POETRY.

Poetry with a Point.

You can lead a horse to water,
But you cannot make him drink;
You can send a fool to college,
But you cannot make him think;
You may keep your daughter strumming
From morn till afternoon,
But you can't make her a player
If she hasn't any tune.

You can never make a farmer
If a boy that loves the soil,
Though you may make him plow and plant
And sow and haw and gee,
It's no use to sow and bluster
Because your only son
Prefers the girl he met in the car
To your selected one;

You might as well switch off the track,
For love is lord of pelt,
And besides it's more than likely
That you know how 'tis yourself.

You cannot make a citizen,
Let him be black or white,
Of the man who doesn't know enough
To cipher, read and write.
You cannot change a rooster's strut,
Nor make the lopers crow,
Though you may honestly believe
It would be better so.

You cannot make a parson
Of the stage struck Romeo
And if you ever do succeed
You'll wish you never had.

There is only one thing means,
And that's to have to see
The name of your neighbor's numskull
Finished with an M. D.

But all these things and more beside,
We may expect to hear,
Until the numskull kills us,
And the Romeo says the prayer.

SELECT STORY.

A Life for a Love.

BY L. T. MEADE.

"We will be brave," she said, "if we have fears we won't speak of them; we have got to think of Valentine now, not of ourselves."

The rector almost shook Lillias head from his neck.

"Fears," he said, in a light and cheerful voice, a voice which was belied by his tremulous hands, and by his almost petulant movement. "Fears, my dear girl, they really don't exist. At this moment, were we clairvoyant, we should see Gerald either rising leisurely from a good night's rest, or sitting down to his breakfast in one of those luxurious homes one reads of in Froude's 'Occasions.' Vessels like the Esperance don't go to the bottom. Now, Lil, at what hour will you go to fetch Valentine? You will go up to town to-morrow, of course."

"By the first train," replied Lillias. Her lips quivered, she turned away; there was nothing more to be said. Her father's manner did not in the least deceive her.

"Dear old man!" she said to herself. "If he can be brave, so will I. But oh, Gerald, does any heart ache more for you than the heart of your sister Lillias?"

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Valentine had got a blow, the first real great blow which had ever been dealt to her. It had a most curious effect. Instead of stunning or rendering her weak and incapable, it suddenly changed her from a child into a practical and clever and wide-awake woman. The very quality of her voice changed. It became full, and inspired respect the moment she spoke. She was quite aware that her father had deceived her, that he did not mean her to accompany Gerald to Sydney.

She said nothing about this knowledge—not even that evening when she got home and found her father looking ten years older, but standing on the step of her own little home waiting for her.

"It was too late," she said, quietly. "The Esperance sailed four hours before its time. I must do without Gerald for six months; in six months he will be home."

In six months," echoed Mr Paget, following her upstairs to the drawing-room. "Kiss me, my darling," he said. "Valentine, you will come back to your own home to-morrow."

Valentine raised her cheek to meet her father's lips.

"I think I would rather remain here," she said. "This, after all, is my only real home, do you, father?"

"My keeping the house, do you, father?"

"No, my dear, if you wish it. Only I thought—" His last words came out almost tremulously.

"Sometimes we are mistaken in our thoughts," responded Valentine. "I should like best to stay on in my husband's house. Six months will not be long passing; and father, I have some news for you. In July—if I live until July—Gerald is going to give me a child—Gerald's child and mine. I should like it to be born here."

"Thank God," exclaimed Mr Paget. "I am very glad of it, Valentine."

He said, "This—this—is an inestimable mercy. I hope your child will be a son. My dear daughter, this news lifts a great weight off my mind."

He looked what he felt, delighted. "Of course you must live wherever you like best," he said. "July—the 15th in March—the child's father will be—" but he did not finish this sentence.

He went away soon afterwards. Ten years had been added to his life in that one single day.

He knew, one glance into Valentine's eyes told him, that she no longer believed in him. What was any success with the heart of his darling turned aside?

