Correspondence Between the British and French Authorities.

Salisbury Takes a Firm Stand in the Matter.

Britain Will Not Admit of a Compromise in the Case.

The Situation Considered Very Grave -Salisbury's Course Sustained by the London Press.

London, Oct. 10 .- The foreign office has issued a Fashoda, blue book, giving the correspondence between the French and British Governments.

It begins with a dispatch dated Dec. 10, 1897, from Sir Edmund Monson, British ambassador at Paris, to Lord Salisbury, referring to rumors of the massacre of the Marchand expedition, and expressing the ambassador's satisfaction that he has been allowed to acquaint M. Hanotaux, French foreign minister, with Lord Salisbury's view that, if other questions are adjusted, Great Britain will make no difficulty regarding the French claim on the northern and eastern shores of Lake Tchad. The right of any European power, except Great Britain, to occupy any part of the Nile Valley, ever, is not admitted. M. Hanotaux replied on Dec. 24 in a long dispatch of respectful protest against Lord Salisbury's views.

THE BLUE NILE EXPEDITION. On Aug. 2 of this year Lord Salisbury wrote Lord Cromer, British diplomatic agent at Cairo, giving him instructions that, after the capture of Khartoum, two of the flotillas should ascend to Fashoda and go up the Blue Nile as far as it should prove navi-gable for steamers. Under these instructions, the sirdar was to personally command the Fashoda expedition, and to take a few troops if desirable, the object being to assert Great Britain's sphere of influence in the Nile Valley. Sir Edmund Monson reported to Lord Salisbury, a communication in which M. Delisse, French foreign minister, announced that Marchand had no authority to decide on questions of right, and had been instructed to abstain from any action likely to lead to local conflict. M. Delisse further expressed a conviction that the matter was susceptible of arrangement by means of discussion. To this Lord Salisbury replied, on Sept. 9, that Great Britain regarded the operations of the sirdar, General Kitchener, as placing all the territories of Khalifa Abdullah by right of conquest in the hands of the British and Egyptian Governments, and insisted that this contention

ADMITTED OF NO DISCUSSION. Then follow various dispatches, recording the discussions between Sir Edmund Monson and M. Delisse, the latter explaining that Marchand was now virtually a lieutenant to the Loitard expedition, and that therefore the situation at Fashoda, even if Marchand were there, could not be dangerous, as Sir Edmund Monson had repregented. On Sept. 15-still following the blue book—the sirdar reported the dispatch of his expedition to Fashoda, fully confirming the announcements already cabled to the Associated Press, including the fact that Gen. Kitchener's arrival there prevented a second dervish attack on Marchand. The French officer notified the sirdar that he had concluded a treaty, which he had sent to France for ratification, whereby the Shillocks had placed themselves under French care.

MARCHAND ORDERED TO OCCU- resentation by the powers. PY FASHODA.

Marchand replied in the negative to Gen. Kitchener's question whether he was prepared to resist the hoisting of the Egyptian flag, but he maintained that he had orders from the French Government to occupy Fashoda. On the departure of the British forces Gen. Kitchener notified Major Marchand, in writing, that all transportation of war material on the Nile was absolutely prohibited. The sirdar concludes: "The chief Shillocks came to our camp and positively denied that they had concluded any treaty with Marchand, while all the Shillocks declared their allegiance to the British Government. Moreover, Marchand was in such a precarious position that nothing could have prevented his annihilation by the dervishes had we been a fortnight later in crushing the khalifa."

BRITAIN'S STAND. Other dispatches indicate that M. Delisse declined Great Britain's request for the immediate withdrawal of Lieut. Marchand, and that Great Britain agreed to dispatch a message for the French Government as a matter of courtesy, without accepting any responsibility for the results it that the matter admitted of no compromise. In the final dispatch appearing in the blue book, Lord Salisbury, under date of Oct. 3, instructs Sir Edmund Monson to inform M. Delisse that the latter's message to Major Marchand has been sent, but that Great Britain views the Marchand mission as having no special significance whatever.

might entail, and still maintaining

BRITISH PRESS COMMENT. London, Oct. 10 .- All the morning papers applaud Lord Salisbury's firmness in the Fashoda question, and the fact that he has approved all the doings of Gen. Kitchener.

The Times says: "While not despairing of an amicable settlement, we cannot but think the situation extremely grave. Lord Salisbury has taken up a position from which retreat is impossible after the publication of the blue book."

The Daily Chronicle thinks the situation only "grave on paper, and not in The Daily News says: "We hope the sirdarship.

Lord Salisbury will be able to provide a golden bridge for M. Delcasse."

for London. Arrested at North Yakima, Wash., and Tricked Into Canada.

Is in Charge of Detective Nickle and Will in All Probability Reach Here on Friday Night and Be Locked Up on the Charge of Murdering P. C.

Madie Brown, the alleged murderer of the late P. C. Michael Toohey, will soon be safe behind the bars of London jail. Detective Nickle has been away for over a week, but his whereabouts have been kept a secret by the police authorities. Brown left Victoria, B. C., last night at 9 o'clock, in custhe Ontario provincial police, and if they come direct by the C. P. R. the trio will reach here on Friday at 8 was received this morning: Victoria, B. C., Oct. 10.—Marion Brown, alias Thomas Allen, the crippled mulatto outlaw of Ontario, who has been in the tolls of east by the C. P. R. last night to answer for the wanton killing of Po-lice Constable Michael Toohey, at London, on the 24th of June last. The crime was one of the most cold-blooded and deliberate nature, and the Ontario detectives have consequently exerted every energy to bring the assassin to justice. Step by step brown was traced all the way across the continent to North Yakima, Wash., where Detective Nickle identified him from a photo and description. The identity was confirmed and an Ontario officer was immediately sent west. TRICKED INTO CANADA. The arrest was made at Yakima, and from there Brown was taken to Seat, tle, while extradition proceedings were initiated. These are always vexatiously slow, and the eastern detective knew a better trick by far. Liquor and morphine were smuggled into Brown's cell, and then he was taken out of the Seattle jail under the firm belief that his liberators were friends. From Seattle he was got to Port Angeles, and from that port the alleged colored killer was brought here by the steamer Garland yesterday. As soon as the boat touched Canadian soil the arrest was made by Constables Redgrove and Anderson. PUT UP A HARD FIGHT. Although Brown has only one leg, he is prodigiously strong, and fought furiously when he realized that he had been trapped. The shooting for which Brown must answer to the law was committed while the murdered officer was endeavoring to make an arrest for assaulting a Grand Trunk crossing watchman. The negro, it is alleged, was then chief of a party of tramps, and had been in Ontario but a few hours, and never before in London. In Texas he is reported to have s. record of four killings and several jail breakings. His lawless career was cut short through the vigilance of Yakima, who made the original arrest, and will receive the $500 reward if Brown is convicted.

No One Need Go Astray-Many "Rules" for Avoiding Toadstools Are Useless.

At this season of the year, with its numerous rains and heavy dews, all varieties of mushrooms are very plentiful, and many people are scouring the woods and fields in search of this esculent addition to our dietary. R. J. Coryell, horticulturist for the Detroit park board, who is familiar with the cultivated and wild mushroom, had the following to say on this interesting

"Because of the poisonous nature of some of the mushroom family, commonly known as toadstools, many people refrain from eating them. On the other hand many pick and use all kinds indiscriminately, or blindly follow many rules that are fallacious, such, for instance, as the following: All those that peel are not poisonous, or those that do not have a disagreeable taste are harmless."

Continuing, Mr. Coryell said: "The most deadly of the mushroom family peels readily, and is tasteless. There are other rules, such as: Those that separate from the stem, or all that have pink gills, or those that do not discolor when bruised, are edible. These rules are erroneous, as nonedible or poisonous kinds are found in each class. The following rule to avoid the poisonous kinds likewise have many exceptions: Those that do not have the stem in the center of the cap, or those that grow in damp, dark places, or those that have hollow stems. Edible mushrooms are found in all of these classes. The only way to distinguish the edible kinds is to become acquainted with them, and know them as you know a white oak from a red

"Mushrooms may be poisonous, because of three reasons. First, those of the edible kinds that have commenced to decay; second, those that are tough, woody and indigestible. These are inclass-those that contain an active poison. This class is comprised in one sub-family (amanita) of the common mushroom. It consists of a number of species, which vary in color. All of these have the following marks by which any person may know them: The base of the stem close to the ground has a white wrapper around it from which the plant seems to grow, and on pulling the mushroom up the stem comes out of this sheath, as out of a socket. Below the cap, near the top of the stem, and inclosing it, is a ragged membraneous ring similar in substance to the sheath at the base. On top of the cap is a scurf composed of the dried remains of this membrane. This may be worn off in the older specimens. The gills, which are the thin layers on the underside of the cap, are white, as is also the stem. The top of the cap is sticky when

They grow in or near the edges of the woods and are probably rare, as I wife he said: have not found any specimens yet this season. The poisonous principle is an alkaloid that is very deadly. The illeffects on eating this mushroom become apparent in about eight hours after the meal, and fatal results follow course. I believe that atropine is the This mushroom does not show its dangerous character, either raw or cooked, by taste or smell; so it behooves the mushroom hunter to early seek its acquaintance.

