Lord Somerton's Ally.

CHAPTER IX.

Lord Somerton scrambled to his feet, his face livid with rage, his baleful black eyes blazing. The attack had been so sudden, so unlooked for, that he was momentarily bewildered. He looked Colin Ernscliffe from head to foot and knew that he was no match for the young giant who stood regarding him with a half-contemptuous smile.

By a mighty effort he partially recovered himself, and spoke coolly, almost collectedly, though he could not disguise the covert sneer in his tones, or subdue the lightning of savage hate that gleamed in his eyes:

"There is not much merit in attacking a man from behind," he said, "and I demand the favor of an explanation, sir. I do not know you, or by what right you are here."

"There is nothing cowardly in the manner of chastising a ruffian who endeavors to terrorize a lady, no matter in what way it is administered, sir," replied Colin Ernscliffe, sternly. "I have a right here, possibly equal to that of your own, and consider myself fortunate indeed in being able to relieve Miss Sterne of your unmanly importunities."

Just then he saw the appealing light in Elsie's eyes, he saw that she was trembling with fear, and turned toward her, saying:

"May I see you to the house, Miss Sterne?"

He offered his arm, and Elsie clung to it gratefully. She was half ashamed of her cowardice, of her weakness, but her heart trodded so painfully that she found it difficult to breathe.

"One moment," said Lord Somerton; "an exchange of cards is necessary under the circumstances, and we shall doubtless meet again to-day, being guests under the same roof. I have no wish now to aggravate the unpleasantness of the situation, for Miss Sterne's sake; but you must understand, sir, that the matter does not end here.

"I am ever at your service—Mr.—ah—Lord Somerton," added Ernscliffe, glancing at the card his lordship had presented.

"It appears that we are not absolute strangers to each other—by reputation at least. I am Colin Ernscliffe, the artist."

For an instant an expression of surprise swept over Somerton's face, replaced almost immediately by a bitter smile, as he bowed mockingly to Elsie.

"Lord Somerton commissioned me to paint one of his thoroughbreds two years since, Miss Sterne," Ernscliffe explained, as they moved away. "He was one of my earliest and most liberal patrons, though this is the first time that we have met."

"And I have perhaps caused a breach between you that may never be healed," Elsie said. "I am so sorry, Mr. Ernscliffe."

The artist shrugged his shoulders, and a fierce laugh escaped him, so fierce that Miss Sterne looked up in surprise.

"The cur!" he muttered; "the despicable cur! Miss Sterne, I declined his favors long ago. I discovered his character and spurned the patronage of a scoundrel whose very breathing in your pure presence is a sacrilege. He probably never troubled to inquire the why and the wherefore. What mattered to him the eccentricities of a struggling artist? His enmity only showed itself in his own immediate circle, and has rather benefited than injured me. I was not a successful man then; I am now."

Elsie listened to all this and understood sufficient to convince her that Colin Ernscliffe had good reason for holding Lord Somerton in the uttermost contempt.

"Are you feeling better, Miss Sterne?" the artist asked, presently, in tones so soft and tender that Elsie could not resist a vivid blush.

"Oh, yes. There is not much the matter now," she replied, brightly. "I was afraid that you would hurt each other. Lord Somerton looks like one who would not hesitate to use a pistol or a knife. I should not care at all if I were sure that you two would not meet again."

He laughed lightly, but his purple eyes seemed to grow black as night; his splendid shoulders expanded, and he muttered, half to himself:

"My lord of Somerton had better beware!"

The heavy walk was nearly at an end, and a broad patch of sunshine warned them that they would soon be in the open, where their movements might be seen from the upper windows of the house.

Elsie slipped her hand from Ernscliffe's arm, glanced at his smiling, quizzical face, and blushed a rosy red.

"You are sure that you can walk alone, Miss Sterne?" he asked, mischievously. "I am reluctant that this should end so quickly. To me it has been a most delicious time. I shall never forget it!" He paused and looked at her quickly. "Perhaps you think that I am presumptuous, Miss Sterne—

"—I, a mere artist, to treat you upon such terms of close familiarity when we have not even had a proper introduction?"

"Do not speak in that way, please, Mr. Ernscliffe," Elsie said, gently. "Genius finds an equality nowhere on earth. It is superior to princes and emperors! Do you not believe that a few mortals are specially favored by the gods? At times I love to think that the old stories of the Greeks are not all mythical—but that they are founded upon very truth! As to an introduction, are you not my cousin's friend? and do you not bear the best of credentials?"

She spoke half laughingly now, and Ernscliffe's heart throbed with rapture.

For a minute he feared that she would see the wild light in his eyes, and he turned his head, remarking in unsteady tones:

"I do not think that the enemy is following us, Miss Sterne, or even prying upon our movements, and I would suggest that we have a few moments' conversation here, before going into the house. I dread some interruption, and wish to learn a few facts without delay."

He faced her again, and felt that he would have given worlds to have the right to banish the trouble that momentarily crept into her lovely eyes.

"I will do as you wish, Mr. Ernscliffe," Elsie replied. "Even if I desisted I could not well refuse when you are going to so much trouble for my father's sake.

"I think that it is more for yours, Miss Sterne," he burst out, then instantly regretted the speech.

It was most indiscreet, and a frown flashed over his brow when he remembered that these familiarities would be bitterly resented by the baronet's daughter when she knew all.

"We can talk here," Miss Sterne said, through a small labyrinth of stunted firs and bushes of holly, and entering a lawn whose verdant walls shielded it from every passing wind. "This is papa's favorite place of seclusion, and was evidently designed for an invalid, the wall of trees inclosing it being several yards deep.

"Delightful!" exclaimed Ernscliffe, leading Elsie to a rustic seat under the shadow of a giant maple. "What a famous resting-place for lovers! Now try and fancy that we are lovers, Miss Sterne!"

Elsie looked into his bold, handsome face, and in all the years to come he never forgot the expression in her pansy eyes! He knew that he had awakened the woman in her heart—he knew that he loved her—that he would love her for all time!

He stepped quickly to a fragrant clump of mignonette, remarking that it was one of his favorite flowers. He wished to hide the tumultuous throbbing of heart and brain—to hide the maddening anguish that convulsed his features.

He returned to his seat, his face half buried in the mignonette that he had so ruthlessly torn from its bed. Then he looked at Elsie, and she was startled by his pallor, though he smiled.

ONLY 20 MILES AN HOUR!

A friend of mine has recently traded in her old automobile for a lovely shiny new car.

She brought it around to show me the day after she bought it. I expected her to be overflowing with delight with her new possession, and she did have a certain pride in its gleaming surfaces and fresh upholstery. But what do you think the dominant note of her mood was?

A Terrible Bore.

"Sometimes I wish I had kept the old car for I've got to break this one in and my husband insists that I shan't drive more than 20 miles an hour the first thousand mile. That's the one stipulation he made. I don't really think there's any need of it. It's just one of the notions he gets. And it's such a bore. I have to struggle all the time to keep down, and you really can't get anywhere when you have to creep along like that."

She wasn't talking for effect. She meant it. It did seem like creeping to her. And I don't doubt there are thousands who have had the same feeling when they changed from an old to a new car.

But when you stop to think of it, isn't it almost funny?

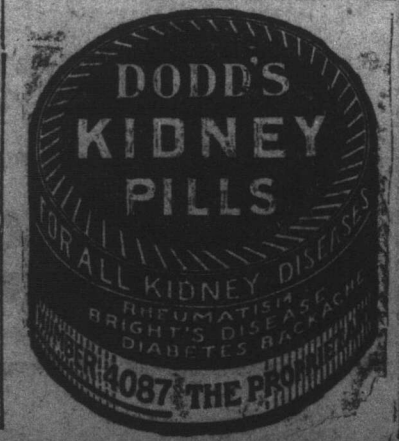

A Four Mile Speed Limit.

When automobiles first appeared in England they were only allowed on the public highways on condition that they did not go more than four miles an hour and that a man with a red flag walked in front of them.

When steam trains first began to run in this country, the doctors objected to them, said that it would blind the passengers to see the landscape go past so fast.

In the early days of automobiles I can well remember signs that prohibited more than 15 miles an hour anywhere, and more than eight miles an hour on city streets.

"I've hardly used my car this year," a man said to me in August. "I haven't driven it but about 2,000 miles this summer."

Fancy a man in the days that many of us can remember having driven his horse 2,000 miles in three months. He would be lucky if he had any horse left.

Now Two Hundred and Forty-Four.

And to complete the contrast I read in my paper that a new record for aeroplanes speed has just been established, 244 miles an hour.

Which, by the way, smashed a record of 233 made the week before.