He walked home feeling tottering and feeble; he had had a blow, but also a strong consolation—his daughter's child—his grandson. Of course the child should be a boy. There was something to live for in such news as this. A boy to step into his shoes by and by—to keep up the credit of the old house; a boy who should have no shame on him, and no dark history. Yes, yes, this was very good news, and unlooked for; he had much to live for yet.

After this Mr Paget followed his daughter about like a shadow. Every day her mind and her powers were developing in fresh directions. She had certainly lost some of the charm of her childish years, but her gain had been greater than her loss. Her face had always been spirituelle, the expression sprightly, the eyes under her arched brows full of light. People had spoken of the girlish face as beautiful, but now that it belonged to a grave and patient, in some respects a suffering woman, they found that it possessed more than ordinary loveliness. The soul had come back again into Valentine's eyes. She knew two things. She was loved—her husband told her that no woman had ever been loved so well before. She was also to become a mother. She considered herself, notwithstanding her crosses, blessed among women, and she resolved to live worthily.

Patience and faith both were born, and whenever she felt inclined to rebel, to fret, to fume, she thought of the day when she should show her baby to her husband, and tell him face to face that all her heart, all her best affections were divided between him and their child.

She kept up her resolution of living on in the little house in Park Lane. She led a busy life, interesting herself in good deals in the anxieties and cares of others. When a woman takes up that role she always finds abundance to do, for there are few pairs of shoulders that have not a burden to carry. She always wrote by every mail to her husband. She had already received one letter from him, posted at Tenerrife. This letter was affectionate—cheerful. Valentine read it over and over. It was a very nice letter, but its words did not reach down into her heart as that other letter of Gerald's, written before he sailed, had done. She was puzzled by it. Still she owned to herself that it was just the letter she ought to receive, just the pleasant happy words of a man who was leading a busy and useful life; who was going away for a definite object, and hoped soon to return to his wife and his home.

All went well with Valentine until a certain day. She rose as usual on the morning of that day, went down to breakfast, opened one or two letters, attended to a couple of domestic matters, and went slowly back to the drawing-room. She liked to dust and tidy her little drawing room herself. She had put it in order this morning, had arranged fresh flowers in the vases, and was finally giving one or two fresh touches to Gerald's violin, which she always kept near her own piano, when she was startled by the consciousness that she was not alone.

She raised her head, turned quickly, a cold shiver seemed to blow on her face. "Valentine!" said her husband's voice, in a tone of unspeakable agony. She fancied she even saw his shadowy outline. She stretched out her arms to him—he faded away.

That afternoon Mrs Wyndham paid her father a visit in the City. She was shown into his private room by Helps, who eyed her from head to foot with great anxiety.

Mr Paget looked into her face and grew perceptibly paler. He was certainly nervous in these days—nervous, and very much aged in appearance.

"Is anything wrong, Valentine?" he could not help saying to his daughter. It was the last sentence he wished to pass his lips—he bit them with vexation after the words had escaped them.

"Sit down, my dear; have you come to take me for a drive, like—like—old times?"

"I have not, father. I have come to know when you expect to hear tidings of the arrival of the Esperance at Sydney."

"Not yet, Valentine. Impossible so soon. In any case we shall have a cable from Melbourne first—the vessel will touch there."

"When are you likely to hear from Melbourne?"

"Not for some days yet."

"But you know the probable time. Can you not ascertain it? Will you hear in ten days? In a week? In three days?"

"You are persistent, Valentine."

Mr Paget raised his eyes and looked at her from head to foot.

"I will ascertain," he said in an almost cold voice, as he sounded an electric bell by his side.

Helps answered the summons. "Helps, when is the Esperance due at Melbourne?"

"Again Helps glanced quickly at Mrs Wyndham; he was standing rather behind her, but could catch a glimpse of her face.

"By the end of May," he said, speaking slowly. His quick eyes sought his chief's; they took their cue. "Not sooner," he continued, "Possibly by the end of May."