"There is an edible mushroom that resembles the amanita in that it has white gills. It is found plentifully at present on all sod land. The cap is white and the base of the stem is enlarged, and this enlargement is nearly globular.

"The most common and the bestknown mushroom is the wild form of the cultivated variety, although some authorities consider it a different species. This has pink gills and is found growing in old pastures. Its stout, sturdy stem, its thick, meaty cap and pink gills are guarantee of genuineness.

"Another plentiful and well-known kind is the 'fairy ring,' or 'button mushroom. It is small, the cap expanding from one-half to about one inch in diameter, cream to brown in color. The gills and stem are about the same color as the cap. Its name, 'fairy ring,' is derived from the fact that it grows in a circle which expands year after year until the ring may be a dozen feet in diameter. They are found in lawns, meadows and commons, and when found are in very thick clusters. These are gathered, dried and thus preserved for future use by many people of this city. A few minutes' soaking in water is all that is necessary to restore them to their natural form and taste.

"The common puff-ball, which is white inside, is one of the edible mushrooms. If, when cut, the knife leaves a stain or discoloration, it is then too old to eat. There is no danger of mistaking it, as it has no poisonous imi-

"Another edible well known but little used mushroom is one whose cap is folded around the stem like a partly closed umbrella. The cap is white with brown ragged patches of membrane scattered over it. This variety is easily distinguished by the old plants melting into an inky fluid. As it turns black it should be used with caution. There is no poisonous kind that turns into an inky fluid like this one, so there can be no mistake made in gathering this kind when it is once recognized. It is called the Maned mushroom.

"In the fall there is an edible mushroom found growing on the dead wood of the elm. In its your ger stages the of wild animals are gradually dimingills and flesh are white. Later on they turn brown, and the top of the cap becomes leathery. There is no other kind with white gills that grows on the elm, so this is another safe one on which the novice may depend. "After knowing and avoiding the poisonous amanita, there is but little danger that the injurious properties of any other mushroom will not become apparent when tasted raw or by a disagreeable odor when stewed.

"When raw, should they have an acrid, burning, or nauseous taste, or when cooking they appear slimy or uninviting, they should be rejected."

MISS JULIA ARTHUR IN "A LADY OF QUALITY."

That very daring, romantic piece of fiction, Mrs. Burnett's "A Lady of Quality,"depicting the picturesque personalities, language and scenes of the seventeenth century, which is to be presented at the Grand tonight, has made the most dramatic, interesting and unique play of modern times. Clorinda, the beautiful and dashing creation, sweeps through the stirring scenes, ring scenes, she presents a Gainsborough portrait of Diana, Duchess of Devonshire, where-in that noble dame seems about to step with a swift stride out of a frame. Each of the characters is drawn with as free a hand; the besotted old father, the saintly Sister Anne, the black-hearted John Oxon, the manly Dustanwolde, and the gallant Duke Osmonde all stand out in vigorous delineation. To secure actors to present these characters in the clear-cut fashion Mrs. Burnett has described them, no expense was spared, 57 years and 6 months. He had been ill for eight weeks. Mr. Nicholson was well and favorably known throughout sent these characters in the clear-cut

Too much can hardly be said of the scenic effects. The plot is founded on historic facts pertaining to the Samoan uprising, and the possibility of stage effect has been pressed to their utmost limit, to faithfully show that awful Samoan hurricane which swept the harbor of Apia, causing terrible loss of life, wrecking the American warships Vandalia, Nipsic, and Trenton, and the German ships Adler, Elba and Olga, and from which the British ship Calliope only escaped by performing the bravest and most dangerous maneuver on record in naval annals, and which she was cheered on board the less fortunate Trenton.

CUBAN COWARDS

A British Officer Describes Their Tao tics at Santiago-Ridiculous Soldiering.

A mile to the north of El Caney, on the summit of the first foot-hill, stood a block-house of the smallest type, with a garrison of ten men at the most. The task of attacking this fortress was intrusted to several hundred of our Cuban allies, who advanced against it at the first peep of day. These men were infantry, excellently armed and equipped by the United States Government, but they apparently misunderstood the situation and adopted the more dignified, and possibly congenial, role of field artillery. in pursuance of this idea they occupied an excellent artillery position about one mile to the east of the block-house, and clung to it with unparalleled tenacity throughout the day. Taking every advantage of cover, they subjected the distant stronghold to a ceaseless and withering fire from their newly acquired Springfields, to the great detriment, I fear, of their own shoulders, and to the vast indifference of the enemy. Possibly the block-house was struck—certainly none of its occupants were-and beyond the occasional and contemptuous reply of a single Mauser shot, it is doubtful if the garrison fully realized that it was the abject of attack. At about 2 in the afternoon a messenger arrived, breathless, to state that the Cuban forces had run out of ammunition, and needed a fresh supply at once. Gen. Chaffee's reply was prompt, spicy, and vigorous, so much so, indeed, that the Cuban left even more hurriedly than he came, and we heard no more of our allies till the fight was safely over.-Capt. A. H. Lee, R.A., British military attache, in the October Scribner's.

GET FLESH.

Get Strength, Vigor, Clear Complexion and Good Digestion, Not by Patent Medicine, But in Nature's Own Way.

Any honest physician will tell you that there is but one way to get increased flesh; all the patent medicines and cod liver oils to the contrary, notwithstanding. Nature has but one way to increase flesh, strength and vigor, mind and body, and that is through the stomach, by wholesome food, well digested. There is no reason or common sense in other methods whatever.

People are thin, run-down, nervous, pale and shaky in their nerves simply because their stomachs are weak. They may not think they have dyspepsia, but the fact remains that they do not eat enough food, or what they eat is not quickly and properly digested, as it should be. Dr Harlandson says the reason is because the stomach lacks certain digestive acids and peptones, and deficient secretion of gastric juice.

Nature's remedy in such cases is to supply what the weak stomach lacks. There are several good preparations as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, which are designed especially for all stomach troubles, and which cure all digestive weakness on the common-sense plan of furnishing the digestive principles which the stomach lacks.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets give perfect digestion. First effect is to increase the appetite and increased vigor, added fiesh, pure blood and strength of nerve and muscle is the perfectly natural result. Stuart's Dyspensia Tablets is the safest tonic known, and will cure any form of stomach trouble except cancer

LONDON DOWNS PETROLIA. frees and flowers, trees and flowers, London's in it, by the powers; Tries and rouges, tries and rouges, When London plays, the enemy loses; Cis! Boom! Bah! Cis! Boom! Bah! London! London! 'Rah! 'Rah! Rah!

The air on Saturday resounded with the above ear-splitting cry at Tecum-seh Park, where some 200 enthusiasts had gathered to see some 30 odd longhaired chasers of the pigskin get their beautiful bangs nicely uncurled in battling for supremacy.

The make-up of the two teams as they appeared on the field was as follows:

London-Back, Spry; halves, Peel, put up a strong game before man McNee, and Piggott; quarter, Hobbs; scrimmage, Northworthey, Taylor and Christie; wings, Kerrigan, Hodges, Macfie, Murray, Wilson, Payne and Ashplant.

Petrolia—Back, Blake; halves, Scott, Boyce and Dawson; quarter, Isbister; scrimmage, Webb, Prummer and Struthers; wings, Able, Anderson, Phenoix, Brebner, Browscombe and

McKee, Brebner, Browscombe and Dunfield; spare, Jackson. Officers—Referee, Waldrie, Toronto; umpire, Blackwood, Woodstock; goal judges, Chatterton and Thorn, and Mc-

Hattie; timers, Laidlaw and Isbister.
The game started almost on scheduled time, and was, from the spectators' point of view, a splendid one to watch. It was the inauguration of the Rugby season into London, the opposing teams being the juniors of London and Petrolia. The visitors were woefully weak in team work, and in this London excelled. The scrimmaging was hot, but seldom lasted long after the ball was placed, and as a result the game abounded with exciting runs and good tackles.

After the toss for position the ball traveled to Petrolia's quarters, where it remained for some time, and the visitors seemed to be having things their own way. An off-side, however, gave the home team a free kick, and the scene of the game was changed to London's end, and after a few moments of lively scrimmage, and some pretty dashes, the ball finally crossed London's line for a touchdown, scoring four points. Wilson carried it up and Piggott put it over. Spry made the kick. The pigskin was then carried to Petrolia's end, and the visitors put the ball through after a lively scrimmage for a touchdown, tying the score, Struthers carried it over the line. Petrolla rooters went wild, but their joy was shortlived, as London again crossed the line for a touchdown through the excellent team work of the wings and quarter, Hobbs, who rushed it over. The ball stayed in London's quarters, and Hobbs and Peel tried some clever work, but did not score, as half-time sada, Roberta C. also ran.

