The Sound of Wedding Bells

Won After Great Perseverance!

CHAPTER XXXIV.
 "Can't you say what you want to say from there?" she says, shyly.
 "No," he says. "It's a secret. Couldn't let aunt hear for the world."
 "Go to him, my dear, or he'll be late for dinner," says the old lady, and Dulcie gets up and goes out to him.

"Well," she says, standing with downcast eyes, "what is it, sir?"
 He puts his arm round her tenderly, and drawing her out into the hall, kisses her.
 "Is that all?" she says. "That's rather presumptuous, isn't it?"
 "Yes, I know," he says, caressing the smooth, white hand, his eyes devouring her face; "but I couldn't help it. And that isn't all, though. I wanted to ask about the jacket. You said you'd see to it, you know."

"Did I?" she says, pretending to forget. "Yes, so I did. I wonder whether Sarah has forgotten it. I'll go and see," and she gets her hand away and runs up the stairs.
 "Where have you sent her now?" demands the old lady. "The dear girl will be tired out with the confusion and fuss, and I want her to look her very best to-morrow. I suppose half the county will be there?"

"Half! The whole!" he retorts, leaning against the door. "Every seat in the stand is booked, and the stewards have had to put an extra tent to stable the carriage horses. It will be the biggest thing they've had here for years."

"Well, I shall be glad when it's over," she says. "My head's quite in a whirl with it all. We've all gone racing mad. Even your uncle has begun to talk stable."
 "Dear old boy!" he says, laughing. "Yes, I found him at the stable this morning, patting Cricket, and was only just in time to drag him away from his heels."

"He'll get kicked to death, as well as lose his money," she says, with a little groan. "I'm afraid to say how much he's backed—that's the word, isn't it?—the stupid animal for."
 Archie laughs again.

"It's all right. He'll make a fortune instead of losing one, and then you can buy a few more china plates, you know, aunt."
 "That's right, be impertinent, sir; that's the kind of manners you learn from your horsey acquaintances, I suppose. Now! there she is running down-stairs again, as if there wasn't a moment to lose. She'll be used up to-morrow."

Archie turns eagerly.
 "Well!" he says; then he laughs as Dulcie stands on the bottom step with a long face, and a hand held behind her.
 "I'm very sorry—" she begins.

"Forgotten it, eh?" he says, serenely; "never mind! I'll wear the old one, it will do; don't you mind, dearest, it's not of the slightest consequence."
 "Here it is, then," she says, producing a neatly folded parcel, "you had better open it, and see if it is all right."

He opens the parcel, and as his

GIRL COULD NOT WORK

How She Was Relieved from Pain by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Taunton, Mass.—"I had pains in both sides and when my periods came I had to stay at home from work and suffer a long time. One day a woman came to our house and asked my mother why I was suffering. Mother told her that I suffered every month and she said, 'Why don't you buy a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?' My mother bought it and the next month I was so well that I worked all the month without staying at home a day. I am in good health now and have told lots of girls about it."—Miss CLARICE MORIN, 22 Russell Street, Taunton, Mass.

Thousands of girls suffer in silence every month rather than consult a physician. If girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion would take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a safe and pure remedy made from roots and herbs, much suffering might be avoided.

eyes rest on the fresh and dainty silk, he utters an exclamation of pleasure.

A new one, by Jove! Nicely made! Where did you get it, Dulcie?
 "I made it," she says, and she puts up her hands to keep him off; but he is too quick, and has her in his arms before she can prevent him.

"You did! you dear, clever girl! I must—you'll let me pay you for it?"
 "No, no!" she says, holding back her head; "it's a present! you don't take payment for a present."

"Call it an acknowledgment, then," he says, and he kisses her passionately. "And you made it with your own dear hands! Why, Dulcie, I'll bring the Cricket in first to-morrow, if I break my neck over it."

A sudden pang—is it of presentiment—wings her heart.
 "Oh, hush, hush!" she says, rebukingly.

"I beg your pardon. Why, you stupid, timid child, there's no danger. It was only my fun. But it was an idiotic thing to say. Forgive me. There, I'll bring him in without breaking my neck! I can't fail to win now. Why, Dulcie, I shall feel your hands about my heart—"

"Oh, hush!" she murmurs; for his passionate love makes her feel unworthy. "It is such a little thing to do for you."

"And I say it is a great thing. Why, Dulcie, take care"—and he smiles up at her—"take care, or I shall think you are beginning to love me just a little."

"Perhaps—perhaps I am," she just breathes, and she rests her hands on his shoulders, and looks at him with a dreamy light in her great, dark eyes.

"Now, Archie," calls out Lady Brookley, "are you going to dress? The dinner-bell will ring directly. Don't keep him, Dulcie; he'd stay there all night."

"I'm not keeping him, I assure you," says Dulcie, letting her hands fall from his shoulders. "Go and dress, sir."

And evading another embrace, she slips past him and escapes.

There is very little talked about at dinner save the Cricket and the race, and the earl is as full of the subject as any one.

"I've just met Hartfield, my boy," he says; "and I've laid another hundred on the Cricket."

"It's fortunate aunt has gone into the drawing-room," says Archie, with a laugh, "or you'd get a scolding, sir. By the way, I wouldn't back him too heavily. Accidents will happen; and, after all, it isn't a certainty."

The old man grunts.
 "Never mind me," he says, filling his glass and chuckling. "Besides, I think it's pretty near a certainty. He is really a beautiful creature. I told Hartfield he hadn't a chance; but he seems to feel as confident as you do. Is Hugh Falconer coming?"

"Not that I know of," replies Archie, gravely. "I should think not."

"I heard that they wanted him to go out to India," says the earl; "but I suppose he won't accept. Going to be married, isn't he?"

 "Yes," says Archie, shortly.
 The old man chuckles.
 "I say, my boy, isn't it pretty near time that—eh?"
 Archie colored like a school boy.
 "I mean to pluck up courage, sir, and ask her, after the race. You know that she is, bless her heart, so reserved and—"

"Put it to her, Archie," says the old man, nodding his head. "The sooner the better, though. Heaven knows, we shall be sorry to lose her."
 "You won't lose her for long," says Archie. "If she is agreeable, and I don't doubt but what she will be, I mean to propose buying a place near here, and then she will be near you in the summer, and in the season the house in the square—"

"You are a good lad, my boy!" responds the old man, patting his hand heartily. "It was what I was going to propose. Let's be near each other, Archie, while the old lady and I run the rest of the voyage. We've got to love her, you see, both of us. Bless my heart, who could help it? and I say, Archie, just you be careful to-morrow. No larks, you know. Keep a straight course! If you go and break your neck, you'll break her heart, and that won't do, you know!"

Archie laughs as he rises and pushes back his chair; and as he stands, so tall and strong, so self-reliant and confident, the laugh seems excusable.

"No fear of that," he says. "And now I must run off. I promised to look in at the stables. What a lovely evening! The mud is drying up; if it keeps fine all night, the course will be just right for the Cricket. I wonder whether Dulcie would come a little way with me?"

"Go and ask her, my boy," says the earl.
 "I will," he says, and he goes to the drawing-room.

"Not further than the lane," says her ladyship. "It soon gets dark now. Go with him to the lane, dear, and you come back as soon as you can, Archie. You must get to bed early to-night, you know."

"Why, aunt, you are as anxious for my welfare as if you had put a hatful of money on the event."

"Oh, pray take him away, my dear," moans the old lady, with a grimace. "My ears are aching with stable jargon," and Dulcie, laughing, slips on her hat and a furled Red Riding-hood cape, which he insisted upon her wearing, and they start.

It is a lovely evening; the sun has set, but the sky is still red with the reflection of the dying king's glory; one of two stars have slipped into the dark-blue sky, and peer down at the two graceful forms as they walk side by side. A thrush preparing for bed in the limes chirps a good-even to the world, and its mate answers from the chestnut.

