THE PRESENT COUNCIL.

What the Mayor and Aldermen Promised Before Last Year's Election.

Ratepayers May Judge for Themselves if the Record Has Been Satisfactory.

The annual civic elections are now close at hand, for Monday, January 14, is the day for nominating candidates.

Perhaps it might not be amiss to go back a year and see what the promises that the present Mayor and Council made to the ratepayers last year before the elections.

Mr. Tesque's promises were very definitely set forth in a card published in the press in January, 1894. In that address he promised to use every effort to carry out to completion the present separate system of sewers.

Ald. Dwyer advocated the completion of the sewerage system, and though he did not object to the sewers being built on the local improvement plan, opposed the extension of that principle to streets and sidewalks.

Ald. Lodingham assured the electors that he believed in doing away with business taxes and trade licenses, and wished to see the taxes placed directly on the land.

Ald. Baker promised in general terms to work for the good of the city.

Ald. Vigelius in promising the electors promised to do his best to reduce the assessment, as he considered it too high.

Ald. Styles advocated the improvement of the park and the reclamation of the James Bay mud flats.

Ald. Keith-Wilson promised to oppose any unnecessary expenditure. He condemned the system of carrying out public works through large contractors from outside the city.

Ald. Humphrey, while desirous of seeing the sewerage system improved, came out strongly in favor of having city work done by municipal employees.
