soon as practicable, by sending to Canada skilled tradesmen of the Royal Air Force to release the Canadian ground personnel required for the purpose of forming Royal Canadian Air Force squadrons for service overseas or by utilizing both of these methods.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

Air T.

Dec 15 -
Statement of Lord Rowallan as reported & known - agreed -
If known - if any comment concerning of anyone - Lord Rowallan - before Lord Rowallan must approach
Cabinet might decide
- his report both before (you also may carry on of the an appeal

Ottawa, December 15, 1939

C 268223

Replying to your letter of December the 8th, knowing as the earnest desire of the United Kingdom Government that the Royal Canadian Air Force shall be directly represented in the field, I can readily agree that in carrying out paragraph 15 the United Kingdom Government will, if requested by the Canadian Government, arrange that the Canadian personnel from the training plan will be organized as Royal Canadian Air Force Units and formations in the field; the detailed methods by which this will be done to be arranged by an inter-departmental committee to be appointed for this purpose under paragraph 15.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

AirT.

Dec 15

Draft of Statement on handed over by Lord Hankey after London Conference re Empire
Defence. Made up of Extracts from Conclusions as amended
-ndered on pages 4 Paragraphs 2 & 3 respectively

C268224

Knowing the earnest desire of the United Kingdom Government that the Royal Canadian Air Force shall be ~~fully~~ directly represented in the field, I can readily agree that in carrying out paragraph fifteen, the United Kingdom will, if requested by the Canadian Government, organize Royal Canadian Air Force units and formations in the field.

The detailed methods by which this will be done to be arranged by an inter-governmental committee to be appointed for this purpose under paragraph fifteen.

"as" includes in and something more

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

MEMORANDUM
Office of the Prime Minister C 268225

Ottawa, ...

Col. Heeney.

This is Col Ralston's revised letter to Riverdale.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

Air T.

C268226

OFFICE OF THE PRIME MINISTER
CANADA

Ottawa, December 15, 1939.

The Right Honourable Lord Riverdale, K.B.E.,
2 Mt Pleasant
Ottawa, Ontario.

Dear Lord Riverdale:

This morning you asked if I would meet you in order that, together, we might endeavour to reach a decision with respect to the one matter which has been holding up the signing of the agreement respecting the Joint Air Training Plan.

I met you at my office, and together we discussed the matter both before and after luncheon; before luncheon, in the presence of my colleague, the Minister of Finance, and after luncheon, in the presence of my colleagues, the Minister of Finance and the Minister of National Defence.

At the beginning of the afternoon's conversations, you presented us with a statement which you said you were prepared to embody in a letter to Mr. Rogers in reply to his letter to you of December the 8th. In the course of our conversations, a few slight changes were made in the statement. The statement was then rewritten in the light of these modifications, to read as follows:

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268227

"Replying to your letter of December the 8th, knowing the earnest desire of the United Kingdom Government that the Royal Canadian Air Force shall be directly represented in the field, I can readily agree that in carrying out paragraph 15 the United Kingdom Government will, if requested by the Canadian Government, arrange that the Canadian personnel from the training plan will be organized as Royal Canadian Air Force Units and formations in the field. The detailed methods by which this will be done to be arranged by an intergovernmental committee to be appointed for this purpose under paragraph 15.

You stated repeatedly that you were prepared to reply to Mr. Rogers' letter in the terms of the statement above set forth, if, on behalf of my colleagues, I would agree to this being a satisfactory reply.

As you will recall, I took the position with each of my colleagues that ~~your~~ statement accurately embodied what the government ~~had accepted as the proper interpretation of~~ paragraph 15 of the Memorandum of Agreement, and I agreed to the letter which you proposed to send Mr. Rogers, and upon its receipt by him, ~~consented~~ to sign the agreement itself on behalf of the government of Canada.

At the time of this understanding between us, there was no question of the statement being subject to further revision.

In the concluding paragraph of your letter this evening, just received, a ~~condition~~ which was never so much as referred to in any conversations I have had with you is now being made a condition precedent to a reply on your part to Mr. Rogers' letter in the terms agreed to this afternoon.

My colleagues and I are prepared to abide by the terms of the agreement reached with you this afternoon, and as soon as Mr. Rogers' letter has been replied to in accordance with the statement handed to

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

A) This factor is that the organization of R.C.A.F. units is to be measured by the cold consideration of financial contribution, disregarding entirely Canada's heavy contribution of fighting men in the way of pilots, observers and gunners.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

us and agreed upon, I am prepared, on behalf of the government, to sign the Memorandum of Agreement.

~~As a criterion of identification, any financial condition is something quite new and one which has never before been proposed. I regret to have to inform you that any such criterion is not acceptable to my colleagues and myself.~~

Yours sincerely,

regret to have to inform you

~~the condition~~ ~~therefore~~ that the Government regards consent ~~as~~ ~~of~~ your letter as a ~~satisfactory~~ reply to the above letter.

~~in~~

in reference to this vital matter

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

UNITED KINGDOM AIR MISSION

C 268230

HOUSE OF COMMONS,
OTTAWA,

15th December, 1939.

My dear Prime Minister,

I have discussed on the telephone this evening with Sir Kingsley Wood the matters which formed the subject of our conversation this afternoon relating to the letter which I received on the 8th December from the Minister of National Defence on the meaning of paragraph 15 of the Memorandum of Agreement.

I have now been authorised to reply to the above mentioned letter from Mr. Rogers in the following terms:-

"On the understanding that the numbers to be incorporated at any time would be the subject of agreement between the two Governments, the United Kingdom Government accepts in principle as being consonant with the intention of paragraph 15 of the Memorandum of Agreement that the United Kingdom Government on the request of the Canadian Government would agree to the incorporation of Canadian pupils when passing out from the/

The Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, M.P.,
Prime Minister of Canada,
OTTAWA.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

HOUSE OF COMMONS,
OTTAWA,

the training scheme into units of the Royal Canadian Air Force in the field

"The detailed method by which this will be done will be arranged by an Inter-Governmental Committee for this purpose under paragraph 15.

"It would be a condition that the factor governing the numbers of such pupils to be so incorporated at any one time should be the financial contribution which the Canadian Government have already declared themselves ready to make towards the cost of the training scheme".

If the foregoing proposals meet with the approval of the Canadian Government I am authorised to sign the Memorandum of Agreement forthwith.

Yours sincerely,

Macdonald

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COPY/G

C 268232

Ottawa, December 15, 1939

The Right Honourable Lord Riverdale, K.B.E.,
Chairman,
United Kingdom Air Mission,
Ottawa, Ontario.

Dear Lord Riverdale:

This morning you asked if I would meet you in order that, together, we might endeavour to reach a decision with respect to the one matter which has been holding up the signing of the agreement respecting the Joint Air Training Plan.

I met you at my office, and together we discussed the matter both before and after luncheon; before luncheon, in the presence of my colleague, the Minister of Finance, and after luncheon, in the presence of my colleagues, the Minister of Finance and the Minister of National Defence.

At the beginning of the afternoon's conversations, you presented us with a statement which you said you were prepared to embody in a letter to Mr. Rogers in reply to his letter to you of December the 8th. In the course of our conversations, a few slight changes were made in the statement. The statement was then rewrittem in the light of these modifications, to read as follows:

> "Replying to your letter of December the 8th, knowing the earnest desire of the United Kingdom Government that the Royal Canadian Air Force shall be directly represented in the field, I can readily agree that in carrying out paragraph 15 the United Kingdom Government will, if requested by the Canadian

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268232A

"Government, arrange that the Canadian personnel from the training plan will be organized as Royal Canadian Air Force Units and formations in the field. The detailed methods by which this will be done to be arranged by an intergovernmental committee to be appointed for this purpose under paragraph 15."

You stated repeatedly that you were prepared to reply to Mr. Rogers' letter in the terms of the statement above set forth, if, on behalf of my colleagues, I would agree to this being a satisfactory reply.

As you will recall, I took the position with each of my colleagues that the above statement accurately embodied what the government had considered acceptable as the policy to be followed in carrying out paragraph 15 of the Memorandum of Agreement, and I agreed to the letter which you proposed to send Mr. Rogers, and that upon its receipt by him, I would sign the agreement itself on behalf of the government of Canada.

At the time of this understanding between us, there was no question of the statement being subject to further revision.

In the concluding paragraph of your letter this evening, just received, a factor which was never so much as referred to in any conversations I have had with you is now being made a condition precedent to a reply on your part to Mr. Rogers' letter in the terms agreed to this afternoon. This factor is that the organization of R.C.A.F. units is to be measured by the cold consideration of financial contribution, disregarding entirely Canada's heavy contribution of fighting men in the way of pilots, observers and gunners.

My colleagues and I are prepared to abide by the terms of the agreement reached with you this afternoon, and as soon as Mr. Rogers' letter has been replied to in accordance with the statement handed to

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

us and agreed upon, I am prepared, on behalf of the government, to sign the Memorandum of Agreement.

I regret to have to inform you that, in reference to this vital matter, the government cannot regard your letter as a satisfactory reply to Mr. Rogers' letter.

Yours sincerely,

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268234

On the understanding that the numbers to be organized at any time would be the subject of discussion between the two governments, the United Kingdom Government accepts in principle, as being consonant with the intention of paragraph 15 of the memorandum of agreement, that the United Kingdom Government, on the request of the Canadian Government, would agree to the organization of Canadian pupils, when passing out from the training scheme as units of the Royal Canadian Air Force in the field.

The detailed method etc.

That Canadian pupils in the field will be under the command of Canadian officers in a manner similar to that of other Canadian forces in the field. This might be done by the organization, etc.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

Ans T.

C 268235

Ottawa
December 16th, 1939

On the understanding that the numbers to be incorporated or organized at any time will be the subject of discussion between the two governments, the United Kingdom Government accepts in principle as being consonant with the intention of Paragraph 15 of the Memorandum of Agreement, that the United Kingdom Government, on the request of the Canadian Government, would arrange that the Canadian pupils, when passing out from the Training Scheme, would be incorporated in or organized as units and formations of the Royal Canadian Air Force in the field. The detailed methods by which this can be done would be arranged by an intergovernmental committee for this purpose under Paragraph 15.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

OFFICE OF THE PRIME MINISTER C 268236

MEMORANDUM

Prime Minister

Col. MacLaughlin & Air Vice Marshal Croil have settled with Sir Robert Brooke-Popham and Wg. Cdr. Strathan on the attached formulae which Col. MacLaughlin and our Air Vice Marshal regard as satisfactory. Brooke Popham and Strathan are conferring now to find out if Lord Riverdale agrees. Wg. Rogers is agreeable

I shall await you in the ante-room.

Col. MacLaughlin & Croil are in my room.

Dec 14

A. D. P.-H.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268237

FROM: THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE PRIME MINISTER OF AUSTRALIA, CANBERRA.

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA.

EN CLAIR CANBERRA, December 15th, 1939.

An Agreement has been signed by the Governments of the United Kingdom and Australia as part of the vast Empire Scheme of Air Training, the Prime Minister (Mr. Menzies) said today.

The whole scheme involves the expenditure of millions of pounds, the training of many thousands of pilots, observers and air gunners in Empire countries and the mobilisation of men and modern aircraft in an Empire air effort which will play a decisive part in this war.

The Empire scheme will afford a remarkable example of the unity and strength of Great Britain and the Dominions working together for supremacy in the air.

The extent of Australia's participation is in keeping with the bold sweep of the whole scheme. Australia will make a substantial contribution to the pooling of Empire air resources in this spectacular project. Not only will we be a unit in the massed Empire forces but we will add immeasurably to the defence strength of the Commonwealth by creating in Australia an organization which will be much bigger than we could ever have hoped to attain by ourselves.

At the Conference recently held in Ottawa between representatives of the Governments concerned in the air scheme, Australia sought and obtained the right to train completely a substantial proportion of the Australian quota of men in our own country. As the first objective of the scheme contemplates an Australian quota of 26,000 men the importance of this feature in increasing the strength of our own air arm may be appreciated.

The original conception of the scheme was that all Dominions should undertake their own elementary training but that all service training should be carried out in Canada owing to its special advantages in being closest to the United Kingdom, its

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268238

greater potentiality for the manufacture of service type of aircraft and its proximity to the great resources of the United States of America.

Having regard to current economic considerations, the avoidance of exchange difficulties and the contribution the scheme will make to national security, both during the war and from the residual value of the organisation developed, the Commonwealth Government represented that in addition to the elementary training of the full quota of pilots and the initial training of the full quota of air crews the service training of personnel should be carried out in Australia to the maximum of our resources, leaving only a relatively small proportion to be undertaken in Canada. Arrangements on these lines have now been made by Mr. Fairbairn.

An outline of the scheme as accepted is as follows:

PERSONNEL TO BE PROVIDED

On a population basis the Commonwealth is to train as soon as possible as a first objective a total of approximately 26,000, comprising 10,400 pilots and 15,600 observers and wireless operators and air gunners. All personnel will receive their elementary training in Australia and all will be completely trained in Australia, except some thousands who will receive their service training in Canada.

AIRCRAFT

Elementary Trainers

Australia is to provide all elementary training aircraft to be used in Australia but Great Britain will contribute free 50 per cent of the engines required in kind or in cash.

Intermediate Trainers

Australia is to provide all Wirraways for intermediate training but Great Britain will contribute the cost of a large number of Wirraways, calculated on the price of the corresponding type in United States of America or provide in kind an equivalent number of similar aircraft to the extent necessary to supplement local production advanced training and service training aircraft.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268239

Great Britain will contribute free all aircraft required in Australia for advanced training of pilots and for the training of air crews, except for the small number of aircraft necessary for the wireless training of air gunners. The types which will be supplied for this purpose will be Fairey Battles and Avro Ansons.

Wastage, Replacement and Spares

Great Britain will contribute free all aircraft to replace wastage of those originally contributed, also the appropriate maintenance spare parts.

Training Schools in Australia

Australia will accept responsibility for the establishment and maintenance of the necessary training schools and establishments in Australia except for the contribution in aircraft by Great Britain. The existing air force training organisation will be expanded considerably and the new schools to be formed are:

3 Initial Ground Training Schools,

9 Elementary Flying Training Schools,

7 Service Flying Training Schools,

4 Air Observers' Schools,

4 Bombing and Gunnery Schools,

4 Wireless Air Gunners' Schools,

1 Wireless Operators' School,

2 Air Navigation Schools.

INSTRUCTORS

Great Britain offers to provide on loan under the usual conditions the instructors necessary to supplement those which can be provided from our own resources.

Retention of Australian Identity

All trainees will be enlisted in the Royal Australian Air Force and on completion of training will be attached to the Royal Air Force from the date of embarkation for Great Britain, those completing air training in Canada will be attached to the Royal Canadian Air Force whilst in that country.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268240

The details of the allotment and organisation of Australians in the Empire Air Force have not been finally determined but the Government has laid it down and it has been agreed that their Australian identity is to be retained as far as possible.

Pay of Personnel

Australia will accept the responsibility for all pay and allowances whilst personnel are serving in Australia.

Great Britain will bear the cost of pay, allowances and pensions at English rates from date of embarkation for England.

The pay of the quota being trained in Canada will be borne pro rata by all Governments at Canadian rates of pay until completion of service training.

The relation of these provisions to Australian rates of pay and pensions is being examined.

COST

The cost of the training to be carried out in Australia has not yet been worked out in detail. An approximate estimate of the capital expenditure involved is £20,000,000 (Australian) and the maintenance expenditure for a full year at the maximum output (which will not of course be attained for some time) be £15,000,000 (Australian). The total cost of the scheme within the next three years is estimated to be not less than £50,000,000 (Australian)

I would express the Governments appreciation of the able manner in which my colleague, the Minister for Air, has carried out the negotiations at Ottawa.

This scheme from the Australian aspect is one in which we have an aptitude for a notable contribution by reason of our growing air mindedness, ideal flying conditions and aviation resources both air force and civil which were expended and developed as a matter of definite policy in the years preceding the war. The large proportion of local expenditure will be of some advantage and the aircraft industry will be greatly stimulated. The existence of extensive training establishments and large numbers of instructors, the great increase in the number of aircraft in the country and

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

the regular output of pilots and crews will add to the defensive strength of the Commonwealth and render it more able to play its part in the war effort of the Empire generally. Message ends.

PRIME MINISTER

Rec'd Ottawa: 3.45 P.M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268242

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA.

TO: THE PRIME MINISTER OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA, CANBERRA

MOST IMMEDIATE

CODE

No. 24 Ottawa, December 15th, 1939.

Am much obliged by your advising me in your telegram of this date of your intention to make statement for publication in the Australian press of Saturday morning. Understanding here has been that agreed public statement would be issued in all four capitals at agreed time after initialling of memorandum. I believe United Kingdom authorities have taken up this matter with you. This agreed statement could then be followed by individual supplementary statements as each Government thought desirable. We are hoping very shortly to arrange matters for final initialling here and in that event would suggest the time for simultaneous release. I very much hope it will be possible for you to postpone statement in the meantime.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Ottawa
December 16, 1939
7:30 p.m.

C 268243

Comments by Col. Ralston

Brooke-Popham wished to strike out the word "the" before: "arrange that the Canadian pupils, etc." Ralston said he would not slaughter his own child; that the objective of the Agreement was to have all the Canadians formed into formations and units under their own command. That was the objective, and we wish to be free to say that, though we realized that it might not be possible to reach the objective. That the Canadian Government was conceding three factors; no one of which, strictly speaking, should be conceded. In the first place, they were allowing use in the memorandum of the word "numbers" - "that the numbers to be incorporated, etc." Secondly, they were asking the British Government to agree only in principle; and in the third place, they were leaving the working out of the scheme to an inter-governmental committee.

He said that Brooke-Popham wanted to have inserted the words: "the extent to which....." before the words: "the detailed methods by which...." but Ralston said he had already gone as far as he should go in meeting that point by agreeing to the reference to numbers, above. He, however, made this concession

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

to Brooke-Popham: The draft had stood: "The detailed methods by which this would be done will be arranged....." He agreed to change the "will" to "can". This pleased Lord Riverdale very much. Brooke-Popham said he didn't see any difference, and asked what it meant. Ralston said it meant what it said: "That if it can be done, it should be done; if it can't be done, it can't be done." That that was something the Committee would work out and decide upon. By substituting "can" instead of "will" he had made the path easier. That if it can't be done, it won't be insisted upon.

I told Ralston that I would agree to the above text as an answer to Rogers' letter by Lord Riverdale, and I would undertake to speak for both Rogers and Howe. That, if he himself was agreeable and satisfied, I would be satisfied.

He asked me whether I felt that we should concede the words: "the extent to which." I was rather hesitant in my reply, and tried to indicate that I would go that far, inasmuch as it clearly is not going to be possible to include every individual. On the other hand, I agreed with Ralston that the third concession, above mentioned, afforded all that is necessary by way of protection to the British Government in that connection.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Ralston is leaving in an hour for Montreal by plane. He has offered to stay behind if necessary.

Ralston said that Lord Riverdale was all right. That he thought he was anxious to have this matter concluded for my birthday. I told Ralston that I thought it should be concluded tonight, so that it would be broadcast on my birthday.

I told Ralston to advise Riverdale of my willingness to accept the above draft, and of my readiness and desire to sign the agreement tonight. I suggested to Ralston to ring up Riverdale again, not only to tell him what I was prepared to agree to, but that I wanted to point out to him that our men would be landing at once, and that our Tuesday's papers would be devoted to that event. That I thought it would be very unfortunate if the Air Training project would be announced at the same time as the landing of our troops. That the benefit of both would be, in large part, destroyed. That I thought the advantage to the British Empire in raising the spirits of its people, and the corresponding psychological effect in the spirits of the enemy would be very great if we could announce the Air Training Scheme in advance of the landing of our men and have one big stroke follow within a day or two of each other. That I thought he would realize the political significance of this and what

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268246

his Government would wish to have done. And that I was speaking to him as Prime Minister of Canada, urging this on behalf of Canada's effort, and also on behalf of the British people themselves, and that I wanted him to see that this fact was made known to Chamberlain. That I regarded it as of the greatest possible importance.

Ralston rang me back after he had had his talk and said that Riverdale was much impressed by what I had said in this regard. That he would ring me up later on. (I had indicated my willingness to have him do so.) He had told Ralston he was having a very difficult time with Sir Brooke-Popham. That he wanted further time to think the matter over quietly. That he, Riverdale, was quite satisfied with the statement, and was anxious to have the matter settled at once.

Ralston said he would be at his office for another hour before taking the plane for Montreal, but would stay on for another hour if I wished him to do so.

W. L. M. K.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

PRESS CLIPPINGS C268247 Office of The Prime Minister

Name of Publication Ottawa Evening Journal

Date December 15, 1939

Subject Air Training (Australia's part in scheme)

Will Train 26,000 Three-Year Cost Of $178,000,000

Australia Signs Empire Air Agreement— Premier Menzies Explains Pact

SYDNEY, Australia, Dec. 15.—(C.P.)—Prime Minister R. G. Menzies today announced Australia will spend £50,000,000 (Australian, $178,000,000) in the next three years in its part of the Empire air scheme involving 10,400 pilots and 15,600 observers, wireless operators and air gunners.

An agreement signed between the United Kingdom and Australian Governments provides that all Australian personnel shall complete their training in Australia except "some thousands" who will go to Canada.

Alter Original Plan.

The original proposal to train all Australians in Canada was dropped, due to current economic considerations and the desire to avoid exchange difficulties, in addition to factors of national security inherent in the new arrangement.

Australia, Mr. Menzies said, will provide all the aircraft necessary for elementary training, but Great Britain will contribute 50 percent. of the engines required. Australia will provide all airplanes for intermediate training, but Great Britain will contribute the cost of a large number, or an equivalent number of similar aircraft to the extent necessary to supplement local production.

Great Britain will contribute free of cost all Fairey battle 'planes and Avro-Ansons which are required for advance training of pilots.

Australian Air Force training organizations will be increased by 38 additional schools. Great Britain has offered to provide such instructors as may be necessary to supplement those in Australia.

Will Then Join R.A.F.

Upon the completion of their training in Australia the men will be attached to the Royal Air Force as of the date of their embarkation for England. Thereafter Great Britain will bear the cost and pay allowances and pensions, but it has been agreed that the Australians' identity will be retained as far as possible.

The estimated capital expenditure on training in Australia has bee nput at a maximum of £20,000,000, with an expenditure for maintenance of £15,000,000 a year.

This Empire scheme will afford a remarkable example of unity and strength, Great Britain and the Dominions working together for supremacy," Mr. Menzies concluded. "The scheme will aid immeasurably to the defence strength of Australia by creating an organization which will be much bigger than we could ever hope to attain ourselves."

Conferring With Government.

Lord Riverdale, head of the British Air Mission, and a large group of experts who came here early last October to arrange for an Empire air training scheme in Canada, still are conferring with the Dominion Government.

No official announcement has been made here as to details of the agreement between Canada, the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand.

Australian and New Zealand missions which came to Canada completed their end of the discussions in connection with the scheme some weeks ago and returned home.

The four countries will co-operate in an elaborate plan to provide advanced training for Empire air personnel in Canada. tI has been estimated total cost possibly would reach $800,000,000 on on a three-year basis.

There was no announcement forthcoming here in the wake of advice from Sydney that Prime Minister Robert Menzies of Australia stated the plan would result in training of 10,000 pilots and 15,600 observers, radio operators and runners at a cost spread over the next three years of an estimated £50,000,000.

Before the Australian and New Zealand missions left Ottawa it was announced officially that a basis for agreement had been reached and was awaiting final approval of the four governments concerned.

Formal announcement of details has been expected momentarily ever since.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS

Office of
The Prime Minister

Name of Publication [illegible]

Date [illegible]

Subject [illegible] (Australia's part in scheme)

Will Train 26,000 Three-Year Cost Of $178,000,000

Australia Signs Empire Air Agreement—Premier Menzies Explains Pact

SYDNEY, Australia, Dec. 15.—(C.P.)—Prime Minister R. G. Menzies today announced Australia will spend £50,000,000 (Australian, $178,000,000) in the next three years in its part of the Empire air scheme involving 10,400 pilots and 15,600 observers, wireless operators and air gunners.

An agreement signed between the United Kingdom and Australian Governments provides that all Australian personnel shall complete their training in Australia except "some thousands" who will go to Canada.

Alter Original Plan.

The original proposal to train all Australians in Canada was dropped, due to current economic considerations and the desire to avoid exchange difficulties, in addition to factors of national security inherent in the new arrangement.

Australia, Mr. Menzies said, will provide all the aircraft necessary for elementary training, but Great Britain will contribute 50 percent. of the engines required. Australia will provide all airplanes for intermediate training, but Great Britain will contribute the cost of a large number, or an equivalent number of similar aircraft to the extent necessary to supplement local production.

Great Britain will contribute free of cost all Fairey battle 'planes and Avro-Ansons which are required for advance training of pilots.

Australian Air Force training organizations will be increased by 34 additional schools. Great Britain has offered to provide such instructors as may be necessary to supplement those in Australia.

Will Then Join R.A.F.

Upon the completion of their training in Australia the men will be attached to the Royal Air Force as of the date of their embarkation for England. Thereafter Great Britain will bear the cost and pay allowances and pensions, but it has been agreed that the Australians' identity will be retained as far as possible.

The estimated capital expenditure on training in Australia has bee nput at a maximum of £20,000,000, with an expenditure for maintenance of £15,080,000 a year.

This Empire scheme will afford a remarkable example of unity and strength, Great Britain and the Dominions working together for supremacy", Mr. Menzies concluded. "The scheme will aid immeasurably to the defence strength of Australia by creating an organization which will be much bigger than we could ever hope to attain ourselves."

Conferring With Government.

Lord Riverdale, head of the British Air Mission, and a large group of experts who came here early last October to arrange for an Empire air training scheme in Canada, still are conferring with the Dominion Government.

No official announcement has been made here as to details of the agreement between Canada, the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand.

Australian and New Zealand missions which came to Canada completed their end of the discussions in connection with the scheme some weeks ago and returned home.

The four countries will co-operate in an elaborate plan to provide advanced training for Empire air personnel in Canada. tI has been estimated total cost possibly would reach $800,000,000 on on a three-year basis.

There was no announcement forthcoming here in the wake of advice from Sydney that Prime Minister Robert Menzies of Australia stated the plan would result in training of 10,000 pilots and 15,600 observers, radio operators and runners at a cost spread over the next three years of an estimated £50,000,000.

Before the Australian and New Zealand missions left Ottawa it was announced officially that a basis for agreement had been reached and was awaiting final approval of the four governments concerned.

Formal announcement of details has been expected momentarily ever since.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS 26821

Office of
The Prime Minister

Name of Publication Ottawa E. Citizen

Date December 10, 1939

Subject Empire Air Training Agreement

Long Conferences Before Signing Of Empire Agreement

Much midnight oil was burned in the East Block office of Prime Minister Mackenzie King before the Empire Air training scheme was signed early yesterday morning.

Lord Riverdale, head of the British mission, was in conference with the Prime Minister Friday afternoon and far into the night. Saturday afternoon and early evening were also occupied with conferences.

These were renewed at 10 o'clock Saturday night when the Prime Minister returned to his office where he was joined by Lord Riverdale, Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, Air Chief Marshal of the Royal Air Force, and J. B. Abraham of the British air mission.

Agreement was reached before midnight but the actual signing did not take place until the first hour of yesterday. Mr. Mackenzie King signed for Canada. Lord Riverdale signed for the United Kingdom and for the Australian and New Zealand missions which left for home when basis for agreement was reached Nov. 27. Australian representatives in London will later sign for their governments.

The agreement was signed in the presence of Sir Robert, Mr. Abraham, Dr. O. D. Skelton, under-secretary of state for external affairs, A. D. P. Heeney and Walter Turnbull of the Prime Minister's staff.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS C268248 Office of The Prime Minister

Name of Publication: Ottawa M. Citizen

Date: December 18, 1939

Subject: Empire Air Training Agreement

Long Conferences Before Signing Of Empire Agreement

Much midnight oil was burned in the East Block office of Prime Minister Mackenzie King before the Empire Air training scheme was signed early yesterday morning.

Lord Riverdale, head of the British mission, was in conference with the Prime Minister Friday afternoon and far into the night. Saturday afternoon and early evening were also occupied with conferences.

These were renewed at 10 o'clock Saturday night when the Prime Minister returned to his office where he was joined by Lord Riverdale, Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, Air Chief Marshal of the Royal Air Force, and J. B. Abraham of the British air mission.

Agreement was reached before midnight but the actual signing did not take place until the first hour of yesterday. Mr. Mackenzie King signed for Canada. Lord Riverdale signed for the United Kingdom and for the Australian and New Zealand missions which left for home when basis for agreement was reached Nov. 27. Australian representatives in London will later sign for their governments.

The agreement was signed in the presence of Sir Robert, Mr. Abraham, Dr. O. D. Skelton, under-secretary of state for external affairs, A. D. P. Heeney and Walter Turnbull of the Prime Minister's staff.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS

Office of
The Prime Minister

Name of Publication Ottawa J. Citizen

Date December 18, 1939

Subject Prime Minister's Radio Broadcast on Air Training Plan

Sign Pact For Great Empire Air Training Scheme

To Provide Force Of Strength Calculated To Be Overwhelming

Agreement Reached Between United Kingdom and Dominions for Vast Air Training Scheme in Canada. Total Cost Expected To Be $600,000,000, of Which Canada's Share Is Estimated at About $350,000,000.

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Agreement was reached yesterday on a three-year, $600,000,000 Empire air training scheme, which Prime Minister Mackenzie King said was designed to provide Canada, the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand with air forces "whose co-ordinated strength will be overwhelming."

One of Greatest in World

In an address over a national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation last night, Mr. Mackenzie King gave details of the plan by which Canada will supply the facilities, more than half the cost and the bulk of personnel in a program which, he said, "will establish Canada as one of the greatest air training centers in the world."

Concluding negotiations initiated by the United Kingdom last Sept. 26, an agreement was signed by representatives of the countries concerned shortly before one o'clock yesterday morning.

Canada's Share $350,000,000

The agreement runs until March 31, 1943, but may be extended or terminated by mutual agreement.

While some student airmen will come to Canada from the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and Newfoundland, the great majority will be Canadians. The Dominion will administer the scheme and its share of the cost for the contract period will be about $350,000,000.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

60 New Flying Fields.

The plan involves establishment of 60 new flying fields scattered across Canada, enlargement and utilization of about 20 existing fields, and provision of 67 schools of all types for pilots, observers, gunners and wireless crews, instructors, ground and maintenance schools.

In effect the agreement, known as "The British Commonwealth air training plan" will mean a great enlargement of training facilities in Canada and the recruiting in this Dominion of nearly four-fifths of the personnel to be trained.

The existing Canadian air training facilities will be merged into the joint training scheme of all four countries in a joint, co-ordinated program.

Thousands of Pilots.

This joint program will provide for the training of "many thousands of pilots in Canada each year, about three-fifths as many air observers and a slightly larger number of air gunners than pilots," the Prime Minister said.

Practically all air recruits in the United Kingdom will be trained at home and all Australian and New Zealand recruits will receive their initial and elementary flying training at home.

Following is partial text of Prime Minister Mackenzie King's broadcast speech on the Empire air training agreement:

I am pleased to be able to announce that agreement has now been reached by the governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand on a co-operative air training plan, to be known as the British Commonwealth air training plan. The agreement was signed last night very shortly after midnight in my office on Parliament Hill. It is based on a proposal made to the governments of Canada, Australia and New Zealand, on Sept. 26, by the government of the United Kingdom.

In addition to a rapid and extensive increase in the air training program of each of the three dominions, the plan visualizes joint training in Canada, in the more advanced stages, of pupils from Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the United Kingdom.

Of Great Magnitude.

The undertaking is one of great magnitude.

It will establish Canada as one of the greatest air training centers in the world. Its development will result in a rapid increase in the number of air training schools in this country, and will achieve a steadily increasing output of highly trained pilots, observers and air gunners.

The plan will enable the four countries to meet the greatly increasing requirements of trained personnel for their respective air forces, and for such service as the combined forces may be called upon to perform in the theaters of war. The aim, in short, is to achieve, by co-operative effort, air forces whose co-ordinated strength will be overwhelming.

The Canadian government accepted the United Kingdom proposal in principle on Sept. 28, that is, two days after it was received. The proposal was also accepted in principle, without delay, by the governments of Australia and New Zealand. . . .

A mission, known as the United Kingdom air training mission, was sent to Canada from the United Kingdom. It was headed by the distinguished industrialist, Lord Riverdale. Lord Riverdale and his colleagues arrived in Ottawa Oct. 15. They were joined, a few days later, by Captain H. H. Balfour, the parliamentary under-secretary of state for air. On Nov. 1 the air training mission arrived from Australia. The Australian mission was presided over by Hon. J. V. Fairbairn. During his stay in Canada, Mr. Fairbairn, as a result of the reorganization of the Australian cabinet, became Australian minister for air. The air training mission from New Zealand arrived at Ottawa Nov. 3. It was headed by Group Captain Saunders, chief of the New Zealand air staff. . . .

The negotiations on the part of Canada were carried on, in the main, by a committee of the cabinet, presided over by the Prime Minister, and composed of the ministers of national defence, finance, pensions and national health, and transport.

Most Effective Means.

The broad problem was to decide on the speediest and most effective means of training the maximum number of pilots and airmen to meet the exigencies of war. In working out the agreement, Canada, Australia and New Zealand had, necessarily, to keep in mind local defence considerations, such as the training, equipment and service of the pilots and other air personnel required to keep up their own air defences. . . .

To reach the main objective, namely, the rapid training of the greatest number of pilots and airmen, the facilities in these countries, in excess of local needs, are to be used to train Australians and New Zealanders for service overseas with the Royal Air Force. The existing training facilities in the United Kingdom will continue to be used by the Royal Air Force.

Vastly Increased.

Under the agreement as it relates to joint training in Canada, the program of training of personnel for the Royal Canadian Air Force, already enlarged since the outbreak of war, will be vastly increased. The Canadian training program will be merged with the program of joint training in Canada. In this way, co-ordinated air training will proceed simultaneously in all four countries.

The joint air training program provides for the training of many thousands of pilots in Canada each year, about three-fifths as many air observers, and a slightly larger number of air gunners than pilots. The pilots, of course, are those who actually operate the planes. The observers handle the reconnaissance cameras and the bomb sights, and, as well, do the navigating. The gunners use the machine guns in action, and also act as wireless operators.

The facilities in Canada will be used, in varying degrees, by all four parties to the agreement. Practically all air recruits in the United Kingdom will be trained at home. In Australia and New Zealand, all air recruits will receive their initial and elementary flying training at home.

Majority Canadians.

Most of the Australian pupils and some of the New Zealand pupils will also receive advanced training in their own countries. Under the agreement, however, about one-fifth of the pupils to receive advanced training in Canada will come from the other two dominions. Some pupils will be received from the United Kingdom, Newfoundland and elsewhere. The great majority of the pupils will, however, be Canadians.

The first stage of training in this country will be initial training, which is a ground course to prepare recruits for flying and for air force life in general. This will be given in three large schools. At the end of four weeks' initial training, a selection will be made of those to be pilots, observers or gunners, and they will then go to the appropriate schools.

Pilots will go to one of the elementary flying schools, where they will learn to get the feel of a plane, and to fly light machines. After some eight weeks, they will graduate to the service flying schools.

It is at this stage that the Australian and New Zealand pilots, who will receive their initial and elementary training in their own countries, will come to Canada to continue their training. In the service flying schools, of which there will be 16 in Canada, pilots will spend about 14 weeks learning intermediate and advanced flying, including night and instrument flying. They will receive instruction in bombing and fighting as well.

The air observers, including those from abroad, will spend about 12 weeks at the air observers' schools. There will be 10 of these schools at which pupils will be taught navigation, reconnaissance and photography.

Bombing and Gunnery.

They go on from air observers' schools to bombing and gunnery schools for a course in the theory and practice of bombing and gunnery. The course will take about six weeks. There will be 10 bombing and gunnery schools. Finally, in order to learn more advanced navigation, the observers will spend about four weeks in one of two air navigation schools.

The air gunners, who also serve as wireless operators, after their initial training either in Canada or abroad, will take a 16 weeks' course in the wireless training schools. There will be four wireless training schools. In them, air gunners will be taught not only the essential principles of radio work, but also operating practices in the air. They will then proceed to the bombing and gunnery schools for four weeks, to learn that phase of work before proceeding overseas.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Épreuve illisible

Schools will also be needed, at the outset, for training instructors and administrative staffs. And before the training program is brought to full capacity, ground crews and maintenance staffs will be required in large numbers to man the various schools and establishments. Repair and equipment depots, headquarters and commands, recruiting centers and records offices will also be required.

Require 67 Schools.

In addition to the 58 schools for the training of pilots, observers and air gunners, and schools needed, at the outset, for training instructors and administrative staffs, several much larger schools will also be required to train the personnel for ground crews and maintenance staffs. The total number of schools required, in Canada, for the joint training program will be 67.

Nearly 40,000 officers and men will be required to man all the various schools, depots and other parts of the organization when it is in full operation. This will include about 2,700 officers and about 6,000 civilians. The remaining 30,000 will be members of the air force other than officers. These numbers do not include the pupils undergoing training, who will also be numbered in thousands. Many of the airmen required for training the pupils will be mechanics and other skilled artisans, who constitute ground crews and maintenance staffs.

For the program of joint training full use will immediately be made of the existing facilities of the Royal Canadian Air Force, as well as of facilities generously made available by Trans-Canada Airways. However, to put the extensive program into full operation, a great deal of construction and production will be necessary.

60 New Air Fields.

Throughout the country, about a score of existing air fields will have to be enlarged, and some 60 odd new air fields constructed. The schools will be established in different parts of Canada. Large supplies of equipment, and stores of various kinds, will be required to furnish the schools, and also the equipment and repair depots. The construction and other industries of Canada may be relied upon to meet effectively the demands this program will involve.

Great quantities of aircraft and their parts will, of course, be required. The United Kingdom, as her part of the costs of the undertaking, has agreed to supply most of the aircraft, including engines and spares. Apart from the aircraft supplied by the United Kingdom, the light aircraft for elementary training and a portion of the other aircraft will be made in Canada.

The aircraft to be made in Canada will be included with the other costs of the joint training program, which are to be divided between Canada, Australia and New Zealand in proportion to the use to be made of the various facilities by the pupils of the three countries. This means that, excluding the cost of the aircraft provided by the United Kingdom, Canada will bear the cost of the initial and elementary training in Canada, and about four-fifths of the remaining costs of the program.

Duration of Agreement.

The duration of the agreement is until March 31, 1943, in other words, a little over 3¼ years. This period of time may, however, be extended or terminated by mutual agreement.

While any estimate of costs made at this time is subject to a wide margin of error, the total cost for the entire program in Canada, for the period agreed upon, will approximate $600,000,000. Canada's share will be around $350,000,000.

Up to the beginning of next September, the expenditure on the joint training program will amount to about $90,000,000. Of this $90,000,000, Canada's share will be about $48,000,000.

This amount will be in addition to the $315,000,000 which the minister of finance estimated would be the cost, in the first year of the war, of the military program already undertaken before the air training plan was proposed. In other words, in this first year of war, Canada will be spending on her military effort alone about $1,000,000 a day.

Under the terms of the agreement, the joint air training program which is to be carried out in Canada, is to be administered by the government of Canada. The organization and executive command of the training schools is entrusted to the Royal Canadian Air Force. For the general supervision of the joint air training program, a supervisory board will be established in Canada. The board will supervise the financial administration of the program. It will also, from time to time, inspect the progress being made in the setting up of the organization, and carrying out the training.

Supervisory Board.

The supervisory board will be under the chairmanship of the minister of national defence. It will also include the minister of finance, the minister of transport, representatives of the governments of the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand, the deputy minister for air of the Department of National Defence, and the chief of the air staff. Contact with the government will be maintained by the board through its chairman, and with the Royal Canadian Air Force through the chief of the air staff.

The representatives on the board, of the governments of the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand, are to report to their own governments regarding the progress of the joint training program.

They will also have authority to visit, at any time, any stations or units, and to make criticisms or suggestions to the board. It is expected that they will assist in keeping the Royal Canadian Air Force advised as to new developments in training technique which may come to their notice.

All four governments will cooperate in the provision of staff and teaching personnel. The staff officers and instructors from the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand will, during their period of service in Canada, hold temporary appointments in the Royal Canadian Air Force. This further co-operative arrangement should go far to assure the successful working of the joint air training program.

To Clear Misconception.

It is desirable, at this point, to clear up a misconception which has become current through frequent repetition, but which is wholly without foundation.

It has been asserted that the air training plan would have been in existence before this had the present government not declined to meet an earlier request of the United Kingdom government for the training of British pilots in Canada. Within the past week or two, it has, for example, been said: "Had we agreed to the British proposal of two years ago for the establishment of air training facilities in Canada, today, Canada would be, in reality, the air training center of the Empire."

More recently it has been said "so far as the Empire air training scheme is concerned this was proposed by the British nearly two years ago but apparently discouraged by the King government until after the outbreak of war."

I assume that what is referred to are certain informal, exploratory conversations concerning facilities for the training of British pilots in Canada which took place, not two years ago, but in May and June of last year. The facts were clearly set forth in a statement I subsequently made to Parliament.

The conversations did not relate to a joint air training plan. Their purpose was to ascertain whether it would be agreeable to the Canadian government to have United Kingdom schools for the advanced training of pilots of the Royal Air Force established in Canada, under the authority and direction of the air ministry of the United Kingdom.

Open Spaces Needed.

It was represented that it was becoming increasingly difficult to secure in the British Isles the open spaces needed for long distance flying and gunnery practice. What was contemplated was a British air training establishment in Canada, organized and controlled by the air ministry of the United Kingdom, in no way responsible to the Canadian government, but responsible solely to the government of the United Kingdom.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 266252

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Épreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS

Office of
The Prime Minister

Name of Publication.....

Date.....

Subject.....

C 253

When the matter was broached, speaking on behalf of the government, I immediately said I was sure the Canadian people would gladly have pilots of the Royal Air Force come to Canada for advanced training and would be prepared to provide the necessary facilities, but that I believed they would feel that the necessary establishments should, under terms to be agreed upon, be organized and controlled by the Royal Canadian Air Force, and that the responsibility for their administration should be that of the government of Canada, rather than that of the government of the United Kingdom. I added that I felt such a basis was indispensable to friendly and effective co-operation between the two air forces as well as between the two governments.

Long ago, the constitutional principle was accepted that military establishments in Canadian territory should be owned, maintained and controlled by the government of Canada, responsible to the Canadian people. That principle has been acted upon ever since. British naval stations and British army garrisons have been withdrawn.

Canada, herself, has assumed responsibility for all defence establishments in Canadian territory. It was felt by our government that a reversal of the principle underlying, this historical process was something which the Canadian people would not wish to entertain.

The attitude of the Canadian government, in this matter, was, however, far from being a negative one. Our desire to co-operate in the most effective manner was made abundantly clear in the following statement which I made in Parliament with respect to Canada's position. "We ourselves," I said, "are prepared to have our own establishments here and to give in those establishments facilities to British pilots to come and train here, but they must come and train in establishments which are under the control of the government of Canada and for which the minister of national defence will be able to answer in this "Parliament, with respect to everything concerning them."

A few weeks later, an officer of the Royal Air Force was sent by the British government to conduct the exploratory investigations referred to. During the stay in Canada of this expert from the air ministry, a careful survey was made of requirements and facilities available for joint advanced training of pilots for the air forces of the United Kingdom and of Canada. The survey was made in collaboration with officials of the Department of National Defence and senior officers of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

For Joint Training.

At the ensuing session, on the recommendation of the minister of national defence, our Parliament appropriated the sum of $6,000,000 for the joint training of pilots. This grant was over and above the already greatly increased appropriations for air defence. . . .

Here we have the real beginning of the present plan for joint training in Canada of pilots from the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand, which, under the pressure of war, has assumed the proportions of which the world is now aware. . . .

The government has not awaited the conclusion of the present agreement to begin work on the development of the additional air training facilities which the plan contemplates. Considerable progress has already been made. The Royal Canadian Air Force schools at Trenton and Camp Borden have been converted into schools for the training of instructors. For some weeks past they have been in use for that purpose.

The air training facilities, which were being developed on a less extensive scale before the war, are being brought rapidly to completion. Of about 125 air fields already developed in Canada, 42 are up to the standard set by Trans-Canada Airways. Many of these will be used for the joint training program.

Under arrangements made with the provincial governments, the highways staffs of all the provinces have been used for surveying additional airdrome sites. Full advantage has been taken of the favorable weather, and most of the sites have already been surveyed. The War Supply Board has anticipated the requirements of the program and has organized production to meet them.

Enormous Variety.

The enormous variety of equipment required for the program is being listed in detail, so that orders may be promptly placed. To prevent delays in obtaining supplies required from outside Canada, protective orders have already been placed. Now that the agreement is in force the War Supply Board will immediately begin to let the necessary contracts. Plans for the schools have already been prepared, and no time will be lost in their construction. . . .

The new program is of such magnitude, that some little time must necessarily elapse, while schools are being built, equipment obtained, and the training of additional instructors completed, before student pilots, observers and air gunners can be accepted for their training, and before the first pilots and observers, trained under the scheme, will be sufficiently skilled to proceed to the theaters of war.

Canadian Squadron.

In the meantime the United Kingdom government, appreciating the desire of the Canadian people to be represented as soon as possible by an air force unit on active service in Europe, has arranged for the immediate formation of a squadron to be commanded by a squadron leader of the Royal Canadian Air Force. All the pilots in the squadron will be Canadian. The Canadian commander and pilots will be selected from Canadians at present serving with the Royal Air Force.

The formation of this squadron has been made possible by the practical co-operation, in the training of air personnel, in recent years between the Royal Canadian Air Force and the Royal Air Force. This co-operation has resulted in the presence in the Royal Air Force of a considerable number of Canadians, some of whom, as you are aware, have already achieved distinction in the present war.

Perhaps I should mention here that, under the Commonwealth air training plan, provision has been made, after their training is completed, for the identification, in the field, of the pupils with their respective dominions, either by the method of organizing dominion units and formations, or in some other way.

In embarking upon the cast co-operative enterprise, envisaged by the Commonwealth air training plan, the government had naturally to give the most careful consideration to the plan in its relation to Canada's military effort as a whole.

The United Kingdom government has informed us that, considering present and future requirements, it feels that participation in the air training scheme would provide for more effective assistance towards ultimate victory than any other form of military co-operation which Canada can give. At the same time the United Kingdom government wishes it to be clearly understood that it would welcome no less heartily the presence of Canadian land forces in the theater of war at the earliest possible moment.

Expeditionary Force.

You will recall that, on Sept. 19, the government announced that a division was being organized for service overseas, and, as you are aware, no time is being lost in our endeavor to meet the wish of the United Kingdom for the early despatch of an expeditionary force.

Magnitude of Plan.

I have spoken of the magnitude of the joint air training plan, of what it is likely to mean in numbers of men to be trained, and in additional financial outlay upon Canada's war effort. It is well, however, to remember that, in the vast expansion of air power which Canada has undertaken, in collaboration with her partners in the British Commonwealth, something wholly different, and much more vital than numbers or material wealth, is involved.

It is the lives of our young men which are being pledged. Like our soldiers and our sailors, the pilots and airmen who are to be trained in thousands, are going forth to battle to risk their lives in conflict with forces more sinister than any the world has known.

Tonight, I am speaking particularly of those belonging to the Royal Canadian Air Force. The young men, equally with others of maturer years with whom they will be associated, are, I am convinced, fully aware of the appalling nature of the situation facing the world today, and of what it will demand by way of sacrifice ere peace is again restored.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Épreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS 23623

Office of
The Prime Minister

Name of Publication .....

Date .....

Subject .....

Spirit of Crusaders.

It is not in a spirit of adventure that they are pressing forward in such numbers. Rather are they enlisting in the spirit of the crusaders of old, prepared, if need be, to give their lives for what, to them and to us, is holy and sacred —the birthright of liberty and happiness in a free land. This fortitude and devotion must be guarded and protected by every power we possess.

In making provision for this vast undertaking, the government has done so, knowing that nothing can be left to haste or to chance. The intricate machine must be perfect. In every phase of their work, the men must be trained by the highest skill, and under the best conditions it is possible for the country to provide. In no other arm of the defence services is a man obliged to rely more completely upon his own initiative, his own knowledge, and his own judgment.

It is the possession of these qualities in such large measure which has given to Canadians the reputation as airmen they already enjoy. Those who enlist in Canada's air force may be depended upon to do their part, however perilous it may be. We must do ours to assist them in every possible way, by adequate training and proper equipment, and by all the influences for good by which it is possible to surround their lives.

Warmly Welcomed.

I need not say to those who may come from other lands to receive their training, how warmly they will be welcomed during their brief stay in our midst. I know something of the heart of the Canadian people. I am sure, therefore, that our homes will be as open to them as they are to those of our own land, with whom they are already united as brothers, in an heroic effort to serve the world's need at this hour of its greatest peril.

Let there be no mistake about the significance of the present war. It is a desperate struggle for existence itself. On its outcome will depend the fate not of Canada alone, nor even, it seems to me, of the British Empire, the fall of which would shatter the world, but of humanity itself, in all its higher aspects. To save mankind from such a catastrophe, the airmen of the British Commonwealth, whether setting their course by the North Star or the Southern Cross, are dedicating their lives. To hasten the day when peace may be restored is, I believe, the governing motive of all our forces, whether on sea, or land, or in the air.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS 26823

Office of
The Prime Minister

Name of Publication .....

Date .....

Subject .....

Spirit of Crusaders.

It is not in a spirit of adventure that they are pressing forward in such numbers. Rather are they enlisting in the spirit of the crusaders of old, prepared, if need be, to give their lives for what, to them and to us, is holy and sacred —the birthright of liberty and happiness in a free land. This fortitude and devotion must be guarded and protected by every power we possess.

In making provision for this vast undertaking, the government has done so, knowing that nothing can be left to haste or to chance. The intricate machine must be perfect. In every phase of their work, the men must be trained by the highest skill, and under the best conditions it is possible for the country to provide. In no other arm of the defence services is a man obliged to rely more completely upon his own initiative, his own knowledge, and his own judgment.

It is the possession of these qualities in such large measure which has given to Canadians the reputation as airmen they already enjoy. Those who enlist in Canada's air force may be depended upon to do their part, however perilous it may be. We must do ours to assist them in every possible way, by adequate training and proper equipment, and by all the influences for good by which it is possible to surround their lives.

Warmly Welcomed.

I need not say to those who may come from other lands to receive their training, how warmly they will be welcomed during their brief stay in our midst. I know something of the heart of the Canadian people. I am sure, therefore, that our homes will be as open to them as they are to those of our own land, with whom they are already united as brothers, in an heroic effort to serve the world's need at this hour of its greatest peril.

Let there be no mistake about the significance of the present war. It is a desperate struggle for existence itself. On its outcome will depend the fate not of Canada alone, nor even, it seems to me, of the British Empire, the fall of which would shatter the world, but of humanity itself, in all its higher aspects. To save mankind from such a catastrophe, the airmen of the British Commonwealth, whether setting their course by the North Star or the Southern Cross, are dedicating their lives. To hasten the day when peace may be restored is, I believe, the governing motive of all our forces, whether on sea, or land, or in the air.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Air T.

C 268253

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS, LONDON

MOST SECRET

TELEGRAM

CYPHER
MOST IMMEDIATE

Ottawa, December 16th, 1939

Most Secret Air Training Agreement. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister Begins:

1. In my telegram this morning I referred to announcement made yesterday by the Prime Minister of Australia. We were advised yesterday morning by Prime Minister of Australia that he proposed to issue a statement regarding Agreement between Great Britain and Australia. The Prime Minister of New Zealand cabled us he had received similar information. We immediately cabled suggesting statement be deferred in view of arrangement for simultaneous issue of agreed public statement in all four capitals after initialling of Memorandum.

2. We have this morning received a reply regretting that our request had not been received until after statement had actually been released. The Prime Minister of Australia adds that the statement related only to training in Aus tralia as proposed under the United Kingdom-Australian Agreement and that it was issued after consultation with and concurrence of the United Kingdom Air Ministry. He adds that on advice of final initialling of Empire Agreement Australia will arrange for simultaneous release, presumably of agreed press statement. I am bringing this to your attention in view of the fact that announcement of Australian-

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

United Kingdom Agreement, which is as was stated in that announcement yesterday "part of the vast Empire Scheme of Air Training", is indicated as having been made with United Kingdom concurrence. I cannot begin to express my amazement that without consultation with the Government of Canada, the United Kingdom Air Ministry should have concurred in the issue of the statement by Australia before agreement had been reached between all parties. I need hardly add that the publication has caused great embarrassment to our Government in relation to other Commonwealth Governments as well as to the press and people of our own country. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

A.T.P. Dec. 17-'39

C 268257

SUMMARY OF

MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE GOVERNMENTS OF THE UNITED KINGDOM, CANADA, AUSTRALIA AND NEW ZEALAND RELATING TO TRAINING OF PILOTS AND AIRCRAFT CREWS IN CANADA AND THEIR SUBSEQUENT SERVICE.

---

1. It is agreed between the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand that there shall be set up in Canada a co-operative air training scheme as set out in this agreement, and that the personnel so trained shall be allocated in accordance with Articles 14 and 15.

2. This Agreement shall become operative at once and shall remain in force until 31st March, 1943; unless, by agreement between the Governments concerned, it be extended or terminated at an earlier date.

GOVERNMENT OF CANADA THE ADMINISTRATOR

3. The Government of Canada will act as administrator of the scheme for itself and the other Governments concerned, as hereinafter provided, and it is understood that the undertakings given herein by the Government of Canada to the other Governments concerned are respectively subject to the due performance on the part of such Governments of their several undertakings given herein in support of the scheme.

4. The Government of Canada, acting as administrator, will endeavour to complete, as quickly as possible, the organisation it considers necessary to give outputs of pupils in the numbers and at the rates agreed upon.

AGREEMENT AS TO PUPILS AND INSTRUCTION

5. (a) The Governments of the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand will endeavour to send from time to time enough pupils for training to Canada to keep filled the agreed proportions of places in the various training schools in Canada. The numbers sent by the United Kingdom may include pupils from Newfoundland. The Government of the United Kingdom will also endeavour to send and the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, undertakes to receive pupils for training in Canada in sufficient numbers to keep filled any deficiency in the supply of such pupils from Australia, New Zealand and Canada.

(b) The numbers, and the categories of pupils sent, may be varied from time to time by agreement between the Governments concerned.

(c) It is agreed that if the Governments of Canada, Australia and New Zealand fail to keep filled the training places allotted to them respectively they will nevertheless bear their full respective shares of the costs and expenses.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C 268257A

6. Pupils sent for training in Canada under the provisions of Article 5 will receive pay, allowances and other emoluments in accordance with the provisions set out in Appendix II to this Agreement.

7. The training to be given shall be in accordance with the syllabus of instruction laid down for each similar course of training in the United Kingdom.

8. To assist in the carrying out of the training scheme, the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand will lend personnel in such ranks and in such numbers as may be agreed upon with the Government of Canada as administrator of the scheme.

AGREEMENT AS TO COSTS AND EXPENSES

9. The share of the cost of the scheme to be borne by the Government of the United Kingdom will take the form of contributions in kind, to be delivered at such times and in such numbers as may be required for the efficient carrying out of the scheme. In addition, the Government of the United Kingdom will bear the cost of packing, loading and transporting to Canada the supplies she contributes in kind. The cost of unloading and of transportation in Canada will be borne by the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme.

The supplies to be provided by the United Kingdom Government under the foregoing arrangements may be varied from time to time by agreement between the Governments concerned.

10. The Governments of Canada, Australia and New Zealand agree that costs and expenses paid or incurred by the Government of Canada as administrator of the scheme (exclusive of the contribution in kind and expenses to be made and borne by the Government of the United Kingdom as provided for in Article 9) shall be apportioned between them as follows:—

(a) The Government of Canada will bear the whole costs and expenses of the Initial Training and Elementary Flying Training.

(b) The costs and expenses remaining will be shared between the Governments of Canada, Australia and New Zealand, in agreed percentages based on the numbers and categories of pupils they are entitled to have trained in Canada; and it is agreed that if any substantial changes in the allocations of training places are made by mutual agreement between the Governments concerned the percentages will be reviewed.

11. (a) Except for any advances made by the other Governments concerned, as provided for in clause (b) of this Article, the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, will in the first instance advance all the costs and expenses incurred as such administrator under the provisions of this Agreement, and the Governments of Australia and New Zealand will repay to the Government of Canada, as herein provided for, in Canadian dollars, their share of the amounts so advanced, in the agreed proportions.

C268238

(b) The Governments of the United Kingdom, Australia, and New Zealand will make advance payments necessary for pay and allowances, transportation charges, and other expenses during the journey to Canada in respect of pupils sent to Canada by such Governments for training, and for such other costs and expenses as may be agreed to from time to time; and the Governments of the United Kingdom, Australia, and New Zealand will, immediately after the end of each month, notify the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, of the amounts of any advance payments made by them during such month and will, as soon as possible thereafter, send to the Government of Canada a detailed statement in respect of such advance payments.

(c) In connection with the repayments to be made by the Governments of Australia and New Zealand, as provided for in clause (a), due allowance will be made for any advance payments made and notified by the Governments of Australia and New Zealand under the provisions of clause (b).

(d) The Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, will refund to the Government of the United Kingdom any advance payments made by that Government under the provisions of clause (b), and the amount of such refunds shall be included in the costs and expenses of the scheme to be apportioned between the Governments of Canada, Australia, and New Zealand, as provided for in clause (a) and in Article 10.

(e) In this Agreement the term "costs and expenses" shall mean all expenditures, costs, charges and liabilities made or incurred by the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, and without restricting the generality of the foregoing shall include:—

(i) Pay, allowances, and other expenses of the personnel lent under the provisions of Article 8 and a cash contribution (computed in accordance with recognized practice as between Governments in such cases) towards the future non-effective benefits of such personnel.

(ii) Pay, allowances, transportation charges, and other expenses connected with the training of Canadian pupils in Canada from the dates of their enlistment to the dates of their embarkation in Canada under the provisions of Article 16; or, in the case of Canadian pupils taken to fill vacancies in the Home Defence Squadrons of the Royal Canadian Air Force as provided for in Article 14, to the dates of their being so taken.

(iii) Pay, allowances, transportation charges, and other expenses connected with the training of pupils in Canada from the dates of their leaving the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand or Newfoundland for the purpose of taking up training in Canada to the dates of their embarkation in Canada under the provisions of Article 16.