"Thank you," said Valentine. "The man withdrew."

"I have nearly a month to wait," she said, rising and looking at her father. "I did not know that the voyage would be such a lengthy one. When you do hear the news will be bad, father; yes, the news will be bad. I have nothing to say about it, no explanation to offer, only I know."

Before Mr Paget could make a single reply, Valentine had left him. He was decidedly alarmed about her. "Can she be going out of her mind?" he colloquized. "Women sometimes do before the birth of their children. What did she mean? It is impossible for her to know anything. Pah! What is there to know? I verily believe I am cultivating that abomination of the age—nerves!"

Whatever Valentine did mean, she met her father that evening as if nothing had happened. She was bright, even cheerful; she played and sang for him. He concluded that she was not out of her mind, that she had simply had a fit of the dials, and dismissed the matter.

The month passed by, slowly for Valentine—very slowly, also, for her father. It passed into space, and there was no news of the Esperance.

More days went by, no news, no tidings of any sort. Valentine thought the vessel was a fortnight overdue. Her father knew that it was at least a month behind its time. When he wrote his letter to the rector of Jewsbury-on-the-Wold he felt even more anxious than his words seemed to admit.

The day after the receipt of this letter Lillias came to town and took Valentine home with her. The next morning Mr Paget went as usual to his office. His first inquiry was for news of the Esperance. The inevitable answer awaited him.

"No tidings as yet."

He went into the snug inner room where he lunched, where Valentine's picture hung, and where he had made terms with Gerald Wyndham. He sank down into an easy chair, and covered his face with his hands.

"Would to God this suspense were at an end," he said.

The words had scarcely passed his lips when Helps knocked for admission; at the inner door, he opened it, caught a glimpse of his servant's face, and fell back.

"You heard," he said. "Come in and tell me quick. The Esperance is lost, and every soul on board!"

"Hush, sir," said Helps. "There's no news of the Esperance. Command yourself, sir. It isn't that—it's the other thing. The young gentleman from India, he's outside—he wants to see you."

"Good God, Helps. Positively I'm faint. Shut the door for a moment; he has come, then. You are sure?"

"This is his card, sir. Mr George Carmichael."

"Give me a moment's time, Helps. So he has come. It would have been all right but for this confounded uncertainty with regard to the Esperance. But it is all right, of course. Plans such as mine don't fail, they are too carefully made. All the same, I am shaken, Helps. Helps, I am growing into an old man."

"You do look queer, Mr Paget; have a little brandy, sir; you'd better."

"Thank you; a little, then. Open that cupboard, you will find the flask. Brandy steadies the nerves. Now I am better. Helps, it was in this room I made terms with young Wyndham."

"God forgive you, sir, it was."

"Why do you say that? You did not disapprove at the time."

"I didn't know Mr Wyndham, sir; had I known, I wouldn't have allowed breathing man to harm a hair of his head."

"How would you have prevented it?"

"How?"

The old clerk's face took an ugly look.

"Split on you, and gone to prison, of course," he said. "Now, shall I send Mr George Carmichael in? It was for his sake you did it. My God, what a sin you sinned! I see Mr Wyndham's face every night of my life. Good God, why should men like him be buried out of the world because of sinners like you and me?"

"He's not hurried out of the world," exclaimed Mr Paget.

He rose and swore a great oath. Then he said in a quieter voice:—

"Ask Mr Carmichael to step into my office."

"Into this room, sir?"

"Into this room, Go, fool."

Certainly Mr Paget had some admirable qualities. By the time a pale faced, slight, languid-looking man made his appearance, he was perfectly calm and self-possessed. He spoke in a courteous tone to his visitor, and bade him be seated.

CONTINUED NEXT WEEK.

