The Mystery of Rutledge Hall

—OR—
"The Cloud With a Silver Lining"

CHAPTER VI.

The squire had had more or less reason for the injudiciously spoken remonstrances which he had made to his young wife, for Ashford gossip had coupled her name far more freely with Frank Greville's than they had any grounds for doing; still, although the stone of gossip gathers as it rolls, like a snow-ball, there was no doubt that there was some cause for comment.

Several times in the week Frank Greville might have been met on the road to the Hall, riding his pretty chestnut mare and dressed with even more than his usual care. Whenever Mrs. Rutledge drove into town, he was always at hand by some strange chance or other; and Sibyl had taken a fancy to visit Sidney Arnold often, at whose house it was of course only natural that Frank should be constantly found. Many of Sidney's callers, on being ushered into the charming old drawing-room of the Gray House, had found Mrs. Rutledge there, beautiful and radiant in her costly dark furs, and Frank Greville hovering about her chair. Of course, Sidney was present also—pale as Sibyl, with a wistful look in her velvety dark eyes; but her presence was evidently no constraint on the infatuated young man. The squire himself was looking moody and dissatisfied and ill. It served him right, ancient maidens said, nodding their heads vindictively over their afternoon tea. What need had there for him to choose a wife entirely unsuited to him in every respect, when he might have chosen from a dozen well-born women nearer his own age, yet caetera? He would be sure to suffer for his folly, and he would receive but little compassion. Miss Nell had always been a designing flirt, who, having failed in her endeavors to win Stephen Daunt, had accepted Mr. Rutledge as the next best party, and who ought to be ashamed of her present conduct.

So the busy tongues waged, and, if an echo of their chatter came to Sidney Arnold's ears, she gave no sign that it reached her. She was always bright and gay, very gentle—oh, so gentle!—to Frank, and, if she had lost the pretty imperious manner which had once been so characteristic to her, it was but natural now that she was an engaged young lady. Sidney Arnold, holding back the curtains from the window of her father's study, thought how redly the lamps in the High Street gleamed through the falling snow, and how pretty the country must look under its white veil, and wondered slightly at her lack of excitement about the ball, and sighed as she dropped the curtains and came back slowly into the room.

She was dressed for the ball, and only waited now for her father, who had been called away to a patient just as they were starting. Last year such contrivances would have seriously annoyed Miss Arnold, who liked to be in good time, knowing how eagerly her appearance was looked for by the best waltzers in Ashford; but on this evening there was no impatience or annoyance on the fair young face on which the light of Dr. Arnold's lamp fell so softly; it looked a little weary and indifferent, yet very lovely. Sidney was dressed in white, with extreme simplicity, but with exquisite taste, and no dress could have been more becoming to her than the soft flowing folds of Indian muslin trimmed with a profusion of costly lace. There was always an affection of simplicity about Miss Arnold's attire, the Ashford gossips said among themselves rather spitefully; but her dresses, however simple, were invariably of such material that they were costly, and they always fitted perfectly and were very becoming.

She had been waiting about a quarter of an hour when her father came in, hurriedly apologized for the delay, and wrapping his daughter in her white cloak, led her out to the carriage.

"I think I must get a chaperon for you, Sidney," he said, with a little laugh, as they drove away. "What do you think?"

Sidney laughed also.

"I don't think I want one," she answered. "And we are very happy together, papa, just you and I."

"Yes," he said, ruefully. "But soon there will be only 'I, Sidney, and no 'you,' and then what shall poor 'I' do?"

The distance from the Gray House to the Royal George Hotel, where the Assembly Rooms were, was but short, but many carriages were waiting to deposit their freights, and the doctor's coachman had to wait patiently until his turn came. Looking out,

Sidney glanced at the brilliantly lighted hotel; and in the entrance-hall she saw Frank waiting, flushed, eager, and excited, looking very handsome in his evening-dress, a white camellia in his button-hole.

"I see Frank," Dr. Arnold said, smiling, "waiting impatiently, Sidney, and no doubt anathematizing me."