So that next week 244 may have become an also ran.

Steam travel came before our day, but the passage from horses to aeroplanes has taken place within the experience of anyone over 30.

It certainly strains the mental vision to try to imagine what the 30-year-olds will see if they live to be 60. So let's not try.

The Horse Holds Its Own

OTTAWA Ont., Oct. 11.—(Canadian Press)—So far as farm work is concerned the horse is more than holding its own against the encroachment of traction engines and motor-trucks. This opinion is held by officials of the Livestock Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, who have made a study of the situation with special regard towards the materialization or otherwise of the prediction once made that the gasoline tractor was old Dobbin's death warrant.

Attention was drawn to the successful battle which the horse is waging against his mechanical opponent, the internal combustion engine, at a recent hearing before the Dominion Railway Commission, when that body was asked to grant a twenty-five percent reduction in freight rates on horses. Records dealing with horses show clearly that the three Prairie Provinces no longer look to Eastern Canada for their supply of horses but are in a position to turn the tables upon Ontario and Quebec. It is estimated that over five thousand horses were shipped to Eastern Canada from Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta during last year and there is every indication that the traffic will continue. In explanation of this phenomenal change in conditions, livestock officials refer to figures showing the number of horses in the various provinces when the war occurred in comparison with the number at the present time. Before the war Ontario had 900,000 horses and at the present time there are less than 675,000; Quebec records a slight gain, while the Maritime Provinces and British Columbia lost though the decrease was slight in comparison with that experienced in Ontario. Very different was the situation which developed in the Prairie Provinces during the last few years. When the war began Alberta had 680,000 horses and this number has increased to over a million; Saskatchewan recorded an advance from 650,000 to 700,000, and Manitoba also showed a substantial gain. A survey of the market during the war years shows that not more than 85,000 horses were taken from Canada for war purposes. Farmers at that time became greatly interested in the possibilities of the tractor and the motor-truck. Circumstances combined to discourage the breeding of horses until 1920 and 1921, when money was scarce and agriculturists turned once more to what livestock officials believe is the cheaper agency—the horse.

Belgian Reparations Plan to Receive Consideration.

Giants Defeated by Yankees in a Double Header--The Prince of Wales is Homeward Bound--International Fisherman's Race on October 27--Bush Fires in California Cause Immense Damage.

BELGIAN PLAN TO BE CONSIDERED.
PARIS, Oct. 14. The British Government's acceptance of the suggestion of the Belgian Foreign Office for reference of the Belgian reparations plan to the Inter-Allied Reparation Commission as the basis of a concrete plan in the impending negotiations for the settlement of the question of German reparations, was received at the Foreign Office to-day. This completes the general accord by all the Allies. Italy having given assent to the proposals on Saturday, and the Reparation Commission will proceed officially to a study of the Belgian plan. The Belgian document is the outgrowth of many months of investigation by Belgian technical and financial experts in Germany. A broad outline of the plan provides for a minimum of forty billion gold marks as Germany's indemnity, to which is added eighty-two million marks in bonds. The plan notes that the first figure is recognized as being moderate, that both has been adopted by all the Allies and even admitted fair by the last International Socialist Congress in Hamburg.

DISASTROUS FIRE IN CALIFORNIA
LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 14. Two dead, scores slightly injured, and property loss estimated at over one million dollars resulted from brush fires which yesterday swept over the ridges and canyons near the suburbs of Montecito, Eagle Rock and Glendale, north of here, and which late to-day were believed to have been brought under control.

PRINCE OF THE ATLANTIC.
QUEBEC, Oct. 14. Lord Renfrew became the Prince of Wales for a few minutes before bidding Canada au revoir on Saturday afternoon, when the crew of the Empress of France dressed the ship for royalty before he stepped aboard. At half-past three the Empress sailed carrying Lord Renfrew and party back from the Dominion to life as heir to the British throne. The departure lacked formality save for the dressing of the ship and the visit of the students of Laval University also lined up on the wharf to give three hearty French-British cheers.

EVERETT'S CREW SUPPOSED TO BE IN AN OPEN BOAT.
KEY WEST, Oct. 14. Thirty members of the crew of the tank steamer City of Everett, which sank stern first last Thursday off the Florida coast, are believed to be fighting for their lives in an open boat on a stormy sea. They are being searched for by vessels which answered the distress signals when the tanker foundered in a heavy sea off Tortugas.

GIANTS LICKED TWICE IN DOUBLE HEADER.
NEW YORK, Oct. 14. The Yankees flattened the Giants on Saturday by eight to four; the Yankees knocking out of the box the two Giants' twirlers, Scott and McQuillan. Shavkey held the Giants to the eighth when he weakened. The score by innings:
1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9
Yankees 9 3 0 1 1 0 0 0 3-3
Giants 0 0 1 0 0 0 3 1-4
New York, Oct. 14.—Sweeping forward with irresistible power the New York Yankees battered the world's champions, the Giants, into submission to-day for the second successive time and took the lead of three games to two in the 1923 struggle for the diamond supremacy. Baffled at every turn by the marvelous, almost flawless mound work of "Bullets" Joe Bush, and reeling under the terrific force of the Yankee bombardment, the Giants were submerged by a score of eight to one. Bush held the Giants at bay with three hits, all of which were made by "Irish" Meusel, whose triple in the second innings led to the team's only score. Bush was invincible, dominating the game with masterful hurling, while the Yankees

FORD ENTERS POLITICS.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 13. This morning's papers printed a statement from Henry Ford in which he attacked Secretary of War Weeks, for alleged attempts to break up muscle shoals development. In many quarters the statement is believed to be an attack on the Coolidge Administration. Later it was announced that Mr. Ford will allow his name to go on the Nebraska primary ballot as a candidate of the Progressive Party.

Printers of 16th Century
WERE EXPERT CRAFTSMEN.
CHICAGO, Oct. 12.—(A.P.)—Saved for posterity through the efforts of a legion of rare book fanciers who vie for their possession, numerous examples of that most famous sixteenth century contribution to the publishers' art, the Aldine Press, are finding their way in increasing numbers to the protecting shelves of the Newberry library here. They are staunch testimonials to the one-time cheapness of the literary works.
For this is one of the chief characteristics of these old volumes, according to Dr. Pierce Butler, rare book custodian of the Newberry library, who says that many products of the Aldine Press were published in form that rivals that of the best of the 20th century has to offer and sold at the astonishing price of two shillings.
The Aldine Press was established by Aldus Manutius in Venice in 1490, shortly after the invention of printing. The firm was continued for 75 years, first by son and then by his grandson, after the death of the founder. Some 908 works then produced in this time, of which samples of almost 100 are now in Newberry collection. Aldus specialized in the works of Greek and Latin men of literary genius.
Almost as soon as published, the Aldine works were recognized as of unusual merit, according to Dr. Butler. Down through the years these rare volumes have gained increasing popularity, especially those turned out in extra fine workmanship.
The Aldine books made up the original and in some cases the only medium through which works of some of the oldest Greek and Italian writers were transmitted to future generations.

Meteorological Observations in Ottawa
OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 11.—(Canadian Press).—A table of meteorological observations, taken at the Central Experimental Farm during the year has just been issued by W. T. Ellis, observer, which shows that rain or snow fell on 168 days during the twelve months. The highest temperature during the year was 94 degrees, while the lowest was 33 degrees below zero. There was sunshine on every day during the months of August and September, 1922, but July took premier place as the month with the largest total of sunshine, its record being 325 hours, or an average of 10.48 hours a day.

Economy Which is Destructive

With few exceptions the reports brought back by local sportsmen from the shooting grounds are anything but satisfactory. Partridge are reported scarce in all the favourite localities, and although there have been more guns out this year than ever before, the number of birds secured is said to be less by far than usual.

Various opinions are given as to the reason for this scarcity. The wet weather during the summer is said to have had a bad effect. Birds which nested in the lower grounds are believed to have failed to raise a brood, or else the young perished soon after they were hatched. As far as the domestic arrangements of the birds are concerned, they are beyond our control, but in the matter of providing adequate protection to prevent extermination, we are derelict in our responsibility.

Much has been said about the unrivalled attractions that Newfoundland possesses for the tourist, and in such advertisements of her resources as appear references in glowing terms are always made of the unlimited quantities of game to be found. A few years ago even the most descriptive accounts of our game fell far short of the reality. To-day we still possess without a doubt caribou and birds in large quantities; to-morrow, if the unwise policy based on the grounds of economy is continued, we shall still have our wide spaces it is true, but they will be vacant spaces, and the teeming bird and animal life for which they have been famous will have ceased to exist.