But the term "costs and expenses" shall not include:—

(iv) The contribution in kind and expenses to be made and borne by the Government of the United Kingdom as provided for in Article 9.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

(v) Costs and expenses of clothing and personal equipment of pupils other than such replacements as may be necessary during the period of training and other than flying clothing and equipment.

(vi) Pensions or allowances to personnel lent under the provisions of Article 8 and to pupils or their dependents in respect of disability or death.

The costs and expenses mentioned in (v) and (vi) above will be borne by the Governments lending the personnel and sending the pupils in respect of whom such costs, expenses, pensions or allowances are incurred.

METHOD OF PAYMENT AND ACCOUNTING

12. The Governments of Australia and New Zealand will from time to time, within one month after a summarized statement of accounts has been presented to them (showing the payments made during the preceding month by the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, and taking account of any receipts, and of any advance payments made and notified, as provided for in Article 11 (b), by the Governments of Australia and New Zealand, and also of any adjustments in respect of previous months) pay or cause to be paid to the Government of Canada their due proportion as agreed upon in Article 10 of the costs and expenses of the scheme as shown by such statement.

These monthly payments will be regarded as advances on account, and the costs and expenses of the scheme as at the end of each financial year will be finally adjusted and paid when the accounts for such year have been audited.

13. (a) The Government of Canada will, in consultation with the other Governments concerned, appoint an officer to act as its Financial Adviser in carrying out its functions as administrator of the scheme. Such proposals for expenditure as the said Financial Adviser may require shall be referred to him for approval and no expenditure on such proposals shall be incurred until his approval has been given. Any proposal disapproved by the Financial Adviser may, at the instance of the officers responsible therefor, be referred to the Minister of National Defence for final decision. Any reports made by the Financial Adviser shall be made available by the Government of Canada to all the other Governments concerned, and these latter shall be entitled to obtain from the Financial Adviser information on all matters affecting the cost of the scheme and their participation in it.

(b) Monthly financial statements shall be furnished by the Government of Canada to the Governments of Australia and New Zealand.

(c) A record of all expenditure and all sums received in connection with the training of pupils in Canada under this scheme will be maintained by the Comptroller of the Treasury of the Government of Canada, and will be audited by the Auditor General of Canada. This record will be made available after audit for examination by representatives of the Governments concerned.

(d) The Government of Canada shall make available to the Governments of Australia and New Zealand, as early as possible after the close of each financial year ending the 31st March, a statement, accompanied by a certificate of the Auditor General, of the receipts and payments in connection with the scheme showing the expenditure under appropriate heads.

TRAINING FOR R.C.A.F. MERGED WITH JOINT TRAINING

14. It is agreed that the Government of Canada may, out of the Canadian pupils who complete their training under this scheme, fill vacancies which occur in the Home Defence Squadrons of the Royal Canadian Air Force. All the other pupils, on completion of their training, will be placed at the disposal of the Government of the United Kingdom, subject to that Government's making the arrangements indicated in Article 15, and bearing liability as provided for in Articles 16 and 17 of this Agreement.

MAINTENANCE OF IDENTITY AND CONDITIONS OF SERVICE

15. The United Kingdom Government undertakes that pupils of Canada, Australia and New Zealand shall, after training is completed, be identified with their respective Dominions, either by the method of organizing Dominion units and formations or in some other way, such methods to be agreed upon with the respective Dominion Governments concerned. The United Kingdom Government will initiate inter-governmental discussions to this end.

16. The Government of the United Kingdom will, subject to the provisions of Article 17, provide the pay, allowances, pensions and other non-effective benefits, maintenance and other expenses of the pilots and aircraft crews who are trained in Canada (other than those made available for service with the Royal Canadian Air Force in accordance with the provisions of Article 14) with effect from the dates of their embarkation in Canada for service with, or in conjunction with, the Royal Air Force. The Government of the United Kingdom also undertakes to arrange for those pupils who are made available for service with, or in conjunction with, the Royal Air Force, to be embarked as speedily as possible after the completion of their training, and to defray the cost of their passages to the stations to which they are appointed on leaving Canada.

17. The pay, allowances, pensions and other non-effective benefits, maintenance and other expenses, for which the Government of the United Kingdom undertakes liability under the provisions of Article 16 will be as laid down in Royal Air Force regulations. If it should be decided by the Government of Canada, the Government of Australia, or the Government of New Zealand to supplement the amounts so issued, any such supplement will be borne by the Government concerned.

DISTRIBUTION OF ASSETS UPON TERMINATION OF AGREEMENT

18. The Government of Canada as administrator of the scheme will have charge of the assets acquired for the purposes of the scheme. On the termination of this Agreement such of the said assets as have been

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C 268259A

C 268260

acquired and paid for as part of the cost of the scheme will be disposed of as follows:—

(a) Any land, but not buildings, structures or fixtures thereon, acquired or improved for the purpose of the scheme will become the property of the Government of Canada.

(b) The assets acquired for the purposes of the Initial Training Schools and the Elementary Flying Training Schools will become the property of the Government of Canada.

(c) All other assets, except those contributed in kind by the Government of the United Kingdom, will be shared between the Governments of Canada, Australia and New Zealand in the same proportions as are laid down in Article 10 for the apportionment of the costs.

(d) Any of the assets contributed by the Government of the United Kingdom which remain will revert to that Government.

The distribution of the assets under the above arrangements may be made in kind or otherwise, as may be agreed upon.

Communications between Governments

19. Arrangements will be made between the Governments concerned to facilitate communications between them under this Agreement or otherwise in connection with the Scheme either by means of cable or through representatives in Canada to be named by them.

APPENDIX I

SUMMARY OF SCHOOLS REQUIRED

Programme of development of the training scheme in Canada

1. To produce the necessary output of pupils, the following schools will be necessary in Canada:—

Initial Training Schools	3
Elementary Flying Training Schools	13
Service Flying Training Schools	16
Air Observer Schools	10
Bombing and Gunnery Schools	10
Air Navigation Schools	2
Wireless Schools	4

2. The Flying Training and Air Observer Schools will be developed at rates which will provide for their peak capacity for training pupils being reached by the following number of weeks after the date of opening:—

Elementary Flying Training Schools	4 weeks
Service Flying Training Schools	12 "
Air Observer Schools	6 "

The remaining schools will open at full capacity.

3. It will also be necessary to establish:—

(i) Schools for the training of the staffs of the schools given in paragraph 1, and for the organization at (ii) below.

(ii) An appropriate command, recruiting and maintenance organization.

These will include—

(iii)	Air Armament School	1
(iv)	School of Aeronautical Engineering	1
(v)	School of Administration	1
(vi)	Equipment and Accountant School	1
(vii)	Flying Instructors' School	1
(viii)	Recruit Depots	2
(ix)	Technical Training Schools	2
(x)	Repair Depots	3
(xi)	Equipment Depots	3
(xii)	Record Office	1 (or enlargement of existing organization).

The dates of formation and rate of development of these units will be governed by the dates of opening of the pilot and air training schools. (iii) to (ix) will cease to function, or will be reduced to the size necessary to meet wastage, as the scheme develops.

4. Table A shows the requirements in personnel when the scheme is in operation.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C 268260A

TABLE 'A'

PERSONNEL REQUIREMENTS

THE PERSONNEL REQUIRED TO MAN THE SCHOOLS, ETC. IN CANADA WHEN THE SCHEME IS IN FULL OPERATION IS AS UNDER

—	Officers	Airmen	Civilians	Works Maintenance personnel
Commands and Groups, and Extra Headquarters Organization	288	603	134	.....
Initial Training Schools	39	393	.....	36
Service Flying Training Schools	752	11,376	64	320
Air Observer Schools	250	2,470	.....	100
Bombing and Gunnery Schools	450	6,920	.....	150
Elementary Flying Training Schools	351	4,134	.....	130
Wireless Schools	96	1,284	.....	80
Air Navigation Schools	126	1,278	.....	40
Repair Depots	51	141	1,308	36
Equipment Depots	66	228	3,318	60
Technical Training Schools	41	627	.....	30
Records Office	14	277	.....	.....
Recruit Depots	28	424	.....	40
Recruiting Organization	134	211	105	.....
	2,686	30,366	4,929	1,022

(a) Civilians may replace a proportion of the airmen in certain units.
(b) The above table does not include schools, etc. which close as the scheme approaches completion; the personnel from these schools will be absorbed into other units.
(c) Some, or all, of the Elementary Flying Training Schools and Air Observer Schools may be organized on a civilian basis.

C 268261

APPENDIX II

CONDITIONS OF SERVICE OF PILOTS AND AIRCRAFT CREWS

(a) PUPILS FROM CANADA.

Enlistment.

Pupils will be enlisted in the Royal Canadian Air Force as Aircraftmen, Class II (standard group).

Rank during Training in Canada.

Course	Rank
Initial ground training	Aircraftman, Class II (standard group)
Pilot	Leading Aircraftman " "
Observer	" " " "
Wireless operator (air crew)	Aircraftman, Class II " "
Air gunner	" " " " "

Rank on completion of Training.

Duty	Rank
Pilot	*Sergeant (group B)
Observer	*Acting Sergeant (group C) Sergeant (group B)
Wireless operator (air crew)	L.A.C., A.C. I or A.C. II (group B), according to percentage of marks obtained on passing out of training.
Air gunner	L.A.C., A.C. I or A.C. II (standard group), according to percentage of marks obtained on passing out of training.

Pay and additional pay will be at the rates and subject to the conditions laid down from time to time in Financial Regulations and Instructions for the Royal Canadian Air Force on Active Service.

During service in Canada, allowances, etc., will be admissible under the conditions laid down in Financial Regulations and Instructions for the Royal Canadian Air Force on Active Service.

Pay, allowances, etc., during service with, or in conjunction with, the Royal Air Force.

On embarkation for service with, or in conjunction with, the Royal Air Force, officers and airmen will, subject to the conditions laid down in King's Regulations and Air Council Instructions, receive from the appropriate Royal Air Force paying authority the pay, allowances, etc., of the rank and branch (or group) in the Royal Air Force corresponding to that

*A number of pilots and observers will be selected, on passing out of training, for commissioned rank in the Royal Canadian Air Force (General List). Observers will be on probation as acting observer for a period (normally six months) after passing out of training.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C 2682614

held in the Royal Canadian Air Force, except that the following special arrangements will be made in regard to the issue of allowances to dependents in Canada.

The allowances and compulsory allotment from pay in respect of family or other dependents which may be payable under Royal Air Force regulations will, if the family or other dependents reside in Canada, be credited to the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, who will issue to the family or other dependents the allowance and assigned pay which may be payable under Royal Canadian Air Force regulations.

If the pay and allowances admissible under Royal Canadian Air Force regulations should exceed those admissible under Royal Air Force regulations, the difference (after taking into account the payment made under the preceding paragraph) will be issued by the Government of Canada as deferred pay, either on termination of service or otherwise in special circumstances.

Personnel will not be insured under United Kingdom insurance schemes, and any insurance contributions (employers' and employees' shares) necessary to ensure benefits under Canadian schemes will be paid by the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, who will arrange with the Government of the United Kingdom to recover from pay any employees' shares of such contributions so recoverable.

(b) PUPILS OTHER THAN THOSE ENLISTED IN THE ROYAL CANADIAN AIR FORCE, THE ROYAL AUSTRALIAN AIR FORCE AND THE ROYAL NEW ZEALAND AIR FORCE.

Pupils other than those enlisted in the Royal Canadian Air Force, the Royal Australian Air Force and the Royal New Zealand Air Force will be enlisted in the Royal Air Force.

For the period of the journey to Canada, airmen of the Royal Air Force will receive pay, allowances, etc., at the rates and subject to the conditions laid down from time to time in King's Regulations and Air Council Instructions for the Royal Air Force.

During service in Canada, airmen of the Royal Air Force will be attached to the Royal Canadian Air Force, and, subject to the conditions laid down in Financial Regulations and Instructions for the Royal Canadian Air Force on Active Service, they will receive from the appropriate Royal Canadian Air Force paying officer the pay, allowances, etc., of the rank and group in the Royal Canadian Air Force, as appropriate under (a) above, except that the following special arrangements will be made in regard to the issue of allowances to family or other dependents outside Canada.

The allowances and compulsory allotment from pay in respect of family or other dependents which would be appropriate under Royal Air Force regulations will, if the family or other dependent reside outside Canada, be issued by the Government of the United Kingdom, who will reclaim from the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, the amount so issued. The Royal Canadian Air Force officer paying the airman will deduct from the airman's pay the amount of the assigned pay under Royal Canadian Air Force regulations.

Airmen will not be insured under Canadian insurance schemes and any insurance contributions (employers' and employees' shares) necessary to ensure benefits for United Kingdom airmen under United Kingdom schemes will be paid by the Government of the United Kingdom, who will arrange with the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, for the recovery from pay of any employees' shares of such contributions so recoverable.

C268262

(c) PUPILS SENT BY AUSTRALIA AND NEW ZEALAND.

Pupils sent by Australia and New Zealand will be enlisted in the Royal Australian Air Force and in the Royal New Zealand Air Force, respectively.

Pay, allowances, etc., for the period of journey to Canada.

For the period of the journey to Canada, airmen of the Royal Australian Air Force and of the Royal New Zealand Air Force will receive pay, allowances, etc., at the rates and subject to the conditions laid down from time to time in the Regulations for the Royal Australian Air Force and the Royal New Zealand Air Force, respectively.

Pay, allowances, etc., during service in Canada.

During service in Canada, airmen of the Royal Australian Air Force and of the Royal New Zealand Air Force will be attached to the Royal Canadian Air Force, and, subject to the conditions laid down in Financial Regulations and Instructions for the Royal Canadian Air Force on Active Service, they will receive from the appropriate Royal Canadian Air Force paying officer the pay, allowances, etc., of the rank and group in the Royal Canadian Air Force, as appropriate under (a) above, except that the following special arrangements will be made in regard to the issue of allowances to family or other dependents outside Canada.

The allowances and compulsory allotment from pay in respect of family or other dependents which would be appropriate under Royal Australian Air Force or Royal New Zealand Air Force regulations will, if the family or other dependents reside outside Canada, be issued by the Government of Australia or the Government of New Zealand, who will reclaim from the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, the amount so issued. The Royal Canadian Air Force officer paying the airman will deduct from the airman's pay the amount of the assigned pay chargeable under Royal Canadian Air Force regulations.

Airmen will not be insured under Canadian insurance schemes, and any insurance contributions (employers' and employees' shares) necessary to ensure benefits for Australian or New Zealand airmen under Australian or New Zealand schemes will be paid by the Government of Australia or the Government of New Zealand, who will arrange with the Government of Canada, as administrator of the scheme, for the recovery from pay of any employees' shares of such contributions so recoverable.

Pay, allowances, etc., during service with the Royal Air Force.

On embarkation for service with the Royal Air Force, officers and airmen will be attached to that force, and, subject to the conditions laid down in King's Regulations and Air Council Instructions, they will receive from the appropriate Royal Air Force paying authority the pay, allowances, etc., of the rank and branch (or group) in the Royal Air Force corresponding to that held in the Royal Australian Air Force or in the Royal New Zealand Air Force, except that the following special arrangements will be made in regard to the issue of allowances to family or other dependents in Australia or New Zealand.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C268262A

The allowances and compulsory allotment from pay in respect of family or other dependents which may be payable under Royal Air Force regulations will, if the family or other dependents reside in Australia or New Zealand, be credited to the Government of Australia or to the Government of New Zealand, who will issue to the family or other dependent the allowance and compulsory allotment from pay which may be payable under Royal Australian Air Force or Royal New Zealand Air Force regulations.

If the pay and allowances admissible under Royal Australian Air Force or Royal New Zealand Air Force regulations exceed those admissible under Royal Air Force regulations, and the Government of Australia or the Government of New Zealand decide that this difference is to be credited to the officer or airman, the difference (after taking into account the payment made under the preceding paragraph) will be issued by the Government of Australia or the Government of New Zealand as deferred pay, either on termination of service or otherwise in special circumstances.

Personnel will not be insured under United Kingdom insurance schemes, and any insurance contributions (employers' and employees' shares) necessary to ensure benefits under Australian or New Zealand schemes will be paid by the Government of Australia or the Government of New Zealand, who will arrange with the Government of the United Kingdom to recover from pay any employees' shares of such contributions so recoverable.

R.

A T P Dec. 17-'39

C 268263

SOMMAIRE
DE LA
CONVENTION ENTRE LES GOUVERNEMENTS DU ROYAUME-UNI, DU CANADA, DE L'AUSTRALIE ET DE LA NOUVELLE-ZÉLANDE AU SUJET DE L'ENTRAÎNEMENT AU CANADA ET DE L'EMPLOI SUBSÉQUENT DE PILOTES ET D'ÉQUIPAGES D'AVIONS.

1. Les Gouvernements du Royaume-Uni, du Canada, de l'Australie et de la Nouvelle-Zélande conviennent de mettre à exécution, au Canada, un plan commun d'entraînement d'aviateurs, en conformité des modalités déterminées dans la présente convention et d'affecter les aviateurs ainsi formés conformément aux termes des articles 14 et 15.

2. La présente convention prendra effet immédiatement et restera en vigueur jusqu'au 31 mars 1943; à moins que, par suite d'une entente conclue entre les gouvernements intéressés, elle ne soit antérieurement prorogée ou abrogée.

LE GOUVERNEMENT DU CANADA ADMINISTRERA L'ENTREPRISE

3. Le Gouvernement du Canada agira à titre d'administrateur de l'entreprise pour son propre compte et pour le compte des autres Gouvernements intéressés, ainsi qu'il est déterminé ci-après. Il est entendu que les engagements pris dans les présentes par le Gouvernement du Canada envers les autres Gouvernements intéressés sont respectivement subordonnés à l'exécution appropriée, de la part desdits Gouvernements, des engagements que chacun d'eux contracte par les présentes en vue de la réalisation du plan.

4. Le Gouvernement du Canada, agissant à titre d'administrateur, s'efforcera de compléter aussi rapidement que possible, l'organisation qu'il juge nécessaire à la formation d'élèves, en nombre et dans les proportions convenus.

ACCORD RELATIF AUX ÉLÈVES ET À L'INSTRUCTION

5. (a) Les Gouvernements du Royaume-Uni, de l'Australie et de la Nouvelle-Zélande s'efforceront d'envoyer périodiquement au Canada assez d'élèves pour remplir en tout temps le nombre proportionnel de places dont il est convenu dans les diverses écoles d'entraînement du Canada. Le contingent du Royaume-Uni peut comprendre les aspirants de Terre-Neuve. Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni s'efforcera aussi d'envoyer des élèves au Canada, pour y recevoir l'entraînement, en assez grand nombre pour combler toute insuffisance du nombre d'aspirants que doivent fournir l'Australie, la Nouvelle-Zélande et le Canada, et le Gouvernement du Canada, à son titre d'administrateur du plan, s'engage à recevoir ces élèves.

(b) Le nombre et les catégories d'élèves peuvent varier par entente conclue entre les Gouvernements intéressés.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C268263A

(c) Il est convenu que, au cas où les Gouvernements du Canada, de l'Australie et de la Nouvelle-Zélande ne rempliraient pas en tout temps les places attribuées à chacun dans les écoles d'entraînement, ils acquitteront néanmoins, et en entier, leur quote-part des frais et déboursés.

6. Les élèves envoyés au Canada en conformité des stipulations de l'article 5 toucheront la solde, les allocations et autres rémunérations prévues à l'Annexe II de la présente Convention.

7. L'entraînement qui leur sera donné se conformera au programme arrêté dans le Royaume-Uni pour chaque cours d'entraînement de même nature.

8. Afin de contribuer à l'exécution du plan d'entraînement, les Gouvernements du Royaume-Uni, du Canada, de l'Australie et de la Nouvelle-Zélande prêteront un personnel dont les grades et le nombre seront arrêtés après entente avec le Gouvernement du Canada, en sa qualité d'administrateur de l'entreprise.

ACCORD RELATIF AUX FRAIS ET DÉBOURSÉS

9. La quote-part du Royaume-Uni dans les frais qu'entraînera le plan prendra la forme de prestations en nature, livrées aux époques et dans les quantités qu'exigera la bonne exécution du plan. En outre, le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni acquittera les frais d'emballage, de chargement et du transport jusqu'au Canada du matériel qu'il fournira ainsi. Le Gouvernement du Canada, en sa qualité d'administrateur de l'entreprise, se chargera des frais de déchargement et de transport en Canada.

Le matériel que le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni devra fournir en exécution des stipulations précédentes pourra varier à l'occasion, par suite d'ententes conclues entre les gouvernements intéressés.

10. Les Gouvernements du Canada, de l'Australie et de la Nouvelle-Zélande conviennent de répartir entre eux les frais et déboursés soldés ou engagés par le Gouvernement du Canada en sa qualité d'administrateur de l'entreprise (à l'exclusion des prestations en nature et des dépenses qu'engagera et soldera le gouvernement du Royaume-Uni selon les stipulations de l'article 9), ainsi qu'il suit:

(a) Le Gouvernement du Canada acquittera tous les frais de l'entraînement préparatoire et de l'instruction élémentaire de pilotage.

(b) Les gouvernements du Canada, de l'Australie et de la Nouvelle-Zélande se partageront les autres frais, selon des proportions convenues et fondées sur le nombre et les catégories d'élèves dont ils sont autorisés à obtenir l'entraînement au Canada. Il est entendu que ces pourcentages subiront les modifications nécessitées par tout changement important, et effectué par entente entre les Gouvernements intéressés, dans la répartition du nombre d'aspirants consenti à chacun.

11. (a) Sauf pour les avances consenties par les autres gouvernements intéressés, tel que prévu à l'alinéa (b) du présent article, le Gouvernement du Canada, à titre d'administrateur du plan, avancera les fonds pour tous les frais et déboursés qu'il sera appelé à faire de ce chef, sous le régime des dispositions de la présente convention, et les Gouvernements de l'Australie et de la Nouvelle-Zélande rembourseront au Gouvernement du Canada, tel qu'il est stipulé dans les présentes, en dollars canadiens, leur quote-part des sommes ainsi avancées, dans la proportion convenue.

C268264

(b) Les Gouvernements du Royaume-Uni, de l'Australie et de la Nouvelle-Zélande devront faire les avances de fonds nécessaires touchant les traitements et allocations, les frais de transport et autres dépenses de voyage des élèves qu'ils auront envoyés au Canada, pour y suivre un cours d'entraînement, et touchant aussi tous autres frais et déboursés dont il pourra être convenu de temps à autre; et les Gouvernements du Royaume-Uni, de l'Australie et de la Nouvelle-Zélande devront, à la fin de chaque mois, déclarer immédiatement au Gouvernement du Canada, en sa qualité d'administrateur du plan, les montants de toutes les avances qu'ils pourront avoir effectuées durant ce mois, et faire tenir dans le plus bref délai possible au Gouvernement du Canada un état détaillé de ces avances.

(c) En ce qui concerne les remboursements que devront effectuer les Gouvernements de l'Australie et de la Nouvelle-Zélande, aux termes de l'alinéa (a), il sera dûment tenu compte de toute avance effectuée et déclarée par les Gouvernements de l'Australie et de la Nouvelle-Zélande, en vertu des dispositions de l'alinéa (b).

(d) Le Gouvernement du Canada, en sa qualité d'administrateur du plan, remboursera au Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni toute avance versée par ce dernier en vertu des dispositions de l'alinéa (b), et le montant des dites avances sera inclus dans les frais et déboursés du plan à répartir entre les Gouvernements du Canada, de l'Australie et de la Nouvelle-Zélande, conformément à l'alinéa (a) ainsi qu'à l'article 10.

(e) Dans la présente convention, l'expression "frais et déboursés" signifie tous déboursés, frais, engagements et obligations consentis ou faits par le Gouvernement du Canada, à titre d'administrateur du projet, et comprend, sans toutefois restreindre la portée générale de ce qui précède:

(i) Solde, allocations et autres dépenses du personnel détaché en vertu des dispositions de l'article 8, ainsi qu'un versement en espèces (calculé suivant l'usage reconnu entre gouvernements dans les cas de ce genre), en prévision des indemnités ultérieures découlant du service de ce personnel.

(ii) Solde, allocations, frais de transport et autres dépenses relatives à l'entraînement au Canada d'élèves canadiens, à compter de la date de leur enrôlement jusqu'à leur embarquement au Canada, en vertu des dispositions de l'article 16, ou, dans le cas d'élèves canadiens choisis pour remplir les cadres des escadrilles de défense intérieure du Corps d'aviation royal canadien, tel qu'il est prévu à l'article 14, jusqu'à la date de leur affectation à ce service.

92000—2

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

(iii) Solde, allocations, frais de transport et autres dépenses relatives à l'entraînement d'élèves au Canada, à compter de la date de leur départ du Royaume-Uni, de l'Australie, de la Nouvelle-Zélande ou de Terre-Neuve, en vue de suivre un cours d'entraînement au Canada, jusqu'à la date de leur embarquement au Canada, en vertu des dispositions de l'article 16.

Mais l'expression "frais et déboursés" ne comprend pas:

(iv) Les prestations en nature et les dépenses que doit faire et solder le gouvernement du Royaume-Uni, en vertu de l'article 9.

(v) Le coût et les frais d'habillement et des effets personnels des élèves, autres que les articles de remplacement qui pourront s'avérer nécessaires durant la période d'entraînement, et autres que le vêtement et l'équipement de vol.

(vi) Les pensions ou allocations payables au personnel détaché, en vertu des dispositions de l'article 8, ainsi qu'aux élèves ou aux personnes à leur charge en cas d'invalidité ou de décès.

Les frais et déboursés ci-dessus mentionnés aux sous-alinéas (v) et (vi), seront à la charge des gouvernements qui détacheront le personnel et enverront les élèves qui feront l'objet desdits frais, déboursés, pensions et allocations.

PAIEMENTS ET REDDITION DE COMPTES

12. Dans un délai d'un mois à compter du moment où leur aura été présenté un relevé sommaire des comptes (indiquant les paiements effectués pendant le mois précédent par le gouvernement du Canada en sa qualité d'administrateur du plan et tenant compte de toutes les recettes et de toutes les avances effectuées et déclarées, tel que prescrit à l'article 11 (b), par les gouvernements de l'Australie et de la Nouvelle-Zélande, ainsi que de tous les ajustements portant sur les mois précédents), les gouvernements de l'Australie et de la Nouvelle-Zélande paieront ou feront remettre de temps à autre au gouvernement du Canada leur quote-part, convenue à l'article 10, des frais et déboursés résultant de l'exécution du plan et figurant dans ledit relevé.

Ces paiements mensuels seront considérés comme des avances à compte, et les frais et déboursés du plan, établis à la fin de chaque année financière, seront définitivement ajustés et payés lorsque les comptes de ladite année auront été vérifiés.

13. (a) Après consultation avec les autres gouvernements intéressés, le gouvernement du Canada désignera un fonctionnaire qui l'aidera, à titre de conseiller financier, à remplir ses fonctions d'administrateur du plan. Selon que pourra l'exiger le conseiller financier, les projets de dépenses devront être soumis à son approbation, et nulle dépense ne sera contractée à l'égard desdits projets sans son approbation préalable. Tout projet de dépense désapprouvé par le conseiller financier pourra, à la demande des fonctionnaires qui l'auront présenté, être soumis en dernier ressort à la décision du ministre de la Défense nationale. Les rapports du conseiller financier seront tenus par le gouvernement du Canada à la disposition de tous les autres gouvernements intéressés et ces derniers auront le droit d'obtenir du conseiller financier des renseignements sur toutes les questions relatives au coût du plan et à leur participation à l'entreprise.

(b) Des relevés financiers mensuels seront fournis par le gouvernement du Canada aux gouvernements de l'Australie et de la Nouvelle-Zélande.

(c) Un registre de toutes les dépenses faites et de toutes les sommes reçues pour l'entraînement d'élèves au Canada d'après ce plan sera tenu par le Contrôleur du Trésor du Gouvernement canadien et vérifié par l'Auditeur général du Canada. Il sera loisible aux représentants des gouvernements intéressés d'examiner ce registre après qu'il aura été vérifié.

(d) Le gouvernement du Canada mettra à la disposition des gouvernements de l'Australie et de la Nouvelle-Zélande, aussitôt que possible après l'expiration de chaque année financière close le 31 mars, un relevé des recettes et des paiements relatifs au plan. Ce relevé devra être accompagné d'un certificat de l'Auditeur général et répartir les dépenses sous les rubriques appropriées.

LE PLAN D'ENTRAÎNEMENT EN COMMUN S'APPLIQUERA AU CORPS D'AVIATION ROYAL CANADIEN

14. Il est convenu que le gouvernement du Canada pourra, à même l'effectif des élèves canadiens qui auront terminé leur entraînement d'après ce plan, remplir les vacances qui surviendront dans les escadrilles de défense intérieure du Corps d'aviation royal canadien. Une fois entraînés, tous les autres élèves seront mis à la disposition du gouvernement du Royaume-Uni à condition que ce dernier prenne les dispositions mentionnées à l'article 15 et qu'il assume les obligations énoncées aux articles 16 et 17 de la présente convention.

CONSERVATION DE L'IDENTITÉ ET CONDITIONS DE SERVICE

15. Le gouvernement du Royaume-Uni s'engage à affecter à leurs dominions respectifs, une fois leur entraînement terminé, les élèves du Canada, de l'Australie et de la Nouvelle-Zélande, en organisant des escadrilles ou des formations distinctes pour les dominions, ou de quelque autre manière; les méthodes à employer devant faire l'objet d'une entente avec les gouvernements des dominions intéressés. Le gouvernement du Royaume-Uni prendra l'initiative de pourparlers entre les gouvernements à cette fin.

16. Subordonnément aux dispositions de l'article 17, le gouvernement du Royaume-Uni se chargera de la solde, des allocations, des pensions, ainsi que des autres indemnités découlant du service, des frais d'entretien et des autres dépenses des pilotes et membres des équipages d'avions qui seront entraînés au Canada (autres que ceux dont les services seront mis à la disposition du Corps d'aviation royal canadien conformément aux dispositions de l'article 14), à compter de la date où ils s'embarqueront au Canada pour aller prendre du service dans la Royal Air Force ou un corps

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C268265A

auxiliaire. Le gouvernement du Royaume-Uni s'engage en outre à prendre des mesures en vue de permettre aux élèves mis à la disposition de la Royal Air Force ou d'un corps auxiliaire, de s'embarquer aussitôt que possible après leur entraînement, et à défrayer le coût de leur passage jusqu'aux postes auxquels ils seront affectés à leur départ du Canada.

17. La solde, les allocations, les pensions et autres indemnités découlant du service, les frais d'entretien et autres dépenses, dont le gouvernement du Royaume-Uni assume la charge aux termes des dispositions de l'article 16, seront aux taux fixés dans les règlements de la Royal Air Force. Au cas où le gouvernement du Canada, le gouvernement de l'Australie ou le gouvernement de la Nouvelle-Zélande décideraient d'ajouter aux sommes ainsi accordées, tout supplément de ce chef sera à la charge du gouvernement intéressé.

DISTRIBUTION DES BIENS À L'EXPIRATION DE LA CONVENTION

18. Le gouvernement du Canada, à titre d'administrateur du plan, aura la garde de tous les biens acquis aux fins du plan. A l'expiration de la présente convention, ceux desdits biens qui ont été acquis aux fins du plan et imputés au coût de ce dernier seront répartis sur la base suivante:

(a) Tout terrain, mais non pas les bâtiments, structures ou aménagements y situés, acquis ou amélioré aux fins du plan appartiendra au gouvernement du Canada.

(b) Les biens acquis aux fins des écoles préparatoires et des écoles élémentaires d'aviation appartiendront au gouvernement du Canada.

(c) Tous les autres biens, sauf ceux contribués en nature par le gouvernement du Royaume-Uni, seront répartis entre les gouvernements du Canada, de l'Australie et de la Nouvelle-Zélande, selon les proportions établies à l'article 10 pour la répartition du coût.

(d) Le reliquat des biens contribués par le gouvernement du Royaume-Uni fera retour à ce gouvernement.

La répartition des biens en vertu des arrangements ci-dessus peut se faire en nature ou autrement, selon l'accord qui interviendra.

COMMUNICATIONS ENTRE LES GOUVERNEMENTS

19. Les gouvernements intéressés verront à faciliter les communications réciproques en vertu de la présente convention ou, par ailleurs, aux fins du plan, soit par câble, soit par l'intermédiaire des représentants qu'ils auront nommés au Canada.

C268266

ANNEXE I

TABLEAU SOMMAIRE DES ÉCOLES À ÉTABLIR

Programme de réalisation du plan d'entraînement au Canada

1. Pour assurer l'entraînement du nombre d'élèves requis, les écoles suivantes seront nécessaires en Canada:

Ecoles préparatoires d'entraînement	3
Ecoles élémentaires d'aviation	13
Ecoles de vol militaire	16
Ecoles d'aviateurs-observateurs	10
Ecoles de bombardement et de tir	10
Ecoles de navigation aérienne	2
Ecoles de TSF	4

2. L'organisation des écoles d'aviation et d'aviateurs-observateurs devra se faire à une allure telle qu'elles pourront fonctionner à leur rendement maximum dans les délais suivants après leur ouverture:

Ecoles élémentaires d'aviation	4 semaines
Ecoles de vol militaire	12 semaines
Ecoles d'aviateurs-observateurs	6 semaines

Les autres écoles fonctionneront à plein rendement dès leur ouverture.

3. Il sera nécessaire d'établir aussi:

(i) Des écoles de formation pour le personnel enseignant des écoles mentionnées au paragraphe 1 et pour remplir les cadres indiqués à l'alinéa (ii) suivant.

(ii) Les cadres nécessaires à la direction, au recrutement et au fonctionnement de ces écoles.

Cette organisation comprendra

(iii) Ecole des armes de l'air	1
(iv) Ecole de génie aéronautique	1
(v) Ecole d'administration	1
(vi) Ecole de comptabilité et d'équipement	1
(vii) Ecole de pilotes instructeurs	1
(viii) Dépôts de recrutement	2
(ix) Ecoles d'enseignement technique	2
(x) Dépôts de réparation	3
(xi) Dépôts d'équipement	3
(xii) Service des archives	1	(ou l'expansion du service actuel).

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C 268266A

Les dates où s'ouvriront les écoles de pilotes et d'aviateurs détermineront les dates d'établissement de ces diverses unités et la rapidité de leur expansion. Au fur et à mesure de la réalisation du programme, les écoles indiquées aux aliénéas (iii) à (ix) suspendront ou ralentiront leur activité de façon à éviter les dépenses inutiles.

4. Le tableau A indique le personnel requis lorsque le plan sera en cours d'exécution.

TABLEAU 'A'

PERSONNEL REQUIS

LE TABLEAU CI-DESSOUS INDIQUE LE PERSONNEL REQUIS AU CANADA POUR LE FONCTIONNEMENT DES ÉCOLES ETC., À PLEIN RENDEMENT

—	Officiers	Aviateurs	Civils	Personnel d'entretien
Organisation par régions et par groupes, et expansion du quartier-général	288	603	134	.....
Ecoles préparatoires d'entraînement	39	393	.....	36
Ecoles de vol militaire	752	11,376	64	320
Ecoles d'aviateurs-observateurs	250	2,470	.....	100
Ecoles de bombardement et de tir	450	6,920	.....	150
Ecoles élémentaires d'aviation	351	4,134	.....	130
Ecoles de T.S.F	96	1,284	.....	80
Ecoles de navigation aérienne	126	1,278	.....	40
Dépôts de réparation	51	141	1,308	36
Dépôts d'équipement	66	228	3,318	60
Ecoles d'enseignement technique	41	627	.....	30
Service des archives	14	277	.....	.....
Dépôts de recrutement	28	424	.....	40
Organisation du recrutement	134	211	105	.....
	2,686	30,366	4,929	1,022

(a) Les civils pourront remplacer une proportion des aviateurs dans certaines unités.
(b) Le tableau ci-dessus ne s'étend pas aux écoles, etc., qui cesseront de fonctionner au fur et à mesure de la réalisation du plan; d'autres unités absorberont le personnel de ces écoles.
(c) Il est possible qu'un certain nombre ou la totalité des écoles élémentaires d'aviation et d'aviateurs-observateurs soient organisées sur le pied civil.

C 268267

ANNEXE II

CONDITIONS DE SERVICE DES PILOTES ET DES ÉQUIPAGES D'AVIONS

(a) ELÈVES DU CANADA.

Enrôlement.

On enrôlera les élèves comme soldats d'aviation de 2e classe II (non-spécialisés).

Grade pendant la période d'entraînement au Canada.

Cours	Grade
Entraînement préparatoire sur terre	Soldat d'aviation de 2e classe II (non-spécialisé)
Pilote	" " de 1re classe " "
Observateur	" " " " " "
Radiotélégraphiste (équipage aérien)	Soldat d'aviation de 2e classe II " "
Mitrailleur	" " " " " "

Grade après l'entraînement.

Fonctions	Grade
Pilote	*Sergent (groupe B)
Observateur	*Faisant fonction de sergent (groupe C) / Sergent (groupe B)
Radiotélégraphiste (équipage aérien)	Soldat d'aviation de 1ère classe, soldat d'aviation de 2e classe I ou II (groupe B) selon le pourcentage des points obtenus à la fin de l'entraînement.
Mitrailleur	Soldat d'aviation de 1re classe, soldat d'aviation de 2e classe I ou II (groupe non-spécialisé) selon le pourcentage des points obtenus à la fin de l'entraînement.

La solde et le supplément de solde seront conformes à l'échelle et aux conditions établies de temps à autre dans les Règlements et Ordonnances financières à l'usage du Corps d'aviation royal canadien en service actif.

Pendant le service au Canada, les allocations, etc. seront basées sur les conditions prescrites dans les Règlements et Ordonnances financières à l'usage du Corps d'aviation royal canadien en service actif.

*Après la période d'entraînement, un certain nombre de pilotes et d'observateurs seront choisis pour servir en qualité d'officiers dans le Corps d'aviation royal canadien (service navigant). Après la période d'entraînement, les observateurs serviront à titre d'observateurs stagiaires pendant un certain temps (six mois, règle générale).

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

C 268267A

Solde, allocations, etc., pendant la durée de service dans la Royal Air Force ou dans un corps auxiliaire.

A partir de leur embarquement pour prendre du service dans la Royal Air Force, ou dans un corps auxiliaire, les officiers et aviateurs recevront du commissariat autorisé de la Royal Air Force, subordonnément aux conditions prescrites par les King's Regulations et les Ordres du Conseil de l'air, la solde, les allocations, etc., accordées au grade et à la division (ou au groupe) de la Royal Air Force correspondant à leur grade et leur division dans le Corps d'aviation royal canadien; toutefois, les dispositions suivantes devront être prises lorsqu'il s'agira d'attribuer des allocations aux personnes à la charge desdits officiers et aviateurs au Canada.

Si la famille ou autres personnes à charge habitent le Canada, les allocations ou délégations obligatoires de solde en faveur de la famille ou des autres personnes à charge susceptibles d'être payées en vertu des règlements de la Royal Air Force seront portées au crédit du gouvernement canadien, en sa qualité d'administrateur du plan. Ce dernier versera à la famille ou aux autres personnes à charge l'allocation et la solde déléguée susceptibles de leur être versées en vertu des règlements du Corps d'aviation royal canadien.

Si la solde et les allocations payables en vertu des règlements du Corps d'aviation royal canadien excèdent celles qui sont établies en vertu des règlements de la Royal Air Force, la différence (compte tenu du versement effectué en vertu du paragraphe précédent), sera versée par le gouvernement canadien à titre de solde différée, soit à l'expiration du service, soit à un autre moment dans des cas spéciaux.

Le personnel ne sera pas assuré selon les plans d'assurance du Royaume-Uni et toute cotisation d'assurance (contribution du patron et de l'employé), nécessaire pour donner droit aux bénéfices des plans d'assurances du Canada, sera versée par le Gouvernement du Canada en sa qualité d'administrateur du plan. Le gouvernement canadien s'entendra avec le gouvernement du Royaume-Uni pour prélever sur la solde la contribution de l'employé aux cotisations ainsi recouvrables.

(b) Élèves non enrôlés dans les armées de l'air du Canada, de l'Australie et de la Nouvelle-Zélande.

Les élèves autres que ceux des armées de l'air du Canada, de l'Australie et de la Nouvelle-Zélande seront enrôlés dans la Royal Air Force.

Pendant leur trajet vers le Canada les aviateurs de la Royal Air Force toucheront leur solde, allocation, etc., aux taux et conditions établis de temps à autre par les King's Regulations et les Ordres du Conseil de l'air pour la Royal Air Force.

Pendant leur service au Canada les aviateurs de la Royal Air Force feront partie du Corps d'aviation royal canadien et, en conformité des conditions établies par les Règlements et Ordonnances financières à l'usage du Corps d'aviation royal canadien en service actif, ils recevront, de l'officier payeur du Corps d'aviation royal canadien, la solde, les allocations, etc., attribuées au grade et au groupe du Corps d'aviation royal canadien déterminé à l'alinéa (a) ci-dessus, mais en tenant compte des dispositions spéciales suivantes relatives au versement d'allocations aux familles ou autres personnes à charge domiciliées hors du Canada.

C268268

Les allocations et délégations obligatoires de solde en faveur de membres de la famille ou autres personnes à charge et prévues par les règlements de la Royal Air Force seront versées, si les membres de la famille ou autres personnes à charge ont leur domicile hors du Canada, par le gouvernement du Royaume-Uni, qui se fera rembourser par le gouvernement du Canada, à titre d'administrateur du plan, la somme ainsi versée. L'officier payeur du Corps d'aviation royal canadien déduira de la solde de l'aviateur la part de solde déléguée en vertu des règlements du Corps d'aviation royal canadien.

Les aviateurs ne seront pas assurés selon les plans d'assurance du Canada et toute cotisation d'assurance (contribution du patron et de l'employé) nécessaire pour que les aviateurs du Royaume-Uni aient droit aux bénéfices des plans d'assurance du Royaume-Uni, sera versée par le gouvernement du Royaume-Uni, lequel s'entendra avec le gouvernement du Canada, à titre d'administrateur du plan, pour se faire rembourser à même la solde, la contribution de l'employé aux cotisations ainsi recouvrables.

(c) Élèves venant de l'Australie et de la Nouvelle-Zélande

Les élèves venant de l'Australie et de la Nouvelle-Zélande seront enrôlés respectivement dans l'armée de l'air australienne et dans celle de la Nouvelle-Zélande.

Solde, allocations, etc., pendant le trajet vers le Canada.

Pendant leur trajet vers le Canada les aviateurs de l'armée de l'air australienne et de l'armée de l'air néo-zélandaise toucheront leur solde, allocation, etc., aux taux et conditions établis de temps à autre par les règlements respectifs de l'armée de l'air australienne et de l'armée de l'air néo-zélandaise.

Solde, allocations, etc., pendant le service au Canada.

Durant leur service au Canada les aviateurs de l'armée de l'air australienne et ceux de l'armée de l'air néo-zélandaise feront partie du Corps d'aviation royal canadien et, en conformité des conditions établies par les Règlements et Ordonnances financières à l'usage du Corps d'aviation royal canadien en service actif, ils recevront de l'officier payeur du Corps d'aviation royal canadien la solde, les allocations, etc., attribuées au grade et au groupe du Corps d'aviation royal canadien déterminé à l'alinéa (a) ci-dessus, mais en tenant compte des dispositions spéciales suivantes relatives au versement d'allocations aux familles ou autres personnes à charge domiciliées hors du Canada.

Les allocations et délégations obligatoires de solde en faveur de membres de la famille ou autres personnes à charge et prévues par les règlements de l'armée de l'air australienne ou de l'armée de l'air néo-zélandaise seront versées, si les membres de la famille ou autres personnes à charge ont leur domicile hors du Canada, par le gouvernement de l'Australie ou celui de la Nouvelle-Zélande, qui se feront rembourser par le gouvernement du Canada, à titre d'administrateur du plan, la somme ainsi versée. L'officier payeur du Corps d'aviation royal canadien déduira de la solde de l'aviateur la part de solde déléguée en vertu des règlements du Corps d'aviation royal canadien.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268268A

Les aviateurs ne seront pas assurés selon les plans d'assurance du Canada, et toute cotisation d'assurance (contribution du patron et de l'employé), nécessaire pour que les aviateurs australiens ou néo-zélandais aient droit aux bénéfices des plans d'assurance d'Australie ou de la Nouvelle-Zélande sera versée par le Gouvernement de l'Australie ou par le Gouvernement de la Nouvelle-Zélande, lesquels s'entendront avec le Gouvernement du Canada, à titre d'administrateur du plan, pour se faire rembourser, à même la solde, la contribution de l'employé aux cotisations ainsi recouvrables.

Solde, allocation, etc., pendant la durée du service dans la Royal Air Force

A partir de leur embarquement, pour prendre du service dans la Royal Air Force, les officiers et aviateurs seront attachés à ce corps et, surbordonnément aux conditions prescrites par les King's Regulations et les Ordres du Conseil de l'air, toucheront la solde, les allocations, etc., accordées au grade et à la division (ou groupe) de la Royal Air Force correspondant à leur grade et à leur division dans les armées de l'air de l'Australie ou de la Nouvelle-Zélande; toutefois, les dispositions suivantes devront être prises lorsqu'il s'agira d'attribuer des allocations aux familles ou autres personnes à charge en Australie ou en Nouvelle-Zélande.

Les allocations et délégations obligatoires de solde en faveur de membres de la famille ou autres personnes à charge et prévues par les règlements de la Royal Air Force seront, si les membres de la famille ou autres personnes à charge ont leur domicile en Australie ou en Nouvelle-Zélande, portées au crédit du gouvernement australien ou du gouvernement néo-zélandais, lesquels verseront à la famille ou aux autres personnes à charge l'allocation et la part de solde déléguée en vertu des règlements des armées de l'air de l'Australie ou de la Nouvelle-Zélande.

Si la solde et les allocations payables en vertu des règlements de l'Aviation royale australienne ou de l'Aviation royale néo-zélandaise excèdent celles qui sont établies en vertu des règlements de la Royal Air Force, et si le Gouvernement de l'Australie ou le Gouvernement de la Nouvelle-Zélande décident que cette différence soit portée au crédit de l'officier ou de l'aviateur, la différence (compte tenu du versement effectué en vertu du paragraphe précédent) sera versée par le Gouvernement de l'Australie ou par le Gouvernement de la Nouvelle-Zélande à titre de solde différée, soit à l'expiration du service, soit à un autre moment dans des cas spéciaux.

Le personnel ne sera pas assuré selon les plans d'assurance du Royaume-Uni, et toute cotisation d'assurance (contribution du patron et de l'employé), nécessaire pour donner droit aux bénéfices des plans australiens ou néo-zélandais, sera versée par le Gouvernement de l'Australie ou par le Gouvernement de la Nouvelle-Zélande lesquels s'entendront avec le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni, pour prélever sur la solde, la contribution de l'employé aux cotisations ainsi recouvrables.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Broadcast by the Prime Minister December 17, 1939

BRITISH COMMONWEALTH AIR TRAINING PLAN. C268269

I am pleased to be able to announce that agreement has now been reached by the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand on a Co-operative Air Training Plan, to be known as the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan. The agreement was signed last night very shortly after midnight in my office on Parliament Hill. It is based on a proposal made to the Governments of Canada, Australia and New Zealand, on September 26th, by the Government of the United Kingdom.

In addition to a rapid and extensive increase in the air training programmes of each of the three Dominions, the plan visualizes joint training in Canada, in the more advanced stages, of pupils from Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the United Kingdom. The undertaking is one of great magnitude. It will establish Canada as one of the greatest air training centres in the world. Its development will result in a rapid increase in the number of air training schools in this country, and will achieve a steadily increasing output of highly trained pilots, observers and air gunners. The plan will enable the four countries to meet the greatly increasing requirements of trained personnel for their respective air forces, and for such service as the combined forces may be called upon to perform in the theatres of war. The aim, in short, is to achieve, by co-operative effort, air forces whose co-ordinated strength will be overwhelming.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268270

The Canadian Government accepted the United Kingdom proposal in principle on September the 28th, that is, two days after it was received. The proposal was also accepted in principle, without delay, by the Governments of Australia and New Zealand. No time was lost in making arrangements for carrying on the negotiations. Much detailed consideration obviously was necessary to ensure a co-operative scheme which would be completely co-ordinated with the development of the air forces of the different parts of the British Commonwealth engaged in the joint endeavour, and to determine its financial, administrative and other aspects.

In working out the plan, the existing air training programmes of all four countries engaged in the discussions, were taken fully into account. As already mentioned, the plan provides for a continuance of training in the United Kingdom, for an enlargement of the training programmes of Canada, Australia and New Zealand, and for a joint training programme in Canada. As the United Kingdom proposal contemplated joint training to be carried on in Canada, it was appropriate and, in fact, essential that the details of the programme should be worked out at Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268271

A Mission, known as the United Kingdom Air Training Mission, was sent to Canada from the United Kingdom. It was headed by the distinguished industrialist, Lord Riverdale. Lord Riverdale and his colleagues arrived in Ottawa on October 15th. They were joined, a few days later, by Captain H. H. Balfour, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Air. On November 1st, the Air Training Mission arrived from Australia. The Australian Mission was presided over by the Honourable J. V. Fairbairn. During his stay in Canada, Mr. Fairbairn, as a result of the reorganization of the Australian Cabinet, became Australian Minister for Air. The Air Training Mission from New Zealand arrived at Ottawa on November 3rd. It was headed by Group Captain Saunders, Chief of the New Zealand Air Staff.

The distinguished personnel of the Missions affords evidence of the significance attached by the several governments to the co-operative air training plan. The Headquarters Staff of the Royal Canadian Air Force, and the appropriate administrative officers of the Departments of National Defence, Finance and External Affairs were at the disposal of the visiting Missions throughout. They rendered quite exceptional service. Members of the Canadian Government made themselves available wherever it was possible for them to render assistance.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268271A

The negotiations on the part of Canada were carried on, in the main, by a Committee of the Cabinet, presided over by the Prime Minister, and composed of the Ministers of National Defence, Finance, Pensions and National Health, and Transport.

The agreement in all its details was worked out in the most friendly spirit, and, considering the intricacy of the problems to be solved, with remarkable speed. In the case of the Missions from Australia and New Zealand, and particularly in the case of the Mission from the United Kingdom, continuous conference by cable was necessary in matters requiring the consideration and authorization of their respective Governments. The Canadian negotiators were in the fortunate position of being in immediate contact with their colleagues in the Cabinet, and the Government itself was in a position to reach decisions with a minimum of delay. On some of the more important matters of policy direct negotiations between the governments concerned, were also necessary.

By November 27th, some three weeks after the arrival in Canada of the New Zealand Mission, we were able to announce that a basis of agreement had been reached for submission to the governments concerned. The time that has elapsed since has been devoted to an elaboration and precise definition of the details of the plan, and to the drafting of the agreement in its final form.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

The broad problem was to decide on the speediest and most effective means of training the maximum number of pilots and airmen to meet the exigencies of war. In working out the agreement, Canada, Australia and New Zealand had, necessarily, to keep in mind local defence considerations, such as the training, equipment and service of the pilots and other air personnel required to keep up their own air defences.

It was, of course, not contemplated that the requirements of Australia and New Zealand for home defence would be met out of the personnel trained in Canada. It was realized, however, that, as was the case with Canada, the training facilities in these two countries would be capable of training more personnel than would be required for local purposes. To reach the main objective, namely, the rapid training of the greatest number of pilots and airmen, the facilities in these countries, in excess of local needs, are to be used to train Australians and New Zealanders for service overseas with the Royal Air Force. The existing training facilities in the United Kingdom will continue to be used by the Royal Air Force.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Under the agreement as it relates to joint training in Canada, the programme of training of personnel for the Royal Canadian Air Force, already enlarged since the outbreak of war, will be vastly increased. The Canadian training programme will be merged with the programme of joint training in Canada. In this way, co-ordinated air training will proceed simultaneously in all four countries.

The joint air training programme provides for the training of many thousands of pilots in Canada each year, about three-fifths as many air observers, and a slightly larger number of air gunners than pilots. The pilots, of course, are those who actually operate the planes. The observers handle the reconnaissance cameras and the bomb sights, and, as well, do the navigating. The gunners use the machine guns in action, and also act as wireless operators.

The facilities in Canada will be used, in varying degrees, by all four parties to the agreement. Practically all air recruits in the United Kingdom will be trained at home. In Australia and New Zealand, all air recruits will receive their initial and elementary flying training at home. Most of the Australian pupils and some of the New Zealand pupils will also receive advanced training in their own countries.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268274

Under the agreement, however, about one-fifth of the pupils to receive advanced training in Canada will come from the other two Dominions. Some pupils will be received from the United Kingdom, Newfoundland and elsewhere. The great majority of the pupils will, however, be Canadians.

The first stage of training in this country will be initial training, which is a ground course to prepare recruits for flying and for air-force life in general. This will be given in three large schools. At the end of four weeks' initial training, a selection will be made of those to be pilots, observers or gunners, and they will then go to the appropriate schools.

Pilots will go to one of the Elementary Flying Schools, where they will learn to get the feel of a plane, and to fly light machines. After some eight weeks, they will graduate to the Service Flying Schools. It is at this stage that the Australian and New Zealand pilots, who will receive their initial and elementary training in their own countries, will come to Canada to continue their training. In the Service Flying Schools, of which there will be sixteen in Canada, pilots will spend about fourteen weeks learning intermediate and advanced flying, including night and instrument flying. They will receive instruction in bombing and fighting as well.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

The air observers, including those from abroad, will spend about twelve weeks at the Air Observers' Schools. There will be ten of these schools at which pupils will be taught navigation, reconnaissance and photography. They go on from Air Observers' Schools to Bombing and Gunnery Schools for a course in the theory and practice of bombing and gunnery. The course will take about six weeks. There will be ten Bombing and Gunnery schools. Finally, in order to learn more advanced navigation, the observers will spend about four weeks in one of two Air Navigation Schools.

The air gunners, who also serve as wireless operators after their initial training either in Canada or abroad, will take a sixteen weeks' course in the Wireless Training Schools. There will be four Wireless Training Schools. In them, air gunners will be taught not only the essential principles of radio work, but also operating practices in the air. They will then proceed to the Bombing and Gunnery Schools for four weeks, to learn that phase of work before proceeding overseas.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Schools will also be needed, at the outset, for training instructors and administrative staffs. And before the training programme is brought to full capacity, ground crews and maintenance staffs will be required in large numbers to man the various schools and establishments. Repair and equipment depots, headquarters and commands, recruiting centres and records offices will also be required. In addition to the 88 schools for the training of pilots, observers and air gunners, and schools needed, at the outset, for training instructors and administrative staffs, several much larger schools will also be required to train the personnel for ground crews and maintenance staffs. The total number of schools required, in Canada, for the joint training programme will be 67.

Nearly 40,000 officers and men will be required to man all the various schools, depots and other parts of the organization when it is in full operation. This will include about 2,700 officers and about 6,000 civilians. The remaining 30,000 will be members of the Air Force other than officers. These numbers do not include the pupils undergoing training, who will also be numbered in thousands.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268277

Many of the airmen required for training the pupils will be mechanics and other skilled artisans, who constitute ground crews and maintenance staffs.

For the programme of joint training full use will immediately be made of the existing facilities of the Royal Canadian Air Force, as well as of facilities generously made available by Trans-Canada Airways. However, to put the extensive programme into full operation, a great deal of construction and production will be necessary. Throughout the country, about a score of existing air fields will have to be enlarged, and some sixty odd new air fields constructed. The schools will be established in different parts of Canada. Large supplies of equipment, and stores of various kinds, will be required to furnish the schools, and also the equipment and repair depots. The construction and other industries of Canada may be relied upon to meet effectively the demands which this programme will involve.

. Great quantities of aircraft and their parts will, of course, be required. The United Kingdom, as her part of the costs of the undertaking, has agreed to supply most of the aircraft, including engines and spares.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268278

Apart from the aircraft supplied by the United Kingdom, the light aircraft for elementary training and a portion of the other aircraft will be made in Canada. The aircraft to be made in Canada will be included with the other costs of the joint training programme which are to be divided between Canada, Australia and New Zealand in proportion to the use to be made of the various facilities by the pupils of the three countries. This means that, excluding the cost of the aircraft provided by the United Kingdom, Canada will bear the cost of the initial and elementary training in Canada, and about four-fifths of the remaining costs of the programme.

The duration of the agreement is until March 31, 1943, in other words, a little over three and a quarter years. This period of time may, however, be extended or terminated by mutual agreement. While any estimate of costs made at this time is subject to a wide margin of error, the total cost for the entire programme in Canada, for the period agreed upon, will approximate six hundred million dollars. Canada's share will be around three hundred and fifty million dollars. Up to the beginning of next September, the expenditure on the joint training programme will amount to about ninety million dollars. Of this ninety millions, Canada's share will be about forty-eight millions.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268279

This amount will be in addition to the $315,000,000 which the Minister of Finance estimated would be the cost, in the first year of the war, of the military programme already undertaken before the air training plan was proposed. In other words, in this first year of war, Canada will be spending on her military effort alone about a million dollars a day.

Under the terms of the agreement, the Joint Air Training Programme which is to be carried out in Canada, is to be administered by the Government of Canada. The organisation and executive command of the training schools is entrusted to the Royal Canadian Air Force. For the general supervision of the Joint Air Training Programme, a Supervisory Board will be established in Canada. The Board will supervise the financial administration of the programme. It will also, from time to time, inspect the progress being made in the setting up of the organization, and carrying out the training.

The Supervisory Board will be under the Chairmanship of the Minister of National Defence. It will also include the Minister of Finance, the Minister of Transport, Representatives of the Governments of the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand, the Deputy Minister for Air of the Department of National Defence, and the Chief of the Air Staff.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Contact with the Government will be maintained by the Board through its Chairman, and with the Royal Canadian Air Force through the Chief of the Air Staff.

The Representatives on the Board, of the Governments of the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand, are to report to their own Governments regarding the progress of the Joint Training Programme. They will also have authority to visit, at any time, any stations or units, and to make criticisms or suggestions to the Board. It is expected that they will assist in keeping the Royal Canadian Air Force advised as to new developments in training technique which may come to their notice.

All four Governments will co-operate in the provision of staff and teaching personnel. The staff officers and instructors from the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand will, during their period of service in Canada, hold temporary appointments in the Royal Canadian Air Force. This further co-operative arrangement should go far to assure the successful working of the Joint Air Training Programme.

It is desirable, at this point, to clear up a misconception which has become current through frequent repetition, but which is wholly without foundation.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

It has been asserted that the Air Training Plan would have been in existence before this had the present Government not declined to meet an earlier request of the United Kingdom Government for the training of British pilots in Canada. Within the past week or two, it has, for example, been said: "Had we agreed to the British proposal of two years ago for the establishment of air training facilities in Canada, today, Canada would be, in reality, the air training centre of the Empire".

