A Great Intrigue,

OR, THE Mistress of Darracourt.

CHAPTER III.

"Oh, soon, please," she murmured. "They can be harnessed in ten minutes," he said, almost persuasively. "A run would do them good. If you like—they can be put to now."

"But I am not dressed—I mean I have no outdoor things on, and—"

"You can drive over the park, inside your own gate," he said, quietly.

"Very well," said Lucille, without looking at him. "Now, please."

His eyes flashed as he turned and gave his directions, and as he led her to the next stable three grooms went at the ponies as if they were harnessing them for a fire-engine and hadn't a minute to spare.

As they turned into the courtyard again, Lucille saw a delicious little phaeton with the ponies attached. It was an admirable turn-out, and Harry Herne had bought it, though he didn't say so. It was all nearly new, and the carriage, the harness, the silver mounts, glittered in the June sunlight.

Perhaps nothing she had yet seen of all her vast wealth had roused so keen a sensation of pleasure in Lucille's bosom.

With his hat in his hand, Harry Herne stood to help her in; but she did not touch his hand, and got into the low phaeton without his assistance. He got in and took the reins. "I'll start with them, if you please, miss," he said. "Let them go, William."

The groom "let them go" literally, for they were off and out of the yard like black arrows from a bow.

"Oh, dear!" said Lucille, as they dashed round the corner of the terrace and along the park road, "they seem rather wild."

"It is life, and youth, and fun," he said, with a short laugh. "There is no vice in them, miss. You shall take them directly, if you please, when they have settled down."

They drove on in silence for a time, and Lucille thought his attention was taken up by the ponies, but his eye seemed like a hawk's—not the slightest or the most trivial thing escaped it.

Life took a new interest for her. In all her young days she had never spent such a quarter-hour—such a half hour!—It was nearly half an hour since they started, and she had forgotten time and circumstance, forgotten almost that the man beside her was her servant!

"Now, miss," he said; "they have settled down now. Will you take them?"

He got out and gave her the reins, and standing by the ponies' heads, altered the curb reins so that the lively little animals should be more easily checked.

Lucille took the white reins, then made a grimace.

"Oh, dear; they cut my fingers. It's because I haven't any gloves. And I can't hold them properly!" and she drew her gloves down.

He looked unduly distressed; then his eyes fell upon his own gloves.

which he had thrown on the seat. Her eyes followed his, and she smiled. "Oh, they are too large!" she said, without thinking; then she looked at them again. They were too large, of course; but his hand was small and shapely for a man's.

"Perhaps you could hold one in your hand," he suggested.

"Give them to me, please?" she said, imperiously.

With downcast eyes, and something like a flush mantling on his cheek, he gave them to her, and, with a pout and a smile of impatience, Lucille drew one on.

"Ridiculous!" she exclaimed, holding up her hand, upon the fingers of which the gloves stood like terriers' ears. "But it is better than nothing."

"If you will take it off again for a moment," he said. And when she had done so, he took out his knife and cut an inch off the fingers at a stroke.

Lucille put the glove on again, inwardly wondering at his readiness.

"I am very clumsy, I am afraid," said Lucille.

"No, no," he responded, hurriedly. "Gracious, how they pull at me! They will pull me out of the carriage! How delicious it is! What is that?" and she nodded to a small cottage—a small, thatched hut, rather standing in a little clearing among the trees.

"That is my cottage," he replied; "I mean, that is where I used to live," he corrected himself, quickly and in a low voice. "The squire gave—lent it to me; but Mr. Head took the key and turned me out—as he had a right to do."

Lucille looked straight in front of her.

"It was cruel!" she said, incautiously. "You shall have the cottage back again."

He was silent for a moment; then, without looking at her, he murmured something that sounded like "Thank you," and glancing at him, she saw his face was pale and working.

"It is only just," she said, trying to speak coldly. "You were turned out for no reason, and I am only doing what my uncle did, in restoring you."

"Thank you, miss," he said and his voice was husky. "You are kinder to me, ah, very much kinder than I deserve."

"Please say no more," she said, haughtily. "Oh, what made them start like that?"

What made them start like that was the tall figure of the marquis, standing beside a tree, and waiting for them, with his dark eyes gleaming from his pale face.

A fire shot into Harry Herne's eyes for a second, then left it calm and set. "It is the Marquis of Merle, miss!" he said.

CHAPTER IV.

Lucille flushed; then she bowed, and was driving on, but the marquis stood, with his hat in his hand in such a manner that she felt compelled to stop.

Harry Herne got out, raised his hat, and stood by the ponies' heads, his eyes fixed on vacancy.

"Good-morning, Miss Darracourt," said the marquis. "I was going up to the Court to ask if I could be of any service to you. I am glad to find you out on this beautiful morning."

"I was driving," said Lucille, rather lamely, and a little nervously.

"Well, I mustn't keep you," he said; "unless, perhaps—but it is a great thing to ask!"

Lucille looked up at him inquiringly, wishing to Heaven he would go. Harry Herne stood like a statue, a statue of Saxon comeliness, at the ponies' heads.

"I was going to ask you to be so gracious as to take me to the Court," said the marquis.

Lucille inclined her head. "Certainly!" she said.

The marquis got in, taking the only vacant place, Harry Herne's.

"How kind and gracious of you!" Lucille looked from him to Harry Herne; the marquis leaned back as if it were merely a groom standing there. What was Lucille to do?

"Let them go, please," she said, trying to speak carelessly.

Harry Herne released the ponies, and came up to her side.

"Do not touch them with the whip," he said, in a low voice, "and do not turn sharply, miss."

Lucille flushed, and inclined her head.

"Very well," she said, and the next moment the ponies shot off.

Harry Herne stood, and looked after them, with a pale, set face, and folded arms; then, without a word, he struck across the park for the Court, with lowered head and constrained lips.

"So lovely a morning as this is a fitting welcome to you, Miss Darracourt," said the marquis. "I hope you are satisfied with your inheritance?"

"Oh, yes," said Lucille, hurriedly. "It is beautiful and grand, and almost too wonderful."

She did not look at him; his presence made her uncomfortable and nervous. She had felt no fear of the ponies while Harry Herne was by her side, but now she got confused, and jumbled up the reins, and pulled at them awkwardly.

"A beautiful pair of ponies," said the marquis. "Rather badly broken, I am afraid. They are making you tired. Will you let me drive?"

"Oh, thanks, will you?" responded Lucille, with a sigh of relief, as she held out the reins to him.