Fifth race, 7 furlongs, 4-year-olds and

After the rest, the play was fast and furious. The ball was kicked in Petrolia's quarters, where it hovered until Hobbs got a hold of it, after a lively scrimmage, and rushed it over just five minutes after play was resumed. The game was never again in doubt, though Petrolia picked up to some extent, and made some pretty but inef-fective plays. London's half-back line worked together beautifully, and whole team showed that they had taken good advantage of their practicing. The ball was kept in London's end, and Ashplant had it over for another touchdown. The final score was made shortly before time was up. Mc-Nee getting a free kick, and landing a goal for two points. Time was called soon after, and the score totaled 18-4.

Few on ond half and its success was chiefly due 2:151/2; and Handspring, 2, 2:263/4. to the excellent work of Rogers back, combined with fair combination between the forwards. IT'S BOSTON'S PENNANT. Next Saturday will mark the close of the Notional League, but the victory of Boston in the championship race can this time be sooner foretold than it was last year. The pennant question is settled, and Baltimore will have to be contented with second place, while the Cincinnati people have by this time become so reconciled to their slump that they will take third, and be grateful for it. The only real fight of the league is for fourth place between Chicago and Cleveland.

ENGLISHMEN AT CHICAGO. Saturday morning, at the Parkside grounds, Chicago, the English cricketers began a match with a team picked from Chicago's best players. The most of the day was consumed by the Englishmen at the bat. They were all out at 4:30 with a score of 295 runs to their credit. The local players batted for an hour before darkness caused a suspension of play. The Chicagos scored 29 runs with two wickets down.

LONDON DEFEATS CLEVELAND. London added another game to its series of victories this season by defeating on Saturday a team from the Cleveland Golf Club. A finer day for the match could not have been chosen, and the visitors, although beaten by the goodly number of 18 holes, had nothing but praise for the condition of the links and the hospitable treatment accorded them. The struggle between Beckwith, the champion of the Cleveland club, and George Brown was close and exciting, the London player finally winning by one hole. During this match Brown made the record score of 83, while Inglis, who defeated his opponent by 6 holes up, went the double round in 87. Through the courtesy of the officers of Wolseley Barracks, the visiting team were entertained by the local men at luncheon in the barracks mess, and this kindness, together with the large attendance of the fair sex during the pro-

Pittsburg Turns Out the Largest Engine Yet Built.

The C. P. R. Will Establish Another Trans-Pacific Line.

Heaviest Engine in Great Britain-A P. and R. Train Does a Mile in 82 Seconds,

NEW TRAFFIC ARRANGEMENT. In Toronto on Saturday a conference was held between representatives of the Intercolonial, Grand Trunk and C. P. R., with a view to entering into a traffic arrangement to send exports over these lines during the winter months particularly from Sydney, C. B., to Newfoundland. A tri-weekly line of steamers is to be established between Sydney and Point aux Bales. The railways will make important reduction to secure the business. The new service will aim at diverting the traffic between Canada and Newfoundland from its present route during the winter months, which is by way of New York.

COSTLY WORK.

So far this year nineteen miles of charges. track have been elevated in Chicago, at a cost to the roads of $10,000,000 Nearly every line entering the city that had not already elevated a portion of its tracks is doing so, as they have discovered that it is to their advantage to have elevated tracks, and the work can be accomplished cheaper than by waiting a few years, as they believe that eventually it will be absolutely necessary. Their suburban service can be largely improved by it, particularly in the way of running fast

MILE IN 32 SECONDS.

A fast run has recently been made Philadelphia and Reading road and the record established for the fastest mile ever run in the United States, the time being 32 seconds which is two seconds faster than the fast mile made over the New York Central. The run over the Reading was made by a train made up of an engine and four cars, the engine weighing 227,000 pounds, and the cars 236,-800 pounds. The train left Atlantic City at 8.21 a.m. and arrived at Canton, 55.5 miles distant, at 9.09, making the run in 48 minutes and the fastest mile of the run in 32 seconds. HEAVIEST ENGINE IN GREAT BRITAIN. The Great Northern Railway is thoroughly testing a new engine of greater power than has yet run on its line, says the Westminster Gazette. It is the heaviest engine in the kingdom, weighing 58 tons, or 99 tons with tender. It has ten wheels, four coupled wheels being 6 feet 6 inches in diameter, while the cylinders are 19 inches by 24 inches stroke. The boiler is 14 feet 8 inches long in the barrel, and is 4 feet 8 inches in diameter, giving 1,442 square feet of heating surface and 26.75 square feet of grate area. The boiler pressure is 175 pounds, and the cylinder pressure is 131 pounds. This locomotive has made some runs on the fine road of the Great Northern, be-tween King's Cross and York, and the results obtained suggest that a number of that class will be built for next year. The performance of the Dunalastair, however, has not yet been equaled, the greatest speed got being a fraction over 73 miles per hour. COMPETITOR FOR THE G. T. R.

According to a story emanating from well-informed railway officials, Huron is to have a new eastern outlet with strong competition to the Grand Trunk for eastern and Canadian business in both passenger and freight. The purchase of the car ferry International from the Grand Trunk Company by the Lake Erie and Detroit River Railway Company the past week is said to be part of the plan to carry this scheme into effect. According to the story, the Flint and Pere Marquette Railway Hereafter the business of the North Shore line at Cincinnati will be looked after by the agent of the Blue and Canada Southern lines. The three lines operate over the Michigan Central.

The handsomest private car built by the Wagner Palace Car Company was turned out of the shops at East Buffalo the other afternoon. It is named "Spreckles," and is owned by Claus Spreckles, the sugar king of San Francisco.

Last Tuesday the Pittsburg Locomotive Works turned out the largest engine that has ever been built. engine alone weighs 220,000 pounds, and with the tender carrying ten tons of coal and 5,000 gallons of water, the total weight of engine and tender is 310,000 pounds.

President Hill, of the Great North-ern, says if the rates in force twenty years ago were applied to the business done by the Great Northern for the last twelve months they would give it $38,000,000 more than was collected during that period. Still, he says, he hopes that the reduction in rates is not yet by any means at an

The Canadian Pacific Railroad will establish another trans-Pacific line almost immediately. The steamers Tartar and Athenian, of over 4,500 tons each, will be run between Vancouver and Vladivostock, the terminus of the trans-Siberian line. The Athenian will start first, loading here with lumber and rails for the Siberian line, and then proceeding to Seattle and Portland, where grain will probably be placed on board for famine-stricken Russians. The California state railroad commissioners will attempt to bring about a reduction of rates by the Pullman Car Company. The expert accountant of the committee has made a report showing that the capital stock of the Pullman Company is estimated at $36,-000,000. The net earnings for the last fiscal year was $4,650,850, and the income from the surplus account on July 31 amounted to $25,247,648. The premier seems to realize that trouble is brewing in the east, as large quantities of war stores are going to Hang Kong. About 300 tons of ammunition were embarked for that port Saturday, while the first-class cruiser Terrible has been ordered to join her sister ship, the Powerful, on the China station. These cruisers, which are the largest in the world, form a formidable addition to Great Britain's naval forces in Chinese waters. DISQUIET OVER THE VAAL

Disquieting news from the Transvaal has reached the foreign office. It appears that President Kruger has commanded British subjects in the Transvaal to join the Burgher force sent against the rebellious Chief Mpfeu, who is preparing for battle on a large scale. All roads in the Northern Transvaal are held by armed Kaffirs, and the Boers are likely to have a difficult task.

Another correspondent says: If Kruger, Leyds and the rest of the crew are bent on pushing a policy of retaliation for Delagoa Bay, they are play-ing inevitably into the hands of Britain. How true this is may be seen from created a rough surface, where Arkletter just addressed to a leading Cape statesman by an English financier, who knows South Africa. He says the conviction of the great majority of people is that Kruger and his party are an impossibility in a progressive age. He adds that, just as the Americans, after fifty years of patience, took the bull by the horns in Cuba, so, in his opinion, Britain will sooner or later assert herself in the Transvaal, as it is impossible for a proud people like the British to suffer at the hands of a little tenth-rate state without seeking the first practical opportunity of wiping out the stain. There is no denying that the feeling of this country is crystallizing into a solid belief, that, now that the Khartoum score is wined out it is high time to remember Majuba Hill and put an end to the present intolerable state of affairs.

just now, according to dispatches from that city, might be said to be in a state of siege. Troops are dotted about all over the city. Most all the places where work of construction is going on are guarded. sparrows or sparrows' heads, or pay There is a magnificent desire upon the part of the striking navvives to bring about a general cessation of labor by any and every means. Yesterday the house painters passed a resolution condemning those workmen who still hesitate to join the strike, and this significant phrase occurred in the sentence: "We are determined to obtain the decision in the strike in one way or another." At a meeting of cabinet-makers, one of the speakers proposed the extension of the strike to the provinces, and said: "We need not concern ourselves with the pecunlary question. If we become hungry there are plenty of shops." Day by day the number of strikers increases.