The British Medical Journal attacks the time-honored advice, "Early to bed and early to rise," etc., tooth and nail. It says the desire to rise early is usually a sign, not of vigor, but of advancing age. The long, deep sleep of youth is made possible by a thoroughly elastic vascular system, and the stiffening vessels of age are not so easily controlled by the vasomotor nerves; hence, shorter sleep. "Paterfamilias," it continues, "who goes to bed at 11 p. m., wants to get up at 5 o'clock, and look upon his healthy son, who prefers to lie till eight, as a sluggard. When this foolish interpretation of a proverb about the health and wealth to be got from early rising is combined with the still more foolish advice which says of sleep, 'six hours for a man, seven for a woman and eight for a fool,' then we have a vicious system capable of working great mischief to young people of both sexes."

A Common Affliction

Permanently Cured by Taking

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

A CAB-DRIVER'S STORY.

"I was afflicted for eight years with Salt Rheum. During that time I tried every medicine which was highly recommended, but none gave me relief. I was at last advised to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, by a friend who told me that I must purchase the genuine, and not the cheap imitations. I bought a bottle, and used it according to directions. I had not used it long before I felt the effects of the medicine. I had not used it long before I felt the effects of the medicine. I had not used it long before I felt the effects of the medicine."

THE ACADIAN

WOLFVILLE, N. S., JULY 19, 1895.

A Canadian Anniversary.

On the twenty-fourth day of June, 1897, four hundred years will have elapsed since the barque of John Cabot first sighted the rock-bound shore of Cape Breton, and Europe was astonished at the vastness of a new world.

Superintendents of Sunday Schools, chairmen of committees, officers of organizations and all others in charge of arrangements for public and private demonstrations, picnics, socials, etc., should not fail to keep a memorandum at hand containing the dates and days of publication of all newspapers in the county, and in proper time send without discrimination to such newspapers announcements respecting the affairs they have in hand.

Inspector Grant, of the Inland Revenue Department, Halifax, and a couple of Middleton men, visited Gates' Mountain (near Middleton) on Wednesday last, in search of a whiskey still.

Dr. W. G. Grace, the greatest of all cricketers is about to receive a testimonial from his friends in recognition of his achievements as a batsman, bowler, field and captain of the great English national game.

No word has yet been received from Robert McCallum, the young Scotch navigator, who started to cross the Atlantic on the 13th June in the 19-foot sloop Richard K. Fox.

The waters of Niagara Falls, Ontario, have been successfully "harnessed" and a few days ago "the button was pressed" and a two thousand horse power electric current was sent over a wire to the large works of the Pittsburg Reduction company, and its mighty machinery set in perfect motion—a triumph of modern scientific engineering such as the world has never witnessed.

Samuel L. Clements, familiarly known as Mark Twain, the humorist, has become financially embarrassed, through the failure of the publishing house of Charles L. Webster & Co., New York, of which he was a partner.

It is proposed by provincial C. E. delegates in Boston to organize a Dominion convention. This action if taken will in no way affect the loyalty of the societies to Dr. Clark, the founder (who is by the way a Canadian by birth), or their connection with the International convention.

Port Williams.

Mumps and whooping cough have been prevalent here. Mrs. Mark Regan has been visiting her sister out West.

Mrs. W. Newcombe has returned from visiting friends at Newton, Mass. In a short time G. A. Campbell and family go to Antigonish for a rest.

Next week Hattie Stevens, Laura Brown and others go to the Bay for an outing.

July 16th, arrived three-masted schooner "Shanadoosh," Capt. Gibson. She will carry cargo lumber to Boston.

In a few weeks Miss Josephine Regan goes to Brocton, Mass. Mr. and Mrs. Rowe with daughter Lucy, have been at Hall's Harbor for a fortnight.

During the absence of Mrs. and Miss O'Key in England, Miss Dollie is the guest of Mrs. J. W. Fullerton.

At full tide last Tuesday the gasoline boat sailed as far as the bridge. She looks very pretty on the water.

Mr. and Mrs. Martell are slowly improving. Mr. Colwell preached here July 7th and 14th.

Last week Mrs. Buchanan, who for more than a year has been almost helpless, was sent to the V. G. H. We hope her strength may be restored.