"I shall be delighted," he said. "They would go much quieter if they were not so tightly reined up. I will alter the bearing reins. There, it is all right now," he added, as he unfastened the bearing reins and got in.

As a matter of fact the spirit of mischief which lies just under a pony's skin, always ready to break out, was now up and rising, and having been given their heads by the kind-hearted marquis, they played up the stereotyped tricks to their fullest satisfaction.

"Very badly broken indeed!" said the marquis; "that man should never be allowed to break a horse, Miss Darracourt, believe me."

As he spoke he took the dainty whip.

"Oh, don't whip them!" said Lucille, quickly. "He specially cautioned me not to—!" The marquis' lips compressed, and with a pleasant laugh he gave the ponies a cut which looked playful, but was vicious and hurt them.

It hurts their hides and their feelings, too. With a start and a toss of their heads they stopped short, then dashed off at full speed. The marquis had no gloves on, and he had lost his temper, for all his beautiful smiling. He tried to stop them, and finding he could not, tried to turn them.

They turned, but instead of stopping, ran up the low bank and got on to the short, smooth grass; and when their heels felt the welcome footing they whispered wickedly to each other and bolted in right good earnest.

"Don't be alarmed!" muttered the marquis through his teeth. "I will pull them up directly. Pray do not be alarmed!"

Before them, to her horror, Lucille saw the edge of a plantation. If the ponies reached that in their wild stampede, she, ignorant as she was, knew that the carriage must be dashed to pieces and themselves—!

Lucille put up her hands in a wild appeal to Heaven; but the words that left her white lips were:

"Harry! Harry!"

Another moment would have meant destruction; but before the moment came a man sprang from the plantation—from the sky, it seemed!—and hurled himself upon the ponies.

There was a shock—a wild confusion; a plunging of the forelegs, snorts of terror and rage, and then the carriage was brought to a standstill.

Lucille rose and looked, and the first thing she saw was Harry Herne, half lying on the ground with the reins, close to the bit, grasped in his hands, the reins starting on his forehead, from which the blood was running in a small rivulet. The next second he was up, tall and straight, with his face turned towards the marquis with a look upon it she would never forget.

She got out and staggered rather than walked up to him, uttering a series of faint "oh's!" her eyes fixed on his bleeding face.

"Are you hurt? Are you hurt? Are you hurt?" he asked brokenly, peremptorily.

"No, no!" she uttered, impatiently. "But you! Look!" and she pointed to his face.

He put up his hand and brought it down stinging red.

"It is nothing; nothing, miss!" he said, quietly.

Celebrated Norwegian Jigger

Fishermen should use these Jiggers and rig them with swivels same style as in Norway, then the Jigger acts like a minnow and when spinning attracts the fish, so that instead of jiggling they really snap the Jigger and in this manner you never fail to catch them. Ordinary leads can be used, but the Norwegian style seems more simple and easily made. Our fishermen should try this great Norwegian fish killer.

WHY NOT TRY IT.

Why Are You Generous.

By RUTH CAMERON.

We were discussing the character of a mutual acquaintance the other day. Someone called him selfish; someone else defended him. As one article in his defense a lavish gift to a neighbor's child was mentioned.

"That doesn't prove anything," retorted his critic, "he likes to give things to Ruth. He's fond of her. He doesn't do it because he's unselfish. He does it because he likes it."

The talk swung off to other points for and against the defendant, but I did not follow it further because I was traveling down the vista which the critic's last words had opened.

"He doesn't do it because he's unselfish. He does it because he likes to."

How confused, crisscrossed and but partially understood by the wisest of us are the springs of human action! And how difficult, nay how impossible, even if one could see straight into men's hearts, and could understand these springs of action, would it be to measure and weigh human goodness and say, "This man is better than that"; the other deserves more credit than this one."

This man's critic denied him credit for his generosity because he enjoyed it. How much of all the generosity in the world do you suppose is entirely free from the motive of self-gratification?

The lowest motive for generosity is to win approval and gratitude. We want to be praised, we want to be thought well of and so we give. Such generosity is like the caress of a cat, that coldest and most self-contained of domesticated animals, which under a show of affection, rubs up against your arm merely to scratch its back.

Infinitely above this is the desire to make someone whom we love happy, but is not this also a form of self-gratification? If you love anyone very dearly you enjoy their pleasure. In giving to a friend you give to another self.

To give without any wish for gratitude and to give to someone whom you do not love, merely because you wish to benefit humanity—this is the highest, the purest and of course the rarest kind of unselfishness.

Yet one would not care to benefit humanity unless one loved it in a certain way, so this too is a rare and glorified form of self-gratification.

Do I mean by all this to decrier generosity and put him who practices it on the same plane with the man who thinks only of himself? Far from it. We were just amusing ourselves by examining that tangled skein of human motives which somehow weaves itself into human destinies. It does not make a thing wrong that you enjoy it, and generosity is no less generous and beautiful because we get pleasure out of it—perhaps the more so. To be able to love a friend so well that his pleasure is yours is a high form of soul culture. And to be able to love humanity in this way is a still higher form. This is what we mean when we describe a man by that word which, to my thinking, is the highest title of praise in the English language—an altruist.

Paris, Aug. 19.—The Matin reports that the French steamer Saghalien held in the Dardanelles by the German cruiser Brestau (reported to have been sold to Turkey) complained to the military governor, who asked the captain to leave.

Most Horrible.

Europe in Arms—Great Britain at War With Germany—Germany's Flagrant Violation of the Law of Nations—We Must Begin Again.

We shall just have to begin all over again and rebuild all that has been thrown down in the last few terrible days.

Less than fifty men have lain Europe in moral ruin. The Austrian Emperor made the first move; the German Emperor has swept the board; and on these two men lie the burden of the greatest crime of modern Europe. They are enemies of civilization.

WAR!

To-day Germany is at war with Great Britain, Russia, Belgium, and Luxembourg. Millions on millions of men are in arms. Industry is at a standstill. All the amenities of civilized people are at an end and the voice of complaining will be heard throughout the land. Spiritual progress is threatened, for Europe has turned from its peaceful pursuits back to the days of brute force, and the absorbing problem of each nation at this moment is to see which can mobilize the greatest force. On that depends the first victory to-day.

A TROUGH OF BLOOD.

Europe is going down into a terrible trough of blood because the War Lords have been guilty of "flagrant violations of the law of nations"—that spiritual cement which binds society together. But this war will see an end to the War Lords.