FRANCE AND FASHODA.

The French Government has accepted the invitation of the Government of Great Britain to convey a French officer from Fashoda by way of the Nile, in order that it may obtain his report of the recent exploration, and of the occupation of Fashoda. Until this report is received nothing will be settled between the two governments. The newspaper polemics, however, continue with unabating ardor.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S HEALTH. Letters from Balmoral refer to the unsatisfactory state of the health of Queen Victoria. Her Majesty, it appears, is troubled with languor and drowsiness. A young Aberdeen newspaper man happened to be passing in the vicinity of Balmoral Castle last Wednesday. He rested in the cottage of one of the Queen's gamekeepers. While there the latter casually reported that the horses attached to the Queen's carriage had shied a day or two previously. In order that his chiefs might understand that he had a nose for news, the young reporter scorched to the nearest telegraph office and wired the story of the Queen's miraculous escape. The the Queen's miraculous escape. The story had a fair number of frills at the start, but by the time it had reached London, Berlin and Paris, author could not have recognized the item, it was so hidden in decorations. "ONLY BOYS."

Standing Thursday afternoon by Westminster bridge, I watched the first detachment of Grenadier Guards from the Soudan march past from the station to barracks. They got a hearty reception from the crowd two miles long; but what struck me most forcibly was the extreme youth and undoubted exhaustion of many of the warriors. Hard by me, as the sol-diers filed past, stood a brewer's cart, drawn by the horses so well known by London visitors, and driven by a burly six-foot drayman. One of the men watched, puzzled for a while. Then leaning over to his mate, he exclaimed, "Why, they are only boys!" The draystruck had he seen the towering war-ciors of the khalifa whom these "boys" anarchism and war. He further asso lately laid low.

The Italian Government has purchased it from Signor Daquino, and it will soon be exhibited in the Naples Museum. THE BELPERS. The death of Hon. William Strutt, the son and heir of Baron Belper, and nephew of the Earl of Dunmore, who was found dead on Oct. 5 in the bathtub of his apartment at the West End Hotel, St. Louis, Mo., has recalled the romance of the Belper family. The first Lord Belper was a blacksmith, who helped Arkwright with his inventions. When Arkwright made his first spinning frames he found the threads twisted. Greatly chagrined, he went to the blacksmith, who said he would remedy the matter on condition that he receive half the profits of the invention for ten years. Ark-wright, it is said, agreed to this, whereupon the blacksmith rubbed his hand over one of the cylinders, and coolly said: "That is all it wants." He had chalked his hand and had his sister away. Under the heading "Another American Triumph," the newspapers point out that Mr. Dawkins, the new finance minister of India, has an American wife who is a cousin of former Ambassador Eustis, and they declare Mrs. Dawkins will be a great acquisition to Calcutta and similar society.

WAR AGAINST SPARROWS. In many parts of Germany the authorities are warning the people THE PARIS STRIKE SPREADING. against sparrows. A decree has been issued at Emden, Hanover, requiring landowners each year, between Oct. 1 and Dec. 1, to deliver to the local officials a certain number of sparrows or sparrows' heads. The owner of 25 hestares of land must produce twelve a fine of six marks. CHANGE IN GERMAN SENTIMENT

Berlin, Oct. 10 .- There has been a great change in German public opinion on the subject of the retention of the Philippine Islands by the United States. The feeling towards America generally is much more favorable than a couple of months ago. The news from the United States that the government at Washington is seriously contemplating holding the Philippines is commented upon dispassionately in the German press, and it is significant. that two papers of such standing as the Kolnische Zeitung and the Vossiche Zeitung have published long letters from German merchants settled in the Philippine Islands, in which American annexation is strongly advocated. A correspondent of the Vossische Zeitung even vigorously combats Germany making any attempts to secure a portion of the islands, citing weighty reasons therefor.

HOLD THE PHILIPPINES. Another significant fact was that a delegation representing German and German-Swies firms in the Philippine bassy to express hopes that America will not relinquish the islands, and, above all, not return them to Spain, which, the delegation claimed, would mean a recurrence of the revolution, and the perpetuation of commercial troubles. The delegation also asked if it might go to Paris and lay its views before the United States peace commissioners. CONDUCT OF THE CUBAN WAR. Count von Goetzen's report of the Cuban war operations is in the hands of the minister of war. The emperor has carefully read it. The count in the main reported favorably, dwelling particularly on the dash and valor of the Americans, the superiority of the Mauser rifle, and the poor generalship dis-played on both sides. At the Socialists' annual conference at Stuttgart, last week, Herr Liebknecht made a speech in which he declared the Socialist party was the only serted that Prince Bismarck, "who had more power than any man since Napoleon, was smashed by the Socialists." Herr Liebknecht added, significantly:

"And after we have overcome Bismarck we fear none."
The speech of Emperor William heralding the anti-strikes bill furnished material for inflammatory speeches.

"GOOD-BYE, DEAR."

The following story of the emperor is creating amusement. He paid an unexpected visit to the Austrian amseated himself comfortably in an arm-chair and said:

"Come and have a chat." After some conversation, the emperor looked at his watch and exclaimed: "Saperlotte! saperlotte! I did not know it was so late! Have you a telephone? I must say good-bye to the empress, as I have just time to catch the train for the maneuvers." The ambassador offered to do the telephoning, but the emperor insisted upon doing the ringing and helloing himself. Then, speaking to the empress, he said: "Don't be angry, dear. I chatted too long with Szoegyeny, and must drive direct to the station, so I cannot give you my parting kiss, for which I am sorry. Good-bye, dear."

WILLIAM'S TRIP TO PALESTINE. A semi-official denial has been issued of the statement that the emperor expects to postpone his journey to Palestine.

The Empress of Germany, who is an ardent photographer, will take a complete photographic outfit with her for use during her eastern trip. Knackfuss, the well-known painter, and Saltzmann, the marine painter, accompany the party, as will the oriental artist, Ismael Goentz.

The latest item of the emperor's programme is a religious ceremony on the Mount of Olives on Oct. 20. The imperial party will number 128 persons, the horses and mules will total over 8,000, and a thousand Turkish troops will escont their majesties.

Road Repairing and Building Going On-Will Enter Constantinople on an Arab Steed the Gift of the Sultan - Europe Expects Something

London, Oct. 10.-Europe is eagerly and thankfully waiting to hail the German Emperor next week as the world's greatest benefactor. He offers a two months' respite from weary wrangling over China, Africa and domestic troubles. He will supply a grand spectuclar entertainment which will fitly succeed pessimistic political problems.

His journey to Jerusalem will begin at 8 o'clock next Wednesday morning, when the emperor and empress will leave Potsdam. More than 100 retainers of high and low degree, including the foreign minister, the chancellor of the Order of St. John, Jerusalem, a bishop; military, marine, and Oriental painters, photographers, secretaries, soldiers, writers, and couri-ers combine to make a picturesque Islands called at the United States em- cavalcade like the mediaeval Crusaders. They will arrive at Venice at 5 o'clock on Thursday afternoon. After a voyage of four days they will reach the Bosphorus and enter Constantinople at 11 o'clock on Monday, the 17th inst. That will be the first picture in the panorama. The emperor will ride into the city on a pure-bred Arab stal-lion, the gift of the sultan. The metal part of the harness will be of pure gold and silver.

The emperor will remain in the Turk-

The Crusaders will depart on Oct. on the 25th inst., and thence traverse the road to Jerusalem, partly on norse back and partly in carriages. They will encamp before the Holy City in the afternoon of the 29th, and make their triumphant entry at 3:30 p.m. on PACKAGE. the same day, and proceed afoot from the Jaffa gate to the Sepulchre Church, where religious services will be held. The Mount of Olives will be visited on the 30th, and the crowning ceremony will be the dedication of the Church of the Redeemer on the 31st, the anniversary of the date when Luther nailed man military attache at Washington the theses to the church door at Witness severely condemned Gen. ment of the Socialists into a parlia-mentary party of practical reform.

A feature of the congress was the

The busiest preparations have for a long time been making for the visit.
The roads throughout the Holy Land are being repaired and new ones con-structed. The ancient mule track up Scopus and over the Mount of Olives, morning, and after asking for a cigar-ette and a glass of beer his majesty cursed himself comfortably is which served Titus and his warriors, cursed by Shemei, and which has been climbed by generations of Jebusites, Jews, Romans, Moslems, Christian knights, pilgrims, and tourists, is being replaced by a modern carriage road, built at the wish of the German Empress, so as to be able to reach the sacred site without fatigue.

All the preparations point to the emperor's popularity among the sultan's subjects. Even the fellaheen of the villages and the boatmen of Jaffa gladly pay a $2 tax each toward the new road that is building.

The emperor may be depended upon

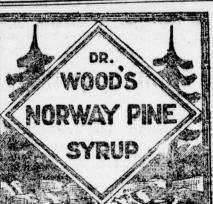

The emperor may be depended upon to outvie even Dr. Talmage in using the occasion and its surroundings for all they are worth. But what Europe expects from him is the unexpected. Nobody knows where he may bring off a sensational coup, but he is sure to have successfully startled the world before he returns.