The measures adopted for the preservation of our game are inadequate, ridiculous, and utterly useless. We have a Game and Inland Fisheries Board comprised of a number of gentlemen whose duty it is to deliberate and to decide upon the best methods of supervision and maintenance. They are conscientiously trying to do all that is possible in their executive capacity, but beyond that they are helpless. Their hands are tied. They are allowed a mere pittance in the matter of expenditure, and the farce continues year after year of issuing game laws with no one to enforce them. No one? Well, it sounds less ludicrous than to say that in the whole of our 42,000 square miles of territory, there are four supervisors to see that no shooting is done in close seasons, and that not more than the allotted number of animals are shot in the caribou country. One man only is supposed to keep a watchful eye on the whole of the Peninsula of Avalon! Two men are responsible for the care of the game in the vast territories of the Newfoundland Labrador! Can it be claimed that under these conditions it is possible to enforce the regulations?

This system of protection applies only to the shooting, and not to the protection of the inland fisheries, to which reference will be made on another occasion.

For about three years the appointment of Game Wardens has been discontinued by the Government on the plea of lack of funds. The Board in consequence is helpless in the matter. Were the same arguments used by a business firm which allowed its vessels to fall into disrepair, to a farmer who neglected to fertilize his ground, or to a Chief of Police who reduced the force and allowed our houses to be burglarized at will, we should consider the individual responsible for such a policy insane.

The very existence of the game depends upon protection, the building up of a source of revenue which in other countries is considered of the greatest importance depends upon protection, and here in Newfoundland, where we are labouring under a burden of taxation, we are practising economy when a comparatively small expenditure would bring us from outside an enormous return in the form of revenue.

Motor Cars in Collision

Shortly after noon yesterday a collision between a motor car owned and driven by Mr. T. Hallett, and a machine owned by Mr. Lloyd Chabell, driven by Mr. Bert Carter, occurred at the Junction of Rennets Mill and Circular Roads. At the time of the accident Mr. Hallett, with his mother and niece, were proceeding in Rennets Mill Road. The other car was going east along Circular Road. Mr. Hallett's sedan had two wheels smashed in the collision, whilst Mr. Chabell's car lost one wheel. All the occupants received injuries, except Mr. Hallett, who had his hand cut by broken glass. The point at which the accident occurred is known as a blind corner. Several attempts to have this place made safe for traffic have come to naught.

At St. Andrew's Church Nominations in Harbour Main (I.C.M.)

It may be truly said yesterday, that it was a high day at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. There was much to make the day memorable. There was the beautiful weather, and bright sunshine, which gave a bath, not only of calm and peace, but of hope and inspiration. Thus when the Church bells pealed forth their music to call the people to the different altars for worship, there was a big response, and large congregations assembled. It was a typical Newfoundland Sunday. Such a day, as lifts from Newfoundland the misconceptions which some people hold about her.

At St. Andrew's Church a special feature of attraction centred in the person of the Rev. Dr. Hanson, of whom the people have been reading for some weeks. There was therefore much expectation that a Master in Israel was to be heard; and it is pleasing to be able to say, that such was the case: and that a Master in Israel was heard. Dr. Hanson is not only one of nature's noblemen, but he is a Christian gentleman of deep spiritual experience, and profound thought. Without doubt, Dr. Hanson is a trained man, and brings to his work dignity, and beauty of character. He is such a man as must certainly tend to uplift the younger people who look up to him; and impress his hearers with his sincerity, as well as with his research. The pity is that more such men do not make a choice of the Church, and that more such talent and dignity are not brought into the Christian Ministry. It seems that trade and commerce get a bigger share of the world's best talent, than does the Christian Church, and yet the Church is worth the best that can be laid upon her altars.

The three services yesterday at St. Andrew's were of a high order, and were very devotional, and the preparations made for the coming of Dr. Hanson evidently bore good fruit. It was the writer's privilege to attend the evening service only; hence our report must deal chiefly with that service. Of the Anthems and rich music we have neither time nor space to write; but we must express our appreciation of Miss Webster's rendition of the solo "How lovely are Thy dwellings." As our readers are aware, this solo is really a Psalm, and last evening's rendition of it by Miss Webster, accompanied by the Church organ under the touch of Mr. Mawer was in itself an inspiration, as well as a vision. It is indeed good to find such talent within the Church, because certain it is, that there is enough of it going to other agencies.

The subject of Dr. Hanson's address was that of Man, and it was based upon the text taken from the second chapter of Hebrews, in which the writer of that Epistle quotes from the Psalmist, when he said, "What is Man?" Dr. Hanson spoke of man as being the creature of God. A creature of body, and yet of soul, and as being the greatest work of all creation. The Ser, stood by the story of Genesis, and gave us uncertainty as to man being the child of God; being created for God; and being meant for God's glory. This truth is found by world-wide experience; for God has made of one blood all nations that dwell upon the face of the earth. True races and tribes differ but there is yet that touch of human nature, and that longing within men, that make them brothers. This is sustained by the history of mankind, and in the teachings of the Gospel, as founded by the Son of God. There is no perfection in man. All men are alike before God; and at best all are sinners and debtors to His Grace. Hence, the Saviour Himself said, "I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance;" and when He sent forth His Apostles, He commanded them to go into all the world and to preach the Gospel to every creature. Thus it was with the vision which Peter saw, when he learned the lesson that nothing which God made was common or unclean; but that all men were heirs to the Gospel message. Dr. Hanson illustrated his discourse by several very beautiful stories, all of which bore directly upon man—his purpose, and his destiny.

There is no doubt whatever that Dr. Hanson's visit to St. John's will result in great good; and that his addresses during the coming week will be sources of inspiration and instruction. The learned Doctor has received a warm welcome from his co-religionists of the Kirk; and he will find that same warmth among the people; and on behalf of the Press of St. John's, we bid him welcome and God speed.

Bell Island Situation

On Saturday Messrs. Humber and Conway, Chairman and Secretary of the Bell Island Miners' Association came to the city for the purpose of consulting with representatives of the district on matters in connection with the curtailment of work at the mines. It is intimated that in reply to a message sent Mr. Roy Wolvin, President of the B. E. E. Mr. H. B. Gillis, Superintendent of Miners' replied as follows:—

T. A. Conway, Sydney, October 9.
Wabana.
Replying your telegram to President and self. When increase of 2 1/2 cents per hour was granted last April it was expected we would ship approximately the same tonnage to Germany as was exported last year. Finding it impossible, however, to ship more than about one-quarter of the tonnage and lacking any other outlet for our ore we find it necessary to curtail our mining programme by closing down two slopes. By bringing Sydney more ore than actually required here we are enabled to continue operating the haulage and two slopes, but as these operations are carried on only for the purpose of taking care of our resident workmen we cannot afford to continue rates granted in April. All ore mined for export must be packed in boxes and mined in Europe where depreciated currency places us at a disadvantage. Our present programme was decided upon only after careful consideration and having in mind the necessity of employing as many of our workmen as conditions would permit.
(Sgd.) H. B. GILLIS.

Saturday afternoon the members of the delegation together with Messrs. Higgins, Fox and Valincour, the representatives for the East End, called on Hon. George Shea, Acting Prime Minister, and placed the situation clearly before him, pointing out that the closing of the slopes would mean destitution for the Island, as there were no other means of livelihood open to the men. This forenoon a consultation between Mr. W. J. Higgins the Colonial Secretary and the Acting Prime Minister resulted in the sending of a cable message to President Wolvin requesting that he furnish the Government with the programme of operations which the company proposes for the operation of the mines during the fall and winter months.

Children Require Milk

WINNIPEG.—Miss Helen Campbell, in charge of educational work, dairy branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, speaking at the recent Child Welfare Conference, said that the activities of the department lately had been directed to demonstrate work by means of posters, talks and stories to children, and the education of mothers in the proper uses of milk. As there were many children who could not, or would not, drink large quantities of milk, mothers were instructed in the preparation of daily meals whereby the child was made to assimilate at least a quart of milk daily.

Effects of Earthquake in Japan
 (Canadian Press)—
 The earthquake disaster may be the best thing about better feeling in the people of China and Japan. Already China has offered subsidies to the refugees from the earthquake area. See Li-pang, secretary of the Chinese government, who has visited Japan, has visited the refugees here. The Japanese government has offered to send a relief expedition to Japan. It is showing profound sympathy for the disaster. China is poor and unable to do much to relieve the sufferers, but she will send supplies as possible. It offers an opportunity for China to become closer to the south and north China will order in Japan. The Chinese legation in Tokyo immediately rebuilt.