No man has yet proved morally equal to the task of holding the lives of millions of men in his own hands. And yet less than fifty men to-day have pulled down a thousand years of history and doomed thousands of their fellows to an agonising death.

WHEN IT IS OVER.

But we shall begin all over again. When the body of the last dead soldier is buried and the last gun is silenced, and when the nations are at peace through exhaustion, they will turn back again with sorrowful steps to the hills of Galilee and ask once more to be told the tale of the Carpenter Who spoke as never man spoke before. Then perhaps they will listen.

Nietzsche sneered only too successfully in Germany at "the slave morality of Christianity." Slaves heard his message gladly in the olden days. But there is a worse slavery than lack of freedom, and that is the slavery of free men—free men who have freely submitted themselves to the yoke of War.

LORDS OF THEMSELVES.

The Emperor of Austria and the Emperor of Germany each has been too long "Lord of himself," and Europe to-day knows the sequel, as Byron knew—that he who is "lord of himself" has a "heritage of woe" which he does not keep to himself.

So Great Britain to-day finds itself compelled to fight for its very existence.

The only leaders of men who are inevitable are those who are leaders by the moral right and puissance of their own spiritual personality. And in days to come our leaders and rulers must not give merely unmeaning lip service to the highest ideals, but must be those who have attained unto righteousness by the casting out of self.

The historian of the future will not fail to note that the week before Armageddon in Europe the Bishops were discussing Kikuyu.

MORAL STRENGTH.

The world has outrun its moral strength. The world is not yet morally fit for a credit system the safety of which depends upon personal honour and national honour, to say nothing of respect for the law of nations to which we have put our names by way of agreement.

Our credit system demands a perpetual peace, and as we cannot command that, all the world finds to-day that it has taken too great risks and has moved too far away from the simple bases of life.

But we shall begin all over again, and shall rebuild a better, and a stronger and a nobler world—with the women at our side.—Public Opinion.

One Man Warship.

A businesslike-looking fifty foot motor boat, flashing up and down the river, between Westminster and Waterloo Bridges recently attracted considerable attention. It played round and about the Thames Conservancy launches, turning in its own length and racing down beside the Embankment.

It was one of two 140 h.p. motor yachts built for the Greek Navy built by Messrs. Thornycroft. The whole boat can be controlled by one man, who has the levers working the engines one on each side of him as he stands in the wheel house.

In Chinatown

Mrs. Kerr, the boarding house keeper, smiled sagely when she saw Marian and Barker leave together at six o'clock that evening.

"You say you've never been to the Edgewood Club?" asked Barker. "You find it a most delightful place to dine."

"So I've heard. But do you know," said Marian, "I've a wild and uncanny desire to invade Chinatown instead."

"Then Chinatown it shall be," agreed Barker promptly. "I'm glad you've expressed your preference. We'll eat amid less elegance, but more color so for the savory chop suey and the smouldering joss-sticks."

The subway bore them rapidly downtown. As they made their way presently into the heart of the crowded, polygot East Side, Marian gazed for the first time upon that curious summary of strange peoples, initiated for the first time its jumbled smells, its quaint shops, swarming multitudes of aliens, street merchants peddling queer, exotic foods, its outlandish sights and sounds, stimulated Marian as though she were a pilgrim in a foreign land, instead of within a taxi-cab's dash of Broadway and Fifth Avenue.

Her companion's running comments on the streets they traversed betrayed an interesting and finely informed cosmopolitanism. The man from Boston knew his New York quite as well as Jack Meadows had known his Montmartre. "This little trip may help you with your stories," observed Barker. "There's local color in great big gobs down in this end of town."

In her excitement, Marian had well nigh forgotten that she was a writer, so swift and unexpected had been her plunge into the profession. "Oh, I'm sure of it," she replied enthusiastically. "And you're a wonderful guide."

"Hardly," he smiled. "But you're a wonder 'guide,' if I may venture the coinage of a word."

Barker expressed the sentiment with a wealth of fervor. His heart drummed in the presence of the handsome young woman. Marian dismissed the compliment with a smile as radiant that her escort realized then and there that he was on the verge of falling precipitately in love.

Into famous Motz Street they made their way and were soon ascending the stairs of the Mandarin, where yellow-faced, oily-voiced men were luging oriental foods to lovers of the odd fare. The place teemed with color. It glowed in the fantastic lamps, lurked in the weirdly embroidered curtains, slept in the in-lay work of the table. With Frank, her former husband, Marian had occasionally invaded somewhat similar, but less pretentious, Chinese restaurants in their home town. To-night the sights and characteristic odors of the Celestial cafe smote her with dull memories, and carried her back to earlier, unhappier days.

She ordered her favorite dish and frisked frequent eating, tantalizing smiles at her companion. Already the game had laid subtle hold of her interest. What was the harm? She would fall a bit with the sentimental Bostonian bachelor, why not? If she intended to write, she must study human nature wherever possible. Thus she justified herself for the innocent part she was to play in the little drama which she knew was about to begin unfolding itself.

Western Harvest in Full Swing

Earlier Than Ever Known Before.
Reports from the West indicate that the harvest this year will be the earliest on record, due to the unprecedented sledge of dry and hot weather that has prevailed during the past few weeks. Cereals and crops that have never been known to be dry have been without water for some time. This dry weather has caused early ripening, and as the crop generally will be light the work of harvesting will be correspondingly lessened.

Crop authorities are now beginning to venture estimates as to yield. Alberta, it is stated, will have about 15,000,000 bushels of wheat or about 6,000,000 bushels less than last year. In Saskatchewan where conditions as to drought, etc., are, in the southwestern, central western and northwestern portions somewhat similar to those in southern Alberta, the total yield is placed at 102,000,000 bushels, or about 10,000,000 bushels less than 1913. The estimate for Manitoba is about 55,000,000 or about 7,000,000 bushels less than last year. This gives a total for the three provinces of 172,000,000 bushels, or 24,000,000 less than in 1913. How nearly correct this estimate is will not be known till the grain is harvested. Of other crops such as oats, barley and flax, yields will be lighter than in 1913, for the same reasons given for the reduction in wheat yield. Flax promises about 10,000,000 bushels, as compared with 13,000,000 bushels in 1913. Estimates for oats and barley are given at 210,000,000 bushels, as compared with about 250,000,000 bushels in 1913.

Recent official reports from Prince Edward Island indicate good crops of hay, wheat, oats and barley. Corn was seeded very late. Potatoes are well up to the average. Turnips and mangels have made good growth. Early apples will be plentiful, but later kinds are scarce.