More recently it has been said that "so far as the Empire Air Training Scheme is concerned this was proposed by the British nearly two years ago but apparently discouraged by the King government until after the outbreak of war".

I assume that what is referred to are certain informal, exploratory conversations concerning facilities for the training of British pilots in Canada which took place, not two years ago, but in May and June of last year. The facts were clearly set forth in a statement I subsequently made to Parliament.

The conversations did not relate to a Joint Air Training Plan. Their purpose was to ascertain whether it would be agreeable to the Canadian Government to have United Kingdom schools for the advanced training of pilots of the Royal Air Force established in Canada, under the authority and direction of the Air Ministry of the United Kingdom.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

It was represented that it was becoming increasingly difficult to secure in the British Isles the open spaces needed for long distance flying and gunnery practice. What was contemplated was a British air training establishment in Canada, organised and controlled by the Air Ministry of the United Kingdom, in no way responsible to the Canadian Government, but responsible solely to the Government of the United Kingdom.

When the matter was broached, speaking on behalf of the Government, I immediately said I was sure the Canadian people would gladly have pilots of the Royal Air Force come to Canada for advanced training and would be prepared to provide the necessary facilities, but that I believed they would feel that the necessary establishments should, under terms to be agreed upon, be organised and controlled by the Royal Canadian Air Force, and that the responsibility for their administration should be that of the Government of Canada, rather than that of the Government of the United Kingdom. I added that I felt such a basis was indispensable to friendly and effective co-operation between the two Air Forces as well as between the two Governments.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Long ago, the constitutional principle was accepted that military establishments in Canadian territory should be owned, maintained and controlled by the Government of Canada, responsible to the Canadian people. That principle has been acted upon ever since. British naval stations and British army garrisons have been withdrawn. Canada, herself, has assumed responsibility for all defence establishments in Canadian territory. It was felt by our Government that a reversal of the principle underlying this historical process was something which the Canadian people would not wish to entertain.

The attitude of the Canadian Government, in this matter, was, however, far from being a negative one. Our desire to co-operate in the most effective manner was made abundantly clear in the following statement which I made in Parliament with respect to Canada's position. "We ourselves," I said, "are prepared to have our own establishments here and to give in those establishments facilities to British pilots to come and train here, but they must come and train in establishments which are under the control of the Government of Canada and for which the Minister of National Defence will be able to answer in this Parliament, with respect to everything concerning them".

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

This declaration of Canadian policy was cordially welcomed by the Government of the United Kingdom. On July 7th, 1938, in answer to a question in the British House of Commons as to whether his attention had been drawn to this statement by the Prime Minister of Canada, Sir Kingsley Wood, The Secretary of State for Air, replied: "Yes sir. An offer in this sense has been communicated to His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom, by the Canadian Prime Minister, through the Canadian High Commissioner. A reply has been sent expressing warm appreciation of the offer, and arrangements are being made in accordance with the suggestion of the Canadian Prime Minister for an officer to be sent immediately to Canada to explore, in co-operation with the Canadian Government, the possibility of working out a scheme for training facilities in Canada".

A few weeks later, an officer of the Royal Air Force was sent by the British Government to conduct the exploratory investigations referred to. During the stay in Canada of this expert from the Air Ministry, a careful survey was made of requirements and facilities available for joint advanced training of pilots for the Air Forces of the United Kingdom and of Canada.

The survey was made

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

The survey was made in collaboration with officials of the Department of National Defence and senior officers of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

At the ensuing session, on the recommendation of the Minister of National Defence, our Parliament appropriated the sum of $6,000,000 for the joint training of pilots. This grant was over and above the already greatly increased appropriations for air defence. In presenting the estimates to Parliament the Minister said: "It is possible to say now that agreement has been reached on a scheme whereby pilots from the United Kingdom will come to Canada to be given intermediate and advanced stages of training under the auspices of the Canadian Department of National Defence". I should like to emphasize the fact that the scheme was one for joint training. In answer to a question, the Minister added that the duration of the scheme would be three years.

Here we have the real beginning of the present Plan for joint training in Canada of pilots from the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand, which, under the pressure of war, has assumed the proportions of which the world is now aware.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

The British Commonwealth Air Training Plan is in reality a vast expansion of the scheme for joint training which, in the spring of this year, was already under way as the result of the joint explorations of the Government of Canada and the United Kingdom.

The conversations of last year, instead of delaying the present development, served to expedite it in no uncertain way. They settled the principle upon which the plan of joint training would be organized and controlled. They thereby removed from possibility of controversy at the present time the important question of administration of the Commonwealth plan that has now been agreed upon. They resulted, also, in the beginning of organization for the joint training of pilots in Canada considerably in advance of the outbreak of war. They constituted, in fact, the peace-time foundations on which the United Kingdom proposal of September was based.

The government has not awaited the conclusion of the present agreement to begin work on the development of the additional air training facilities which the plan contemplates. Considerable progress has already been made.

The Royal Canadian Air Force schools

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268236

The Royal Canadian Air Force schools at Trenton and Camp Borden have been converted into schools for the training of instructors. For some weeks past they have been in use for that purpose. The air training facilities, which were being developed on a less extensive scale before the war, are being brought rapidly to completion. Of about 125 air fields already developed in Canada, 42 are up to the standard set by Trans-Canada Airways. Many of these will be used for the joint training programme. Under arrangements made with the provincial governments, the highways staffs of all the provinces have been used for surveying additional aerodrome sites. Full advantage has been taken of the favourable weather, and most of the sites have already been surveyed. The War Supply Board has anticipated the requirements of the programme and has organized production to meet them.

The enormous variety of equipment required for the programme is being listed in detail, so that orders may be promptly placed. To prevent delays in obtaining supplies required from outside Canada, protective orders have already been placed. Now that the agreement is in force the War Supply Board will immediately begin to let the necessary contracts.

Plans for the schools

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Plans for the schools have already been prepared, and no time will be lost in their construction. It will thus be seen that the time spent in working out all essential features of the agreement has, in reality, not interfered with the development of the programme itself. Canada is more than ready for the large task ahead.

The new programme is of such magnitude, that some little time must necessarily elapse, while schools are being built, equipment obtained, and the training of additional instructors completed, before student pilots, observers and air gunners can be accepted for their training, and before the first pilots and observers, trained under the scheme, will be sufficiently skilled to proceed to the theatres of war.

In the meantime the United Kingdom Government, appreciating the desire of the Canadian people to be represented as soon as possible by an Air Force Unit on active service in Europe, has arranged for the immediate formation of a squadron to be commanded by a squadron leader of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

All the pilots

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

All the pilots in the squadron will be Canadian. The Canadian commander and pilots will be selected from Canadians at present serving with the Royal Air Force.

The formation of this squadron has been made possible by the practical co-operation, in the training of air personnel, in recent years between the Royal Canadian Air Force and the Royal Air Force. This co-operation has resulted in the presence in the Royal Air Force of a considerable number of Canadians, some of whom, as you are aware, have already achieved distinction in the present war.

Perhaps I should mention here that, under the Commonwealth Air Training Plan, provision has been made, after their training is completed, for the identification, in the field, of the pupils with their respective Dominions, either by the method of organising Dominion units and formations, or in some other way.

In embarking upon the vast co-operative enterprise, envisaged by the Commonwealth Air Training Plan, the government had naturally to give the most careful consideration to the Plan in its relation to Canada's military effort as a whole.

This aspect was,

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

This aspect was, of course, very fully discussed with the Government of the United Kingdom. It is obviously all-important that our effort should be co-ordinated with the effort of our allies in a single strategic plan for carrying on the war. When the Plan, in its broad outlines, was proposed by the Government of the United Kingdom, it was stated that the immense influence which the development and realization of such a great project might have upon the whole course of the war, might even prove decisive.

On October 10th, at the time of announcing agreement by the several governments on the principle of the proposal, I stated that "The Government of the United Kingdom has indicated its opinion that with the facilities which Canada possesses this co-operative effort may prove to be of the most essential and decisive character."

The United Kingdom Government has since informed us that, considering present and future requirements, it feels that participation in the Air Training Scheme would provide for more effective assistance towards ultimate victory than any other form of military co-operation which Canada can give.

At the same time

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268290

At the same time the United Kingdom Government wishes it to be clearly understood that it would welcome no less heartily the presence of Canadian land forces in the theatre of war at the earliest possible moment.

You will recall that, on September the 19th, the Government announced that a division was being organized for service overseas, and, as you are aware, no time is being lost in our endeavour to meet the wish of the United Kingdom for the early despatch of an Expeditionary Force.

I have spoken of the magnitude of the Joint Air Training Plan, of what it is likely to mean in numbers of men to be trained, and in additional financial outlay upon Canada's war effort. It is well, however, to remember that, in the vast expansion of air power which Canada has undertaken, in collaboration with her partners in the British Commonwealth, something wholly different, and much more vital than numbers or material wealth is involved. It is the lives of our young men which are being pledged. Like our soldiers and our sailors, the pilots and airmen who are to be trained in thousands, are going forth to battle to risk their lives

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268291

battle to risk their lives in conflict with forces more sinister than any the world has known.

Tonight, I am speaking particularly of those belonging to the Royal Canadian Air Force. The young men, equally with others of maturer years with whom they will be associated, are, I am convinced, fully aware of the appalling nature of the situation facing the world today, and of what it will demand by way of sacrifice ere peace is again restored. It is not in a spirit of adventure that they are pressing forward in such numbers. Rather are they enlisting in the spirit of the crusaders of old, prepared, if need be, to give their lives for what, to them and to us, is holy and sacred - the birthright of liberty and happiness in a free land. This fortitude and devotion must be guarded and protected by every power we possess.

In making provision for this vast undertaking, the government has done so, knowing that nothing can be left to haste or to chance. The intricate machine must be perfect. In every phase of their work, the men must be trained by the highest skill, and under the best conditions, it is possible for the country to provide.

In no other arm

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268292

In no other arm of the defence services is a man obliged to rely more completely upon his own initiative, his own knowledge, and his own judgment. It is the possession of these qualities in such large measure which has given to Canadians the reputation as airmen they already enjoy. Those who enlist in Canada's Air Force may be depended upon to do their part, however perilous it may be. We must do ours to assist them in every possible way, by adequate training and proper equipment, and by all the influences for good by which it is possible to surround their lives.

I need not say to those who may come from other lands to receive their training, how warmly they will be welcomed during their brief stay in our midst. I know something of the heart of the Canadian people. I am sure, therefore, that our homes will be as open to them as they are to those of our own land with whom they are already united as brothers, in an heroic effort to serve the world's need at this hour of its greatest peril.

Let there be no mistake about the significance of the present war. It is a desperate struggle for existence itself.

On its outcome

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

On its outcome will depend the fate not of Canada alone, nor even, it seems to me, of the British Empire, the fall of which would shatter the world, but of Humanity itself, in all its higher aspects. To save mankind from such a catastrophe, the airmen of the British Commonwealth, whether setting their course by the North Star or the Southern Cross, are dedicating their lives. To hasten the day when peace may be restored is, I believe, the governing motive of all our forces, whether on sea, or land, or in the air.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

Air T.

Despatch Commenced 10 am, Dec 17th

C 268295

From Prime Minister, Canada

To Prime Minister, New Zealand
Australia

Ottawa, December 17, 1939

Secret
Code
Most Immediate

Air training agreement without any change in substance ~~is being~~ signed by United Kingdom and Canadian representatives shortly after ~~at~~ midnight. As no newspapers are published in Canada on Sunday, I shall give a general broadcast Sunday night at nine o'clock dealing with Canadian background and with general terms of agreement. This broadcast with the agreed press statement will be published in our Monday morning press, and statement will also be published Monday morning in United Kingdom. I would therefore suggest that press statement be released at any convenient time approximating nine o'clock Sunday night Ottawa time, followed at any time by such supplementary material as your government considers desirable. We expect to release the non-confidential details to press here for Monday afternoon or Tuesday morning before but see no reason why your government should not release similar material at any time after agreed press statement. Simple announcement that agreement had been signed or initialled on behalf of all four governments may be made on radio here Sunday morning and your government may wish if convenient to adopt similar course before issuing the agreed press statement.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Subject Air - training

Date December 18/1939 Publication "Globe and Mail"

CANADA'S HELP IN THE AIR.

The news that the terms of the Empire's joint air-training program have been agreed upon will be received nowhere more enthusiastically than in this country. It is a scheme around which Canadians, eager to turn their vigor to war channels, can rally with the greatest of satisfaction. Although it will be more distinctly a Canadian enterprise than first anticipated, the numbers of airmen coming from Britain, Australia and New Zealand for final training will give it the co-operative effect so keenly desired.

Its magnitude can be grasped by Prime Minister King's announcement that sixty new flying fields will be established, in addition to the enlargement and utilization of twenty existing fields. Sixty-seven schools will be required for instruction of pilots, observers, gunners and wireless crews, and those to be engaged in ground and maintenance services. Some 40,000 men will be needed to establish and maintain the plan, besides those at present in training. These will include 2,700 officers, 6,000 civilians and 30,000 non-commissioned air-force personnel. As for various reasons most of the men in other Dominions will be trained at home four-fifths of the force to be trained here will be Canadians. Since it will require six months to train a pilot, nearly as long for an observer, and a slightly shorter period for air gunners and wireless operators, speed in getting the plan under way is essential. Pending the completion of the agreements preparations have been in progress. Registration centres have been opened across Canada for skilled mechanics and other necessary help. But an intensive recruiting campaign should be launched to enlist the thousands of men who will be needed without loss of time to make up the force.

The country will get a view of war costs in meeting the bill being incurred. Of the total cost for the contract period of three and one-quarter years amounting to $600,000,000, Canada's share will be $350,000,000. Expenditure up to Sept. 1 next will be $48,000,000, added to the estimate given by the Finance Minister of $315,000,000 for other war purposes. Accordingly, as the Prime Minister pointed out, the Dominion is spending about $1,000,000 daily on the war, or about one-third as much as normal requirements for the nation's various Governments. That it is most urgent for Dominion, Provincial and municipal Governments to curtail every possible dollar of expenses not for direct war costs should not have to be emphasized.

This is Canada's war, a war to preserve her institutions and privileges, and we cannot complain about essential, well-ordered expenses. The care with which the air-training scheme has been worked out in a comparatively short time implies that expense has had the fullest consideration. Substantial permanent benefit will accrue from the training and the establishment of a great air centre in this country, but we have the word of the British authorities that by this means the Dominion can make its greatest contribution to the Allied cause, and this is what we wish to do.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Subject: Air - training

Date: December 18/1939 Publication: "Globe and Mail"

CANADA'S HELP IN THE AIR.

The news that the terms of the Empire's joint air-training program have been agreed upon will be received nowhere more enthusiastically than in this country. It is a scheme around which Canadians, eager to turn their vigor to war channels, can rally with the greatest of satisfaction. Although it will be more distinctly a Canadian enterprise than first anticipated, the numbers of airmen coming from Britain, Australia and New Zealand for final training will give it the co-operative effect so keenly desired.

Its magnitude can be grasped by Prime Minister King's announcement that sixty new flying fields will be established, in addition to the enlargement and utilization of twenty existing fields. Sixty-seven schools will be required for instruction of pilots, observers, gunners and wireless crews, and those to be engaged in ground and maintenance services. Some 40,000 men will be needed to establish and maintain the plan, besides those at present in training. These will include 2,700 officers, 6,000 civilians and 30,000 non-commissioned air-force personnel. As for various reasons most of the men in other Dominions will be trained at home four-fifths of the force to be trained here will be Canadians. Since it will require six months to train a pilot, nearly as long for an observer, and a slightly shorter period for air gunners and wireless operators, speed in getting the plan under way is essential. Pending the completion of the agreements preparations have been in progress. Registration centres have been opened across Canada for skilled mechanics and other necessary help. But an intensive recruiting campaign should be launched to enlist the thousands of men who will be needed without loss of time to make up the force.

The country will get a view of war costs in meeting the bill being incurred. Of the total cost for the contract period of three and one-quarter years amounting to $600,000,000, Canada's share will be $350,000,000. Expenditure up to Sept. 1 next will be $48,000,000, added to the estimate given by the Finance Minister of $315,000,000 for other war purposes. Accordingly, as the Prime Minister pointed out, the Dominion is spending about $1,000,000 daily on the war, or about one-third as much as normal requirements for the nation's various Governments. That it is most urgent for Dominion, Provincial and municipal Governments to curtail every possible dollar of expenses not for direct war costs should not have to be emphasized.

This is Canada's war, a war to preserve her institutions and privileges, and we cannot complain about essential, well-ordered expenses. The care with which the air-training scheme has been worked out in a comparatively short time implies that expense has had the fullest consideration. Substantial permanent benefit will accrue from the training and the establishment of a great air centre in this country, but we have the word of the British authorities that by this means the Dominion can make its greatest contribution to the Allied cause, and this is what we wish to do.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS

Office of The Prime Minister

C 268297

Name of Publication Ottawa M. Citizen

Date Dec. 18/39.

Subject Air Training

Flying Schools Should Be Open By Next Spring

Lord Riverdale Says Empire Agreement Is Wonderful Achievement and All Parties Well Satisfied

Much preliminary organization work connected with the Empire training plan has been done and actual instruction in the Canadian air schools should start next spring, Lord Riverdale, head of the British air mission and one of the leading figures in the negotiations leading to the agreement, said last night in an interview.

Britain will provide at least 10 per cent of the pupils in the air schools to be established under the scheme and if there are vacancies in the Canadian training centers which cannot be filled with recruits from this country, the slack will be taken up by British youth, he stated.

Wonderful Co-operation.

"We have had wonderful co-operation from your government and from your air force officers," said Lord Riverdale who leaves Ottawa today on his way back to England.

"This agreement is a wonderful achievement, and all the parties are completely satisfied with it. A tremendous amount of details have been settled in remarkably short time. The Canadian Transport Department's civil aviation branch has co-operated fully. The technical experts I brought from England with me are very enthusiastic over the co-operation to be found on all sides in Canada."

Providing Aircraft.

Britain would provide most of the aircraft for the air training plan, he stated. Primary training in Canada would be done on De Havilland, Moths and Fleet trainers, with advanced instruction on North American Harvards, fast low wing monoplanes built in the United States. Some of this type, he said, would be sent to New Zealand and Australia. Harvards bought by the U.K. government in the United States would be left on this side of the Atlantic for the training scheme.

Service aircraft for advanced training would be sent over from England, including the Fairey Battle, a low wing two-seater monoplane fighter and bomber, and the twin-engined Avro-Anson reconnaissance and bombing machines. Several Fairey Battles have long been in Canada.

Lord Riverdale paid tribute to the qualities of Canadian fliers and said sheer initiative makes them fine airmen.

Fine Air Fighters.

"Canadians proved to be wonderful pilots and fine air fighters in the first Great War, and we look to thousands of them to repeat the excellent performance of the preceding generation in the present struggle," the British industrialist said.

"There is a psychological reason for Canadians being good flying men and that is their resourcefulness and initiative. In this young country one has to be resourceful, inventive and adaptable. Our older civilization at home means that everything is right at hand for the asking, but in Canada you have had to make things, to make one thing do the work of another. Your pioneers struggled to survive, and you have inherited their initiative, which is a fine thing to have when one is up in an airplane."

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Épreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS

C 266291

Office of
The Prime Minister

Name of Publication Ottawa M. Citizen

Date Dec. 18/39.

Subject

Flying Schools Should Be Open By Next Spring

Lord Riverdale Says Empire Agreement Is Wonderful Achievement and All Parties Well Satisfied

Much preliminary organization work connected with the Empire training plan has been done and actual instruction in the Canadian air schools should start next spring, Lord Riverdale, head of the British air mission and one of the leading figures in the negotiations leading to the agreement, said last night in an interview.

Britain will provide at least 10 per cent of the pupils in the air schools to be established under the scheme and if there are vacancies in the Canadian training centers which cannot be filled with recruits from this country, the slack will be taken up by British youth, he stated.

Wonderful Co-operation.

"We have had wonderful co-operation from your government and from your air force officers," said Lord Riverdale who leaves Ottawa today on his way back to England.

"This agreement is a wonderful achievement, and all the parties are completely satisfied with it. A tremendous amount of details have been settled in remarkably short time. The Canadian Transport Department's civil aviation branch has co-operated fully. The technical experts I brought from England with me are very enthusiastic over the co-operation to be found on all sides in Canada."

Providing Aircraft.

Britain would provide most of the aircraft for the air training plan, he stated. Primary training in Canada would be done on De Havilland, Moths and Fleet trainers, with advanced instruction on North American Harvards, fast low wing monoplanes built in the United States. Some of this type, he said, would be sent to New Zealand and Australia. Harvards bought by the U.K. government in the United States would be left on this side of the Atlantic for the training scheme.

Service aircraft for advanced training would be sent over from England, including the Fairey Battle, a low wing two-seater monoplane fighter and bomber, and the twin-engined Avro-Anson reconnaissance and bombing machines. Several Fairey Battles have long been in Canada.

Lord Riverdale paid tribute to the qualities of Canadian fliers and said sheer initiative makes them fine airmen.

Fine Air Fighters.

"Canadians proved to be wonderful pilots and fine air fighters in the first Great War, and we look to thousands of them to repeat the excellent performance of the preceding generation in the present struggle," the British industrialist said.

"There is a psychological reason for Canadians being good flying men and that is their resourcefulness and initiative. In this young country one has to be resourceful, inventive and adaptable. Our older civilization at home means that everything is right at hand for the asking, but in Canada you have had to make things, to make one thing do the work of another. Your pioneers struggled to survive, and you have inherited their initiative, which is a fine thing to have when one is up in an airplane."

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS C 268298

Office of the Prime Minister

Name of Publication Ottawa J. Citizen

Date December 19, 1939

Subject Air Training

Four Govts. Are "Well Pleased" With Air Pact

Lord Riverdale, Head of British Mission, Expects Air Vice-Marshal Croil To Take Charge of Plan.

"The four governments are well pleased with the agreement," Lord Riverdale, head of the British air mission, told The Citizen yesterday prior to his departure from Ottawa.

He was referring to Canada, the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand, the countries which signed an agreement on Sunday for the Empire air training scheme. His mission successfully concluded, Lord Riverdale left for Washington yesterday afternoon for a visit before returning to England. He was seen off at Union station by Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, Hon. Ian Mackenzie and members of the British air mission remaining in Ottawa and the personnel of the British purchasing mission.

Air Vice Marshal G. M. Croil likely would be in charge of the scheme, but that was a matter for Canada to decide, Lord Riverdale said in an interview. Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham will remain in Ottawa in an advisory capacity.

"Would Discourage Nazis."

When figures which the scheme involved were being mentioned, one of the technical advisers of the mission said it was not desired to be too specific because of giving information to the enemy.

"Perhaps the figures would tend to discourage the Nazis," suggested the reporter.

"I'm rather inclined to that opinion," observed Lord Riverdale.

The figure often quoted of ten to one for a ground crew necessary to keep men in the air was too high, he said. In this scheme it would be three or four. On the basis of 25,000 airmen a year being trained that would amount to between 75,000 and 100,000 ground crew. But they would be more or less permanent.

Ground Crew Permanent.

"When the trained airmen are taken to England, we will be expected to supply the ground crew." Some of the Canadian ground crew, however, might be sent over. But generally speaking they would be permanent for the duration of the war.

The participating governments would be responsible for getting their men to the training center, but once the men were trained, England would assume responsibility for conveying them to combat areas.

Lord Riverdale did not anticipate any difficulty in obtaining either men or training machines. He pointed out the larger numbers in the Empire who were volunteering for air service. As for machines, he was confident a supply would readily be available. Drawing his hand upwards on a slant, he said: "Men and machines will progressively increase, keeping pace with one another."

Ottawa Gets Share.

Would Ottawa become one of the training centers?

"The schools will be spread all across Canada. But you may be sure Ottawa will get her full share."

Schools would be kept constantly at capacity. That was the reason England's share of trainees was not too specific—as many men would be sent from England as

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS C 268298

Office of the Prime Minister

Name of Publication: Ottawa M. Citizen

Date: December 19, 1939

Subject: Air Training

Four Govts. Are "Well Pleased" With Air Pact

Lord Riverdale, Head of British Mission, Expects Air Vice-Marshal Croll To Take Charge of Plan.

"The four governments are well pleased with the agreement," Lord Riverdale, head of the British air mission, told the citizen yesterday prior to his departure from Ottawa.

He was referring to Canada, the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand, the countries which signed an agreement on Sunday for the Empire air training scheme. His mission successfully concluded, Lord Riverdale left for Washington yesterday afternoon for a visit before returning to England. He was seen off at Union station by Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, Hon. Ian Mackenzie and members of the British air mission remaining in Ottawa and the personnel of the British purchasing mission.

Air Vice Marshal G. M. Croll likely would be in charge of the scheme, but that was a matter for Canada to decide, Lord Riverdale said in an interview. Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham will remain in Ottawa in an advisory capacity.

"Would Discourage Nazis."

When figures which the scheme involved were being mentioned, one of the technical advisers of the mission said it was not desired to be too specific because of giving information to the enemy.

"Perhaps the figures would tend to discourage the Nazis," suggested the reporter.

"I'm rather inclined to that opinion," observed Lord Riverdale.

The figure often quoted of ten to one for a ground crew necessary to keep men in the air was too high, he said. In some cases it would be three or four to one, the basis of 25,000 airmen being trained that would require between 75,000 and 100,000 ground crew. And they would be backed by [illegible] reserves.

Ground Crew Needed.

"When [illegible] taken to [illegible] pected to supply [illegible] Some of the Canadian ground crew, however, would be over. But generally speaking [illegible] would be permanent for the duration of the war.

The participating governments would be responsible for training their men to the [illegible] course, but once the men were trained, England would assume responsibility for conveying them to operational areas.

Lord Riverdale did not anticipate any difficulty in obtaining either men or training machines. He pointed out the largest numbers in the Empire who were volunteering for air service. As for machines, he was confident a supply would readily be available. Drawing his hand upwards on a slant, he said: "Men and machines will progressively increase, keeping pace with one another."

Ottawa Gets Share.

Would Ottawa become one of the training centers?

"The schools will be spread all across Canada. But you may be sure Ottawa will get her full share."

Schools would be kept constantly at capacity. That was the reason England's share of trainees was not too specific—as many men would be sent from England as

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS

C268299 Office of the Minister

Name of Publication.....

Date.....

Subject.....

were required to keep the schools filled.

About how many could be trained at one time?

The previous estimate by the press of 15,000 was "pretty accurate." (With the ground crew, it would mean approximately 100,000 men constantly participating in the Canadian air training work.)

Lord Riverdale was enthusiastic about the scheme. Particularly to Australia and New Zealand—"where there was danger of attack"—did it give a sense of security. "They will constantly have men in training to augment the permanent defence force."

Lord Riverdale said that working out the details of the agreement "had been hard work." He praised the participating governments for their co-operation.

With the main body of the mission, Lord Riverdale arrived in Ottawa on Oct. 15.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Épreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS

C 268299

Office of the Prime Minister

Name of Publication .....

Date .....

Subject .....

were required to keep the schools filled.

About how many could be trained at one time?

The previous estimate by the press of 15,000 was "pretty accurate." (With the ground crew, it would mean approximately 100,000 men constantly participating in the Canadian air training work.)

Lord Riverdale was enthusiastic about the scheme. Particularly to Australia and New Zealand—"where there was danger of attack"—did it give a sense of security. "They will constantly have men in training to augment the permanent defence force."

Lord Riverdale said that working out the details of the agreement "had been hard work." He praised the participating governments for their co-operation.

With the main body of the mission, Lord Riverdale arrived in Ottawa on Oct. 15.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268300

FROM: THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE PRIME MINISTER OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA, CANBERRA.

TO: THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE PRIME MINISTER OF CANADA, OTTAWA.

CODE

CANBERRA, December 20th, 1939.

December 20th. Regarding Empire Air Training Scheme. I have today issued a statement to the press intimating Agreement has been completed and outlining administration scheme, allocation of costs, rates of pay etc.

PRIME MINISTER OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA

Rec'd Ottawa: 9.45 A.M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COPY

Air T.
Laurier House

C 268301

Ottawa, December 21, 1939

SECRET

Paul Mason, Esq.,
Office of the High Commissioner
for the United Kingdom,
Earnscliffe,
Ottawa.

Dear Mr. Mason:

I have much pleasure in acceding to your telephone request to Mr. Pickersgill for a copy of the secret memorandum of agreement on the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

I am also sending, under separate cover, a dozen copies of the summary of the memorandum which has been made public. I understand that a similar number of copies of the Prime Minister's broadcast have already been sent to the High Commissioner.

Yours very truly,

A. D. P. Heeney
Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister.

JWP/MS

for original see
G-100-82
V. 6

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

CROSS REFERENCE SHEET

C 268302

Name or Subject: Air Training Plan 1939

File No.: ATP / 1939

Regarding

Original Cartoon by LOW
(London Evening Standard)
re Air Training Plan
(sent by Lord Rivendale)

Date

SEE

Name or Subject

File No.: Sunroom

REQ. 382
5,000—14-6-39

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268303

FROM: THE PRIME MINISTER OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA, CANBERRA

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA.

MOST IMMEDIATE

CODE

Canberra, December 15th, 1939

I propose to make a statement for publication in the Australian press tomorrow morning Saturday with regard to Agreement between Great Britain and Australia in connection with Empire Air Training scheme. I am forwarding copies of my statement to you en clair.

PRIME MINISTER OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA

Rec'd Ottawa 4:30 a.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

A. & T.

C 268304

TO: THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE PRIME MINISTER OF CANADA, OTTAWA

FROM: THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE PRIME MINISTER OF NEW ZEALAND, WELLINGTON.

R.

IMMEDIATE

CYPHER

Wellington, New Zealand,
December 15, 1939.

The Prime Minister of Australia informs me he is making a statement for publication tomorrow morning, Saturday, concerning the Agreement between Great Britain and Australia in connection with the Empire Air Training Scheme. I should be glad to learn whether there is any immediate likelihood of arranging for synchronized release of agreed statement referred to in your telegram dated December 11th.

PRIME MINISTER OF NEW ZEALAND.

Received Ottawa: 10 A.M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R

A.M.T.

C 268303

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA

TO: THE PRIME MINISTER OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA, CANBERRA.

TELEGRAM NO. 24 Ottawa, 15th December, 1939.

CODE

MOST IMMEDIATE

Am much obliged by your advising me in your telegram of this date of your intention to make statement for publication in the Australian press of Saturday morning. Understanding here has been that agreed public statement would be issued in all four capitals at agreed time after initialling of memorandum. I understand United Kingdom authorities have taken up this matter with you. This agreed statement could then be followed by individual supplementary statements as each Government thought desirable. We are hoping very shortly to arrange matters for final initialling here and in that event would suggest the time for simultaneous release. I very much hope it will be possible for you to postpone statement in the meantime.

LK

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268306 AIR

FROM: THE PRIME MINISTER OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA, CANBERRA

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA.

IMMEDIATE

CODE

CANBERRA, December 16th, 1939.

I have received your telegram December 13th regarding Air Training Scheme. I greatly regret your request was not received until after statement had actually been released. Wish, however, to make it quite clear that statement related only to training etc. in Australia as proposed under United Kingdom - Australia Agreement and was issued after consultation and with the concurrence of the United Kingdom Air Ministry.

We are awaiting advice from you regarding final initialling of Empire Agreement and arrangements of time for simultaneous release. I shall be most happy to cooperate with you and other parties in this regard.

W.L.M. K.

PRIME MINISTER OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA

Rec'd Ottawa: 2.30 A.M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

A.T

C 268307

UNITED KINGDOM AIR MISSION

House of Commons

Ottawa

December 16, 1939.

Honourable Norman Rogers,
Minister of National Defence,
Ottawa, Ontario.

Dear Mr. Rogers:

Referring to your letter to me of December the 8th.

On the understanding that the numbers to be incorporated or organized at any time will be the subject of discussion between the two governments, the United Kingdom Government accepts in principle, as being consonant with the intention of Paragraph 15 of the Memorandum of Agreement that the United Kingdom Government, on the request of the Canadian Government, would arrange that Canadian pupils, when passing out from the training scheme, will be incorporated in or organized as units and formations of the Royal Canadian Air Force in the field. The detailed methods by which this can be done would be arranged by an intergovernmental committee for this purpose under Paragraph 15.

Yours sincerely,

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268308

Office of the High Commissioner
for the United Kingdom,
Earnscliffe,
Ottawa.
18th December,1939.

S E C R E T.

My dear Dr.Skelton,

Thank you for your letter of the 16th December regarding the telegram which you had received from the Prime Minister of Australia about his statement on the subject of the air training scheme.

Mr. Menzies' intimation that his statement was issued after consultation with and with the concurrence of the United Kingdom Air Ministry came as a complete surprise to me and immediately on receipt of your letter I took the matter up by telegraph with London. I have now received a reply stating that it seems clear that there was a genuine misunderstanding. The United Kingdom authorities thought that it had been impressed upon Mr. Fairbairn in conversation with the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Air that if the Prime Minister of the Commonwealth felt that he had no alternative but to make a statement at this stage, he should confine this to the United Kingdom-Australia agreement and, generally speaking, should not go beyond what Mr. Fairbairn had himself broadcast in Canada. The United Kingdom authorities further understood that Mr. Menzies would give advance intimation to them and to the other Dominions concerned of the purport of the proposed statement.

Yours sincerely,

Gerald Campbell.

Dr. O.D. Skelton,
Under-Secretary of State
for External Affairs,
OTTAWA.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R

AirT

C 268309

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA

TO: THE PRIME MINISTER OF NEW ZEALAND, WELLINGTON.

MOST IMMEDIATE

TELEGRAM NO. 17

EN CLAIR

Ottawa, December 18th, 1939.

Telegram follows immediately giving information regarding non-confidential details which will be published in press here Tuesday morning corresponding roughly to midday on Wednesday in New Zealand. We are also advising Australia.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R

Air T.

C 268310

FROM: THE PRIME MINISTER OF CANADA OTTAWA

TO: THE PRIME MINISTER OF NEW ZEALAND WELLINGTON

Ottawa, 18th December, 1939

No 2.

Telegram No. 18

Code

Most Immediate

I understand from United Kingdom High Commissioner you desire further information regarding non-confidential details. We shall give to press, for publication Tuesday morning, corresponding roughly to ~~noon~~ Wednesday in New Zealand, the non-confidential portions of the memorandum of agreement. In immediately following telegram we shall summarize in clear the paragraphs of the memorandum that are being released and in confidential telegram we shall indicate the secret sections omitted. A similar communication is being sent to Australia. The United Kingdom authorities understand above arrangement.

PRIME MINISTER.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT.
Epreuve illisible

R

Air T.

C 268311

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS CANADA

TO: THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN LONDON

Ottawa, 18th December, 1939

Telegram No. 670

Secret

Cypher

Most Immediate

In my message of December 15th, No. 666, I asked that at least twelve hours notice should be given of release of information regarding landing of Canadian overseas forces. I now learn through many sources that landing was completed at noon yesterday and I understand that Canadian Press have been advised that release may be expected tonight. Apparently United Kingdom censors have passed freely telegrams from members of troops to relatives in Canada. This makes position with respect to press most difficult and we would appreciate immediate word as to possibility of early release and hour arranged.

L R

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R

AirT.

C268312

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.OTTAWA

TO: THE PRIME MINISTER OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA, CANBERRA.

MOST IMMEDIATE

TELEGRAM NO.23

No 1.

✓ EN CLAIR

Ottawa, December 18th,1939.

Telegram follows immediately giving information regarding non-confidential details which will be published in press here Tuesday morning corresponding roughly to mid-day on Wednesday in Australia. We are also advising New Zealand.

LL

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R

AirT

C 268313

FROM: THE PRIME MINISTER OF CANADA OTTAWA

TO: THE PRIME MINISTER OF AUSTRALIA CANBERRA

Ottawa, 18th December, 1939

Telegram No. 26

No 2

Code

Most Immediate

Your telegram December 18th regarding non-confidential details.

We shall give to press, for publication Tuesday morning, corresponding to early afternoon Wednesday in Australia, the non-confidential portions of the memorandum of agreement. In immediately following telegram we shall summarize in clear the paragraphs of the memorandum that are being released and in confidential telegram we shall indicate the secret sections omitted. A similar communication is being sent to New Zealand. The United Kingdom authorities understand alone arrangement.

PRIME MINISTER.

LR

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R

"R"

Air.

C 268316

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS, LONDON.

MOST SECRET

TELEGRAM

CYPHER

MOST IMMEDIATE

Ottawa, December 16th, 1939.

No ... 128

Most Secret Air Training Agreement. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister Begins:

1. In my telegram this morning I referred to announcement made yesterday by the Prime Minister of Australia. We were advised yesterday morning by Prime Minister of Australia that he proposed to issue a statement regarding Agreement between Great Britain and Australia. The Prime Minister of New Zealand cabled us he had received similar information. We immediately cabled suggesting statement be deferred in view of arrangement for simultaneous issue of agreed public statement in all four capitals after initialling of Memorandum.

2. We have this morning received a reply regretting that our request had not been received until after statement had actually been released. The Prime Minister of Australia adds that the statement related only to training in Australia as proposed under the United Kingdom-Australian Agreement and that it was issued after consultation with and concurrence of the United Kingdom Air Ministry. He adds that on advice of final initialling of Empire Agreement Australia will arrange for simultaneous release, presumably of agreed press statement. I am bringing this to your attention in view of the fact that announcement of Australian-

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268315

United Kingdom Agreement, which is as was stated in that announcement yesterday "part of the vast Empire Scheme of Air training", is indicated as having been made with United Kingdom concurrence. I cannot begin to express my amazement that without consultation with the Government of Canada, the United Kingdom Air Ministry should have concurred in the issue of the statement by Australia before agreement had been reached between all parties. I need hardly add that the publication has caused great embarrassment to our Government in relation to other Commonwealth Governments as well as to the press and people of our own country. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Air T.

FROM: THE PRIME MINISTER OF CANADA, OTTAWA C 268316

TO: THE PRIME MINISTER OF NEW ZEALAND, WELLINGTON.

TELEGRAM NO. 15 Ottawa, 16th December, 1939

CYPHER

IMMEDIATE

1. Your telegram of December 15th regarding the Australian statement as to Air Training Scheme.

2. A telegram from Canberra was received here a little earlier yesterday morning , our December 15th, stating that the Prime Minister proposed to make a statement for publication in the Australian press on Saturday morning Australian reckoning. We immediately cabled suggesting the statement be deferred.

3. We have this morning received a further telegram from Canberra regretting our request was not received until statement had actually been released, adding that it had been issued after consultation with and concurrence of the United Kingdom Air Ministry. The Australian Prime Minister states that on advice from us regarding final initialling of Empire Agreement, which he distinguishes from the United Kingdom - Australian Agreement, he will arrange for simultaneous release.

4. We had expected to initial agreement yesterday afternoon . If this had been arranged we proposed to suggest immediate release of agreed press statement in New Zealand and Australia, and publication in United Kingdom and Canadian papers the following morning. I had also arranged to make a broadcast on the evening of the succeeding day and to give further non-confidential details to the press a day later. There is, however, one matter affecting the United Kingdom and Canada still outstanding and while we have been doing our best

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268317

to obtain a decision on this question it now appears that initialling will have to be deferred until after a reply from London has been received. We expect this will be settled very shortly and shall advise you of hour arranged for initialling after which agreed press statement may be issued as soon as meets your convenience. It has been our understanding that any government may supplement this preliminary common statement later by reference to any matters which it has not been arranged to keep secret. On this latter point I understand United Kingdom High Commissioner here has communicated with you. We shall send simultaneous telegram to Australia for such action as may there be considered desirable.

PRIME MINISTER.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS, LONDON

C 268318

IMMEDIATE

Ottawa, 16th December, 1939.

MOST SECRET

CYPHER

No.127

No.127. Most Secret. Following from my Prime Minister for your Prime Minister, Begins:

1. After several days of conference between members of the Government and the United Kingdom Air Mission, on the important question of the status in the field of Canadian personnel trained under the training plan, Lord Riverdale, as Chairman of the Mission, asked me to meet him yesterday morning to see if we could not agree on the statement which, if made by him, would be regarded as a satisfactory reply to a letter on this subject written to him by the Minister of National Defence on December 8th.

2. The letter of the Minister of National Defence was as follows: Quote

My dear Lord Riverdale:

Paragraph 15 of the memorandum of agreement between the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand, relating to training of pilots and aircraft crews in Canada, and their subsequent service, reads as follows:

> "The United Kingdom Government undertakes that pupils of Canada, Australia and New Zealand shall, after training is completed, be identified with their respective Dominions, either by the method of organizing Dominion Units and formations or in some other way, such methods to be agreed upon with the respective Dominion Governments concerned. The United Kingdom Government will initiate inter-governmental discussions to this end."

In accordance with our conversation of yesterday, I understand that you accept as the proper interpretation of this paragraph that Canadian personnel from the training

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268319

plan will, on request from the Canadian Government, be organized in Royal Canadian Air Force units and formations in the field. I shall be obliged if you will confirm this interpretation of paragraph 15, by letter.

Your sincerely,

(Signed) Norman McL. Rogers

UNQUOTE.

3. Lord Riverdale and I agreed upon the wording of a statement which each of us regarded as expressing the true position, and which he was prepared to sign and I to accept, such acceptance to be followed by signature of the Agreement by Lord Riverdale and myself.

4. Lord Riverdale left my office to prepare a letter to the Minister of National Defence embodying this statement. To my surprise Lord Riverdale later telephoned me to say that, having shown the proposed communication to the High Commissioner for the United Kingdom and to one of his colleagues on the United Kingdom Mission, they had said to him that, as cables had gone to London from Ottawa last night, they thought he should not sign until a reply to these cables had been received. I drew Lord Riverdale's attention to the announcement made yesterday by the Prime Minister of Australia that an agreement had been reached between Australia and the United Kingdom, which statement made public most of the features of the joint training plan. I pointed out that our Government had been greatly embarrassed in consequence, and I added that, seeing he and I were agreed on the solution of the only matter outstanding, it was most desirable that the Agreement itself should be signed without further delay.

5. I therefore suggested that Lord Riverdale communicate by telephone with London, advising the Air Ministry of the agreement that he and I had reached. To my surprise I received from Lord Riverdale this evening the following communication which, he informs me, was dictated to him over the telephone as

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268320

the reply to be made to the Canadian Government instead of that which he had agreed with me that he would make to the letter of the Minister of National Defence.

6. The letter follows:

QUOTE:

My dear Prime Minister,

I have discussed on the telephone this evening with Sir Kingsley Wood the matters which formed the subject of our conversation this afternoon relating to the letter which I received on the 8th December from the Minister of National Defence on the meaning of paragraph 15 of the Memorandum of Agreement.

I have now been authorized to reply to the above mentioned letter from Mr. Rogers in the following terms:-

> "On the understanding that the numbers to be incorporated at any time would be the subject of agreement between the two Governments, the United Kingdom Government accepts in principle as being consonant with the intention of paragraph 15 of the Memorandum of Agreement that the United Kingdom Government on the request of the Canadian Government would agree to the incorporation of Canadian pupils when passing out from the training scheme into units of the Royal Canadian Air Force in the field.
>
> The detailed method by which this will be done will be arranged by an Inter-Governmental Committee for this purpose under paragraph 15.
>
> It would be a condition that the factor governing the numbers of such pupils to be so incorporated at any one time should be the financial contribution which the Canadian Government have already declared themselves ready to make towards the cost of the training scheme".

If the foregoing proposals meet with the approval of the Canadian Government I am authorized to sign the Memorandum of Agreement forthwith.

Yours sincerely,

(Signed) Riverdale

UNQUOTE

7. ....

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

7. After consultation with my colleagues, I have handed to Lord Riverdale a reply to his letter in the following terms:

QUOTE:

Dear Lord Riverdale,

This morning you asked if I would meet you in order that, together, we might endeavour to reach a decision with respect to the one matter which has been holding up the signing of the agreement respecting the Joint Air Training Plan.

I met you at my office, and together we discussed the matter both before and after luncheon; before luncheon, in the presence of my colleague, the Minister of Finance, and after luncheon, in the presence of my colleagues, the Minister of Finance and the Minister of National Defence.

At the beginning of the afternoon's conversations, you presented us with a statement which you said you were prepared to embody in a letter to Mr. Rogers in reply to his letter to you of December the 8th. In the course of our conversations, a few slight changes were made in the statement. The statement was then rewritten in the light of these modifications, to read as follows:

> "Replying to your letter of December the 8th, knowing the earnest desire of the United Kingdom Government that the Royal Canadian Air Force shall be directly represented in the field, I can readily agree that in carrying out paragraph 15 the United Kingdom Government will, if requested by the Canadian Government, arrange that the Canadian personnel from the training plan will be organized as Royal Canadian Air Force Units and formations in the field; the detailed methods by which this will be done to be arranged by an inter-governmental committee to be appointed for this purpose under paragraph 15".

You stated repeatedly that you were prepared to reply to Mr. Rogers' letter in the terms of the statement above set forth, if, on behalf of my colleagues, I would agree to this being a satisfactory reply.

As you will recall, I took the position with each of my colleagues that the above statement accurately embodied what the Government had considered acceptable as the policy to be followed in carrying out paragraph 15 of the Memorandum of Agreement, and I agreed to the letter which you proposed to send Mr. Rogers, and that upon its receipt by him, I would sign the Agreement itself on behalf of the Government of Canada.

At the time of this understanding between us, there was no question of the statement being subject to further revision.

In the concluding paragraph of your letter this evening, just received, a factor which was never so much as referred to in any conversations I have had with you is now being made a condition precedent to a reply on your part to Mr.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268323

Rogers' letter in the terms agreed to this afternoon. This factor is that the organization of R.C.A.F. units is to be measured by the cold consideration of financial contribution, disregarding entirely Canada's heavy contribution of fighting men in the way of pilots, observers and gunners.

My colleagues and I are prepared to abide by the terms of the Agreement reached with you this afternoon, and as soon as Mr. Rogers' letter has been replied to in accordance with the statement handed to us and agreed upon, I am prepared, on behalf of the Government, to sign the Memorandum of Agreement.

I regret to have to inform you that, in reference to this vital matter, the Government cannot regard your letter as a satisfactory reply to Mr. Rogers' letter.

Yours sincerely,

W.L. Mackenzie King

UNQUOTE

8. I fear there is grave danger of the whole Joint Training Plan being seriously imperilled unless agreement between our two Governments can be reached without further delay.

9. Lord Riverdale has been present at most of the discussions which have taken place between members of his Mission and members of our Government, and I feel that in the statement which he agreed to this afternoon, he was sincerely expressing the opinion which he believed accurately described the intent and purpose of the clause in the Agreement to which it refers. My colleagues hold the same view. In these circumstances I feel that the Government of the United Kingdom would wish to support the head of their Mission.

10. I cannot too strongly impress upon you the importance which the people of Canada will attach to the principle involved in the letter of the Minister of National Defence, of December 8th, affecting as it does Canadian fighting personnel in the field.

11. We are most anxious to conclude the arrangement and get under way with the plan as rapidly as possible, and will greatly appreciate any steps which you may find it possible to take to ensure this end. Ends. MESSAGE ENDS.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268323 Air

FROM: THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE PRIME MINISTER OF CANADA, OTTAWA

TO: THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE PRIME MINISTER OF AUSTRALIA, CANBERRA

MOST IMMEDIATE

SECRET

CODE

Ottawa, 17th December, 1939.

Air Training Agreement without any change in substance was signed by United Kingdom and Canadian representatives shortly after midnight. As no newspapers are published in Canada on Sunday, I shall give a general broadcast Sunday night at nine o'clock dealing with Canadian background and with general terms of Agreement. This broadcast with the agreed press statement will be published in our Monday morning press, and statement will also be published Monday morning in United Kingdom. I would therefore suggest that agreed press statement be released at any convenient time approximating nine o'clock Sunday night Ottawa time, followed at any time by such supplementary material as your Government considers desirable. We expect to release the non-confidential details to press here for Monday afternoon or Tuesday morning papers but see no reason why your Government should not release similar material at any time after issue of agreed release. Simple announcement that Agreement had been signed or initialled on behalf of all four Governments may be made on radio here Sunday morning and your Government may wish if convenient to adopt similar course before issuing the agreed press statement.

PRIME MINISTER

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268324

FROM: THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE PRIME MINISTER OF CANADA, OTTAWA

TO: THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE PRIME MINISTER OF NEW ZEALAND, WELLINGTON

MOST IMMEDIATE

SECRET

CODE

Ottawa, 17th December, 1939.

Air Training Agreement without any change in substance was signed by United Kingdom and Canadian representatives shortly after midnight. As no newspapers are published in Canada on Sunday, I shall give a general broadcast Sunday night at nine o'clock dealing with Canadian background and with general terms of Agreement. This broadcast with the agreed press statement will be published in our Monday morning press, and statement will also be published Monday morning in United Kingdom. I would therefore suggest that agreed press statement be released at any convenient time approximating nine o'clock Sunday night Ottawa time, followed at any time by such supplementary material as your Government considers desirable. We expect to release the non-confidential details to press here for Monday afternoon or Tuesday morning papers but see no reason why your Government should not release similar material at any time after issue of agreed release. Simple announcement that agreement had been signed or initialled on behalf of all four Governments may be made on radio here Sunday morning and your Government may wish if convenient to adopt similar course before issuing the agreed press statement.

PRIME MINISTER

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C26832

FROM: THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE PRIME MINISTER OF CANADA, OTTAWA

TO: THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE PRIME MINISTER OF NEW ZEALAND, WELLINGTON
{ " " of Australia, Canberra. }

MOST IMMEDIATE

SECRET

CODE

Ottawa, 17th December, 1939.

201

Air Training Agreement without any change in substance was signed by United Kingdom and Canadian representatives shortly after midnight. As no newspapers are published in Canada on Sunday, I shall give a general broadcast Sunday night at nine o'clock dealing with Canadian background and with general terms of Agreement. This broadcast with the agreed press statement will be published in our Monday morning press, and statement will also be published Monday morning in United Kingdom. I would therefore suggest that agreed press statement be released at any convenient time approximating nine o'clock Sunday night Ottawa time, followed at any time by such supplementary material as your Government considers desirable. We expect to release the non-confidential details to press here for Monday afternoon or Tuesday morning papers but see no reason why your Government should not release similar material at any time after issue of agreed release. Simple announcement that agreement had been signed or initialled on behalf of all four Governments may be made on radio here Sunday morning and your Government may wish if convenient to adopt similar course before issuing the agreed press statement.

PRIME MINISTER

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268326

FROM: THE PRIME MINISTER OF CANADA

TO: THE PRIME MINISTER OF AUSTRALIA, CANBERRA.
{New Zealand, Wellington

MOST IMMEDIATE

Ottawa, December 17th, 1939.

EN CLAIR

No 2

As previously indicated I shall broadcast tonight at nine o'clock regarding the air training scheme. After some preliminary observations about the origins of the proposal and the negotiations at Ottawa, I shall explain how the joint training programme in Canada is coordinated with air training proceeding simultaneously in New Zealand, Australia and the United Kingdom. I shall then outline the various stages in training of pilots, observers and gunners, and describe the extent of the training establishment required in Canada. This will be followed by an estimate of the cost of the entire programme of training in Canada for the period agreed upon. It will be stated, without giving specific percentages, that aside from the United Kingdom contribution of aircraft and the costs of Canadian initial and elementary training, the costs of the general programme are divided in proportion to the use made of the advanced training facilities by the pupils of Australia, New Zealand and Canada. It will also be stated that the organization and executive command of the training schools in Canada will be entrusted to the Royal Canadian Air Force, with a supervisory Board under the Chairmanship of the Minister of National Defence and including representatives of the Governments of the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand. It will be indicated that all four Governments will cooperate in the provision of staff and teaching personnel. The concluding sections of the broadcast will relate the present plan to the pre-war discussions on joint training between Canada and the United Kingdom and will indicate the place of the air training plan in the broad picture of Canada's military programme.

PRIME MINISTER

ALSO REPEATED TO: THE PRIME MINISTER OF NEW ZEALAND.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES.
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA

TO: THE PRIME MINISTER OF NEW ZEALAND

C 268327

IMPORTANT

CODE

NO. 16

Ottawa, December 17th, 1939.

On the completion of the negotiations for the Air Training Agreement may I say how greatly we have appreciated the spirit of co-operation shown by your Government throughout and the value of the technical contribution made by your representatives in the drafting of the project. We regard it as a good augury of the success of the efforts put forth by each of the members of the Commonwealth participating in the project and the effectiveness of the whole plan.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268328

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS, LONDON

IMMEDIATE

SECRET

CODE

No. 129

Ottawa, 17th December, 1939.

No.129. Secret. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister, Begins:

I am glad to advise you that shortly after midnight the Commonwealth Air Training Agreement was signed by Lord Riverdale and myself. Ends.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR
EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268329 AIR

FROM: THE PRIME MINISTER OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA, CANBERRA

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA.

MOST IMMEDIATE

CODE

CANBERRA, December 18th, 1939.

December 18th. Many thanks for your telegram 17th December, Air Training Agreement. Regarding non-confidential details would be glad if you would telegraph me urgently statement you propose to make on this point.

PRIME MINISTER OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268330

FROM: THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE PRIME MINISTER OF NEW ZEALAND, WELLINGTON.

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA.

CODE

WELLINGTON, December 19, 1939.

I have now received your telegram of December 18th, setting out non confidential matters and secret sections of memorandum of Air Agreement. I would like to take this opportunity to state how much your action in supplying me with these and other details is appreciated. There can be little doubt that cooperative nature of Air Plan will greatly enlarge and stimulate war effort while at the same time strengthening still further the bond of unity within the Commonwealth.

PRIME MINISTER.

Received Ottawa 5.35 a.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

A.T.

C268332

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA

TO: THE PRIME MINISTER OF AUSTRALIA, CANBERRA.

TELEGRAM NO. 29

CODE

CONFIDENTIAL

Ottawa, 19th December, 1939.

Section 13 of Air Training Agreement provides for appointment of a Financial Adviser by Government of Canada in consultation with other Governments concerned. Any reports made by Adviser are to be made available by Canadian Government to other Governments. Our Government has recommended B.J. Roberts, Member of National Harbours Board and former Assistant Deputy Minister of Finance. Members of United Kingdom Air Mission have interviewed Roberts and approved appointment. They are cabling for concurrence of United Kingdom Government. Please advise if you concur.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

DIT.

C 268332

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA

TO: THE PRIME MINISTER OF NEW ZEALAND, WELLINGTON.

TELEGRAM NO. 21

CODE

CONFIDENTIAL

Ottawa, 19th December, 1939.

Section 13 of Air Training Agreement provides for appointment of a Financial Adviser by Government of Canada in consultation with other Governments concerned. Any reports made by Adviser are to be made available by Canadian Government to other Governments. Our Government has recommended B.J.Roberts, Member of National Harbours Board and former Assistant Deputy Minister of Finance. Members of United Kingdom Air Mission have interviewed Roberts and approved appointment. They are cabling for concurrence of United Kingdom Government. Please advise if you concur.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

Air

C 268332

TELEGRAM

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

SECRET

CYPHER

NO. 126.

LONDON, December 21st, 1939.

No. 126. Secret. Following for your Prime Minister from my Prime Minister, Begins:

On my return from France, I have been able to consider your telegrams December 16th, No. 127 and No. 128 and your telegram December 17th, No. 129. I thank you for informing me of signature of Agreement by your telegram No. 129, and am glad to think difficulties referred to in your telegram No. 127 were subsequently found capable of adjustment. As regards your telegram No. 128, I understand that our High Commissioner has since explained our position in the matter. It is evident that some regrettable misunderstanding must have occurred. I am happy to think these matters now belong to the past, and that Air Training Scheme, which is so important to all of us will now get under way as rapidly as possible.

For our part I can assure you that we shall spare no efforts to ensure its success. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

Rec'd Ottawa: 10.45 A.M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R

Air T.

C 268334

C

FROM: THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE PRIME MINISTER OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA, CANBERRA.

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA.

IMMEDIATE

CONFIDENTIAL

CODE

Canberra, December 21st, 1939.

Confidential. Your telegram December 19th, No. 29. My Government agree to proposed appointment of Mr. Roberts as Financial Adviser.

Prime Minister of the Commonwealth of Australia

Received Ottawa 10.00 a.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

AirT

Subject Resignation of Chief of Australian Air Staff

C 268335

Date December 21,1939 Publication New York Times

AUSTRALIAN AIR CHIEF QUITS FOR 'PRINCIPLE'

Disagreement With Government on War Policy Indicated

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Dec. 20 —Air Vice Marshal Stanley J. Goble, chief of the Australian air staff, has announced his resignation. It is authoritatively stated that the ground is "a matter of high personal principle."

Pending a statement by Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies, who at present refuses to comment, the exact reason is a matter for speculation, but it is known that some senior officers of the Australian Air Force dissent from important features of government air policy, including failure to dispatch an air expeditionary force abroad.

They also are concerned over the apparent merger of the identity of Australians in the Empire Air training scheme after recruits are trained in Australia. They want to insure the formation of distinctively Australian squadrons cooperating with the Royal Air Force.

The Melbourne Herald says that if this is the issue Marshal Goble's resignation is easily understood. The paper believes the reasons for the merger cannot outweigh those against it. A separate identity for the Australian Air Force is called vital for the sake of Australia's traditions of nationhood, maintenance of the home effort and the force's fighting efficiency. The Melbourne Age also protests against the merger, declaring it is without parallel or precedent.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R

AirT.

C268336

FROM: THE RT. HONOURABLE THE PRIME MINISTER OF NEW ZEALAND.

TO: THE RT. HONOURABLE THE PRIME MINISTER OF CANADA.

CODE

Wellington, December 23rd, 1939

Your confidential telegram No. 21, December 19th, Air Training Agreement. New Zealand Government have full confidence in your judgment and are quite prepared to agree to selection of Mr. Roberts.

PRIME MINISTER

Rec'd Ottawa 1 p.m. Dec. 22nd.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Draft approved by Mr Rogers

C 268337

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA

TO: THE PRIME MINISTER OF AUSTRALIA, CANBERRA, AUSTRALIA.

TELEGRAM NO.

CODE

Ottawa, December 26th, 1939.

re Administration of Air Training plan. In letters exchanged between Canadian Minister of National Defence and Captain Balfour of which Mr. Fairbairn was cognizant, and has since approved, it was indicated that it was proposed to set up a general supervisory board. Its main duties will be to supervise financial administration and observe and check progress in setting up the training organization. It will be under the Chairmanship of the Minister of National Defence and it is proposed to include representatives of the United Kingdom, Australia and the New Zealand governments, in addition to the Minister of Finance, Minister of Transport and Deputy Minister for Air and Chief of Air Staff. I should be greatly obliged if you could indicate the Australian government representative on the board.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

all re

Similar to New Zealand.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

Air Training
Vol. 11

OFFICE OF THE PRIME MINISTER

C268338

MEMORANDUM

January 2nd, 1940.