Sidney smiled faintly—a pale, almost sorrowful smile. She knew for whom Frank was waiting so impatiently, and that just in front of them was Sibyl's well-appointed carriage, the snow resting lightly on the servants' handsome liveries. But she said nothing; nor was there any surprise on her face when their carriage being at last able to drive up to the porch, she found that Frank had disappeared; for her quick glance had seen him go up the wide carpeted staircase beside a tall white-clad figure, whose long glistening train lay heavily upon the red baize which covered the stairs.

"Why, Frank must have grown tired of waiting!" said Dr. Arnold, as he escorted his daughter into the hall. "I am sorry, dear."

"It does not matter, papa," Sidney answered, lingering a little; she did not want to follow that long white train immediately.

"Come, my dear, what are you waiting for? The ladies' room is upstairs."

"Yes, papa. I was just noticing how pretty the lamps look through the snow!"

Lady Eva and Dolly were leaving the ladies' dressing-room as Sidney reached it. With them was Sibyl Rutledge; and, used as the young girl to her beauty, she almost started as her eyes fell upon Sibyl, so wonderfully beautiful did she look in the rich dress of white moire which left her shoulders and arms bare, while the Rutledge diamonds gleamed on her milk-white throat and wrists and in the masses of her golden hair.

"I am a grass-widow to-night," she said, laughing, as she greeted Sidney. "Mr. Rutledge was tired, and would not come, and Lady Eva has been kind enough to take me under her wing."

"Sidney, how white you are!" Dolly whispered, lingering beside her for a moment. "Is anything wrong?"

"No," Sidney answered, simply; and Dolly looked at her wistfully as she joined her mother; and the three ladies swept away. Dolly radiant in fleecy white tulle, with a string of large pearls round her pretty throat.

Never would Sidney Arnold forget that ball and the feeling of dread and terror which possessed her from the moment her eyes rested upon Sibyl's beautiful face. For some few minutes after she entered the ball-room she was like a person moving in a dream; all was confused and bewildering. Mechanically she answered the greetings of her acquaintances, mechanically she handed her programme to the eager young men who thronged around her. In the same dazed manner she glided away when her first partner claimed her. She remembered it all afterward—how she had talked and danced and smiled, as people must do in society, no matter how their hearts may be aching. She remembered the pretty, savily decorated ball-room, the band in a gallery at one end, skillfully concealed in an artistic bower or greenery, the pink-lined lace curtains dividing the cosy flirting nooks and recesses from the ball-room, the soft rustle of the silken skirts, the dreamy waltz-music, the scent of flowers, and the little, swift, untiring satin-shod feet moving so unceasingly over the polished floor. All these things she remembered afterward, although just then she saw them as if they belonged to a dream-world in which she was living.

"Strange thing for the squire to let his wife come here alone to-night!" said one of her partners, as they were resting during a waltz, sitting in a recess from which they had a good view of the ball-room.

"He was tired," Sidney answered, wearily, slowly moving her white fan to and fro.

"Not a very good reason, is it? She is awfully handsome. Every one is talking of her. Greville seems—I beg your pardon, Miss Arnold; I really forgot—" He broke off, coloring hotly in great confusion.

"Don't apologize," Sidney returned, with a smile. "If you were going to say that Frank admires her very much, you are quite right; he does."

Farming on a Business Basis With Banker's Aid

The California Bankers Association, co-operating with the College of Agriculture, University of California, has prepared a farm accounting system for use in its member banks located in agricultural districts. The bankers do not attempt to encourage the farmer himself to keep his own books with the forms provided, but the banks themselves offer the farmer a complete service. They recognize that, if the farmer is to be able to conduct his farm on the same basis of profitable efficiency as any other line of business, he must have accurate accounting. So the banks have assumed the role of book-keepers for their farmer-customer.

A nominal charge is made to the farmer for this service to help defray the actual cost of additional clerical help that is necessary. In no instance is any bank endeavoring to conduct the service at a profit. In California, which is about 32 per cent. rural, with 280,000 rural families and a total value of farm property estimated at $3,500,000,000, the bankers have come to the realization that the prosperity of the State is about in direct proportion to the prosperity of the farmer. And in seeking to make the farmer a business man they are doing a highly important work in raising the general level of prosperity throughout the State.