"Find the Woman" at Star Movie To-Night

Ringling through the ages, Linked with ev'ry crime, Spoken truth of sages, Proven every time, Find the Woman! seek her, She's linked with ev'ry sin, Find her, sight her, speak her, Find her ere you win.
 This picture is a thriller, Will murder it begins, The atmosphere's a chillier As to its end it spins, A man who earns no pity Is stabbed to death, by whom The drag-net of the city Go seeking through the gloom.
 And when the haul is bagged in, The ones who guilty seem Are last that would be dragged in. E'en though it were a dream. And though accusing fingers In turns point round to each, Suspense, it always lingers, —And the ending is a peach.

Mount Cashel Jubilee Celebration

Yesterday afternoon a most enthusiastic meeting of the Mount Cashel Silver Jubilee Committee was held at the meeting of the President of the Committee, Hon. J. D. Ryan, being absent, Mr. W. J. Higgins occupied the chair. He explained that the object of the meeting was to make arrangements for the proper observance of the day which marks the Silver Jubilee, namely Wednesday, Oct. 24th. Rev. Bro. Ennis announced that Mass for the boys and the people in the immediate neighbourhood would take place at 7.30 a.m. at 10 o'clock. High Mass would be celebrated. His Grace the Archbishop will be present at this ceremony, which will be open to everyone. No invitations are being issued in connection with this solemn function, but it is hoped that all friends of Mount Cashel who can conveniently be present will attend. In the evening at the Prince's Rink a grand promenade concert and dance will take place.
 Regarding the disposal of the tickets for the grand drawing it was decided to embark on an extensive week-end campaign. In this connection and to inform the public, will be held in the various club rooms as follows:
 Wednesday, 17th, K. of C.
 Friday, 19th, H.S.
 Tuesday, 20th, Star.
 Friday, 26th, Holy Name.
 St. Joseph's Institute and the T. A. will announce their dates later. At these tournaments, books of tickets will be given as prizes, and as the entrance fee is but fifty cents per head it is safe to anticipate large attendances. It is the intention of the Committee to finalize the sale of tickets in time to have the drawing take place on October 31st. Therefore any friends who wish to assist in this most laudable lottery should communicate at once with Mr. C. E. Jardine, Secretary, or C. J. Ellis, Treasurer, at once. It is felt by the committee that no more fitting way of paying tribute to the work of the Brothers in connection with their Silver Jubilee can be found than making this lottery a big success, for, in addition to being afforded an opportunity to win handsome prizes, the purchasers of tickets will have the satisfaction of assisting the splendid work being done for some 189 orphans. The Committee would appreciate the immediate sending in of stubs for all tickets sold, as preparations for the drawing will commence at once.

France Holds Fast

H. POINCARÉ ON GUARANTEE FACTS.
 France stands unshaken in her determination to hold fast to the pledge which she now commands for the fulfilment of German obligations. This was the keynote of M. Poincaré's latest speeches, which possessed special significance in view of his forthcoming meeting with Mr. Baldwin. Speaking at Dun-sur-Meuse, M. Poincaré said that at Versailles the Allies decided that all damage caused by the German invasion to persons and to property should be repaired, and Germany undertook to repair that damage. Some persons now regarded these decisions as a dead letter, and blamed France for insisting on their execution, accusing her of being too exacting. These unjust criticisms shocked Frenchmen, but while they would be wrong to imagine that it was their friends' business and not their own to defend their interests, they would be equally wrong to fear that in upholding their rights they could offend anyone. "Our rights are contained in Treaties signed by our Allies," he declared. "There would be no security in international relations if treaties concluded could be dissolved. It was not to neutral, commissions, nor to international experts, nor to an international trust society, nor to the League of Nations itself, whose role was undoubtedly great, that the Treaty of Versailles entrusted the task of fixing the German debt and the conditions of its repayment. It was to the Commission of Reparations, whose powers Germany had expressly recognized.

If there is an idea of divesting the Commission of this task it is without doubt because the Commission is considered little favorable to new concessions. These new concessions would be contrary to promises made to us, and that is sufficient for us not to countenance them. We hold guarantee. We shall keep them until we receive satisfaction.

M. Poincaré dealt with the question of security in a second speech at tenance of our security. But in neither particular do we mean to let slip the substance for the shadow.

Germany, who for several months has completely paralyzed the Inter-Allied Military Control Commission, presided over by General Hollet, who can at leisure manufacture guns, aircraft, and munitions either at home or in other countries, who in a few years can reappear before us helmeted and armed ready for revenge—Germany to-day whispers words which she thinks are alluring, and promises from which she expects marvels.

"Certain German publicists and politicians," M. Poincaré continued, "suggested that all the Rhine riverine Powers should join with a few others mutually to guarantee for a determinate period the status quo of that region. The promoters of this plan, Briailles-sur-Meuse. After remarking that nothing was more calculated to encourage German hopes of revenge than immunity from the payment of Reparations. He continued: "We must therefore exact the total of our Reparations, and watch over the maintenance of the peace, that there were intelligent men among France's allies who considered the idea perfect, and were ready to recommend it to France. In creating the League of Nations," M. Poincaré said, "the Treaty of Versailles laid down the principle that all member nations should undertake mutually to respect their territory. When Germany has likewise fulfilled her obligations she will be free to ask admission to the League of Nations, and when she has become a member thereof France and she will—ipse facto—reciprocally guarantee each other against aggression. A pact, specially covering the Rhine frontiers would add nothing to the text of the Treaty. It might even have the grave disadvantage of weakening the general pact, for being inapplicable to the frontiers of Czechoslovakia and Poland, it would seem to leave Germany more liberty on the East or South than on the West.

A guarantee pact, whoever were its signatories, could have no practical value for us unless it assured us of speedy and effective military aid in the event of attack.
 Nevertheless we shall keep the treaties given us by the Treaty. Doubtless as they are not eternal, and as those promised us in 1919 were not forthcoming, we shall in due time willingly seek, with our Allies, others for the future, but no more in this question than in that of Reparations shall we be satisfied with vain appearances."

C. L. B. Cadets

"Queen's weather" quoted the 1st. Nfld. Regt. C.L.B. Cadets at their Church Parade yesterday afternoon when at 3 p.m. the Brigade with the Old Comrades, A. C. and F. Companies, Brass and Bugle Bands, Ammunition Corps, and two companies of Girl Guides proceeded to the Cathedral for Divine Service at which the Cathedral Men's Bible Class also attended. The parade was under command of Lieut.-Col. Walter F. Rendell, C.B.E. and Capt. Leonard Stick Adjutant. There were 492 all ranks on duty. The Company of Girl Guides of Girl's Friendly Society was under command of Capt. Emma MacPherson. It was their first parade with the C.L.B. and they marched like veterans. Officers of the Brigade commented highly on their excellent deportment. "Spencer Guides" under Capt. Elvin Nash also made their usual smart appearance and both Companies were the centre of attraction—numbering 183 all ranks. The Old Comrades Lodge under President John Crane; Vice-Presidents Herb Crossman and Secretary Gasher were in good form nearly 70 answering the roll. This is their first appearance since President Crane took command and we congratulate the officers and men on their appearance. The service at the Cathedral was choral and all ranks were pleased to see the choir in their places, and the special music of the Organist, Professor King.

The sermon was in the nature of a Brinton, Battalion Chaplain, Revs. E. C. Earp, B.A., Arthur Shorter and Canon Jeeves. The sermon was preached by the Rev. E. C. Earp, Chaplain and Rector of St. Thomas', who wore his war medal for services as Chaplain to the Forces. The text was from 4th Chap. 12th verse Philippians. "I can do all things through Christ who strengthens me."

A Plea For the Store Clerks

Editor Evening Telegram
 Dear Sir—It is reported on good authority that the shops purpose opening at night till New Year or later, in order to protect themselves from the few who have been indulging in this practice. Consider the store clerk who is already working late into the night every Saturday, and the greater part of the fall and spring; not to speak of the breathless fortnight at Christmas and New Year—on his feet from daylight to dark in service of the public. Apart altogether from the humanity of the question, it is absolutely open to debate whether the resulting profit from the few extra sales will balance the extra cost of light and heat, and it looks very strongly like biting of the nose to spite the face. The remedy lies not in descending to the same level, but by regulating trading hours through the proper channels—a municipal by-law. Nine and a half hours on an ordinary day and thirteen on Saturdays are surely sufficient for the public to make its purchases in, and it is certainly up to those in charge of the welfare of our city to see that protection for our merchants and decent working conditions in the shape of a nine and a half hour day prevail. A special aid, if advisable, temporary by-law, is well within the province of the Council, and we want some action on the part of its five members. What about it?

