Maine Law at the South.—The cause of Prohibition of the liquor traffic, as embodied in the Maine Law, is rapidly making "its mark" South, as well as East, West and North.

Who need the Maine Law?—The drunkard—it is his only salvation. His wife and children—it is their only protection. The Taxpayer; for intemperance draws harder upon his purse, for the support of his victims, than any other cause of taxation; Legislators need it, for intemperance is the most prolific source of social and political corruption.

Miscellaneous. A delightful and novel sensation of warmth creeps over those frozen limbs; a faint colour rises to the pale cheeks, and the eyes grow liquid and lovely, as Meta raises them thankfully to her benefactors.

Interesting Statistics. The Pennsylvania Enquirer condenses some interesting facts and figures from the census of 1850, from which it appears that the total white population of the United States, was found to be 19,533,068; Free colored, 494,495; Slaves, 3,204,219; Total, 23,191,373.

Interesting Paragraphs. SURE RECIPE FOR HAPPINESS.—One of the wealthy merchants of our city, who died the past year, was universally admired, and often told his friends an anecdote which occurred in his own experience, and which was recommended to all those who desired to enjoy a serene old age, without allowing their wealth to disturb their peace of mind.

A Word for Young Men. Young Man—Sive that penny—pick up that pin—let that account be correct to a farthing—find out what that bit of ribbon costs before you say "I will take it!"

Effects of Severe Frost on Trees.—Professor Leconte made observations on the winter weather of the year 1851-2. He found that even roses, pines and other plants which had been frozen so hard as to snap off like pipe stems, were not injured by freezing so intensely.

Paper Maché.—Two modes are adopted in the manufacture of paper maché. First, by gluing or pasting different thicknesses of paper together; and second, by mixing the substance of the paper into pulp, and pressing it into moulds.

Fern Leaves. THE LITTLE PAPER. It is only a little paper. Never mind her. You see she knows her place and keeps close to the wall, as if she expected an oath or a blow.

Mending a Face.—It has been stated, says Galignani that a person named Pansole, the proprietor of a travelling menagerie, was three weeks ago, at Toulouse, attacked by a tiger, on entering a cage, and had his nose bitten off, so that it only hung by the skin of the upper lip, and that he had received besides, several severe wounds on the head and elsewhere.

A Miser Punished.—A miser, having lost a hundred pounds—promised ten pounds reward to any one who would bring it to him. An honest poor man, who found it, brought it to the old gentleman, demanding the ten pounds; but the miser, to baffle him, alleged there was a hundred and ten pounds in the bag when lost. The poor man, however, was addressed to sue for the money, and when the case came to be tried, it appeared that the real had not been broken, nor the bag opened, and the defendant's counsel, the bag was lost and had a hundred and ten pounds in it, you say! Yes, my lord, said he. Then replied the judge according to the evidence given in court, this cannot be your money, for there were only a hundred pounds; therefore the plaintiff must keep it all the true owner's.

Monkey Skin Gloves.—Of the many animals who contribute to a dandy's dress, (in the materials of which the several portions are made,) we find that the monkey is the most valuable. The French kid glove, the manufacture of which article depends now on the monkey, is as much more valuable than the old material as the monkey is more agile than the kid. As it is impossible to offer an unglorified testimonial to the monkey, therefore that which is more honored with the touch of a monkey's skin than a man's. We see by the paper that there is one hunter who kills three thousand monkeys a year selling their skins to the French dealers for from twenty to forty cents each.—Home Journal.

Aples Without Seeds or Cores.—A correspondent of the Memphis Whig gives the following recipe for obtaining apples without seeds or cores.—Take the ends of the limbs of an apple tree, and cut them up into small pieces, and put a small hole for each end under the tree, bend it down and bury it in the soil, confining it down so that it will remain. Do this in the winter, or beginning of spring. The end of the limb thus buried will take root, and put sprouts or scions, which, when they are a foot or two long, may be cut out, dug up at the proper season, and transplanted in the orchard where you wish them to remain. When they get large enough to bear, they will bear apples as above.