If Prince Edward Island conditions may be taken as generally representing the other provinces down by the sea, the Maritime Provinces are likely to have a good average harvest.—Canadian Farmer.

Big Battle Being Fought.

GREAT BATTLE NOW ON IN SOUTH BELGIUM—WILL LAST FOR DAYS.

Special to Evening Telegram.

PARIS, To-day.
The following official announcement was issued to-night: "A great battle is now in progress along the vast line extending from Mons to the frontier of Luxembourg. Our troops in conjunction with the British have assumed everywhere the offensive. We are faced with the whole German Army both active and reserve. The ground especially on our right is thickly wooded and difficult. The battle will last several days. The enormous extent of the front and the great number of forces involved, make it impossible to follow step by step the movement of each hour of the armies. We must await the result of the first phase of the combat before we can form any conclusion as to the situation. Otherwise we should be giving the press divergent and contradictory news, since such a battle naturally is made up of actions and reactions which follow and connect in a continuous manner."

LONDON, To-day.
An official despatch to the Reuter's Telegram Company at Antwerp, timed 10.50 o'clock Saturday night tends to confirm the report that a great battle began yesterday (Friday) morning between the French and the Germans. The despatch says: "It is believed that a great battle commenced between the French and German armies between Namur and Charleroi. It is thought it will last two or three days. Details are lacking."

AUSTRIAN CRUISER DISARMS

SERVIANS WIN DECISIVE VICTORY

Special to Evening Telegram.

PARIS, To-day.
The first detailed account of the great battle between Servians and Austrians, which lasted seven days in the territory between Babak and Leahnax, arrived by telegraph from Kranjcz, sent by Henry Barky, war correspondent of the Paris Journal. The battle ended in a great victory for the Servians. The Austrians were decisively defeated and precipitately retired, seeking to recross the River Drina. The Servian army pursued them with drawn swords, inflicting a great slaughter. When the fugitives reached the bridges, the Servian artillery, all ready, opened fire. The spoils were enormous, fifty guns, a complete ambulance, a complete equipment of a train of ammunition and several thousand prisoners falling into the hands of the Serbs.

ITALY WILL REMAIN NEUTRAL

LONDON, To-day.
A despatch to the Stefani Agency from Rome says that a deputation of Socialists and urged him to convene Parliament in order to strengthen the hands of the Government against the tendencies calculated to make it depart from its attitude of neutrality. The deputation hinted

In this connection that reports were being circulated that mobilization was imminent. The Premier replied that nothing had happened to justify the summoning of Parliament. He declared the Government was firmly resolved to adhere to neutrality and denied the reports that mobilization was contemplated.

AUSTRIANS FLED.

NISH, To-day.
The following official communication was made public here after the great Serbian victory. The Austrians fled in complete disorder before the Serbian pursuit.

GERMANS RUSHING 20,000 TROOPS CHARLEROI

LONDON, To-day.
The Antwerp correspondent of Reuter's forwards the following official despatch: "Since Saturday the situation around Antwerp has greatly improved. The Belgian flying columns have completely cleared the environs of all Germans who either were sent away or taken to the prisoners. Our troops have visited the camps in and around the districts and also environs of Malines but discovered no trace of the enemy anywhere. Telegraphing from Rose Endau, Holland, the correspondent of the Central News says there is no doubt a big battle is now in progress in the neighborhood of Charleroi, Belgium. The Germans are rushing troops in that direction. Only 3,000 troops are left in Brussels which is more completely isolated than Liege. The Germans have occupied all villages between Louvain and Alost in order that the passage of the main army may not be interrupted, there are no Germans excepting patrols around Ghent."

GERMANS SCATTERING MINES.

LONDON, To-day.
The British Official News Bureau makes the following announcement: "The Admiralty draws attention to its previous warning to neutrals of the danger of traversing the North Sea. The Germans are continuing their practical scattering of mines indiscriminately upon ordinary trade routes. These mines do not conform to the conditions of the Hague Convention. They do not become operative after a certain number of hours. They are not laid in connection with any definite military scheme, such as closing of a military seaport or as a distinct operation against a fighting fleet, but appear to be scattered on the chance of catching individual British war or merchant vessels. In consequence of this policy, neutral ships, whatever their destination, are exposed to the gravest danger. Two Danish vessels, steamers Maryland and Broberg have within the last 24 hours been destroyed by these deadly engines in the North Sea while travelling on the ordinary trade routes a considerable distance from the British coast. In addition to this, it is reported that two Dutch steamers clearing from Swedish ports were yesterday blown up by German mines in the Gulf of Finland. In the circumstances the Admiralty desires to impress not only on British but on neutral shipping, the vital importance of touching at British ports before entering the North Sea, to ascertain, according to the latest information, the routes and channels which the Admiralty is keeping swept, and along these routes, the dangers to neutrals and merchantmen are being removed as far as possible. The Admiralty, while reserving to itself liberty of action against this new form of warfare, announces that it has not so far laid any lines of mines in the present war and is endeavoring to keep the sea routes open for peaceful commerce."

England Expects Every Man to Do His Duty.

According to official information from France and Belgium a mighty battle is now in progress. It apparently extends over a front of a hundred miles or more, and it is on a scale which the world has never seen before. It began on Friday morning and has now been raging for a period of more than three days, and may last many days yet. We have now arrived at a period of great anxiety, but it behooves us to conduct ourselves with the self-restraint and stubbornness of our forefathers, no matter what the outcome may be. The policy of Germany is to strike as hard as she possibly can against the French in South Belgium and France before the Russians are able to strike hard at her on her eastern frontier. Russia has now begun to hammer at her on those borders, and the pressure from Russia will increase from day to day, so that Germany with most of her army corps in Belgium and on the French frontier will not be able to strike stronger than she is striking now. If only the French and British are able to hold their own for the next week, Germany must weaken from the great Russian armies which have begun to invade Germany and Austria on the east. The news from Italy seems more assuring than it was on Saturday night. Then it appeared doubtful if Italy intended to throw in her lot with England and France against Austria and Germany, or whether she intended to join the latter. The messages to-day make it appear that the relations between Austria and Italy are much strained and that her fleet may join those of France and England in the Mediterranean. If this should come about, it will be a great news for us and our allies, and especially for Newfoundland, as it will keep open the Mediterranean markets for our fish. If Italy should join Austria and Germany, her markets would not only be closed against us but the Mediterranean would for a considerable time be closed against us, as the war risks on vessels entering the Mediterranean would be prohibitive to us.