The belief is credited by many that Emperor William is now bent upon the fulfillment of a fixed idea of his life, which is German colonization in regions where the climate will be tolerable for Germans. He is aware that the German possessions in East and West Africa are hardly worth keeping. He had for a time the idea of creating a German empire with the aid of the Boers in South Africa. That scheme was abandoned. Then he turned his eyes to Southern Brazil, where German colonists are already powerful, but the dread of fighting America weighed heavily upon Berlin. The question of the possibility of permission to acquire Cuba elicited an angry negative. Washington has been asked to conciliate Germany with a share of the Philippines. The emperor would like Samoa, and is even anxious to regenerate Crete, but there are insuperable obstacles everywhere except in the western division of Asiatic Turkey. Russia consented to divide Poland. Why should not the Ottoman Empire give up a slice of Asia Minor from the Egean to Arabia to suit Germany, and yet leave broad, fertile provinces to satisfy Russia? There is room there for 10,000,000 Germans, and German colonies are already flourishing in Syria.

It must be confessed that the foregoing is regarded as being outside of immediate, practical politics by serious Germans, but that is no reason why the emperor should not proclaim it as his policy in the floweriest imperial rhetoric.

Many of his subjects are outspoken in their uneasiness over his prolonged absence while Prince Henry is in distant Asia, and with the foreign minister accompanying the emperor, during the present disturbance in foreign politics. The reichstag will be in session during part of his absence, and the socialist leaders already express angry defiance of his threatened anti-strike legislation. In order to maintain the privacy of the imperial camp, Mr. Cook, the great English tour conductor, who is managing everything, has had a number of bronze medals specially struck. Nobody will be permitted to go inside Great Preparations to Welcome the cordon of guards unless he produces or wears this medal. Inquisitive not to be honored with the medals.

The Situation at Bear Island Is Threatening.

More Hostile Indians Probably on the Warpath-Burial of the Victims.

Walker, Minn, Oct. 10 .- The situaion last night was more ominous than ever. At the agency a council was held between the Indians, Gen. Bacon, Col. Herbach, Indian Agent Sutherland and Marshal O'Connor. The result of the conference was not in any way unlike that of those previously held, except in the fact that not one of the leading men of the different bands were present.

There were, however, representatives present from Bear Island, Cass Lake, Otter Tail Point and Pine Point, but none of these have any influence with the tribesmen. The only conclusion to be drawn is that the leaders of the different bands sent men there merely as stool pigeons and that others of their number are now preparing for the war path. A most significent fact is this: Saturday 30 canoe loads of Bear Island Indians and their families, professing to be peaceful, arrived at the agency. Today every one of the bucks in the party left, but where they have gone is only to be surmised. There is little doubt, however, that they have left for Bear Lake to join those who are already prepared to fight.

There must be by this time several hundred armed men on the island, and from what can be learned today many more are on the road. Two or three of the Bear Island men, who are still on the agency, have been questioned in regard to last Wednesday's battle, but they positively stated they knew nothing whatever in regard to the dead and wounded among the Indians, and had seen none of those who were in the fight.

Gen. Bacon announced that the last council would be held Monuay and the Indians dispersed. That the Indians have been gathering for several days past is a wellknown fact. Flatmouth and his band of 40 Chippewa Indians may be on the war path before another day has passed.

BY WAY OF PARIS

An Alleged Recent Statement Made by Mr. Chamberlain.

Paris, Oct. 10.-The Evenement today publishes the substance of an interview with Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, the British secretary of state for the colonies, who is now in America, in which the English statesman is quoted as saying he considers the United States, owing to the recent war, to be in the same position as Great Britain in Egypt, adding that the United States has the same imperative duty to keep the Philippine Islands. Chamberlain is said to have added: 'The moment has arrived for the United States to prepare for an extension of its territory, and in order to realize this ideal, she will not refuse Great Britain's support. United Great Britain, the United States and Canada will be invulnerable."

LEO XIII. TO WORKINGMEN

He Warns Them Against Revolution and Socialism-Misery and Ruin the Result.

Rome, Oct. 10.—The pope yesterday received a party of French pilgrims, who came to thank his holiness for confirming the traditional protection exercised by the French in the east. In the course of his address to the pilgrims the pope said:

"You who represent the France of labor are not ignorant of the fact that upon you devolve important and grave duties affecting the whole of society. If the democracy draws its inspiration from the teachings of reason it is enlightened by faith. "If, while guarding against fallacious and subversive theories, it accepts with religious resignation and as a fact the diversity of classes and poli-cies; if in search of a solution of social problems it does not lose for an instant the sight of the human charity which Christ declared to be a characteristic note of his children; if it is willing to be Christian it will give your country future peace, prosperity

"If, on the other hand, it abandons itself to revolution and socialism; if it is deceived by foolish Utopias; if it devotes itself to destructive demands upon the fundamental laws upon which rests all civil order, the immediate effect will be for the working classes

The address of his holiness was re-ceived with great enthusiasm by the pilgrims, who gave hearty cheers for the "pope of labor." The pope pro-nounced his benediction upon the pil-

TWO WATER MAINS

Connection of the West London Water Works System With the Chief Main-Water Off Nine Hours-Little Inconvenience to Consumers.

The connection of the West London water main with the chief main from the waterworks was accomplished Saturday night in less time than was antleipated by Foreman Alston and his men. Water was shut off in the city at 9 o'clock in the evening, and turned on again at 6 o'clock next morning. A cut-off valve was put in at the same time, and the job throughout was very successfully done. London has now a double main from a point just west of the west cove, and no danger need be feared of a water famine as a result of a break in the main.

—A handsome chestnut horse, belonging to W. T. Legg, blacksmith, Talbot street, ran away at noon today and made things lively on Dundas street. The horse, attached to a light buggy, was left standing in front of Mr. Legg's shop, when the driver of a passing rig cracked his whip and scared the animal, which bolted. The runaway went to Dundas street, where the buggy overturned, and was dragged a considerable distance along the pavement. The horse was captured by Capt. Thomas Robson near Ridout street.

EMERSON'S COMPANY. Mr. W. D. Emerson, the actor, is at present busily engaged organizing a farce-comedy company that he claims will be second to none on the road. It is the intention to play a circuit in Canada, extending over a period of twenty weeks, and playing here at the Grand Opera House all of the second week in January. Mr. Emerson has had numerous substantial offers from all over the country, but he has declined them. His company's repertoire, as far as he knows at present, will be "Jane," "All the Comforts of Home," "Arabian Nights," "Confu-sion," and "Nita's First." Mr. and Mrs. Emerson will take leading parts, and among those already engaged are Miss Fay Robinson, one of the witnesses at the recent trial, and a former member of the Wesley Stock Company; Ernest Willis, late of "The Three Guardsmen;" Joseph Den-ning, of the Wesley Stock Company. The company will be all ready to start within a week. Mr. Emerson has sufficient backing, and after completing the circuit will make his headquarters in London. He has made many friends here, and thinks the city one of the most beautiful he

Dawson vs. London Street Railway Company-Judgment on appeal by defendants from an order of Falconbridge, J., in chambers, allowing plaintiff's appeal from an order of a local judge at London, which dismissed the plaintiff's motion, under rule 439 (2) for an order to examine Thomas Reycraft, motorman, and James McCaffrey, conductor, men in the service of defendants, as officers of the defendants, an incorporated company, for discovery after the plaintiff had examined Mr. ants. The action was for bodily in-Carr, the general manager of defendjuries received by plaintiff owing to the alleged negligence of defendants or their servants, she having been run down by a car of defendants driven by Reycraft, and in charge of McCaffrey. The defendants contended that these men were not officers at all, or, if they were, that only one of them should be examined. Held, that under the bylaws of the company, and by reason of their responsibility and control, the motorman and the conductor are to be regarded as officers when acting in the discarge of their duties upon a moving car, but the examination should, under rule 439 (2) be restricted to one of these persons, at the election of the plaintiff. PROVINCE

OF JAMAICA

Kingston, Jamaica, Oct. 10. - The question of the annexation of the Island of Jamaica to Canada, which was mooted about a month ago, has now been definitely put before the public through the medium of the semi-offi-cial newspaper, the Gleaner, which today publishes a review to the reconstitution, and says that beyond a doubt a feeling is growing in favor of political incorporation with Canada.

"But," says the Gleaner, editorially, "on the whole, if a reciprocal treaty with the United States could be effected, this would be the best possible solution of the economic problem, the general belief being that Britain and the United States are bound to come to some satisfactory commercial arrangement about the West Indies without a disturbance of the political sta-tus quo. The proposal for Canadian incorporation is, however, before the public, and we invite expressions of opinion from the population."

THE RED CROSS

The Founder Is a Swiss Gentleman-Inspired by the Horrors of Solferino.