For the Prime Minister:

Re: Air Training Plan

A copy of Captain Balfour's speech, which was re-broadcast on -- December the 29th, is attached. A number of copies have been obtained from the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, and will be available for use in the preparation of speeches in Parliament.

J. W. P.

J. W. P.

Yes thanks
Please place on file with other papers re
IC
2-1-40

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Air T.

C268339

Department of National Defence

Press Liaison Office

December 29, 1939.
Release No. 134

Ottaw The following statement was made yesterday in London by Captain Harold Balfour M.P., British Under-Secretary for Air dealing with the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

"I was sent out to Canada as a Minister of our Government for the purpose of assisting in the negotiations between the United Kingdom, the Australian and the New Zealand Air Training Missions in their deliberations with the Canadian authorities. From first to last it was a voyage full of interest. We left Liverpool on Friday, the 13th of October, - unlucky day - in a darkened ship - and we zigzagged our way across to Montreal which we reached on Sunday the 23rd. We never sighted an enemy and indeed no ships of any description until we entered the Gulf of St. Lawrence. When I arrived, I found the British Mission, which had got there the week before, already hard at work preparing the ground-work of the scheme and that no light task especially of such magnitude. Day and night they, and the staff of the Ministry of National Defence of the Canadian Government, and the officers of the Royal Canadian Air Force, were hard at it making calculations, preparing figures to support proposals, and sometimes to refute them. Like in England, those Government officials of the service departments knew no rest, and twice, at later stages during the negotiations, owing to developments and new proposals we had to scrip great thick files of carefully prepared facts and calculations. Each time we did this, I felt that those who were bearing the heat and the burden of the day in the way of working out and getting into neatly bound tight books, full particulars - what was required - what was the result - what was the cost - I felt we might reasonably say, let us at least have Sunday evening off, but instead of this each time they just went out of the room saying, "we'll have it ready - three days - four days - or in whatever the time required was.

scrap?

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268340

"The next most striking point to this devotion to work was the enthusiastic support of the wide and bold picture of the Empire Training Scheme and we got this support not only from those who were concerned directly in working out the scheme, but from members of all sections of the general public in Canada. A few days after my arrival the Australian Delegation, under Mr. Fairbairn the recently appointed Minister for Air in Australia, and the New Zealand Delegation, under Group Captain Saunders, joined us in Ottawa - so here we had representatives of the United Kingdom and the three great Dominions. We sat down to discuss, to argue, and finally to agree, and with the result thousands of young men from the plains of Australia, from the pastures of New Zealand, from the towns and cities in this country, are going to meet young men from the Prairies of Canada to undertake their joint training on Canadian soil.

"From what I know to be the intentions of the Canadian authorities who are going to be responsible for running this scheme, every young man can look forward to a happy and interesting training period during which he is going to be made feel at home in the Dominion on whose territory he is going to be doing his work. And while this is going on in Canada, a still greater number of Australians and New Zealanders will be carrying out their training in their own Dominion so that as the effort of the complete training scheme increases its momentum, there will gush forth from all partners concerned, a steadily increasing flow of pilots and air crews to man the gigantic air force which is being planned to rule the skies.

"Now if you ask me my chief impression of our negotiations, I should say, informality. We always met as friends out to agree and the difficulties - and there are always difficulties - were approached in this spirit.

"Mr. MacKenzie King, the Prime Minister of Canada, at an early stage in the negotiations, appointed a committee of his ministers, to do with detailed work on behalf of the Canadian Government and though our conferences with this committee were long and sometimes

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

we approached problems from different angles, nevertheless, we felt that at any hour of the day or night, we could ring up and we could say this - "Minister of Finance, can I come round and see you," - or sometimes, -"Mr. Rogers, Minister of National Defence, please could we meet after dinner to-night to discuss so and so." The reply always came back "Certainly I will arrange it," or sometimes, "come along and we will talk it over during dinner.". It was always a friendly spirit wishing to get on with the job which we were all of us engaged upon. This Empire Training Scheme, built up on the solid foundation in the three dominions of the Royal Canadian, Royal Australian and Royal New Zealand Air Forces - and without such a base, I wouldn't feel as confident as I do on the successful production of the vast numbers of the trained personnel that is required.

"I needn't enlarge upon the more technical aspects of the scheme and its scope because these have already been the subject of announcements by all the Governments concerned. I would only say, as one who took part in the negotiations, that all of us wish those responsible for running the scheme and those who are going to be trained under it, the very best of fortune.

"But I would like to tell you something of my impression of Canada's reaction to the war and her war efforts. Coming from darkened England with the possibility at any hour of the day or night of air raid alarms, it is curious to go into a country, also at war alongside us in the common cause, but where motor cars can still have blazing headlights, streets are lit, electric signs go on flashing their colours, there is no restriction on petrol, no rationing and war news in the newspapers isn't about events just across the Channel or in the North Sea, but about events thousands of miles away on the other side of the Atlantic.

"Yet under these circumstances, I felt that Canada was fully war conscious in her preparations to play her part in the struggle before us. And I don't believe this could be so unless the

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

citizens of Canada didn't feel just as strongly as we do in England, as to the justice and as to the truth of the events leading up to the war and the causes of the conflict. With less actual close touch to the conditions of war, I feel it a tribute to the breadth of character and depth of feeling that the Canadian people are every bit as determined as we are in this country to throw their all into the fight.

"Canada is like this country and the other Dominions in feeling that we're probably in for a long war and we must make our preparations accordingly. Her problem of changing her economic and industrial life from a peace-time to war-time basis is a big one. On the Pacific Coast, she's got fishing and lumber trade, on the Prairies vast wheat tracts, in the East industry and mining, and each of those different branches of national life present separate problems and need separate treatment for this change-over from peace-time to war-time economy. Yet it is being done and when we think that the war has only been on us some four months, Canada's actual industrial effort is something to be admired.

"While her plans for production of all sorts of munitions are on a vast scale and they are bound to give us a contribution of inestimable value growing month by month with the passage of war time. Now as far as air craft, which is my particular province, are concerned, Canada has got a young aviation industry, but one which, in co-operation with our home Government, is being developed into an organization of first-class importance. I am afraid I am not allowed to tell you the types or the numbers of aircraft that we hope will be produced by Dominion resources, but this I can say, we need those aircraft, and we are grateful for the effort which is being made to produce them, and we are looking forward to having the full benefit of a very considerable production.

"Now I know that young men of Canada like the young men of all other parts of the Empire are only anxious to have one question answered. This is the question. "How can we best serve and help?". I hope and I believe that this Empire Air Training Scheme will, to a considerable extent, give the answer to this question to those young men."

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268343

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA

TO: THE PRIME MINISTER OF NEW ZEALAND, WELLINGTON.

TELEGRAM NO. 23 Ottawa, December 30th, 1939.

CODE

Administration of Air Training plan. In letters exchanged between Canadian Minister of National Defence and Captain Balfour of which Group Captain Saunders was cognizant, it was indicated that it was proposed to set up a general supervisory board. Its main duties will be to supervise financial administration and observe and check progress in setting up the training organization. It will be under the Chairmanship of the Minister of National Defence and it is proposed to include representatives of the United Kingdom, New Zealand and Australian governments, in addition to the Minister of Finance, Minister of Transport and Deputy Minister for Air and Chief of Air Staff. I should be greatly obliged if you could indicate the New Zealand government representative on the board.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 2683

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA

TO: THE PRIME MINISTER OF AUSTRALIA, CANBERRA, AUSTRALIA.

TELEGRAM NO. 32

Ottawa, December 30th, 1939.

CODE

Administration of Air Training plan. In letters exchanged between Canadian Minister of National Defence and Captain Balfour of which Mr. Fairbairn was cognizant, and has since approved, it was indicated that it was proposed to set up a general supervisory board. Its main duties will be to supervise financial administration and observe and check progress in setting up the training organization. It will be under the Chairmanship of the Minister of National Defence and it is proposed to include representatives of the United Kingdom, Australia and the New Zealand governments, in addition to the Minister of Finance, Minister of Transport and Deputy Minister for Air and Chief of Air Staff. I should be greatly obliged if you could indicate the Australian government representative on the board.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268345

Ottawa, January 3, 1940

J. W. Sanderson, Esq.,
President,
Prince Albert Federal Liberal Association,
Prince Albert, Saskatchewan.

Dear Mr. Sanderson: File F. 39

Since the receipt of your letter of December the 18th, regarding the Air Training Plan, the Prime Minister has been giving its representations his close personal attention, and has taken the matter up with the Minister of National Defence and the Minister of Transport.

Yours faithfully,

H. R. L. Henry,
Private Secretary.

H/S

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

FROM THE PRIME MINISTER

TO C 268 345 A

Mr. Henry

Pls. write and say: since receipt of letter, have been giving it my close personal attention, and have taken up its representations with both the Minister of Defence and the Minister of Transport.

(-- that is all that can be said.)

2/1/ 40 (EH)

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Air T.

HH/FM
28.12.39

C268346

File HH.

Confidential

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER:

Re: Air Training Plan

I took up Mr. Sanderson's representations with Mr. Howe's Secretary, and sent him a copy of the letter. As a result, Commander Edwards spoke to me later, and advised me that it had been decided to use Prince Albert as an elementary flying training school, and that Saskatoon would be the center for the advanced schools. He said he was giving me this information in the strictest confidence, and asked that it be treated as such.

On my asking Commander Edwards if this decision was final, he said that they were making their surveys on that basis, but that if any change was to be considered, it would have to be decided by the Air officials of the Department of National Defence, by whom the original selections were made.

In view of this, do you wish to take the matter up further with Mr. Rogers?

H. R. L. H.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

J. W. SANDERSON,
President

J. H. LINDSAY, K.C.,
1st Vice-President

GEO. L. DEMPSTER,
Secretary-Treasurer

TELEPHONE 2029

C 268347

The Federal Constituency of Prince Albert
Liberal Association

Address you envelope to:
THE SECRETARY,
PRINCE ALBERT FEDERAL
LIBERAL ASSOCIATION,
Suite 1, Masonic Temple Bldg.

When replying please refer to File No. F.99

PRINCE ALBERT, SASK.,

December 18, 1939.

Confidential

H. R. L. Henry, Esq.,
Private Secretary to the Right Honorable the Prime Minister,
Ottawa, Ontario.

Dear Mr. Henry:

I wonder if you could ascertain from Mr. Wilson of the Department of Transport, or some other source, just what the prospects for Prince Albert are in the Empire Training Scheme. Any information, would, of course, be kept strictly confidential.

As you know, I wrote Mr. King some two weeks ago telling him that the inspectors for the Department of Transport and the Aviation Branch had visited this point and spent two days going over the layout here. Unfortunately, however, their arrival was after a snow storm and we did not get the opportunity of showing them all the sites we had picked out, as owing to road conditions with the snow, we did not have the time necessary to view all the sites.

We were led to believe that our location was ideally situated for one of the advance air bombing and gunnery schools, which we were told would be a larger layout than the preliminary air training bases.

About ten days ago, a party of surveyers arrived in Prince Albert and are now engaged in engineering work on our present air field. This work consists of getting the contours and topography of the land, but from conversation with these men, one would be led to believe that the layout they are working on would come under one of the preliminary schools, and not for the larger bombing and gunnery units.

DEC 19 1939

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268348

Of course, it is possible that these men have no further information than we ourselves possess, on the other hand we are worried over the fact that we are informed that at present there are six engineering units working in and around Saskatoon and the street topic there is to the effect that that point is to be the centre for the advance training, and consequently other points like Prince Albert will only be used on a small scale for preliminary work.

We do know, however, that there is presently an election campaign on in our neighboring city, and no doubt all kinds of rumours are afloat there, but we also know that hardly a day passes but that some members of either the Transport of Air Branch are in Saskatoon.

If our facilities are at all adequate we certainly would appreciate full use being made of them, especially for advance training, not only for the business this city would derive, but because of the fact that a permanent construction would mean so much to us after the close of war.

I would also like to point out the desirability of having this made one of the chief centres, to counteract the propoganda of our opponents, who as you know are continually carrying on a whispering campaign against Mr. King on the "Absentee Member" question.

If it is possible for you to secure the information, we would greatly appreciate it, and I am sure Mr. King's colleagues in the Government would be more than anxious to see that his Constituency was looked after.

Yours faithfully,

J. W. Sanderson,
President.

JWS/PP

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268349

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

TO: THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN AUSTRALIA, CANBERRA

CODE

NO. 3

Ottawa, January 5, 1940

Reference British Commonwealth Air Training Plan and particularly disciplinary control, administration, etc., of Australian personnel while undergoing training in Canada.

Visiting Forces (British Commonwealth) Act, Chapter 21 Statutes of Canada 1933, makes provision whereby visiting forces retained jurisdiction in respect of discipline, administration, etc., over their own personnel or in the alternative provision for temporary attachment whereby the personnel would be subject to Royal Canadian Air Force laws and rules of administration.

It is my understanding that the latter alternative, namely temporary attachment, was in the minds of the various members of the Air Training Plan and this attachment would become operative from the arrival of the personnel at a Canadian port .

Please discuss these matters with the Australian authorities confirming this understanding.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R

Air T.

C 268350

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS CANADA

TO: THE PRIME MINISTER OF NEW ZEALAND, WELLINGTON

CODE

NO. 7

Ottawa, January 4, 1940

Reference British Commonwealth Air Training Plan and particularly disciplinary control, administration, etc., of New Zealand personnel while undergoing training in Canada.

Visiting Forces, (British Commonwealth) Act, Chapter 21, Statutes of Canada 1933, makes provision whereby visiting forces retained jurisdiction in respect of discipline, administration, etc., over their own personnel or in the alternative provision for temporary attachment whereby the personnel would be subject to Royal Canadian Air Force laws and rules of administration.

It is my understanding that the latter alternative, namely temporary attachment, was in the minds of the various members of the Air Training Plan and this attachment would become operative from the arrival of the personnel at a Canadian port.

I should be obliged if you would confirm this understanding.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Air T.

"R"

TELEGRAM

C 268351

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

SECRET

CYPHER

NO. 81

LONDON, January 20th, 1940

No. 81. Secret. Your telegram No. 65 of January 19th. Air Training Argeement signed on behalf of Australia and New Zealand by their High Commissioners on January 5th. Copy signed by them was despatched to United Kingdom High Commissioner via "Beaverford" on January 8th. Presume copies have been mailed us.

HIGH COMMISSIONER

Rec'd Ottawa 5:45 p.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R

AirT.

C 268352

FROM: HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN AUSTRALIA

TO: SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA.

CODE

NO. 16

Canberra, January 22, 1940.

No. 16. January 22nd. Your telegram No. 3 of January 5th. Fairbairn advised that matter has been referred to Air Board and that he would take matter up with me on receiving advice from them. Fairbairn ill in hospital and could not see me at Melbourne but if he is sufficiently recovered I hope to see him there on January 26th.

HIGH COMMISSIONER

Received Ottawa 10.20 A.M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

TELEGRAM

C 268352

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

SECRET

CYPHER

NO. 20

LONDON, February 24th, 1940.

No. 20. Secret. Under Article 15 of Memorandum Agreement relating to training of pilots and aircraft crews in Canada and their subsequent service, it falls to His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom to initiate inter-Governmental discussions as to methods by which pupils of Canada, Australia and New Zealand shall, after training is completed, be identified with their respective Dominions.

We should be ready for our part to enter upon these discussions at any time after the end of March and should be glad to have an expression of Canadian Government's views as to a date which would be convenient for meetings between representatives of the four Governments. In this connection we realize that any suggestion for discussions during March might be inconvenient to the Canadian Government in view of general election; but we should hope that all Governments concerned may find a date towards the middle of April acceptable.

It will be recognized that decision on matters to be discussed involves detailed consideration of questions of organization and equipment (including supply and production) which are receiving constant study here in relation to United Kingdom Government's undertaking in Article 15. The immediate contacts which will be available on these matters if discussions are held here and prospect that discussions will thereby be

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

TELEGRAM

C 268354

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON,

facilitated and expedited lead us to think it is essential that they should take place in London.

We should be glad to learn whether Canadian Government agree to suggested date and place for discussions and what arrangements they have in mind as to representatives who will participate.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

Received Ottawa 4.35 p.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R. 24

C268335

MOST SECRET

March 8, 1940

Re: Hardman Lever Mission

As a result of the Hardman Lever Mission, orders were placed for 80 Hambden bombers, and 40 Hurdman bombers which were a forerunner of the Sterling bombers. The ~~impending~~ Hampden order was reduced to 40 in order to give the Sterlings a chance but was later increased to 60.

A new order for Sterlings was placed for 150 Sterlings and 20 additional Hurricanes. Just now, there is about to be placed with the Steel Car Company an order for 150 Lysanders, the whole as a result of the marked progress of the aircraft industry in Canada.

(Information given to the Prime Minister by Colonel Greenly).

March 8, 1940

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

A. & T.

MOST SECRET

C 268356

Memorandum for the Prime Minister:

Re: Production of Pilots under Commonwealth Air Training Plan as Compared with Peace-time Production of Pilots in the United Kingdom

The R.C.A.F. have just informed me that the figures for production of pilots in the United Kingdom in 1937 and 1938, namely: approximately 1,500 and 2,000 (round figures) respectively, are secret and carefully guarded by the United Kingdom authorities and, therefore, cannot be used.

However, it would be permissible to say that, when the Commonwealth plan is in full operation, the production of pilots (estimated by Sir Kingsley Wood in the House of Commons at 20,000 annually) will be about ten times the number produced in peace time.

It would also be permissible to say that, when the plan is in full operation, Canadian schools alone will produce four to five times the number of pilots produced by the R.A.F. (in the United Kingdom in peace time.)

Above message telephoned
by A. D. P. Heeney
11:30 a.m.

D.R.

March 8, 1940

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

Air T.

C268357

OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER
FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM
EARNSCLIFFE,
OTTAWA.

16th March, 1940.

SECRET

Dear Mr. Beaudry,

With reference to Dr. Skelton's letter of the 24th February, the High Commissioner has asked me to let you know that Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, United Kingdom Liaison Officer in Chief in connection with the Air Training Scheme, is expected to leave Canada in about a week's time.

As I informed you in my letter of the 9th March, Sir Robert will be relieved as United Kingdom Liaison Officer in Chief by Air Vice Marshal L.D.D. McKean, who will arrive shortly, and Sir Gerald Campbell hopes that there will be no objection to Air Vice Marshal McKean attending meetings of the Supervisory Board as his technical adviser.

Yours sincerely,

W.C. HANKINSON.

Laurent Beaudry, Esq.,
Acting Under-Secretary of State
for External Affairs,
OTTAWA.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R. Bx

Air T.

file

C268358

OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER
FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM,
Earnscliffe,
OTTAWA.

850H/88.
MOST SECRET.

6th May, 1940.

My dear Prime Minister,

I have received a telegram from the Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs saying that you may be interested to know that information recently reached our Air Attaché at Rome through a senior Italian air officer who had visited Germany to the effect that the training of pilots in the Dominions is causing anxiety to the German General Staff and that they were in favour of crippling the Royal Air Force before the output from the Dominions becomes available.

Yours sincerely,

Malcolm Campbell.

The Right Honourable W. L. Mackenzie King, M.P.,
Secretary of State for External Affairs,
O T T A W A.

The Department of External Affairs
MAY 6 1940
Canada

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ATP

C 268350

TELEGRAM

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS OTTAWA

TO: THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN THE UNITED KINGDOM

LONDON, S.W.1.

NO. 532

CODE

Ottawa, 18th May, 1940.

1. During the last few days representatives of Metro-Goldwyn-Meyer have been in touch with the authorities here regarding the proposed production of a spectacular feature picture tentatively titled "Wings Over Canada", for which the Company has drawn up extensive plans. The picture would be based fundamentally on the Empire Air Training project and would be given very wide circulation. The cost of the production will be approximately $1,000,000 and a large part of this sum will be spent in Canada and ~~and~~ paid to British actors and technicians. The proposal is strongly favoured by the Prime Minister, the Minister of National Defence and the Acting Deputy Minister in charge of Air.

2. It is the intention of the producer to assemble a distinguished cast which will be headed by Clark Gable and arrangements will be made to include as many players and technicians of British nationality as possible. The resulting publicity should be of very great value for the interests of the British Commonwealth throughout the English-speaking world and possibly elsewhere as well.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

3. The Canadian Government would be given an absolute veto over all aspects of the production.

4. This Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture will not conflict in any way with the production upon which Mr. Michael Powell and his associates are working. As you know the Canadian Government is giving Mr. Powell every possible facility and we are hoping for very satisfactory results.

5. The one condition that the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Company has made in its discussion of the proposition with the Canadian Government has been that we should ask the Government of the United Kingdom to allow this film to be listed as a "quota" production. In view of its nature and of the very useful purpose which it will serve, we strongly recommend that this permission be granted. Will you please take the matter up with the appropriate authorities of the United Kingdom Government and urge that an ~~immediate~~ early and favourable reply should be sent in ~~reply~~ answer to this request?

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

C 268361

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA.

TO: THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN THE UNITED KINGDOM, LONDON.

MOST IMMEDIATE

MOST SECRET

CYPHER

No. 565

Ottawa, May 19th, 1940.

With the object of expediting Canadian output of pilots for overseas:

1. Can the Air Ministry send to Canada the full staff of key personnel of an S.F.T.S., which is now being considered in addition to those contained in the J.A.T.P. as follows:- Officers with the exception of the Commanding Officer, Administrative, Medical, Equipment and Accounting Officers. Airmen in the following trades:- Armourers, Wireless Operators, Fitters I, Fitters II (E), Fitters II (A), Wireless and Electrical Mechanics, Airmen Pilots.

2. Can the Air Ministry send war experienced pilots to Canada for employment as instructors in the Joint Air Training Plan in exchange for newly trained personnel, at rate of thirty five per month. Reply requested by 19th instant.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

TELEGRAM

C 268362

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

MOST IMMEDIATE

MOST SECRET

CYPHER

No. 634

LONDON, May 19th, 1940.

No. 634. Your telegram No. 563, May 19th. Matter taken up at once with Air Ministry who state full and immediate reply cannot be given. Forecast is that Air Ministry cannot complete S.F.T.S. as this will disturb present output of pilots here before Canadian output is available. No reply yet possible to paragraph 2 but matter under consideration. Pointed out this will also involve a delay as Canadian pilots would still have to go through last stage of training here and that therefore Canada would be receiving completely trained pilots in exchange for partially trained ones.

HIGH COMMISSIONER

Rec'd Ottawa 3 P.M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Air T. Vol III
JR U.S.

Most Secret

C 268363

OFFICE OF
THE UNDER-SECRETARY OF STATE
FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS
CANADA

May 19. 6.50 p.m.

Prime Minister

Keenleyside telephoned to say he had seen the gentleman to whom your message was sent and had half an hour talk. The latter said to inform you he regretted it would be impossible to meet the request in this specific instance. On the other hand, he had asked the head of the Civil Aeronautics Bureau a few days ago to prepare a list of private owners of suitable craft. He was certain some of these would be satisfactory for the purpose you had in mind. The C.A.B was to give the list to Purvis. He suggested to Keenleyside that he see Purvis in New York and ask if he did not think some of the aircraft listed could be successfully used for the purpose.

- I told Keenleyside to go ahead & make an appointment with Purvis for tomorrow evening.

Keenleyside added that there were other points of interest which he was instructed to report to you orally on return.

O.D.?

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R. Gen

Air T.

TELEGRAM C 268364

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN AUSTRALIA

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

CODE

CANBERRA, May 23, 1940.

NO. 67

May 23rd. No. 67. My telegram No. 66 of May 21st, paragraph 5 and paragraph 6.

In the House of Representatives yesterday the Prime Minister referred to "grossly unfair and ill-informed statements" alleging serious delay in the Empire Air Scheme, and declared that they were "without foundation". He added that Mr. Fairbairn at Ottawa undertook to start the Australian share of the Scheme two months earlier than time suggested in original proposal, that scheme was carefully synchronized with aircraft production, that it was undesirable that any part of programme should get out of step with any other part, and that Australia was right up to schedule.

Essington Lewis, Managing Director of Brokehill Company, has been appointed Director General of Munitions and Supply. Prime Minister said in the House of Representatives yesterday that Lewis would devote whole time and would be given utmost authority to get things done.

HIGH COMMISSIONER

Received Ottawa 10.35 a.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

"R"

TELEGRAM

C 268365

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON, May 23rd, 1940.

IMMEDIATE

SECRET

CYPHER

No. 59.

No. 59. Secret. Air Training Scheme. You will have already received through Sir Gerald Campbell a preliminary intimation that new phase of the war had made it necessary for us to consider whether some modification was demanded of air programme generally, including Air Training Scheme, and that Air Ministry were examining the question of modifying the measures now in estimates for our 1941-42 effort in order to provide for additional strength during the next 6 months. The conclusion reached is that as a result of very rapid changes in military situation in France and Belgium it is imperative that all practicable steps should be taken to make available for the R.A.F. the greatest possible number of operational aircraft during the ensuing three-four months. In view of increased probability that in the next phase of enemy bombing objectives will be air - and aero-engine factories in this country, we have regretfully come to the conclusion that export of Battle and Anson aircraft (air frames and engines) should be suspended for 2 months subject to review in the light of war situation.

The effect of this decision on the Air Training Scheme would seem to be as follows:

Since Battle aircraft are used solely, they

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

TELEGRAM C 268366

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON.

ought to be used for gunnery training, either as target-towers or as attack aircraft, and Ansons are used for navigational training and twin engine pilot training. There need be no hold-up in training of single engine pilots in Canada.

It is understood that rates of delivery of Harvards to Canada is in advance of requirements of schools under existing opening-up programme and the Air Ministry suggest, therefore, that any surplus should be utilized to off-set as far as possible the loss of the Ansons for twin engine pilot training. The surplus of single engine pilots can be converted to twin engine pilots in accordance with requirements during their subsequent training at the operational training units in this country.

If, in the result, the proportion of pilots trained, whether on single engine or twin engine aircraft from any source, proves to be larger in relation to air crews than has hitherto been envisaged, there is no doubt that they will be urgently required.

Various possibilities are formally being examined with a view to minimizing interference with training scheme arrangements. Among these possibilities is the acquisition from the United States of America of training aircraft of comparable types to replace the Battles and Ansons. Another possibility is that in so far as the standard of Battles and target-towing aircraft

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

TELEGRAM

C 268367

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

or alternative types from the United States of America are not available to complete air gunnery training in Canada, training efforts should be concentrated on ground observance instruction; we should then endeavour to give air gunnery instruction whilst the personnel were under training in operational training units in this country. We will communicate further with regard to these possibilities in due course.

In informing the Canadian Government of the conclusions we have unavoidably reached, we are confident that they will fully understand and feel able to accept the situation. We still attach the greatest importance to the Air Training Scheme and we earnestly hope that the Canadian Government will continue to exert every effort to make it productive to the fullest practicable extent in the shortest possible time.

Similar telegram is being sent to the Commonwealth Government. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS.

Received Ottawa, 5.30 p.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

ATP

TELEGRAM C 268368

FROM THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA,

TO THE CHARGE D'AFFAIRES, CANADIAN LEGATION, WASHINGTON.

MOST IMMEDIATE Ottawa,

MOST SECRET May ~~25~~ 26, 1940.

CYPHER

No. 84.

Government of United Kingdom have instructed British Ambassador to request United States authorities allow a certain number of pilots to undergo training at civilian flying schools in United States, on civilian basis if necessary. They have asked us to associate our representative in Washington with British Ambassador in this connection. You are instructed to see Ambassador at once and cooperate in making representations. Discuss with Air Attache. It should be made clear that this plan would be supplement not substitute for Empire Air Training Scheme and would also not be substitute for our effort to purchase additional United States training planes for use in Canada in place of those United Kingdom cannot now send.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

complaints. But in my county I have not seen a member of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in twenty years. I believe the same could be said of the adjoining county. Perhaps there are places where they are needed more. But if a man in such a district has working for him a nazi representative who is trying to spread subversive influences, to whom is he going to report it? He wonders whether he should report to the clerk of the municipality, to the county police, to the provincial police. I know for a fact some have gone to certain newspapers. The government might well consider setting up at different points throughout the dominion an organization or bureau, not of information but for information, consisting of returned men. I may point out that this would relieve the government. As the Minister of Justice said this afternoon, there would not be even the semblance of politics in it. I do not want to charge the Minister of Justice or any other member of the government with playing politics; I know how well they have played it in normal times, but I exonerate them from playing it in this time of crisis. But I believe that bureaux for information should be set up in places like Montreal, Ottawa, Kingston, Belleville, Toronto, and county towns as well. We have seen what these subversive influences have done in other countries far in advance of the invading enemy, and we have now these bitter experiences for our guidance. Our returned men stand ready clamouring for something to do, and their experience in the last awful crisis qualifies them to give leadership in this.

I hope these few suggestions may be accepted in the spirit in which they are made, not as criticism of what has not been done. This country is at war; now that the crisis is here, let us get on a war footing and realize that there are subversive influences at work in this country just as in other countries, and surely we can benefit from the experience of other countries in that regard.

Mr. GOLDING: Can the Minister of Finance or the Minister of National Defence give us some estimate of the cost of the British fighting machines?

Mr. POWER: If my hon. friend means the amount as measured by planes that are to be supplied under the plan, it is $180,000,000. That is the amount of the contribution of the United Kingdom government. Canada's contribution is $360,000,000, and Australia and New Zealand contribute in proportion to the use they make of the schools. That is over a period of three and a half years.

Mr. GOLDING: My question arises from a statement made by the hon. member for Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Rowe) the other night. I should like to know what the cost would be to manufacture these 25,000 British fighting planes. The hon. member said, as reported on page 199 of Hansard.

I say that the government to your right, Mr. Speaker, will stand condemned on the pages of Canadian history for not having overseas in support of those gallant boys to-night at least twenty-five thousand British fighting planes.

I should like to know what the cost of 25,000 fighting planes would be, and the length of time it would take to manufacture, or to set up plants to manufacture, that sort of thing. We ought to keep in mind in discussing these matters the time it takes to establish plants for the manufacture of fighting machines or munitions. I had some experience as shop foreman in the plant at home during the last war. We got a contract for shells, I think in March, 1915; we had to set up the whole plant, tool the machines, and we were not shipping shells until November of that year. In addition, every machine operated in manufacturing the shells was manned by a person who had had no previous experience in machine work at all. We had to take the time not only to set up the plant and tool the machines but to train the men to operate them. Anyone who has gone through that experience will have some idea of the time it would take and the cost of setting up plants for that production. It cannot be done overnight. I am not saying this in a critical way. I just want the information, if I can get it, as to what would be the cost to Canada of supplying 25,000 fighting machines and the length of time it would take to set up plants to handle that production.

Mr. ROWE: The hon. member is asking the minister, but perhaps he will permit me to remind him that while I referred to fighting planes I meant that they would be piloted by Canadian-trained pilots. The scheme to which I had reference, according to my understanding and the general rumour throughout this country, and indeed in Great Britain, was that at that time Britain proposed to pay for the scheme herself and to train 25,000 pilots in Canada each year. Apparently our status would not permit that to be done, but now we are led to believe that same status permits us to move no faster than Great Britain asks us to move.

Mr. RALSTON: My hon. friend referred to this scheme the other night. I was not in the house at the time and I have not

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268369A

taken the trouble since to answer him. I really thought that what we were engaged with was the present, not the past. Since my hon. friend has mentioned this matter again to-night, however, perhaps we can just clear it up in a few minutes; at least let me say a word about it. I want to say to my hon. friend that I have examined the records, and that the largest number ever suggested by the British government in connection with the training of pilots in Canada was in the first part of 1938, when they suggested the training of 300 pilots a year; not 25,000 but 300. There is quite some difference between those figures.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): Is that proposal in writing?

Mr. RALSTON: That suggestion was submitted to the Royal Canadian Air Force; and if I remember correctly, according to the records the answer came back that instead of 300 the number might be 235, I believe 201 for Britain and 34 for Canada. That proposition was submitted to Britain, and they came back with the suggestion that the number should be 135. I should have said that when the Prime Minister made the statement in this house to the effect that he felt this should be a Canadian scheme, instead of its being suggested in the British house, that never again would Great Britain ask Canada for anything, the Minister for Air, Sir Kingsley Wood, thanked Canada for that offer. I believe that statement was made in the House of Commons and placed upon Hansard. Finally, the arrangement was made for 50 pilots a year, and in 1939 this house voted $6,000,000 for the cost of that training.

That is the story with regard to the training of British pilots, as I read the records. So I do not think there is much point in anyone going back and talking about 25,000 pilots a year in connection with that previous arrangement, or saying that if the scheme had been in operation now, the training would have been completed and we would have had 25,000 pilots or any such number over there to-night if that scheme had been carried out. In point of fact, it was suggested that this should be a Canadian scheme, and the number was changed as the result of discussions carried on from time to time, discussions in which the British high commissioner participated all the way through. The British government thanked the Canadian government and accepted the proposition for the training of 50 pilots a year. That is the story with regard to that previous air training scheme, and this house voted money for it, together with money for the training of Canadian pilots.

I have taken this much time to deal with this matter because my hon. friend has seen fit to refer to it once more. One further word and I have finished, because I am going through with this bill no matter what my hon. friends say in criticism with reference to the past. My hon. friend used one other word to which I want to refer. He used the word "complacency." If there is any word I dislike, it is that word "complacency;" and if there is any word that is foreign to my nature, if I may be pardoned for saying so, it is that word "complacency". Whatever may be my shortcomings, I do not think I can be accused of that. I am not satisfied with what goes on even in my own life, or with anything else that goes on around me. I think perhaps I may claim the reputation of being somewhat of a troublesome person, in that I am all too seldom satisfied with things as they are.

Mr. ROWE: I did not charge the minister with that. I said he was surrounded by a certain amount of it.

Mr. RALSTON: My hon. friend did use that word "complacency".

Mr. ROWE: I did not refer to the Minister of Finance or to the Minister of National Defence for Air.

Mr. RALSTON: Then I have taken it to myself as a member of this government; for I have been here since September, and I accept my share of responsibility for what has taken place since that time. I say that is not a fair word. We endeavoured to work out a plan which we believed was sound, sane, forward looking and far-reaching, and indeed a heavy plan for Canada; and we have tried to carry out that plan to the best of our ability. We have not slacked on it for a moment. The ministers who have been engaged in carrying out that plan have done their level best in connection with it. I am not at all worried about what history may say. The thing I count as worth while in life is this, that if a man has in his own heart the feeling that he has done the best he could, it does not matter what history says. That is my feeling, and I say we have endeavoured to do the very best we could in connection with what we regarded as a full sized job for Canada.

Now, after having approved the first and second divisions and the ancillary troops which have gone overseas; after having increased the naval forces as we have; after having increased the air force; after having provided for the defence of the east and west coasts; after having undertaken the air training scheme and carried it forward to the extent that has been mentioned to-night, namely, having it right up to the minute as

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268370

far as the development of the necessary institutions is concerned; after having carried out our economic policy; after having carried out our industrial policy and industrial development, a crisis has come upon us and we have to make many adjustments. I never agreed more thoroughly with the hon. member for Dufferin-Simcoe than when he said that if there was anything Canadians are noted for it was initiative and resourcefulness. I agree absolutely that if we cannot show initiative and resourcefulness in this crisis, we are not worthy of the name of Canadians. Frankly, Mr. Chairman, I want to say to you, and through you to this committee, that this government has been trying as hard as men can try for the last fifteen days, ever since this crisis arose, to make every possible adjustment that could be made, in this plan or in anything else, in an endeavour to make the most effective contribution possible in the emergency which has suddenly loomed up. That is what we are busy with; that is what we are trying to do. Because one sits here listening to quite a bit of criticism of the government without replying, that does not indicate complacency on my part, I assure you; I felt that the most important thing at the moment was to endeavour to get this bill through and this money voted in order that we might carry on with the job.

Perhaps the committee will pardon me for having taken these few minutes to make clear the position as I see it. I say we have endeavoured, not just by day but by night as well, to ascertain what changes might be made to the best advantage; and I may say that sometimes we have made changes in the face of protests from those who felt that they knew more about this plan than we did, who believed that the plan which had been mapped out in a certain way, whether the air training plan or any others, could not be changed. We have applied our best judgment, as ordinary human beings anxious to do a job, and with a full sense of our responsibility. We have endeavoured to find different ways and perhaps short cuts whereby this plan and our other plans might be carried out more quickly and more effectively, because this, for the time being at least, has become a day to day business. Our programme is going on, but our programme has to be adjusted, has to be supplemented, has to be varied, has to be modified and has to be made to work if we can possibly make it work, because no one knows better than I do the crisis we are facing to-night. So I want to assure you, Mr. Chairman, and this committee that this is what we are endeavouring to do.

Constructive suggestions have come from all quarters of this house; I am perfectly free to acknowledge that valuable suggestions have come from hon. gentlemen opposite. It must not be thought that we have been asleep, that we ourselves have not been thinking, and that many things have not been worked out. We do not want any particular credit for it, but neither do we want any blame on the assumption that we have not been doing anything about it. We have been endeavouring to do our level best.

Now I have made this statement to you, Mr. Chairman, and to the committee. We are prepared to accept and act upon all the constructive suggestions we can possibly get from any quarter, and we welcome them. We welcome the cooperation we are receiving in this house, and I am only asking that hon. members, as far as possible, deal with the present, with the problems that are before us, with the situation that faces us. Let us together try to pull out; let us together try to fight this thing through to the end.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): Mr. Chairman, I am not rising for the purpose of continuing this discussion along the lines that it has taken. My own view is that it has gone far enough. The minister has got off his chest some things that doubtless he wanted to get off. I have no doubt that he and the government have been smarting under the criticisms which have been leveled at them from one end of Canada to the other during the last fifteen days, and in which the terms "inertia" and "complacency" found a most prominent part. Those terms did not originate on this side of the house; they originated in the public press long before parliament met. Having said that, let us see if we cannot get back to the bill. I shall try to help the minister make some progress in getting this bill through parliament. This discussion, which seems to have got into a by-path, arose out of a question which was asked of the Minister of National Defence for Air, as to the time it would take to turn out a trained pilot. I quite realize that it may not be in the public interest to give information on this point.

Mr. POWER: Perhaps I can give it; twenty-eight weeks for a pilot, twenty-six weeks for an air observer, and thirty-two weeks for an air gunner.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): I have been trying to work it out. I may tell the committee that I have had the privilege of reading the secret agreement, but I am not going to divulge anything contained in that because it was shown to me in confidence. I

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C. 268370A

have been supplied, along with other hon. members, with a summary of the air training scheme. If hon. members will look at page seven, appendix one, they will see that there are seven categories of schools in the complete course of training. There are initial training schools, elementary flying training schools, service flying training schools, air observer schools, bombing and gunnery schools, air navigation schools and wireless schools. As I understand it, the training that might be given in these different schools could not be simultaneous. I would suppose that a pilot would have to go through seven different courses of training.

Mr. POWER: Not necessarily. For instance, the man who goes to a wireless school would be a wireless operator. He would not have to go to the navigation school.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): He would not have to do that?

Mr. POWER: He would not.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): He would not be an all-round air man if he did not go through the whole thing.

Mr. POWER: Some men are being trained as pilots, some as observers, some as machine gunners and wireless operators.

Mr. HANSON (York Sunbury): The second paragraph of appendix one contains the following statement:

> The flying training and air observer schools will be developed at rates which will provide for their peak capacity for training pupils being reached by the following number of weeks after the date of opening:
>
> | | Weeks |
> |---|---|
> | Elementary flying training schools.. .. | 4 |
> | Service flying training schools.. .. .. | 12 |
> | Air observer schools.. .. .. | 6 |

That makes a total of 22 weeks. That seems to be different from what the minister said.

Mr. RALSTON: I do not think all those schools deal with the same sort of pupils. An elementary training school and a service training school would be for the training of pilots, whereas the observer school would have nothing to do with the training of a pilot.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): I should like to have some explanation. I am frank in saying that I do not understand very much about this scheme.

Mr. POWER: I did not until I studied the chart.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): Perhaps if the minister would let us have that chart we could get some information which would be of value. Could it be put on Hansard? We should like to know these things, provided it is in the public interest that they should be divulged. How long from the time a man signs on is it until he becomes a useful air man and is sent across the water?

Mr. POWER: Twenty-eight weeks for a pilot; twenty-six weeks for an observer, and thirty-two weeks for an air gunner. It may be the other way round, but I shall have the figures for my hon. friend.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): This agreement was signed last December and we are now into May. Can the minister tell us how the time schedules are running in the different categories and how many student pilots have been taken on? Are we still at the beginning of that stage?

Mr. POWER: Up to the present every school has opened on schedule; every class has entered the school on schedule; every graduating step will be taken on schedule; every airport has been ready on schedule, and every aeroplane that was required in the particular scheme has been ready on schedule. In so far as I am aware—and I have made strict inquiries within the last few days—we shall have no difficulty for some little time to come either with regard to opening schools, with regard to instructors or with regard to the necessary equipment. But in some little time we may have considerable difficulty.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): That is not my point.

Mr. POWER: That difficulty may arise out of the crisis. I thought that was understood. Does that answer my hon. friend?

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): In a measure it does. Is the minister able to say that men are now being trained under this scheme? When will the first man go forward? That would help me.

Mr. POWER: I would rather not say.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): If that information is not in the public interest, I will withdraw my question.

Mr. POWER: I have been asked not to say when the first will go forward. Certain things will arise out of the present crisis, but up to that crisis everything was up to date. We may have to change the plan considerably, and if we do we shall endeavour to keep the output as high as possible. We will probably accelerate the plan even though it has to be done at the cost of some part of the plan which is more in the nature of a long range programme.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

ATP

C 268371

TELEGRAM

From THE CANADIAN MINISTER TO THE UNITED STATES

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA.

MOST IMMEDIATE

MOST SECRET

CYPHER

NO. 97

WASHINGTON, May 27th, 1940

No. 97. Most Secret. Your telegram No. 84, May 26th. Instructions followed out. Accompanied British Ambassador to Department of State 12 midday where request was presented to Welles who will furnish answer as early as possible.

CHARGE D'AFFAIRES

Rec'd Ottawa 6 p.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

C 268372

TELEGRAM

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN AUSTRALIA

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

CYPHER

CANBERRA, May 30, 1940.

NO. 68

May 30th. No. 68. My telegram No. 67 of May 23rd.

In the course of a statement on Air Training Scheme read in the House of Representatives yesterday, Minister for Air said:

"Up to date, the opinions expressed by Governments of both the United Kingdom and Canada, are that there should be no change in the scope or time-table of the Air Training programme."

HIGH COMMISSIONER

Received Ottawa 9.50 a.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

ATP hold out

C 268373

TELEGRAM

From THE CANADIAN MINISTER TO THE UNITED STATES

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA.

MOST SECRET

CYPHER

NO. 105

WASHINGTON, May 31, 1940

No. 105. Most Secret. Further reference to your telegram of May 26th No. 84. In conversation with Moffat this morning, I enquired how the matter stands. Moffat replied that our request still under consideration and being examined from practical and legal standpoint.

CHARGE D'AFFAIRES

Rec'd Ottawa 2:50 P.M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ATP

C268374

DEPARTMENT OF NATIONAL DEFENCE FOR AIR

Press Liaison Office

AIR FORCE No. 146. June 1, 1940.

NOTE TO EDITORS: Herewith is copy of address to be delivered by James S. Duncan, Acting Deputy Minister of National Defence for Air, to the Joint Service Clubs of Ottawa on Monday, June 3rd. This material is not to be released before afternoon of Monday, June 3rd.

OTTAWA:

Contrary to my usual reaction to such proposals, I welcomed the invitation which was extended to me by the Joint Service Clubs of Ottawa to address you today.

I welcomed the opportunity because it enabled me to tell you, and the people of Canada, something of our air effort - and more particularly something of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, one of the greatest, yes indeed the greatest enterprise to which this Dominion has ever set her hand.

At the outset, may I remind you that although Acting Deputy Minister for Air, I am but a temporary official of the Government, and that by temperament, training and vocation I am an industrialist and a business man - and that it is as a business man speaking to his fellow business men that I am addressing you today.

As one of you, therefore, I know full well that you are interested, not in the past but in the future, not in what might or could or should have been done but in what is being done now and what is going to be done tomorrow.

Yet I think it is necessary that we should dip just a little into the past so that the events leading up to the creation of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, and the basis upon which it was established, should be brought into clearer focus.

Back of it all was the belief widely held in the United Kingdom, in Canada, and in our sister Dominions that owing to its geographical location, its wide open spaces, its climate even, the characteristic qualities and outstanding achievement of its airmen during the last war - this country was peculiarly well adapted to make a great contribution in the air to that cause which lies so near to the heart of every Briton.

Following Canada's acceptance in principle of the United Kingdom Government's proposal the British Under Secretary of State Captain Balfour and Lord Riverdale accompanied by a party of distinguished Air Officers and technicians,

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 2693748

came to this country in October last year and proposed to our Government, and subsequently to that of Australia and New Zealand, that the four countries concerned should set up in Canada a Training Plan designed to provide the Royal Air Force with an ever increasing flow of highly trained air pilots, air observers and air gunners whose arrival in the Mother Country would be coincident with the growth and expansion of England's aircraft industry and of her purchases from abroad.

The programme discussed was attuned to the United Kingdom policy of fighting a war of attrition, a war in which through economic pressure, through naval blockade, through the development of its inexhaustable world resources, and the industries of friendly nations, we would grow steadily stronger as the position of our enemies steadily deteriorated.

A tremendous expansion in the United Kingdom's aircraft industry was planned and is at present underway. The Commonwealth Air Training Plan was designed to provide the Royal Air Force with a great reservoir of highly trained air crews ready to man the aircraft as these became available.

Whether in the light of the tragic events of recent weeks this policy was the most desirable one may be open to question. Present events would seem to indicate that one of more immediate assistance would have been more in line with the requirements of the hour. This much can be said, however, the Plan which was set up appeared to be sound at the time - in all events, this was the contribution which the United Kingdom asked of us and our sister Dominions, and the one to which we readily and wholeheartedly responded.

On December 17th the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan was announced and got underway. Its proportions are gigantic - 40,000 of a personnel of men will be required to operate its various facilities; aerodromes are being developed from coast to coast; buildings of over 40 different types are being erected in every province of this Dominion; great factories are under construction for the repair and maintenance of a vast fleet of training aircraft; equipment depots and training centres; schools of all kinds are being built or existing premises are being taken over - - nothing of such vast proportion has ever been undertaken before in this Dominion.

This great establishment is necessary not only because of the thousands

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

upon thousands of highly trained airmen which the Plan is designed to turn out, but because unlike the last war where our air crews received their preliminary training only in Canada and then proceeded overseas to receive their advanced training in England, we are turning out completely trained airmen ready to enter the Royal Air Force fighting squadrons upon their arrival overseas.

Moreover, owing to the tremendous technical progress which has taken place in the intervening years, the pilot of today requires over 200 flying hours before he is qualified, whereas in the War of 1914-18 many of our airmen went into the battle with scarcely 20 flying hours to their credit.

Such was the Plan which was underway when the Prime Minister did me the honor of asking me to take a hand in this work, and I would like to avail myself of this opportunity of saying publicly to him and his colleagues in the Government that I am deeply appreciative of the privilege which has been given me of making my small contribution to Canada's war effort at this crucial time of difficulty.

And now we come to the tragic events which brought the military forces of Germany to the channel ports of France, carrying with them the necessity of a sweeping revision of all our plans to meet the new and unexpected situation which was confronting us. Just before that time, however, when the events in Norway were casting their shadows upon the European scene, and although the United Kingdom still felt that her best interest would be served by the carrying out of the Joint Air Training Plan as arranged, the impelling necessity of making a more immediate contribution was obvious to us and steps were being taken to superimpose upon the existing Training Plan other proposals which would enable us, in some measure at least, to achieve this end.

Before these had materialized, however, the invasion of Holland, of Belgium, the break through at the apex of the Maginot Line had taken place with tragic and unexpected rapidity.

Faced with a wholly new picture, the huge enemy forces driving towards the channel ports, the United Kingdom called upon us to send such assistance as could be made available while, with an eye to the future, maintaining as intact as possible the schedules of the Joint Air Training Plan.

At the same time the United Kingdom reluctantly informed us that as a precautionary measure she was suspending, for the time being, the supplying of

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

the aircraft which according to the plans she was sending us for training purposes and as her contribution towards the $600,000,000 total cost of this enterprise.

It would be difficult to exaggerate the magnitude of the problems which confronted the Air Ministry at this time. We were still in the preparatory stages of the Plan, which was to come to full fruition in the months to come, yet urgent assistance was imperative.

Among these problems, one thought was uppermost in our minds - an immediate contribution to the Mother Country and to our allies across the sea had to be made.

We realized also that the framework of the Plan had to be maintained so that it could be resumed with full strength and vigour at the earliest possible date so as to ensure an ever-increasing supply of highly trained airmen to man the aircraft at present under construction in the United States and Great Britain. Above all, we realized that now if ever was the time for Canada to show the stuff that she was made of, to fall back upon that spirit of improvisation for which she is justly famed, and to find ways and means of surmounting with courage, with initiative and with decision the seemingly insurmountable difficulties which were confronting her.

But I will say no more concerning our problems. I know full well that in these anxious days you are concerned not with the recounting of our difficulties, but with the steps which have been taken to overcome them. You are interested in action, not in discussion, in deeds, not in words - and you are right -

Here are, therefore, some of the measures which have been taken:

(1) The 112 Squadron is under notice to proceed abroad, the advance party left Ottawa on the 20th of this month and have arrived in England.

(2) Further Air Force contributions complete with aircraft, guns and wireless equipment, etc are now standing by ready to proceed overseas.

(3) A number of young pilots just graduated from Camp Borden and who, under other circumstances, would have swelled the ranks of our instructors, are proceeding overseas immediately.

(4) Fighter and Bomber planes ready for immediate action in France have already been despatched to the United Kingdom and others are awaiting suitable transportation.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

(5) Immediate action is being taken to greatly increase Canadian aircraft industry not only to take the place, where possible, of the machines which the United Kingdom was to have sent us for the Training Plan, but to provide the Mother Country with an ever-increasing number of Fighter and Bomber aircraft for Active Service.

(6) In order to obviate inevitable delays, special powers have been granted to the Department of Transport and to the Department of Munisions and Supply which will enable them to proceed with the letting of contracts for the construction of aerodromes, buildings, and for the manufacture and purchase of essential equipment and supplies with a very minimum of delay.

(7) While maintaining the framework of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan and proceeding with its development so that at the earliest possible moment it can be geared to capacity again, every effort is being directed towards the maximum output of pilots, air gunners and air observers in the shortest possible time for overseas service, and a steady flow of pilots, and subsequently of air crews generally, will proceed overseas monthly from now onwards to join the operational squadrons of the Royal Air Force.

(8) Details are being worked out to call up immediately some thousands of young men for service in the Royal Canadian Air Force, and their training for any emergency will be undertaken at the earliest possible moment, thus giving a greater number of these splendid young men the opportunity so ardently sought after by them of serving their country in its time of need.

I have only covered here the high spots of the plans and emergency measures which have been worked out and put into force during the last few weeks by the officers of the Royal Canadian Air Force under the dynamic, resourceful, realistic and popular leadership of its new Minister, the Honourable C.G. Power.

I am also glad indeed that we have with us today the newly appointed Chief of the Air Staff - Air Commodore L.S. Breadner, who has a long association with the Royal Canadian Air Force, and whose already proven qualities of leadership, and the high regard in which he is held, give ample assurance of his success in directing this great arm of the Service.

The country has applauded the creation of the important post of Inspector-General, so desirable in view of the widespread nature of the Canadian Air

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

establishment. None could fill these important duties with greater distinction than Air Vice-Marshal Croil who will bring to his new work an unparalleled experience and an invaluable background of knowledge.

So much for our plans, our efforts, and the action taken to meet the emergency as it arose. No useful purpose can be served by post mortems and recriminations. No doubt there is much that, looking backward, we might wish to have done differently, more promptly or not at all. No doubt there were assumptions made which have been falsified by events.

But let us be realistic, do not let us waste our energies in vain argument concerning the past - let us deal with conditions as we find them today - let us look forward, not backward - let us concentrate our effort and single-minded purpose on the job to be done now and upon plans for the future.

If we do these things I am confident that although we may pass through dark and trying days, Canada and the British Empire will in the end win through.

But important as plans and planes are, important as gigantic schemes for training and equipping our fliers may be - it is, after all, the Men of the Air Force who make it what it is. It is the Pilots, Observers and Air Gunners who will by their deeds of courage and valour write large the name of Canada in history's scroll of honour.

In the but yet short although fast-moving history of aerial warfare, Canada has established a most enviable record with its long roll of air heroes - and can proudly boast of its Bishop, Barker, Collishaw, McLeod and McLaren, and a host of others whose names and deeds will always be a challenge to the rising youth of our country. It is a daily inspiration to me and must be to the others at the headquarters of the Air Force to have in our midst that legendary figure - Air Marshal W.A. Bishop, V.C., D.S.O. with bar, M.C., D.F.C., Chevalier de Legion d'Honneur, Croix de Guerre with Palm, etc., and as I said to another gathering quite recently, I thank God that this man who fought in 130 air fights in the last war, and has 72 air victories to his official credit, should have been spared to be with us through this present struggle, to inspire us with his example, and to point the way towards those heights of heroism of which a grateful nation is so rightfully proud. There is something in the mental mould and physical frame of our Canadian youth that endows them with the characteristics that enable them to distinguish themselves so

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

outstandingly in this modern method of combat, and assures us that from the young men going forward today will arise other "Bishops", other "Barkers" and other "Collishaws", whose names will also be inscribed on the Honour Roll of this country and who will do everlasting credit to Canada in the present struggle for the preservation of the things which we and they hold dearer than life itself.

- - - - - -

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

CROSS REFERENCE SHEET

C 268380

Name or Subject: Governor of Newfoundland

File No.: Air Training Plan

Regarding: Requesting details of Air Vice Marshal Croil's party movements for proposed visit to Nflnd.

Date: June 2, 1940

SEE

Name or Subject: NEWFOUNDLAND.

File No.:

REQ. 222
5,000—1-4-38

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

June 3
1 9 4 0

Special papers concerning Air Training Plan and put in order by the Prime Minister, are in filing cabinet for reference of Prime Minister when called for. (B.F. to P.M. file).

D.R.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

C 268382

TELEGRAM

From THE CANADIAN MINISTER TO THE UNITED STATES

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA.

WASHINGTON, June 4, 1940.

IMMEDIATE

MOST SECRET

CYPHER

No. 109.

No. 109. Most Secret. My telegram No. 105 of May 31.

Moffat states that diversion of any considerable pilot production to training Canadian pilots will disrupt United States training programme and would seriously delay bringing United States air defences into state of readiness. Even if Canadians entered as civilians they could not be accepted as students without additional statutory authority. It is, therefore, hoped that Canadian authorities will choose not to press this particular request. Despatch by bag.

CHARGE D'AFFAIRES

Received Ottawa 7.30 PM

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ATP

C 268383

CANADIAN LEGATION

WASHINGTON

June 4th, 1940.

MOST SECRET

No.1097.

Sir:

I have the honour to refer to my Telegram No. 109 of June 4th concerning the training of pilots in the United States.

2. Mr. Pierrepont Moffat asked me to call to see him this afternoon in order to discuss this question with him.

3. Mr. Moffat stated that the problem had been considered very carefully and sympathetically by the Secretary of State, the Under Secretary, the Chief of Staff, and others. The conclusions reached were that the apprehensions felt by Mr. Welles in his talk of May 27th were well founded. These apprehensions rested on two grounds, a practical one and a legal one.

4. As a pra_ctical matter, a project of training Canadian pilots in this country on a large scale obviously could not be carried on concurrently with a similar training program for the United States Air Corps which contemplates using Army and Navy civilian facilities and personnel to the maximum. Apparently, the bottleneck is flying instructors and, to a lesser degree, training planes. Already in order to turn out the number of pilots the United States considers essential in 1941 and

The Right Honourable
The Secretary of State
for External Affairs,
OTTAWA.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268384

and 1942 they are using as instructors all Army instructors, all qualified officers now in the Training Center and civilian schools, all qualified officers who could be made available by the suspension of miscellaneous activities, qualified civilian instructors, etc. Thus, any large-scale plan of training Canadian pilots would retard the work being done for the United States at the Training Centers, and the lack of additional flying instructors prevents the use of other military flying fields for training schools.

5. With regard to legal considerations, the legal advisers of the competent Government Departments have held that if the pilots were members of the Canadian military or naval forces they could not be trained in this country without a violation of The Hague Convention No. V; nor, in their opinion, could such training be legalized short of amendment or denunciation of this international treaty. This, of course, would not apply to Canadian civilians, particularly if they came to this country for training without advance arrangement between Governments calling for such admissions in specific numbers or groups with a definite view of their later employment in a belligerent army; but the Chief of Staff has added that even these civilians could not be accepted as students at the Air Corps Training Centers without additional statutory authority. (See Act of April 3rd, 1939, copies of which were forwarded with our Despatch No. 537 of April 5th, 1939.)

6. The conclusion reached by the United States military authorities, in which other Government officials concurred, was that irrespective of legal

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268385

restrictions, the diversion of any considerable pilot production to the training of Canadian pilots would disrupt their own training program and would seriously delay bringing their own air defences into a satisfactory state of readiness. It was therefore hoped that the Canadian authorities would choose not to press this particular request.

7. I asked Mr. Moffat whether the conclusion reached by the United States authorities would be modified if it were made clear by the Canadian Government that they would be glad if even a small number of Canadians could receive training as pilots in the United States. Mr. Moffatt apparently was under the impression that the proposal which had been made was for the training of a very considerable number of pilots.

8. Mr. Moffat did not give a direct reply to this question, but said that perhaps the answer was implicit in the remarks which he had just made. I concluded from this that it would be difficult for the United States authorities to agree to the training of even a few Canadian pilots for, though the training of a few pilots would not materially interfere with the training program of the United States, it would require additional statutory authority, according to the contention of the Chief of Staff.

9. Mr. Moffat informed me that Lord Lothian will be informed in the above sense tomorrow morning.

I have the honour to be,
with the highest respect,
Sir,
Your most obedient,
humble servant,

M.M. Mahoney.