Sunday evening next, a meeting will be held by the missionary society of the Christian church. After the first meeting there will be preaching services.

The C. E. Society held in the Baptist church is becoming quite active.

Misses Susie and Marjory Borden have returned from Boston for a vacation. The sisters are splendid types of Scotia's daughters.

Others home for a season are Susie Ford, Hattie Congdon, Naomi Borden, Sarah Welton, Owen Smith, Joseph Beckwith, David Sutton and Mr. Hunt.

Hantsport.

Our little town has been very quiet during the past week; very few have come or gone. The news of the barque "Scotland" caused quite an excitement.

On Thursday, word came that the ship was found dismantled and water-logged in the North Sea, and that no one was on board. On Friday a telegram announced that the crew were safe.

Capt. and Mrs. Welton-Davison recently entertained some of their friends at a picnic held at Gaspereau.

The families of Mr. J. W. Churchill and Dr. Margeson have begun to spend the summer in an Arcadian way at Long Island.

The Misses Shaw, of Wolfville, are spending a few days at St. Comstock's. Mrs. Roberts, of Water, is visiting Mrs. T. A. Mansters.

Mrs. T. C. Marsters has again come home from sea. Mr. and Mrs. A. Faulkner have been visiting Mr. Millatt at Windsor Forks.

Miss Saunders went to Waterville on Thursday to visit her parents.

Misses Ebel Yeaton and Edna Whitman, have gone to New Albany.

Mrs. George Smith left for Boston Saturday to join her husband.

"Plenty of orders and good pay," is reported by Vernon Davison, in the business of selling trees.

A Young People's Christian Endeavor Society has been organized in connection with the Presbyterian congregation at Hantsport. Rev. Mr. Dickie preaches at Hantsport once a fortnight.

Weston.

Mr. O. N. Chipman, who is spending his vacation with his parents in Berwick, preached here last Sunday afternoon with much acceptance, in absence of pastor Simpson, who was preaching and baptizing at Rockland, a section of his pastorate.

Messrs. Fred and A. A. Shaw are home on vacation. Messrs. Frank W. McKinney and W. J. Teas, principals of two of the Grammar Schools of Paterson, N. J., who are touring the Province for the first time, are spending a few weeks here. They are much pleased with the country and say its history will have new interest to them.

Mr. Teas' wife and son accompany him. It is their intention to visit Grand Pre and other points of interest and return via Halifax.

Methodist Notes.

A few of the many friends of Mrs. Geonlund kindly remembered her on the morning of her departure for her new home, with a purse and address. Also a handsome bouquet of hot-house roses, Mr. and Mrs. Geonlund have been with us for three years, and in that time have won the hearts of all. While sorry to part with them we wish them every happiness and prosperity in their new home.

Mr. Hale occupied the Methodist pulpit for the first time Sabbath, July 14th. Large and appreciative congregations listened to him both morning and evening. We were glad to welcome our Presbyterian friends in the evening, there being no service in their church. We extend to Mr. Hale and family a hearty welcome to our town, and wish him success in his labors.

Canadian Law a Terror to Evil-Doers.

Even when Canadian justice is so strict in its findings it is swift and sure. This prompt enforcement of the law is a terror to evil-doers who are apt to measure chances of escaping punishment before they challenge the penalty by committing the crime to which it is aimed.

Mr. F. J. Porter has had his store greatly improved in appearance this week by a new coat of paint. He has also had his name painted in heavy black letters across the top of the awning in front.

London Shrub—the latest & ink, 5c. glass, at the Drugstore.

We would call the attention of the street authorities to the fact that some of our streets, especially Main street, would be the better for another cleaning up. The gutters want cleaning out and the grass should be removed.