To Mr. Henri Dunant, Swiss gentleman, belongs the honor of inaugurating this movement. Being in Italy at the time of the battle of Solferino, June 24, 1859, he visited the battle-Appalled by the needless and terrible suffering, he remained many days, doing all in his power to relieve it. During these terrible days Mr. Dunant conceived the idea of a system of organized relief whereby aid could be given under such circumstances. Returning home he published a little book called "Recollections of Solferino," that aroused great interest. His appeal touched a responsive chord in all hearts. Mr. Dunant is now about 70 years of age. Having spent half his fortune in establishing the Red Cross, and having lost the other half in unfortunate business ventures, he lived for many years, poor and forgotten, in a plain district infirmary in Switzerland, of which he himself was the founder. Now, however, through the pensions granted him by the Dowager Empress of Russia and the Federal Council of Switzerland, and the generous gifts of money sent him by the citizens of Stuttgart, Germany, he is spending a peaceful old age in comfort and plenty. -Woman's Home Companion.

THE CHOICE OF HUSBANDS

Some Advice to the Girls by Sarah

Grand-Should Have a High Ideal. Writing on "The Choice of a Husband" in the Young Woman for October, Madam Sarah Grand says: "Many a charming girl and rich throws herself away on a glib scamp, who, as he protests, marries her for the pleasure of possessing her, there being no other way, but casts her aside without compunction when the pleasure palls and the money is spent. We know what sort of women such girls become, wrecks ruined and deserted, or wreckers preying on society. It is generally said of one of these wretched wives that she has nobody to blame but herself; she chose him, she would have him, she would not be advised. Naturally not. Because she did not even know enough to enable her to realize how very much more there was to know. Even if she were an intelligent girl, she could exercise no discretion in the matter; because, having nothing but the most superficial acquaintance with men, either practically or theoretically, she was quite unable to compare one man with another and judge of their respective merits. In fact she has less power to choose a husband than he had to choose a horse, for with regard to the horse external appearance is some Fortunately, nowadays, parents and guardians get their proper amount of blame and discredit for their neglect of duty in such cases. The children themselves rise up and call them anything but blessed. For a girl has a right to demand of those in authority over her the knowledge requisite to enable her to choose a husband properly when the time comes. would say to every girl, do not be too easily pleased in a man; be fas-tidious, have a high ideal. That a man is agreeable is not reason enough for accepting him; he must have some higher recommendation. His power to make himself agreeable may be a mere trick, which he could not keep up in domestic life for want of the qualities of head and heart, such as truthfulness, usefulness, refinement, sympathy, and affection, which go to make good manners genuine. It is easy to make sure of a man in this respect. If he talks about old people contemptuously, and pays them no kindly attention, if he is not consistently polite to everybody, have nothing to do with him. His manners are a poor veneer, which will not stand the slightest fric-tion. Notice, too, if a man adores you for nothing but your beauty, and speaks of other women as if physical charm were all he cared for, then beware of him. That kind of a man is a mere animal, who will disgust you in

Meanwhile, with a bewildered sensation in her brain, Maria had been driven home. She knew she had done right; she knew that in the future long years she should have cause for selfrespect, not blame; still, it had been

When her duties as lady's-maid were completed her time was her own, and glady she shut her door upon all, even Caroline Langton.

The latter's plea of illness had had the effect she wished. The Mannerings were kind-hearted people, and did not compel her to leave the house or to show herself more in society than was necessary. This evening she was sitting alone in her own room, wondering a little why Maria had not come near her, when the footman brought a message from Mrs. Mannering, requesting she would come to the drawing-room for a few minutes. "Who is there?" asked Caroline, ris-

"Honly the ladies, miss. The gentlemin air yet hover their wine.' Hearing this, the governess unhesitatingly descended. She found, as the footman had said, only the ladies

Captain Selwyn had made a very favorable impression on Mrs. Mannering and her daughters. They admired him sailor, upon which Cass exercised her wit, by informing her sister that she would certainly give her consent, as she should like him very much for a brother-in-law, especially if he would bring curiosities from abroad.

"Do not be so foolish, Cassandra," expostulated her mother. "For my part I cannot see why the captain should not like your sister. In a year or two you'll take more interest in such matters than you do now. Honoria, my love," as with an effort to assume a fashionable air of repose, she sank

"Then for style," remarked Mrs. Mannering, folding her hands complacently, and speaking, as might the musical critic of the "I think 'Voky sapette' ('Voi che sapete')."

"I think so, too. I'll just try it." But the trying did not prove successful. From nervousness, or some other cause, Honoria certainly was not

"How tiresome. I'll send for Miss Langton," she remarked, a little pettishly; "I can always do it better if she sings it first through to me."

You had better get Maria Saproni. She has the superior voice, and it's her own language. But Cass' suggestion, murmured out over a book, either was not heard or noticed; Mrs. Mannering saying to her elder daughter:

"Then be quick, my love, for you his know Hector's never long over his

Thus the governess was summoned, and, taking her place at the piano; soon filled the room wth sweet, full, though not powerful, melody. She had just reached the concluding bars when the door opened and the gentlemen entered. Mrs. Mannering pronounced a most audible "Hush!" of warning to those at the instrument, which, hearing, caused Honoria to nudge the governess. Taking the hint, and catching the glimpse of a dress-coat, Caroline instantly rose from the piano. Clos-encountered the widely-staring gaze of the guest. She uttered one long, piercing shriek, and sank back upon

The cry was echoed by another, and the next moment Captain Selwyn was kneeling by the governess, supporting her in his arms, gazing passionately in her face, while he ejaculated, with considerable excitement: "Caroline! my own dearest love! Thank heaven I have found you-found you at last." 'Good gracious! Captain Selwyn!" cried Mrs. Mannering, regarding the scene, as did the rest, in intense be-wilderment, "what does this mean?" "Mean, my dear madam," he answered, raising his bronzed, manly face, which quivered with an indescribable joy, "that this lady is my wife!"

CHAPTER XXXV.

Those words of Captain Selwyn fell like a bomb-shell among the listen-

"His wife? Miss Caroline Langton' his wife!" Mrs. Mannering at the moment did not know whether to feel sympathetic or indignant. With a blending of the two, clasping her hands, she ejacu-"Good gracious, Captain Selwyn! What does this mean-and under my roof, too?"

"Ah! madam, I shall never forget that, believe me: I shall always regard it with the greatest affection and respect, for under it I have refound happiness. Hush! she recovers."

"But, dear me, it's all very well. How did you lose your wife, Captain Selwyn? Why has she, a married woman, been passing herself off as single—as a Miss Caroline Langton? It is very peculiar." "It is, I confess, a mystery, my dear madam," responded the officer, "a mystery as much to me as to you. But be assured of this, whatever the reason which has led her to take such a step, she is not to blame." The sound of her name evidently penetrated the governess' stunned senses. Opening her eyes she gazed around; then, as Captain Selwyn replied, starting up and standing a little from him, she exclaimed, with eager,

tremulous excitement:

"But I am to blame, and I only; indeed, it is true; yet there is no disgrace in what I have done. I pray you, madam, credit that I brought no insult to your family by accepting the shelter of your roof. I am innocent of all wrong! "Innocent, Caroline! Who could doubt that?" exclaimed her husband, stepping towards her, his face full of

But she shrank back, murmuring in an entreating whisper for his ear alone: "No, no; not until you have heard all, for now I feel I must tell you. I may possibly have acted madly, foolishiy, but until you know everything not even our hands shall meet. Oh! in mercy end this scene." She spoke hurriedly, but with determination. He drew away, pained, perplexed; then, noting the governess' distress, said, addressing Mrs. Man-"Madam, I know not how to apole gize for having created such a scene in your house; still, I am assured your kindness will excuse, seeing how un-premeditated it was. I will disembarrass you of my presence speedily, only dare I crave shelter one night longer for my wife? Tomorrow I will fetch her, for I trust she will not refuse to come with me. Before leaving, however, may I ask for a few moments'private conversation with her?"

Hector had already nodded at Cass and Honoria, who, taking the hint suggested by his innate good-breeding, had already quitted the apartment. Hector himself now approached the door, and Mrs. Mannering, finding herself deserted, let her kindly nature rule her entirely.
"Assuredly, Captain Selwyn; this room is at your service as long as you desire. I confess all this is very mysterious, but excuse my saying that I have known Miss-I should say Mrs. Selwyn-so long that I cannot think the fault does rest with her."

Thank you, madam, for that opinion," remarked the governess, her eyes suffused with grateful tears. neither is there blame to my husband. When I have spoken with him, I hope -if it would in any way interest youto offer some explanation. I feel it is your due."

"Please yourself, my dear," replied Mrs. Mannering, approaching the door. "Tell me or not, as you think fit, but I own I'm woman enough to be very glad to be made a confidante." [To be Continued.]

Of Interest to Women.