Chargé d'Affaires.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

CROSS REFERENCE SHEET

C 268386

Name or Subject: Memo HLK

File No.: Air Training Plan

Regarding:

Date: June 5, 1940

Plan for Wing Commander Homer Smith to arrange for recruting American pilots for instruction in ATP.

SEE

Name or Subject

File No.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

REQ. 382
5,000—14-6-39

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

A.T.P.

C268387

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS, LONDON.

TELEGRAM NO. 103

SECRET

CYPHER

Ottawa, June 13,1940.

Your telegram number 59 of May 23rd, advising interim suspension of U.K. contribution under Commonwealth Air Training Agreement of Battle and Anson aircraft. In accord with your fifth paragraph we have been intensively engaged regarding alternative steps to overcome deficiencies in these types of aircraft due to the interruption and recognizing also necessity of assuring alternative supplies in order to minimize interference with Training Plan.

2. Following are some of these steps. Negotiations are being carried on for Menasco Engines as alternative to Gipsys. Anson redesigned to take Jacobs engine and American instruments and accessories and to substitute materials available in this country. Orders will be placed as soon as bills of materials are available and drawings completed. Order has been negotiated and placed for 2300 Jacobs engines involving a commitment of about 10 million dollars. Appendix "A" equipment w will be manufactured in Canada for use when substitutes not possible. Production of Canadian Anson should reach required rate in nine months. To fill gap we are purchasing such second hand Twin Engine aircraft as are available in Canada and United States. We are also investigating supply Beech and other Twin Engine aircraft. For bombing and gunnery schools we have asked United States to release 500 North American or similar aircraft; delivery of these doubtful. We are also ordering 200 Fleet Model 60 suitable for Intermediate Training which will release Harvards. No Target Towing aircraft in sight

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268388

and must conserve Battles for this purpose. We still hope you can supply Battles if can effect early delivery, but most urgent requirements are Ansons to fill gap before Canadian production starts and apare parts for maintenance of those Ansons and Battles (including engines) which have already been delivered.

3. In our search for alternatives where time was the essence we have, as you will recognize, not hesitated to act without any stipulation regarding ultimate responsibility. Obviously we could not procure commitments to fill in precisely the contemplated gap and obligations assumed might quite probably result in surplus ultimately if United Kingdom contribution is resumed but under the circumstances we have considered possible surplus preferable to risk of scarcity which would balk plan.

4. Most of these steps have been the subject of previous personal discussion with individual members of the Supervisory Board. They were all reported at the regular meeting held on Monday last and the prudence and desirability of these steps were approved by the members of the Board, with reservation that the matter of responsibility was properly subject to discussion and adjustment between Governments concerned.

5. Regarding ultimate responsibility, we are quite content, if agreeable to you, to advise you of what Canada as administrator of the Plan has done and is doing, leaving that matter for discussion and adjustment, having regard to obligations under agreement, after situation has become more clarified at your end and when we all will know better what these emergent steps we are taking involve.

6. We hope that these steps will be regarded as endeavour to meet request that "the Canadian Government will continue to

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

exert every effort to make it (the Air Training Plan) productive to the fullest practicable extent in the shortest possible time" and would be glad to have your comments on foregoing.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

TELEGRAM

ATP

C268389

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

SECRET

CYPHER

NO. 93

LONDON, June 30th, 1940.

No. 93. Secret. We have fully realized, and deeply regretted, effect on Air Training Plan of suspension of of export of aircraft from this country, which has been forced upon us by critical turn of events. We have learned with the keenest appreciation the steps which you have taken to fill the breach. We are entirely agreeable to course proposed in paragraph five of your telegram. We will arrange to send spare parts for Battle air frames and engines already delivered, and also for Anson air frames and engines which you have. We will also send Gypsy engines at the rate of 40 a month, with spares. We will send more equipment if necessary and parts in due course. The vital importance of the Air Training Plan has increased rather than diminished, and efforts you are making to overcome difficulties and continue scheme at full pressure are most encouraging. We are deeply grateful.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS.

Rec'd Ottawa 6:17 A.M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS C 268390 Office of The Prime Minister

Name of Publication Montreal Gazette

Date July 11, 1940

Subject Air Tr.Plan

11,416 AIRMEN IN EMPIRE PLAN

Increase in Number Training in Past Month Is 3,000

Canada Prepared to Transfer U.K. Pupils Here if Necessary, Power Says

Ottawa, July 10.—(CP)—The British Commonwealth Air Training Plan has been speeded up and at present Canadian preparations are going ahead on such a basis that should enemy operations render full scale training impossible in England a good portion of that work could be carried on in Canada.

This transfer of training operation could be made with "a minimum interruption to the flow of personnel," Air Minister Power said today in a review of the training plan.

The plan has been speeded up wherever possible "but the long view is to be maintained in the prosecution of this war against an adversary whose first endeavors have gained him a momentary but not overbearing advantage," said Major Power.

"Indeed, Canada's preparation is going ahead so that should the enemy's bombing attacks on England render full scale training there impossible a substantial portion of that work could be carried on in the Dominion with a minimum of interruption to the flow of personnel."

Number of officers and men in training is 11,416, some 3,000 more than a month ago Major Power said, and first pupils of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan would graduate in September.

Then these young warbirds will serve with the Royal Air Force. At various air schools they already are well advanced in training, having started instruction as student pilots, air gunners and air observers last April.

Meantime there is no shortage of pupils and in 10 days the aircrew pupils will number 2,418, a figure which will be greatly increased as time goes on.

Major Power said efforts are being made to surmount the difficulties presented by Britain's postponement of shipment of aircraft and engines for training use because of the need of these supplies in the United Kingdom.

(Continued on Page 9, Col. 3.)

Australian and New Zealand and British pupils, to be given advanced training in Canada under the training plan will arrive according to original schedule, Major Power added, though he said dates of arrival could not be given because such information might aid the enemy.

This week representatives of the Empire countries participating in the training plan—Canada, Great Britain, Australia and New Zealand—and forming the plan's supervisory board, met and reviewed details of the plan.

"Units of the Royal Canadian Air Force now overseas are recognized as a voluntary supplement to Canada's role in the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan," Mr. Power said, "and will continue to be supported with reinforcements from the R.C.A.F. These men form a distinctly Canadian aero-contingent overseas, whereas graduates of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan will serve with the Royal Air Force.

"However, as stated by the Prime Minister some months ago, 'provision has been made for the identification in the field of the pupils with their respective Dominions, either by the method of organizing Dominion units or formations, or in some other way."

Units of various sorts already operating in the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan are: 1 air armament school; 1 central flying school; 1 school of administration; 1 equipment and accounting training school; 1 technical school; 1 aircraft inspectors' division inspectors' school; 3 manning depots; 2 initial training schools; 4 elementary flying schools; 1 service flying school; 1 air navigation school; 2 equipment depots; 19 recruiting centres; 1 school of aeronautical engineering; 1 wireless school.

Those in attendance at the meeting, in addition to Mr. Power, were: Defence Minister Ralston; Finance Minister Ilsley; Sir Gerald Campbell, High Commissioner for the United Kingdom; Sir William Glasgow, High Commissioner for Australia; Group Captain L. M. Isitt, representing New Zealand; J. S. Duncan, Deputy Air Minister; Air Commodore L. S. Breadner, Chief of the Air Staff; B. J. Roberts, financial adviser to the supervisory board; Air Vice-Marshal L. D. D. McKean, chief air liaison officer of the United Kingdom air liaison mission; Air Commodore G. O. Johnson, air member of the air council for organization; H. A. Scott, secretary of the supervisory board.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Épreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS C 268390

Office of
The Prime Minister

Name of Publication Montreal Gazette

Date July 11, 1940

Subject Air Tr.Plan

11,416 AIRMEN IN EMPIRE PLAN

Increase in Number Training in Past Month Is 3,000

Canada Prepared to Transfer U.K. Pupils Here if Necessary, Power Says

Ottawa, July 10 — (CP) — The British Commonwealth Air Training Plan has been speeded up and at present Canadian preparations are going ahead on such a basis that should enemy operations render full scale training impossible in England a good portion of that work could be carried on in Canada.

This transfer of training operation could be made with "a minimum interruption to the flow of personnel," Air Minister Power said today in a review of the training plan.

The plan has been speeded up wherever possible "but the long view is to be maintained in the prosecution of this war against an adversary whose first endeavors have gained him a momentary but not overbearing advantage," said Major Power.

"Indeed, Canada's preparation is going ahead so that should the enemy's bombing attacks on England render full scale training there impossible a substantial portion of that work could be carried on in the Dominion with a minimum of interruption to the flow of personnel."

Number of officers and men in training is 11,416, some 3,000 more than a month ago Major Power said, and first pupils of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan would graduate in September.

Then these young warbirds will serve with the Royal Air Force. At various air schools they already are well advanced in training, having started instruction as student pilots, air gunners and air observers last April.

Meantime there is no shortage of pupils and in 10 days the aircrew pupils will number 2,418, a figure which will be greatly increased as time goes on.

Major Power said efforts are being made to surmount the difficulties presented by Britain's postponement of shipment of aircraft and engines for training use because of the need of these supplies in the United Kingdom.

(Continued on Page 9, Col. 3.)

Australian and New Zealand and British pupils, to be given advanced training in Canada under the training plan will arrive according to original schedule, Major Power added, though he said dates of arrival could not be given because such information might aid the enemy.

This week representatives of the Empire countries participating in the training plan—Canada, Great Britain, Australia and New Zealand—and forming the plan's supervisory board, met and reviewed details of the plan.

"Units of the Royal Canadian Air Force now overseas are recognized as a voluntary supplement to Canada's role in the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan," Mr. Power said, "and will continue to be supported with reinforcements from the R.C.A.F. These men form a distinctly Canadian aero-contingent overseas, whereas graduates of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan will serve with the Royal Air Force.

"However, as stated by the Prime Minister some months ago, 'provision has been made for the identification in the field of the pupils with their respective Dominions, either by the method of organizing Dominion units or formations, or in some other way.'"

Units of various sorts already operating in the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan are: 1 air armament school; 1 central flying school; 1 school of administration; 1 equipment and accounting training school; 1 technical school; 1 aircraft inspectors' division inspectors' school; 3 manning depots; 2 initial training schools; 4 elementary flying schools; 1 service flying school; 1 air navigation school; 2 equipment depots; 19 recruiting centres; 1 school of aeronautical engineering; 1 wireless school.

Those in attendance at the meeting, in addition to Mr. Power, were: Defence Minister Ralston; Finance Minister Ilsley; Sir Gerald Campbell, High Commissioner for the United Kingdom; Sir William Glasgow, High Commissioner for Australia; Group Captain L. M. Isitt, representing New Zealand; J. S. Duncan, Deputy Air Minister; Air Commodore L. S. Breadner, Chief of the Air Staff; B. J. Roberts, financial adviser to the supervisory board; Air Vice-Marshal L. D. D. McKean, chief air liaison officer of the United Kingdom air liaison mission; Air Commodore G. O. Johnson, air member of the air council for organization; H. A. Scott, secretary of the supervisory board.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

PRESS CLIPPINGS C 268390 Office of The Prime Minister

Name of Publication Montreal Gazette

Date July 11, 1940

Subject Air Tr. Plan

11,416 AIRMEN IN EMPIRE PLAN

Increase in Number Training in Past Month Is 3,000

Canada Prepared to Transfer U.K. Pupils Here if Necessary, Power Says

Ottawa, July 10.—(C)—The British Commonwealth Air Training Plan has been speeded up and at present Canadian preparations are going ahead on such a basis that should enemy operations render full scale training impossible in England a good portion of that work could be carried on in Canada.

This transfer of training operation could be made with "a minimum interruption to the flow of personnel," Air Minister Power said today in a review of the training plan.

The plan has been speeded up wherever possible "but the long view is to be maintained in the prosecution of this war against an adversary whose first endeavors have gained him a momentary but not overbearing advantage," said Major Power.

"Indeed, Canada's preparation is going ahead so that should the enemy's bombing attacks on England render full scale training there impossible a substantial portion of that work could be carried on in the Dominion with a minimum of interruption to the flow of personnel."

Number of officers and men in training is 11,416, some 3,000 more than a month ago Major Power said, and first pupils of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan would graduate in September.

Then these young warbirds will serve with the Royal Air Force. At various air schools they already are well advanced in training, having started instruction as student pilots, air gunners and air observers last April.

Meantime there is no shortage of pupils and in 10 days the aircrew pupils will number 2,418, a figure which will be greatly increased as time goes on.

Major Power said efforts are being made to surmount the difficulties presented by Britain's postponement of shipment of aircraft and engines for training use because of the need of these supplies in the United Kingdom.

(Continued on Page 9, Col. 3.)

Australian and New Zealand and British pupils, to be given advanced training in Canada under the training plan will arrive according to [illegible] schedule, Major Power added, though he said dates of arrival could not be given because such information might aid the enemy.

This week representatives of the Empire countries participating in the training plan—Canada, Great Britain, Australia and New Zealand—and forming the plan's supervisory board, met and reviewed details of the plan.

"Units of the Royal Canadian Air Force now overseas are recognized as a voluntary supplement to Canada's role in the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan," Mr. Power said, "and will continue to be supported with reinforcements from the R.C.A.F. These men form a distinctly Canadian aero-contingent overseas, whereas graduates of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan will serve with the Royal Air Force.

"However, as stated by the Prime Minister some months ago, 'provision has been made for the identification in the field of the pupils with their respective Dominions, either by the method of organizing Dominion units or formations, or in some other way.'"

Units of various sorts already operating in the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan are: 1 air armament school; 1 central flying school; 1 school of administration; 1 equipment and accounting training school; 1 technical school; 1 aircraft inspectors' division inspectors' school; 3 manning depots; 2 initial training schools; 4 elementary flying schools; 1 service flying school; 1 air navigation school; 2 equipment depots; 19 recruiting centres; 1 school of aeronautical engineering; 1 wireless school.

Those in attendance at the meeting, in addition to Mr. Power, were: Defence Minister Ralston; Finance Minister Ilsley; Sir Gerald Campbell, High Commissioner for the United Kingdom; Sir William Glasgow, High Commissioner for Australia; Group Captain L. M. Isitt, representing New Zealand; J. S. Duncan, Deputy Air Minister; Air Commodore L. S. Breadner, Chief of the Air Staff; B. J. Roberts, financial adviser to the supervisory board; Air Vice-Marshal L. D. D. McKean, chief air liaison officer of the United Kingdom air liaison mission; Air Commodore G. O. Johnson, air member of the air council for organization; H. A. Scott, secretary of the supervisory board.

REPEAT
REPETER

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

CROSS REFERENCE SHEET

C 268391

Name or Subject: S U P P L Y

File No. AIR TRAINING PLAN

Despatch No 26, UKHC to XA

Regarding consideration by UK Govt of questions discussed by Howe, Purvis, Wilson & Sir H Self (New York) re possibility of Canada acquiring from stocks taken over from France in USA certain aircraft, engines, &c deemed necessary for the defence of Canada

Date July 11, 1940

SEE

Name or Subject

File No. relations with U S A ~~AIR TRAINING PLAN~~

REQ. 382
5,000—14-6-39

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268392

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

CROSS REFERENCE SHEET

C 268393

Name or Subject: Memo/ODS(interview Sir G.Campbell) BRITISH AIR SCHOOL in Canada

File No. AIR TRAINING PLAN Vol III

Regarding: proposal of UK Govt to transfer to Canada four air training schools (elementary)

Date: July 15, 1940

Skelton said it was "desirable to make clear from the start the governmental relationships involved, in view of the difficulty that had arisen in the discussions of 1938 and 1939.

Proposal brought to attention of Council by Mr POWER on July 16/40 and agreed to by Council

SEE

Name or Subject

File No. BRITISH AIR SCHOOL IN CANADA folder marked as above abbreviated B A S

REQ. 112
2,500—28-10-37

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COPY

C268334

MOST IMMEDIATE

SECRET

Office of the High Commissioner
for the United Kingdom,
Earnscliffe, Ottawa
25th July,1940

My dear Dr.Skelton,

I have received a telegram from the Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs,stating that the United Kingdom Cabinet have agreed to flights at weekly intervals by civil flying boats of British Overseas Airways Corporation from the United Kingdom to New York via Botwood and Montreal. If permits can be obtained from the Eire authorities, a call will be made each way at Foynes. Two long-range flying boats, "Clare" and "Clyde" will be employed. The "Clare" will leave this weekend; the exact date of departure will be notified. The "Clyde" will leave a week later.

Other demands for the use of these valuable boats may arise and the United Kingdom authorities cannot count on being able to continue a series of flights for the whole season to the end of September. Either or both the boats may have to be temporarily or permanently diverted for other work at any time.

The United Kingdom authorities are anxious therefore not to refer to the resumption of these flights as a service. They will continue with such regularity and so long as weather and circumstances permit. For this and other reasons, the United Kingdom authorities are anxious that the publicity for the flights should be reduced to a minimum.

I am advised that the needs of the Ministry of Aircraft Production for space in these boats will have priority over the needs of the other United Kingdom Departments, but some mail will be carried. Only one or two priority passengers can be carried and the passenger accommodation will be primitive.

The United Kingdom authorities propose that Captain Harold Balfour,Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Air, should take passage on the first outward run, in order to pay a brief visit to Canada for the purpose of renewing assurances to the Canadian Government of the continuing and increasing /importance

Dr.O.D.Skelton,
Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs,
Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268335

importance which is attached to the Empire Training Plan as the source of a large proportion of pilots and air crews, and of conveying a message of appreciation and encouragement. Captain Balfour would also be available to help in the discussion of any special points that have arisen in connection with the Training Plan, including questions of the supply of aircraft, spares and equipment, as well as any points arising out of the recent proposal that Royal Air Force training establishments should be transferred to Canada.

Captain Balfour's time in Canada would naturally be limited and it is suggested that it might possibly be convenient and useful if a special meeting of the Supervisory Board for the Air Training Plan could be held which he might be invited to attend. On the conclusion of his visit to Ottawa, he would proceed to the United States, returning to the United Kingdom by flying boat, New York, Montreal, Newfoundland. He would be accompanied by his Parliamentary Private Secretary, Flight Lieutenant W.W.Wakefield, M.P.

The United Kingdom Government trust that Captain Balfour's proposed visit would be acceptable to the Canadian Government.

Yours sincerely,

(sgd)GERALD CAMPBELL

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R
O

A-T-8
C 268396

OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER
FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM.
Earnscliffe,
OTTAWA.

513A/131

25th July, 1940.

SECRET.

My dear Prime Minister,

I expect that Dr. Skelton will have told you that Captain Harold Balfour is proposing to leave for a brief visit to Canada by the first trans-atlantic flying boat, which is expected to start from the United Kingdom sometime during this weekend. Captain Balfour has asked me to convey to you an expression of his personal pleasure at the prospect of seeing you and your colleagues again.

Yours sincerely,

Malcolm Campbell

The Right Honourable W. L. Mackenzie King, M.P.,
Secretary of State for External Affairs,
Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ODS/ET
27th July, 1940

A-T p C 268397

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER:

Sir Gerald Campbell tells me he has just had a cable from London saying that Captain Balfour is ill and will not be able to come on the first voyage of the Clipper. It is hoped he will be able to come out a week or so later.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268398

Ottawa, 26th July, 1940.

Dear Sir Gerald,

I have your letter of July 25th regarding British Overseas Airways Corporation flights from the United Kingdom to New York via Botwood and Montreal. I have learned with interest of the resumption of these flights and have brought the information to the attention of the interested departments.

The Canadian Government have noted that it is proposed that Captain Harold Balfour, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Air, should take passage on the first outward run, and will be very glad to welcome and discuss with him questions arising out of the Training Plan, as well as the proposal for the transfer of certain Royal Air Force training establishments to Canada.

Yours sincerely,

O.D.SKELTON

Sir Gerald Campbell, K.C.M.G.,
High Commissioner for the United Kingdom,
Earnscliffe,
Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COPY

ATP

OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER
FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM

513A/131

C 268399

SECRET

Earnscliffe, Ottawa

31st July, 1940

My dear Dr. Skelton,

With reference to your letter of the 26th July you will remember that I told you on the telephone the other day that Captain Harold Balfour had fallen sick and would not be travelling out on the first flying boat. I have now received a telegram from London saying that Captain Balfour has developed measles and he will not, therefore, be able to come out as early as was previously thought possible. Lord Caldecote states moreover that the departure of the flying boat has been delayed by discussion with the Eire authorities about operational requirements and the loading code, and that it is now clear that it will not leave before Saturday at the earliest.

Yours sincerely,

GERALD CAMPBELL

Dr. O.D. Skelton,
Under Secretary of State for External Affairs,
Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

5-8-40

Service Flying Training Schools

Notes used by Prime Minister at opening of No. 2 S.F.T.S., Uplands Airport, Ottawa, August 3, 1940.

Thanks to Governor General.

Appropriateness of good offices.

Emphasizes co-operative nature of training plan.

Congratulations - Minister for Air, & also

" Air Vice-Marshal Breadner

Workmen and contractors - part all playing.

Responsibility of an air force.

Air power the key to victory.

Each action important - saving of life,

achieving of victory.

Fate of lives and nations.

Begin to visualise magnitude of plan.

History of - Poland, etc.

Significance of plan - (see exhibit).

Air training not whole picture of Canada's air contribution.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Exhibit

C268401

Before the Agreement was concluded United Kingdom government informed Canadian government of its opinion that "participation in the Air Training Scheme would provide for more effective assistance towards ultimate victory than any other form of military co-operation which Canada can give".

Air Training Plan is one great brotherhood of youth of the Empire, joined together to achieve any victory.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COPY

+ TP
4x Nfld
4x Netherlands

OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER
FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM,

Earnscliffe, Ottawa,

3rd August, 1940

No. 35.

C 268402

SECRET

Sir,

With reference to my Note No. 27 of the 12th July, I have the honour to state that I have just received a telegram from the Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs stating that the Netherlands Government have now decided that they do not wish to proceed with the plan for training in Newfoundland. All trained Dutch Army air personnel will be absorbed into the Dutch Naval Air Unit now operating under the Coastal Command, Royal Air Force. Untrained personnel will complete their training in the Dutch East Indies.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your most obedient,

humble servant,

W.C.HANKINSON

for the High Commissioner

The Secretary of State for External Affairs,

Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268403

OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER
FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM
EARNSCLIFFE,
OTTAWA.

513A/133S

13th August, 1940.

SECRET

Dear Dr. Skelton,

With reference to my letter of the 8th August regarding the resumption of the trans-Atlantic service, the High Commissioner has asked me to let you know that he has received a telegram from London stating that Captain Harold Balfour has now recovered from his illness and hopes to make his journey to Canada in the flying boat "Clare" which is due to leave Poole on the second outward flight on Wednesday, the 14th August. The "Clare" will leave New York on the return flight to the United Kingdom on Sunday the 18th August. The time schedule will be similar to that contained in the High Commissioner's letter of the 2nd August (513A/131.

Yours sincerely,

W.C. Hankinson.

Dr. O.D. Skelton,
Under Secretary of State
for External Affairs,
Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268404

ODS/HMP.
September 9th, 1940.

AIR TRAINING IN THE UNITED STATES

Mr. Keenleyside telephoned from Washington today that in conversation Mayor LaGuardia had mentioned that Captain Balfour, when in the United States, had made a suggestion that the United Kingdom would like to obtain facilities for air training in the United States. Mayor LaGuardia indicated his opinion that if any request of this kind were to be made it would be much better to come from Canada, as it would be more likely to be acceded to in that case. He apparently wished to have the matter discussed by the Joint Defence Board.

I told him so far as I was aware there had been no request for United States facilities for winter training. So far as the R.C.A.F. and the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan were concerned, I understood that they planned to work throughout the winter here. It was possible that they would wish to use United States facilities if they were available. Aside from the technical questions involved, the Government would doubtless wish to consider what the appropriate time would be to put forward such a proposal to the United States Government, and if, as was indicated, the British Government had taken the initiative, it would be desirable to consult them before getting the wires crossed.

I told Mr. Keenleyside I would report the matter

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

at the first opportunity to the Prime Minister and the Minister of National Defence for Air. In the meantime I thought, beyond expressing interest and appreciation, the Canadian Members of the Board could not go further at the moment.

Mr. Power and Mr. Duncan are both out of town for the day.

I note in this morning's citizen a report of a statement by Mr. Duncan on the plans for air training in Canada throughout the winter (attached).

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R" Air Training

TELEGRAM C 268406

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

SECRET LONDON, September 24th, 1940.

CYPHER

NO. 1605.

No. 1605. Secret. Minister of Aircraft Production has offered to release to Canadian Government 100 Tiger Moth training planes at price of £1,003 f.o.b. Please inform me what reply I am to give Lord Beaverbrook.

MASSEY

Rec'd Ottawa: 12.23 P.M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ATP

C 268407

COPY

M E M O R A N D U M

SECRET

October 12, 1940

The Honourable the Minister.

Subject: Memorandum of Agreement between the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, and New Zealand, relating to training of pilots and aircraft crews in Canada and their subsequent service.

1. Article 15 of the above named Agreement reads as follows:

"The United Kingdom Government undertakes that pupils of Canada, Australia and New Zealand shall, after training is completed, be identified with their respective Dominions, either by the method of organizing Dominion units and formations or in some other way, such methods to be agreed upon with the respective Dominion Governments concerned. The United Kingdom Government will initiate inter-Governmental discussions to this end."

2. Although this Article indicates that the United Kingdom Government will initiate inter-governmental discussions, the Canadian public demand for greater participation by the Royal Canadian Air Force overseas indicates that no further time should be lost in opening discussions on the subject. There are three methods of satisfying Canadian public opinion in this respect, i.e.:

(i) The formation of completely manned and equipped Canadian Squadrons.

(ii) The designation as "R.C.A.F. Squadrons" of certain R.A.F. Squadrons to be manned by R.C.A.F. aircrew and R.A.F. ground crew and equipment.

(iii) The designation "Canadian RAF Squadrons" to be allotted to certain R.A.F. units progressively as Canadian aircrews sufficient to man and reinforce squadrons, are supplied to the United Kingdom.

3. Proposal (i) is not practicable because:

(a) The output of the J.A.T.P. provides aircrews only and no mechanic or ground personnel for overseas.

(b) Difficulty has been experienced in meeting the large demands of the J.A.T.P. in both equipment and personnel, and Home War Requirements cannot be met for some time to come

(c) Irrespective of (a) and (b), the cost of manning, equipping and maintaining all-Canadian squadrons in the field would be an enormous financial strain detracting from Canada's other war efforts.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

4. As a token of recognition discussions should be initiated based on the R.A.F. designating certain units as R.C.A.F. Squadrons or, if this is not agreed to, designating them as "Canadian" R.A.F. Squadrons.

5. The number of squadrons to be designated R.C.A.F. or Canadian R.A.F. should be in proportion to the Canadian output of the J.A.T.P., and its capacity for producing not only the initial strength of aircrews of such squadrons, but maintaining their total requirements in reinforcements.

6. The designation R.C.A.F. or Canadian R.A.F. should not be applied to an R.A.F. unit until three months after a complete squadron aircrew strength has been supplied to the United Kingdom, as such a period will be required for further training, in operational units, travelling, and postings procedure.

7. It would be undesirable to make any hard and fast rule that the units must be completely manned by Canadians, as this would handicap the R.A.F. in postings and might interfere with the careers and promotions of both R.A.F. and Canadian personnel. Further, the infiltration into squadrons must be gradual until the new crews gain experience under seasoned leaders. After this experience has been gained, it would then be practicable to arrange for the majority of Canadian aircrews to be allotted to R.C.A.F. or Canadian R.A.F. designated squadrons.

8. The present establishment and wastage figures by squadrons are shown on Appendix "A", together with the pilot output of the J.A.T.P., for 1941. Calculated upon these figures are also shown the number and months that R.A.F. units would be due to be designated R.C.A.F. or Canadian R.A.F. under the foregoing proposals. The calculation is based on pilots only, the supply of observers and air gunners being designed to balance with pilots.

(Signed) (L.S. Breadner)
Air Vice-Marshal,
Chief of the Air Staff.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

SECRET

COPY

C 268409

Appendix "A"

ESTABLISHMENTS, WASTAGE, J.A.T.P.
OUTPUT AND ESTIMATED R.C.A.F. OR 'CANADIAN' R.A.F. SQUADRONS

Establishments and Wastage

	Establishment	Wastage per month	Total Pilots per Squadron per month
Average R.A.F.Sqn. (Pilots)	27	9	36

Estimated Pilot output J.A.T.P. (Canadian only) to end of 1941.

Note The following output is that estimated for despatch overseas after requirements for H.W. Establishments, J.A.T.P. instructors (navigation and flying) and wastage for the three R.C.A.F. Squadrons now overseas have been deducted as shown. If Australia and New Zealand increase their pupils to Canada it will proportionately decrease the output of Canadian pupils.

Month during which pupils graduate	Gross Output	Required for J.A.T.P.	Required for H.W.E.	Req'd for R.C.A.F. Overseas	Total Required in Canada	Net for Overseas
Dec.						72-36 = 36
Jan.	208	55	11	22	88	120
Feb.	278	55	11	22	88	190
Mar.	553	55	11	22	88	465
Apr.	378	55	11	22	88	290
May	520	55	11	22	88	432
June	500	30	11	22	63	437
July	634	30	11	22	63	571
Aug.	600	30	11	22	63	537
Sept.	784	30	12	22	63	721
Oct.	942	30	12	22	63	879
Nov.	592	30	12	22	63	529
Dec.	940	30	12	22	63	877

Note

(i) Requirements for R.C.A.F. Squadrons overseas based on nine pilots per month for No. 1 (F) and No. 110 (AC) Squadrons and four pilots per month for No. 112 (AC) Squadron which squadron is not actively engaged in fighting operations.

(ii) Requirements for Home War Establishment based on the 136 pilots per year designated for Canada in the original training agreement.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268410

MONTHS DURING WHICH SQUADRONS CAN BE DESIGNATED R.C.A.F. OR 'CANADIAN' R.A.F. AND NUMBERS OF SQUADRONS SO DESIGNATED
J.A.T.P. OUTPUT FOR DECEMBER 1940 AND ALL 1941

Mon.	Output from Canada	Gross No. of Pilots Available	Req'd for New Sqdns. & Wastage	Balance	No. of New Sqdns to be designated	Total No. of Sqdns. designated	Remarks
Apr. 1941	36	36	36	0	1	1
May	120	120	117	∕ 3	3	4	Pilots available to form a Squadron designated R.C.A.F. or 'Canadian' R.A.F. during April 1941, completed training in Canada during December, 1940
June	190	193	180	∕ 13	4	8
July	465	478	468	∕ 10	11	19
Aug.	290	300	279	∕ 21	3	22
Sept.	432	453	450	∕ 3	7	29
Oct.	437	440	405	∕ 35	4	33
Nov.	571	606	585	∕ 21	8	41
Dec.	537	558	549	∕ 9	5	46
Jany. 1942	721	730	702	∕ 28	8	54
Feb.	879	907	846	∕ 61	10	64
Mar.	529	590	576	∕ 14	0	64
Apr.	877	891	864	∕ 27	8	72

EXPLANATION OF CALCULATIONS

Output of Canadian pilots in Canada during any month are allowed 3 full months before becoming available for squadron duty. Thus pilots who complete their training in Canada during a certain month e.g. January, are allowed 3 months e.g. February, March and April for training in the United Kingdom and become available for squadron duty during the next month e.g. May. A new squadron is designated R.C.A.F. or 'Canadian' R.A.F. when a sufficient number of pilots are available and trained to complete a squadron with a months' wastage of 9 per squadron has been deducted from the gross available, for the existing squadrons designated R.C.A.F. or 'Canadian' R.A.F.

Thus the total wastage required for the month for the squadrons already designated as R.C.A.F. or 'Canadian' R.A.F. is taken from the gross number of pilots available and the remainder used to form newly designated squadrons complete with their month's wastage i.e. 27 ∕ 9 = 36. The balance which will not form new squadrons and one months' wastage is held as a balance to be added to the new output to make up the Gross number of pilots available for wastage and to form new squadrons during the ensuing month.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

SECRET

ESTIMATED APPROXIMATE OUTPUT J.A.T.P. DURING 1942

Gross Output

50 Pupils per 24 days per school
Total per year per school - 760
Total for 12 schools - 9120

Require in Canada and for R.C.A.F. Overseas

Per month 30 Instructors, 22 R.C.A.F. Overseas, 12 H.W.E. - 64 per month - 768 per year.

Net Output for Overseas

9120 - 768 - 8352 per year

- 696 per month

Number of Squadrons that can be maintained designated R.C.A.F. or "Canadian" R.A.F.

Monthly wastage - 9

Number of Squadrons - 77

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

SECRET

C268412

ESTIMATED MONTHS SQUADRONS MAY BE DESIGNATED R.C.A.F. OR "CANADIAN" R.A.F. DURING 1942 UP TO SITUATION POINT i.e. 77 SQUADRONS

Mon.	Output from Canada	Gross No. of Pilots Available	Req'd for New Sqdns. & Wastage	Balance	No. of New Sqdns. to be designated	Total No. of Sqdns. designated	Remarks
1942 Apr.	877	891	864	≠27	8	72	From Appendix "A"
May	696	723	720	≠2	2	74
June	696	698	666	≠32	0	74
July	696	728	702	≠26	1	75
Aug.	696	722	711	≠11	1	76
Sept.	696	707	684	≠23	0	76
Oct.	696	719	684	≠35	0	76
Nov.	696	731	720	≠11	1	77
Dec.	696	707	693	≠14	0	77

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Lord Beaverbrook
4½ ATp

TELEGRAM C268413

FROM: THE RT. HON. THE PRIME MINISTER OF CANADA, OTTAWA,

TO : THE RT. HON. THE PRIME MINISTER OF THE UNITED KINGDOM, LONDON.

Ottawa, October 14, 1940

SECRET

PERSONAL

As I have not seen Bishop since his return to Canada, and have had no conversation with the High Commissioner for the United Kingdom with respect to anything he may have heard from other sources regarding anything said by Bishop, I am quite in the dark as to what representations may have been made by the High Commissioner for the United Kingdom in any communication sent to your government. I should be obliged if you would so inform Lord Beaverbrook. Meanwhile, I am greatly obliged to you for having immediately communicated with me on the matter.

I doubt if my colleagues and I could be more appreciative than we are of the problems with which the Air Ministry in the United Kingdom is faced. Our one aim is to have Canada's effort so related to the plans of the Air Ministry as to secure its maximum service and efficiency. As you know, in the development of the air training plan, we have been governed by the plan of strategy as given to us at the outset and such modifications as have since been made to expedite its development have been worked out in the closest conference between our Department of Defence for Air and the British Air Ministry. We are quite prepared to consider any further modifications or alterations of the plan that your government may deem advisable. The one thing, however, which we have to be most careful to avoid is any

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ground for suspicion in the mind of anyone that the plan itself is falling short in any particular of what was anticipated with respect to its development, and that the Air Ministry of the United Kingdom has had to resort to other means and measures to secure in the way of pilots what it was anticipated the air training plan would provide.

Rightly or wrongly, an impression is being fostered in certain quarters that, owing to developments under the air training plan not having materialised as anticipated, your government has found it necessary to seek opportunity for training pilots in the United States. My colleagues and I, of course, fully understand that, due in no particular to any disappointed expectations with respect to the air training plan, unforeseen events may well have made wholly advisable any and every effort to have additional pilots trained as rapidly as possible, and that in the United States as well as Canada. So long as this is done in a manner which could not be made to reflect upon what is being accomplished under the Commonwealth Air Training Plan, and after the fullest consideration of the extent to which the need might be met by adaptations of the air training plan itself, no possible exception could be taken by anyone. Like you, I am fully aware of the inevitable conflict between the short term and the long term view, and my colleagues, I believe, are equally conscious of what is to be said in support of each view. If anything, we ourselves, from the very beginning, have been more impressed with the importance of expedition than some of those whose counsel we have accepted in the plan's development.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

CROSS REFERENCE SHEET

C 268415

Name or Subject: Ltr. ADPH to PM (Quebec)

File No.: Air Training Plan

Regarding

Date: October 15, 1940
" 13, 1940
16, 1940

Enclosing draft cable to Churchill

re progress of air training plan;

Attaching message from Lord Beaverbrook received through UK HC re aircraft production problem. (Oct. 13)

Message from P.M. to L. Beaverbrook ack.message received through UK HC; expressing desire to afford utmost co-operation. (Oct 16)

SEE

Name or Subject

File No.

LORD BEAVERBROOK folder

REQ. 382
5,000—14-6-39

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ATP File

C 268416

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS, LONDON.

TELEGRAM NO. 180

MOST SECRET

CYPHER

Important

Ottawa, October 16th, 1940.

Following from Prime Minister to your Prime Minister:

Secret and Personal. Begins,

1. I have not seen Bishop since his return, and have had no conversation with the High Commissioner for the United Kingdom regarding any statements attributed to Bishop, nor am I aware of the terms of the message on the subject sent by the High Commissioner. I should be obliged if you would so inform Lord Beaverbrook.

2. I doubt if my colleagues and I could be more appreciative than we are of the difficulty and urgency of the problems with which the Ministry of Aircraft Production and the Air Ministry in the United Kingdom are faced, and the courage and resourcefulness with which those problems are being met. Our one aim is to have Canada's assistance in the air, as in all else, so related to the plans of the government of the United Kingdom as to secure the maximum effectiveness of our common effort.

3. The Canadian Government have continued to attach paramount importance to the development of the Air Training Plan which was conceived by the United Kingdom government as a means of creating that superiority in air strength which was deemed to be essential to victory. You will recall that Canada's participation in the Plan was regarded by the United Kingdom Government as the most effective assistance which Canada could give. Convinced of this, our energies have been directed toward the accomplishment of this aim.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268417

4. Despite the difficulties which resulted from the necessary decision of the United Kingdom Government to cut down drastically their supply of training aircraft undertaken in the Agreement, my colleagues and I are satisfied that the Plan has made, and is making, good progress at a rate substantially faster than that originally contemplated.

5. Unfortunately an impression seems to have been created in certain quarters both here and in the United States that the United Kingdom Government consider the Air Training Plan has not progressed satisfactorily and, as a result, have found it necessary to seek opportunity for training large numbers of pilots in the United States. Your statement that the air training plan is valued by the United Kingdom Government and that it will be pushed forward with the utmost strength is therefore most reassuring.

6. We fully understand that, apart entirely from the Air Training Plan, it may be desirable for the United Kingdom Government to make every effort to have additional pilots trained as rapidly as possible, in the United States as well as in Canada. So long as this is done in a manner which could not be made to reflect upon what is being accomplished under the Air Training Plan, or prevent the delivery of training planes required for it, and after the fullest consideration of the extent to which the need might be met by adaptations of the Plan, no possible exception could be taken by anyone.

7. You will, however, understand our concern lest it should be made to appear that the Air Training Plan is falling short of expectations. Like you, I am fully aware of the inevitable conflict between the short term and the long term view, and my colleagues, I believe, are equally conscious of what is to be said in support of each view.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268418

If anything, we ourselves, from the very beginning, have been more impressed with the iimportance of expedition than some of those whose counsel we have accepted in the Plan's development. If at any time the United Kingdom Government consider that the present plan should be modified or supplemented to adapt it to changing circumstances, we shall be glad to give any suggestions to this end our immediate attention.

8. We are more than appreciative of the great strain upon yourself and colleagues and indeed upon all in the United Kingdom. Our one aim is so to cooperate in everything as to be of the greatest possible assistance.

9. My kindest personal regards to yourself and Beaverbrook. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ATP

C268419

THE CITADEL
QUEBEC

TELEGRAM

FROM: THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE PRIME MINISTER OF CANADA,
OTTAWA

TO: THE RIGHT HONOURABLE LORD BEAVERBROOK MINISTER OF AIRCRAFT PRODUCTION, LONDON

Quebec,
October 16, 1940

Secret

Personal

Code

No.

I duly received from the High Commissioner for the United Kingdom memorandum containing your message of the 13th instant.

Please see communication I have today sent to ~~Churchill~~ the Prime Minister. From what I am able to gather from communications received, there would appear to be some conflict of view about the amount of aircraft production on one hand, and numbers of air pilots on the other of which I have no exact information. Your memorandum is most helpful in setting forth the position as regards aircraft. My communication to Churchill will explain where, in Canada so far as we are concerned, some ~~difficulties have presented themselves with regard to~~ uncertainty has been experienced as to what is really expected or desired of us with regard to the training of pilots.

Please believe that I have the utmost

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

confidence and the greatest admiration for what is being accomplished by the Ministry for aircraft production under your direction. If anything in the nature of misunderstanding exists, it has arisen from sources wholly outside opinions held by my colleagues and myself. My one aim, and it is shared by all of my colleagues, is to afford the utmost that lies in our power by way of effective co-operation with yourself, the Prime Minister and other of your colleagues.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COPY

NAVAL MESSAGE C268421

MOST SECRET

FOLLOWING ARE IN "DUCHESS OF ATHOLL" ANTICIPATED ARRIVAL HALIFAX 20th OCTOBER AND MONTREAL 23rd OCTOBER(FROM ADMIRALTY SIGNAL 1748/15).

ROYAL AIR FORCE FOR MONTREAL - 27 OFFICERS 2 WARRANT OFFICERS 239 AIRMEN.

GOVERNMENT CIVILIANS - MR.INNES STEWART,TREASURY OFFICIAL FOR MONTREAL, MR.J.A.STIRLING, MR.F.D'ARCY COOPER,BOARD OF TRADE WITH NURSE,MISS G. PELL FOR WASHINGTON VIA HALIFAX ONWARD CONVEYANCE HAS BEEN ARRANGED.

19.10.40

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

BAS

C268422

OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER
FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM
OTTAWA.

516X/351. 22nd October, 1940.

IMMEDIATE
SECRET

Dear Major Power,

With reference to the High Commissioner's letter of the 6th September regarding the transfer of certain R.A.F. training establishments to Canada, I am writing in the absence of Sir Gerald Campbell to let you know that a telegram has just been received stating that after a further review of the position, the War Cabinet has approved the move of No. 7 Service Flying Training School proceeding as arranged, and the first echelon of No. 10 Service Flying Training School leaving the United Kingdom at the end of this month. I understand that full details are being sent to the United Kingdom Air Liaison Mission. The telegram adds that the programme will again be reviewed early in November.

Yours sincerely,

W.C. Hankinson.

The Honourable Major C.G. Power, M.P., Minister of National Defence for Air,
OTTAWA.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

CROSS REFERENCE SHEET

C 268423

Name or Subject

File No. Air Training Plan III
(British Air Schools in Canada)

Letter from Hon. C.G. Power

Regarding confidential interview ~~with~~ between Hon. R.B. Hanson and J.S. Duncan (Acting Deputy Minister for Air (September, 1940)

Date Letter dated Oct 25/40
Memoranda " Sep 24/40

SEE

Name or Subject

File No. Leader of Opposition
(Sessional Folder)

REQ. 382
5,000—14-6-39

JG
29/10

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ATP

TELEGRAM C 268424

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN AUSTRALIA

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

CODE

No. 109

CANBERRA, October 18th, 1940.

No. 109. October 18th. Understand arrangements about completed with United Kingdom for Australia to send 40 excess air pupils per month for training in Rhodesia, first batch to be there before November 29th.

HIGH COMMISSIONER

Rec'd Ottawa, 7:26 a.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

BAS

C 268425

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS, LONDON.

TELEGRAM NO. 195

SECRET

CYPHER

Important

Ottawa, November 4th, 1940.

Transfer of Royal Air Force schools.

You will recall that late in July we raised the question of publicity regarding the proposed transfer of R.A.F. Schools to Canada and that we were advised through the High Commissioner for the United Kingdom that your Government considered any publicity on this subject might have serious consequences and would accordingly rather not have anything said at that time and also that a similar attitude was taken by Captain Balfour at a meeting of the Supervisory Board in August.

In the event of the question arising here would there be any objection to a brief statement being made of the facts as to the views of the United Kingdom Government to which reference is made above?

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COPY

ATP
C/K

Canadian Legation,
Washington, November 4, 1940.

SECRET

PRIVATE

Dear Dr. Skelton:

Today Mr. Hickerson asked me to see him at the State Department about a matter he said had been bothering him for some time. It concerned the operations of Messrs. Clayton Knight and Homer Smith, who, with headquarters at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York City, carry on certain dealings with United States citizens with a view to their entry into the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Mr. Hickerson and his associates on the political side of the State Department now find themselves in a somewhat embarrassing position in this connection, and he outlined it to me very frankly. In doing so he said that he did not intend to make any memorandum of our conversation for their records.

On the other hand, Mr. Hickerson recognized that certain intimations had reached the Canadian Government from the "highest quarters" here. He recalled the message which was communicated to Mr. Mahoney during my absence by Mr. Pierrepont Moffat (before the latter left the State Department to go to Ottawa) and which was conveyed to the Prime Minister by our Telegram No. 91 of May 18th, 1940, reading as follows:

> "Secret. Regarding enlistment United States citizens in Canadian Forces Moffat Department of State called at Legation 3 p.m. and asked me to transmit secret message to Prime Minister from 'highest quarters" informing him United States authorities will not be embarrassed by enlistment in Canada of United States citizens who proceed to Canada for such purposes. Mr. Moffat added it was his understanding that such United States

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268427

citizens would be called upon to take oath of obedience but not oath of allegiance. He further added United States authorities fully appreciate action thus far taken by Canada in this respect in conformity with neutrality and international laws."

(It appears that Mr. Moffat's notes of this message are not in the departmental records here but are kept in some special depository.)

On the other hand, Mr. Hickerson informed me of certain matters affecting the Knight-Smith organization which have come to their attention.

Communications, he said, have been coming to official quarters complaining about the activities of Messrs. Knight and Smith, and occasional references to these activities have appeared in the press.

Again, it appears that the Federal Bureau of Investigation (of the Department of Justice) have on their own motion made some enquiries into these activities. F.B.I. agents have interviewed Messrs. Knight and Smith and, I gather, have in some way seen some of the correspondence in which they and their organization have been engaged. The Department of Justice and the F.B.I. are not aware of the intimations received in Ottawa from the "highest quarters". The State Department have been asked by the Department of Justice whether the latter should proceed further with their enquiries.

Furthermore, the branch of the State Department which registers agents of foreign governments have learned of the operations of the Knight-Smith organization and have raised the question whether it ought not to be registered under the Act requiring the registration of agents of foreign principals and of foreign governments. (See our Despatches No. 1606 of

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268428

August 29th, 1939, and No. 1900 of October 10th, 1939.) Mr. Hickerson, I gather, has persuaded this branch not to press the matter on the ground that Messrs. Knight and Smith state that they are acting as private persons and not as agents of the Canadian Government.

Mr. Hickerson understands (presumably from the reports of the F.B.I. agents) that the Knight-Smith organization operates somewhat as follows. A United States citizen presents himself to enquire whether he can get into the R.C.A.F. He is informed that Mr. Smith is acquainted with the regulations and qualifications and can advise him. Sometimes the applicant is without funds to get to Canada, and in such cases is given a "loan". Sometimes it happens that the "loan" is not repaid. This raises the question whether the Knight-Smith organization are kept in funds by the Canadian Government or some Canadian official agency.

Mr. Hickerson also understands that Mr. Smith, while not now actually in the R.C.A.F., is on the Reserve. Mr. Smith, it appears, told the F.B.I. agents that he was simply a private person, but the F.B.I. uncovered some correspondence in which Mr. Smith was asking some official agency in Canada about his pay cheques. Mr. Knight, it appears, is a United States citizen.

Mr. Hickerson said frankly that in view of the intimation from the "highest quarters", he was not suggesting any question of prosecution, nor even of closing down this organization. On the other hand, he hoped that in some way they could be cautioned to "slow down and pull in their horns".

In my discussion with him Mr. Hickerson recognized the difficulty of defining precisely what could advisedly be done, and what not. If it were merely a matter of informing applicants before going to Canada that they would likely be received into the R.C.A.F., that would not create difficulties. The financial aspects mentioned above, however, do seem to present difficulties, as does Mr. Smith's status in relation to the R.C.A.F. Both of these features appear to touch on the two legal questions involved: the question of a possible violation of the law respecting recruiting, and

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

the question of a possible violation of the above mentioned Act concerning the registration of agents. These features would not jibe very well with the ostensible picture that Messrs. Knight and Smith are simply public spirited or patriotic private persons doing what they can to help Canada and the Allied cause.

It would appear also that as time has gone on the Knight-Smith organization has been carrying on more and more correspondence with possible applicants and has been in touch with other organizations in this country with a view to having possible applicants directed to the Waldorf-Astoria headquarters. The suggestion here appears to be that while there have been no open advertisements, there has been something coming close to advertising the organization's existence and purposes.

Mr. Hickerson mentioned that the reports made by the F.B.I. agents of their interviews with the Knight-Smith organization indicated that the latter had been fairly well advised as to the legal position. They seemed to "know the answers". The suggestion was made, however, that they might perhaps consider employing a wide-awake practical lawyer who could constantly advise them about what risks they were running of violating the laws of this country.

It happens that on October 26th I wrote you a letter regarding the Knight-Smith organization, enclosing a copy of a minute from the Air Attaché. The question was raised whether the Air Attaché should refer applicants directly to this organization. In view of the foregoing, it seems to me clear that neither the Legation nor anyone connected with it should take any steps or have any connection with the Waldorf-Astoria headquarters.

Mr. Hickerson also mentioned another case. It had come to his attention that Mr. Errol Boyd, with headquarters at the Murray Hill Hotel in New York City, was engaged in hiring radio operators who would be used,

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268430

I understand, in the ferrying of military aircraft across the Atlantic. It was pointed out that United States citizens engaging in that operation would be violating the law which prohibits their travelling into the war zone.

In the circumstances, I cannot do much more than pass on the substance of what Mr. Hickerson said. I know next to nothing about the Knight-Smith organization. I know nothing about the practical results achieved or the value of these measured against the risk of some possible disturbance of public opinion in this country (which has to be taken into account in spite of any special intimations that may be received). So far, our record respecting the position of the United States has been very good and has been definitely recognized here as being very good. Some people might even say we have leaned backward. For myself, I continue to believe that in the long run our attitude will turn out to have been wise and useful rather than the contrary. If, on all the facts, it is considered necessary to continue the Knight-Smith organization, I hope some way can be found so that the operations may be carried on more carefully and circumspectly and so that they can avoid violations of the law.

In any case, Mr. Hickerson has, I think you will agree, adopted a most friendly and helpful method of taking this matter up.

Yours sincerely,

(SGD) LORING C. CHRISTIE

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R

C 268431

file separately.

OFFICE OF THE MINISTER

CANADA

DEPARTMENT OF NATIONAL WAR SERVICES

November 7th, 1940.

Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King,
Prime Minister,
O T T A W A, Ontario.

Dear Mr. King:

I am enclosing for your information two memoranda, one regarding Training of Men for the Army, and the other regarding an Empire Council.

I hope to have an early opportunity of discussing with you information which I obtained with regard to different matters, but thought it wise to forward these two memoranda immediately.

With kindest regards,

Yours sincerely,

James G. Gardiner.

Encl. 2.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

OFFICE OF THE MINISTER

CANADA

C 268432

DEPARTMENT OF NATIONAL WAR SERVICES

At Sea,
November 5th, 1940.

Memorandum for Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King on the Training of Men for the Army.

My conversations with Mr. Churchill, Mr. Eden, Sir Andrew Duncan, Lord Beaverbrook, Sir James Lithgow, Lieut.-General McNaughton, Major-General Sansome and others, convince me that our greatest need at present is aeroplanes and air pilots supplied with suitable guns and ammunition, including bombs and land and water mines.

The general story is that we entered this war without adequate preparation. Hitler entered it six months below his peak production. We were forced because we were not prepared, or chose because we were lulled into a feeling of security behind the defences of France and the Channel, to allow him to proceed in peace during the first six months of the war to reach his peak. That he accomplished six months ago when he launched his attack which carried him to the Channel ports.

The drive to the Channel ports and the bombing of Britain has proven, according to information which I received from the above named and everyone else I talked to, including air pilots, that the German planes are superior to ours because of the greater efficiency of the German engines. Their planes are faster than ours and can attain an altitude of from five to ten thousand feet higher than ours, although they cannot be manouvered with equal facility.

The war has shown that our pilots are better. Even with their lesser numbers, slower fighter machines, and while unable to reach the heights attained by German fighter planes, our fighters have taken a toll of three planes to one, and a much higher proportion of men. This has resulted in the German bombers, which are slower than fighters, being driven from the Battle of Britain and Hitler resorting to the dispatch of fighters carrying a few bombs by night to be dropped from such heights that the bombing becomes of little military effect.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

It is evident, however, that before we can do more than keep the enemies planes so high that they are not effective our whole effort must be turned to producing faster and more efficient planes through the construction of better engines.

There are rumours that instruments are on the verge of completion which will drive planes from the air but they may be nothing more than rumours.

This need for new and better planes places the final drive for victory some distance into the future.

Added to this is the statement of Mr. Churchill made to me to the effect that one of our greatest difficulties is the lack of mass production of ammunition and light arms. It is stated that it will be the spring of 1942 before we will be in a position to arm an army and keep their arms supplied with ammunition. To use Mr. Churchill's own words: "It would be useless and criminal to line men up to be shot down, who could not defend themselves." The assumption seems to be that we can hold the German planes so high, even with our present equipment of anti-aircraft guns and fighter planes, that their bombardment will be ineffective. It is also thought that before the Spring of 1942 we will have planes, fliers and sufficient ammunition to take the offensive.

I was through factories of all kinds covering planes, engines, munitions, arms and shipbuilding. I am convinced that every effort is being directed toward full preparation for an offensive in 1942 and would therefore conclude that we should do three things.

First -- We should press every factory in Canada into the production of the most efficient type of engine, the making of factory tools, the building and maintenance of planes, and the production of munitions. We should take the best of our mechanically minded young men and train them to work in these factories.

Secondly -- We should encourage those who are inclined to take training in the flying of aircraft to enter our air training schools and prepare themselves immediately.

Thirdly -- We should encourage those best suited to it, as discovered in our compulsory training plan, to fit themselves for handling men in land warfare. I am more convinced than ever that while flying men and planes are essential to the armies ultimate success nothing can ever be accomplished beyond

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

the present skirmishing by two air forces.

Britain entered the "Battle of Britain" hopelessly outnumbered and outclassed in planes. Yet Britain could keep the planes so high that they were ineffective. Britain could have twice as many planes as Germany and much more efficient, yet even so supplied she could do nothing more over the great expanse of Hitler occupied areas than tantalize the population into intense hatred of Britain. This battle which I saw for four weeks in London can go on for a long time and end nothing.

Not

This war is going to be ended by an army possibly led into battle by scouting and dive bombers, followed by tanks but until these machines can be followed by motorized troops Hitler is going to be supreme on the Continent of Europe. The day will come in 1942 when the finest, best trained, armed and disciplined army ever placed on the battlefield will be required.

Democratic governments can be pardoned for not having planes, munitions and motorized equipment at the beginning of 1940 but no one will be pardoned for not having the equipment produced and manned by men who know how to use it in the Spring of 1942. This leaves us only one summer to prepare.

James G. Gardiner.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ATP
India

JER/S
Nov.4/40

FROM - THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA; TO - SECRETARY, THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, NEW DELHI, INDIA.

C 268435

CODE

No.____

Referred to P.M.
N.D. (for Air)

Ottawa, November 4, 1940.

Following for Frederick Tymms, Director, Civil Aviation, begins:

1. Reference your discussions with Legal Adviser External Affairs, concerning possibility of Indian participation in British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

2. Question has been considered by Canadian authorities who regard proposal with favour.

3. It is thought that Indian trainees should come into plan as members of the Indian Air Force and that as such they would be administered by their own regulations in respect of clothing, pay, etc. and would only be affected by R.C.A.F. regulations whilst in Canada in accordance with the Visiting Forces Act.

4. As Indian Air Force trainees could only come into the plan to the exclusion of the corresponding number of trainees from the United Kingdom or Dominions, it is considered that the financial basis for the admission of Indian trainees would best be arranged by including them in lieu of part of the quota of the United Kingdom if the United Kingdom Government ~~would~~ were be willing. The financial adjustment would then be a matter between the Indian Government and the Government of the United Kingdom only.

5. If on the other hand the Indian trainees were admitted to the exclusion of a small number from the United Kingdom and each Dominion, a revision of the Agreement ratified by all participants would be necessary.

6. It is proposed that this matter should be discussed immediately with the High Commissioner for the United Kingdom in Canada, the proposal being that the Indian trainees should be admitted as in lieu of part of the United Kingdom quota.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268436

7. Before taking this matter up with the United Kingdom authorities in this way, it would be appreciated if you would consult your Government and have the Government of Indian formally request the Canadian Government to commence negotiations along these lines. It is our understanding that you do not desire that United Kingdom Government should be approached until your Government has made a firm proposal. Ends.

Secretary of State
for External Affairs.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

TELEGRAM C 268437

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

SECRET

CYPHER

LONDON, November 9th, 1940.

CIRCULAR D. 563

Circular D. 563. Secret. We wish to bring to the notice of Dominion Governments certain dangers appearing from release for publication of details regarding Empire Training Scheme and aircraft production of a nature likely to furnish valuable information to the enemy. We fully appreciate importance of reassuring the public and encouraging and cheering those concerned by giving satisfactory indications of great progress made. At the same time, practice adopted here is based on importance of ensuring that details which can help the enemy should as far as possible be kept secret, and it would be of assistance to us if Dominion Governments could keep a careful watch on statements issued with the same object in view.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

Rec'd Ottawa, 10:19 p.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

TELEGRAM C 268438

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

SECRET

CYPHER

NO. 158

LONDON, November 10th, 1940.

No. 158. Secret. Your telegram No. 195, November 4th.

My telegram Circular D. 563, November 9th, which was drafted before receipt of your telegram, sets out views of His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom upon disclosure of information about air training and aircraft production. If the Canadian Government desires to do so, we should of course have no objection to it being made known that we consider it of the utmost importance to keep secret any information regarding air training or production of aircraft in so far as it might furnish valuable information to the enemy, and that it was on this account that we were anxious that the public should not be given plan for transfer of Royal Air Force Schools to Canada.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

Rec'd Ottawa, 1:35 a.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268439 Nov.12/40 JER/B

ATP
K/S

Note for the Prime Minister

Clayton Knight - Homer Smith Committee

I am enclosing a copy of Mr. Christie's letter to Dr. Skelton dated November 4, 1940, concerning the activities of this Committee and the views of the State Department with regard thereto.

2. The Prime Minister was informed by telephone of the general nature of the activities of this Committee and of the fact that it was expected that a feature article would appear in the Star in the afternoon and that it was expected that there would be publicity in the A.P. It was subsequently ascertained that there was also nearing completion a feature article in the Saturday Evening Post on the work of this Committee.