Man Drowned.

BODY RECOVERED.
Last night a young man named Manuel Livingstone, one of the crew of the schr. Jubilee, Capt. Keeping, was drowned in Channel Harbor. The Jubilee arrived at Channel yesterday with a cargo of lumber, including a deckload. It is thought that Livingstone was going forward over the lumber in the darkness and tripped in some of the boards and was thrown into the water. People on shore heard the cries and Mr. Carey, the Postal operator, put off to the rescue in a small boat. When he reached the scene of the accident the man had disappeared and is supposed to have been drowned shortly after falling overboard. The unfortunate young man was 22 years old and unmarried. The Postal Telegraphs informs us that the body was recovered at 8 o'clock this morning.

RUSSIAN'S ADVANCING.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—A despatch from St. Petersburg says it is officially announced that the Russian army is now advancing along the entire Austro-German frontier and is successfully maintaining the offensive at every point of contact.

ITALIAN MOBILIZATION.

PARIS, Aug. 22.—A general mobilisation of Italy has been decided upon and will be proclaimed in three or four days, according to a message, which the Rome correspondent asserts that King Victor Emmanuel, until recently felt obliged to renounce all idea of Italian intervention in the conflict, but was won over by the arguments of his advisers. The Minister of Foreign Affairs alone of the Cabinet held to the contrary opinion.

THE GERMAN "HUNS."

LONDON, To-day.—German conquerors inflicted a war tax of ten million dollars on the City of Liege and forty millions on the City of Brussels. The latter is $55 per capita or $255 per family. Germans also seized two and a half million cash in private banks. The newspapers denounce it as a serious violation of international law. Evidently Germany intends waging war according to its own set of rules. The Kaiser's command to the troops to gain reputations like Huns under Attila seems to be bearing fruit now. The Times declares in demanding this payment from the citizens of Brussels the Germans are creating a precedent they may have cause to regret before many weeks are over. The Daily Telegraph denounces it as a ruthless blackmail. The Chronicle points out the demand is not one of ransom, it is a sum demanded by invaders for sparing a place not yet occupied from mischief which would result from the lawful operation of war and not a fine, for fine, but is collective money penalty inflicted on a population on account of acts in which it may be collectively responsible. It is an odious return to the practical practise of the nations in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. The Chronicle calls on neutral powers to take common action to uphold the observation of the Hague and the Geneva Conventions.

VOLUNTEERS FROM AMERICA.

Prayers for Peace!

Ordered by the Pope in Various Catholic Churches Throughout the World.

New York, Aug. 17.—Following is the text of the Holy Father's exhortation to the Catholics of the whole world to unite in prayers for peace, as called by the Rome correspondent of the Catholic Press Association:

"While nearly all Europe is being drawn into the vortex of a disastrous war, and all who consider the dangers and horrors of its consequences must be overcome with grief and terror, we also must be deeply affected.

"Our soul is torn with the bitterest grief for the safety of the life of so many of our beloved children. We feel and know that this terrible and universal trouble demands of our paternal love, and apostolic ministry that we cause men's minds to be lifted to Him from whom alone help can come—Christ, the Prince of Peace, the most Potent Mediator before God for mankind.

"Wherefore we exhort the Catholics of the entire world to hasten to His throne of grace and pity, and first, as an example, we order all clergy, under the direction of their Bishops, to offer public prayer in their respective parishes that God may take pity and remove as soon as possible the fearful torch of war and mercifully inspire the rulers of the earth with thoughts, not of affliction, but of peace."

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its Office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office, its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is modern and dependably equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKES CO." When sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessity this world known firm in Newfoundland. —ap17.

Great Battle Likely to Last Three Weeks

(New York Herald.)

If statistics of other great battles form a true basis of comparison, the impending battle on the German, Belgian and French frontiers will continue more than five weeks before a decisive victory is achieved by the Germans or the allies. The duration of other great battles has hinged apparently on the numbers of men employed and on the length of the battle fronts.

From the statistics of other battles shown below it would appear that for every 50,000 soldiers engaged it requires one day of fighting to achieve a victory. The length of time needed to give victory to one or other of the contestants. A student of warfare has prepared for the Herald the following statistics regarding famous modern battles and in the last line gives the best available figures as to the number of soldiers now on the frontier and the length of the battle front:

Troops Engaged	Days Fighting	Miles Front
Waterloo... 130,000	2	3
Austerlitz... 150,000	2	11
Gettysburg... 163,000	3	4
Gravelotte... 323,000	6	5
Mukden... 500,000	12	60
Belgian... 1,500,000	36	250

The term "Belgian" is used, of course, tentatively. The actual name of the battle awaits the conflict itself.

During last week fishermen operating on the local grounds got little or no cod fish, because of the absence of squid. According to that the theory is no squid, no fish.

ARMIES OF THE POWERS.

London.—The military correspondent of the Times, in the issue of August 3, writing after the orders for mobilization had been issued in Russia, Germany, Austria and France, reviews the strength of the powers, and among other things says:

The Russian Mobilization.

The general mobilization in Russia places at the disposal of the Czar about four million trained men for the army and 42,000 for the navy. These immense numbers can, however, only be placed in the field gradually and after considerable delay. The peace strength of the army is 1,200,000, but of these only 850,000 are quartered in Europe, while there are 350,000 in East Asia, 70,000 in the Caucasus, and 20,000 in Turkestan. About 60,000 Cossacks must be added to these numbers.

The active army in peace, excluding frontier guards and certain independent brigades of foot and horse, is distributed among 37 army corps and 24 cavalry divisions. The normal army corps, excluding reserve divisions, numbers 32 battalions, six squadrons and 14 batteries with a total war strength of 44,000 men and 12,000 horses, and a combatant strength of 30,000 rifles, 64 machine guns, 108 field guns and 1,000 sabres. The normal cavalry division has two cavalry brigades each of two regiments of six squadrons, eight machine guns and two batteries of horse artillery, in all 4,500 men and 4,800 horses, with a combatant strength of 3,500 sabres, 12 guns and eight machine guns. We must also reckon that 10

Cossack cavalry divisions can eventually take the field. Cavalry is to Russia what the navy is to England, and the Cossacks alone can place 1,000 squadrons in the field.