Expensive Cooking Utensils. There is no better proof of the increased interest that women are taking in culinary matters than the dainty immensely. Honoria declared she lik-and costly cooking utensils to be found ed no profession equal to that of a at the house of furnishers. A saucepan made of the best copper, silver lined, and costing $42, tells its own story. Never before in the history of house-furnishing goods has an assortment of culinary ware so expensive been put on the market. There are long-handled frying-pans of the best grade of copper, lined with silver, and costing as much as most people would give for a handsome sugar dish or a piece of bric-a-brac for the drawing-room. Dainty little stew-pans cost from $4 40 up to $12 50, according to size. The smallest are hardly larger back on a couch, "the captain said he admired music; I hope you are in voice boilers just as shapely and costing just bon of taffeta, or of mouseline de soie, as much as a handsome vase or drink- and most elaborately trammed, they ing-cup, and what women would be Honoria, turning over some pieces of music. Corsets. The new corsets are quite different in shape from those that were fashionable last year. The new skirts are so close-fitting that it is quite necessary to have a corset that fits close over the hips, and the short-waisted corset is, of course, impossible. Straight fronts are still worn as low-busted as possible and long over the hips, with more curving in at the waist. This is a model that is most becoming to stout figures, and is not unbecoming, either, to slender women. For evening gowns the models are much the same-only a shorter over the hips. The great difficulty in New York has been that almost all the best shaped corsets were high-priced. Now there are so many different shapes to choose from, even among the cheaper ones, that by taking time to be well fitted it is possible to find what is satisfactory paratively little money. It is not possible to buy a satisfactory corset for stout woman for nothing, and it is far better to economize on some other article of clothing and buy better corsets.-Harper's Bazar.

Remodeling Old Gowns.

Remodelling skirts is not an easy task, but it is surprising how some of last year's, or better still, year before last's, skirts can be done over. The width was so much greater that by using a narrower pattern considerable material can be cut over and put into a flounce. The attached flounces can be made quite scant. But when a piece of work of this sort is attempted it must be thoroughly well done from the start. The old skirt would best be ripped apart, if not entirely so, at all events to within a quarter or half a yard of the belt. The pattern of the new shape must then be laid on it, and if it is at all carefully cut, the skirt will look quite new. Two or three narrow ribbon ruches will add greatly to it, particularly if black be These should be put on at the used. edge of the flounce, and where the flounce joins the skirt there should be two or three rows of ribbon put on quite plain. If a last year's skirt hangs well and is in good order, only having lost its fresh look, a good plan is to trim it with three or four rows of black braid half way up. This can be put on plain or in a zigzag pattern. Trimming with black always freshens up an old gown, gives it a smart look, and, as a rule, makes it more becoming. A last year's black and white taffeta gown has been made to look as if it had just been taken out of that immaculate muchquoted bandbox simply by a new trimming of white lace and black velvet ribbon. A pointed vest of white lace was put on the waist. This was outlined with bands of black velvet arranged to give a pointed effect. Over the tops of the sleeves were caps of lace forming epaulettes. Around the skirt were two bands of lace insertion, with narrow black velvet on either edge. A black velvet ribbon sash fastened with a steel buckle gave the finishing touch of smartness to the pretty and attractive costume.

All the skirts this season are longer than those of last year, and this difficulty is often most annoying, but a ruffle or flounce of ribbon or taffeta silk will work wonders. It is best to put this on so that it is longer in the back than the front. If absolutely necessary there can be three at the back and only two, or even one, in front. When a skirt is too narrow, a panel can be inserted of silk or satin-black or some contrasting shade-and this can covered with lace if a very elaborate effect is desired. A narrow front breadth arranged in this way looks very well, and entirely changes the style of the skirt.

Sashes are a great boon, and they will quite cover up the gown and hide any defect in a delightful way.

A Palace of Mystery.

In 1880 the late Empress of Austria had a beautiful little renaissance castle built in the deer park at Laing. It pleased her to surround this house with mystery from the first. Not a picture of the house, the gardens, the deer park, walled in on all sides, was allowed to become public. Few eyes have seen the treasures of ant accumulated in this house. One English woman was especially favored in being allowed to enter its portals. She states that the empress' bedroom is the most remarkable feature of the house. The bed occupies the center of the room, but a large screen at the head shuts off a smaller apartment where a presdieu stands before a picture of the virgin. In one corner, near the glass doors that lead to the balcony, amid a group of exotics, stands a life-sized statue of Niobe, veiled and with head bowed. In the opposite corner, across the room, near the ceiling, is a strong reflector and a number of green incandescent lights, which the empress could turn on as s he lay in bed. Every other light then was extinguished, and only a soft green illumination emanated from the statue of the bereaved mother. Another remarkable feature in the salon is a huge mirror reaching to the ceiling, revolving on springs, and every Sunday during the empress' life it was turned into a niche, and the reverse side, which is an altar, turned Here mass was read, and although the prayer stools for the empress and emperor were the only seats in the room, the entire suite, employes, servants and gardeners, were free to attend the service held in this spacious One of the empress' favorite spots in the garden of Laing was what she called the tent, a small pavilion, which was protected against the wind on one side by a giant oak, on which she had placed a majolica relief of the virgin and child, under which burned an everlasting lamp.

THE LATE DR. WELLS

An Eloquent Tribute in the Canadian Baptist-The Noble Characteristics of Diseased.

Last week's issue of the Canadian Baptist contains a biographical sketch of the late editor of that journal, Dr. J. E. Wells, M.A., LL.D., from the pen of Mr. Theodore H. Rand. A fellowstudent of Mr. Wells in early life and a close friend in his later years, Mr. Rand is eminently qualified for the task he undertakes. After referring to his early life and school career, Mr.

Rand says in part: "In college, as in the academy, he was a diligent, careful and rapid worker, an all-round student; yet having special delight in economic, moral and philosophical subjects. He was an independent thinker, and was prepared to follow where honest thinking led. A Liberal in politics, with Radical tendencies, with unbounded confidence in the capabilities of man for progress, and a passion for bringing the Sermon on the Mount down into the plains and valleys of human society and life-such was Mr. Wells in his college days. He had surpassing faith in argument as a means of arriving at practical truth. 'Let us reason together,' was his process and method. His own conduct wonderfully regulated by his ideal standard, and was ever the expression of an equable and noble spirit—a man of principle in all things. * * * Dr. Wells' life was characterized throughout by the same elements and qualities which appeared so strongly in his under-graduate life-fuller, | clearer, diviner, perhaps, but rooted always in the Sermon on the Mount, and in the life and deeds of him who uttered it. He was a lover of soul liberty, of the Roger Williams type. * * * His treatment of sociological questions was sometimes startling to many, but always Christ-like, and the direct outcome of the form of Christianity which he embraced in his college days. To him the Sermon on the Mount contained Christ's own summary of the laws of the kingdom which he came into the world to establish. These laws, or principles, were intended to govern the motives and the conduct of all his people—the citizens of the spiritual kingdom-under all circumstances, to the end of time. In accordance with these principles, individual Christian citizens are to govern themselves in worldly as well as religious matters, in all the relations of everyday business, social, industrial and national life. The columns of the Baptist have borne testimony to his convictions in this matter, and disclosed the fact that his conception of Christianity in this respect was somewhat different from that which today occupies the field. So deep was his feeling in this matter that it was his purpose to write a volume in answer to the question 'Is Christianity practicable?' Alas! death came to him before his thoughts of a lifetime on this subject were committed to paper. He often talked with me tive even the rough outline that I can supply of his contemplated book. I shall, therefore, a little later, ask space for the purpose. "I cannot close without a reference to Dr. Wells as an educationist. No sounder thinker in this great department ever occupied the editorial chair of a Christian periodical. I may bear personal testimony to the great service rendered by him in our struggle to establish an independent and Christian university. He believed with all his heart in such an institution as affording the highest conditions for the noblest type of university work and life, and his influence was freely used

respecting it, and I am sure the readers of the Baptist would find sugges-

INTERNATIONAL COMMISSIONERS

Give Out an Official Statement Re garding Their Deliberations-Alleged Agreement on the Sealing Question.

Quebec, Oct. 10 .- The international commissioners are preparing to leave Quebec as quickly as possible, and it is doubtful if a majority of the commission will be present at the meeting to be held today. Senator Fair-banks and Lord Herschell have given out an official statement jointly, as

"The high commissioners have made considerable progress with their work, but it has been found necessary to obtain further information on certain points, which is not immediately available. The commissioners will adjourn on Monday, Oct. 10, until Tuesday, Nov. 1. It has been agreed that the next meeting shall be held at Washington, D. C."

The American commissioners positively declined to make any further statement concerning any feature of the commission work. Several newspapers print the statement as coming from official source that the Bering See pelagic sealing question has been settled. It will be stated that the U. S. Government will purchase the ships and equipments of the Canadian seal fisheries on condition that all British rights to Bering Sea be surrendered, and that two appraisers, one from the United States and one from Canada, have been named to fix a price upon the property. No official verification of this statement can be obtained.

Mrs. James Shillington, of Oxford Street, After a Protracted Illness, Has Passed Away.