Under the old order of things, the average farmer knew the date upon which his note at the bank would fall due, and the banker knew he would be called upon to extend payment, but when the due date arrived neither the farmer nor the banker could satisfactorily explain the failure to pay.—Roy Alden in Forbes Magazine (N.Y.)

SEA NETHERS.

The Danish ship Fenix, the oldest steamer registered at Lloyd's, was recently destroyed by fire. Built in 1848, she was seventy-seven years old.

Modern ships built of iron or steel are not so long-lived as the old timber-built vessels, and in the Baltic you will find quite a number of small wooden vessels still in use, of which the oldest, the Constance, was built in 1725, and is thus 202 years old. Sweden has a ship called the Emanuel, built in 1749, which began as a pirate, but now is engaged in carrying lumber. She has been owned by the same family for nearly a century.

In 1919 there was sold at Cardiff the fine old vessel, Good Intent. She is a ketch of about twenty-five tons burden, and was built at Plymouth in 1780. In spite of her great age she fetched £200, which works out at the very respectable figure of £2 per ton.

Another very old ship that was at work a few years ago, and may still be afloat, is the Seal, which was built at Southampton in 1810. In 1823 she was caught in a tremendous storm off Poole and driven ashore right up into a turnip field. She was launched again, and the last that the writer heard of her was that she was sailing from Bideford, Devon, for Durban, in South Africa, a voyage of six thousand miles.

But all the vessels mentioned are halibut compared with the Italian ship Anita, which was broken up during the present century at Genoa. She was built in the days of Queen Elizabeth, and for well over three centuries had sailed the world's seas. She was not only the oldest but the slowest ship in existence. No wonder, for her hull was of oak twelve inches thick.

The dainty woman is ashamed of Corns

Corns show a lack of personal care and daintiness. . . Any woman will take just as much care of her feet. A blemish there is just as much of a personal reproach. . . A dainty woman keeps her feet so exquisite that they could be viewed at any time, without the faintest embarrassment. . . These one discovers the breeding of a woman. She is peasant or princess according to the degree of her foot-daintiness.

End Catarrh Germs in Three Minutes

Chronic catarrh, no matter how bad, and cases of bronchial asthma now yield instantly to the amazing discovery of a French scientist. This drugless method called Lavex eliminates the germs in three minutes, yet is positively harmless to the most delicate tissues. Your head and lungs are cleared like magic. Sufferers are relieved in a single night.

To prove it and to introduce Lavex to ten thousand sufferers in one month, I offer to send a treatment free and postpaid, to any one who will write for it. No obligation. No cost. If it banishes your Catarrh you can repay the favor by telling your friends—if not, the loss is mine. No matter what you have tried, just send me your name and address for this generous free treatment and prove that you can be rid of catarrh.

A great improvement was noticeable in the strength at last night's parade, and the Battalion is now getting down to regular work after the interruptions which always occur during the summer season.

General routine work was carried on and No. 1 Platoon had some musketry practice under Lieut. Chafe. This is a branch of the Brigade work which has been somewhat neglected in recent years, and it is very pleasing to know that from now on musketry will be regularly included in the routine.

Previous to last night's parade, prayers were conducted by Rev. E. J. R. Nicholls, who is Battalion Chaplain for this month.

The Church Parade held in the grounds of the Shannon "Mum" Memorial Orphanage was very largely attended. The service was conducted by Rev. Canon Bolt, who delivered an eloquent sermon on "Physical and Moral Courage," which was greatly appreciated by all his hearers. In connection with this parade, the thanks of the Brigade are due to Old Comrades J. Dewling and Dr. Arthur Carnell, who were responsible for the display of bunting in the grounds.

The next Church Parade will be held on the 20th of September, to St. Thomas's Church, and it is expected to be very largely attended. Reports from Corner Brook state that the Band earned a great name for itself when it was there for the opening of the Paper Mills. All the members of the Band speak in enthusiastic terms of the splendid treatment they received at the hands of the officials of the N.P.P. Co., whose guests they were at Corner Brook.

