Voiceless Verse.

The world is rife with noble thought That trembles on the tengue; The world is full of moledy Unwritten and unsung. But action is sublime, And you may live a nobler verse,

Is sweeter far than song Our world were not so dead

And live their verse instead ! The Social Life of China,

The Chunch Missionary Intelligencer, in an article on Ningpo—A Glance at the Social Life in China—gives a view of the social state of the people:

May we be permitted to look beneath the surface and lay bare the domestic life and habits of the Chinese. They are a clothed people, and there is outward decency, more so than in the great cities of Europe. The female's tunic, buttoning round the neck and down the side, and reaching to the knee, is peculiarly becoming and decerous, and, as worn by ladies, is as splendid as rich silks and gay colours can render it. The neck of the robe is protected by a stiff band, and the sleves are large and long. But can render it. The neck of the robe is protected by a stiff band, and the sleves are large and long. But alas; the decency is without. As a people, they are, in their habits, vile and polluted to a degree. On land and water, the haunts of vicious pleasure are to be found. It is not safe for young girls to go abroad alone, lest they be stolen for incarceration in these their desperato resource.

The popular modes of self-destruction are dr. hanging, and swallowing opium or gold-leaf hanging, and the leaf are the most res hanging, and swallowing opium or gold-loaf; with officials, the first and the last are the most respectable methods. During the war with England, when their expands the gold leaf in the stomach, which destends so as to occasion speedy death. Another account explains, that a bundle of the loose foil is thrust down the throat to produce suffication. One other mode of self-destruction is reported among the people as a fact, though it sounds fibulous to us. There is a bird (Scenhoh,) on the crown of whose head there is a beautiful searlet tuft of down, or velvet skin, in which the natives believe the poison of the serpent it is fond of cating determines. The downy crest is often formed into a bead, and that head is concealed in the necklaces of the high officers for a suicidal purpose in case of imperial displeasure, which, as report goes, is easily effected by touching the venomous head with the tip of the tongue, when death follows instantly.

Japan, however, affords the fullest development of the suicidal mania. We shall hope for an early opportunity of dealing with the Japanese, as we are doing with the Chinese character.

But let us glance at another and evidence of social depravity—the infanticide of China. Some have denied it, at least, attempted to qualify their admission of its practice, and reduce it to the exceptional existence which it must be admitted to have in civilized Europe. But the crime is undoubtedly a habit of domestic life in China. The evidence lies within a narrow compass. The births of male and female children in China, as in other countries, are nearly equal. Very considerable numbers of Chinese emigrate to the Straits, California, Australia, &c. They are all men; they are never accompanied by their female relatives. Yet notwithstanding this drain on the male population, it continues to be, in China Proper, considerably more numerous than the female. How is this to be accounted for? In the Fungwha district, some miles about Ningpo, there are never to be found, in any family, more than two daughters; in Ningpo, three.

A work of rare interest to the biblical scholar will shortly be published in England; a fac simile of the carliest copy of the Scriptures over yet discovered. The manuscript, which contains a portion of the Gospel of St. Matthew, and which purports to be written by Nicholaus, the seventh deacon, at the dictation of the Apostle Matthew, was discovered by the Rev. Mr Stobart in a sarcophagus at Thebes, and brought by him to England. He sold a portion of his collection to the British Museum, where they still remain unrolled and unread, and a considerable number of the remainder to Mr Meyer, a distinguished archeologist of Liverpool. The latter were unrolled by the assistance of Dr K. Simonides, who, among others of great interest, found the one in question—a fragment, or a number of fragments, containing, as we have said, portions of the Gonnal of the Matthew and heaving the following in months—the "dog days"—and in July and August great precautions are taken, which so person thinks of in November and Desember. "But," says the writer, "the dog days have no more to do with rabies than the moon with lunary." In the veterinary schools of France, the records kept respecting the cause of hydrophobis show that a majority of cases have or curred not in the hottest, but sectest months. In April, November and December, double the number of cases occurred as compared with July and August. M. day the late African traveller, states that most of the West African villages are crowded with dogs, but hydrophobia is unknown to the autives. In Opprus and Egypt, which are also very hot and dry countries, the disease is unknown, thus showing that it is not at all produced by heat or dryness of atmosphere.

It is also supposed that all mad dogs foam at the mouth, and that they run shout smpping at man and beast, manifesting great fercoity. There is only one stage of rabies in dogs in which they feam at the mouth, while healthy dogs foam frequently. Gentle dogs, when affected with rabies, are generally gentle to their masters, but they will then snap at other dogs; it is only the fercoious dog that shows verg creat fireconess when rabid. It is also a popular belief that dogs attacked with rabies are afraid of water; hence the name hydrophobia (horror of water) has been given to the malady. This is a misnomer, and the popular notion respecting it is a dangerous error. A burning thirst is one of the characteristic symptoms of rabies in its carlier stages, and when a dog laps water or plunges its to the in the roads, lanes and hydrophobia is not inappropriate when applied to him; but in dogs, a dread of water the sease of the characteristic symptoms of rabies in its carlier stages, and when a dog laps water or plunges its to the time of the common cut worm. At present the hope and beging hand to disologe the invaders, but it seems that it is not again to the common cut worm. At present the hope and beging had to disolo