It is the time and place for lovers, and for a short space they walk on in silence; it is not until they reach the end of the lane leading from the gate that he speaks, for his heart is too full of happiness, caused by her nearness to him.

"Go back now, darling," he says, in a low voice. "I am half a mind to leave the Cricket alone—"

"No, no," she says, in as low a voice as his, for the spirit of the evening has touched her also. "No, duty calls, and you must obey. After to-night I suppose—"

"After to-night," he says, with suppressed intensity, "nothing will take me from your side. To-morrow I am going to ask you something, a great thing, indeed, to ask, Dulcie! Can you not guess?"

"No," she breathes shortly, but with a swift, shy glance, and a little shrinking away from him.

"What is it he is saying? Though her instant instinct is to hurry away out of sound of that voice, her feet seem rooted to the ground.

"No, I shall not be here to-morrow, Hartfield," he says. "I should not have come down to-day, for I am very busy."

"You must be," says Lord Hartfield, for it is he. "Sorry you should have troubled, if I had known how matters stood with you, I would have given directions about the horse on my own account."

A Child Gets Cross, Sick and Feverish When Constipated

Look, Mother! If tongue is coated clean little liver and bowels.

If your little one's tongue is coated, it is a sure sign the stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When your child is cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally; if breath is bad, stomach sour, system full of cold, throat sore, or if feverish, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

"Don't be afraid, darling," he whispers, drawing her to him; "I will not ask you to-night, and to-morrow, let your answer be what it may, I will take it gratefully. But perhaps you will say 'Yes.' There, I won't say a word more, not a word. Go now, darling; I will hurry back. Shall I wait until you have got to the house?" he adds, with his usual thoughtfulness in small matters.

"No," she says, panting a little still, for she knows that he will ask her to marry him; "do not wait. I shall be quite safe." And pressing her hand he turns and leaves her.

She stands in the lane to recover her self-possession, for his words have moved her greatly, though she knew that he must speak them sooner or later.

But why should she be so moved? Is there any doubt in her mind as to her feelings toward him? Has she learned to love him, or has she failed in her endeavor?

She asks herself the question with bated breath, and the answer comes from her heart.

"Yes, I love him! I love him! It would be impossible to do otherwise, unless one were made of stone, and thoroughly, cruelly heartless. But—"

She dares not continue even to herself, dares not admit that the past has not even yet become blotted out—that period of passionate love which has colored the whole of her life.

Not yet even has the remembrance of those few fatal weeks faded away, and even now, as she stands and thinks gratefully, and even joyfully, of the deep, passionate love of the man who has just left her, she cannot feel sure if that other crossed her path all would be well.

"Oh, it is weak—weak!" she murmurs, covering her face with her hands and shuddering. "To such love as his I should be able to give full and undivided love in return. And I will—I will!" she murmurs, almost fiercely. "No memory of the past shall come between us to shadow his happiness. Dear, dear Archie! Yes, I do love you! I love you more deeply every day—every hour!" And as she stands looking up at the sky a great peace falls upon her and the past seems to fade away just as the clouds are drifting from the face of the young moon above her.

Then she turns to retrace her steps, when suddenly a man's voice breaks the stillness of the night, and at the sound her heart gives a great leap and seems to stand still; for it is the voice of Hugh Falconer.

Graver, deeper even than of old, and with a sad listless tone in it that strikes her even with the first word she hears.

"What is it he is saying? Though her instant instinct is to hurry away out of sound of that voice, her feet seem rooted to the ground.

"No, I shall not be here to-morrow, Hartfield," he says. "I should not have come down to-day, for I am very busy."

"You must be," says Lord Hartfield, for it is he. "Sorry you should have troubled, if I had known how matters stood with you, I would have given directions about the horse on my own account."

HOW TO MAKE Boys' PANTS Last!

Some joker or wiseacre has said, "Make the coat and vest first." The wise mother knows it is no joke to get Boys Pants to last, and in fact it is practically an impossibility, as Boys will be boys now, as always, in any pair of Trousers.

We are showing this week a pretty good range of BOYS' PANTS.

We do not guarantee that they will last any longer than any other Boys' Pants, as we do not feel we could be responsible for these garments for any healthy boy. But these goods are very difficult to get and we want to tell the boy's mother

WE HAVE THEM!

Sizes run from fours to tens, and in one range made of English Woolen Tweeds the price of size 4 is $1.45, rising 5c. extra for each size larger. We have other qualities of course. And right here we want to say

Thoughts Upon the Times.

(By PATRIOT.)

With pork at fifty dollars a barrel and bacon forty cents a pound, it is not surprising that the good people of Harbor-Grace propose starting a hog ranch. A public meeting with that object in view is to be held in the Second City to-night. Thirty years ago hogs were successfully raised on nearly every homestead in Newfoundland. Now they are almost as rare as the great auk. Why is this? Partly because the price of barrelled pork before the war was cheap and corn meal and other feeds were high in price, and partly because the average housewife, unlike their mothers and grandmothers, consider it beneath their dignity to engage in the work of raising and feeding hogs. The so-called system of Higher Education which teaches girls algebra, mensuration, etc., instead of domestic science and a practical knowledge of their own country and its resources, may also account for it in some measure. Anyway, pork and bacon will soon be beyond the reach of the average housewife as an article of food, and indications show that it will be a long time before it becomes plentiful and cheap again. Any intelligent attempt therefore that is made at hog raising should be encouraged by every lover of his country. The attempt made the past season to grow potatoes resulted very successfully, and the country that can grow potatoes can raise hogs.

The proclamation posted up throughout the country calling for a revision of the voters' list shows that the powers that be anticipate holding a general election in the near future. There are many important questions agitating the public mind just now, but the most important is, or should be, "Are we doing our best to win the war?" Our first and best endeavours should be devoted to doing everything in our power to bring the war to an end with victory on the side of the Allies. Had all the people in the British Empire worked together from the first the war would have been over now. Then again, there is the very important matter of our past, present and future war loans, and in this respect the Government is to be blamed in not attempting to raise part, at any rate, of our war loans in Newfoundland. Canada has just made another appeal to her people for a victory war loan of one hundred and fifty millions of dollars. The people have risen to the occasion splendidly and oversubscribed the victory loan by millions of dollars. This loan gives a net interest of 5 1/2 per cent. and is payable in five, ten or twenty years. Although our own people have had a very successful year and money is plentiful in Newfoundland, the Government has made very little effort to induce people to invest their money in the war loan, but instead the Premier is sent to the States or England to borrow the money. People place their money in the banks where they receive only 3 per cent. It should be the duty of every loyal Newfoundlander with spare money by him to lend it to the Empire for the purpose of winning the war and keeping its debts within its own country if possible. When France was called upon to pay Germany the huge indemnity in 1917, she borrowed it from her own people. This is perhaps one of the reasons why France became wealthy. As an investment the war loan furnishes the best security imaginable, and its rate of interest is as high as safety makes it wise to expect. It is safer than the banks, and they are considered safe enough. They only allow depositors 3 per cent., whereas the victory war loan brings an investor at least 5 1/2 per cent. Every million dollars borrowed outside of Newfoundland means at least fifty thousand dollars going out of the country and into the pockets of the foreigners. Let our aim be, "Keep the money in the country by investing in the war loan."

DAY OF PRAYER.—Tomorrow being the feast of St. Andrew, the day will be observed by continuous service at the C. of E. Cathedral, when parishioners of the other churches are invited to attend and offer prayer for periods of twenty minutes.

What Would It Be Worth to You To Be Free of Indigestion

INDIGESTION becomes a habit to a certain extent. Many of the conditions under which we live are artificial. We eat too much, take too little natural exercise, and have too much worry and anxiety. The digestive system does not get a chance.