Monday night a very successful promenade concert was held in conjunction with the C.C.C. Band, and a very successful sum was earned towards new uniforms.

Next Tuesday, weather permitting, a concert will be held in Bannerman Park in aid of the Child Welfare Association.

weight of 50,000 tons, partly by compressed air, while a tunnel is being driven beneath them in connection with the reconstruction of the Bond-street underground station of the Central London Railway.

The problem confronting the engineers was how best to carry the weight of the six-storey buildings with a 70-foot frontage on the side of Oxford-street, opposite the main entrance to the station, while the shaft is being excavated beneath them.

Steel Supports.

The foundations of the buildings—which include one of the largest restaurants in London—are between 35 and 40 feet below the street, and their immense weight is borne by about a dozen steel columns on wide concrete foundations, each column taking stresses of from 100 to 750 tons. Underneath is clay, and it is through this that the tunnel is being constructed.

To provide a still greater measure of support for the buildings the engineers are making use of compressed air, and the excavation is proceeding for 24 hours a day, the workmen going on in three shifts.

The downward pressure of the buildings is approximately four tons per square foot, and the upward pressure of the compressed air counteracts it to the extent of about one ton per square foot.

So elaborate have been the precautions taken to avoid the subsidence of the properties overhead that no danger whatever exists.

A crowd of communists in recent speeches have magnified the fact that their aim was to insult the Princess.

Have a Care

Now that the suburban roads are in splendid condition and the motorist for the first time is experiencing the pleasure of finding a good surface under his wheels, he is sorely tempted to try out his machine to the limit. Some drivers, however, refrain from speeding through timidity, and others, out of consideration for the general public; some indulge in the exhilarating pastime without any intention or desire to make themselves a nuisance or a menace, while others again are "willing to take a chance anyhow."

The latter class may be described as fools or road hogs, it matters not which, for they are as insusceptible to the feelings of others. To them the terrified look on the mother's face as she snatches her child out of danger is amusing, and they take no warning from the imprecations hurled at them by the father as they rush past. It is useless to appeal to them in any way, but like others of the same type, who scoff at courtesy and are only encouraged to further excesses by lenient treatment, they are most sensitive to punishment, and it is for the purpose of dealing with them in particular that the law is provided with formidable teeth. To what effect, however, if they are not applied?

In the city of late speeding has been less noticeable, partly because of the regulation passed by the Municipal Council by which the rate of travelling has been limited to fifteen miles, partly because of the increased vigilance of the police, but chiefly because the streets almost without exception are in such a condition that excessive speed is altogether out of the question. In the country, on the other hand, matters are going from bad to worse, and so far as we can learn, no attempt is being made to enforce the law. But why are the authorities doing nothing in the matter? Are they waiting for the inevitable disaster before taking precautionary measures, or is it because their attention has not been called to the fact that reckless driving is being indulged in? Perhaps it may awaken them to a sense of their responsibility if we state that in the event of innocent persons being killed or injured under such circumstances, the police will not be held blameless.

If speed is indulged in on those sections of the road which lie between settlements, no one but the occupants of the car are particularly concerned, but to whirl through the villages at forty or fifty miles an hour is to subject the people who reside in them to unnecessary anxiety and danger and is an unwarranted invasion of their rights.

Departing Trains Crowded by Sightseers.

In view of the improvements which are being effected in the railway service, we would suggest that steps should be taken to prevent the crowding of departing trains by visitors. On Sundays in particular the practice has become an annoyance and an inconvenience both to the passengers and to the officials. The corridors are blocked and often even the seats are occupied by persons who are seeing passengers off or who are on board for no other reason than to satisfy their curiosity. In exceptional cases perhaps there may be some justification for the presence of the former, but for the latter there is none whatever.

The crowding of the platform is also unnecessary to a great extent, and we feel certain that if the management introduced the platform ticket system and refused all but those in possession of a travelling ticket to board the trains, the objectionable practice would cease.