3. Acting upon instructions from the Prime Minister, this matter was discussed with Mr. Power and arrangements were made immediately to stop all press references to the work of this Committee. This stop is necessarily of a temporary character because if the news breaks in

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268440

the United States it will undoubtedly be necessary to release it.

4. Arrangements were also made by Mr. Power to stop or to defer the feature article in the Saturday Evening Post. It is not certain that it will be possible to do anything about this matter.

5. Arrangements were also made by Mr. Power for the preparation of a statement to be made in case the story breaks on a large scale in the U.S.A. This statement is being sent over to External Affairs and it will be submitted to the Prime Minister.

6. It was ascertained that this Committee is financed by the Canadian Government. On the other hand, it does not seem to be a very serious matter. It has undoubtedly infringed technical breaches of United States Neutrality Law. On the other hand, it has very great accomplishments to its credit. It has obtained personnel for flying United States bombers across the Atlantic and it has furnished more than two hundred experienced airmen for the R.C.A.F. In the event that the news breaks on a large scale and

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268441

that there is an unfavourable reaction of public opinion in the United States, there will undoubtedly be an unfavourable governmental reaction. It should then be possible to dissolve the Committee and to start again, if necessary, in a different way and under a different name. It is even possible that it might not be necessary to start again as the Committee has accomplished the most urgent parts of its work.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R" C 268412

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS, LONDON

MOST SECRET

CYPHER OTTAWA, November 14th, 1940.

No. 202

No. 202. Most Secret. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister, Begins:

1. It is now possible to forecast with reasonable accuracy the output of air crew under the Commonwealth Air Training Plan. I am advised that the Plan will be operating at capacity before the end of next year. During 1941, the output of air crew will rise from something over 400 in January, to over 1,000 in May, and over 1,700 by December. It is anticipated that at full capacity, that is, from January of 1941 onwards, some 800 pilots will be turned out each fortnight, and 420 observers and 580 air gunners every 28 days. These figures do not, of course, include the output of such Royal Air Force schools as are or may be transferred to Canada under existing arrangements. This means that despite the many difficulties encountered, the Plan, as a result of the efforts which have been made by all concerned, will have reached its peak considerably in advance of the date originally contemplated.

2. While this anticipated output of trained airmen is considerable, our Department of National Defence for Air regards as feasible a further substantial expansion of the present programme under the joint Plan.

3. As administrators of the Plan, under the agreement between the four co-operating governments, we are willing to undertake such a further substantial expansion of the joint programme, and would be glad to do so if the United Kingdom

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Government, in view of their other sources of supply of air crew, the anticipated supply of training and operational aircraft, and their judgment of the probable development of the war, are of the opinion that the additional air crew who would result could be used effectively and would constitute a helpful contribution in the common effort.

4. The detailed arrangements under which such an expansion of the joint programme should be undertaken, and the financial implications of such a revision of the Plan would, of course, form the subject of discussion and agreement between the Governments concerned.

5. My colleagues and I continue to be impressed by the great importance of air power in the struggle in which the Commonwealth is engaged. We continue to follow with admiration the splendid efforts which the United Kingdom is putting forward, under the most difficult conditions, to develop her air strength to the utmost. If the suggestion put forward in this telegram can assist in this great work, we will gladly undertake the further effort involved.

6. In the circumstances we should like to have an early expression of your views as to the desirability of undertaking the substantial expansion of the Commonwealth Air Training Plan to which I have referred. You will readily appreciate that if such action is to be undertaken, preparations should be set on foot with the least possible delay. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ATP

ODS/ET
21 Nov.1940

PERSONAL

C 268444

Re 162 DO.

Emphasis on air and naval expansion seems to me to be in the right direction.

That does not mean that this would not present problems that do not have to be fitted into the general scheme,as you have frequently indicated. With the experience now available,our Air Ministry will doubtless be able to draw up a timetable showing the additional facilities, instructors,ground crews and trainees required in the scheme, and the schedule of output of trained men.

In addition to considering the financial programme and equipment possibilities,including the obtaining of planes from the United Kingdom or by purchase in the United States or building in Canada, it would appear advisable to have definite reports from our Air Ministry as to the present and future availability of suitable men for pilots,gunners,etc. I understand there has been no lack of good men up to date,but in view of the high qualifications needed, the question comes up whether an increasing supply can be furnished on a voluntary basis. I would be inclined to think it could,but that is wholly a guess. Mr. Powers' reference to the fact that there were only 300 applications from Quebec indicates one difficulty.

.S.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

TELEGRAM C 268445

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

MOST SECRET

CYPHER LONDON, November 20th, 1940.

No. 162

No. 162. Most Secret. Your telegram No. 202 of November 14th. Following for Prime Minister from my Prime Minister, Begins:

1. I am most grateful to you for your message and for your very generous offer of affording facilities for a further expansion of the Joint Air Training Plan. I am confident that we shall be able to make excellent use of it.

2. A review of air training requirements in the light of latest developments is at present in progress, and it is of the utmost value to the War Cabinet in this connection to know that in such further measures as prove to be necessary they can rely on the continuance of the wholehearted assistance of the Canadian Government, which has already made such a notable contribution to our common effort.

3. As soon as our review is completed, I will let you know for your consideration what we think would be best direction for our further joint efforts.

4. As you mention in paragraph 4 of your message, any measures for extension of the Joint Training Plan must form the subject of discussion and agreement between all Governments concerned. Would you agree to my repeating to the Prime Ministers of the Governments of Australia and New Zealand, text of your message and of this reply, or would you prefer to take this action yourself?

5. Subject to your agreement, we should like to offer a cordial invitation to Air Vice Marshal Breadner to pay a visit to this country. Such a visit would be most valuable

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

TELEGRAM

C 268446

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON,

for the purpose of consultation on many training questions, and would give Air Vice Marshal Breadner the fullest and most up to date information on our plans for the future development of the Air Force. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

Rec'd Ottawa, 11:50 a.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

MEMORANDUM

CONFIDENTIAL

ATP
CK

C268447

November 21st, 1940.

Clayton-Knight Agency

Mr. Duncan said today there were some features in connection with the Government's decision to terminate the Clayton-Knight arrangement which he thought might be brought to the Prime Minister's attention, if that had not already been done.

He had brought Clayton-Knight and Homer Smith up from New York on learning from Mr. Power of the Cabinet's decision, and had got full information from them as to the present situation. Through the seven Clayton-Knight Agencies over three hundred pilots have been obtained from the United States for use in the joint air training scheme. These men were all experienced pilots and needed only short refresher courses. They were employed mainly in instructional work, largely in flying observers, bombers, etc. for practice. It would have been extremely difficult to replace them. Their securing these men had been an essential factor in the speeding up of the whole scheme and further recruits from this source had been counted on for continued development. Equally, the future development of the scheme would be greatly hampered if the 300 to 400 pilots who had been counted on for instructional duty were cut off. Mr. Duncan stated that at the

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268448

moment only about one pilot a day was coming in but this would increase rapidly as a result of inquiries made.

Again, stopping the scheme immediately would he thought lead to a great deal of publicity and adverse comment. If the scheme was stopped he thought that a period of two or three weeks should be allowed to terminate it. They had had some apprehension at times as to adverse comment in the United States but there had been none thus far. There had been over three hundred United States press comments, and the placards (such as Mr. Power showed the other evening) had been placed in aerodromes and airports all over the country. Several hundred enquiries were being received monthly.

Mr. Duncan wondered whether the situation had changed in Washington since Mr. Christie had brought the matter up. I made it clear that Mr. Christie had not brought the matter up. He had merely transmitted an enquiry from the State Department.

So far as I was aware, there were two main difficulties in the present arrangement. The first was that the President had definitely and confidentially indicated to the Prime Minister some months ago that while they had no objection to Americans enlisting in Canada in the Canadian forces (taking the oath of obedience, not of allegiance), they did not wish any recruiting done in the

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

United States. The Prime Minister had explained this to his colleagues. Recently, the State Department had asked Mr. Christie to call and had pointed out in a confidential and sympathetic discussion that open recruiting and solicitation for air pilots in the United States was apparently being done and indicated this would prove embarrassing. Both financial and registration questions were involved, and inquiries were being made by certain United States government agencies. The second difficulty was that it appeared that Canadian public funds were being used in furtherance of the scheme. It had been understood that any expenses in connection with the enlisting of these men would be provided by private sources. If it was a fact that public funds were being used this would obviously make it more difficult to establish that the understanding with the United States had been carried out. Mr. Duncan said that while private funds had been provided at the outset the plan had now got beyond such funds and it was undoubtedly a fact that Canadian funds were now being utilized.

With reference to the F.B.I. inquiry, Wing Commander Smith had stated they had themselves asked for an inquiry, with quite happy conclusions. No question of expense arose in this inquiry. Two weeks ago, Air Commander Edwards while in Washington saw Tamm, head of the F.B.I. under Hoover, who said activities there were entirely O.K.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Mr. Duncan pointed out that the R.A.F. had started training pilots in civilian schools in the United States, 20 a month in each of 4 schools, shortly to be stepped to 1000 all told, all recruited by the Clayton-Knight Committee, the R.A.F. paying the tuition. He added that all the United States Senior Air Officers in Washington knew and approved of the Canadian plan.

He enquired whether if the Government still felt it would not be possible to carry on the plan under Government auspices, there would be any objection to carrying it on by private funds from some Canadian or United States citizen, or asking the R.A.F. to provide for it.

I told Mr. Duncan that I would report the conversation to the Prime Minister. The Minister of Defence for Air would doubtless be reporting direct to his colleagues.

On reading Christie's letter of November 4th, which came in during my absence from the office, I see that Hickerson said that particularly in view of the intimation from "highest quarters" in May last, he was not suggesting closing down the organization but cautioning them to "slow down and pull in their horns". It further appears that Wing Commander's official position created a difficulty, and also the financial implications of the "loans". The question does not appear to have been considered by the President himself recently.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ATP
CK

Nov 28:—
reply suggested shortly.
Copy sent to Power.

SECRET

PRIVATE

C 268431

Ottawa, 25th November, 1940.

My dear Mr. Mahoney,

May I refer to Mr. Christie's note of November 4th regarding the operations of Messrs. Clayton Knight and Homer Smith.

The Government very greatly appreciate the considerate and sympathetic manner in which this question has been brought up by Mr. Hickerson. Important as has been the help given by United States aviators who have come to Canada and enlisted in our Air Force, they would not wish to see broader issues jeopardized by any difficulty arising out of the continuance of the activities to which attention was called by the State Department. Mr. King had informed his colleagues some months ago of the necessity of observing the understanding that enlistment of any United States citizens in the Canadian Forces should not be effected by recruiting or signing up in the United States. He has recently repeated this injunction.

It is, however, considered desirable to indicate some factors in the situation which perhaps were not known

M.M. Mahoney, Esquire,
Canadian Legation,
Washington, D.C.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268452

to the State Department, and to ascertain whether the Administration is now definitely of the opinion that the activities of these gentlemen are embarrassing and should be terminated.

The first point that might be brought to the attention of the State Department is the value of the assistance afforded our air training scheme by the pilots who have come from the United States largely on information obtained from the agencies in question. Over three hundred pilots from the United States have joined up. They are employed mainly in instructional work. Securing these men has been an essential factor in speeding up the whole plan. One instructor now is worth ten six months from now. The further development and speeding up of the air training scheme would be considerably impeded if it were not possible to obtain pilots from United States sources and it thus became necessary to "plow in" for instructional purposes men now graduating from the training schools rather than to send them overseas.

The second general point is that the giving of information through these agencies has been going on with a large amount of publicity, newspaper and otherwise, for some months without any apparent difficulty or adverse comment.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268453

The activities in question appear to be well-known and approved in Washington by senior air officers and many other quarters. As for the F.B.I. enquiry, it is understood that this enquiry, which was welcomed by Smith, was quite satisfactory, and that Mr. Tamm, for example, has recently indicated that no exception is taken.

To terminate these activities so far as they concern Canada might have a prejudicial effect on the work being done by the same agencies for the R.A.F.

If there are any special phases of the past or present operations of the Clayton Knight group as to which special difficulty is felt, the Canadian authorities would be glad to give them immediate consideration.

I should be obliged if you could let me know as soon as possible the outcome of your discussions.

Yours sincerely,

(Signed) O.D.Skelton.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268434

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA.

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS, LONDON.

SECRET

CYPHER

NO. 2/2

Ottawa, November 26th, 1940.

No. 2/2 Secret. Your telegram No. 162 of November 20th. Prime Minister is entirely agreeable to Mr. Churchill repeating to the Prime Ministers of Australia and New Zealand text of message contained in my telegram No. 202 of November 14th, and of Mr. Churchill's reply.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

AH/R

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R

ATP
CK

ODS/AH

C268455

November 30th,1940.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER.

Nov.27th

Attached is a copy of a letter from Mahoney in reply to my letter of November 25th on the subject of the Clayton-Knight Committee. I also enclose a copy of a covering note I sent Mr. Power today.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268436

SECRET

November 27th, 1940.

Dear Dr.Skelton,

In accordance with your request made by telephone yesterday afternoon, Mr. Reid called this morning on Mr. Hickerson, to discuss with him the Clayton-Knight Committee. Mr. Hickerson had been unable to see Mr. Reid yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Reid said that the Canadian Government greatly appreciated the considerate manner in which Mr. Hickerson had brought up the question on November 4th. Mr. Hickerson could be assured that the authorities in Ottawa are anxious not to jeopardize relations with the United States on broader issues because of difficulties arising out of the continuance of the work of this Committee. The Prime Minister had impressed this on his colleagues in the Cabinet from the start to the finish.

The Government would like to be sure that the Administration is now definitely of the opinion that the activities of the Committee are embarrassing and should be terminated.

O.D.Skelton,Esq., Ph.D.,
Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs,
Ottawa,Canada.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268437

The Government would like to indicate some factors that may not be fully known to the authorities in Washington.

1. The great value of the assistance which has been rendered by the Committee. Over 300 have come in as a result of its work. They are mostly doing instructional work which has been particularly valuable in the initial stages of the Commonwealth Air Training Plan. Otherwise it would have been necessary to plough in the early graduates.

2. The work of the Committee has been given a good deal of publicity in the United States without apparently raising adverse comment. Its work is known to a large number of people in Washington, including senior air people.

As to the enquiry by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Mr. Tamm had recently indicated that the F.B.I. had no objection to the work of the Committee. Mr. Reid added that the Canadian Government would be grateful to learn if there were any special phases of the work of the Committee to which exception could be taken.

Mr. Hickerson said that he did not understand the statement that the Canadian Government would like to be sure that the Administration is now definitely of the opinion that the activities of the Committee are embarrassing and should be terminated. The Administration does not want to say that the activities should be terminated and has never asked that they should be terminated.

Mr. Hickerson, however, does suggest that the Committee

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

should be cautioned by the Canadian authorities to be somewhat more circumspect, "to pull in their horns". He suggests that the situation of the Committee be re-examined in the light of the fact that its activities have received a certain amount of publicity. The Department of State has received enquiries from private individuals asking whether they know of the activities of the Committee. To these enquiries the Department of State has given a good meaningless bureaucratic answer. The F.B.I. has been taken care of, but it is more difficult for the Department of State to deal with enquiries from private individuals.

The Department of State has told its section dealing with the registration of agents of foreign principals not to send the Committee a notice concerning the requirements of the Act. The F.B.I. asked the Committee definitely whether they represent the Canadian Government. The Committee replied, no. It is on this basis that the Department of State's instructions concerning registration of agents of foreign principals were given. The Department of State does not want the Committee to be registered.

Mr. Hickerson suggests that Mr. J.E.Read make a critical examination of what the Committee is doing, asking himself on each specific aspect of the Committee's work whether the Committee is violating United States law. He recommends further that, after study by Mr. Read, the question be turned over to a United

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

States legal adviser, such as Mr. Dean Acheson, for his opinion.

In this connection, Mr. Hickerson referred to the press release issued by the Department of State on January 14,1937. This release cites the sections of the United States code which deal with enlistments and recruiting activities. /Department of State press releases, January 16,1937. Vol. XVI, No. 381, pp. 37-87/ (These sections were analyzed in a memorandum forwarded under cover of Legation despatch No.80 of January 23,1937.)

Mr. Hickerson says that the Committee is definitely going beyond what the "highest quarters" had in mind in the communication of May 18,1940, to the Prime Minister through Mr. Pierrepont Moffat. This communication constituted only a "timid departure" from the position which the United States had taken at the outbreak of the war.

In order that our records of this message from the "highest quarters" might correspond exactly, Mr. Hickerson was good enough to give Mr. Reid a copy of that part of Mr. Moffat's secret letter to Mr. Sumner Welles in which Mr. Moffat gives the text of his communication. This reads as follows:

> "I said that we realized that the Canadian Government had been leaning over backwards in the matter of not incorporating Americans in the Canadian armed forces; that we further realized that Canada would never, under any circumstances, recruit in this country or try to circumvent in any ways our enlistment laws; that we further understood that Americans enlisting in the Canadian Air Force or other armed forces in Canada are not required to take an oath of allegiance to the King

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268460

(merely an oath to obey orders given), and hence would not lose their American citizenship. Now, if Mr. Mackenzie King wished to adopt a more liberal policy and to indicate in some careful manner (without of course indicating in any way that the matter had been discussed with American authorities) that Americans of proper age who, of their own volition, came to Canada and desired to join the air corps or other fighting forces, would not be automatically turned down, this would not be embarrassing to Washington.

"Mr. Mahoney said this message would be most welcome, and that he would convey it to Mr. Mackenzie King without delay and in complete confidence."

The clause which I have underlined is clearly relevant to any discussion of the work of the Clayton-Knight Committee.

Mr. Hickerson said that he prefers not to answer the question whether there are any special phases of the work of the Committee to which exception could be taken. This is a matter which, as he had suggested, should be determined by Mr.Read and Mr. Acheson. The Department of State does not know very much about the inner workings of the Committee, and they do not want to know more than they at present know.

Mr. Hickerson, however, suggests that the following two aspects of the work of the Committee might be discontinued as not being in line with the information received from the "highest quarters" -

(1) the "lending" of money to applicants to enable them to go to Canada, espedially since the F.B.I.'s examination of the records of the Committee indicate that this money is coming from the Canadian Government;

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

(2) the circularizing or "advertising" that the Committee is doing. Apparently the Committee has been getting lists of instructors from various schools and instead of waiting for these instructors to come to them they are having their agents call on them.

Mr. Hickerson does not think that there is much danger that the Dies Committee will uncover the activities of the Committee. He did, however, hint that it might be as well if the Committee were to get rid of a certain amount of its incriminating correspondence in case its files are investigated.

He concluded by saying that he thinks that "the people in Ottawa do not understand the possible embarrassment which the work of the Committee might cause the Administration." After all, the United States has certain laws on its statute books, and it is difficult for the Department of State to turn a blind eye to obvious violations of these laws. Clearly in the present state of public opinion in the United States no member of the Committee would be convicted by the courts of a violation of United States laws. He referred, however, to a statement which the Minister had made, that it had been suggested to the Legation that they refer enquirers to the Committee, and asked Mr. Reid to imagine the outcry in the United States which would result from a disclosure that Mr. Thomsen, the German Chargé

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268462

d'Affaires, had referred applicants for service in the German flying corps to a Committee of this character.

On Mr. Reid's return to the Legation, he telephoned Mr. Hickerson to ask him, at your request, who had been behind his original statement to the Minister of November 4th, concerning this Committee. Mr. Hickerson replied that it had been Mr. Berle and himself.

Yours sincerely,

(Signed) M.M. Mahoney

Chargé d'Affaires.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268463

Ottawa, 30th November,1940.

SECRET

Dear Mr. Power,

With further reference to my letter of November 28th, I enclose a copy of a letter from Mr. Mahoney regarding the Clayton-Knight Committee.

Nov.27

With reference to the last paragraph of the letter, I may say that Mr. Berle is next to Mr. Welles in the State Department and very closely in touch with the President. Mr. Hickerson, who has for a number of years been specially in charge of Canadian affairs, is, I may say frankly, next to the President himself, the best and most effective friend Canada has in Washington.

Yours sincerely,

O.D.SKELTON

The Hon.C.G.Power,
Minister of National Defence
for Air,
O t t a w a.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ATP
OK

ODS/ET
6th Dec.,1940

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER:

C 268464

Clayton Knight

I enclose a note of a short conversation with Mowat Biggar. I assume Mayor La Guardia was asked to intervene by some of the Clayton Knight people.

Dec.3.

I also enclose a copy of a letter from Mahoney received yesterday,which indicates clearly what the attitude of the State Department actually is.

Do you wish to have me notify Mr.Power of the La Guardia conversation,and also to send him a copy of Mahoney's letter of December 3rd?

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ODS/ET
6th Dec.1940

Clayton Knight

C268465

Colonel Biggar telephoned last evening that he had had a message from Mayor La Guardia on this subject. It was to the effect that the State Department was not as far ahead as the President in this matter. We had better consider carefully whether we had to do this. If we did consider it necessary, there would be no intervention or trouble.

I asked Mr.Biggar if Mayor La Guardia professed to speak for the President. He said he did not in terms say he had seen the President,but there was a definite implication he was speaking with authority. I suggested to Mr.Biggar that he get in touch at once with the Prime Minister, which he did. I added that I doubted if Mayor La Guardia was fully aware of what the attitude of the State Department had been.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COPY

CANADIAN LEGATION
WASHINGTON D.C.

C268466

SECRET AND PRIVATE

December 3,1940

Dear Dr.Skelton:

Mr.Hickerson asked Mr.Reid to call on him this morning to discuss further the Clayton Knight Committee.

Mr.Hickerson had shown Mr.Berle a copy of your letter to me of November 25. Mr.Berle said that he wholeheartedly agreed with what Mr.Hickerson had said to Mr.Reid on November 27.

Mr.Hickerson said that what he said on that occasion could be summed up as follows:

1. We did not ask that the activities of the Clayton Knight Committee should be terminated; we do not now ask that these activities be terminated.

2. All we have in mind is that the Canadian Government should,in view of the investigation made by the Department of Justice and various enquiries received by the Department of State, critically review what the Clayton Knight Committee is doing with a view to satisfying itself that there is no violation of United States law. This might involve "changing their activities a little bit",advising them to "pull in their horns". Mr.Hickerson elaborated a little on the second point by saying that they felt that the Canadian Government should make sure that the Clayton Knight Committee is staying within the law. He said that he felt that what was needed was the advice of a friendly United States lawyer with the "instinct of an ambulance chaser". He meant by this a lawyer who would be able to stretch the law a little.

He added that the Clayton Knight Committee had been "damn careless" in the way in which they had gone about their job. At another point in the conversation he referred to the Committee as being "unnecessarily careless" in the way they had gone about "loaning" money.

Yours sincerely,

M.M.MAHONEY

Chargé d'Affaires.

O.D.Skelton,Esq.,Ph.D.,
Under Secretary of State for External Affairs,
Ottawa,Canada.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"With complete confidence should we entrust it to a administration which has so amply excelled promise by performance"

C268467

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

ATP

TELEGRAM

C 268408

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

MOST SECRET

CYPHER

No. 178

LONDON, December 9th, 1940.

No. 178. Most Secret. Your telegram No. 202 of November 14th and my telegram No. 162 of November 20th. Following for your Prime Minister, Begins:

1. May I renew to you the deep satisfaction we feel over the offer which you are able to make to enlarge the joint training scheme. There could not be a more striking testimony to energy and efficiency with which the scheme has been operated. I send to you and your colleagues my admiration and my gratitude for an assistance which promises to be of major importance in the war.

2. I have now had the opportunity to review our training position. I find that it is not thought desirable to embark, at present, on an enlargement of the joint scheme. The decisive consideration is this: the Air Ministry is absorbed in current operations and in making ready for the spring battle. Until that battle has opened it will not be possible for me to take decisions about an extension of the joint scheme with the Secretary of State for Air. As soon as the situation has cleared, you may be sure that we will cooperate to the fullest in the admirable suggestion you make.

3. In the meantime the Secretary of State for Air will discuss plans at length with Colonel Ralston and Mr. Howe. He has arranged to meet Colonel Ralston on Tuesday next.

4. We should be most grateful if, in another direction, your Government could bring an additional measure of assistance

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

TELEGRAM

C268469

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON,

to the training situation. It would be desirable to develop, as swiftly as possible, the production of training aircraft in the Dominion. Any steps which your administration might take to secure this object would have the complete cooperation and eager support of the Secretary of State for Air. In particular, the Secretary of State wishes to draw your attention to the possibilities of Anson aircraft, particularly if Jacobs engines can be got from the United States. He understands further that it is possible that North American Harvards might be built in Canada. This would be a most desirable project provided only that engines are available. You will understand how important it is that there should be no diversion of engines from Harvards already on order in the United States, and destined for Canada.

5. The proposed extension of productive capacity of the Dominion, which I now put forward for your consideration, would represent an important reinforcement of Canada's strategic role as a centre of training and supply. With complete confidence would we entrust it to an administration which has so amply excelled promise by performance. Ends.

Read to War Committee of Council
10-XII-40

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

Rec'd Ottawa, 6:45 p.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ATP

TELEGRAM C 268470

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

CODE LONDON, December 13, 1940.

NO. 2074

No. 2074. Following from Ralston for Power, Begins:

Discussed with Air Ministry this morning principles governing allocation of ultimate responsibility for commitments made by Canada, following the United Kingdom's suspension of shipment of aircraft under training plan, which I have already discussed with you.

First Principle. "The United Kingdom will assume all costs reasonably incurred by Canada to overcome deficiencies in United Kingdom equipment and to assure alternative supplies in case of possible future interruption." Accepted.

Second Principle. "The United Kingdom recognises that the additional commitments made by Canada as set out in Appendix (A) were, under the circumstances, costs reasonably incurred by Canada, in emergent conditions existing and having regard to the obscurity of future developments in order to prevent possible serious delays and as insurance against potential frustration of the plan." Accepted, subject to agreement on details of Appendix (A). This Appendix is the one referred to in a letter from you to Sir Gerald Campbell dated November 12th. Feel there should be no real difficulty over Appendix (A) though some questions were asked this morning as to reasons for including items B. C. H. I. and L. Suggest Breadner should be given

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

TELEGRAM C268471

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON,

all possible factual information to show grounds for such inclusion. United Kingdom cabling Sir Gerald Campbell on this matter, and he or McKeen should be able to confer with Breadner before the latter leaves.

Third Principle. "The United Kingdom will assume any additional costs due to increased requirements of twin engine aircraft, resulting from the recent decision to increase the output of twin engine pilots." Accepted.

Fourth principle. "The United Kingdom will assume its share of additional costs resulting from the revision, acceleration or extension of the plan." Accepted, assuming the United Kingdom share on a percentage basis can be worked out in practice. In this connection, I mentioned a figure of about 25%. Reference was also made to United Kingdom getting credit for additional costs for training and subsistence incurred due to shortening of period of training in Canada and substitution therefore of training in the United Kingdom. Ends.

MASSEY

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

file

MW/S
Dec.12/40

C 268472

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA.

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS, LONDON.

Refer to: P.M.
Mr. Heeney
N.D.
N.D. (Air)

SECRET

CYPHER

No. 227

Ottawa, December 12, 1940.

Your telegram No. 178, December 9. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister, begins:

Colonel Ralston in position to inform you fully as to our aircrew training and Mr. Howe as to aircraft production. We are most anxious to co-operate in developing Canadian production of trainers and we are hopeful that this can be done as regards Ansons, essential however that promised supply of Ansons from United Kingdom between now and June 1st, 1941, be delivered. After that date we hope to obtain adequate supply from our own industry, and if you so desire will explore possibility of supplying United Kingdom with Ansons powered with Jacobs engines.

Re Harvards, we have on order in Canada two hundred and ten Harvards, delivery starts this week. Expansion depends on engine situation.

Could you release Pratt and Whitney Wasp S.3H1 engines from your United States allotment other than those now allocated to Canada. Would appreciate outline of number and delivery dates of trainer planes required by United Kingdom. Ends.

Secretary of State
for External Affairs.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Copy for the Prime Minister

ATP

December 15th 1940

C268473

RoyCanAirF
From POWER for RALSTON

Have consulted Prime Minister. Press for acceptance method number three giving us first twenty-five squadrons as RCAF in addition to Fighter Squadrons No. 1 and 2 and Army Co-operation 110.

We realize difficulty of separate identity of additional formations. Provided individual identification thru Canadian shoulder badges could be assured now, perhaps decision as to separate identity of additional squadrons and formations could be left open for review say six months hence.

Fully appreciate difficulty of devising procedure for consultation with Canadian Government before decisions made on questions of policy particularly regarding employment Canadian squadrons.

Both Prime Minister and myself would be satisfied to follow your judgment in this matter though Prime Minister stresses desirability of consultation of some kind if at all possible before employing RCAF in other theatres of war.

We are in entire agreement with all your proceedings to date.

Carry on.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM C 268474

Office Serial No. 2

Call IN
and :—
Preface OUT

SECRET

ORIGINAL COPY
FOR
ACTION AND FILE

No. of Groups 68

Office Date Stamp
Air Force Headquarters
DEC 15 1940
SIGNAL OFFICE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO* C.A.S., OTTAWA, CANADA.

FROM* ROYCANAIRF, LONDON.

Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date
X.298 A.57	14/12

(Write horizontally)

FROM	RALSTON	FOR	PRIME	MINISTER
AND	POWER.	THIS	MESSAGE	IS
IN	5	PARTS.	PART	1
BEGINS.	IDENTIFICATION	CANADIAN	PILOTS	FROM
TRAINING	PLAN.	AS	YOU	KNOW
WE	HAVE	CONSIDERED	SEVERAL	FORMULAE.
METHOD	NUMBER	ONE	WAS	TO
COMPUTE	NUMBER	OF	SQUADRONS	FOR
WHICH	CANADIAN	PILOTS	COULD	HAVE
PROVIDED	THE	AIRCREW	PERSONNLE	AMOUNTING
TO	112.	METHOD	NUMBER	TWO
WAS	TO	COMPUTE	THE	NUMBER

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN | This message must be sent IN CYPHER | Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority* | TIME OF

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM C 268475

Office Serial No. .....

Call IN
and :—
Preface OUT

No. of Groups: 1

Office Date Stamp: Received Headquarters GR DEC 15 1940 SIGNAL OFFICE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO* PAGE 2

FROM* | Originator's Number | Date | In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

OF	SQUADRONS	WHICH	CANADIAN	PERSONNEL
AT	THE	TRAINING	ESTABLISHMENTS	COULD
HAVE	MANNED	ENTIRELY	AMOUNTING	TO
76.	BOTH	THESE	METHODS	QUESTIONABLE .
WE	THEREFORE	ESTIMATED	NUMBER	OF
SQUADRONS	WHICH	OUR	CANADIAN	AIRCREWS
PLUS	PERSONNEL	IN	TRAINING	ESTABLISHMENTS
COULD	MAN	AND	MAINTAIN	IF
WE	HAD	ALSO	TO	MAINTAIN
OUR	OWN	REARWARD	ACTIVITIES	AND
LINES	OF	COMMINICATION.	WE	CALL
THIS	METHOD	NUMBER	THREE	AND

Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority*

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268476

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F.-96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No.....

Call and Preface	IN / OUT	No. of Groups	Office Date Stamp
		GR	Air Force Headquarters DEC 15 1940 SIGNAL OFFICE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO* PAGE 3

FROM*	Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

IT	GIVES	APPROXIMATELY	27	SQUADRONS
ON	BASIS	OF	ONE	MAN
IN	A	SQUADRON	FOR	FIVE
BEHIND	THE	LINES.	WE	REALIZE
THAT	METHOD	NUMBER	THREE	IS
OPEN	TO	THE	OBJECTION	THAT
UNDER	IT	WE	TREAT	FLYING
PERSONNEL	AS	BEING	ONLY	ON
A	PARITY	WITH	OTHER	AIR
FORCE	PERSONNEL	ALSO	THE	RATIO
OF	FIVE	TO	ONE	MAY
BE	LARGE	AS	THE	R.A.F.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268477

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No.....

Call and Preface	IN / OUT	No. of Groups	Office Date Stamp
		GR	Air Force Headquarters DEC 15 1940 SIGNAL OFFICE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO* PAGE 4

FROM* | Originator's Number | Date | In reply to Number and Date |

(Write horizontally)

				5
HAVING	ITS	LINES	OF	COMMINICATION
AND	REARWARD	ACTIVITIES	ALREADY	10 ESTABLISHED
WOULD	NOT	HAVE	TO	15 INCREASE
THEM	IN	THE	RATIO	20 OF
FIVE	TO	ONE	TO	25 TAKE
CARE	OF	ADDITIONAL	SQUADRONS.	30 THIS
IS	THE	END	OF	35 PART
ONE.	PART	TWO	TO	40 FOLLOW.
				45
				50
				55
				60

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN and may‡.....be sent by W/T. Signature

This message must be sent IN CYPHER and may‡.....be sent by W/T Signature

Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority*

IMMEDIATE

TIME OF ORIGIN 1430GMT

T.O.R.

‡Originator to insert "NOT" if message is not to go by W/T over any part of the route.

(Below this line is for Signals use only)

T.H.I.	System in	Time in	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender
	W/T	0045	DD

*The Signal Department is responsible that these details are transposed to the appropriate portion of the message form and that all possibility of compromising distinguishing signals, etc., by omitting to remove their signification from the address, etc., is avoided. Before delivery of the message these details are to be re-inserted in P/L

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S. 8
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1023-23-5

C 268477

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No.....

Office Date Stamp	No. of Groups
	GR		Call IN and :— Preface OUT

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO*

PAGE 4

FROM*

Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

HAVING	ITS	LINES	OF	COMMUNICATION
AND	REARWARD	ACTIVITIES	ALREADY	ESTABLISHED
YOU'D	NOT	HAVE	TO	INCREASE
THEM	IN	THE	RATIO	OF
FIVE	TO	ONE	TO	TAKE
CARE	OF	ADDITIONAL	Original	THIS
IS	THE		2nd.	PART
ONE.	PART		3rd.	FOLLOW.
			4th.

R. C. A. F. HEADQUARTERS
SIGNAL OFFICE
DEC 15 19[illegible]
Copy No.
Original
2nd.
3rd.
4th.
Passed to
Prime Minister
Minister for Air
A.M.A.S.
C.A.S.
C.R.

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN and may be sent by W/T. Signature.....

This message must be sent IN CYPHER and may be sent by W/T Signature.....

Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority*

IMMEDIATE

TIME OF ORIGIN 1430GMT

T.O.R.

†Originator to insert "NOT" if message is not to go by W/T over any part of the route. (Below this line is for Signals use only)

T.H.I.	System In	Time In	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender
	W/T	0046	DD

*The Signal Department is responsible that these details are transposed to the appropriate portion of the message form and that all possibility of compromising distinguishing signals, etc., by omitting to remove their signification from the address, etc., is avoided. Before delivery of the message these details are to be re-inserted in P/L.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
26M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-23-6

MESSAGE FORM C 268478

Office Serial No. 48

Call / and :— / Preface		No. of Groups	Office Date Stamp
IN / OUT	SECRET	GR	Air Force Headquarters DEC 14 1940 SIGNAL OFFICE

ORIGINAL COPY FOR ACTION AND FILE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO* C.A.S. OTTAWA.

FROM* ROYCANAIRF. LONDON.

Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date
X.218 A.57	14/12

(Write horizontally)

PART	TWO	BEGINS.	ON	THE
REPEAT	ON	THE	OTHER	HAND
WE	HAD	TO	REMEMBER	THAT
THE	U.K.	WAS	PROVIDED	GROUND
CREWS	PAY	AND	ALLOWANCES	AND
INITIAL	AND	MAINTENANCE	EQUIPMENT	OUR
FINANCIAL	OBLIGATIONS	BEING	TO	THE
EXTENT	OF	OUR	EIGHTY	PER
CENT	CONTRIBUTION	UNDER	THE	PLAN.
AS	NO	MATHEMATICAL	FORMULA	COULD
PRECISELY	TAKE	ACCOUNT	OF	ALL
THE	FACTORS	WE	CONSIDERED	THAT

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN | This message must be sent IN CYPHER | Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority*

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268479

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
26M Pads of 100—2-40 (3090)
H.Q. 1062-23-6

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No.....

Call and Preface	IN / OUT	No. of Groups	Office Date Stamp
		GR	Air Force Headquarters DEC 14 1940 SIGNAL OFFICE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO* PAGE 2.

FROM*	Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

THERE	WERE	TWO	POINTS	WHICH 5
WE	MUST	PRESS.	FIRST	THERE 10
~~THE~~ SHOULD	BE	A	SUBSTANTIAL	EMBODIMENT 15
OF	THE	RCAF	TO	REPRESENT 20
TO	THE	CANADIAN	PUBLIC	IN 25
SOME	MEASURABLE	DEGREE	CANADA'S	CONTRIBUTION 30
AND	TO	ENSURE	THAT	ANY 35
OPERATIONS	IN	WHICH	THIS	CANADIAN 40
PERSONNEL	TOOK	PART	THE	PRESS 45
REFERENCES	TO	THE	FORMATIONS	WOULD 50
PERMIT	INSTANT	RECOGNITION	OF	THEM 55
AS	CANADIAN.	SECONDLY	THERE	SHOULD 60

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN | This message must be sent IN CYPHER | Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority* | TIME OF

R.C.A.F. HEADQUARTERS SIGNAL OFFICE DEC 14 1940 Passed to Copy No. Original 2nd. 3rd. 4th.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268480

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No. .....

Call IN
and :—
Preface OUT

No. of Groups GR

Office Date Stamp
DEC 14 1940
SIGNAL OFFICE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO* PAGE 3 (CONCLUDED)

FROM* | Originator's Number | Date | In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

BE	SOME	PROVISION	FOR	OR
ASSURANCES	OF	CONSULTATION	WITH	CANADIAN
AUTHORITIES	IN	THE	EMPLOYMENT	OF
THIS	PERSONNEL	IN	MAJOR	OPERATIONS.
WE	RECOGNIZE	THAT	THE	NUMBER
OF	SQUADRONS	WHICH	WE	COULD
ASK	TO	BE	MADE	RCAF
AND	TO	BE	LIMITED	REMEMBERING
THE	FACTORS	MENTIONED	ABOVE.	ER THIS
END	OF	PART	TWO.	PART
THREE	IS	TO	FOLLOW.

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN and may‡.....be sent by W/T. Signature

This message must be sent IN CYPHER and may‡.....be sent by W/T Signature

Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority*
IMMEDIATE

TIME OF ORIGIN 1455G

T.O.R.

‡Originator to insert "NOT" if message is not to go by W/T over any part of the route. (Below this line is for Signals use only)

T.H.I.	System in	Time in	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender
1538

*The Signal Department is responsible that these details are transposed to the appropriate portion of the message form and that all possibility of compromising distinguishing signals, etc., by omitting to remove their signification from the address, etc., is avoided. Before delivery of the message these details are to be re-inserted in P/L

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S.S
(R.A.F. 95A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3900)
T.T.C. 1085-23-8

C 268480

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No.

Call IN and :— Prefix OUT		No. of Groups CR	Office Date Stamp DEC 14 1940 R.C.A.F. HEADQUARTERS SIGNAL OFFICE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO* PAGE 3 (CONCLUDED)

FROM*	Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

BE	SOME	PROVISION	FOR	OR 5
ASSURANCES	OF	CONSULTATION	WITH	CANADIAN 10
AUTHORITIES	IN	THE	EMPLOYMENT	OF 15
THIS	PERSONNEL	IN	MAJOR	OPERATIONS. 20
WE	RECOGNIZE	THAT	THE	NUMBER 25
OF	SQUADRONS	WHICH	WE	COULD 30
ASK	TO	BE	MADE	HCAF 35
AND	TO	BE	LIMITED	REMEMBERING 40
THE	FACTORS	MENTIONED	ABOVE.	BY THIS 45
END	OF	PAGE	TWO.	PART 50
THREE	OF	THIS	FOLLOW.	55
				60

Copy No.
Original
2nd. to Prime Minister
3rd. Minister for Air
4th. CAS
AR

Passed to

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN and may be sent by W/T. Signature

This message must be sent IN CYPHER and may be sent by W/T Signature

Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority* IMMEDIATE

TIME OF ORIGIN

T.O.R.

‡Originator to insert "NOT" if message is not to go by W/T over any part of the route. (Below this line is for Signals use only)

T.H.I.	System in	Time in	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender

*The Signal Department is responsible that these details are transposed to the appropriate portion of the message form and that all possibility of compromising distinguishing signals, etc., by omitting to remove their significance from the address, etc., is avoided. Before delivery of the message these details are to be re-inserted in P/L

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268481

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No. 1

Call IN
and :—
Preface OUT

SECRET

ORIGINAL COPY
FOR ACTION AND FILE

No. of Groups GR

Office Date Stamp
Air Force Headquarters
DEC 15 1940
SIGNAL OFFICE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO* C.A.S., OTTAWA.

FROM* ROYCANAIRF. LONDON.

Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date
X.298 A.57	14/12

(Write horizontally)

FOLLOWING	IS	PART	THREE.	BEGINS.
WE	ALSO	FELT	THAT	IT
WOULD	BE	UNWISE	IN	ARRIVING
AT	THIS	LIMITED	NUMBER	OF
SQUADRONS	TO	ACCEPY	PRECISELY	THE
RESULTS	OF	ANY	FORMULA	AND
THUS	BE	COMMITTED	TO	THAT
FORMULA	AS	A	YARDSTICK.	WE
PREFERRED	IF	WE	COULD	TO
PROCURE	THE	ACCEPTANCE	OF	A
SIZEABLE	NUMBER	OF	R.C.A.F.	SQUADRONS
AND	IF	POSSIBLE	TO	PROVIDE

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN | This message must be sent IN CYPHER | Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority* | TIME OF

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268482

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No.....

Call IN
and :—
Preface OUT

No. of Groups CR

Office Date Stamp

Air Force Headquarters
DEC 15 1940
SIGNAL OFFICE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO*

PAGE 2

FROM*

Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

FOR	THE	REMAINDER	OF	THE
PERSONNEL	BY	WAY	OF	SOME
ASSURENCE	THAT	THEY	WOULD	BE
KEPT	TOGETHER	AND	CANADIAN	OFFICERED
AS	FAR	AS	COULD	BE
REASONABLY	ARRANGED.	THE	UNITS	TO
WHICH	THEY	WOULD	GO	WOULD
BE	R.A.F.	AND	MIGHT	BE
IDENTIFIED	WITH	THE	WORD	CANADIAN
OR	CANADA.	IN	BRACKETS	OR
AT	LEAST	THERE	SHOULD	REPEAT
SHOULD	BE	INDIVIDUAL	IDENTIFICATION	OF

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN | This message must be sent IN CYPHER | Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority* | TIME OF

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

C268483

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No.....

Call and Preface	IN / OUT	No. of Groups	Office Date Stamp
		GR	Air Force Headquarters DEC 15 1940 SIGNAL OFFICE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO* PAGE 3

FROM* | Originator's Number | Date | In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

THE	PERSONNEL	AS	CANADIAN.	USING
METHOD	NUMBER	THREE	AS	AN
INDICATOR	ALTHOUGH	NOT	A	RULE
TO	GIVE	US	AN	IDEA
OF	THE	NUMBER	OF	R.C.A.F.
SQUADRONS	WE	MIGHT	ASK	FOR
AND	PURELY	BY	WAY	OF
EXPLORATION	AND	NOT	AS	A
PROPOSAL	WE	SUGGESTED	THAT	THE
FIRST	TWENTY-FIVE	SQUADRONS	BE	R.C.A.F.
IN	ADDITION	TO	FIGHTER	SQUADRONS
ONE	AND	TWO	AND	ARMY

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN | This message must be sent IN CYPHER | Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority* | TIME OF ORIGIN

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268484

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No.....

Call and Preface	IN / OUT	No. of Groups	Office Date Stamp
		GR	Air Force Headquarters SIGNAL OFFICE DEC 15 1940

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO* PAGE 4

FROM*	Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

CO-OPERATION	SQUADRON	110.	THIS	IS
THE	END	OF	PART	THREE.
PART	FOUR	AND	PART	FIVE
ARE	TO	FOLLOW.

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN and may‡.....be sent by W/T. Signature

This message must be sent IN CYPHER and may‡.....be sent by W/T Signature

Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority*: IMMEDIATE

TIME OF ORIGIN 1445 GMT

T.O.R.

‡Originator to insert "NOT" if message is not to go by W/T over any part of the route. (Below this line is for Signals use only)

T.H.I.	System in	Time in	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender
	W/T	0024	DD

The Signal Department is responsible that these details are transposed to the appropriate portion of the message form and that all possibility of compromising distinguishing signals, etc., by omitting to remove their signification from the address, etc., is avoided. Before delivery of the message these details are to be re-inserted in P/L

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
33M Pads of 100—3-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1002-22-5

C 268484

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No.....

No. of Groups	Office Date Stamp
88	DEC 15 1940

Call IN
and :—
Prefix OUT

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO* PAGE 4

Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date

FROM*

(Write horizontally)

CO-OPERATION	SQUADRON	NO.	THIS	IS
THE	END	OF	PART	THREE.
PART	FOUR	AND	PART	FIVE
ARE	TO	FOLLOW.

R.C.A.F. HEADQUARTERS
SIGNAL OFFICE
DEC 15 1940
Copy No. Passed to
Original Prime Minister
2nd. Minister for Air
3rd. AMAS
4th. GAS

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN and may be sent by W/T. Signature.....

This message must be sent IN CYPHER and may be sent by W/T Signature.....

Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority*

IMMEDIATE

TIME OF ORIGIN 1445 GMT

T.O.R.

†Originator to insert "NOT" if message is not to go by W/T over any part of the route. (Below this line is for Signals use only)

T.H.I.	System in	Time in	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender
	W/T	0024	DD

*The Signal Department is responsible that these details are transposed to the appropriate portion of the message form and that all possibility of compromising distinguishing signals, etc., by omitting to remove their significance from the address, etc., is avoided. Before delivery of the message these details are to be re-inserted in P/L.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268485

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No. 3

Call IN
and :—
Preface OUT

SECRET

ORIGINAL COPY
FOR ACTION AND FILE

No. of Groups

Office Date Stamp
Air Force Headquarters
GR DEC 15 1940
SIGNAL OFFICE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO* C.A.S., OTTAWA.

FROM* ROYCANAIRF. LONDON.

Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date
X.298 A.57	14/12

(Write horizontally)

PART	FOUR	BEGINS.	WE	WERE
AGREEABLY	SURPRISED	AT	WHAT	SEEMED
TO	BE	THE	SYMPATHETIC	RECEPTION
OF	THIS	SUGGESTION.	THE	NUMBERS
ARE	JUSTIFIABLE	UNDER	METHOD	THREE
ABOVE	BUT	WE	WERE	NOT TOO
HOPEFUL	OF	READY	ACCEPTANCE	AND
EXPECTED	SOME	OTHER	COMPROMISE	PROPOSAL.
SQUADRON	IDENTIFICATION	OF	CANADIANS	OUTSIDE
THESE	R.C.A.F.	SQUADRONS	SEEMED	TO
GIVE	MORE	TROUBLE.	THE	DIFFICULTY
PUT	FORWARD	WAS	THE	MATTER

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN | This message must be sent IN CYPHER and mavt..... | Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority* | TIME OF

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268486

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No.....

Call IN
and :—
Preface OUT

No. of Groups GD

Office Date Stamp
Air Force Headquarters
DEC 15 1940
SIGNAL OFFICE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO* PAGE 2

FROM* | Originator's Number | Date | In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

OF		ANY	COMMITTMENT	TO 5
PRESERVE	SEPERATE	IDENTITY	OF	THESE 10
TWILIGHT	FORMATIONS	AS	IT	WERE. 15
THERE	SHOULD	HOWEVER	BE	NO 20
DIFFICULTY	ABOUT	INDIVIDUAL	IDENTIFICATION	BY 25
CANADA	SHOULDER	BADGES.	WE	POINTED . 30
OUT	THAT	242	R.A.F.	SQUADRON 35
IS	ALREADY	IN	THIS	CATEGORY 40
BUT	THE	UNITED	KINGDOM	FELT 45
THAT	WHILE	ONE	SQUADRON	MIGHT 50
BE	HANDLED	IN	THIS	WAY 55
IT	WAS	A	VERY	MUCH 60

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN | This message must be sent IN CYPHER | Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority* | TIME OF

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM C 268487

Office Serial No.....

Call and Preface: IN / OUT

No. of Groups: GR

Air Force Headquarters
DEC 15 1940
SIGNAL OFFICE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO*

PAGE 3

FROM*

Originator's Number | Date | In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

MORE	FORMIDABLE	TASK	TO	DEAL
WITH	AN	INDEFINITE	NUMBER.	AS
A	MATTER	OF	FACT	THE
QUESTIONS	OF	THESE	TWILIGHT	FORMATIONS
WILL	NOT	PRESUMABLY	ARISE	UNTIL
THE	TWENTY-FIVE	SQUADRONS	ARE	FILLED
UP	WHICH	MAY	BE	A
YEAR.	THIS	IS	THE	END
OF	PART	FOUR.	PART	FIVE
TO	FOLLOW.

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN and may‡.....be sent by W/T. Signature

This message must be sent IN CYPHER and may‡.....be sent by W/T Signature

Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority*: IMMEDIATE

TIME OF ORIGIN 1450GMT

T.O.R.

‡Originator to insert "NOT" if message is not to go by W/T over any part of the route. (Below this line is for Signals use only)

T.H.I.	System in	Time in	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender
	W/T	0108	DD

*The Signal Department is responsible that these details are transposed to the appropriate portion of the message form and that all possibility of compromising distinguishing signals, etc., by omitting to remove their signification from the address, etc., is avoided. Before delivery of the message these details are to be re-inserted in P/L

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—3-40 (3900)
H.Q. 1083-23-5

C 268487

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No.....

Call IN and :— Preface OUT	No. of Groups 6R	Office Date Stamp

R. C. A. F. HEADQUARTERS
SIGNAL OFFICE
DEC 15 1940
Copy No.
Original
2nd.
3rd.
4th.
Passed to
Prime Minister ✓
Minister for Air.
A.M.A.S.
C.A.S.
C.R.

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO*

PAGE 3

FROM*

Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

MORE	FORMIDABLE	TASK	TO	DEAL 5
WITH	AN	INDEFINITE	NUMBER.	AS 10
A	MATTER	OF	FACT	THE 15
QUESTIONS	OF	THESE	LIGHT	POINTATIONS 20
WILL	NOT	PRESUMABLY	ARISE	UNTIL 25
THE	TWENTY-FIVA	SQUADRONS	AIR	FILLED 30
UP	WHICH	MAY	BE	A 35
YEAR.	THIS	IS	THE	END 40
OF	PART	FOUR.	PART	FIVE 45
TO	FOLLOW.			50
				55
				60

TIME OF ORIGIN	Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority*	This message must be sent IN CYPHER and may not.....be sent by W\T	This message must be sent AS WRITTEN and may not.....be sent by W\T.
T.O.R.	IMMEDIATE	Signature	Signature

(Originator to insert "NOT" if message is not to go by W\T over any part of the route. (Below this line is for Signals use only)

T.H.I.	System in	Time in	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender
	W\T	0108	DD

*The Signal Department is responsible that these details are transposed to the appropriate portion of the message form and that all possibility of compromising distinguishing signals, etc., by omitting to remove their signification from the address, etc., is avoided. Before delivery of the message these details are to be re-inserted in T.H.I.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268488

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No. 68/14

Call IN and :— Preface OUT

SECRET

ORIGINAL COPY FOR ACTION AND FILE

No. of Groups GR

Office Date Stamp: Air Force Headquarters DEC 15 1940 SIGNAL OFFICE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO* C.A.S., OTTAWA.

FROM* ROYCANAIRF. LONDON.

Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date
X.298 A.57	14/12

(Write horizontally)

PART	FIVE	BEGINS.	THIRDLY	WE
ASKED	THAT	SOME	PROCEDURE	BE
WORKED	OUT	FOR	CONSULTATION	WITH
CANADIAN	GOVERNMENT	THROUGH	CANADIAN	AUTHORITIES
IN	LONDON,	BEFORE	DECISIONS	MADE
ON	QUESTIONS	OF	POLICY	SUCH
AS	MAJOR	OPERATIONS	IN	WHICH
IT	MAY	BE	PROPOSED	TO
EMPLOY	SUBSTANTIAL	NUMBER	OF	CANADIAN
SQUADRONS .	IF	THERE	ARE	ANY
OBJECTIONS	TO	OUR	PROCEEDING	ALONG
THE	LINES	INDICATED	WOULD	APPRECIATE

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN | This message must be sent IN CYPHER | Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority* | TIME OF

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268489

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3090)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No.

Call and Preface IN / OUT

No. of Groups 68

Office Date Stamp

Air Force Headquarters
DEC 15 1940
SIGNAL OFFICE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO* PAGE 2

FROM*

Originator's Number | Date | In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

COMMENTS	BY	MONDAY	MORNING	NEXT 5
THE	MATTER	HAS	BEEN	THROUGHLY 10
DISCUSSED	BETWEEN	MASSEY,	PEARSON,	AIR 15
COMMODORE	STEVENSON	AND	MYSELF	AND 20
PEARSON	AND	STEVENSON	WERE	PRESENT 25
AND	TOOK	PART	IN	CONFERENCE 30
FRIDAY.	ENDS.	THIS	ENDS	PART 35
FIVE	AND	ENDS	MESSAGE.	40
				45
				50

Sept 15th — 11.30 a.m. — Power called - after conference together over plan it was recommended Minister should be allowed to proceed on certain individuals 2 named. It remarked that the number 27, had been mentioned on the number Rogers felt one should have on formula be had worked out

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN and may† ..... be sent by W/T. Signature

This message must be sent IN CYPHER and may† ..... be sent by W/T Signature

Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority*

TIME OF ORIGIN 1455GMT

T.O.R.

It was agreed that if these above 27 could be limited & be worked out when

†Originator to insert "NOT" if message is not to go by W/T over any part of the route. (Below this line is for Signals use only)

T.H.I.	System in	Time in	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender
	W/T	0015/15 DD

Then Mewburn replied must consult others before he could agree but not likely should agree to consultation. Power said it was difficult. I said it was reasonable. We agreed to leave it that

*The Signal Department is responsible that these details are transposed to the appropriate portion of the message form and that all possibility of compromising distinguishing signals, etc., by omitting to remove their signification from the address, etc., is avoided. Before delivery of the message these details are to be re-inserted in P/L

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—3-40 (3900)
H.Q. 1082-23-5

C 268489

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No. .....

Office Date Stamp
DEC 15 1940
ROYAL AIR FORCE

No. of Groups
CR

Call IN
and :—
Preface OUT

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO* PAGE 2

FROM*

Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

COMMENTS	BY	MONDAY	MORNING	NEXT
THE	MATTER	HAS	BEEN	THROUGHLY	10
DISCUSSED	BETWEEN	MASSEY,	PEARSON,	AIR	15
COMMODORE	STEVENSON	AND	MYSELF	AND	20
PEARSON	AND	[illegible]	[illegible]	PRESENT	25
AND	TOOK	PART	IN	CONFERENCE	30
FRIDAY.	ENDS.	THIS	[illegible]	PART	35
FIVE	AND	[illegible]	MESSAGE.		40
					45
					50
					55 60

R. C. A. F. HEADQUARTERS
SIGNAL OFFICE
DEC 15 1940
Copy No.
Original
2nd.
3rd.
4th.
Passed to
Prime Minister ✓
Minister for Air
a mas
Cas
CR

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN and may be sent by W/T. Signature .....

This message must be sent IN CYPHER and may be sent by W/T Signature .....

Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority*

TIME OF ORIGIN 1455GMT

T.O.R.

To Originator to insert "NOT" if message is not to go by W/T over any part of the route. (Below this line is for Signals use only)

T.H.I.	System in	Time in	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender
	W/T	0015	JG DD

*The Signal Department is responsible that these details are transposed to the appropriate portion of the message form and that all possibility of compromising distinguishing signals, etc., by omitting to remove their significance from the address, etc., is avoided. Before delivery of the message these details are to be re-inserted in P/L.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ATP
CK

ODS/ET
18th Dec.1940

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER:

Clayton Knight Committee C 268430

This matter now seems to be clearing up quite satisfactorily. The Department of National Defence for Air sent Mr.T.Sheard down to New York and Washington to look into the question. You will recall that the State Department had suggested that Mr.John Read should make a report on the situation and that some United States lawyer such as Dean Acheson should then be consulted as to the best way of keeping within the law. Mr.Sheard proceeded to Washington and discussed the question with the Legation,which arranged for an interview with Mr.Acheson. Mr.Acheson declined to take any fee for consultation.

Mr.Acheson confirmed the view that under the existing laws any recruiting in the United States for Canadian Armed Forces was unquestionably against the law. He said there would be no objection to men being engaged in the United States for a civil task. If later,when in Canada,some of them wished to join the R.C.A.F. and were accepted, no objection could be taken provided it was not done in such a way as to make it appear a colourable evasion. National Defence for Air considers this can be worked out without difficulty. Mr.Sheard

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268491

later consulted the Clayton Knight people, who considered this would be entirely feasible. National Defence for Air were prepared to work out such a plan. As a matter of fact, a considerable number of the men available could remain permanently in civilian posts, as instructors. It is planned to set up a new organization here to take charge of this work. It will not be given any particular publicity at present. The State Department will of course be informed when it is completed. It will enable us to work within the law and at the same time not hamper in any way Air Force activities.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ATP

C268492

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-22-5

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No. 33

Call IN
and :—
Preface OUT

SECRET

ORIGINAL COPY
FOR ACTION AND FILE

No. of Groups 5

Office Date Stamp

Air Force Headquarters
DEC 24 1940
SIGNAL OFFICE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO* C.A.S. RCAF HQ OTTAWA

FROM* ROYCANAIRF LONDON

Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date
X.643 A.81	23/12

(Write horizontally)

FOLLOWING	MESSAGE	IN	FIVE	PARTS.
PART	ONE	BEGINS.	FOLLOWING	FROM
RALSTON	FOR	PRIME	MINISTER	AND
POWER.	BEGINS.	TEXT	OF	MEMORANDUM
OF	AGREEMENT.	AS	TO	ARRANGEMENTS
TO	BE	MADE	UNDER	ARTICLE
15	OF	BRITISH	COMMONWEALTH	AIR
TRAINING	AGREEMENT	AND	LETTER	OF
DEC.	16,	1939	FROM	LORD
RIVERDALE	IS	AS	FOLLOWS.	IT
IS	AGREED	THAT	THE	ARRANGEMENTS
REFERRED	TO	IN	ARTICLE	15

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (2090)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM

C268493

Office Serial No.....