The liver is usually first to get out of kilter, then the bowels become constipated, and the whole process of digestion is disorganized. Instead of being properly digested, the food ferments and causes sour stomach, belching of wind, pressure of gas about the heart, suffocating feelings and fainting spells.

Headaches, pains in the limbs and back, tired, depressed feelings, irritability and discouragement are other symptoms.

You may have tried stomach medicines and aids to digestion until you have given up in despair.

And Rid of the Poisons Which Cause Pain, Tired Feelings?

Operation Avoided

Mrs. Annie Watkins, Glace Bay, New Harbor, N.S., writes: "I think it is time for me to give my experience with your wonderful Kidney-Liver Pills. For seven months I suffered with what the doctor called indigestion, but whatever it was, I suffered terribly. The pain would start under my left shoulder and pass down my side until it reached the pit of my stomach. It just seemed as if the flesh were being torn from the bone. At times I used to go without food from one morning until the next. I had no energy left for work at all. At last our doctor sent me to the hospital for a month. For four days and nights I never broke my fast except for a drink of water. After four weeks' treatment there I returned home, and was back only four days when the pain came back worse than ever. Then I was told I would have to undergo an operation, but I would not consent to that. At last I read about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and started to take them. At first I did not notice much difference, but still I kept on using them, and by the time four boxes were used I was perfectly well again. That was in 1914, so you see I can safely say that I was cured. I shall always be grateful to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, as they did more for me than four doctors."

But what would it be worth to you to be free of all this trouble, to feel again the old energy and vigor, and to enjoy healthful living?

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are not offered to you as an experiment. There is no question as to what they will do by way of awakening the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels, and removing the cause of indigestion and kindred ills.

Their curative powers have been proven in hundreds of thousands of cases, until they are established in the great majority of homes as the one family medicine which is indispensable.

It is for you to apply this treatment in your own case. It will only cost you a quarter to make the test, and we do not hesitate to predict that the results will surprise and delight you.

THE FINGER NAILS.

In treating the finger nails the greatest care and delicacy should be exercised. The orange wood stick and a little friction will do better work than the cuticle knife and scissors. Never scrape the nail.

After grooming each finger end, dry with a soft bit of old linen and anoint with cuticle cream until time to polish when the cream may be removed. Great care should be taken to wipe all the emollient off from the base of the nail.

For the polish one needs a jar of nail paste and a small polishing stone which is more convenient and less wasteful than the old fashioned powder. Each nail is touched with a small amount of the paste, the polishing stone is rubbed over the chamois skin buffer and then the shining up process begins.

Ply the polisher briskly. Since the paste and the dry substance are both forked into the cuticle to a certain extent, the polishing must be followed by a "once over" with the orange wood stick which has been dipped in the soapy water.

Rinse the hands in clear cold water, dry very carefully, give a final polishing with the palm of the other hand and finish with a few drops of toilet water. The small rim of epidermis which laps over the nail should be gently released each morning with the orange wood stick after the hands have been carefully bathed.

Casualty Lists and Others.

In the past couple of days somewhere about seventy casualties have been announced in the lists. That is to say, some seventy men taken from the Regiment, of whom some, we know, will not return to it and the rest only after a greater or less lapse of time. In the same period about six or seven recruits have been enrolled. In these plain facts there is a clear warning of the end to which we are heading. A scrutiny of the list reveals the names of five or six "blue puttees." A strong desire has been expressed on all sides lately that these brave veterans should be given, if possible, a short furlough. Some of them will get it now—in hospital. Not a few names are those of men who have been wounded before and have had to take their place again in the firing line. This is what the voluntary system means. We observe that the Government are preparing for an election in the near future. Since the country in general feels no need of an election and has shown no desire for it, we presume the need and the desire originate among the Government themselves. Possibly they think it desirable that they should be confirmed in possession of their profitable offices for another four years. That is as it shall be, and the country will have something to say about it. Meanwhile the country is a great deal more concerned about a body of men in Flanders and Scotland than about the fortunes of any scheming politician. It is not the voters' lists that we want to see now; it is the list of unwarrior men between eighteen and thirty years of age.

The Grenfell Inquiry.

The very full and careful report which Mr. Squarye has made in this matter, after a thorough and painstaking examination of the whole subject, speaks for itself and makes any particular comment unnecessary. It will be received, we think, with general satisfaction and should result in more than a vindication of the Association on the charges made against it; for besides providing that very completely, it recounts and brings into more prominent notice the invaluable philanthropic work which the Association performs and has performed in so many ways. There is, however, one point mentioned in the report on which the Commissioner makes a recommendation from which we emphatically dissent. It is the recommendation that the Association should be compelled to pay a duty upon the second-hand clothing imported by it for charitable purposes, which duty should be afterwards returned by the Government. The only reason assigned for this departure from law and custom is that it will be "for the future peace and harmony" between certain business men and the Association. Since no irregularity or infraction of the law can be proved against the Association in this respect, we cannot see that it is any concern at all of any business men to know what and how much such clothing is imported and distributed by it. If the practice, which is altogether justified, tends to a breach of peace and harmony, that is not the Association's doing. The proposed method would necessitate a change in the law as it stands. Such a change would affect and include in its operation many other organizations than the Association, who import such clothing in the same way and for the same purpose. We understand that Grenfell workers handle and distribute far less than half of the total. The proposed law cannot discriminate and must apply to all. This is very undesirable and seems to us quite unnecessary. We think that if Mr. Squarye, whose investigation has been in other respects excellent, had elicited and made public the precise reason why this matter—after all a small one—causes such friction between the Association and the business men interested in Labrador, he would have done better than by asking the wrong party to remove the cause of the complaint. He appears to us to put the Association to proof of its innocence. It is more in keeping with the British system and sense of justice to insist on the reverse process.

Missionary Service at the Cove.

A most successful missionary service was held at the Methodist Church, Portugal Cove, last evening, which was attended by a large number of people belonging to the place. A deputation from the city consisting of Rev. J. Wilson and Mr. Arthur W. Martin addressed the congregation, and also Rev. Mr. Eddy of Bell Island, who presided. The offering, which is to be devoted to mission work, was over $50, while there are still a number of subscriptions to be received. The deputation were the guests of Mrs. Ezra Churchill, who entertained them with her usual generous hospitality.

TREMENDOUS INCREASE IN BUSINESS.
A general circular has been distributed to the employees of the R.N.D. Co. announcing the appointment of Mr. Geo. Cobb as assistant to the General Superintendent; Mr. Herbert J. Russell, Superintendent; Mr. W. E. Patrick, assistant to the Superintendent, and Mr. Charles U. Henderson, assistant to the Auditor. All are well known and popular with the travelling public and are deserving of the confidence placed in them by Sir W. D. Reid, President, and the Directors of the Company. Since returning to town Sir William has been actively engaged in going into details concerning all branches of his extensive business, and as a result he has ordered many necessary changes. The rolling stock is receiving special attention and already the incoming cross-country express is getting back to within an hour of schedule, while the outgoing trains reach Port aux Basques on time. The increase in freight over last year is something surprising, as during the month of November, 1916, only 157 cars of freight came across from North Sydney, while up to the 24th of November, 1917, the total was 280 cars. With a view to giving better train service, the time tables are being revised by Sir William, who expects shortly to have them adjusted so as to cope with the increasing passenger traffic and thus be of better service to the public.

TROTSKY MAKES MORE "DEMANDS."

LONDON, To-Day.—A Reuter despatch from Petrograd says that Foreign Minister Trotzky has written to Sir George W. Buchanan, British Ambassador, demanding the release of two Russian citizens, Chiefrin and Petroff by name, under arrest in England, characterizing them as "staunch idealists." He demands also the release of others under arrest. Trotzky alleges that many Englishmen living in Russia are engaged in political activities in favour of the counter-revolutionary Russian Bourgeois and declares "the revolutionary democracy cannot accept the position that worthy heroes of the Russian revolution languish in concentration camps in England while counter-revolutionary British citizens suffer no restraint in Russian revolutionary territory."