Terrific Gale at Labrador

Marconi messages are just received that a terrific gale occurred at Labrador yesterday and we are likely to hear of further damage from other localities before long. At Sandy Islands the schooner Egoctic of Random was lost with nine hundred quintals of fish. Further damage is reported of loss of chains and anchors showing the heavy force of sea and wind but this is to be expected at this season when the equinoctial gales are always prevalent.

S.S. Hillbrook, Capt. Wood, arrived yesterday at A. E. Hickman & Co. from Montreal via Summerside, P.E.I. after a good run of 5 days. The run from the latter port was accomplished in 60 hours. The Hillbrook brought a full general cargo, besides 30 head of cattle. Shortly after the ship left Montreal Mate Evans became seriously ill, and on arrival at Summerside he was removed to hospital suffering from appendicitis. The Hillbrook sails to-day for Montreal direct, continuing the service until the middle of November, when she will take fish cargo to the Mediterranean.

Enjoyable Dance

The dance held in the "Gaiety" Hall last night, in aid of the debt on the C.C.C. Hall, was largely attended and all who were present spent a most enjoyable evening. The floor was in excellent condition and the programme, which consisted of fifteen dances and several extras, was arranged to meet the wishes of all present, and the music supplied by the Prince's Orchestra left nothing to be desired. During the interval the Sackem's Orchestra supplied the music. When the National Anthem had been played early this morning, all who had been present felt that the night had been all too short. The next dance will be held on September 22, eve of holiday.

earth nose first and the stern drifting miles away and landing as it was almost lost to sight. People up early to watch for the coming of the great air cruiser saw her spin and plunge as if the gale, angry, vented its whims upon the ship tossing her as if it were but a toy. First, a railroad telegrapher at Belle Valley, Ohio, saw the dirigible spinning on its tail above him, nose up and helpless. Girl telephone operators at Ava, Ohio, looked out and saw it only a few hundred feet from the ground—still fighting its way. Then, as they looked, came the final crash, and they sent out the word that the Shenandoah was a wreck.

The Shenandoah, which was built in 1922 at a cost of $2,000,000 left Lakehurst, N. J., for a trip through the middle west. It was her second attempt to invade the Mississippi valley having been turned back by threatened storms earlier in the summer.

TELLS OF CRASH.

Minor Wood, a farmer, who was an eye witness to the crash, said the giant craft fell on the Tom Davis farm, near Ava, was caught by a terrific gust of wind and hurled half a mile to Charles Neiswonder's farm, where it crashed a mass of wreckage. The ship was being buffeted about by the winds before it fell. Wood said. Wood told the authorities he counted seven dead, four bodies lying in a jumbled heap near the wrecked ship and three others scattered in a surrounding field.

Imperial Economic Unity

Imperial economic unity is of vast potential importance to the Empire. It is only necessary to consider what economic unity has done for the United States, and what, without it, would have been the present stage of development in that country, to realize its meaning to the Empire. If the United States had been split up into a number of separate economic units, it is safe to say that development would have been seriously hindered. The resources of the Empire are wider in their diversity and richer in their potentialities than those of the great Republic; the only essential difference is that, while one is a geographical, political, an economic whole, the other is made up of scattered units.—London Times.

BREAKS IN TWO.

The big dirigible broke into two sections, Wood said, scattering four bodies within a few feet of the wreckage. The ship took the air again. Wood declared, but bounded to the ground leaving three dead in a field. The big air giant soared skyward took a downward course over a hill and crashed into a small woods. One of the survivors told Wood the captain of the ship was among the killed and pointed out his body. Another survivor told Wood that when he saw the crash was inevitable, he jumped to safety. A third survivor said he saved himself by leaping out of a port-hole and grasping the limb of a tree as the dirigible crashed into the woods. Six bodies were gathered by an ambulance crew and taken to a Belle Valley morgue, Wood declared.

Horse Became Frightened

Last evening a spirited young horse, owned by W. J. Murphy, grocer, Rawlin's Cross, took fright whilst standing on Circular Road and collided with a pole after a run of several hundred yards. An express wagon attached to the animal was badly wrecked.