Mary Montgomery, wife of Mr. Jas. Shillington, 187 Oxford street, died at an early hour this morning, after a protracted illness. Mrs. Shillington was married in Stratford about 28 years ago, and was well known in that city. Her gentle disposition and kindliness made for her a host of friends wherever she went. She was a fond mother, a faithful wife and a sincere friend to the needy. Mrs. Shillington had, since her childhood, been connected with the Presbyterian body, and at the time of her death was a member of the First Presbyterian Church. A husband, four sons and one daughter are left to mourn her demise. The sons are: Robert, of the London Loan Company; Thomas, Fred and Arthur. The only daughter is Mrs. (Dr.) Crawford, of Sombra. Dr. Dewart on Skeptics.

Church-Notes.

Rev. Dr. Dewart, of Toronto, well known from his long editorial connection with the Christian Guardian as one of the foremost workers among Canadian Methodists, preached yesterday morning and evening at the Dundas Street Methodist Church. In the evening he addressed the large congregation from the words "I have a message of God unto thee" (Judges iii., 20). The reverend gentleman strongly emphasized the fact that God's messages of truth, like the seed in the parable of the sower, had a different effect on those who heard it, caused by the different relations to God. He mainly addressed the classes: (1) the skeptic (2) the professing believer who is unsaved, and (3) the young people who procrastinate and delay. In speaking of the skeptic or unbeliever, Dr. Dewart said: "By the skeptic I mean those who doubt the truths of the gospel and the reality and power of religion. I remember when if a man was reported to be an unbeliever, he was thought to be a fit object of denunciation. This is neither wise nor right. I believe that as a general rule the moral and spiritual state is intimately related to unbelief. A faith is better than doubt, but doubt may be sincere. The unbeliever should receive kindly consideration. There is no thoughtful person who has not had seasons of doubt. A man may know that infidelity has nothing to offer, and yet feel as if it were impossible to believe. The least we can do is to hear his difficulties. It does a man good to feel that he is understood. A doubter came to me once and after I listened to his doubts I told him my views. I don't know that I answered them, but they did not seem so formidable when he found that I was familiar with them, and in spite of feeling the force of his objections, held fast the faith. If a man acts as if he held a brief in opbasement. The exchange will have a position to Christian faith, there is not much hope of him, while he is in that mood. But if he is a sincere doubter he should seek deliverance from the thraldom of doubt. The unbeliever should give fair and full consideration to the evidence of divine intelligence in the universe, the unity of the Bible, the unique character of Christ, the testimony of sincere Christians, the moral transformations which re-ligion has wrought in character. He should test the promises of God. One cannot believe by an act of the will, but one can use the means that are adapted to strengthen faith in the truths of Christianity. He who ear-

"Covetousness" was the subject of Council Asked to Make Another the sermon preached by Rev. A. J. MacGillivray, the pastor of St. James Presbyterian Church. The text was taken from Luke xii., 4: "Take heed Re Hospital Agreement-Ald. Jolly and beware of covetousness, for a Again Bowled Out, but the Mayor man's life consisteth not in the abun-Inserts the Thin Edge of the Wedge dance of the things which he pos--Contractor Pritchett Corrects sesseth." Said the speaker:

One of Christ's listeners interrupted him by requesting that he undertake the work of judge and settle a family quarrel. In thus appealing to Jesus he was disappointed, having misunderstood entirely the nature of the kingdom he came to establish. It was to be heavenly, and not earthly. Neither Roman law, nor Jewish strife, nor question of the division of property would occupy him. He came to implant principles, and to leave these to permeate all forms and phases of life. Dealing with the parable elucidatunder existing conditions. To back up | ing the text, the speaker dwelt first on the man's estimate of his circumstances and plans, and then on God's estimate. Three fatal mistakes were pointed out in his resolution:

1. In presuming that he had a lease better, but if he did not improve on of life for many years.
2. In thinking that the soul could be nourished by perishable things. 3. The attempt to eliminate heaven from the calculation. This latter attempt is as pitiful as it is difficult. The vessel may make her way for a few days with some degree of certainty and safety, and with nothing but chart and compass, but these are not infallible. He is a foolish captain who would trust to these entirely. He must "take the sun" to be sure of the exact position of the vessel. Dead reckoning may be all very well, but the sun cannot be eliminated. So we cannot abolish heaven from the reckoning in ascertaining our position in this world. It is only by the aid of heaven that we enter into mayor moved that in view of the county's refusal to accept the city's heaven. In closing, the fact was emphasized that at least two are planning regarding every life. Let us all be in harmony with the plans of God concerning us.

Rev. Canon Dann.

Rev. Canon Dann spoke on the ten commandments in St. Paul's Cathedral, and among other things said:

St. Paul told the Corinthian Church that in everything they were enriched by the commandments-through the grace of God given to them. When they became known everything had a new, enriched meaning and value. God gave the commandments to Moses. When Christ came he did not destroy the law nor the prophets, but came to fulfill the commandments, having received a broader and completer meaning. They were, as the apostle said, enriched. "Thou shall have none other gods but me. Thou shalt not take God's name in vain." This was man's duty, as set down in rigid law by God.
"Love thy neighbor as thyself" was one of God's laws. Fear was the governing principle of the ten command-ments, and love the ruling principle of the covenant. The laws are for every subject in the kingdom. There is no one law for society and one for the working people; it is a law to govern every member of the church. These laws were not given by a frowning God out of darkness, but by the divine love, as seen in Christ. He pledges himself to us by his own faithfulness -that he who hungers will be satisfied and he who asks be heard. There are three duties-love of God, love to man and love to self-for we must love our neighbor as ourselves. God is to be dick, of Bothwell, preached appropriate pulled out at the socket.

our motive, God our aim and object. No man is a true citizen of this kingdom who in all his conduct does not look to God. We cannot do our duty to man until we do our duty to God. If we fail in our duty to man it is because we have first failed in devotion to God. If love of man is to be real and lasting it must be built upon love to God. Love to God means true reverence, and the heart that has true reverence will be sure to show it. A follower of God will turn away from every act of irreverence. Christ's law went right to the heart and was certainly a deepening, developing and enrichment of the ten commandments. Christ had not made our duty any lighter or easier, but had made it more firm. It is more searching and more thorough. Christ's church was a kingdom, and these were the laws of that

Rev. Ira Smith, of the Talbot Street Baptist Church, last night began a series of discourses on the Lord's Prayer. He dwelt last night on the opening words of the prayer, "Our Father which are in heaven." He said in part:

Don't let us think it is the mere form and the words that constitute the essence of prayer. It is the reality of the worship of the soul before God that constitutes actual prayer. Jesus gave this model—the Lord's Prayer. touches upon every relation of life, upon the whole conduct and manner of life, upon everything that concerns us, upon everything that concerns God, upon everything that constitutes our relationship with God. Our Father which art in the heavens! Did you ever stop a little while to ponder that? It seems to me that by this frequent phrase the Lord Jesus intends to convey to your mind and mine the extensiveness of the deity. What is the breadth and scope of this prayer? Who may say "Our Father which art in heaven?" Can all say "Father, Father, which art in heaven?" Yes, because the grace of God is not shut out from

Church Notes.

Rev. A. J. MacGillivray, on behalf of the managers of St. James' Presbyterian Church, has presented a short report of a very encouraging character, showing the financial standing of the congregation. At the beginning of the year the total debt was $9,100. By the sale of the manse, and moneys received from the Kent estate, the debt has been reduced to $4,881. The interest, which at the beginning of the year was $540, is now $233. The rate of interest has also been reduced from 6 to 5 per cent. The position of the congregation financially is much brighter than for many years past. Rev. H. R. Diehl, of Florence, occupied the pulpit in Christ Church yes-terday. Rev. J. H. Moorhouse preached harvest thanksgiving sermons at Florence and Aughrim. Rev. Alex. Fullerton, of Dungannon, Ireland, who is visiting Canada, preached yesterday morning in the First Methodist Church to a large audience. Rev. Mr. Fullerton, while in the city, is the guest of Mr. Thomas McCormick. Rev. H. A. Dickson, of Toronto, occupied the pulpit in the Memorial Church yesterday, and preached to large congregations. His arguments are convincing, and his manner of presenting them striking. Sunday school anniversary services at the Askin Street Methodist Church yesterday were very largely attended. Singing by the children, accompanied by the excellent orchestra of the school, the whole under the able direction of Mr. John Ward, was a feature of each service. Rev. Mr. Cobble-troduced and also spoke briefly. Rev. T. S. Johnson, of Adelaide Street Bap'tist Church, preached a practical sermon yesterday morning from Psalm cvi., 15: "And he gave them their request, but sent leanness into their soul." Speaking of the varied causes of "soul leanness." he said many persons were content with taking one good spiritual meal on Sunday, and then starved their souls all the rest of the week. he asked, "would the body 'How." thrive if treated in such a fashion?"

The Dean of Huron occupied the pulpit of St. John's Church yesterday morning. Rev. W. T. Hill, the rector, has been removed to his home from the hospital, and is progressing slowly.