Call and Preface	IN / OUT	No. of Groups GR	Office Date Stamp
	PAGE TWO

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO*

FROM*

Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

OF	THE	AIR	TRAINING	AGREEMENT
FOR	IDENTIFYING	WITH	CANADA	THE
CANADIAN	PILOTS	AND	AIRCREWS	TRAINED
UNDER	THE	BRITISH	COMMONWEALTH	AIR
TRAINING	PLAN	SHALL	BE	ON
THE	FOLLOWING	LINES.	ONE.	THESE
PILOTS	AND	AIRCREWS	WILL	BE
INCORPORATED	INTO	SQUADRONS	OF	THE
ROYAL	CANADIAN	AIR	FORCE	UP
TO	THE	NUMBER	OF	25
IN	ADDITION	TO	THE	THREE
ALREADY	SERVING	IN	THE	UNITED

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268494

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No.....

Call and Preface IN / OUT		No. of Groups GR	Office Date Stamp
	PAGE THREE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO*

FROM* | Originator's Number | Date | In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

KINGDOM.	TWO.	THE	EXACT	RATE
OF	FORMATION	CANNOT	BE	GUARANTEED
SINCE	IT	DEPENDS	ON	THE
RATE	AT	WHICH	THE	PROJECTED
AIR	FORCE	EXPANSION	CAN	BE
ACHIEVED;	NEVERTHELESS	THE	ENDEAVOUR	WILL
BE	TO	FORM	THESE	25
SQUADRONS	WITHIN	THE	NEXT	18
MONTHS	IN	ACCORDANCE	WITH	THE
FOLLOWING	SCHEDULE.....	END	OF	PART
ONE.	PART	TWO	FOLLOWS.

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN and may‡.....be sent by W/T. Signature

This message must be sent IN CYPHER and may‡.....be sent by W/T Signature

Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority*

TIME OF ORIGIN 1800/23G

T.O.R.

‡Originator to insert "NOT" if message is not to go by W/T over any part of the route. (Below this line is for Signals use only)

T.H.I.	System in	Time in	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender
1430/24	W/T		JHB/WGA

*The Signal Department is responsible that these details are transposed to the appropriate portion of the message form and that all possibility of compromising distinguishing signals, etc., by omitting to remove their signification from the address, etc., is avoided. Before delivery of the message these details are to be re-inserted in P/L

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S.S
(R.A.F. 90A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3000)
H.Q. 1083-23-5

C268439

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No.....

Call IN	No. of Groups GR	Office Date Stamp
and :—
Preface OUT	PAGE THREE

TO*

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

FROM*	Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

KINGDOM.	TWO.	THE	EXACT	RATE
OF	FORMATION	CANNOT	BE	GUARANTEED
SINCE	IT	DEPENDS	ON	THE
RATE	AT	WHICH	THE	PROJECTED
AIR	FORCE	EXPANSION	CAN	BE
ACHIEVED;	NEVERTHELESS	THE	ENDEAVOUR	WILL
BE	TO	FORM	THESE
SQUADRONS		THE	NEXT
MONTH		ACCORDANCE	WITH	THE
FOLLOWING	SCHEDULE...,	3rd,	END.	OF
ONE.	PART	TWO	FOLLOWS.

R. C. A. F. HEADQUARTERS
SIGNAL OFFICE
DEC 24 1940
Copy No.
Original
2nd.
3rd,
4th.
Passed to
Prime Minister
Minister N.D.(AIR)

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN and may† be sent by W\T. Signature

This message must be sent IN CYPHER and may† be sent by W\T Signature

Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority*

TIME OF ORIGIN 1800\25G

T.O.R.

†Originator to insert "NOT" if message is not to go by W\T over any part of the route. (Below this line is for Signals use only)

T.H.I.	System in	Time in	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender
1430\24	W\T		WGA\JHB

*The Signal Department is responsible that these details are transposed to the appropriate portion of the message form and that all possibility of compromising distinguishing signals, etc., by omitting to remove their signification from the address, etc., is avoided. Before delivery of the message these details are to be re-inserted in P\L

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268495

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No. 38

Call IN and :— Preface OUT

SECRET

ORIGINAL COPY FOR ACTION AND FILE

No. of Groups: GR

Office Date Stamp: Air Force Headquarters DEC 24 1940 SIGNAL OFFICE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO* C.A.S. RCAF HQ OTTAWA

FROM* ROYCANAIRF LONDON

Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date
X.643 A.81	23/12

(Write horizontally)

PART	TWO	BEGINS.	BY	MARCH 5
1941	THREE	SQUADRONS	TO	BE 10
FORMED.	JUNE	1941	SEVEN.	SEPTEMBER 15
1941	12.	DECEMBER	1941	17. 20
MARCH	1942	22.	APRIL	OR 25
MAY	1942	25.	THREE.	TO 30
FACILITATE	ARRANGEMENTS	FOR	POSTING	CANADIAN 35
PILOTS	AND	AIRCREWS,	THERE	WILL 40
BE	ESTABLISHED	A	CENTRAL	POSTING 45
ORGANIZATION	AND	A	CENTRAL	RECORD 50
OFFICE	THE	STAFF	OF	WHICH 55
WILL	INCLUDE	ROYAL	CANADIAN	AIR 60

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
RCM Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

C 268496

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No.....

Call and Preface		No. of Groups GR	Office Date Stamp
IN
OUT	PAGE TWO

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO*

FROM*	Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

FORCE	PERSONNEL.	FOUR.	ALL	CANADIAN
PILOTS	AND	AIRCREWS	FROM	THE
AIR	TRAINING	PLAN	NOT	IN
ROYAL	CANADIAN	AIR	FORCE	UNITS
OR	FORMATIONS	WILL	CONTINUE	TO
WEAR	ROYAL	CANADIAN	AIR	FORCE
UNIFORMS.	FIVE.	THE	WORKING	OUT
OF	THE	FOREGOING	ARRANGEMENTS	SHALL
BE	REVIEWED	IN	SEPTEMBER	1941,
IN	ORDER	TO	DETERMINE	WHETHER
THE	SCHEDULE	IN	PARAGRAPH	TWO
CAN	BE	MAINTAINED	OR	ACCELERATED

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3999)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM C 268497

Office Serial No.....

Call and Preface IN / OUT		No. of Groups GR	Office Date Stamp
	PAGE THREE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO*

FROM*	Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

AND	TO	CONSIDER	THE	POSITION
AND	ORAGNIZATION	OF	CANADIAN	PILOTS
AND	AIRCREWS	IN	EXCESS	OF
THOSE	WHO	MAY	BE	ABSORBED
IN	ROYAL	CANADIAN	AIR	FORCE
SQUADRONS	UNDER	THESE	ARRANGEMENTS.	SIX.
UNDER	THE	AIR	TRAINING	PLAN
AND	AT	THE	REQUEST	OF
THE	UNITED	KINGDOM	GOVERNMENT,	THE
ROYAL	CANADIAN	AIR	FORCE	HAS
CONCENTRATED	ON	THE	PRODUCTION	OF
PILOTS	AND	AIRCREWS.	END	OF

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM

C 268498

Office Serial No.....

Call and Preface IN / OUT		No. of Groups GR	Office Date Stamp
	PAGE FOUR

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO*

FROM*	Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

PART TWO. PART THREE FOLLOWS. 5

10

15

20

25

30

35

40

45

50

55

60

R.C.A.F. HEADQUARTERS
SIGNAL OFFICE
DEC 24 1940
Copy No.
Original
2nd.
3rd.
Passed to

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN and may‡.....be sent by W/T. Signature

This message must be sent IN CYPHER and may‡.....be sent by W/T Signature

Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority*

TIME OF ORIGIN 1818G/23

T.O.R.

‡Originator to insert "NOT" if message is not to go by W/T over any part of the route. (Below this line is for Signals use only)

T.H.I.	System in	Time in	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender
1512/24	W/T		JHB/WGA

*The Signal Department is responsible that these details are transposed to the appropriate portion of the message form and that all possibility of compromising distinguishing signals, etc., by omitting to remove their signification from the address, etc., is avoided. Before delivery of the message these details are to be re-inserted in P/L

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S.S
(R.A.F. 95A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (2000)
H.Q. 1052-23-5

C 2685439

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No.....

Call IN and :— Preface OUT	PAGE FOUR	No. of Groups GR	Office Date Stamp

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO*

FROM*

Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

PART	TWO.	PART	THREE	5 FOLLOWS.

10 15 20 25 30 35 40 45 50 55 60

R. C. A. F., HEADQUARTERS
SIGNAL OFFICE
DEC 24 1940
Copy No.
Original
2nd.
3rd,
Passed to
Prime Minister
Minister N.D. (AIR)

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN and may be sent by W/T. Signature.....

This message must be sent IN CYPHER and may be sent by W/T. Signature.....

Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority*

TIME OF ORIGIN 1815/25

T.O.R.

(Below this line is for Signals use only)

Originator to insert "NOT" if message is not to go by W/T over any part of the route.

T.H.I.	System in	Time in	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender
1815/24	W/T		JHB/WCA

*The Signal Department is responsible that these details are transposed to the appropriate portion of the message form and that all possibility of compromising distinguishing signals, etc., by omitting to remove their signification from the address, etc., is avoided. Before delivery of the message these details are to be re-inserted in P/L.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S.S
(R.A.F. 95A.)
H.Q. 1002-22-6 25M Pads of 100—2-40 (2000)

C 268438

Office Serial No.....

MESSAGE FORM

Call IN and :— Preface OUT		No. of Groups GR	Office Date Stamp
	PAGE FOUR

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO*

FROM*

Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

PART	TWO.	PART	THREE	PART	FOUR.	PART	FIVE.

R. C. A. F. HEADQUARTERS
SIGNAL OFFICE
DEC 24 1940
Copy No.
Original
2nd.
3rd,
Passed to
Prime Minister
Minister N.D. Cair

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN and may† be sent by W\T.
Signature

This message must be sent IN CYPHER and may† be sent by W\T
Signature

Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority*

TIME OF ORIGIN 1815\25

T.O.R.

†Originator to insert "NOT" if message is not to go by W\T over any part of the route. (Below this line is for Signals use only)

T.H.I.	System in	Time in	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender
1815\24	W\T		JHB\WCA

*The Signal Department is responsible that these details are transposed to the appropriate portion of the message form and that all possibility of compromising distinguishing signals, etc., by omitting to remove their signification from the address, etc., is avoided. Before delivery of the message these details are to be re-inserted in P\L

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268439

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3999)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No. 36

Call IN and :— Preface OUT

SECRET

ORIGINAL COPY FOR ACTION AND FILE

No. of Groups: GR

Air Force Headquarters SIGNAL OFFICE Office Date Stamp DEC 24 1940

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO* CAS RCAF HQ OTTAWA

FROM* ROYCANAIRF LONDON

Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date
X.643	23/12

(Write horizontally)

PART	THREE	BEGINS.	THIS	HAS
NECESSITATED	THE	PROVISION	AND	EMPLOYMENT
IN	CANADA	OF	GROUND	PERSONNEL
WHO	WOULD	OTHERWISE	HAVE	BEEN
AVAILABLE	FOR	SERVICE	WITH	ROYAL
CANADIAN	AIR	FORCE	SQUADRONS	OVERSEAS.
IT	IS	RECOGNIZED,	HOWEVER,	AS
DESIRABLE,	SO	FAR	AS	IT
MAY	MUTUALLY	BE	CONSIDERED	PRACTICABLE.
THAT	THE	UNITED	KINGDOM	GROUND
PERSONNEL	WHO,	FOR	THE	REASONS
STATED	ABOVE,	WILL	BE	REQUIRED

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM

C 268498

Office Serial No.....

Call and Preface		No. of Groups GR	Office Date Stamp
IN / OUT	PAGE FOUR	.....

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO*

FROM*	Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

PART TWO. PART THREE FOLLOWS.

R. C. A. F. HEADQUARTERS
SIGNAL OFFICE
DEC 24 1940
Copy No.
Original
2nd.
3rd.
Passed to

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN and may‡.....be sent by W/T. Signature

This message must be sent IN CYPHER and may‡.....be sent by W/T Signature

Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority*

TIME OF ORIGIN 1818G/23

T.O.R.

‡Originator to insert "NOT" if message is not to go by W/T over any part of the route. (Below this line is for Signals use only)

T.H.I.	System in	Time in	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender
1512/24	W/T		JHB/WGA

*The Signal Department is responsible that these details are transposed to the appropriate portion of the message form and that all possibility of compromising distinguishing signals, etc., by omitting to remove their signification from the address, etc., is avoided. Before delivery of the message these details are to be re-inserted in P/L

REPEAT
REPETER

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S.5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
H.Q. 1052-23-6 20M Pads of 100—2-40 (2990)

C 268438

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No.....

Call IN and :— Preface OUT	PAGE FOUR	No. of Groups GR	Office Date Stamp

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO*

FROM*

Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

PART	TWO.	PART	THREE	FOLLOWS.

R. C. A. F. HEADQUARTERS
SIGNAL OFFICE
DEC 24 1940
Copy No.
Original
2nd.
3rd,
Passed to
Prime Minister
Minister N.D. (AIR)

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN and may be sent by W/T.
Signature

This message must be sent IN CYPHER and may be sent by W/T
Signature

Originator's Instructions. Degree of Priority*

TIME OF ORIGIN 1815/25

T.O.R.

†Originator to insert "NOT" if message is not to go by W/T over any part of the route. (Below this line is for Signals use only)

T.H.I.	System in	Time in	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender
1815/24	W/T		1HB/WGA

*The Signal Department is responsible that these details are transposed to the appropriate portion of the message form and that all possibility of compromising distinguishing signals, etc., by omitting to remove their signification from the address, etc., is avoided. Before delivery of the message these details are to be re-inserted in P/L.

REPEAT
REPETER

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268439

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (7999)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No. 36

Call IN and :— Preface OUT

SECRET

ORIGINAL COPY
FOR ACTION AND FILE

No. of Groups: GR

Air Force Headquarters
DEC 24 1940
SIGNAL OFFICE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO* CAS RCAF HQ OTTAWA

FROM* ROYCANAIRF LONDON

Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date
X.643	23/12

(Write horizontally)

PART	THREE	BEGINS.	THIS	HAS
NECESSITATED	THE	PROVISION	AND	EMPLOYMENT
IN	CANADA	OF	GROUND	PERSONNEL
WHO	WOULD	OTHERWISE	HAVE	BEEN
AVAILABLE	FOR	SERVICE	WITH	ROYAL
CANADIAN	AIR	FORCE	SQUADRONS	OVERSEAS.
IT	IS	RECOGNIZED,	HOWEVER,	AS
DESIRABLE,	SO	FAR	AS	IT
MAY	MUTUALLY	BE	CONSIDERED	PRACTICABLE,
THAT	THE	UNITED	KINGDOM	GROUND
PERSONNEL	WHO,	FOR	THE	REASONS
STATED	ABOVE,	WILL	BE	REQUIRED

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-22-5

C 268500

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No.....

Call and Preface	IN / OUT	No. of Groups GR	Office Date Stamp
	PAGE TWO

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO*

FROM*	Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

FOR	THE	SQUADRONS	REFERRED	TO
IN	PARAGRAPH	TWO	SHOULD	GRADUALLY
BE	EXCHANGED	FOR	ROYAL	CANADIAN
AIR	FORCE	GROUND	PERSONNEL	EMPLOYED
ON	THE	AIR	TRAINING	PLAN,
WITH	A	VIEW	TO	ACHIEVING
HOMOGENITY	OF	PERSONNEL	IN	THESE
SQUADRONS.	SEVEN.	THE	CONCENTRATION	OF
THE	ROYAL	CANADIAN	AIR	FORCE
ON	THE	AIR .	TRAINING	PLAN
MAY	ALSO,	AT	THE	OUTSET,
RESULT	IN	A	SHORTAGE	OF

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268501

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads.c4-100—2-40 (3099)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No.....

Call and Preface IN / OUT		No. of Groups GR	Office Date Stamp
	PAGE THREE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO*

FROM*	Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

ROYAL	CANADIAN	AIR	FORCE	OFFICERS 5
WITH	THE	NECESSARY	QUALIFICATIONS	TO 10
FILL	POSTS	AS	SQUADRON	COMMANDERS, 15
ETC.	IT	IS	RECOGNIZED	THAT, 20
IF	ENOUGH	ROYAL	CANADIAN	AIR 25
FORCE	OFFICERS	WITH	THESE	QUALIFICATIONS 30
ARE	NOT	IMMEDIATELY	AVAILABLE,	SOME 35
OF	THESE	POSTS	MAY	REQUIRE 40
TO	BE	FILLED	BY	ROYAL 45
AIR	FORCE	OFFICERS.	END	OF 50
PART	THREE.	PART	FOUR	FOLLOWS. 55
				60

R.C.A.F. HEADQUARTERS
SIGNAL OFFICE
DEC 24 1940
Copy No.
Original
2nd.
3rd.
4th.
Passed to Message Received

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN and may‡.....be sent by W/T. Signature	This message must be sent IN CYPHER and may‡.....be sent by W/T Signature	Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority*	TIME OF ORIGIN 1815G/23
			T.O.R.

‡Originator to insert "NOT" if message is not to go by W/T over any part of the route. (Below this line is for Signals use only)

T.H.I.	System in	Time in	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender
1451/24	W/T		JHB/WGA

The Signal Department is responsible that these details are transposed to the appropriate portion of the message form and that all possibility of compromising distinguishing signals, etc., by omitting to remove their signification from the address, etc., is avoided. Before delivery of the message these details are to be re-inserted in P/L

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S.-S.
(R.A.F. 964.)
20M Pads-6c 100—2-40 (2222)
H.Q. 1052-29-5

C 268501

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No.....

Office Date Stamp	No. of Groups GR		Call IN and :— Preface OUT
		PAGE THREE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO*

FROM* | Originator's Number | Date | In reply to Number and Date |

(Write horizontally)

ROYAL	CANADIAN	AIR	FORCE	OFFICERS 5
WITH	THE	NECESSARY	QUALIFICATIONS	TO 10
FILL	POSTS	AS	SQUADRON	COMMANDERS, 15
ETC.	IT	IS	RECOGNIZED	THAT, 20
IF	ENOUGH	ROYAL	CANADIAN	AIR 25
FORCE	OFFICERS	WITH	THESE	QUALIFICATIONS 30
ARE	NOT	IMMEDIATELY	AVAILABLE,	SOME 35
OF	THESE	POSTS	MAY	REQUIRE 40
TO	BE	FILLED	BY	ROYAL 45
AIR	FORCE	OFFICERS.	END	OF 50
PART	THREE.	PART	FOUR	FOLLOWS. 55
				60

R. C. A. F. HEADQUARTERS
SIGNAL OFFICE
DEC 24 1940
Copy No.
Original
2nd.
3rd.
4th.
Passed to
Prime Minister
Minister N.D.(Ont.)

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN and may† .....be sent by W\T. Signature

This message must be sent IN CYPHER and may† .....be sent by W\T Signature

Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority*

TIME OF ORIGIN 1815G\23

T.O.R.

‡Originator to insert "NOT" if message is not to go by W\T over any part of the route. (Below this line is for Signals use only)

T.H.I.	System in	Time in	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender
1451\24	W\T		JHB\WCA

*The Signal Department is responsible that these details are transposed to the appropriate portion of the message form and that all possibility of compromising distinguishing signals, etc., by omitting to remove their signification from the address, etc., is avoided. Before delivery of the message these details are to be re-inserted in P.C.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268502

R.C.A.F. S-5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No. 32

Call IN and :— Preface OUT

SECRET

ORIGINAL COPY FOR ACTION AND FILE

No. of Groups GR

Office Date Stamp

Air Force Headquarters
DEC 24 1940
SIGNAL OFFICE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO* C.A.S. RCAF HQ OTTAWA

FROM* ROYCANAIRF LONDON

Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date
X.643	23/12

(Write horizontally)

PART	FOUR	BEGINS.	THE	REPLACEMENT
OF	THESE	ROYAL	AIR	FORCE
OFFICERS	WILL	BE	EFFECTED	PROGRESSIVELY
AS	SOON	AS	QUALIFIED	ROYAL
CANADIAN	AIR	FORCE	OFFICERS	BECOME
AVAILABLE	FOR	THAT	PURPOSE.	EIGHT.
NOTHING	IN	THESE	ARRANGEMENTS	TO
IMPLEMENT	ARTICLE	15	AFFECTS	THE
FINANCIAL	RESPONSIBILITIES	OF	THE	TWO
GOVERNMENTS	UNDER	THE	AIR	TRAINING
AGREEMENT,	IT	BEING	UNDERSTOOD	THAT
THE	COST	OF	THE	25

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-22-5

MESSAGE FORM

C 268503

Office Serial No.....

Call and Preface		No. of Groups GR	Office Date Stamp
IN
OUT	PAGE TWO

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO*

FROM*	Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

				5
SQUADRONS	REFERRED	TO	IN	PARAGRAPH
ONE	ABOVE	WILL	BE	10 BORNE
BY	THE	UNITED	KINGDOM	15 GOVERNMENT,
EXCEPT	THAT	THE	PAY,	20 ALLOWANCES,
AND	NON	EFFECTIVE	BENEFITS	25 OF
ROYAL	CANADIAN	AIR	FORCE	30 PERSONNEL
WHO	SERVE	IN	THE	35 NEW
SQUADRONS	WILL	BE	BOURNE	40 BY
THE	UNITED	KINGDOM	GOVERNMENT	45 ONLY
TO	THE	EXTENT	PROVIDED	50 FOR
IN	ARTICLE	17	OF	55 THE
AIR	TRAINING	AGREEMENT.	NINE.	60 THE

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268504

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No.....

Call and Preface	IN / OUT	No. of Groups GR	Office Date Stamp
	PAGE THREE	.....

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO*

FROM*	Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

AIR	OFFICER	COMMANDING	THE	ROYAL
CANADIAN	AIR	FORCE	OVERSEAS	HEADQUARTERS,
OR	A	SENIOR	OFFICER	DESIGNATED
BY	THE	CANADIAN	GOVERNMENT	FOR
THE	PURPOSE,	WILL	AT	ALL
TIME	HAVE	ACCESS	TO	COMMANDERS
OF	STATIONS	AND	GROUPS	AND
TO	COMMANDERS	IN	CHIEF	OF
COMMANDS	IN	WHICH	ROYAL	CANADIAN
AIR	FORCE	PERSONNEL	ARE	SERVING,
AND	WILL	BE	FURNISHED	BY
THEM	WITH	SUCH	INFORMATION	AS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3090)
H.Q., 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM C 268505

Office Serial No.....

Call and Preface IN / OUT		No. of Groups GR	Office Date Stamp
	PAGE FOUR

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO*

FROM*	Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

HE	MAY	DESIRE.	END	OF 5
PART	FOUR.	PART	FIVE	FOLLOWS. 10
				15
				20
				25
				30
				35
				40
				45
				50
				55 60

R.C.A.F. HEADQUARTERS
SIGNAL OFFICE
DEC 24 1940
Copy No.
Original
2nd.
3rd.
4th.
Passed to
Time Received
Transmitted R.C.

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN and may‡.....be sent by W/T. Signature

This message must be sent IN CYPHER and may‡.....be sent by W/T Signature

Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority*

TIME OF ORIGIN 1825G/23

T.O.R.

‡Originator to insert "NOT" if message is not to go by W/T over any part of the route. (Below this line is for Signals use only)

T.H.I.	System in	Time in	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender
1413/24	W/T		JHB/WGA

*The Signal Department is responsible that these details are transposed to the appropriate portion of the message form and that all possibility of compromising distinguishing signals, etc., by omitting to remove their signification from the address, etc., is avoided. Before delivery of the message these details are to be re-inserted in P/L

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S.S
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—3-40 (4000)
H.Q._1082-23-6

C 268506

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No.....

Call IN and :— Preface OUT	PAGE FOUR	No. of Groups GR	Office Date Stamp

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO*

FROM* | Originator's Number | Date | In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

HE MAY DESIRE. HMD OF

PART FOUR. PART FIVE FOLLOWS.

R. C. A. F. HEADQUARTERS
SIGNAL OFFICE
DEC 24 1940
Copy No. Passed to Original Prime Minister
2nd. Minister N.D. (Ott.)
3rd.
4th.

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN and may be sent by W/T. Signature

This message must be sent IN CYPHER and may be sent by W/T Signature

Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority*

TIME OF ORIGIN 1259½/23

T.O.R.

*Originator to insert "NOT" if message is not to go by W/T over any part of the route. (Below this line is for Signals use only)

T.H.I.	System in	Time in	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender
1413/24	W/T		JHB/WCA

*The Signal Department is responsible that these details are transposed to the appropriate portion of the message form and that all possibility of compromising distinguishing signals, etc., by omitting to remove their significance from the address, etc., is avoided. Before delivery of the message these details are to be re-inserted in P/L

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3090)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM C268506

Office Serial No. 35

Call IN and :— Preface OUT

SECRET

ORIGINAL COPY FOR ACTION AND FILE

No. of Groups: GR

Office Date Stamp: Air Force Headquarters DEC 24 1940 SIGNAL OFFICE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO* C.A.S. RCAF HQ OTTAWA

FROM* ROYCANAIRF LONDON

Originator's Number: X.643

Date: 23/12

In reply to Number and Date:

(Write horizontally)

PART	FIVE	BEGINS.	HE	WILL
ALSO	HAVE	ACCESS	TO	THE
CHIEF	OF	THE	AIR	STAFF.
HE	WILL	BE	FURNISHED	WITH
ADVANCE	INFORMATION	ABOUT	ANY	MAJOR
QUESTIONS	WHICH	ARISE	FROM	TIME
TO	TIME	AFFECTING	THE	EMPLOYMENT
OF	ROYAL	CANADIAN	AIR	FORCE
PERSONNEL	AND	SQUADRONS.	HE	WILL
BE	AT	LIBERTY	TO	MAKE
REPRESENTATIONS	TO	THE	AIR	MINISTRY
ON	ANY	OF	THE	ABOVE

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-23-5

MESSAGE FORM C268507

Office Serial No.....

Call IN / and :— / Preface OUT		No. of Groups GR	Office Date Stamp
	PAGE TWO //

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO*

FROM*	Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

MATTERS.	TEN.	THE	ARRANGEMENTS	IN
THE	PRECEDING	PARAGRAPH	WILL	NOT
AFFECT	THE	EXISTING	PROCEDURE	FOR
CONSULTATION	BETWEEN	THE	TWO	GOVERNMENTS
ON	MAJOR	QUESTIONS	AFFECTING	THE
EMPLOYMENT	OF	THE	ROYAL	CANADIAN
AIR	FORCE	PERSONNEL	AND	SQUADRONS
OVERSEAS.	AGREEMENT	ENDS.	I	HAVE
INITIALLED	THIS	WITH	SECRETARY	OF
STATE	FOR	AIR	AND	AM
SUBMITTING	IT	FOR	YOUR	URGENT
CONSIDERATION.	I	AM	CABLING / CERTAIN	COMMENTS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268508

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
25M Pads of 100—2-40 (3990)
H.Q. 1062-22-5

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No.....

Call and Preface IN / OUT		No. of Groups GR	Office Date Stamp
	PAGE THREE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO*

FROM* | Originator's Number | Date | In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

TO	YOU	VIA	EXTERNAL	AFFAIRS, 5
BUT	MEANWHILE	THOUGHT	YOU	WOULD 10
LIKE	TO	HAVE	THE	TEXT 15
OF	THE	AGREEMENT.	WHICH	I 20
HOPE	YOU	CAN	APPROVE.	ENDS. 25
END	OF	PART	FIVE.	30
				35
				40
				45
				50
				55 60

R.C.A.F. HEADQUARTERS
SIGNAL OFFICE
DEC 24 1940
Copy No.
Original
2nd.
3rd.
4th.
Passed to

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN and may‡.....be sent by W/T. Signature

This message must be sent IN CYPHER and may‡.....be sent by W/T Signature

Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority*

TIME OF ORIGIN 1830G/23

T.O.R.

‡Originator to insert "NOT" if message is not to go by W/T over any part of the route. (Below this line is for Signals use only)

T.H.I.	System in	Time in	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender
1442/24	W/T		JHB/WGA

*The Signal Department is responsible that these details are transposed to the appropriate portion of the message form and that all possibility of compromising distinguishing signals, etc., by omitting to remove their signification from the address, etc., is avoided. Before delivery of the message these details are to be re-inserted in P/L

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.C.A.F. S. 5
(R.A.F. 96A.)
20M Pads of 100—2-40 (3900)
H.Q. 1053-29-6

C 268506

MESSAGE FORM

Office Serial No.....

Call IN		No. of Groups GR	Office Date Stamp
and :—
Preface OUT	PAGE THREE

(Above this line is for Signals use only)

TO*

FROM*

Originator's Number	Date	In reply to Number and Date

(Write horizontally)

TO	YOU	VIA	EXTERNAL	AFFAIRS.
BUT	MEANWHILE	THOUGHT	YOU	WOULD
LIKE	TO	HAVE	THE	TEXT
OF	THE	AGREEMENT,	WHICH	I
HOPE	YOU	CAN	APPROVE.	ENDS.
END	OF	PART	FIVE.

R. C. A. F. HEADQUARTERS
SIGNAL OFFICE
DEC 24 1940
Copy No.
Original
2nd.
3rd.
4th.
Passed to
Prime Minister
Minister Nat Def (Air)

This message must be sent AS WRITTEN and may be sent by W\T. Signature.....

This message must be sent IN CYPHER and may be sent by W\T. Signature.....

Originator's Instructions* Degree of Priority*

TIME OF ORIGIN 1850G\25

T.O.R.

*Originator to insert "NOT" if message is not to go by W\T over any part of the route. (Below this line is for Signals use only)

T.H.I.	System in	Time in	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender	System out	Time out	Reader	Sender
1642\24	W\T		JHR\WCA

*The Signal Department is responsible that these details are transposed to the appropriate portion of the message form and that all possibility of compromising distinguishing signals, etc., by omitting to remove their signification from the address, etc., is avoided. Before delivery of the message these details are to be re-inserted in T\C

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ATP

C 268509

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA

TO: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS, LONDON

CODE

OTTAWA, December 24th, 1940.

No. 234

No. 234. Would appreciate your conveying the following message to Sir Archibald Sinclair from Major Power, Begins:

Please accept my sincere thanks for your Christmas message which I reciprocate most warmly. The heroic design traced by the R.A.F. and the leadership of yourself and your colleagues in the year now drawing to a close has been an inspiration of unparalleled significance to the world.

Actuated by it we go forward into the New Year with a sure faith and an enduring confidence and with the strong determination that our assistance will be worthy of the example which you have set. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

"R" ATP Copy sent Mr Power

C 268510

TELEGRAM

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

CYPHER

NO. 2139

LONDON, December 24th, 1940.

No. 2139. Following from Ralston to the Prime Minister and Power, Begins:

Following are comments on Memorandum of Agreement as to arrangements made under Article 15 of Air Training Plan, which was cabled you on December 23rd.

Regarding paragraph 2 of Agreement, slowness in forming squadrons is not due to any reluctance on the part of the United Kingdom to carry out spirit of the Agreement, but arises from the fact that air crews cannot simply be thrown into complete squadrons as they arrive in the United Kingdom. It will be obviously necessary to have the proper proportions of pilots, bombers, gunners, wireless and air navigation personnel, and also it may be necessary for them to have some preparatory operational training with experienced Royal Air Force units, thus giving them greater efficiency and avoiding casualties, which would result from forming them immediately into Royal Canadian Air Force operational squadrons.

Paragraph 3. Stevenson feels strongly that centralization of posting is in Canadian interests, and permits most effective employment of personnel, without the delays which would be incurred if Canadians were posted through a separate organization to Royal Air Force squadrons while Royal Canadian Air Force squadrons in course of formation.

Paragraphs 4 and 5 provide for identification of all

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

TELEGRAM

C 268511

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON.

Canadians from the Air Training Plan, wherever serving, with the provision for reviewing the situation in September 1941, which will afford an opportunity to consider practicability of Royal Air Force Canadian squadrons in addition to the 28 Royal Canadian Air Force squadrons in paragraph 1 of the Agreement. As already indicated, the United Kingdom feel very doubtful about such a plan being effectively worked out, but they are willing to leave it open for further consideration. The six months period mentioned for this purpose was considered too short for sufficient experience to be gained to enable practical consideration to be given.

Paragraph 6. This is a new point. It is really not much more than an expression of hope that something may some time be done by way of exchange. The Royal Air Force service people were particularly anxious to have some paragraph of this kind; their earlier draft was much stronger, but, as you will note, final draft only binds as far "as may mutually be considered practicable". We could (hardly?) refuse to go this far, and I hope that (there will be no?) suggestion for change in this paragraph as it is the result of very considerable discussion and revision.

Paragraph 7 speaks for itself, and is designed to ensure operational efficiency.

Paragraph 8 speaks for itself.

Paragraph 9 is a consultation clause, We have made it as wide as we possibly could, and think you will be quite satisfied with it.

Paragraph 10 is designed to make it clear that consultation between service representatives of paragraph 9

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

TELEGRAM

C 268512

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

-3-

LONDON.

is supplementary to and not any substitution for consultation between the Governments.

I should have made clear in my earlier telegram that my initialling was subject to confirmation by the Canadian Government, but at the same time I sincerely hope the Agreement can stand as initialled. Sir Archibald Sinclair, in his covering letter sending me a copy of the Memorandum of Agreement, says "at an earlier stage the Memorandum contained clause stating that arrangements would be made from time to time between the two Governments to effect changes between senior officers of the Royal Air Force and senior officers of the Royal Canadian Air Force. This has rightly been deleted from the Memorandum, but I think it would perhaps be well for us to take this opportunity of stating in writing that our respective Governments have it in mind to effect such exchanges as opportunity offers". We had suggested that this matter was really not part of the Agreement respecting the Air Training Plan, and that it be put forward in a separate communication. I see no objection to my confirming Sir Archibald's statement that "our respective Governments have it in mind to effect such exchanges as opportunity offers". Please confirm this as well. Ends.

Received 26-XII-40 PC

MASSEY

Rec'd 12.45 a.m.
25th Dec.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

AC 268513

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA.

TO: THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN THE UNITED KINGDOM, LONDON.

IMMEDIATE

SECRET

CYPHER

NO. 2036

Ottawa, December 27th, 1940.

Following from Prime Minister and Power to Ralston, Begins:

1. The Cabinet War Committee have now considered the text of the memorandum of agreement as to arrangements for identification of Canadians from the Air Training Plan, as contained in your Air Force Signal of December 23rd. Full consideration has also been given to the comments contained in your External Affairs telegram No. 2139 of December 24th.

2. The Government are willing to confirm the agreement as set out in your telegram of December 23rd, and initialled by you, subject to what follows regarding paragraph six thereof as to exchange of ground personnel.

3. We are not sure as to what is intended by paragraph six, which appears to be capable of two interpretations. First, this paragraph may be interpreted as a proposal that the United Kingdom ground crews who are to be attached to the twenty-five R.C.A.F. squadrons will be replaced in due course, and as may be considered practicable, by Canadian ground crews previously employed in the Training Plan, and that such R.C.A.F. personnel will in turn be replaced in Canada by equal numbers of United Kingdom personnel of similar categories. Second, paragraph six may be interpreted as requiring the raising of additional ground crews by Canada to take the place in the Training Plan of such Canadians as may proceed overseas to join the R.C.A.F. squadrons, in substitution for United Kingdom personnel. If the twenty-five R.C.A.F. squadrons are eventually to be fully manned by

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268514

Canadians, this would involve, in due course, the raising by Canada of approximately 7,500 ground personnel, additional to the numbers at present contemplated.

We should like to have you clarify the meaning of this paragraph. Immediately we are sure of what is intended in this respect, we will let you have our decision.

4. Subject to what has been said in the preceeding numbered paragraph of this telegram, you may regard this message as confirmation by the Canadian government of the memorandum of agreement with the government of the United Kingdom, and you may inform the Air Ministry accordingly.

5. The government have no objection to your confirming in writing to the Secretary of State for Air the understanding regarding the exchange of senior officers of the Royal Air Force and Royal Canadian Air Force described in the final paragraph of your telegram of December 24th. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ATP - Supplies

C268515

TELEGRAM

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

CODE

NO. 2152 LONDON, December 28th, 1940.

No. 2152. Air Ministry ask whether, in connection with memorandum of Agreement of December 17th, 1939, relating to training of air crews in Canada, Canadian authorities propose to maintain equipment records which will show use, consumption, disposal and available stocks of equipment supplied by the United Kingdom to Canada under the Agreement. Maintenance of such records by the Canadian Government will enable the Accounting Officer of the Air Ministry to discharge his responsibilities to the United Kingdom Parliament in respect to equipment purchased out of air votes. Also ask whether such records will be controlled by the Financial Adviser appointed under Clause 13(a) of Agreement, and whether they will be subject to examination by the Auditor-General of Canada.

Matter has been discussed with Breadner and Stedman, who advise equipment records are maintained in Canada and are always available, but no arrangements have been made to take off situation reports for the information of the Air Ministry. Please cable information on which to base reply to the above Air Ministry communication.

MASSEY

Rec'd Ottawa 2.27 p.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

ATP

TELEGRAM C 268516

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

CYPHER

LONDON, December 31, 1940.

NO. 2160

No. 2160. Following from Ralston for the Prime Minister and Power, Begins:

Your telegram No. 2036, Memorandum of Agreement on Air Training Plan. First interpretation of paragraph 6, as outlined in your paragraph 3, is the correct one. Have consulted Dominions Office and Air Ministry who have written that their interpretation of this paragraph is that it contemplates that Royal Canadian Air Force ground personnel sent from Canada to the 25 Royal Canadian Air Force squadrons would be replaced by Royal Air Force ground personnel sent to Canada. They add that this system of replacement is, of course, also covered, as regards both parties to the Agreement, by the words:

"So far as it may mutually be considered practicable".

With this interpretation, I assume that there is no objection to me signing the Agreement.

MASSEY

Rec'd Ottawa, 3:26 p.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

TELEGRAM

C268517

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

CYPHER

No. 33

LONDON, January 7th, 1941.

No. 33. Your telegram No. 24 of January 2nd. Following for the Prime Minister and Power from Colonel Ralston, Begins:

Secretary of State for Air and I signed Memorandum of Agreement on Article No. 15 this afternoon. Previously we had exchanged letters, substance of which was as follows:

My letter.

"As clarification of paragraph six of Memorandum has been satisfactorily effected by exchanges of letters between Canada House and Dominions Office, I am now in a position to sign Memorandum. Your suggestion re exchange of officers is concurred in. It is our understanding of the purpose of these exchanges that by them Royal Canadian Air Force officers will gain the experience which is necessary for them to qualify for higher command overseas. This will ensure that seniority of Royal Canadian Air Force personnel in Canada will not be restricted to training activities there for the duration of the war. The Canadian Government would also desire that, when practicable, Royal Canadian Air Force squadrons should serve together in stations and groups, and that Canadian officers should, when qualified, be given commands and staff appointments, not only in stations and groups in which Canadian squadrons would normally be serving, but also in the commands and at the Air Ministry, to the extent that such commands and appointments should be proportionate to the numbers of Royal Canadian Air Force squadrons serving overseas."

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

TELEGRAM

C268518

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON.

Substance of Sir Archibald's reply was:

"I am in full agreement with what you say as to the purpose of the suggested exchanges between senior officers and the Royal Air Force and Senior officers of the Royal Canadian Air Force, and as to the desirability of arranging that in so far as suitably qualified Royal Canadian Air Force officers are available, they should be given commands and staff appointments, not only in stations and groups in which Canadian squadrons would normally be serving, but also in the commands and at the Air Ministry. It would be our endeavour to arrange that such appointments were given to Royal Canadian Air Force officers in numbers fully proportionate to the number of R.C.A.F. squadrons overseas. We will also endeavour to arrange that where practicable, R.C.A.F. squadrons will be grouped together in the same stations and in the same groups, but, as I am sure you will appreciate, the first consideration must be to retain the high degree of officers which is essential to operational efficiency."

Discussed above exchange of letters with Air Vice Marshal Breadner who concurs. Ends.

MASSEY

Rec'd Ottawa, 6:49 p.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

ATP

C 268519

TELEGRAM

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

CYPHER

LONDON, January 8th, 1941.

No. 37

No. 37. Following from Colonel Ralston to the Prime Minister and Power, Begins:

Secretary of State for Air has written to me concerning further expansion of the Joint Air Training Plan. He refers to Mr. Churchill's telegrams of November 14th and December 4th which deal with the possibility of developing production of trainer aircraft in Canada. He adds that this was not intended to mean that the United Kingdom had abandoned the idea of undertaking more flying training in Canada at a later stage, but it was not possible at the moment to give a final decision as to how much more training might be done in Canada, or whether it could better be provided by an extension of the Plan than setting up more transfer schools in Canada.

Attached to his letter was an aide-memoire which summarizes the position, and which I am cabling separately through Air Ministry cypher. I have agreed that Air Vice Marshal Breadner shall discuss questions in that aide-memoire with Air Ministry here, pending consideration that will be given it in Ottawa. Ends.

MASSEY

Rec'd Ottawa 2:56 P.M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

A.T.P

C 2888520

TELEGRAM

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

CODE

NO. 39

LONDON, January 8th, 1941.

No. 39. Following for Mr. Power, Begins:

Further consideration has been given Air Ministry to points raised in your X. 966, January 5th. They suggest that your telegram is based on assumption that final adjustment with the United Kingdom arising from modification of plan will necessitate introduction of major accounting complications for purpose of separating additional costs from cost of plan as originally contemplated. By Memorandum of Agreement, however, (see telegram A. 116 from R.C.A.F. to Chief of the Air Staff) the principle of contribution in kind by the United Kingdom would be preserved, and recording of costs for purpose of effecting adjustment between the United Kingdom and Canada would be abandoned. United Kingdom regard principle of contribution in kind simpler work than proposed alternative that they should bear share of total cost and receive credit in Canadian dollars for value of contribution in kind. This alternative, in their opinion, would involve very laborious task of pricing all issues in kind at a time when efforts are being made to reduce detailed work, and when conditions have made it difficult to fix price for many items recently manufactured. Further, if cash or book credit is to be given to the United Kingdom for contribution in kind, it would be argued that such credit should allow for any equipment lost at sea en route to Canada, as such losses from part of the contribution put

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268521

TELEGRAM

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON.

into the joint plan by the United Kingdom Government. Costs of packing, loading and transportation to Canada would have to be credited. Air Ministry also feel that present complicated accounting procedure would largely disappear if Australia and New Zealand agree to the adjustment on basis of shares assessed at the end of each year on an estimated (instead of an actual) cost, monthly instalments being paid during the year on an estimate of the cost made at the beginning of the year, and any adjustment being effected when post-estimate has been made. It is recalled that proposed Memorandum of Agreement with the United Kingdom on commitments entered into by Canada, consequent on interruption of deliveries, cover all commitments entered into prior to date of Agreement, and provides that no commitments will be entered into after that date as potential United Kingdom liabilities without prior agreement with the United Kingdom representatives in Canada and the United States of America.

United Kingdom hope therefore that any further modification in plan, as distinct from an extension of plan, can be settled on the lines of proposed Agreement referred to above. Ends.

MASSEY

Rec'd Ottawa, 7:00 p.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

MEMORANDUM

Office of the Clerk of the Privy Council C 268522

Ottawa, Jan, 10th, 1941.

For the Prime Minister:

Message received this morning through R.C.A.F. from Mr. Ralston. Copy for Mr. King's information.

Air Training Plan

Training Organization &c

A.D.P.H.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COPY

ATP

C268523

To: CAS Ottawa, Canada

From: ROYCANAIRF, London.

The following message in five parts. Part One begins:

Following from Ralston for Prime Minister and Power through External.

Following is text of Aide Memoire referred to in my telegram 37 of January 8th. Begins:

> Canada's generous offer to provide more flying training facilities has been the subject of telegraphic correspondence between Prime Ministers ending with telegram No. 178 to the Prime Minister of Canada.
>
> 2. In that telegram we put first things first and the limiting factor in the expansion of flying training being the shortage of advanced trainer aircraft, we asked that Canada's first effort should be to increase its production of advanced trainers. This still remains the primary need.
>
> 3. The flying training organization has been planned to meet the needs of the operational force which it is hoped to complete in the course of the year 1942 and to provide some margin against the possibility of still further operational expansion beyond the force at present engaged for that year.
>
> (End of Part One. Part Two follows.)
>
> (Part Two begins:)
>
> 4. This training organization embraces 56 flying training schools and includes, of course, the schools provided by the British

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268524

Commonwealth Joint Air Training Plan which in turn provides 25 of the 56 service flying training schools required for the complete training organization.

5. The course of the war has placed severe restrictions on flying training in the United Kingdom and this fact, together with the heavy aerodrome requirements for operational purpose in the United Kingdom, makes the completion of the United Kingdom portion of the authorized expansion of the flying training organization a matter of some difficulty. Indeed, account has to be taken of the possibility that all flying training other than operational training may, in due course, have to take place outside the United Kingdom.

(End of Part Two. Part Three follows:)

(Part Three begins:)

6. Canada has very generously agreed to provide accommodation for eight service flying training and six other schools to be transferred from the United Kingdom. Four of these service flying training schools we hope to occupy or beging to occupy by about the end of next month. Two existing schools are already transferred and one newly formed school is in process of being transferred. The fourth (a newly formed school) will leave later this month. We hope to transfer four more service flying training schools by August 1941.

7. The actual process of transfer involves a break in training and an immediate loss of output but this we must accept.

8. Canada has tackled the problem of providing a vast training organization with great energy and resource and we appreciate what a heavy strain this must involve. It is with some hesitation, therefore, that we

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ask Canada to contemplate at any rate before the middle of 1941, the transfer from the United Kingdom of additional training units. This possibility arises entirely from the considerations set out in paragraph five.

(End of Part Three. Part Four follows.)

(Part Four Begins)

9. We have a balance of six additional service flying training schools in the United Kingdom portion of the programme and we have reached the conclusion that it is highly desirable that these should be located in the North American continent. The time factor is all important and consequently we cannot afford to neglect any possibility of securing the use of ready-made capacity.

10. It remains to consider the need for capacity for observer and general reconnaissance training (in addition to that for which Canada is already providing accommodation) and we cannot see any means of providing it in this country. This additional training which makes use of Anson aircraft very largely must again depend on the availability of that type, or an equivalent type of aircraft. If and when an adequate supply of aircraft for this purpose can be foreseen, we should like to discuss the formation in Canada of more schools, giving these kinds of training.

(End of Part Four. Part Five follows.)

(Part Five Begins)

11. Another way in which Canada might be able to help would be by extending the existing elementary flying training organization in Canada to cover the needs of any United Kingdom schools transferred to that Dominion.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268526

12. It is realized that the planning and construction of additional training schools must take some considerable time, and that it is essential that the Canadian government should be furnished with definite proposals at an early date if the additional schools ultimately found to be needed in Canada are to be profided in time. It may well be that before Air Vice Marshal Breadner leaves the United Kingdom we shall be in a position to indicate our needs with more precision. We should therefore be glad if Mr. Ralston would agree to our pursuing the question further with Air Vice Marshal Breadner. NOW

(End of Part Five and end of message.)

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

THURSDAY LUNCHEON

1940-1941
Luncheon
No. 12

Thursday,
Jan. 2nd
1.00 p.m.

268527

D. Gordon, President.

A luncheon of THE CANADIAN CLUB of OTTAWA will be held in the CHATEAU LAURIER on THURSDAY, JANUARY 2nd, at 1.00 p.m., when our guest of honour will be who will address the meeting on a subject of immediate interest.

AIR CHIEF MARSHALL SIR HUGH DOWDING, G.C.V.O., K.C.B., C.B., C.M.G.

Our guest is a graduate of the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich and served with great distinction in the War 1914-1918, first with the Royal Artillery and later with the Royal Flying Corps. Since 1937 he has been Principal Air A.D.C. to the King and up until very recently was Commander-in-Chief of the Royal Air Force Fighter Command. He has just reached Ottawa from Great Britain on a most important mission to Canada and the United States.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

A POST CARD

C268279

RT.HON.W.L.MACKENZIE KING,
LAURIER HOUSE
LAURIER AVE. OTTAWA.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ATP

C268528

OFFICE OF THE
HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA
CANADA HOUSE,
LONDON, S.W.1.

27th December, 1940.

A. 241.

Sir,

Confirming the telegram from Colonel Ralston to the Prime Minister and Mr. Power, sent through Royal Air Force Headquarters, I am enclosing herewith three copies of a Memorandum of Agreement as to the arrangements to be made under Article 15 of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan and the letter of December 16th, 1939, from Lord Riverdale to the Canadian Minister of National Defence.

Certain comments on this Memorandum were cabled by Colonel Ralston on December 24th. The Agreement has been initialled by the Secretary of State for Air and Colonel Ralston, subject on the latter's part to confirmation by the Canadian Government.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your obedient servant,

L.B. Pearson.

for High Commissioner.

The Right Honourable

The Secretary of State for External Affairs,

OTTAWA.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268529

MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT

as to the arrangements to be made under Article 15 of the British Commonwealth Air Training Agreement and the letter of 16th December, 1939, from Lord Riverdale to the Canadian Minister of National Defence.

It is agreed that the arrangements referred to in Article 15 of the Air Training Agreement for identifying with Canada the Canadian pilots and air crews trained under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan shall be on the following lines.

1. These pilots and air crews will be incorporated into squadrons of the Royal Canadian Air Force up to the number of twenty-five, in addition to the three already serving in the United Kingdom;

2. The exact rate of formation cannot be guaranteed since it depends on the rate at which the projected Air Force expansion can be achieved; nevertheless the endeavour will be to form these twenty-five squadrons within the next eighteen months in accordance with the following schedule:-

By March, 1941	3	squadrons to be formed
" June, 1941	7	" " " "
" September, 1941	12	" " " "
" December, 1941	17	" " " "
" March, 1942	22	" " " "
" April or May, 1942	25	" " " "

3. To facilitate arrangements for posting Canadian pilots and air crews, there will be established a Central Posting Organisation and a Central Record Office, the staff of which will include Royal Canadian Air Force personnel.

4. All Canadian pilots and air crews from the Air Training Plan not in Royal Canadian Air Force units or formations will continue to wear Royal Canadian Aif Force uniform.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

5. The working out of the foregoing arrangements shall be reviewed in September, 1941, in order to determine whether the schedule in paragraph 2 can be maintained or accelerated and to consider the position and organisation of Canadian pilots and air crews in excess of those who may be absorbed in Royal Canadian Air Force squadrons under these arrangements.

6. Under the Air Training Plan and at the request of the United Kingdom Government, the Royal Canadian Air Force has concentrated on the production of pilots and air crews. This has necessitated the provision and employment in Canada of ground personnel who would otherwise have been available for service with Royal Canadian Air Force squadrons overseas. It is recognised, however, as desirable, so far as it may mutually be considered practicable, that the United Kingdom ground personnel who, for the reason stated above, will be required for the squadrons referred to in paragraph 2 should gradually be exchanged for Royal Canadian Air Force ground personnel employed on the Air Training Plan, with a view to achieving homogeneity of personnel in these squadrons.

7. The concentration of the Royal Canadian Air Force on the Air Training Plan may also, at the outset, result in a shortage of Royal Canadian Air Force officers with the necessary qualifications to fill posts as Squadron Commanders, Station Commanders, etc. It is recognised that, if enough Royal Canadian Air Force officers with these qualifications are not immediately available, some of these posts may require to be filled by Royal Air Force officers. The replacement of these Royal Air Force officers will be effected progressively as soon as qualified Royal Canadian Air Force officers become available for that purpose.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268531

8. Nothing in these arrangements to implement Article 15 affects the financial responsibilities of the two Governments under the Air Training Agreement, it being understood that the cost of the twenty-five squadrons referred to in paragraph 1 above will be borne by the United Kingdom Government, except that the pay, allowances, and non-effective benefits of Royal Canadian Air Force personnel who serve in the new squadrons will be borne by the United Kingdom Government only to the extent provided for in Article 17 of the Air Training Agreement.

9. The Air Officer Commanding the Royal Canadian Air Force Overseas Headquarters, or a senior officer designated by the Canadian Government for the purpose, will at all times have access to Commanders of Stations and Groups and to Commanders in Chief of Commands in which Royal Canadian Air Force personnel are serving, and will be furnished by them with such information as he may desire. He will also have access to the Chief of the Air Staff. He will be furnished with advance information about any major questions which arise from time to time affecting the employment of Royal Canadian Air Force personnel and squadrons. He will be at liberty to make representations to the Air Ministry on any of the above matters.

10. The arrangements in the preceding paragraph will not affect the existing procedure for consultation between the two Governments on major questions affecting the employment of the Royal Canadian Air Force personnel and squadrons overseas.

Initialled on behalf of the Government of the United Kingdom.

Initialled on behalf of the Government of Canada.

December, 1940.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ATP-Supplies

COPY

C268532

OFFICE OF THE
HIGH COMMISSIONER

Canada House,
Trafalgar Square
London, S.W.1.

28th December, 1940.

No. A 442

Sir,

I have the honour to transmit herewith the undermentioned documents:-

Two copies of letter from the Air Ministry, dated December 21st, on which my telegram No. 2152 of December 28th was based.

I have the honour to be,
Sir,
Your obedient servant,

(sgd) L.B. PEARSON
for High Commissioner

The Right Honourable
The Secretary of State for External Affairs,
Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268533

COPY

Air Ministry
King Charles Street
Whitehall S W 1

S.64459/Accts.6

21st December, 1940.

Sir,

I am commanded by the Air Council to refer to the Memorandum of Agreement dated 17th December, 1939, between the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand relating to the training of pilots and aircraft crews in Canada and to ask whether H.M. Government in Canada propose to maintain equipment records which will show the use, consumption, disposal and available stocks of equipment supplied by the United Kingdom to Canada under the agreement. The maintenance of such record by H.M. Government in Canada would enable the Accounting Officer of the Air Ministry to discharge his responsibility to the Parliament of Great Britain in respect of equipment purchased out of Air Votes.

2. I am to enquire also whether such records will be controlled by the Financial Adviser appointed under Clause 13 (a) of the Agreement and whether they will be subject to the examination of the Auditor General of Canada.

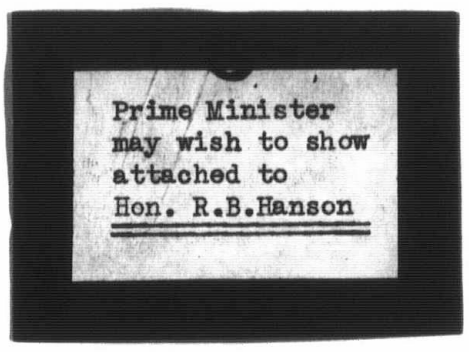
I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,

G.B. Abraham.

The High Commissioner for Canada,
Canada House,
Trafalgar Square,
S.W.1.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA



POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Prime Minister
may wish to show attached to
Hon. R.B.Hanson

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Prime Minister
may wish to show attached to
Hon. R.B.Hanson

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Prime Minister

C 268534

Original in Dept. Sec. ATP
Copies to Hon Rod Logan
Air Power
Hon Heaney
Jan 27/41
OD?

SECRET

MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT

between the Governments of the United Kingdom and Canada as to the arrangements to be made under Article 15 of the British Commonwealth Air Training Agreement and the letter of 16th December, 1939, from Lord Riverdale to the Canadian Minister of National Defence.

It is agreed that the arrangements referred to in Article 15 of the Air Training Agreement for identifying with Canada the Canadian pilots and air crews trained under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan shall be on the following lines:—

1. These pilots and air crews will be incorporated into squadrons of the Royal Canadian Air Force up to the number of twenty-five, in addition to the three already serving in the United Kingdom.

2. The exact rate of formation cannot be guaranteed since it depends on the rate at which the projected Air Force expansion can be achieved; nevertheless the endeavour will be to form these twenty-five squadrons within the next eighteen months in accordance with the following schedule:—

By March, 1941	3 squadrons to be formed.
By June, 1941	7 squadrons to be formed.
By September, 1941	12 squadrons to be formed.
By December, 1941	17 squadrons to be formed.
By March, 1942	22 squadrons to be formed.
By April or May, 1942	25 squadrons to be formed

3. To facilitate arrangements for posting Canadian pilots and air crews, there will be established a Central Posting Organisation and a Central Record Office, the staff of which will include Royal Canadian Air Force personnel.

4. All Canadian pilots and air crews from the Air Training Plan not in Royal Canadian Air Force units or formations will continue to wear Royal Canadian Air Force uniform.

5. The working out of the foregoing arrangements shall be reviewed in September, 1941, in order to determine whether the schedule in paragraph 2 can be maintained or accelerated and to consider the position and organisation of Canadian pilots and air crews in excess of those who may be absorbed in Royal Canadian Air Force squadrons under these arrangements.

6. Under the Air Training Plan and at the request of the United Kingdom Government, the Royal Canadian Air Force has concentrated on the production of pilots and air crews. This has necessitated the provision and employment in Canada of ground personnel who would otherwise have been available for service with Royal Canadian Air Force squadrons overseas. It is recognised, however, as desirable, so far as it may mutually be considered practicable, that the United Kingdom ground personnel who, for the reason stated above, will be required for the squadrons referred to in paragraph 2 should gradually be exchanged for Royal Canadian Air Force ground personnel employed on the Air Training Plan, with a view to achieving homogeneity of personnel in these squadrons.

7. The concentration of the Royal Canadian Air Force on the Air Training Plan may also, at the outset, result in a shortage of Royal Canadian Air Force officers with the necessary qualifications to fill posts as Squadron Commanders,

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268535

Station Commanders, etc. It is recognised that, if enough Royal Canadian Air Force officers with these qualifications are not immediately available, some of these posts may require to be filled by Royal Air Force officers. The replacement of these Royal Air Force officers will be effected progressively as soon as qualified Royal Canadian Air Force officers become available for that purpose.

8. Nothing in these arrangements to implement Article 15 affects the financial responsibilities of the two Governments under the Air Training Agreement, it being understood that the cost of the twenty-five squadrons referred to in paragraph 1 above will be borne by the United Kingdom Government, except that the pay, allowances, and non-effective benefits of Royal Canadian Air Force personnel who serve in the new squadrons will be borne by the United Kingdom Government only to the extent provided for in Article 17 of the Air Training Agreement.

9. The Air Officer Commanding the Royal Canadian Air Force Overseas Headquarters, or a senior officer designated by the Canadian Government for the purpose, will at all times have access to Commanders of Stations and Groups and to Commanders-in-Chief of Commands in which Royal Canadian Air Force personnel are serving, and will be furnished by them with such information as he may desire. He will also have access to the Chief of the Air Staff. He will be furnished with advance information about any major questions which arise from time to time affecting the employment of Royal Canadian Air Force personnel and squadrons. He will be at liberty to make representations to the Air Ministry on any of the above matters.