Summer School of Science.
The ninth annual session of the Summer School of Science for the Maritime Provinces which is now in session at Amherst, is proving one of the most successful in the history of the province. Not only is the attendance good, but the interest which the students are taking in their work seems to be even greater than usual. The mornings are spent in class work, the afternoons in laboratory or field work, and the evenings in discussion. One of the most popular classes of the school is the class in English Literature, conducted by Principal Cameron, of Yarmouth. Not only the students attend. The class is at present studying the book of Job. On Monday evening a very interesting round table talk was held, the subject under discussion was "Research in schools" as opposed to "exam." Prof. Andrews opened the discussion which was continued by Prof. Anderson, Dr. Hall, Principal Cameron, Mrs. Patterson, Principal Campbell, Miss Murphy, Miss Graham and others. On Tuesday evening Principal Cameron gave a lecture on astronomy. Thursday evening Mrs. Patterson gave a most interesting paper on kindergarten work together with class exhibition. A discussion followed which was taken part in by Supervisor McKay, Halifax; Principal Hay, St. John; Principal Smith, Windsor; Principal Cameron, Principal Campbell, Prof. Anderson and a number of ladies. Dr. Anderson, of Prince of Wales College, lectured before the school on Friday evening, his subject being Sir Walter Scott. Col. Blair, of the Experimental farm, has extended a very kind invitation to the school to visit the farm. An excursion and picnic was arranged for there yesterday. On Saturday the school had a most delightful drive. A large number of visitors have been spending a few days with the school, among them being Dr. McKay, of Halifax; Prof. Hay, of St. John; Dr. Inch, of Fredericton; Supervisor McKay, Halifax, and Dr. Anderson, of Prince Edward Island.—Ez.

CURRY—REICHMAN.—At Lynn, Mass., on June 24th, Capt. Arthur Curry, of Windsor, and Mrs. Beatie Reichman, of Wolfville.

Local and Provincial.
The work on the new store being erected by Mr. J. L. Franklin, is progressing rapidly, and Mr. Franklin expects to get moved in in a few weeks.

Our clever artist, Mr. W. P. Blenkhorn, has been at work this week upon a very neat sign for Dr. J. E. Mulloney. It is done in gold-leaf, and presents a very fine appearance.

The twenty-eighth annual convention of the Y. M. C. Associations will be held in Halifax, August 8-11, and also the summer school for Bible Workers will be held at the same place from August 12th to 16th.

The summer tourists are now arriving in our Province in large numbers. On Sunday last Wolfville was filled with them. Hotels and livery stables are doing a good business. We are glad to see them, and our people will aim to make their visit here enjoyable.

If you do not care for "Soda" try a "shake."

Rev. William McCullough, D. D., pastor emeritus of the First Presbyterian church, Truro, died at one o'clock Sunday morning after a brief illness of gastritis, aged 84 years. The venerable doctor was only confined to his bed a week ago. He leaves a widow and two daughters.

Rev. Joseph Hale, who succeeds Rev. Oscar Groulx as pastor of the Methodist church in this town, took his first service in that church on Sunday last. In the evening he spoke from Phil. 1:21. The church was well filled. Mr. Hale is a pleasant and impressive speaker, and will no doubt prove a successful minister here. We take pleasure in welcoming him to our town.

The township of Aylesford last year exported 950 barrels of cranberries and it was estimated that fully half the crop was destroyed by the heavy frosts. This year cranberries are in bloom about six days earlier and the prospects for a good crop never were better. It is estimated that in Aylesford alone there were 100 acres of bog set with cranberry vines within the past year.

Bananas 20c. a Doz. at F. J. Porter's.

One of our most enterprising citizens is Mr. W. J. Balcom, the genial livery stable proprietor. He is continually making additions to his stock of carriages, etc., and his stables are easily the best equipped in the county. Among the more recent purchases made by him are a large picnic wagon, and a handsome barouch, both of which seem to be in almost constant demand. W. J. is a hustler, and is bound to be at the top.

After much anxious waiting on the part of the proprietors of the new launch the gasoline ordered from Boston arrived this week and the Nymph made a trial trip on Tuesday. She sails splendidly and was greatly admired by a large number of people from the wharves. She makes nine miles per hour easily and looks very pretty as she glides swiftly over the water. We congratulate the proprietors on the success of their undertaking. We understand the Nymph is the only craft of the kind in the Maritime Provinces.