The Fisheries of Newfoundland

BAIT DEPOTS.
Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—The loss in the Shore, Labrador and Bank fisheries owing to the need of Bait Depots could be estimated in millions. Thirty years ago they were first promised in political manifestos, but like other promises made at election times they never materialized. With bait available, the time spent by the fishermen to-day would be saved, which, taken in conjunction with the savings in labour would make the difference between a good and a poor summer for the fishermen. We are repeatedly hearing the same story: plenty of fish but no bait available.

About 22 years ago Sir Robert Bond's Government, of which Lord Morris was a member, erected two bait depots—one at Petty Harbour and another at Fogo. They were not successful because no arrangements were made to keep them supplied. I have made years of study of this problem and having solved it to the satisfaction of all those experienced in the fisheries to whom I have submitted my plans, I have embodied them in a proposition which I hope will meet with the approval of the Executive. Working on the lines which I have devised it would be possible to have Bait Depots supplied all around the coast at a minimum of expense. This is not a party matter; it is one which is of the greatest importance to every fisherman in the island, for which a plentiful supply of bait, fish would always be procurable.

A COMPARISON IN THE METHODS OF HANDLING AN ARTICLE OF FOOD.
In every other country in the world the greatest care and the most modern methods are adopted in the handling of food products, but the same cannot be said of Newfoundland to-day. Thirty years ago our fish was standardized by cutting; but to-day it is the tenuous system that is in operation. The greatest care is not generally taken in the making of the fish, and in other ways sufficient consideration is not given to the requirements of our customers. They want a number one article when they purchase fish as they do in any other food, and they are willing to pay for it.

Norway has catered to the requirements of the Cuban market and has been able to dispose of 150,000 boxes (100 lb. each) there, at 1 s. 6d. per box, about 15 cents a pound. The Norwegian Government encourage the fishermen and merchants in every way possible. The same thing applies to the Iceland fisheries. The bleeding process has been adopted, and the fish is thoroughly washed after it is split, salted in vats, and again washed carefully before it is dried. Our codfish is superior in quality to the Norwegian or the Icelandic, and the idea of bleaching fish is consistent with the practice invariably adopted in the preparation of all meat foods. It gives to the fish a whiter colour and it withstands bad weather conditions during the making process.

Professor Zilva declares that the properties of our cod liver oil are superior to those of any other, and I feel certain that my idea that bleached fish is a better article of food would apply in equal measure to livers taken from fish treated in this manner. The by-products of the fish which for the most part we discard as offals—I refer in particular to the tongues and sounds—could in themselves be made a source of wealth, were put up in glass containers and put on the market; the demand could not be supplied.

THE HERRING FISHERY.

What excuses can we make for the lack of employment so much in evidence, for the exodus which is constantly going on? Have we lost faith in ourselves altogether or is it that in grasping at the shadow we lose the substance? Or is it that we have no enterprise in the obvious direction in which nature intended us to direct our efforts?

Farewell Week of Pat Harrington

POPULAR NOVELTY SINGER IN NEW PROGRAM.
Pat Harrington, the popular novelty singer and dancer concludes his six weeks engagement at the Crescent Theatre at the end of this week. His numbers to-night are of an especially entertaining nature, as he has up some of his biggest hits for this occasion and therefore patrons of this popular house are in for a good treat that is well worth hearing. Mr. Robert Shields, English Baritone sings to-night a programme of selected items culled from the big musical shows of London and New York. The pictures to-night consist of a sparkling six-act social-drama entitled "The Infamous Miss Revelle" starring Alice Lake and Sherlock Holmes in "The Tiger of San Pedro" another of the famous stories by A. Conan Doyle. This is the most exciting of the series as there is a mystery in it that is concealed until the final "fade-out" and then there is a startling revelation. Apart from this feature side of the bill there is a Pathe Kevlow showing items of interest from all parts of the world. Another mammoth Amateur Contest will be staged on Friday night—keep this night open for the biggest night's amusement of the season.

Intercollegiate Football ST. BON'S WIN SECOND GAME.

St. Bon's won the second game of the intercollegiate football series on Saturday afternoon, when they defeated the Collegians by a score of 2-0. The game was exciting from start to finish and there was plenty of snap about it, and the players received plenty of encouragement from their supporters who turned up in full strength. St. Bon's played better combination than their opponents, who were a bit slow on the goal, and their forward did not receive sufficient support from the backs. The next game will be played Wednesday afternoon between the Feldians and Collegians. Mr. Ern Churchill was referee.

NEW GOLDWYN PICTURE PROVES THAT TENSE DRAMA CAN BE WITHIN THE LAW.

Out of the fog of doubt in the minds of motion picture producers as to what kind of photoplays they should make so as not to offend the censors that are sprouting in many of these United States, comes "The Sin Flood" a Goldwyn production, to prove that tense drama can be filmed without offending the most sensitive.

Here is drama, a delicate love story, deftly woven into a powerful photoplay that will be shown at the Nickel Theatre to-night. There is nothing in "The Sin Flood" that any censor can take exception to. The author, Henning Berger, the eminent Swedish novelist and dramatist, needed no criminal incident nor prudent episode to tell the fundamental psychological tale that called for expression.

"The Sin Flood," as directed by Frank Lloyd and produced by the Goldwyn Company, becomes a searching analysis of the hearts of men, and reveals their basic desire for the good, repressed and thwarted in expression as it often is, yet which rises to the surface when the bitter conflicts of the world are lifted from a material to a spiritual plane.

The acting of the eleven principal parts is entrusted to players of unusual distinction and wide experience. The leading woman in the cast is Helene Chadwick, who plays the role of a chorus girl. Others in the cast are Richard Dix, Ralph Lewis, L. H. King, Otto Hoffman, John Stepping, Howard Davies, Will Walling, William Orlamond, Darwin Karr and James Kirkwood.

"Lights of New York" Rings True to Life

Were O. Henry, peer of all short story writers, to come back to earth and write for moving pictures he would have written "Lights of New York," the latest William Fox super-production which is at the Majestic to-day. If ever a story of the great American metropolis rings true it is this wonder picture. In it both sides of New York life are shown: The riches and splendor of Fifth Avenue alternate with the squalor and degradation of the great city's slums.

The main scene of the picture is laid in a gentlemen's club on Fifth Avenue. Here two great human stories of the city are recounted. In one of the stories Marc MacDermott, pioneer screen actor, plays the leading role. He is cast as a "down and out" invited to attend a rich young man's bachelor dinner to save the party from having thirteen at the table. The "outcast" is asked to tell the story of his life. He unfolds a tale of love and fortune and degradation and finally drifts out again into the cold outside world.

In the other story Clarence Nordstrom portrays the part of secretary of a rich clubman. He tells how he was left a foundling, in the care of an East Side pawnbroker and his wife, and how they lovingly cared for him during his early child and boyhood. Nordstrom, as the boy, is played by Thomas Carr, son of Mary Carr, the great mother in "Over the Hill" and "Silver Wings." The young secretary tells how he fell into bad company, and how, after a terrible nightmare, he saw the error of his ways and reformed.

Miss Kathleen Gallivan will delight her hearers to-night in her renditions of "Kathleen Mavourneen" and "Mother in Ireland." These are two excellent songs as sung by such a talented singer as Miss Gallivan, are sure to please all.

Just Folks. By EDGAR A. GUEST.

AUTUMN.
I wondered all the summer long
about a certain tree,
It was a frail and twisted thing,
and poor it seemed to be:
Its handsome brothers jeered at it,
The shapely maples sneered at it,
And lowered above it in their pride and winked their eyes in scorn
I fancied I could hear them say:
"That useless tree is in the way."
"Were better for the woods we rule
if it had not been born."

It lived, and yet it had no grace—
The weakest brother of its race, depressed and lonely, too,
And oft I thought: "This lovely seems
Were fairer if that tree had been cut down, so men would never know or see its sorry state.
That twisted trunk, those branches
bared,
Destroyed the landscape's splendor
there;
It is the beggar of the clan before the palace gate."

And like the beggar, day by day I watched it struggling to survive,
"Alas! Alas of drink and food I beg,
Pray give to one in need."
But trees, like men, when they are strong
Forget the weak and pass along;
That ill-shaped tree in leafy rags no touch of friendship found.
I watched it struggling to survive,
At times I thought it scarce alive,
But still it weathered storm and gale when mightier trees were downed.

Now autumn with its matchless paints has visited once more
And, strange to tell, its scarlet stands at the beggar's door.
That poor and twisted helpless tree
Which once was pitiful to see,
Lends splendor to the distant scene,
the fairest of the fair.
And I who was a doubting man,
Now see the purpose of the plan
And understand that twisted tree and why God placed it there.