FIERCE FIGHTING AT FONTAINE.

British Headquarters in France, To-day.—Desperate and sanguinary fighting has been raging in and about Fontaine Notre Dame since dawn to-day when the British again attacked the strongly held village. Shortly after nine o'clock it appeared that the assaulting infantry had stormed its way through the village in the face of tremendous machine gun fire both from the houses of the hamlet from Lafole Wood to the southeast. A hundred German prisoners were taken in the early hours of the fighting. Late this afternoon the Germans hurried up two new divisions and threw them in for a counter attack along the Fontaine-Bourlon Wood line. The fighting which followed in Fontaine was even more bitter if possible than that which occurred in the first rush through the ruined hamlet. At latest reports superior numbers of the enemy infantry had pushed the British back through the village again to the western end of the fighting, but the battle still continued with unabated fury. In the meantime the British line running round Bourlon Wood to the northwest was sustaining a heavy assault. The enemy appeared to be determined to regain the important position if it were but only for a few hours. The whole front from Fontaine to Bourlon village was the scene of fierce fighting, which at many places was at close quarters. The British line at Bourlon Wood is still intact. The attack on Fontaine Wood was begun with the assistance of a very heavy artillery barrage, and throughout the morning the British gunners maintained an intense fire against the German position there. The assaulting infantry drove an oblique wedge into the northwestern part of the village in short time, but they were held up there by a terrific machine gun fire, to which they were subjected from every point of vantage. Conditions were favourable to the Germans, for they were able to make good use of well prepared positions which could only be taken by storm. Every machine gun was equivalent to several hundred rifles. Despite the disadvantage the British continued the onslaught. It was a glorious exhibition of "bulldog courage." The assault failed in that three hours had passed and the hard hitting Germans kept on the eastern side of the village, leaving enemy strong positions. As the British fought forward and surrounded the various buildings containing enemy machine gunners, many Germans were compelled to surrender or lose their lives. By the time the eastern side of the village was reached five hundred captives had been collected and sent back to swell the great total of prisoners taken since General Byng struck his telling blow last Saturday. The arrival of a large body of German reinforcements put a different complexion on the situation. These fresh troops immediately counter attacked and the fighting through the streets of Fontaine took on renewed vigor. The weary British retired somewhat in face of this onslaught, selling each foot of ground to the inch at a cruel price. The western outskirts of the village were reached and here, according to latest reports, the battle continues.

DENIES STORY OF RUSSIAN PRINCESS.

WASHINGTON, To-day.

On behalf of the Russian Civilian Relief Association, C. C. Calhoun, President of the organization, to-day disclaimed all responsibility for the published story that Tatiana Nicolaevna Romanoff, daughter of the deposed Czar of Russia, had escaped from Siberia and would sing and dance in this country for the benefit of society. The society was organized to gather funds for the relief of the civilian population in Russia. Calhoun declared, aimed to conduct its propaganda in a dignified manner and considered such an appearance of the former Grand Duchess as most improbable and the publication of such a story as most unfortunate. The story of the escape of the former Grand Duchess through a mock marriage accredited to Ivan Navodny, one of the members of the New York Office of the Society, is regarded by most Russians in the United States as "somebody's good joke."

SUGAR CARGO ASHORE.

A CANADIAN ATLANTIC PORT, To-day.—A West Indian despatch mail ship announces that a large royal mail ship, with a cargo of sugar for Canada, is ashore. She was due here this week. Considerable refinery machinery may be left in consequence.

ROUNDING UP THE SLACKERS.

NEW YORK, To-day.—British and Canadian residents in the United States can't escape doing their duty while their fellow-citizens in Britain and Canada are being drafted here, said Brigadier General W. A. White, C.M.G., head of the British-Canadian recruiting mission here to-day, in discussing the despatch from Washington regarding the drafting of aliens resident in the United States. The mission has established recruiting depots in various parts of the country to give Britishers and Canadians a chance to volunteer for service through these depots. Some thirteen thousand men have been enlisted and sent forward to the British and Canadian armies. Regarding negotiations between Britain and the United States relative to the drafting of Britons and Canadians, General White explained that among ten million men who registered for services in response to the President's call there were many thousands of Britons and Canadians who registered under their nationalities and as such are not subject to the draft. In Britain and Canada there are Americans of military age and the proposed conventions between the two countries will provide regulations under which these men can be drafted for service in the countries of their residence by the Governments to which they owe allegiance. Pending the completing of the conventions, which it is expected Secretary Lansing will submit to Congress, said General White, a very active campaign is to be carried on all over the United States through British and Canadian recruiting missions. This will give all Britons and Canadians an opportunity to volunteer for service instead of waiting to be drafted. The mission now has the names and addresses of Britons and Canadians registered in the United States and has made a special written appeal to them to come forward and offer their services.

COLD SNAP IN QUEBEC.

QUEBEC, To-day.—Ice is forming rapidly in the St. Lawrence and navigation is becoming a hazardous task for small coastal vessels. A schooner inward bound was reported in distress to-day near Grosse Isle and assistance was sent from here. Ferry boats plying between Quebec and Lévis had a busy time cutting through a sheet of ice which formed during the cold wave. A number of buoys were carried away from their positions but immediately replaced.

WARNS AGAINST EXAGGERATED REPORTS.

Albert Thomas, Socialist Leader and former Minister of Munitions, influenced by what he terms exaggerated statements appearing in French papers from correspondents in America, sounds a warning note in an article which he has contributed. He adds, however, "But the Entente's great ground for hope is in the midst of reality and strength of American cooperation. Exaggeration should be guarded against. It is deplorable to see day by day in the press erroneous figures and fantastic assertions which must mislead public opinion, arousing successively unfounded enthusiasm and dejection. What has been written at times on the number of aeroplanes under construction, the number of ships available and the number of troops which have arrived has been absurd. Even official investigations have shown too often the same inaccuracy and ignorance, yet the plain truth is sufficiently cheering." Thomas then gives an outline of the American effort to date.

WAR SUMMARY.

Representatives of the chief nations at War with the Teutonic Allies are gathering in Paris for the Inter-Allied Conference, at which are to be discussed momentous questions for more unified action in the prosecution of the war. The American, British and Italian missions already have reached the French capital. They are led respectively by Col. E. M. House, David Lloyd George, British Premier; and Voltana Orlando, Italian Premier.

COMMANDEERED SHIPS NOW REACH 34.

WASHINGTON, To-day.

The completion of six commandeered merchant ships during the week ending November 24th was announced to-day by the shipping board. These vessels were seized by the Government on the ways when it took over all merchant ships building on September 4th. The places of building and tonnages are as follows: At Chicago one ship of 3,100 tons, at Detroit one of 3,300 tons, at Ecorse, Mich., one of 4,000 tons, at Detroit one of 3,100, at Cleveland one of 3,100 and at Manitowoc, Wis., one of 3,500. This brings the total commandeered ships completely to date to 34 of 179,399 tons.

YET ANOTHER RUSSIAN PARTY.

LONDON, To-day.—A conference of Russian political leaders has assembled at army headquarters for the purpose of forming a Government representing all parties, according to a Petrograd despatch to the Times. The leaders have been joined by Tchernoff, Avksentief, Professor Mikhaïlov and Generals Verkhovski, Ivanoff and others.

LONDON, To-day.—All Government officials who decline to recognize the Leninite Government, according to a Petrograd despatch to the Times, will be dismissed from office.

NORWAY TO ENTER WAR!

COPENHAGEN, To-day.—Behind a meeting of the Scandinavian monarchs and ministers at Christiania this week lies the fear, unfounded though it may be, of Norway's entry into the war and of the German menace that in this case, she should feel called upon to occupy Denmark as a counter measure.

NOT MUCH FEAR OF SUCH VICTORY.