A STORY FOR MOTHERS

Which May Save the Lives of Their Daughters.

A Young Lady at Merrickville Saved When Near Death's Door—Her Illness Brought About by Ailments Peculiar to Her Sex—Only One Way in Which They can be Successfully Resisted.

From the Ottawa Citizen. Perhaps there is no healthier people on the continent of America to-day than the residents of the picturesque village of Merrickville, situated on the Rideau river, and the reason is not so much in its salubrious climate as in the wise precautions taken by its inhabitants in warding off disease by a timely use of proper medicine. The greatest favorite is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and many are the testimonials in regard to their virtues.

Your correspondent on Monday last called at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. H. Easton, and interviewed their daughter, Miss Hattie Easton, a handsome young lady of 20 years, who is known to have been very low and has been restored to health by the use of Pink Pills. "Yes," she said, "I suffered a great deal, but I am so thankful that I am once more restored to health. You have no idea what it is to be so near the portals and feel that everything in life's future is about to slip from your grasp and an early grave your doom. I was taken ill four years ago with troubles peculiar to my sex, and which has hurried many a young woman to her doom—an early grave. I have taken in all about twenty boxes of Pink Pills, and I am only too glad to let the world know what these wonderful little pellets have done for me, hoping that some other unfortunate young woman may be benefited as I was. When sixteen years of age I began to grow pale and weak, and many thought I was going into decline. I became gradually decreased and at times would become unconscious. My strength gradually decreased and I became so emaciated that I was simply a living skeleton. My blood seemed to turn to water and my face was the color of a corpse. I had tried different kinds of medicines, but they did me no good. I was at last confined to my room for several months and hopes of my recovery were given up. At last a friend strongly urged the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and after using a few boxes I began to grow slightly stronger, I continued their use until I had used about twelve boxes, when I found myself restored to health. I now quit using the pills and for six months I never felt better in my life. Then I began to feel that I was not as regular as I should be and to feel the old tired feeling once more coming on. Once more I resorted to Pink Pills, and by the time I had used six boxes I found my health fully restored. I keep a box by me and occasionally when I feel any symptoms of a return of the old trouble, I take a few and I am all right again. I cannot find words of sufficient weight to express my appreciation of the wonderful curative qualities of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and sincerely hope that all who are afflicted as I was will give them a trial and I am certain they will find renewed health.

The facts above related are important, to parents as there are many young girls just budding into womanhood whose condition is, to say the least, more critical than their parents imagine. Their complexion is pale and waxy in appearance, troubled with heart palpitations, headache, shortness of breath, and the slightest exercise, faintness and other distressing symptoms which invariably lead to a premature grave unless prompt steps are taken to bring about a natural condition of health. In this emergency no remedy yet discovered can supply the place of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which build and restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. They are a sure and certain cure for all troubles peculiar to the female system, young or old.

A Mother's Devotion.

All the way through a man's life, he is consumed like a beautiful fabric in unholly passion, or held aloft like St. George's banner, undefiled in the battle of life, his mother stands by him to the last. If he is successful, she is proud; if he is often cast down, she is pitiful; if he is wicked, she excuses him; if he dies young, her hopes are buried in his grave, and she never ceases to dream of what her darling might have been. Others may love him well, but their love never discounts hers. Others may be proud of him, but she always sits in the front row with those who applaud, and catches the splendor of his achievements before it is more to other eyes than a light reflected from afar, or the noise of wings that tarry in their coming. She anticipates his triumphs and antedates his victories. There is an "I told you so" in her proud eyes long before men hand in the verdict of his greatness, and all his achievements are but the prophecies of her loving dreams.