A Russian army consists of several army corps, usually four or five, besides independent divisions, and army troops. The military commands in war, for example, Warsaw, Vilna, Moscow, Kiev, Odessa. The cavalry divisions will often be united into cavalry corps. There are a certain number of cavalry brigades outside the cavalry divisional cavalry for the infantry divisions, while for communications and other duties there are 52 Cossack regiments of the 2nd and 3rd band, besides other troops.

Everything included, the Russian first line army numbers approximately two million men with 5,000 guns. This is the army which is most immediately affected by the general mobilization, and we must deduct from it such troops as Russia leaves on guard in East Asia, the Caucasus and Turkestan. This army will take some time to present itself at the front that we need not now examine how the remaining two million trained men will be distributed into second and third line formations, and what part they will play in war. They will certainly take an important part in the campaign if Russia is seriously invaded and if the first line fails to hold its own. They will form reserve field armies which will be drawn upon as they are needed, but it is upon the first line that the brunt of the fighting will fall. It is possible that reserve formations will strengthen the first line from the outset by giving to each army corps one reserve division, in which case we must accordingly raise the totals of the first line, but the concentration of this first line, without reserve divisions, will take so long and will so completely absorb the activities of Russian railways, that we should do well to count without them until we learn definitely of their presence at the front.

How long will it take for this great army to concentrate and to begin to exercise serious pressure upon the Austro-German frontier? In a month's time, say by August 28, there may be all the 24 cavalry divisions and 12 to 16 army corps in position. The remainder will follow as fast as the railways can bring them up, but the serious disadvantage of the Franco-Russian position is, and has always been, that there is a hiatus of some weeks between the day when the French and German main forces join issue and the day when the Russian masses are brought to bear.

The French Army.

The French numbers, in first line as well as in the aggregate correspond closely to those of Russia. France has 4,000,000 trained men; and her first line—namely, the active army and its reserve, is about 2,000,000 men in all. This first line expects to meet the German masses about the 14th to the 21st day of mobilization, that is to say between August 15 and 22, and there should be no failure in the readiness of the French army to carry out this its supreme mission, covered as it will be by a formidable chain of fortresses, and flanked as it is by neutral states for what their neutrality is worth. But by the 14th day of mobilization Russia can afford little help, and here German plans have usually been supposed to aim at crushing France, or at least inflicting a formidable blow upon the French army in first line, and of dealing with Russia afterwards.

The German Army.

The German first line army, including 25 army corps each with a reserve division, 11 cavalry divisions, and certain mobile Landwehr formations and special troops, has an aggregate strength of 2,200,000 men with 6,000 field guns. Can it, in co-operation with the Austro-Hungarian first line army of 1,200,000 men, so decisively defeat the French army that the allies can then safely turn upon Russia and meet Russia's first line army with an equal or superior force when this Russian army is ready to fight?

The Strategic Problem.

It is evident that the detachment of 300,000 Austrian troops against Serbia makes the solution of the problem much more difficult, but there is a chance, as Austria is not yet fully committed to the Serbian campaign, that she may now abandon it, adopt a defensive attitude towards this little state and transfer the bulk of her forces to Galicia.

The question arises: How many army corps will Germany leave on her eastern frontier to oppose Russia if France is the first objective of German arms. The number will probably be not less than three nor more than five, the residue of the German army on this frontier being made up of reserve, Landwehr and Landsturm formations. The superior readiness of Germany and Austria on this frontier enables the allies, if they wish to do so, to conduct an active campaign at first against Russia and still to leave the bulk of the German army available to fight France. But the superiority of numbers of the German army, after its detachments in East Prussia, over the French army, will not be at all overwhelming, and on the eastern frontier it is Russia's own fault if she engages herself deeply before her men are up.

Had Russia been given time to bring to fruition her great plans for the further expansion of her army, she intended to advance her line of concentration a good deal nearer to the frontiers of the central European allies. But as the time has not been given to her, she will probably concentrate some way back—namely, at such distance from the frontier that an Austro-German advance will not be able to interfere seriously with the act of Russian concentration. However much Russia may desire to hasten matters in order to take the pressure of France, the safety of the Russian army is sure to be her first consideration, and there may be a time, and perhaps a considerable time, when France, if she has no other ally, will stand practically alone against the Kerntruppe of the German army.

Bright, Ruddy Cheeks For Pale Girls.

NO LONGER ANY NEED TO BE PALE, WEAK OR ANAEMIC.

By Following the Advice of Miss McEwan You Can Quickly Become Strong Again.

The pallid girl always lacks appetite, and little she eats is dozed digested. At night she is restless, she dozes but doesn't sleep soundly.

Vital force must be increased, new blood must be supplied and a general rebuilding take place before she will feel like she ought.

Dr. Hamilton has invaluable experience in these cases, and found nothing so prompt in building up young women as his valuable pills of Mandrake and Butternut.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills begin by cleansing the system and purifying the blood; they also improve digestion and render food ready for absorption. Additional nourishment is quickly supplied and the patient is fast strengthened and invigorated.

Full of spirit, ruddy and strong is the girl that assists her system by the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

The following recent letter from Miss Etta McEwen, of Halifax, speaks for itself:

"In using Dr. Hamilton's Pills I find my system is wonderfully built up. It is certainly the most effective remedy I ever used. I have now a good appetite, sleep more soundly, and awaken in the morning feeling quite refreshed."

"Formerly I felt tired and depressed. I looked as if a severe illness were hanging over my head. Nothing could give quicker results than Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and I strongly advise every young woman to use them."

All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box or five boxes for $1.00 by mail from The Catarthoone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Ont.

Such are the broad conditions of the higher strategy of the impending war. They are complicated by scores of minor problems, which can be discussed separately as they arise, but the first thing to do is to understand the military situation in its broadest aspects, and to realize that the decisive theatre of the first operations will probably be the Franco-German frontier.

The Help of England.

The situation, then, is that France runs a risk for a certain period of finding herself faced by a superiority of 200,000 men. The French general staff have counted, during the last seven or eight years upon the support of our expeditionary force to make good the difference.

Three Men Try to Shoot Rapids and are Brownd.

Montreal Star, Aug. 17.—A sensational drowning accident at Cadar Rapids yesterday was described this morning by H. Groves, a motorman in the employ of the Montreal Tramways Co., who, with his wife and family, is spending the summer at Beloecheville.

He says that yesterday afternoon, three young men, two Frenchmen from Verdun, and an Englishman from Outremont, went out on the river in a canoe. Before very long they drifted down close to the rapids and seemed to intend running them.