GOLDWYN PRESENTS THE SIN FLOOD

THE SIN FLOOD
DICKENS or Balzac might describe this tremendous scene and do it justice. Any pen less gifted would fail.

"The Sin Flood" tells the story of ten men and a woman who were suddenly brought face to face with death. The story of the transformation of this motley group is not only a thrilling one, it is the noblest message the screen has yet delivered.

Many English Girls WILLING TO ENTER DOMESTIC SERVICE IN CANADA.

TORONTO, Oct. 11.—So far as securing outside domestic assistance is concerned, Canada stands in a fair position, according to Miss Jessie Duff, Superintendent of the Houseworkers' Section, Employment Service of Canada, just returned from a six months' visit to the Old Country, where she interviewed hundreds of women and girls desirous of coming to Canada. "Many girls who would not think of entering domestic service in England are willing to come to Canada as houseworkers," said Miss Duff. In addition to assisting in the payment for passage over, the Ontario Government offers a generous bonus to all houseworkers willing to go on farms, but there is an extraordinary scarcity of applicants for this kind of work. Miss Duff was particularly interested in the home crabs training centres, where girls and women taken from the ranks of the unemployed are trained in household work, personal hygiene and the like.

Eating Electricity

WE SHOULD ALL INCLUDE IT IN OUR DIET.

Strange as it may seem we all eat electricity, which should form an essential part in our diet.

This does not mean, of course, that we should turn on the electric light switch and try to swallow the electric fluid, in the same way as we turn on the tap and drink the fluid that flows from it.

The electricity we eat must be in minute doses; and in minute doses it is furnished by Nature ready for our needs.

It is a fact of which physiologists have been aware for many years that the cells of which the muscles of animals are composed are practically electric batteries and contain a charge of electricity. It has also been claimed that the cells of all vegetables are charged in the same way.

Electricity in a Pea Pod.

The presence of electricity, even in small quantities, can be detected by means of a Galvanometer. By inserting the positive terminal of a Galvanometer into the stem of a fresh pea-pod, and the negative terminal into one of the peas, an electric current is released on closing the key. This proves that the pea is electrically active.

Why, it will be asked, does the electricity not flow away or discharge itself, but remain in the pea? The answer is simple. The pea is covered with a substance which insulates the electricity and so prevents it from escaping in exactly the same way as the electricity flowing along the wires in a house is prevented from escaping by the insulation round them.

How Fruit Rots.

This insulating or protective material forms the bloom on the apple, peach and plum. When this bloom is removed by polishing or by the skin being bruised, the electricity in the cells nearest the surface leaks away and the fruit decays in that spot.

This leakage of electricity causes a further leakage from the nearest healthy cells, and this goes on until the fruit becomes quite rotten.

Exactly the same thing happens with the cells of animal tissue, which we commonly speak of as meat.

Dr. A. White Robertson has drawn attention to the fact that all animals (including man), which live in the wild, feed on only what he calls "quick or live food," whether that food is animal or vegetable. In other words, all food cells are taken into the stomach alive; that is to say, while yet electrically charged, and before electrical death of the cell has induced chemical change.

Indeed, Dr. White Robertson goes as far as to believe that the material we eat must be electrically active in order that we may get the greatest nourishment out of it.

"Live" Food Better Than "Dead."

Food, therefore, from which the electricity has been drawn, is not in a fit state to be transformed into body tissue. It may be used as fuel to contribute to the energy of the body, but there its value ceases. If, therefore, such a food is taken in excess, and most of us eat more than we need, we develop in our bodies the poisons which are so powerful in producing disease.

That is why, in Dr. White Robertson's opinion, there is so much disease in the world to-day, and why most of the civilized nations show such naked signs of deterioration, compared with the nations of the past who lived largely on uncooked, therefore "live" foods, and who knew nothing of canned meats, vegetables and fruits.

Woolen Trade Crisis

EFFECT OF UNFAIR COMPETITION—YORKSHIRE APPEALS TO THE GOVERNMENT FOR PROTECTION

Owing to "intense foreign competition" the position in the wool-textile industry of the West Riding of Yorkshire is in a critical condition. The ranks of the unemployed have been swollen to an unprecedented degree, and the outlook is exceedingly depressing. The Bradford Chamber of Commerce has already decided to apply for protection under the Safeguarding of Industries Act, and during the week a deputation from the local Manufacturers' Federation brought the serious position of the industry before the Board of Trade. In placing the facts before the Government department Mr. E. H. Gates, stated that recently a certain firm of wool-combers had put their workpeople on short time, this being the first occasion that it had happened in the history of the firm for forty years. In the Shipley district alone, a comparatively small one, there were 2,000 unemployed, and during the past month trade union benefit figures, which did not come within the purview of Government relief figures, showed a 40 per cent. increase in short time among spinners and weavers in Bradford and district. There was no doubt about the cause of this severe depression. It was due to the competition of goods from foreign countries whose currencies had seriously depreciated, and thus had enabled them to undercut British manufacturers.

At the present day foreign firms were booking orders in the home market for the spring trade. The fabrics that would be supplied for these orders would, of course, not be up to the same quality as English cloth, and yet they would prevent orders being given to English manufacturers. Some people, while admitting the serious position of affairs, had been advising West Riding manufacturers to turn to the export trade for relief. Such people, it was charitable to suppose, were entirely ignorant of the tremendous risks that the West Riding had already undertaken in giving credit to foreign firms. An extremely adventurous policy had been pursued in this regard with the main object of trying to keep their workpeople in employment and their mills running. Sir Sydney Chapman, on behalf of the Board of Trade, replied sympathetically to the case put before him. What they were asked to do was to set up a committee under the Safeguarding of Industries Act with a view to the imposition of a countervailing duty on imports from foreign countries with depreciated currencies. What he asked the deputation to consider was that if the committee were set up there would be a certain lapse of time during its deliberations, and any recommendation which it came to would have to be put before the House of Commons. Only a resolution of the House of Commons could validate a duty. That section of the Safeguarding of Industries Act which they wished to invoke would expire in August, 1924. Would not the effect of moving in the matter mean that there would be a great rush of imports now, and before the machinery of the Act could be set properly in motion the Act would be almost due to expire? Mr. Gates, in reply, pointed out that from his practical experience of the trade, the effect of an announcement that the Board of Trade was going to move would be to restore confidence in the British manufacturer. In an announcement were made to-day Bradford would be busy to-morrow in a new atmosphere of confidence. After some general discussion Sir Sydney Chapman stated that a committee had been already set up under Sir George Barnes to inquire into the general effect on industry of depreciated currencies. He admitted that he was very much impressed by the documentary evidence which had been put before him as to the loss of orders by Yorkshire manufacturers. Members of the deputation expressed gratification with the reception they met and the impression

Forty-Four Years in the Service of the Public—The Evening Telegram.

Our Montreal Letter.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)
THE APPLICATIONS FOR HELP ARE LARGE.

In a large and growing city like Montreal, the applications for help are very numerous, notwithstanding the fact that the employment conditions have been greatly improved. The Director of Public Charities, Mr. A. Chevalier, says that all through the summer months the Meurling Refuge, the city shelter, has housed an average of seventy men a night. Most of these are sick or convalescing, but the fact remains, they are homeless and out of work. It is anticipated that the close of navigation, harvesting and outdoor construction work, will see a large number seeking help at the Institution. Mr. Chevalier has six men and women of the Public Assistance Department looking after the needy sick. Every day several patients present themselves at the city hospitals for treatment and claim they are too poor to look after their treatment. If the facts are as presented the city and province divide the cost of hospital fees. If the patient is able to contribute anything he is requested to do so.

In the case of immigrants who have been in the country less than five years deportation is sought if there is danger that the person will become a public charge. Until he is well enough to be safely transported, the hospital gives requisite care and treatment.

Previous to 1914 homeless men had to be looked after in the police stations and shared the cells with the prisoners. This was not at all an ideal condition, Mr. Chevalier stated, and the utility of the Refuge has many times been demonstrated.

The per diem cost of a public patient was about $2.00, of which the city and province each pay a third. If the patient can, he is asked to contribute the balance.

THE ANNUAL REPORT OF THE CONValesCENT HOME.

The annual report of the Montreal Convalescent Home shows that the representatives of four religions and twelve nationalities, were among the 181 patients treated there during the past year.

From countries as far distant as India and Russia they came, but the great majority were Canadians, Roman Catholic and Protestant patients were equal in numbers, the other two religions being Hebrew and Greek Orthodox.