10. The arrangements in the preceding paragraph will not affect the existing procedure for consultation between the two Governments on major questions affecting the employment of the Royal Canadian Air Force personnel and squadrons overseas.

Done in duplicate, at London, England, this 7th day of January, 1941.

On behalf of the Government of the United Kingdom

Archibald Dunbar

On behalf of the Government of Canada

W. L. Mackenzie

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

ATP/Td
C 268536

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA

TO: THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN, LONDON

CODE

NO. 146

OTTAWA, January 29th, 1941.

Following is text of statement regarding identification of air crews which Prime Minister proposes to make public as soon as possible. It is a summary of Agreement signed by Ralston and Sinclair with which Pearson is familiar . We should be glad to have any suggested modifications United Kingdom authorities or your office may wish to propose, Begins:

When the Agreement was signed, in December 1939, which established the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, one of the articles provided that "pupils of Canada, Australia and New Zealand shall, after training is completed, be identified with their respective Dominions, either by the method of organizing Dominion units and formations or in some other way, such methods to be agreed upon with the respective Dominion Governments concerned. The United Kingdom Government will initiate inter-governmental discussions to this end."

Advantage was taken of the recent visit of the Minister of National Defence to the United Kingdom to carry on the inter-governmental discussions with the British authorities on the methods of identifying Canadian graduates from the air training plan on active service.

Honourable J.L. Ralston, as a member of the War Committee of the Cabinet and also of the Supervisory Board of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, was thoroughly familiar both with the original agreement and with the views of the government and the Air Ministry in this important matter.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268537

During his discussions with the United Kingdom Air Ministry, Mr. Ralston was, of course, in close touch by cable with his colleagues, and particularly with Honourable C.G. Power. As a result of the discussions, a supplementary agreement was signed by Sir Archibald Sinclair, the Secretary of State for Air, acting on behalf of the United Kingdom, and by Mr. Ralston for Canada. This supplementary agreement set out the arrangements arrived at whereby practical effect was given to the provisions of the article in the original agreement mentioned above respecting the identification of air crew graduates under the Plan.

In accordance with the terms of this supplementary agreement which was signed on January 7, 1941, Canadian pilots and air crews trained under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan will be incorporated into squadrons of the Royal Canadian Air Force up to the number of twenty-five. This number is in addition to the three R.C.A.F. squadrons already serving in the United Kingdom.

All Canadian pilots and air crews from the Air Training Plan who are not in R.C.A.F. units or formations will continue to wear the R.C.A.F. uniform.

At the request of the United Kingdom Government the Royal Canadian Air Force has concentrated on the production of pilots and air crews through the Air Training Plan. This concentration on training has necessitated the provision and employment of Canadian ground personnel who would otherwise have been available for service with the R.C.A.F. squadrons Overseas. Consequently, the ground crew personnel attached to the twenty-five R.C.A.F. squadrons Overseas will be United Kingdom airmen. It was recognized that, so far as it may mutually be considered practicable, there should gradually be an exchange of such ground personnel with Canadian ground personnel employed on the Air Training Plan with a view to achieving homogeneity in the R.C.A.F. squadrons serving Overseas.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268538

The necessary concentration of the R.C.A.F. on the work of the Air Training Plan may make it difficult at the outset to make available to the Canadian squadrons Overseas, officers with the necessary qualifications to fill the higher commands. Some of these posts may, therefore, require to be filled by experienced Royal Air Force officers. The agreement provides that the R.A.F. officers will be gradually and progressively replaced by qualified R.C.A.F. officers as soon as the latter become available.

The supplementary agreement provides for a review in September, 1941, of the arrangements agreed upon, in order to determine whether the schedule and number of squadrons fixed in the supplementary agreement can be maintained or accelerated, and to consider the position and organization of Canadian pilots and air crews in excess of those who, under the present agreement, may be absorbed in the R.C.A.F. squadrons.

Advantage was also taken of Mr. Ralston's visit to make arrangements with the United Kingdom government to provide against the possibility of senior Royal Canadian Air Force personnel being restricted to training activities in Canada for the duration of the war. To that end exchanges of senior officers with the R.A.F. are to be arranged as far as practicable.

The Canadian air crew output of the Air Training Plan will eventually exceed by many thousands the number of pilots, gunners and observers required to man the twenty-five R.C.A.F. squadrons provided for under the supplementary agreement. On the other hand, the United Kingdom will be furnishing not only the ground crews for these squadrons but the necessary personnel for the administration and lines of communication which call for many thousands of men to be furnished by the United Kingdom.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Although Canada is furnishing administrative personnel for the Plan, it would not be reasonable to expect that, under the circumstances, all Canadian graduates of the Plan who proceed Overseas should be immediately included in R.C.A.F. units.

The Air Training Plan is a co-operative enterprise and many of its graduates will serve in United Kingdom, Australian and New Zealand formations. Many more will go into the Plan itself as instructors. Some of the Canadian graduates will be retained in Canada in operational units of the Home War Establishment, others will be required as reinforcements to make up for wastage in R.C.A.F. squadrons, and a very large number, who are presently being sent Overseas, will be utilized as reinforcements to R.A.F squadrons now engaged in actual operations or in process of formation. Every Canadian graduate of the Air Training Plan, whether he be serving in a Canadian unit or formation, or in the Royal Air Force unit, will be identified as a Canadian by the badges and uniform which he will wear.

The formation of the R.C.A.F. operational squadrons provided for in the supplementary agreement will in no way operate to retard the primary purpose of the Air Training Plan, which is to supply to the Air Forces of the Empire, as rapidly as possible, a steady and ever-increasing flow of pilots, gunners and observers. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268540

OFFICE OF THE PRIME MINISTER

MEMORANDUM

Prime Minister

Attached is the draft identification release of air crews as prepared by Mr Power.

Since sending it to me Mr Power has telephoned to say he has consulted Mr Ralston who feels it should not be released in its present form, that there should be no release at all today, and that, before anything is released the text should be submitted to the U.K. Govt

JWP

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

COPY

ATP
C 268541

Office of the High Commissioner
for the United Kingdom
Ottawa

No.5.

30th January, 1941.

Sir:

I have the honour to inform you that the Air Ministry are anxious that ground personnel of the Royal Air Force serving in the Dominions, who desire to transfer from ground duties to air crew duties and can be recommended for air crew training, should be allowed to transfer to such training. It would be convenient in such cases if the Dominion authorities would allow the necessary air crew training to take place in the Dominion in which the transferee is serving at the time of his transfer.

2. I have been instructed to approach the Canadian Government in this matter, and to enquire whether they are prepared to agree to the proposal, in so far as Canada is concerned. It is understood that this question was discussed with Air Vice Marshal Breadner during his visit to the United Kingdom.

3. The United Kingdom Government would propose that any Royal Air Force volunteers serving in Canada who might be accepted for training in Canadian schools under this arrangement would be regarded as forming part of the United Kingdom quota under the Joint Air Training Plan.

I have, etc.,

(Sgd) W. C. Hankinson

The Secretary of State
for External Affairs,
Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

JER/S
Feb.3, 1941.

C268542

FROM - THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA.

TO - THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN, LONDON, ENGLAND.

No. 169

Refer to National Defence
" " (Air)

CODE

IMMEDIATE

Ottawa, Feb.3, 1941.

Your telegram No. 189, February 3, 1941, see my telegram No. 168 of same date. The statement to be made tomorrow is a different statement. Assume that you will expedite observations.

Secretary of State
for External Affairs.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268543 ATP

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA.

TO: THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN THE UNITED KINGDOM, LONDON.

IMMEDIATE

CODE

No. 168

Ottawa, February 3rd, 1941.

My telegram No. 146 of January 29th, 1941,

British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

Prime Minister proposes to make the public statement tomorrow, February 4th. It is important that he should be able to do so. Please let me know at once whether your office or United Kingdom authorities are suggesting any modifications.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

TELEGRAM C268544 ATP

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

MOST IMMEDIATE LONDON. February 4th, 1941.

CODE

No. 197

No. 197. Your telegram No. 168 of February 3rd, British Commonwealth Air Training Plan statement. Neither United Kingdom authorities nor this Office have any modifications to suggest. United Kingdom authorities have asked me to stress their appreciation of the opportunity of seeing statement in advance.

MASSEY

Rec'd Ottawa, 9:21 a.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

NAR/ET
15 Feb.1941 ATP

C 268545

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER:

I am enclosing a note prepared by the Legal Adviser of the Department on the answer to Mr. Perley's question with regard to the Moose Jaw airfield.

Taken up with the Prime Minister. Done. 17.2.41

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

JER/S
Feb.15/41

C 268546

NOTE FOR THE ACTG. UNDER-SECRETARY OF STATE
FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

Mr. Perley's Question with regard to the Moose Jaw Airfield.

---

1. I have annexed a copy of a draft reply to be sent in to the Under-Secretary of State of Canada, covering Mr. Perley's question.

2. Replies had been prepared by the Department of National Defence for Air, and the Department of Transport, but the matter was discussed with Dr. Skelton and he thought that it might be desirable to make a more extended reply than those departments had in mind. He thought that it might be desirable to give Mr. Perley the information that he actually desired to get, in so far as it was possible to do so.

3. Accordingly, the draft replies explain the position of the R.A.F. School at Moose Jaw. Further, they give very full information with regard to the contract and costs.

4. The figure given for the construction of the areodrome has not heretofore been released. I understand that the Department of Transport has not released any of their figures for works of this sort. It is possible that the Prime Minister might want to consult the Minister of Transport with regard to the policy of releasing this information. I do not know of any good reason for withholding it.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

JERS
Feb.13/41

C 268547

Mr. E. E. Perley

Votes and Proceedings No. 19. (p.ii)

QUESTIONS

1. Does the British Government (a) own or (b) operate airfields or other training facilities at or near the city of Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan.

2. If so, from whom were the same acquired or purchased, and what are the particulars as to price.

3. Who has the contract to (a) prepare the ground, (b) to erect the buildings.

4. What prices were paid to the contractors for such work.

ANSWERS

1. (a) The Government of the United Kingdom does not own an airfield or training facilities at or near Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan.

(b) The Government of the United Kingdom operates an airfield at Moose Jaw, which was built by the Department of Transport as a part of the Joint Air Training Plan. The title of the property remains vested in the Crown in right of Canada, in the same way as any ordinary Royal Canadian Air Force airfield. It is, however, used and operated by the Royal Air Force.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268547

Mr. E. E. Perley

Votes and Proceedings No. 19. (p.ii)

QUESTIONS

1. Does the British Government (a) own or (b) operate airfields or other training facilities at or near the city of Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan.

2. If so, from whom were the same acquired or purchased, and what are the particulars as to price.

3. Who has the contract to (a) prepare the ground, (b) to erect the buildings.

4. What prices were paid to the contractors for such work.

ANSWERS

1. (a) The Government of the United Kingdom does not own an airfield or training facilities at or near Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan.

(b) The Government of the United Kingdom operates an airfield at Moose Jaw, which was built by the Department of Transport as a part of the Joint Air Training Plan. The title of the property remains vested in the Crown in right of Canada, in the same way as any ordinary Royal Canadian Air Force airfield. It is, however, used and operated by the Royal Air Force.

REPEAT
REPETER

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

This is one of certain training schools of the Royal Air Force which have been moved to Canada from the United Kingdom by arrangement between the governments of Canada and the United Kingdom, independently of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

The training schools so moved to Canada are integral parts of the Royal Air Force, and the expense of maintaining the schools is borne solely by the Government of the United Kingdom.

It is not possible, for security reasons, to give details of this movement and, further, it is not possible to disclose the details of the movement at any time without the consent of the Government of the United Kingdom.

The Royal Air Force Training Schools constitute "visiting forces" within the meaning of The Visiting Forces (British Commonwealth) Act 1933, Chapter 21 of the Statutes of 1932—33. By an Order-in-Council under Section 6 of that Act, the Governor-in-Council has declared that these Royal Air Force Training Schools in Canada shall serve together and act in combination with the Royal Canadian Air Force in Canada. An Order to the same effect has been made by the United Kingdom authorities, under the United Kingdom Statute of the same name.

There is no superior Royal Air Force formation in Canada, and these Royal Air Force Training Schools have been placed under the command of the Canadian Air Officers commanding the respective areas in which the Schools are located.

2. The Moose Jaw airfield in question was not acquired or purchased in the ordinary sense of the word. It is used and operated by the Royal Air Force under an arrangement whereby the Government

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

of the United Kingdom has assumed liability for all costs of maintenance and construction.

3. (a) It is assumed that by "prepare the ground" is meant the construction of the areodrome. This was constructed by the Department of Transport, the contractor being the Bird Construction Company.

(b) The construction within the Royal Air Force building area was by the Department of National Defence for Air, the contract to erect the building being held by Carter-Hall-Aldinger Company, Limited, of Winnipeg, Manitoba.

4. Up to the present time the sum of $578,348 has been paid for the construction of the aerodrome.

Up to the 5th December, 1940, the sum of $950,588.40 had been paid for the construction of buildings, parade grounds, roads, aprons, the erection of fences, the provision of water and sewage services within the Royal Air Force building area.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 382, pages C267856-C268549

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

W.L.M. KING PAPERS

Memoranda and Notes

1940-1950

MG 26 J 4 Volume 383

Pages C268550-C269295

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

FILE:

BELGIUM -- NETHERLANDS

C 268550

1) Belgium - Netherlands

2) Belgium

3) Netherlands

4) Canadian Minister to Belgium

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Belgium-N.

"R"

TELEGRAM

C 268551

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

IMMEDIATE LONDON, November 9th, 1939.

MOST SECRET

CYPHER

NO. 628.

No. 628. Most Secret. Evidence from Diplomatic and Secret Service sources accumulates that Germans are likely to undertake major operations within a week. Both Dutch and Belgian Governments are making preparations against possible attack including certain measures involving demolitions and inundations.

MASSEY

Rec'd Ottawa: 3.30 P.M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

Belgium N

TELEGRAM C 268552

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

MOST SECRET

CYPHER

LONDON, November 9th, 1939.

CIRCULAR D. 72.

Circular D. 72. Most Secret. Following for your Prime Minister, Begins:

Belgium and Holland

1. French Government state that Belgian Government have informed them that if Belgium were assured of French assistance she would make common war with Holland in event of German invasion of the latter. French Government replied France would give Belgium such assistance as lay in her power which must however be very limited as French army could not march into Belgium and expose itself on an unprepared front. French Government requests His Majesty's Government to provide for necessary Air Forces.

2. French Government are anxious for identic Franco-British attitude to Dutch-Belgian mediation offer. They consider situation has not been changed since we replied to Hitler's peace offensive and that our reply can only be the same.

3. His Majesty's Ambassador at Brussels asked the Minister for Foreign Affairs what the attitude of the Belgian Government would be if Holland was attacked. Minister for Foreign Affairs enquired whether France and Great Britain were prepared to send a force to defend Holland. He thought Belgian

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

TELEGRAM C268553

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON,

Government would consent to our sending troops across Belgium; military contacts may, he hoped very shortly be established in Paris. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

Rec'd Ottawa: 7.20 P.M., November 9th, 1939.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Belgium. - N.

Paraphrase of Cypher C 268554

TELEGRAM

From THE CANADIAN MINISTER IN BELGIUM

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA.

CYPHER

No. 75

BRUSSELS, November 10, 1939.

No. 75. November 10th. In Holland no new development except that reports are made that Germans are building bridges on rivers near Dutch border. In Belgium hope is still entertained in official circles that Belgium might be spared even if Holland is invaded. Would explain reluctance of Belgian Government to establish military contact with Dutch and Allies is in order to maintain strict neutrality until the last moment.

CANADIAN MINISTER

Received Ottawa 11. p.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R

"R"

Belgium. - N. -

TELEGRAM C 268555

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

IMMEDIATE LONDON, November 10th, 1939.

MOST SECRET & PERSONAL

CYPHER

CIRCULAR D. 74.

Circular D. 74. Most Secret and Personal.

My telegram November 9th, Circular D. 72.

Following for your Prime Minister, Begins:

Following instructions were telegraphed this morning to His Majesty's Ambassador at Brussels, Begins:

Trend of recent events seems to point clearly to possibility of imminent attack by German forces either on Holland or Belgium. In either event it would be essential that resistance of Belgium and Holland should at once be supported by forces of France and Great Britain. In order that such support if requested may be effective, it is most urgent that plans should be concerted now without further delay with Belgian military authorities.

2. Delay may well prove disastrous and involve losses of territory and man power which may be irrecoverable.

3. We could not render full aid which we anticipate Belgian Government may seek and which French Government and we should desire to give unless plans are made immediately.

4. Please speak at once to Minister for Foreign Affairs in above sense. Ends.

read

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

Rec'd Ottawa: 11.25 A.M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R. "R" Belgium - N.

C 268556

TELEGRAM

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

MOST SECRET & PERSONAL

CYPHER

LONDON, November 10th, 1939

Circular D. 79.

Circular D. 79. Most Secret and Personal. Following for your Prime Minister, Begins:

My telegram Circular D. 74. French Government have made similar communication to the Belgian Government, and in response to urgent appeal a French General will go to Brussels at once for military discussions. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

Received Ottawa 5 p.m. November 10th.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R

Belgium - N.

C268557

"R"

TELEGRAM

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

MOST SECRET AND PERSONAL

CYPHER

CIRCULAR D. 81.

LONDON, November 11, 1939

Circular D. 81. Most Secret and Personal. Following for your Prime Minister, Begins:

My telegram Circular D. 79. His Majesty's Ambassador at Brussels understands from French Embassy that statement that French General will go to Brussels must be a mistake and that it is an exaggeration to say that M. Spaak is appealing for military conversations. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

Received Ottawa
11.00 a.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R

"R"

Belgium -N.

TELEGRAM C 268558

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

MOST SECRET & PERSONAL

LONDON, November 11th, 1939.

CYPHER

CIRCULAR D. 83

Circular D. 83. Most Secret and Personal. Following for your Prime Minister, Begins:

Belgium

My telegrams Circular D. 79 and 81. There appears now to be no question of visit of French general to Brussels, but Belgian Chief of Staff has been authorized to discuss matters with our Military Attache and Belgian Military Attache is reported to have seen Gamelin. Belgian Minister for Foreign Affairs has indications of possible German intention to enter Luxemburg. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

Rec'd Ottawa 7:17 P.M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R

"R"

Belgium - N.

TELEGRAM C 268559

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

IMMEDIATE

LONDON, November 12th, 1939.

MOST SECRET & PERSONAL

CYPHER

CIRCULAR D. 84

Circular D. 84. Most Secret and Personal. Following for your Prime Minister, Begins:

Belgium - Holland

1. It appears that the King of the Belgians, in his capacity as Acting Commander -in-Chief, has delegated authority to his principal Aide-de-Camp, General Van Overstraeten, to conduct military conversations with the British Military Attache in Brussels who is allowed no contact with the Chief of the General Staff. Contact with the French is being arranged through the Belgian Military Attache in Paris and General Gamelin. According to General Van Overstraeten the Belgian Military Attache had been very well received by General Gamelin and had obtained a satisfactory indication of Allied plans for support of the Belgian army.

2. General Van Overstraeten doubts whether King Leopold would agree to tripartite conversations.

3. Germans have been evacuating women and children and effects from their Brussels Embassy. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

Rec'd Ottawa 5:15 P.M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R

Belgium
-N.

C 268560

TELEGRAM

From THE CANADIAN MINISTER IN BELGIUM

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA.

BRUSSELS, November 12th, 1939

IMMEDIATE

CODE

NO. 78

No. 78. My telegrams No. 76 and 77.
Please cable whether I am authorized to give notice to Canadians in Belgium and The Netherlands suggesting that they leave the country if they can.

CANADIAN MINISTER

Received Ottawa 11.26 a.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

Belgium -N

FROM: THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, OTTAWA

TO: THE CANADIAN MINISTER, CANADIAN LEGATION, BRUSSELS

C 268561

MOST IMMEDIATE

CODE

Ottawa, November 12th, 1939.

No. 51

Your telegram No. 78. Wide prominence was given in both Canadian and United States press to advice alleged to have been given by you on Friday and it was put forward as official recognition of the seriousness of situation. We issued to Canadian Press Saturday denial that you had given any such notice. I doubt necessity of any special message to Canadians in view of (1) what I assume are very small numbers compared with United Kingdom nationals, (2) fact that they must all be aware of situation and (3) notice to British subjects in Belgium already given by Consul General. Apparently no British notice has been issued in Holland. It is not desirable for Canada, which has so few nationals there, to take any action which will be quoted as conclusive evidence of coming invasion of either country. If you have reached conclusion that there are Canadians in either country who are postponing action pending word from Legation and if British Embassy or Consul General has issued notice to British subjects in the country regarding which you wish to give notice, I would be prepared to consider your taking action by calling attention to notice so issued by United Kingdom authorities. As at present advised and particularly in view of absence of any public statement of alarmist character by the Government of either country I do not consider it is now necessary to issue notice . I shall, however, be glad to give immediate consideration to any further report or suggestion you desire to make. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

2.

Belgium. - N.

TELEGRAM O 268562

From THE CANADIAN MINISTER IN BELGIUM

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA.

IMPORTANT

BRUSSELS, November 13, 1939.

CODE

NO. 79.

No. 79. Your telegram No. 51. No action of any kind will be taken by us in the Netherlands and Belgium until we have consulted you further. Should like to add that circular letter was sent Friday to British subjects in the Netherlands by British Consul General inviting them to consider the advisability of taking necessary steps to remove elsewhere and asking them whether they wish to leave independently or be evacuated or remain under all circumstances. French nationals in Holland were also advised in the same sense.

Pred Wlmr Nov 16 39

CANADIAN MINISTER

Rec'd Ottawa: 11.15 A.M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

Belgium - N.

TELEGRAM C 268568

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

MOST SECRET LONDON, November 19, 1939.

CYPHER

UNNUMBERED

Unnumbered. Most Secret. Following for your Prime Minister, Begins:

Principal object of meeting of last Friday of the Supreme War Council was to ascertain whether policy which governs the employment of Franco-British Forces in the event of a German invasion in the near future of either Belgium, or alternatively of Holland with Belgium intervening on our side. There was a general feeling that these contingencies were not as imminent as they had appeared the previous week, but that possibility could not yet be ignored. There was complete agreement on all points.

The press notice issued after the meeting referred to arrangements which have been made by the Allies for the pooling of all their resources. These arrangements, which arose out of discussions at an earlier meeting of the Supreme War Council, had been concerted after exhaustive examination by technical experts. It was thought that Friday's meeting of the Supreme War Council was a suitable occasion on which to announce their completion.

At the end of the meeting, the French representatives urged that the possibility of a German offensive in southeast Europe should not be overlooked, and it was agreed

W.L.M: King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

TELEGRAM C 268564

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON,

that the question of action which should be taken by the Franco-British military, naval and air forces in various contingencies which might arise in that event, should be the subject of constant study by military experts of both countries working in conjunction with each other. Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

Rec'd Ottawa 4:40 P. M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268565 11

THIS DOCUMENT IS THE PROPERTY OF HIS BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT

GERMANY. January 8, 1940.

CONFIDENTIAL. SECTION 3.

[C 434/31/18] Copy No. 036 a

Viscount Halifax to Sir L. Oliphant (Brussels).

(No. 13.)

Sir, Foreign Office, January 8, 1940.

I ASKED the Belgian Ambassador to come and see me to-day, and told him that about a week ago His Majesty's Government had obtained the impression from certain quarters in Italy that, while in November last they had felt fairly sure that there would be no attack on Belgium and Holland by Germany, they now felt less sure. I added that this information was supported by other information which had come to us from two secret sources, and that the estimated date for the attack was some time in February. I told the Ambassador that we had all lived on dates for some time past, and that His Majesty's Government had no desire to be perpetually crying "wolf." I understood that the French Government for their part considered these rumours as possibly connected with some further peace offensive.

2. None the less I thought it well to pass on this information and to suggest that, as we saw it, the strongest insurance against such a danger would be for the Belgian Government to declare now that if the Netherlands were attacked Belgium would be drawn in. I said that I hoped it was not presumptuous of me to say so much, but it seemed to me that some such statement by the Belgian Government might strengthen the hand of the German generals who, I understood, were on the whole opposed to an invasion of the Low Countries, and whose opponents habitually declared that the Dutch were divided and that the Belgians would not mind if Holland were invaded.

3. Baron Cartier thanked me for giving him this information and reminded me that the Belgian Counsellor had recently passed on to Mr. Strang somewhat similar information which the Belgian Government had received. Speaking personally, he said that he quite took my point and that he thoroughly agreed that some such declaration as I had suggested would be the most effective deterrent to the German Government. In his view it would be highly dangerous for the Belgian Government to say nothing, and the sooner they said something the better. He promised to find some way of passing on what I had said to the appropriate quarter in Belgium. He himself was shortly going to Brussels, but he did not think that this was a matter which could wait. He said that he thought that it was perhaps a good thing that the Netherlands Government had recently declared that Holland would fight if she were invaded, since the Belgian Government, in making a statement on the lines proposed, might be regarded as simply keeping in step with the Netherlands Government.

4. The Ambassador then remarked that the Finns had rendered humanity a great service by destroying the bogy of Russian strength. He supposed, however, that, since His Majesty's Government were sending so much help to Finland, they were unable to help Belgium by sending material. He wished to point out, however, that German aircraft repeatedly flew over Belgian territory and, for lack of anti-aircraft guns, the Belgians could do nothing. If only we would sell them a few anti-aircraft guns, they would be well utilised, and he thought he need hardly assure me that it would be, incidentally, to our own advantage to do so. I said that I would do what I could, by mentioning this matter in the right quarter, and that I certainly appreciated the importance of what he said.

5. Before he left, I asked Baron Cartier his opinion of the new Belgian Cabinet. He told me that, besides M. Spaak, the Minister of Finance and the Minister of Justice were both excellent men. It was his country's misfortune,

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

however, that there were too many politicians, all of whom expected to receive a portfolio after about six months' experience. He said that he hoped that the resignation of Mr. Hore-Belisha had nothing to do with our policy towards Finland; and I assured him that it had not, and that it did not imply any change of military or foreign policy.

I am, &c.
HALIFAX.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268567 12

THIS DOCUMENT IS THE PROPERTY OF HIS BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT

GERMANY. January 8, 1940.

CONFIDENTIAL. SECTION 2.

[C 435/31/18] Copy No. 036a

Viscount Halifax to Sir N. Bland (The Hague).

(No. 15.)

Sir, Foreign Office, January 8, 1940.

I ASKED the Netherlands Minister to call this afternoon, and told him that I had some information to pass on to him, which might or might not be new to his Government.

2. I said that we understood from certain quarters in Italy, which had been convinced in November last that there would be no attack on the Netherlands and Belgium by Germany, that they were now less sure of this. We should not attach so much importance to these reports were it not that they were supported by other information which had come to us from two secret sources, the general impression being that the date for the German attack was some time in February. Naturally the last accusation to which I would wish to expose myself was that of crying "wolf." I understood that the French Government for their part considered these rumours as possibly connected with some further peace offensive. But I thought it as well to pass on this information quite unofficially for what it might be worth. I told the Minister that I thought that the declaration made by the Netherlands Government on the 6th January, to the effect that any attack on the Netherlands would meet with obstinate resistance, was much the best way of staving off any invasion that might be in the offing. It was our information that there was some difference of opinion between the German Government and the German generals with regard to the wisdom of an invasion of the Low Countries, and the more reasons the generals could be given for showing that such an invasion would not be an easy matter, the better chance there would be of their view prevailing.

3. Jonkheer Michiels thanked me for my information, which he said he accepted in the spirit in which it was offered, that is to say, simply as information. He himself had received a somewhat similar report from a private industrial source, though the date given to him had been the beginning of March. German agents in the Netherlands had for some time been trying to spread the idea that, if German troops simply passed through the Maestricht appendix, there would be no need for Holland to oppose them. The recent declaration by the Netherlands Government had, however, been intended to show that the invasion of any part of Dutch territory would be opposed.

4. When I suggested to the Minister that I thought it might perhaps be helpful if the Belgian Government were to declare that if the Netherlands were invaded it would be a matter of direct interest to Belgium, who would inevitably be drawn in, he replied that the Belgian Government had not yet said anything of the sort, though he personally thought that if they were to do so it would be a very good thing.

I am, &c.
HALIFAX.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R"

Belgium - N.

TELEGRAM C 268568

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

IMMEDIATE

LONDON, January 14th, 1940.

MOST SECRET

CYPHER

CIRCULAR D. 23.

Circular D. 23. Most Secret. Following for your Prime Minister, Begins:

His Majesty's Ambassador at Brussels was informed at midnight on January 13th by Belgian Ministry for Foreign Affairs that Belgian Government had grave reason to expect immediate attack by the German Army along the whole line, Holland-Belgian-Luxemburg, and that in such eventuality the Belgian Government would look to United Kingdom and French Governments to support them.

2. His Majesty's Ambassador has been instructed to inform Belgian Government that His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom are determined to fulfil undertaking of assistance given Belgian Government and that in view of situation it is vitally necessary that Anglo-French-Belgian staff conversations should immediately take place. Ends.

LK

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

Rec'd Ottawa: 5.55 P.M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Belgium - N.

C [redacted]

TELEGRAM

From THE CANADIAN MINISTER IN BELGIUM

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA.

BRUSSELS, January 14th, 1940

CODE

No. 4.

No. 4. In view of the developments in international events and in particular of recent frequent flights of German aeroplanes over Belgian territory, reports of important movements of German troops along Dutch frontier, and German Minister Frick's declaration that the German Government was about to take a far-reaching decision and resort to force to bring quickly to an end outstanding disputes with Great Britain and France, Belgian Government called up, Friday, Saturday and again this morning, numerous fresh (troops word omitted), including reservists of Phase "D" of Mobilisation Plan. At the same time, all soldiers on leave were ordered by radio to join their units and further war material was moved to northern and eastern frontiers.

It is significant that "Vingtieme Siecle", newspaper of Prime Minister Pierlot, reiterated this morning the complaint which was so deeply resented in these (quarters? word omitted) last week that certain western countries by refusing to accept the same sacrifices as Belgium had now become the cause of anxiety for their neutral neighbours. I.E. Holland

CANADIAN MINISTER

Received Ottawa 4.55 p.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

"R" C 268570 Belgium - N.

TELEGRAM

From THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR CANADA IN GREAT BRITAIN

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

MOST SECRET LONDON, January 15th, 1940.

CYPHER

NO. 50.

No. 50. Most Secret. The Dutch and Belgian Governments are thoroughly alarmed over new German menace. It is still possible, however, that the Germans do not plan immediate attack but have only made one more move in the war of nerves. There is no apparent increase in the forty-four German divisions recently massed against the frontiers of the Low Countries. It is the view of the Chief of the General Staff here that although existing low temperatures might induce the Germans to launch attack, conditions are not altogether favourable particularly on icy roads in the Ardennes. The existing frost in Holland would not impede inundation as defensive measure. The Allied High Command most anxious that the political situation will make it possible for Allied forces to occupy Namur, Wavre, Antwerp line before any German attack could be launched.

MASSEY

Rec'd Ottawa: 7.20 P.M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Belgium-N.

C268571

CANADIAN LEGATION

61 Nieuwe Parklaan

The Hague.

January 18th, 1940.

No. 24.

Sir,

I have the honour to submit below a brief review of the recent "alarm" which has disturbed the Netherlands and Belgium. Telegraphic reports, to be followed by despatches, have gone forward from the Brussels Legation describing the situation as affecting Belgium in particular, and as seen from that post of observation. The present summary will therefore be mainly confined to the situation as affecting Holland and as seen from the Hague. Needless to say, closest contact by telephone, several times each day, was maintained between the Legations in Brussels and The Hague, and with Paris; and constant touch was also kept with the diplomatic circles in each post.

1. The Recent Crisis Background.

2. Apparent evidence of a new danger to Holland can be constructed, as has been done by various foreign press correspondents in Holland, by piecing together a number of disparate facts. These include the following:-

i. The number of German troops opposite the Dutch frontier has recently been increased, and is said to include infantry troops, mechanized units, cavalry units, heavy artillery, and other specialized services, all designed for specialized operations on this front.

The Right Honourable,

The Secretary of State for External Affairs,

OTTAWA.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268572

ii. The frequency of supposedly German flights over Holland has increased during the past fortnight. (See despatch No. 20 of Jan. 16). German flights have also increased in violation of Belgian neutrality.

iii. The accusation (denied by the Dutch authorities) of a Dutch flight over German territory on Jan. 13th is interpreted as an attempt to create an offense justifying reprisal, the technique familiarized in Germany's relations with Czechoslovakia and Poland.

iv. The declaration of the Dutch Government on January 9th as to Holland's determination to resist any attack (despatch No. 8 of Jan. 8), followed by the radio address of Jonkheer B.C. de Savornin-Lohman on January 12th with the same import (despatch No. 23 of Jan. 17), is interpreted as indicating an intensified need of such reassurances. If the danger were not great, it is argued, why was it necessary to make new declarations?

v. The relatively long spell of freezing weather, might have been regarded as offering a more favourable condition for German military operations in the Low Countries; but this supposed advantage was offset on January 12th-14th by Dutch utilization of ice in their own unique defense plans, (See despatch No. 22 of Jan. 17th), and was further offset by the temporary thaw of January 14th which badly softened all the approaches that German troops might have tried to use. (a new frost on January 16th, however, partly annulled that momentary change of condition).

vi. An examination of the press of the past week shows that an increased tension was being developed by reports, tendentious or otherwise, from various sides, by correspondents and foreign press circles. (see despatch No.16 of Jan. 11). The German press now point to these reports as being a deliberate fomentation, mainly on the part of Gt. Britain and France, of a hostile attitude toward Germany in neutral lands.

All these factors, when pieced together into a single fabric - or exaggerated fabrication - were regarded as omens by the more pessimistically inclined.

3. On the other hand, as represented to you in a number of recent despatches from this Legation, these seemed reason to discount these omens - at last as regards an imminent attack on Holland. The diplomatic

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

corps almost entirely, and the Dutch government officials almost unanimously so far as they expressed their views openly, were inclined to minimize any immediate danger to Holland, and regretted any tendency toward nervousness or alarm. The "notice" of Holland's determination to resist any attack was considered salutary to the international situation; the moral support of common interests between Holland and Belgium, if not sealed by any formal political or military accord, was at least regarded as a strong and cohesive factor, in confrontation of a common danger. The general military and international situation seemed to offer little promise of advantage to Germany for an invasion of the Low Countries: so much so that on January 15th a political correspondent in Copenhagen wrote in "Politiken" that "One thing is definite. In Germany they find it inconvenient to launch an offensive via Belgium and Holland", and a number of other foreign papers took the same confident tone. The sudden thaw of January 14th - 15th seemed to remove any supposed advantages which might have accrued from frozen conditions, though these advantages were themselves hypothetical. Above all it is recognized that such a German attempt on the Low Countries would be rash, inexpedient and foolhardy, and can offer little political or military advantage to Germany in the long run.

2. The Alarm.

4. The foregoing factors, whether regarded as unrelated incidents or as parts of a single pattern, had not actually aroused any special alarm in either Belgium or Holland, until one or two other events seemed to bring them all into sudden focus.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

A) 5. One of these new factors, it is suggested, was the disclosure alleged to have been made in Rome. According to information passed on, among others by the Japanese Minister in The Hague to me personally, certain German plans for an attack on the Low Countries, either on Saturday Jan. 13th or Wednesday Jan. 17th, became known to Italian diplomatic circles, and this information was privately given to French diplomatic circles who relayed it to Paris. The French Foreign Office is then alleged to have confidentially communicated the information to the Belgian Government or their Ambassador in Paris, and to the Dutch Government or their Minister in Paris. In support of this supposition is the fact that in Rome Count Ciano saw the French Ambassador on Jan. 12th; and in Paris the French President saw the Dutch Minister on Jan. 13th and M. Daladier saw the Belgian Ambassador on Jan. 15th. It is also significant that Dr. Colijn, the former Dutch Prime Minister now concerning himself with the League of Nations coordination plans for assistance to Finland, was in Rome for five days; he saw Count Ciano on Jan. 12th, and also the French Ambassador in Rome; on the 14th he stopped off in Paris for a day, and then hastened back to The Hague on the 15th. I am also informed privately that closest diplomatic contacts have been maintained between the Vatican (now in intimate touch with the Fascist Government) and the Papal representatives in Paris, Brussels and The Hague; and through these channels some diplomatic information may well have been passed on to interested governments.

6. Supporting this explanation is the fact that after the "alarm", the German press, obviously inspired, unitedly raised an angry criticism against France for having "given the show away" to the neutral

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268575

Low Countries. This charge against French "intervention" would seem to substantiate the suspicion that Belgium and Holland actually received some form of warning from French sources, which in their turn may have obtained information from Italy.

7. Against this interpretation may be quoted the following excerpts from the London TIMES of January 16th and 17th:

> " The claim that it was a French, or mainly French, scare carries no conviction at all, particularly in Belgium, where the alarm was first sounded on information that came solely from Belgian sources, according to an explicit statement made officially in Brussels yesterday."
> (Jan. 17th)

> " A statement by the German News Agency insinuating that the Belgian and Dutch precautions had been prompted by British and French suggestions was commented on as follows by authoritative quarters at The Hague: 'Nothing is known in Holland about the alleged divulgation of information of this nature from British or French sources'. The "Algemeen Handelsblad" said: 'We have eyes ourselves and a sufficient quantity of common sense .... We do not need any whispering campaign to be on the alert'. It is learned that, contrary to the German allegations, the visit of the Netherlands Minister to President Lebrun on Saturday had no connexion whatever with the international tension."
> (Jan. 17th)

> " There seems to be no foundation for the report that the military precautions taken by Belgium and Holland were due to a direct Italian warning, which would presuppose a 'double-crossing' by Italy of her German ally quite inconsistent with all recent official declarations of the relations between the two partners to the Rome-Berlin axis."
> (Rome. Jan. 16th)

> " The talks which the former Prime Minister, Dr. Colijn, had in Rome, where he met Count Ciano and Signor Bottai, naturally attracted attention (in Holland). It is believed that these talks included more than the avowed discussions about the work of the League of Nations Economic Committee but it is regarded as going too far to conclude that Dr. Colijn received positive warnings, about alleged German invasion plans. It is likely, however, that Dr. Colijn inquired what the Italian attitude would be if such an attack was directed against the Low Countries by either belligerent party."
> (Jan. 16th)

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

B) 8. . Whether or not a distinct diplomatic warning was relayed either from Italy or from France to the Low Countries, a much more definite piece of information fell into the hands of the Belgian Government on Jah.11th.

This was the capture of important German documents, including photographs of the Albert Canal - one of Belgium's chief strategical assets, - and a complete set of Supreme Command instructions for an invasion, at a blank date, which were being carried by courier from Berlin to German Army headquarters in Cologne, Through the forced landing of the German plane carrying the courier, accidentally on Belgian territory due to loss of direction in fog, on Jan. 11th, these incriminating documents were seized; the German officer vainly attempted to destroy them, and afterwards vinly attempted to kill himself in expiation for their loss. This explanation, detailed by foreign military attaches in Brussels and The Hague, may err in minor particulars, but seems in general to have been the signal to the Belgian and Dutch governments (who are in closest touch with each other) to take promptest precautionary defense measures.

3. Reactions in the Low Countries.

9. The reaction to the discovery of this alleged German plan of invasion, in Belgium are outlined in telegrams and despatches from our Brussels Legation. The reactions in Holand seem mainly to have been repercussions, a day later, to Belgian measures. In Belgium certain measures were taken on Saturday January 13th; in Holland parallel action followed on Sunday the 14th. On Sunday morning a special Cabinet meeting was held at The Hague, and while it was still in session, instructions were issued cancelling new army leaves except in certain business classes. The official communiqué issued at noon by radio read:

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C268577

"Certain less favourable symptoms having appeared in the international situation, the Government has decided to be prepared for all eventualities and not to permit any military leave for the time being." Troop dispositions, transport facilities and frontier defenses were furthrer organized. The Dutch Government later ordered a complete black-out in future at Den Helder, the naval base facing the island of Texel. On January 17th announcement was made in the official gazette that the areas already under a "state of siege" (see despatch No. 107 of Nov. 3,· 1939) has been extended in certain coastal areas in South Holland province.

10. Notwithstanding these precautionary measures, reinforcing those taken at the time of the November crisis and constantly improved since then, the Dutch press and people were unexcited by the fresh developments and remained much more calm than in November. They seemed far less convinced, over this week-end, of the gravity of the new menace than they had been on the former occasion in November last.

4. A Bluff?

11. By Tuesday the 16th and Wednesday the 17th there was a growing tendency to suspect that this present crisis was an elaborately staged "scare" by Germany, to threaten the Low Countries once more into an acquiescent and compliant attitude and to compel them, under threat, to yield to German economic and commercial demands. This view obtained currency in France, England and the United States. The London TIMES, for example, stated on Jan. 16th:

> " It is remembered that the Germans manufactured an elaborate scare last November, when the Low Countries had quite naturally to take precautions. It would not be the first time that the Germans, adepts at threats and bullying, had kept small countries in a state of false alarm for a long time in order that, when the real danger was suddenly upon them, they should be off their guard .... There are some who believe the present heightened tension to be due simply to a variant of the same tactics - particularly as the Germans are reported

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

to be hoping to call a conference of Scandinavian and Low Country representatives to 'discuss' trade matters."

A Paris despatch of the 15th, in the same paper declares:

" Although the wisdom of precautionary preparation by Holland and Belgium is unquestioned here, the general verdict appears to be that these periodic outbursts of tension are being deliberately provoked by Germany to play on the nerves of nations whose attitude of correctness in the matter of neutrality fails to hide the bent of their moral sympathies."

12. While it is not possible to determine the degree of reality in the ostensible danger thrust upon the Low Countries during the past week-end, and while in both Belgium and Holland vigorous measures were taken to meet any contingencies, the psychological impression here is that it was a further "false alarm" deliberately designed to keep the neutrals in a state of nervousness, and possibly, by such repetitive tactics, to leave them off their guard when a real attack takes the place of these prearranged feints. It is impossible to verify this interpretation.

13. In any event, it seems clear that, instead of throwing the Low Countries into consternation, the alarm has strongly reinforced their precautions and consolidated their determination. It has brought into even closer accord and coordination the Governments and Army Commands of Brussels and The Hague; it has strengthened the potential support that would undoubtedly be offered by France and Britain in the event of invasion; it has reportedly increased the distrust of Germany of public opinion in the United States; and it has had further salutary influences on the public spirit of the Dutch people who are slow to react but strongly determined when aroused. The Dutch are by degrees becoming inured to intimidation and alert to any further threats. The behaviour of Finland is a heroic example to the equally stubborn patriots of Holland.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268578

14. The fact still remains, however, to which all impartial observers and diplomats are agreed, that a German attack on Holland or Belgium, or both, would be an inexpedient if not fatal mistake for Germany, especially at this time when Germany is concerned over the situation in Scandinavia; and it is reliably reported that even in certain high German army circles they are also aware of the imprudence of an assault on the Low Countries. This does not remove the possibility of a desperate or misjudged "gambler's" chance" on the part of Herr Hitler. As Sir Nevile Henderson has pointed out in the report of his mission in Berlin (Cmd. 6115, Para. 18), when Hitler hesitates to force an issue in some direction because of indecision or realization of the risk, he is liable to be pressed by the extremists around him into a reckless forward policy.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

Jean Desy.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Belgium.

C268579

CANADIAN LEGATION

61, Nieuwe Parklaan

THE HAGUE

January 23rd, 1940

No.25.

Sir,

In continuation of Mr. Désy's despatch No. 24 of January 18th concerning the recent "alarm" over German intentions toward Belgium and Holland, I may add that while this alarm spent itself within a few days after Belgian and Dutch military precautions had been quickly effected, the belief has grown that the whole alarm was a framed-up affair by German authorities.

2. Ever since the Athenian Wars, faked military plans purporting to indicate a contemplated scheme of operations or attack, have been employed in every major war, and were used on various occasions during the last World War. Needless to say, the staging of these deceptions becomes more elaborate with each advance of military technique and intelligence services. It will be recalled that the present German Government have employed these arts of staging, with most careful elaboration, in the Reichstag fire, and probably in the Munich bomb plot; as well as in other concocted "incidents" carefully arranged to suggest hostile machinations or to mislead the "enemy".

3. It is now believed, though as yet confirmed, that the capture of German military documents from a landed German aeroplane in Belgium on January 11th was a similar feint. The action of the courier, a German officer, in disobeying his instructions to travel

The Right Honourable
The Secretary of State
for External Affairs,
OTTAWA.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

by train to Cologne, and in choosing to accept a "lift" in a friend's aeroplane; the "accidental" loss of direction and forced landing in Belgium; the casual manner in which the courier walked to a farm-house to obtain matches for burning his documents or destroying his machine; the carelessness with which he failed to burn or destroy his documents; the manner in which the pilot and courier allowed themselves to be captured and to let their papers fall into Belgian hands; all this suggests that the whole business was prearranged. Apparently there has so far been no official German comment, protest, or reproach of the German officer who thus broke discipline and acted contrary to his ostensible instructions.

4. The military correspondent to the "Groene Amsterdammer" (weekly, January 20th issue), reviewing the whole episode of the state of tension, infers that the alarm was provoked by Germany herself. He writes in part:

> " A very important factor, bearing on the evaluation of information, that resulted in the precautionary measures, - now as in last November - is the fact that the news of a possible offensive came from Germany itself. Such information, from such a source, could of course be of very great importance, if it were not that all such information from German sources is given intentionally by the German Government ....
>
> The pilot concerned must have acted on the instructions of his chiefs, and the documents were meant to fall into the hands of the Belgian authorities. It is easy to see that this method of "planting" news is of great advantage to those who employ it. By applying these very reasonable tactics, the information service of the opponent and the neutral foreigners is lamed as these services get only that information which the German Government wishes them to get .....
>
> Abroad there will always remain the doubt; "One never knows whether this time the 'planted' information may be true." ..... The task therefore of the Intelligence Service in neutral countries, is noticeably more difficult."

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

5. If this well-staged "accident" were a bluff - as is now suspected in Holland, Belgium and Allied circles - it is still difficult to determine its purpose. It is an undeniable fact that German military concentrations opposite the Belgian-Dutch frontier have now assumed colossal proportions. Travel across the frontier is now almost prohibited; great secrecy is being observed in the German frontier sections; electrified barb-wire mesh fences are reported to have been extensively constructed along the border by the Germans to keep out spies and unauthorized travellers. The preparations behind the neutral frontiers are indeed alarming. But the effect of the "exposure", by military documents planted in Belgium, was merely to strengthen Belgian and Dutch counter-measures and improve their means of defense, and thus to thwart any contemplated future "Blitzkrieg" in these regions. It also served to reinforce the mutuality of defense-plans between Holland and Belgium, and potentially, between these neutrals and the Allies.

6. At present the only interpretation is that the German authorities sought to "test" how far those reactions and that mutual cooperation, would be pushed. In this way, supposing that all defensive measures by the neutrals would now be completed in consequence of this alarm, the German military authorities would be able to estimate the final amount of cooperative resistance by Belgium and Holland they would have to prepare to overcome, in their next and ultimate invasion. There is therefore some reason to anticipate that a new German threat, if and when it comes, may be a genuine one, based on the calculations of ultimate resistance now being made.

7. As to the possibility of creating a "crisis" in the direction of the Low Countries in order to screen

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

German military plans or intended operations elsewhere, subsequent developments have revealed no inclination on the part of Germany to take advantage of any consternation or concern in the Low Countries for launching a movement in some other direction. Nor does it appear that any political end has been served either in intimidating Holland or Belgium, or in inveigling them into unneutral acts, or into recourse to Allied help. While, therefore, the recent alarm may have been a subterfuge, no immediate consequences of use to Germany are visible.

8. The unpleasant fact remains, however, that German concentrations are reported to be still accumulating opposite Belgium and Holland, where according to some reports, nearly a million men, supported by complete mechanized units, are assembled along approximately an 85-mile front. Assuming that the Siegfried and Maginot lines are so impregnable as to frustrate any direct offensive on the Westwall, the presence of the main German army along the more vulnerable neutral frontiers is a matter of apprehension, notwithstanding the military as well as political difficulties of a German invasion which have repeatedly been emphasized in previous despatches.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

K.P. Kirkwood.

Chargé d'Affaires a.i.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Belgium - Netherlands

C268583

OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER
FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM.
Earnscliffe,
OTTAWA.

950H/51

21st March, 1940.

MOST SECRET AND PERSONAL.

My dear Prime Minister,

I have been asked to convey to you the information contained in the accompanying Memorandum and, in so doing, to draw your special attention to the highly secret and personal nature of this information.

Yours sincerely,

Malcolm Campbell.

The Right Honourable W. L. Mackenzie King, M.P.,
Secretary of State for External Affairs,
Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

MEMORANDUM.

MOST SECRET AND PERSONAL.

1. The Belgian Minister for Foreign Affairs on March 16th asked His Majesty's Ambassador what the attitude of the United Kingdom and France would be if the Germans attacked the Netherlands without attacking Belgium. The Minister for Foreign Affairs recalled that in a speech on December 19th he had said that the position of the Netherlands would not be a matter of indifference to Belgium; it would be parlous if the Netherlands were to apply to the United Kingdom and France for help and nothing had been decided in advance.

2. Sir L. Oliphant was on March 19th instructed to inform the Minister for Foreign Affairs that the United Kingdom Government appreciate his enquiry and will give a definite answer after consulting the French Government, but that their immediate reaction is as follows:

(a) If in the event of a German attack on the Netherlands Belgium went to the assistance of the Netherlands the United Kingdom Government are in no doubt whatsoever that the Allies would immediately come with all force to help Belgium.

(b) In view of the Minister for Foreign Affairs speech of December 19th the United Kingdom Government would be unwilling to assume that, in the event of a German attack on the Netherlands, the Belgian Government would not immediately give active assistance to that country, but in the unlikely event of the Belgian Government deciding on such a course the United Kingdom Government think that the Allies, would in response to a request for assistance from the Netherlands Government, go to the assistance of the Netherlands by operating Air Forces across Belgium, and that they would also think it necessary to send troops into Belgium, with a view not only to protecting themselves but also to giving all possible assistance to the Dutch.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

(c) In either event the measure and method of this assistance would depend largely upon the character of the military dispositions taken by the Netherlands Government. As to these the United Kingdom Government have no adequate knowledge, and without this knowledge assistance cannot be rendered without what might be dangerous delay. It would be helpful therefore if the Belgian Government could inform the Netherlands Government of the enquiry made of the United Kingdom Government and suggest that the Netherlands Government should at once furnish the United Kingdom Military authorities with all necessary information. His Majesty's Ambassador was to inform the Minister for Foreign Affairs also that the United Kingdom Government propose themselves shortly to approach the Dutch direct.

3. His Majesty's Minister at the Hague has been instructed to make the following communication to the Netherlands Government if the French Government concur: after informing the Netherlands Government of the Belgian enquiry and reply His Majesty's Minister will say that while the United Kingdom Government are not asking the Netherlands Government in the present circumstances to engage themselves definitely in advance, they would be glad to know what is likely to be their attitude to a proposal that, in the event of a German attack on the Netherlands, the Allies should come to their assistance, and that in the view of the United Kingdom Government a pre-requisite of Allied assistance would be not only consultation between the Netherlands and Belgian Governments but also between the Netherlands Government and the Allied Governments.

4. His Majesty's Minister in Paris has been instructed to inform Monsieur Daladier personally and in the strictest confidence of the enquiry from the Belgian Government and the reply and of the instructions to the Hague and to ask if he concurs to his views on the next steps to be taken.

21st March, 1940.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Belgium - Netherlands

C 268586

OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER
FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM,
Earnscliffe,
OTTAWA.

950H/56 1st April, 1940.

MOST SECRET AND PERSONAL.

My dear Prime Minister,

With reference to the second paragraph of my letter of the 29th March (950H/52), I have been asked to convey to you for your most secret and personal information the information contained in the accompanying Memorandum.

Yours sincerely,

Malcolm Campbell.

The Right Honourable W. L. Mackenzie King, M.P.,
Secretary of State for External Affairs,
Ottawa.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

MEMORANDUM.

MOST SECRET.

The Netherlands Minister for Foreign Affairs informed His Majesty's Minister at the Hague on March 30th that the suggestion had been most carefully considered by the Dutch Cabinet, but that it had been decided that the traditional policy of complete independence must be maintained. In answer to a specific question the Minister for Foreign Affairs said that what applied to us applied also to Belgium, i.e. that the Netherlands Government had and wished to have no engagement with the Belgians.

2. In reply to the question whether on the assumption that the Netherlands Government persisted in their present attitude we could count on them to lose no time in getting into touch with us if a real crisis arose, the Minister for Foreign Affairs replied in the affirmative.

1st April, 1940.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Belgium - Netherlands

C 268588

OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER
FOR THE UNITED KINGDOM,
Earnscliffe,
OTTAWA.

950H/64.
MOST SECRET & PERSONAL.

9th April, 1940.

My dear Prime Minister,

With reference to my letter of the 1st April (950H/56), I have been asked to let you know for your most secret and personal information that although the Netherlands Government have declared against concerting defensive measures with the United Kingdom or making an arrangement with the Belgians, the approach seems to have been well received. The United Kingdom Government will therefore endeavour to make full use of the contacts between the Service Attachés at the Hague and the Dutch authorities.

The United Kingdom authorities are informing the French Government of the results of this exchange of views with the Netherlands Government.

Yours sincerely,

Malcolm Campbell.

The Right Honourable W.L. Mackenzie King, M.P.,
Secretary of State for External Affairs,
OTTAWA.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Belgium-N.

TELEGRAM

C 268589

From THE CANADIAN MINISTER IN BELGIUM

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA.

CODE

No. 30

BRUSSELS, May 8th, 1940.

No. 30. State of nervousness exists in Holland and Belgium resulting from certain military movements at Dutch border but nothing tangible seems to justify, at this moment, any serious alarm. Military precautions taken as in previous cases. Cabinet meeting is being held.

CANADIAN MINISTER

Rec'd Ottawa 10:20 a.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

C 268590

TELEGRAM

From THE CANADIAN MINISTER IN BELGIUM — N.

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA.

CODE

NO. 32.

BRUSSELS, May 8th, 1940.

No. 32. Following addition to my telegram No. 30 of even date. After its meeting Belgian Government issued communique stating merely that international situation had been (word omitted). It was rumoured this morning that an isolated invasion of Holland was imminent. Impossible to obtain any information these rumours. It is felt here that an isolated invasion of Holland is not likely and that an attack, if launched, will cover Belgium as well. Rumours emanating from various quarters, especially Italy and the Balkans, would lead to think that situation might evolve rapidly. It is felt action in the Balkans might coincide with an offensive on Western Front.

CANADIAN MINISTER

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

Belgium - N.

C 268591

TELEGRAM

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON, May 10, 1940.

EN CLAIR

CIRCULAR A. 9

Circular A. 9.

Message in following terms has been broadcast to all Dutch and Belgian merchant ships at sea.

Following instructions are from Royal Netherlands and Belgian Governments; "Holland and Belgium are at war with Germany. Dutch and Belgian merchant ships bound for Holland, Belgium and Germany are to proceed to nearest British or French port for instructions. Other Dutch and Belgian merchant ships are to continue their voyages." Ends.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS.

Received Ottawa: 10.55 A.M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

R.

Belgium-N.

TELEGRAM

C268592

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

MOST IMMEDIATE

EN CLAIR

LONDON, May 10, 1940.

Circular C. 23. Following for Prime Minister, Begins:

Belgium

1. Belgian Minister for Foreign Affairs informed His Majesty's Ambassador at Brussels at 5.50 A.M. today that:

(1) German troops had invaded Belgian territory in defiance of Reich's undertakings of 13th October, 1937, renewed on outbreak of present war;

(2) Belgian Government decided to resist with all their forces.

(3) Belgian Government appeal to French and United Kingdom Governments for help.

2. In reply to (3) we have assured Belgian Government that we will give them utmost assistance. Allied troops are moving to their Help.

Netherlands

3. German troops crossed Dutch frontier at 3.00 A.M. today.

4. Simultaneously with invasion German official news agency announced that German Government had issued memorandum to Dutch and Belgian Governments declaring that Germany had proof that an Allied attack through Dutch and Belgian territory was imminent. Reich Government had therefore given orders to German troops

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

TELEGRAM

C268593

From THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA

LONDON.

to safeguard neutrality of these countries by all means.

5. In response to appeal from Netherlands Government we have assured them that we are moving to their assistance immediately.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR DOMINION AFFAIRS.

Received Ottawa: 9.45 A.M.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

COLOURED PAPER
PAPIER DE COULEUR

POOR PRINT
Epreuve illisible

2

Belgium - N.

TELEGRAM C268594

From THE CANADIAN MINISTER IN BELGIUM

To THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS, CANADA.

MOST IMMEDIATE

CODE

BRUSSELS, May 10th, 1940

NO. 34.

No. 34. Early this morning Foreign Office informed me Luxemburg, Belgium and Holland were invaded. Belgium and Holland have appealed to Great Britain and France for assistance.

CANADIAN MINISTER

Rec'd Ottawa 5:15 a.m.

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

Public Archives Canada | Archives publiques Canada

Central Microfilm Operations | Services centraux du microfilm

79 ave. Bentley Ave.
OTTAWA, Ontario
K1A 0N3

190 ch. Carrier Rd.
REXDALE, Ontario
M9V 2C1

CERTIFICATE OF AUTHENTICITY | CERTIFICAT D'AUTHENTICITÉ

This is to certify that the microphotographs appearing on this Film-File starting with La présente certifie que les microphotographies faisant partie de ce fichier et allant de

VOL-380 - PAGE-267147- 48

and ending with à

VOL- 383- PAGE -268594

are accurate and complete reproductions of documents in the custody of the Public Archives of Canada as delivered in the regular course of business or photographing.

sont des reproductions exactes et intégrales des documents confiés à la garde des Archives publiques du Canada et livrés pour être photographiés.

Date Produced/Date d'exécution

Day/Jour	Month/Mois	Year/Année
18	JAN	1984

Camera Location/Emplacement de la caméra

395 WELLINGTON ST OTTAWA-ONT

Camera Operator/Opérateur de la caméra

5-17

ARC-740(6/78)

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA

END OF REEL

FIN DE LA BOBINE

W.L.M. King Papers, Memoranda and Notes, 1940-1950,
MG 26 J 4, Volume 383, pages C268550-C269295

PUBLIC ARCHIVES
ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES
CANADA