Hardly was the canoe in the swirling water, however, when it overturned and threw all three into the waves. Two of them were never seen again, and one rose once to the surface with both hands high above his head, and disappeared. He believes the names of two of them were Dubois and Smith. No bodies were recovered when he left for town this morning.

Precious Help.

(From Le-Patrie)

The aid of the colonies is indispensable at the present hour. And it is necessary that Canada, the most important colony of the empire, should be the first to direct food supplies to the mother country. Thus in deciding to offer a million sacks of flour to the imperial government the Canadian government has adopted the most efficacious way of contributing to the defence of the empire. It is necessary that the Province of Quebec should imitate the example of the federal authorities and of the Province of Alberta which has given half a million bushels of wheat. We have no wheat to offer, but we have willing arms and we hope, the government of Quebec will soon take prompt action officially.

London, Aug. 18.—According to the Times, after the heavy casualties, which the Germans incurred before the Liege forts, the emperor approached King Albert of Belgium through the Queen of Holland, and promised in recognition of Belgian valor most considerate treatment of the Belgian territory if Belgium would abandon her resistance and allow German troops right of way through Belgium. These overtures, the Times says, were firmly rejected by Belgium.

Geographically portions of the industry are awakening keen interest, and the knowledge that Newfoundland has come into the arena will give a still further impetus to this line of the development of the work. Our people here will be glad to learn that the first experiments in connection with the photographing of local events have been crowned with success. The first effort in this connection was "The Opening of Bowring Park." This chronicle most thoroughly all the details of that event, commencing with the arrival of H. H. H., the Duke of Connaught, the Governor, Prime Minister and prominent citizens; the presentation of the Park by Hon. E. R. Bowring to W. G. Gosling, Esq., Chairman of the Civic Commission; the planting of the Linden tree; the official opening, and a panoramic view of the surrounding grounds with all the most attractive scenic beauty spots.

Last week a private rehearsal was held at the Nickel Theatre in the presence of Hon. E. R. Bowring and a number of other prominent citizens connected with this magnificent gift to the city, and the audience was extremely well pleased at the very successful completion of the moving picture record. The first public exhibition will be given at the Nickel Theatre, Wednesday, and the spectacle of a moving picture film, based on a local subject, taken and completed by local people, will be an interesting feature of the Nickel's regularly constituted programme.

A Great Reel Feature and Act AT ROSSLEY'S.

Rossley's have certainly got a very fine and pleasing show and one that should draw the crowd. In the first place there is one of the most laughable acts, something to cheer us up in these gloomy times, and a very great expense Rossley has secured the great British film that had London talking, "The Sporting Chance." No fake or humbug about this, the real article. "The Amateur Lion Tamer," by the Vitagraph Co., and others. Mrs. Rossley has in preparation for Monday night the most entrancing and novel act ever given in St. John's, a series of real living pictures with her pupils, and for a novel idea or more beautiful sight can't be beaten, something that every man, woman and child in St. John's would find pleasure in. This will exceed anything ever attempted by the talented Mrs. Rossley, and entirely her own idea.

Steamers For Ore Cargoes.

Two large ore steamers passed the Narrows yesterday about noon, bound to Bell Island to load ore for the Nova Scotia Company. During last week, although they had been reducing their staff for a couple of weeks previously, the Company engaged between a hundred and fifty and two hundred men to fill orders that came in and get the mine products ready for market.

More Fires.

Fires provoke immediate sympathy for the sufferer and also thankfulness for personal escape. Another thought should be whether one is personally and sufficiently protected. An insurance policy with Purvis Johnson would provide for you this desired security and at small expense. Have you enough insurance?

Mammoth Pier Under Construction

A Stupendous Undertaking.

The work of building the mammoth pier for the Fisheries Withy Company at the eastern section of the waterfront is progressing at a rapid pace. Quite a large number of men are engaged, nearly all of which came from Canada, they are skilled workmen and very efficient pile-drivers and wharf builders generally. During the short period that operations have been going on a considerable area of wharf has been constructed, due to the tact and business-like methods of those in charge. Yesterday while work was suspended, crowds of citizens visited the place and all expressed themselves as agreeably surprised at the headway being made with such a stupendous undertaking. The erection of the pier is certainly one of the biggest jobs ever tackled on this side of the Atlantic, but when it is finished, will be an ornament to St. John's Harbour, a credit to its builders and a lasting monument to the promoters and owners. The latter, no doubt, are to be congratulated for their enterprise and go-ahead-ness.

Finest Seamen in the World.

The offer of Newfoundland to supply five hundred seamen for British service is no idle one. This gallant little colony has not had sufficient financial resources to offer warships, or even maintain anything approaching an army, but it has in its population the finest seamen in the world.—Haltfax Recorder, Aug. 19th.

A Summer Tale.

"You look irritated this evening." "I am—on warm days like this I always suffer from heat rash." "I am liable to heat rash, too, but it never irritates me; it never has since I began to use Zylex, which at once allays the irritation, physical and mental. And I find Zylex Soap with the Ointment so far to prevent heat rash altogether." Zylex sells at 50 cents a box, Zylex Soap at 25 cents a cake, at your Druggist's. Zylex—London—1718, 66d.

No Doubt About German Spies Being Active.

Information is being transmitted from Canada—Have Agents a Wireless Station?—Are Very Much on the Job.

(Montreal Star.)

Most citizens of Canada have never been in contact with actual war conditions, and as a result when one mentions that German spies are actively engaged here in Canada, one is usually met with some remark like "booh" or a shrug of the shoulders equally expressive.

That is the attitude taken by most like the young men who thought it a lark to loah the soldiers guarding the canal at Cornwall. However, the fact remains that German agents are busy in many sections of Canada, and Montreal is no exception.

For example, not long ago a newspaper in one Canadian city published a statement that the Canadian Government was having trouble financing the raising and equipping of troops to aid the Empire. Within 24 hours that story was published word for word in half a dozen big German dailies, and the inference drawn that Canada was being made to come into the war against her will.

Then a day or so ago a Canadian vessel left for England. Her departure was chronicled, as it was understood the trade route was clear of German vessels. Hardly had the ship cleared the Gulf, however, when the captain was made aware that the news of his ship's departure had been communicated to a German man of war. Had he not been on the quiver his vessel might now be a German prize.

Those who are in a position to know say that the German spy system is as efficient as that of the Japanese who knew more of Manchuria and the Russian fortifications in Port Arthur than the Russians did themselves. In that event one can hardly credit that Canada would not be in the zone of their activities.