Bull Runs Amuck

A young bull imported by Mr. A. H. Murray escaped from Hickman's premises yesterday afternoon, shortly after being landed from S.E. Hillbrook, and dashing down Water Street, west through a plate glass window in Knowling's West End Store. The glass was valued at $70.00.

At the Casino

"The Acquittal" which is The Harkins Players opening play at the Casino, Monday night, is a great mystery play by Rita Weisman, and George M. Cohan. It was an immense metropolitan success and is powerful and tense and has bright touches of comedy to relieve the serious situations. "The Acquittal" deals with Kenneth Winthrop, who is on trial charged with the murder of an aged man and is through the loyalty of his wife, acquitted on the second trial. During the proceedings it is shown that the accused had the support of all the newspapers with one exception, and that one maintained a neutral attitude because of the efforts of its star reporter, Jack Conway, who had a suspicion that the aged man was murdered. Conway keeps in close touch with Mrs. Winthrop in order to learn as much as possible of the inside of the case. There is action in every line of the play, and the cast is a strong one. Mr. Joseph Selman playing the part of Conway, the reporter, and Miss Violet Dean, the part of the wife of the acquitted man. The entire company appear in the play. Reserved seats sale opens Thursday at F. V. Chesman's, Water St.

WINNING TEAM DINED.

After the football game last night, the members of the victorious T.A. team returned to the Club Rooms where a large number of members were present to offer them congratulations. The team and their supporters then repaired to the Armoury where refreshments were served and an hour of jollification was spent.

The victories of the teams on the football field, in Relay Races and on the Pond, will be celebrated on a more elaborate scale at an early date.

THE KING CONGRATULATES HOBBS.

Below are given the King's letter of congratulation to Hobbs on his record century making and the Surrey batsman's reply:

BALMORAL CASTLE.

August 20, 1925. Dear Mr. Hobbs,—The King has heard with much pleasure and interest of your unique cricket achievement in scoring 127 centuries, thus exceeding the number made by the late Dr. W. G. Grace, and also attaining a further record of 14 centuries in the course of one season.

His Majesty warmly congratulates you upon this remarkable success, whereby you have established a new and greater record in the history of our National Game.

Yours very truly, STAMFORDHAM.

HOBBS'S REPLY.

KENNINGTON OVAL, London, S.E., 21st August, 1925.

The High Hon. Lord Stamfordham, P.C., G.C.B., G.C.I.E., G.C.V.O., Balmoral Castle.

My Lord,—I have the honour to acknowledge your communication dated the 20th of August, conveying His Majesty's congratulations. Would you, my lord, kindly express to His Majesty my intense pleasure and gratification at His Majesty's gracious recognition of my efforts in the cricket field?

I beg you, my lord, to assure His Majesty that his recognition of my success in setting up a new cricket record adds greatly to the satisfaction over its achievement.

I have the honour to be, my lord, your lordship's obedient and humble servant. (Signed) J. B. HOBBS.

Broadcasting from 2.10, Hobbs took the opportunity to thank his many admirers for the messages of congratulation he had received on beating Dr. Grace's record of 126 centuries.

While naturally very pleased to have set up a new record, Hobbs paid tribute to Grace in these words: "In the mere matter of figures Dr. Grace's record has been surpassed, but it is a record of 200 centuries in first-class cricket it would not detract in the slightest from the achievements of the Grand Old Man of the game."

In the first half, with T.A. playing from the eastern goal, Gaelic commenced to press matters, and inside of five minutes a corner had been earned. The ball was dropped in the goal mouth by Stapleton, and in the scrimmage the first goal was scored for Gaelic, much to the rejoicing of their supporters. The T.A., quite undaunted, centered the ball and made a good run west, and before the Gaelic shouts had died out, Nikosey was responsible for scoring the equalizer. Honors for the next few minutes were very evenly divided, and much hard play followed on the respective goals, but without the desired results. The T.A. forwards then started another attack, and a second goal was scored by Williams, who fooled Hamlyn with an easy shot. The team then changed over with the score standing, T.A. 2; Gaelic 1.