LONDON, To-day.—The Daily Mail in an editorial on the Canadian election calls it a "great misfortune." It declares that Laurier's supporters are undertaking to wreck the Canadian Army at the most critical moment of the war and condemns Laurier's contention that voluntary service will give all the men required. It says, "This has already been tried and failed, as it failed in Great Britain," adding "Victory for Laurier would mean that Canada would have to drop out of the war."

TO POOL SHIPPING.

WASHINGTON, To-day.—Pooling of all the American and Allied ships plying out of the Atlantic and Gulf harbors planned. The Shipping Board is working out a programme in connection with the pooling of the eastern railways, the principal being to relieve the freight congestion at ports. The diversion of incoming ships from the port for which they sailed from Europe to some other Atlantic or Gulf port to relieve an exceptional situation also would be part of the General scheme.

Reuter's Message.

SYDNEY, Australia, Nov. 27. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency).—The State Government has decided to hold celebrations in honor of the British victory in France. Premier Hughes has decided to further curtail the liberty of enemy subjects. Sterner measures will henceforth be adopted.

PARIS, Nov. 27. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency).—The French newspapers are now permitted to publish the German official war views in full. A semi-official commentation dealing with yesterday's German bulletin says the contents show the habitual bad faith of the German general staff. For example: It speaks of numerous British attacks "repulsed with heavy losses," while the truth is that these operations are merely invented in order that the Germans may gain easy credit. Similarly it states that a French attack between Samogreux and Anglemont failed, which is also untrue.

Christmas Parcels Held Up.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—Kindly inform me if it is correct that some hundreds of parcels for our boys overseas were held up at the Post Office yesterday owing to lack of help at that institution. This means that Christmas will be well over when the boys get their presents, and surely something should have been done to ensure their carriage, as it is little we stay-at-homes can do for those who are risking their lives for the Homeland.
Yours truly,
R. K. HOLDEN.

A Patriotic Family.

Manuels may well feel proud of a patriotic family named Squires. No one able to go to war having a spark of patriotism, but must feel ashamed when they read of such instances as this. Mr. Alexander Squires and his two sons are doing their bit for King and Country. Mr. Squires is a member of the Forestry Battalion; his son tried to get in "Ours" but was rejected and with true courage he joined the Foresters. His brother Lionel is in the regiment at Ayr, and Charles is at Dunkeld. The Squires family are a credit to the Empire. There are a father and two sons who have given themselves to the cause of liberty while hundreds of slackers are at large.

So Hard to Hate.

By RUTH CAMERON.

experience is typical.

Very young people, and people who rot or grow sour instead of mellowing with the years, are the only successful haters.

You must see life narrowly to have unqualified hates.

As you begin to see life more broadly you see it more indulgently.

There is more of grey and less of black and white in the picture.

So Many Things Interfere With Your Hates.

So many things intervene to prevent your getting and keeping a good thorough hate on anyone.

Just as you have one successfully established, you find that, though the object of your hate is despicable in one direction, he shows compensating qualities in others that command your reluctant respect.

Or you have to admit to yourself that there are conditions that have made him what he is.

Or you are robbed of your chance to indulge in unmitigated hatred by finding him doing something really decent.

I Once Had a Beautiful Hate.

I once had a very well grounded hate. I was buying a horse and buggy and asked a neighbor, whose business pertained to horses, to advise me. I paid him well to spend an afternoon looking at a horse with me. He thereupon persuaded me into buying a buggy for which I paid seventy-five dollars and which was of peculiar construction that I had to pay out thirteen dollars during my eight months ownership for repairs. I also paid six dollars for storage and finally sold it for ten.

Do you wonder that I felt mighty bitter toward that man. Every time I saw him I indulged in a morning hate. When he lost a signature job he had had for years, I was really glad.

My Dog Loved Him.

And then I lost my hate for I found out that he was deeply attached to my dog, and that (a greater recommendation) my dog loved him. So I couldn't unqualifiedly hate him any more.

Hate is a form of self-indulgence. There is no question but that one can get a certain pleasure out of hating.

There is an excitement to it. It is really a sort of mental stimulant.

But no real stimulant could be any worse for anyone. No person who wants to be efficient can afford to get into the habit of taking it. And no self-respecting person will want to.

THE CHURCH WEDDING

The church wedding is a costly social function which is anticipated with great pleasure by everybody but the bride's father, who is obliged to remain after the guests have gone to settle up with the orchestra and the mezzo soprano who sings "O Promise Me" four tones away from the key in which it is being played. Many a proud father, who walks down the aisle with a sprig of orange blossoms stabbing him in the right ear, has had the entire ceremony spoiled for him by the prospect of this ordeal.

Marriages performed in church are not more durable than those which take place in the front parlor, underneath an evergreen horseshoe, and they call forth more congratulations, hulled rice and engraved soup ladles. There is no better or surer way of securing a setting out of china and cut glass in triplicate than by being married in a church with rented pews and a seating capacity of 2,000 lognettes. Thousands of brides have returned home after the honeymoon and upon checking up the wedding presents found that they have enough meat forks, salt and pepper sets, cream pitchers and silver spoons to stock three or four catererias.

The church wedding is a very trying occasion for the bridegroom, who is never sure whether he put the ring in his lower left-hand vest pocket or swallowed it on the way in. When called upon to produce it he begins a frantic search through several pockets which are perfectly empty, and in the meantime is perforated by the reproachful gaze of several hundred guests who have never tried to locate a 14-carat ring clad in white kid gloves and beady perspiration. If there were more church weddings there would be a larger measure of sympathy for the bridegroom. Church weddings have to be rehearsed with great care, so that the best man will not put a stray foot through the bride's train and cause a hurried postponement of the ceremony. The bride's father also has to be educated so that he will not try to give the bride away before the officiating clergyman reaches a four-bar rest. On this account, people with a weak heart should always be married by a justice of the peace.

THE LONG FACE.

The man who's always serious, who's solemn all his days, is prone to pain and weary us. In fifty-seven ways. These times be dark and troublesome, with war and dead men's bones; still let your daughter marry some, it does me good than groans. I read of endless slaughtering on red fields over there, and yet no tears are watering the handgowns that I wear; 'tis not because 'tis frivolous, or hardened, that I smile, but grief will only shrivel us, and isn't worth our while. I can't conceive what Jerry meant—that prophet of old days—who cut out joy and merriment, a long lament to raise. The man whose voice is pitiful, whose face is like a hearse, will queer a whole blamed city full, and break men's hearts or worse. He's had enough when breezily the world jogs on space; when things are coming easily to all the human race; but when the world needs heartening, and tears like fountains flow, when souls and nerves need smartening, why multiply the woe? With sighs for this world's misery I waste no precious time, but with my weapon scissory I steal some cheerful rhyme.

Stanley Goodyear a Soldier and a Man.

TRIBUTE FROM HIS BROTHER OFFICERS.

The following letters have been received by Mr. Josiah Goodyear, Grand Falls, expressing sympathy with him in the loss of his son, Lieut. Stanley. They are from the young hero's cousin and commanding officer, and are only a couple out of many testimonies to the sterling worth and soldierly qualities of the man.

B.F.F., 1610/17.

Dear Uncle and Auntie—As I write this you are again mourning the loss of another brave boy. Poor dear Stanley has gone. We always looked upon Stanley as one of those boys who would never go under. He has had so many narrow escapes that we all felt he would go through with the same good fortune. Such, however, has not been the case, and to-day the Regiment mourns his loss as keenly as though he was a brother to every officer and man in the Regiment. He had endeared himself to all. His qualities as a man, his gallantry and determination to do his job appealed to all ranks. His loss is so great that we are appalled. He cannot be replaced. No other living man could do the work as well. He was to be Brigade Transport Officer on the 10th. This makes it all the more sad.