The cost of maintaining one patient for the day was $1.56, and the average stay of each patient was 26 days. The Home which was organized to supplement the work of the hospitals, and to care for those sick people who, while being well enough to permit of their being moved from the hospital to make room for more serious cases, still require skilled attention and feeding, is dependent on voluntary contributions, and relies almost wholly on the collections made on the annual tag day, which was held a few days ago. The new officers of the Home are:—Hon. Presidents, Lady Hingston, and Mrs. John McMartin; President, Miss May Stewart; vice-Presidents, Miss E. Muriel Fraser, and Mrs. M. W. Hackett; Hon. Treasurer, Miss Mary E. Jones; Hon. Secretaries, Miss Mary Rafferty, and Miss Margaret Walsh; Business Manager, Miss Sarah P. Tansey. Among the Life Governors are: Lord Adair, Mrs. W. I. McDunnell, Mrs. John McMartin, P. M. Wickham, and Leo G. Ryan.

YOUTHFUL ROBBERIES ARE GROWING.

The youth of to-day are being well trained by some persons in many evil habits, stealing forming the principal one. The habit is becoming an epidemic and "the gangs" are working all over the city. Here are a few examples of their work:

Three boys of ages ranging from 7 to 9, broke the seal on a C. P. R. freight car, entered the car and stole 112 pounds of butter valued at $40, and thus landed before Judge Choquet in the Juvenile Court. They are remanded for trial.

Capt. Coleman, of the C. F. R. Police declares that the case is most serious as the railroad has suffered at the hands of boy gangs who break car seals, sometimes for the pure "fun" of causing trouble to officials. He alleges that the three lads taken also are responsible for the breaking of a number of plate glass windows in passenger cars, and the charge will be investigated.

One boy of 13, less imaginative than the railroad gang, admitted to-day he had taken a sack of beets from a garden near his house.

Just think of boys of such an age able to accomplish such work. I'm afraid that others much older, and better acquainted with such things must have been behind the scenes. It is almost unbelievable, that mere children, should have the nerve and strength necessary to do such things. And yet they did them.

Police Inspector Robert, in pyjamas, and revolver in hand, aided in the arrest of three members of a gang of five fifteen-year-old boys who broke into the store on the Inspector's property, and under his home at 1842 Ontario Street East, at 1.35 o'clock in the morning, as they were preparing to decamp with clothing valued at over $2,500.

Two members of the juvenile gang escaped in the darkness while a patrol fired at them with revolvers. In their flight they dropped $500 worth of goods, police say. The three caught were found hiding under piles of underwear on a top shelf in the dry goods store rented by Mrs. John Boranowski, and were pulled down legs first.

Sergeant Alonius Desjardins and Constable-Chauffeur Gihault, forming a section of Chief Belanger's new night automobile patrol, were driving thru a lane behind Ontario Street east, when they saw the boys run from the yard at the rear of the store and the Police Inspector's home. The officers jumped from the automobile and chased them. When they refused to stop the Sergeant fired four shots over their heads, but in the darkness the boys dodged into branch lanes and yards and escaped.

Returning to the yard the officers discovered the rear door of the Boranowski dry goods store had been broken. The sound of revolver shots had aroused Inspector Robert and, alerted only in his pyjamas, he joined the officers in searching the store. Constable Caron, of the Ontario Street police station, was on patrol in the neighbourhood and came running up at the sound of the shots also.

The police claim that besides the $500 worth of goods dropped by the boys who escaped, overcoats, suits, and cloth to the value of $2,000 were found bundled up in the store ready to be removed.

Mrs. Robert, the Police Inspector's wife, heard someone moving around in the store shortly before the boys were discovered, but thought that the tenant was working late there.

The three boys held will be dealt with by the Juvenile Court.

A youth was sent to the Penitentiary for 3 years for stealing a gramophone from his mother. Thieves are also found in many of our schools. Automobiles and bicycles are also stolen, repaired, and part of the machine altered. The youthful schools of vice are growing, the parents seem to be powerless, and "the gang" can even get away from the mighty arm of the law. It's simply fierce.

PROPER INSTITUTIONS FOR DRUG ADDICTS.

The rounding up of the "dope" fiends has kept the special squad of police and detectives very busy of late. John Chinaman figures prominently in the raids. One man arrested recently had 98 decks of cocaine; 75 on him and 23 in a house. What puzzles the authorities is where all the "dope" is coming from. The recent net, the big machine, the men behind the scenes that control the situation; these are the things that still remain a mystery. Young girls are becoming addicts.

The jails are not the place for drug addicts, there should be institutions run by the government where the proper treatment can be given to these cases, declared Dr. Dunstan Gray at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Kiwanis Club in the Windsor Hotel. Dr. Gray stated that all nations have used and abused narcotics. In China the use of opium does not have the same effect on the colored races as on the white people. He went on to say that it is very hard at the present time to stop the drug traffic as narcotics are so very easily smuggled into the country and may be obtained in Germany and Switzerland for $1.99 a pound, and sold in this country at enormous profits. In his opinion the only way to put a stop to this trade is to control the source of supply of the world for these drugs so that only a certain amount, which would be used for medical purposes, would be sold by the producers. In conclusion he made an appeal to the members of the club to help in getting the government to establish institutions for the treatment of drug victims who have been arrested.

WILL PAY FORTY CENTS ON THE DOLLAR.

The latest report in reference to the Home Bank is that depositors may be paid forty cents on the dollar if they wait long enough and the realization of slow assets come up to the modest expectations of the curator. The shareholders of the bank will have to pay every cent that can be collected of their double liability. The assets and liabilities show a deficit of $3,000,000. Parliament is to discuss the situation, and it is claimed that the Canadian National Railway had money deposited in the defunct institution.

THE LAW MUST TAKE ITS COURSE.

Women who keep disorderly houses cannot expect leniency just because they happen to have been jailed for selling liquor illegally. Recorder Geoffron made it clear when he refused to reduce the sentence of $100.00 and costs or three months in jail passed on a woman who kept a resort on Notre Dame Street west.

"I would point out that the prisoner has been in jail since September 10, and that she was fined and given a month in jail for selling and keeping liquor illegally," said the prisoner's counsel, who suggested that the three months referred to by the Recorder in his sentence might date from the day of arrest.

"Oh, no," replied the judge. "I cannot allow that. If they offend the law they must take the consequences."

McGILL CRICKET TEAM ESTABLISHED A RECORD.

The curtain rang down for cricket on Saturday, Sept. 29th, at the McGill Campus, when the All-Montreal team met defeat at the hands of McGill. The All-Montreal team batted first, and Thompson of Lachine and Taylor of Westmount faced the bowling of Mitchell and Ince of McGill. The second ball from Mitchell's over took Thompson's wicket, but after that the score mounted up to 105 before the next wicket fell. Bott bowled four out in two overs, and the score read 109 for 5 wickets. The score started to soar again when a catch from Boffe bowling sent the sixth wicket down. Gill, a recruit from the second eleven, bowled the next man and All-Montreal had netted 167 for 7 wickets and declared their innings finished. McGill started their work with Godsell and Goodman. When the latter had made 22, he was caught out. Wanstead joined Godsell after young Gill who had added nearly 30 to the score, was run out. Wanstead got bowled by Clarke and the score was then about 135.

Godsell made the best average at batting for McGill. Clarke the best average for bowling. Frank de Lachine was the only other player during the League matches that made a century against McGill. Arthur Burgess "the little man" of the Verdun team, made a century against Ontario, and saved the day for Quebec. Arthur is considered the best bowler in the League. He was missing from the All-Montreal team on Saturday.

G. J. C. Potter was an interested spectator at the last match, owing to injuries received to his back while playing tennis in the morning. His trip to Cambridge has been delayed owing to some difficulties as regards his examination papers. The season of 1923 will go down in the annals of cricket as being the most successful on record.

JOY RIDERS MEET DEATH IN AUTOMOBILE.

Returning home after a picnic a party of thirteen in an auto truck came tearing down Guy Street owing to the chauffeur losing control of the machine. The truck struck an automobile, swerved across the street hitting a pole and ran on the sidewalk where all the occupants were dashed out. Two struck their heads against the curb stone and died a few moments after, while another of the party is dying in the hospital. Mayor McCarthy of Henryville, Iberville County, in camping with some friends was going to attend a banquet at St.

Alban's Vermont, when rushing a steep hill the car skidded, fell, an embankment and the Maye instantly killed. His companion, caped. The hill where the car happened is situated between H. Springs and Swanton, Vt., and considered a very dangerous one.