And when she dies, when the fluttering breath has expended itself in the last kiss, when the soft old hands have loosened of their clasps, never before removed since his helpless baby days, when the patient, yearning eyes have withdrawn their gaze to look their first on G.A., what loss can overtake a man's life like this? The dove that brooded above the household nest, and kept every morsel in the shadow of her wings, has winged her flight to Heaven. The everlasting love, that no unfaith, nor sin, nor ingratitude could chill or destroy, has vanished like the sun from out the sky, leaving only a few faint stars and a wan and chilly moon to fill its place. —Chicago Journal.

Wine Drinking in France. It is not unusual for the advocates of moderate drinking—those who believe in the "proper use" of a diluted spirit to point to wine drinking countries of Europe in support of their theories regarding the beneficial properties of "light wines." We would call the attention of these to the fact that inebriety is rapidly increasing in France, and that it is the doctors who are sounding the alarm, and insisting upon legislative action regarding the liquor traffic. They declare that a "race of alcoholics" is rapidly growing up in that country, and that the liquor problem is no longer a question to be trifled with, for if permitted to continue unchecked, the degeneracy of the people through an alcoholic heredity will result in the depopulation of France. These facts are of interest to Canadian readers with reference to the recent ratification of the French Treaty, by our legislation at Ottawa. It was said at that time that this measure would be conducive to temperance. The following extract is from a new book recently published in France by a Frenchman named Charles Wagner:

"The great dark cloud on the horizon is alcoholism. Doubtless its influence is felt in all classes of society, but it is above all the scourge of the people. It is a scourge of recent date—one that has appeared in the last thirty or forty years. Alcoholism is the very latest poison and a cosmopolitan. It can be assigned to native land. Since, through heredity, it has entered the blood and marrow of the people, and is spread alike in country and city, it has alarmed first physicians and lawyers, and little by little all thinkers. The race is stricken in a vital spot. Hospitals, insane asylums and prisons give daily evidence of its progress. In some countries it is easier to count those who are not than those who are addicted to it. Add to this, that what is now drunk is radically different from what was drunk in old times. It is not in the domain of ideas only that our age has discovered fraud. Its material as well as its intellectual and moral sustenance is poison. Its favorite drink is a cheap mixture, adulterated with spirits made of beet root and potatoes, with which the great manufacturers inundate the world. It can be said with truth that it drinks its death and that of its children. The future is poisoned, and coming generations are doomed to blight, insanity and crime. The consequences of alcoholism—economic, hygienic, moral, political and social—can never be calculated. Of nine-tenths of the ruin, disease, accidents, crime, fanaticism, and popular disturbances, we can truly exclaim: The cause is alcohol."

Alcoholism ravages the youth of the people to a frightful extent. There is hardly a form of amusement without it. It disturbs and destroys healthful pleasure. It prevents physical culture; it neutralizes the effects of social meetings where good fellowship and relaxation are sought. Every meeting, every excursion, no matter what its object, runs a risk of ending in a drinking bout. Menaces become coarse, and talk and songs brutal.

Formerly the city relied on the influx of new blood from the fields and mountains to recruit its strength. These reserves are themselves affected. There are in the valleys where springs flow over, where the air is pure, and where the memory of man cannot recall an epidemic. But alcohol reigns. The number of feeble babies is constantly on the increase. There is a demoralization in habits, in the pocket, in the household. The fruit of a life of labor disappears in smoke. Alcohol is more terrible than the plague, than war, or any scourge of God! Outward losses may be made good; but how shall we remedy an evil which devours blood, brains and nerves, and destroys even the basis of life!

Sometimes, in reviewing our civilization, the question is asked, What can man do? It cannot go down before an invasion of barbarians like that of antiquity. Its enemies, nevertheless, are not far to seek. They do not swarm on a distant horizon, like the Huns and Vandals; they are in its midst, and alcohol is one of the most terrible.

What hope can there be for the future in a youth given over to alcohol? A democracy rests on the good sense of the people; on the wisdom and energy of its citizens; on the spirit of order, of work, of economy. For all these good things one can tremble as long as alcoholism and brainy pain ground. They are the bar-barians in our midst.