On the morning of the 9th we attacked and advanced over 2,500 yards. In the evening Stanley on his noble gray horse at the head of his transport, was bringing up water and ammunition to the Regiment, when a shell burst in his party killing the dear lad and 4 others as well, also wounding some of the rest. Young Ivany was with the party and he says that poor Stan was hit in the head and his death instantaneous. His body has been given decent burial and padre Stenlake has marked his grave by a cross. The padre is writing you and will give all particulars. All his kit has been securely packed and a list of the articles enclosed and is being sent home. I am forwarding you a wallet containing some photos of his friends in Scotland and England. I am afraid this is going to break your hearts, but I trust that God in His goodness will help you to bear your loss. I have written some of his friends in Scotland and am writing Kenny right away.

On the evening before the attack I had a long conference with Stanley and he promised me he would look after my kit if anything happened to me. It seemed that there could be no possibility of his being killed as at that time he did not anticipate bringing up rations, as we hoped to be relieved that night. But we were not relieved and he volunteered to supply us. I have seen death in all its phases this time and I am thankful to God he has spared my life.

The one great agony of my soul is that I have no Stan to talk to, to lean upon, to ask advice of and to spend an evening with. I am lonely and my heart is breaking.

As I look around and see all the horses I miss Stan; I miss his voice and his noble horse which he always rode. His horse was killed with him.

This is a cruel war, but for poor Stanley and Ray's death we have had revenge.

On the 9th October we killed, shot and bayoneted between 1,000 and 1,200 Germans. We spared not and slaughtered right and left. We shot them until our ammunition was gone and then we used the bayonet freely. It is the only way to end the war by killing Germans.

My dear uncle and auntie your hero has gone but he has set an example of courage, gallantry, and devotion to duty as will always be an aspiration for every officer, N-Com, and men not only in our own Regiment but in the whole Brigade, the whole division and the whole army.

Do not think him lost to you. He has died a true soldier's death, and when this agony has passed and when we have rent the veil which now hangs between us and that world of which we have so little knowledge, we shall meet dear old smiling Stan in all his radiance. He is just ahead and although our hearts are bleeding yet we must dry our tears, for thro' supreme sacrifice alone can we bring about peace.

You have my heartfelt sympathy. The Colonel has written you. I pray God will help you.

Your devoted nephew,

GEORGE.

October 14, 1917.

Dear Mr. Goodyear,—It is with the deepest regret that I have to write and tell you that your son Stanley has been killed in action. You will no doubt have heard the sad news long before this letter reaches you, but I write to offer you and Mrs. Goodyear my deepest sympathy in your loss. I can in some measure appreciate your loss, because I know what a loss he is to me personally—he was the best possible transport officer—and his place can never be filled in anything like the same way.

It was on the night after our big battle on October 9th that he was bringing up water to the firing line when a big shell burst right amongst them, killing Stanley instantaneously and several others, and also several animals.

It is impossible for me to speak too highly of his work as Transport Officer—he was simply invaluable to the Regiment, and in addition I feel that I have lost a real friend. I had been so looking forward to the day when the war should be over and I could meet him with all of you over in Newfoundland. Your loss is great, but so is mine and the Regiment's, and I hope that you and Mrs. Goodyear will feel assured that you have my most sincere sympathy.

Believe me, yours sincerely,

(Signed) A. L. HADLOW,

Lieut.-Colonel.

Commanding 1st. Nfd. Regiment.

The Goodrich auto tires can stand the hardest kind of strain, such rubber in a pair of boots is sure to bring you gain. Now in the Hipress you have got the best of Goodrich stuff, on other rubbers can lay claim to being half as tough. The best of Hipress rubbers is at Akron, Ohio; there's a man knows all about them and his name is "Natty" Snow, and when you visit Water Street please into Bowring's drop, he'll show you those grand rubbers with the red line 'round the top. No rubbers can compare with them since "Adam was a boy" there wasn't any made that gave like Hipress so much joy. They're just the thing for those who toil beneath the fruitful earth, and there's many at Wabana can attest the Hipress worth; for the Hipress boots are tougher than the miler's bar of steel, and the farmer and the fisherman can guarantee they're real; in fact we are not bluffing, truth alone will ever stand, when we tell you that the Hipress is the best in Newfoundland. You may travel Terra Nova and no matter where you go you will come across the Hipress made at Akron, Ohio. So to-day we would advise you to walk into Bowring's shop and buy a pair of rubbers with the red line 'round the top—adv.

Who Must Repair?

Important Case Between Landlord and Tenant.

Following is the judgment of Judge Morris in Bulley vs. Pearce, concerning the liability of a tenant to keep the house he occupies in repair:

IN THE CENTRAL DISTRICT COURT Between Jessie Bulley, Plaintiff, and William Pearce, Defendant.

This is a claim for rent and damage to fixtures amounting to $175.00. The defendant counter-claims for damages sustained by reason of defective roof which it is alleged the plaintiff promised to repair.

The tenancy was from year to year. The implied obligation of a tenant from year to year is to keep the premises wind and water tight and to make fair and tenantable repairs.

In the absence of an agreement to do repairs, the defendant took the house as it stood. There was no legal obligation on the Plaintiff's part to put the roof in a tight condition. If the Plaintiff promised to do so, there was no consideration for the promise.

The defendant was bound to deliver up to the Plaintiff the house and fixtures in the same state and condition as they were in at the commencement of the tenancy, ordinary wear and tear excepted.

It is proven that the furnace and radiators were injured during the occupation of the defendant and were so at the termination of the tenancy. The question is, what damage has the Plaintiff sustained.

Edward Thomas, Plumber, called on behalf of the Plaintiff, examined the boiler, furnace and radiators, and estimates the maximum damage at $70.00. Defendant called no witness on this point.

Judgment for the Plaintiff: Balance due on rent . . . $ 75.00 Damage sustained furnace and radiators 50.00 $125.00.

I disallow the counter-claim.

Mr. L. E. Emerson, B.L., for Plaintiff.

Mr. Chas. H. Hunt, B.L., for Defendant.

Dated this 27th day of November, A.D., 1917.

(Sgd.) F. J. MORRIS, Judge.

The Hygeia Breast Feeding Bottle is the most rational style of feeding bottle yet introduced. It is so easy to clean both bottle and nipple, and is so near the natural way of feeding the infant, that it is only wonderful that something of the kind has not been introduced before. Many physicians are recommending it. Price 50c complete.

How the British Navy is Watched from a Table 1,500 Miles Away

Valuable information similar to the above is vital and interesting in the education of children. The illustration shows clearly the workings of a great machine, the British Navy and how it is controlled by a master achievement—wireless telegraphy.

Such helpful information is not taught in schools—but must be learned in spare hours. Do not want your child to be conversant with the current topics as well as entertain a knowledge of science, modern developments, history, and other interesting events and material.

Only a small per cent. of the child's time is spent in the schoolroom. The balance is left for play and study. This time should be carefully watched so that the child may receive not only the full benefit of parental advice and learning but the full benefit of the theories and practices of great educational masters.

HAI'S HEADQUARTERS REPORT.