Ruhr Occupation
Working Hardship
to Swedish Mines

Kiruna, North of Arctic Circle, Sweden, October 13. (A.P.)—France's occupation of the Ruhr, and the resultant collapse of the Swedish iron ore trade with Germany, have brought hardship to Sweden's great northern ironfields and aroused enmity to France in the large Arctic areas of north Sweden and Norway which depend upon the pay-rolls of the iron districts for their existence.

In 1922 the Kiruna fields used to send three shiploads of ore daily to the Norwegian port of Narvik. At the present time there is scarcely a shipload a week. Germany formerly took the greater part of this ore. She has the furnaces to handle it, but her purchases have ceased since the flurry in the Ruhr.

England and France have no furnaces suitable for the reduction of the Swedish ore. The Bethlehem Steel Company has furnaces which are capable of using this ore, and some of it goes to America. Sweden exported nearly 5,500,000 metric tons of iron ore in 1922, and over 80 per cent. of this went to Germany. As early as 1918 Germany bought over 3,000,000 tons of Swedish ore for the Ruhr furnaces.

The railway which runs from Lulea, on the Gulf of Bothnia, to Narvik, north of the Arctic Circle in Norway, lives on the ore traffic. It hauls export ore from Kiruna to Narvik, and from Gellivare and other mines further south to Lulea. But the latter port freezes, and in mid-winter the export ore reaches tide-water entirely through the Norwegian port, Narvik.

Ore and wood products are practically the only freight which this great section of Lapland affords its single railway, which is entirely electrified and is the most northern electric railway in the world. Cities of 10,000 people have sprung up here in the heart of Lapland at Kiruna and Gellivare, where mountains of iron ore are being demolished by gigantic electric shovels and rushed to tidewater in steel dumpcars. These load directly into steamers at Lulea and Narvik, after the manner that the Mesaba Range pours its ore into steamers at Superior, Wisconsin, for the use of furnaces in Indiana or Pennsylvania.

The crews at these great ore centers now have only three or four days of work a week, and are feeling the pinch which threatens to become worse unless France and Germany reach some agreement on the Ruhr situation.

Great Britain has about 1,000,000 tons of iron ore stored at Narvik. In addition there are about 1,000,000 tons more which belong to various commercial organizations. This accumulated before the armistice. Great Britain bought her part to keep it from going to Germany, but the British furnaces cannot use it, and apparently it has been impossible to find markets elsewhere.

Spain and Morocco yield an abundance of ore which is adapted to British and French furnaces as they are now equipped. If German furnaces do not speedily come into the market again for the Swedish ores, and if Great Britain does not alter its steel industry to handle Swedish ore, the outlook for the Swedish iron mines is far from promising.

Sweden, furthermore, is facing new competition from Chile. Strangely enough, Swedish builders are constructing some gigantic ore ships for the Bethlehem Steel Co., which are to be used in carrying Chilean ore to the United States. These vessels have several times the capacity of the average ore ship which has been operating from Narvik and Lulea, and can handle the product more cheaply.

Allan R. Crawford

LONDON.—An intimate sketch of Allan R. Crawford, the University of Toronto student who raised the British flag on Wrangel Island and took possession of the island in the name of King George V., on Sept. 18, 1921, and who perished, along with three companions, while trying to get to Siberia from Wrangel Island, which the party left on Jan. 28, 1923, has been contributed to the Manchester Guardian by a friend and classmate of young Crawford, as follows:—The political significance of Wrangel Island or the distinction of commanding a Polar expedition were nebulous ideas in Allan Crawford's mind when he first learned that Stefansson required men with scientific training for research in the North. Nor was there the bait of material reward. It was Dr. W. A. Perks, professor of geology at the University of Toronto, who first suggested that Allan, one of his students, might communicate with the explorer. Presumably his task would be to make records of minerals, rocks, and fossils for use in connection with the main expedition to follow in two or three years time. A chat which he had together after completing our third year examinations in 1921 illustrates his attitude. The Canadian student's concern in the long vacation of four months is what he can find to do, rather than where he is going. Allan had a rather startling idea. Producing a telegram from from Stefansson he said:—"Here's what I'm thinking of. It will probably take two or three years, but it's the chance of a lifetime. The disadvantage is that people who go on these expeditions usually return with their digestions ruined." Three years of university life had changed his viewpoint. Here was a chance which differed from the usual grind of civil service or commercial life. "I find I can't concentrate as I could in school," Allan told me. "I'm restless. Perhaps I would be able to settle down after a couple of years of this sort of thing." Crawford was young—just twenty at the time; a couple of years would stabilize his ideas, and then he would return to finish his B.A. course. He was undertaking a sort of extended trip to gain experience. He did not need to expose himself to Arctic perils for the sake of making a name. He would have done that in any case. When he matriculated from University of Toronto Schools in 1918 he captured not one, but several scholarships, in mathematics and science. His university record in the honor geology course gave great promise. But he doubted whether it was worth while—he wasn't satisfied. Allan Crawford is a native of Hamilton, Ont., although Toronto claims him as her own. Things he learned when a Boy Scout in the former city were probably his first preparation for his Arctic activities. When the Normal College was moved from Hamilton to Toronto, Professor J. T. Crawford and family followed, and Allan and his young sister went to school there. Everybody at the University in 1921 knew Allan Crawford—a tall, dark, and handsome youth. His humor was of the jerky, spontaneous variety—the sort which makes you laugh in spite of yourself. He was one of the trimvirates who inaugurated "Gobbling," a Toronto comic journal which has grown from a university magazine into an international monthly, with a large circulation in Canada and the United States. A. R. Crawford was the chief of the business staff when this enterprise was commenced. "A.R.'s" extra-academic activities extended into the realm of sport. He represented his university on the "grid-iron"—and Canadian football is very strenuous, as the nickname implies.

Says England's Future Depends Upon More Babies

LONDON.—England's declining birth-rate is giving the authorities cause for concern. For the three months ended in June the birth-rate per 1,000 of population in England and Wales was only 20.7. The registrar general says that "this is the lowest birth-rate recorded in any second quarter of the year, except during the period of war." In 1913 it was 24.9, in 1914 24.5, in 1920 26.6, in 1921 23.9 and in 1922 21.1. In the second quarter of 1923 it fell to 20.7, which is a drop of nearly 6 per cent. in three years.

"If the birthrate continues to fall at this headlong rate," observes the Daily Express, "Britain's very existence as a nation is menaced." The paper asks what the chief causes of the slump in babies is, and gives the answer itself by saying: "First, unemployment, and second, shortage of houses. 'The working man cannot afford to marry,' it says, 'and the homeless man dare not marry. Therefore, in order to arrest the fall of the birth-rate, we must solve our employment problem, and our housing problem."

Stuffy Head Cold?
Mentholatum
will relieve it.

It is necessary to face the facts, the Express adds. "Without a steady and constant birthrate the British Empire would cease to exist. Every child born in these islands is a potential producer of wealth. If our supply of children fails, our empire will decline and fall like Rome. The Empire has been built up on emigration from the mother country to the daughter countries over the seas. The new lands have drawn their new blood from the old stock in the motherland. It is our duty to look a generation ahead, so that in 1943 there will be a stream of young men and young women flowing from the old home land to the new lands."

Communists Lead Mobs

IN RAID ON SAXONY FARMS.

DRESDEN.—(A.P.)—Peasants in the Mulde Valley could scarcely believe their eyes recently when at day-break they went to the fields to work and discovered that hundreds of acres of wheat and other grains in the shock had disappeared like magic over night. The Mulde District, it developed, had been invaded at night by hundreds of unemployed from the cities and towns, and the grain carried away on their backs. In other localities the unemployed became even bolder and invaded the farms in broad daylight, defied the peasants, and helped themselves not only to grain which had been cut, but picked the ripening fruit, and even dug up whole fields of potatoes, cabbages and other vegetables. The raiders said they were hungry and that they had decided upon force as a means of relieving their stress. In reporting the case, the authorities announced that the movement was in the hands of Communists. Only a few of the unemployed men were Communists, the German police reported, but because of empty stomachs they were easily led by the radicals. In some instances the crowds numbered 300 to 400 persons made up of men, women, and children.

Harvest of the Sea

Boats Endangered by Shoals of Fish.

Glenasm Bay, County Antrim, is so full of fish that boating there is reported to be highly dangerous. Patrick McLaughlin, with a crew of four men, was returning with a boat load when the vessel ran into a big shoal and nearly capsized. The men were thrown from their seats, and one, jumping overboard, swam ashore. Many people have arrived from surrounding districts and are filling bags, baskets, buckets and wheelbarrows with fish of all kinds. As there are no means of transit, Irish cities and towns will not benefit from the great sea harvest.