It is interesting to speculate how they get the news out of Canada. It is evident that it doesn't go over the land wires and as whatever information the agents possess is transmitted to the home office almost immediately, it is too much to suggest that some where in Eastern Canada is a high power station set up in secret, which is in hourly communication with the German vessels along the Atlantic seaboard.

The military and civic authorities in Montreal realize the gravity of the situation and are doing all in their power to prevent not only the sending out of news but the causing of damage to the many centres where so much damage could be wrought by a misguided patriot with the proper materials at his disposal.

In this connection the following letter, written two days before the declaration of hostilities and received by the Star, is interesting. It is not suggested that the writer is a spy, or if he is he must have recognized that his open handed method would disarm all criticism. Writing in person from the Hotel American at Moncton, N.B., he asks:

"Could you tell me where the largest aircraft in Canada and the United States are to be found.

"Thanking you in advance,

"I sign,

"Respectfully."

The conclusion to be drawn is that while Canadians are not within the sound of the guns at Liege, they are still just as much at war as is England, and it behoves everyone to act accordingly.

Queer Stories of the Wounded.

Paris, via London, August 17.—Here are three remarkable stories of the wounded published in the Matin as coming from their special correspondent on the field:

General von Delning, in command of an army corps was wounded by a bullet which pierced his tongue. He is in hospital.

A soldier of the line was severely wounded and lost consciousness, but still grasped firmly in his hand the spike of a Prussian helmet. He was taken to a hospital where it was found necessary to amputate his arm. It was impossible, however, to make him relax his grip on the trophy of war. The arm was cut off with the hand still holding the helmet.

Another soldier was wounded in the heel, but absolutely refused to let go of the epaulettes which he had torn in a hand-to-hand struggle from the shoulders of a Prussian officer.

British Honor.

(From the Detroit News.)

A little while ago a large number of Americans were sneering at our Government because it thought it ought to keep faith with Great Britain in a little business matter concerning the Panama Canal. This was called truckling to England, bowing down to crowns and nobles. It was said that Great Britain would pretty soon throw the hooks into us if she got a chance, and that all this talk about "national honor" was both, anyway. Honor between nations? Pooh!

Well, just the other day a question of national honor was put up to Great Britain. It didn't concern a cent or two one way or another on a ton of freight. It concerned the lives of men, the expenditure of fabulous sums of money—it meant the casting of the Empire into the seething pot of war as a precious stake. Great Britain had given her word—her promise—no more binding whatever than was our canal promise to her—that in the event of trouble she would stand by one of her neighbors. For a moment, cautious statesmen considered how to back out of that promise. But other statesmen cried, "Great Britain go back on her word! Every nation on earth would forever distrust us if we did that." Then the people took up the cry, "England keep her promises!" and one night, under the message to a distraught people, "England will keep her promise." There is such a thing as national honor—and it is a good thing to keep bright and untarnished.

Police Told to Arrest Spies.

Ottawa, August 14.—Instructions are being sent out to the police authorities of Canada giving the necessary powers to arrest promptly any Germans upon whom suspicion of espionage rests.

The authorities are being reminded specifically that if they have any well-founded suspicion of any party acting as a spy on behalf of a hostile country, it is their duty to arrest.

A form of declaration is being drawn up for German reservists, who, when apprehended, may be released on declaring their peaceable intentions and decision to report regularly to local authorities.

Tasseled trimmings will be modified.

Hall's Little First Aid Bandage is a novelty, but we believe a good idea. It is essentially a pad of aseptic gauze and may easily be fastened over any scratch, slight cut or wound, and while keeping dust and germs out, air is allowed to get freely at the cut, helping it to heal quickly. In the United States where the idea originated, we understand it has considerable popularity and shows good results. Price 10 cents a package.

Admiral Jellicoe, the new commander of Britain's home fleets, is one of the youngest men ever to reach such a responsible position. He is still in his early fifties and has a reputation among the tars as a hustler, rather than as a gold-laced aristocrat. He worked his way up through the grades and has a spectacular record for bravery. Among his recent decorations was one from Kaiser Wilhelm. He was jumped over eleven senior vice-admirals into his present command of the most powerful fleet in the world.—From the Philadelphia Bulletin.

Proclamation!

By His Excellency Sir WALTER EDWARD DAVIDSON, Knight Commander of the Most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George, Governor and Commander-in-Chief in and over the Island of Newfoundland and its Dependencies.

YOUR KING AND COUNTRY NEED YOU! Will You Answer Your Country's Call?

At this very moment the Empire is engaged in the greatest War in the history of the World.

In this crisis your country calls on her young men to rally round Her Flag and enlist in the ranks of Her Army.

If every Patriotic young man answers Her Call, Great Britain and the Empire will emerge stronger and more united than ever.

Newfoundland responds to the Homeland's Call and promises to enlist, equip and despatch to England the First Newfoundland Regiment of 500 strong. We want to send our best, and we believe that Britain's Oldest Colony will gain greater honour and glory for Her Name.

If you are between 19 and 35 years old, will you answer your Country's Call? If you will, then go to the nearest Magistrate and enrol your name for service in the fighting line. If you live in St. John's go to the C. L. B. Armoury and enter your name at the Central Recruiting Office, or any evening between 8 and 10 p.m.

Tickets to St. John's will be provided by the Magistrate free of cost.

The terms of enlistment are: To serve abroad for the duration of the war, but not exceeding one year. It is intended the men shall leave within one month of their enrollment, and that in the meantime they shall receive a course of instruction and training in St. John's.

A complete outfit will be provided.

Each private will receive pay at the rate of $1.00 per day and free rations, from the date of enrollment to the date of return, a portion of which will be paid to dependents left behind, or it will be allowed to accumulate for their personal benefit until termination of service.

Volunteers from the outports will be given free passage to St. John's.

Any applicant for service, forwarded by the proper authorities and not accepted after arrival at Headquarters, will be provided with a free passage and maintenance back to his home.

Dear Sir,

We beg to draw your attention to the advantages offered, both in the way of security and privacy, by our Safety Deposit system which has recently been installed in our vault. The system is the most modern and complete that is known, and is deposited in a vault of exceptional strength and safety. The boxes are individual and can only be opened with the joint aid of the key in the possession of the Company and of that in the custody of the customer. They are of solid metal and are arranged in nests of fifty, so that no box can be removed from the vault separately from the rest.

The boxes are rented at $4.00, $5.00 up to $20.00 a year, according to size.

An inspection of the installation is invited.