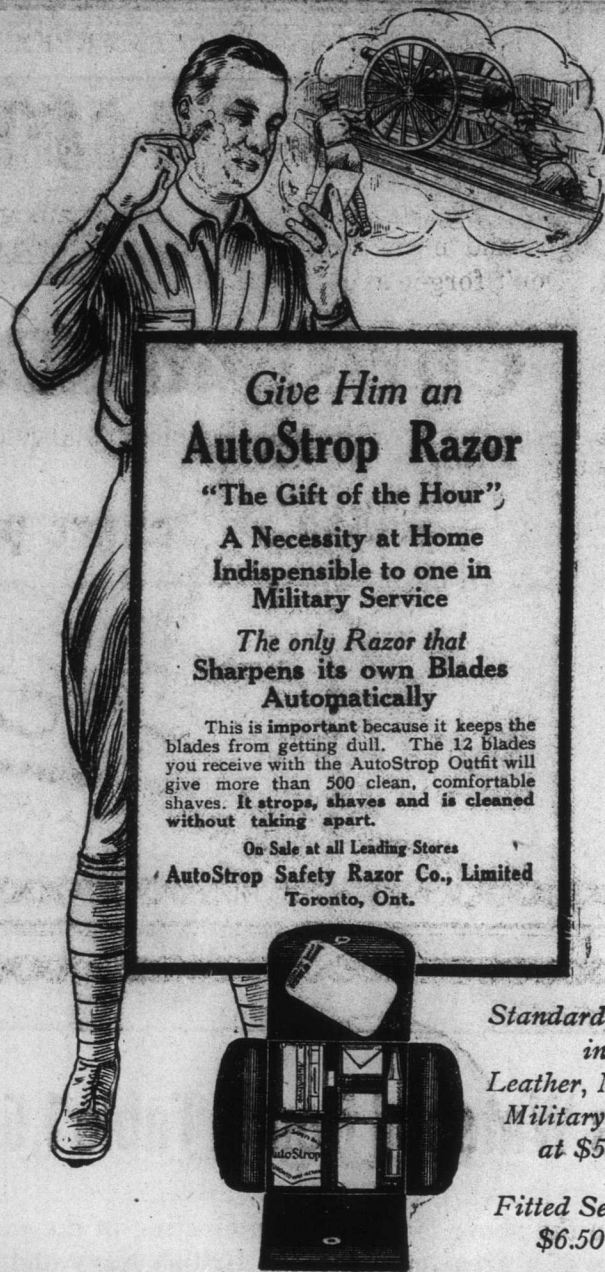

LONDON, Nov. 27. A report from Field Marshal Haig's headquarters to-night says: At dawn to-day our local attacks in the neighborhood of the villages of Fontaine, Notre Dame, and Bourlon led to severe fighting. The enemy being strongly reinforced contested our advance with great stubbornness, and the fight swung backward and forward during the day. We have advanced our line and taken over five hundred prisoners. During the afternoon the enemy attempted to attack the position we hold in the Hindenburg line on the spur west of Moeuvres but was driven off by our fire. The enemy artillery has again shown great activity east and northeast of Ypres.

GERMAN RESISTANCE.

British Headquarters in France, Nov. 27. (Via Reuters' Ottawa Agency.)—German resistance southwest of Cambrai has stiffened to a point where our progress is necessarily a matter of hard fighting. The enemy, who received a staggering blow, has now had time to recover somewhat from the first effects of it. Communications here are good and he concentrated reinforcements fairly rapidly. We are in positions of supreme value and the Germans are bound at least to endeavor to exact as large a toll of casualties as possible for our retention of the gains. The outstanding feature of the past week is that the vaunted invincibility of the Hindenburg system of defences has been crushed through. Henceforth the Germans will be unable to say that any part of their laborious lines of resistance is safe. It is a feat of importance at a time when it is a serious matter for the enemy to have more of his reserves tied down.

REFUSED TO TESTIFY.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 27. Jodh Singh who was called as the principal government witness in the trial of thirty-four persons charged with conspiring to foment a revolution against British rule in India, refused to testify to-day after he had submitted a list of questions as his rights. To the Judge, Wm. C. Van Fleet, in the United States District Court. He pleaded guilty to the conspiracy charge. Jodh Singh's refusal to testify brought forth bursts of cheers and chatter of the native Hindustani from the Hindu defendants in the case, and it was several minutes before the bailiffs restored order. Judge Fleet demanded to know what the Hindus had shouted. "You are our brother" was what we said, replied one of the men in English. United States District Attorney John W. Preston had given a preamble to the testimony that was to come by telling what the government hoped to show by the witness. Jodh Singh would chronicle, said Preston, that the trial had been made in the interests of the alleged conspiracy from Rio Janeiro to Berlin, New York, Chicago and San Francisco. Preston said the witness would tell of the operation of the alleged Berlin-India Committee, and of his close association with the German Consul officers in the cities he had visited. He would also relate several pecuniary transactions in which he had received money from these German officials. Jodh Singh was called to the stand and he refused to be sworn. He took an oath of affirmation, and turning to the judge said, "Before I proceed further, I have some news to submit and if these are answered to my satisfaction I shall testify." He gave Judge Van Fleet this list of questions: "Is this a free country? Shall I be allowed to stay here? Am I allowed the right to have an attorney? Will my countrymen be permitted to hear my testimony?" Judge Van Fleet answered: "This is a free country, that Jodh Singh's presence in this country rested with the government and that he would be allowed an attorney. The answers failed to satisfy the Hindu, and he said, "Well, I refuse to testify." Preston asked that Jodh Singh be arraigned on the charge of conspiracy.

LONDON, Nov. 27. All communication has been broken between north and south Russia for the embassies in Petrograd were unable to establish any touch with Odessa and other points in Southern Russia. Russian official messages, however, are reaching Odessa via Persia.

HIS FIRST SPEECH SATURDAY.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27. A despatch from Amsterdam, published by the Evening Sun, says that Chancellor Hertling is to make his first speech to the German Reichstag on Saturday, according to Berlin despatches to-day. It was predicted his address would be an intimate revision of the Central Powers' war aims in view of the Entente's refusal to consider peace.

CECIL AT NORWICH.

LONDON, Nov. 27. Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of Blockade, speaking at Norwich, said that as far as Germany was concerned the spirit that existed in that country was that no law of morality or religion could prevent them from committing any crime however hideous, provided it was thought to be in the interests of Germany. That was the spirit which we had to fight. There could be no safety for us until Germany was finally beaten. Some people believed the German people had a desire for peace. One test thereof was whether they were willing to restore and indemnify Belgium for outrages inflicted on that country. Germans had been challenged to answer as a test of their peace sincerity, but no reply had been received from the German government. No one therefore could doubt that the spirit of the German government was precisely what it was when they rushed Europe into war. Unless that spirit were changed we would be criminals if we thought any lasting peace could be made with a Power of that kind. The first of our war aims is and must be victory. Referring to operations in France, Lord Cecil said that during the last two years there had not been a battle between the British and German troops in which the Germans had not been forced to give ground. I can't, he continued, question or doubt, the conviction which I know is held by those who are best able to judge the commanders of our armies in France. They only ask a fair field and no favors, and they are quite sure we can beat the Germans every time. We have practically acquired every one of the German colonies and our victories in Palestine surely give the Germans cause to think. Then there is Mesopotamia. Wherever we look we may at least say the Germans don't occupy one square inch of British territory. Regarding the blockade, I know it has its critics, but I venture to say with a sense of responsibility that there has been no achievement in the whole world's history equalling our blockade. We have accomplished the most rigid blockade ever accomplished, and I rightly maintain we have never infringed on the principles of international law which we went to war to defend.

CONFIDENCE IN ITALIANS.

Italian Army Headquarters, Northern Italy, Nov. 27.—Heavy losses to the attackers not only on the left, but on the right wing and centre of the army holding this sector was subjected to the attack of the enemy efforts now attaining its full force here. On the right and centre the struggle raged from Monte Monferone west with the Italians holding their lines at all points. Fluctuations of a great battle have now developed to a state where the resisting power of the Italian army has been demonstrated to be sufficient to retard, if not to prevent any sudden rush through passes leading to the Venetian plains. This was regarded as a serious menace for six days, but as each day has shown the Italian lines holding solid against repeated attacks, and their defenders ready even to take the aggressive against heavy odds. Feeling of gravity that then prevailed is changing to one of restored confidence and unwavering determination coupled with the spirit of buoyancy which pervades all ranks and civilian life. There is also a feeling that the friendly allied support is near, and the mixed ranks of grey, blue and khaki will be combined to form the barrier that Italy has sustained alone until now. Many British officers were at headquarters to-day, and the streets showed almost as much khaki as grey. The Prince of Wales renewed his earlier visit, going about the streets and mingling with the officers at public restaurants in a host of democratic fashion. It is reported from Friuli, the region occupied by the enemy, that the civil population has been required to turn over all copper articles, grease and oils in its possession within five days. Emperor Charles is said to have made another visit to the invaded region going to the coast cities of Grado and Montefalcone.

Strangest Battle in Worlds History.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Nov. 21.—The strangest battle in the world's history was that by which the British to-day smashed the Hindenburg line.

There has been no other battle like it in the annals of warfare. Only the wooden horse of Troy offers a comparison with Sir Douglas Haig's blow in tactical originality.

General Pershing, Commander-in-Chief of the American army, in France, witnessed this most staggering of all the blows which the British have launched against the enemy.

At a moment when the world was saying that surprise attacks in this war were no longer possible—when the Prussians were thinking the same thing and sleeping soundly in their comfortable dugouts, without the faintest suspicion that anything was brewing—British army tanks leading British infantry, rose up from the ground like magic and swung to the attack.

There was no artillery preparation. The lumbering tanks did the pulverizing of the way. They blazed the trail, their gigantic ponderous paths offering free entrance to the infantry immediately behind. They crashed over wire entanglements, over artfully concealed chevaux-de-frise, over trenches themselves and the walking Tommies followed. Prisoners pouring back of the lines to-day were still dazed with the surprise attack.

They were utterly flabbergasted. Not an officer nor man had the slightest idea the British could possibly strike on their quiet sector at a time when it was supposed every ounce of Britain's strength was concentrated in Flanders.

Huns Are Demoralized. (Since the battle of Arras the Cambrai sector has dozed in peace and quiet.)

The line seemed impregnable. The Germans had heard that so often they were certain of it. They were confident that it would take weeks of high explosive shell preparation as well as unprecedented barrages to do the trick.

So they dozed and slept and took life easy in the German lines. There was practically no artillery fire felt from the British side—the "Englisches Schweine" were too busy with their concentrated guns at Paschendaele, and besides, they didn't have enough guns to concentrate—so why worry? That must have been the German psychology.

No more utterly demoralized human beings in the world were seen than these same sleeky confident Boches as they crawled from their dugouts, sleep barely out of their eyes, at the sound of crunching, lumbering juggernauts above them—to find British soldiers swarming everywhere.

They raised their arms in shrilling cries of "Kamerad, kamerad," and fled hither and thither, dazed and terror-stricken. Guns that never fired a shot in this battle were seized by the Tommies, or else crushed into the yielding earth by the steady weight of the tanks.

Cement emplacements, steel-bound roofs of dugouts, were crunched in, burying Germans like ants trodden under foot.

Britain's victory came after a preliminary advance Tuesday morning. It was then, under black skies, that the tanks lumbered forward as the new barrage for the infantry. Wednesday completed the triumph.

All of the stereotyped rules of preparation for war and of the actual battle strategy itself were thrown aside in the British coup.

Sometime on Monday night a large number of British tanks took their berth behind the lines. The Germans didn't hear them; it was too dark for them to be seen.

In the early morning on Tuesday these monsters crawled forward in the hazy light between darkness and daylight. A smoke barrage concealed their camouflaged slides. The Germans didn't know they were in action until they rumbled and wheezed over their heads.

The Hindenburg line—the impregnable, the never-yielding, the last word in defences—was taken, therefore, without a single preparatory gun shot.

How complete was the surprise for the Germans was evidenced in the fact that at one point a German division was in the process of relieving another at the very moment of the attack.

Our Volunteers.

Recruiting continues to be slack. Four young men offered their services yesterday, namely:

J. R. Cumming, Curling, Bay of Islands. H. M. Peyton, Belwood.

D. Anderson, Summerside, Bay of Islands. N. Harvey, Victoria Cove, Gander Bay.

The work of inoculating some of the volunteers was continued yesterday by the doctors.

Bazaar Opened

BY HIS GRACE THE ARCHBISHOP.

At four o'clock yesterday afternoon the annual Bazaar, promoted by St. Joseph's parishioners, Holytown, in aid of the new Church Fund, was formally opened in the C. C. C. Hall in the presence of a large gathering, including His Grace Archbishop Roche, Rev. Monsignor McDermott, Rev. Dr. Kitchen, Rev. Fr. Renouf, Rev. Bros. Ryan and Strapp (St. Bon's) and Messrs. W. J. Higgins and P. F. Moore, M.P.A.'s.

In declaring the sale open His Grace made a happy address, wishing all success to the venture, and commending the people for being indefatigable workers, as no sooner had they finished one good work than they had begun another. He noticed they were very aggressive and felt sure that their new "offensive" would result in their reaching their "objective."

Neatly designed and artistically arranged stalls, stocked with seasonal articles of all descriptions, occupied conspicuous places and the ladies in charge did a thriving trade, as did also those who were serving teas. The sale was kept open until 10.30 last night during which there was a big demand for goods by ready purchasers. It will be continued this afternoon and night, closing to-morrow night with a dance at which the C. C. C. band will play.

Shippers Be Cautious.

The Board of Trade are in receipt of the following cable from Lind and Couto, at Oporto:

"The market is heavily over-stocked, and we understand heavy shipments are coming forward. It is a pity shippers are forcing our market like this. Prices are already declining and the demand is fair, but we expect a falling off shortly. Advise shippers to act very cautiously."

Wesley Annual Tea and Sale.

At 4 o'clock this afternoon the annual Tea and Sale of Wesley Methodist Church will take place in the church schoolroom. Fancy and plain work stalls have already been constructed and are laden with many beautiful and useful articles. A feature of the Sale will be the large vegetable stall which is being provided by the members of the Adult Bible Class. Excellent teas will be served for the small sum of fifty cents.

The Stranded Beverly.

The S. S. Beverly is still aground in St. Mary's Harbour. The ship's position is not dangerous, as she is sheltered from the elements. The work of removing a portion of her cargo is being carried on with despatch and put on board the S. S. Erik. When the Beverly is sufficiently lightened there is every probability of her coming off the mud bank without damage. Her owners are expecting to have her in St. John's by the end of this week.

YOU CAN HIT UP
a better average as regards health by wearing good

Wool Underwear
in the cold weather. You cannot do better than striking out for

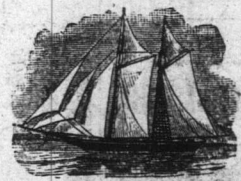

Stanfield's UNSHRINKABLE WARM WOOL UNDERWEAR.

And you can get it best by hitting up BLAIR'S. If your present Underwear is only worn a bit thin, don't take chances but replace it immediately, as our prices are low now, and later it will cost you more. If you leave it till next winter, outside of possible doctor's bills, it will cost more than half as much again. You may think it funny for us to be saying this, but we are figuring on buying next winter's Underwear now. It is only by very advanced buying these times we can give you good prices. Of Underwear selling now, some we had in stock or bought over a year ago. WE ARE LOOKING AFTER YOUR INTERESTS AND OUR PRICES ARE LOW.

Don't Forget Your Boy Who is Fighting for You.

You are in perplexing circumstances when you want to know what to send him. We will try and help you out. He needs something to break the strain always on his nerves. He wants to be taken away from his surroundings for a time, even if it is only his mind.

WE SUGGEST A BOOK.
You think, Oh what is a Book? When he is finished with it will be no good to him. But you send him cigarettes and cigars which give only about five minutes enjoyment to him alone, while a book, long after he has read it, lingers in his memory. And even after he has finished it it can be passed from one to another in the trenches.

We have the largest collection of Books. We will save you all the trouble sending it. Write your letter at home or at our store.

We will supply writing materials and a place for you to write in quietness.

We will mail it for you. We will try and help you in your selection. Call at