Second Half. On resuming play the game resumed itself into a hard fought battle for the points, with the T.A. having the upper hand. A moment later a regular barrage took place on Gaelic goal, but the backs withstood all attacks and kept the ball out of danger. Play was then confined mostly to mid-field where some pretty combination play by the opposing forwards was witnessed. A noticeable feature of the game was the manner in which the players kept on the ball from going over the touch line. After twenty minutes of play had elapsed, T.A. came down the field with a rush, and upon drawing near the goal mouth, Bailey tried a low shot which found its way into the net.

Although the Gaelic lads were now two goals behind they were not the least discouraged, and played as hard as ever. With darkness closing in, and only a few minutes to go, Gaelic made a final attack, and in this struggle was successful in scoring No. 2.

In the dying moments of the game Gaelic made desperate efforts to score the equalizer, but the T.A. lads set up a solid defence and frustrated any further attempts in the scoring line. Referee Phelan then called full time, leaving T.A. the victors, besides winners of the Higgins-Hunt trophy for the season of 1925. The T.A. team played consistent football all season, and are well deserving of the championship. The personal of the team is as follows:

A BACHELOR GIRL SPEAKS.

The bachelor girl speaks. Old maids, in the old days when the only place for an unmarried woman was as a hard working and unobtrusive member of her married brother's or sister's household, were something like children in that they were supposed to be seen and not heard—or better still to be both seen and heard as little as possible.

But in these days when there are no old maids any longer, only self-possessed and not necessarily dissatisfied bachelor girls, the bachelor girl feels just as free to speak as the bachelor man. And the bachelor man, having spoken in my column some days ago on the subject of the girl his hostess is always trying to marry him off to, the bachelor girl replies. Says she:

"I read each day with much pleasure your article," (tutty but how I do love that!) "How amused I was to read of your Wary Bachelor and the Girl they want me to marry.

"Does it not occur to him that perhaps the girl is thinking exactly the same thing about him as he does about her? How embarrassing to arrive at the home of your hostess and find some Wary Bachelor there with his bored-to-death expression, when you have expected to spend an enjoyable evening with John and Mary. Do you act natural? No.

We Dread The Hour Of Departure. "Can we help what our hostess does? Don't we dread the hour of departure for fear Wary Bachelor will feel in duty bound to escort us home? We do.

"Be fair, Wary Bachelor, be fair. Not all of us are the same and many times, like you, we have not the desire to join the 'Misery Loves Company Class,' and detest the men we have met in our hostess's home. From.

A Bachelor Girl by Choice and Not Necessity. The Bachelor Girl speaks and says something that needs to be said often.

The Eternal Feminine Passion. I like her. And when I tell you the thought that popped at once into my mind I know you will never again doubt, as some of you have, that I am a woman. I thought to myself, "I like her. What a lot of spirit she has. I suspect she'd be more than a match for the Wary Bachelor. She'd make him forget to be afraid of being pursued. I wish I could bring them together."

Little Jack Rabbit

by David Cory

Billy Bat was also a night prowler like Hoody Tooty Owl. And like the old owl he remained very quiet during the day, hanging head down from a branch, the sharp claws on his little feet tightly fastened to the bark. But as soon as Mr. Merry Sun had gone to rest beyond the western hills, Billy Bat went circling through the air, his great wings easily holding up his furry, mouse-like body.

Many of the Shady Forest people called him "Little Zig-Zag," for Billy Bat never seemed to be able to fly in a straight line. One never could tell just where he was going, he flew in so many directions, this way and that, up and down and sideways. Dear me, how he could dodge! He made up at night for the time he spent hanging by his toes in the daytime.

"Don't you ever grow dizzy?" asked Little Jack Rabbit one morning as he stopped beneath a tree, from a branch of which Billy Bat was hanging, head-downward.

"I should say not," answered the little bat. "Most comfortable way I know to rest."

"Dear, dear," exclaimed the bunny boy, "I couldn't hang like that. I'd lose out of my pocket the gold watch, and chain that dear Uncle Lucky gave me."

"Ha, ha," laughed Billy Bat, "I don't need a watch. I just wait until it grows dusk, then away I fly. But, goodness me! Hope I shan't have another narrow escape such as I had last night."

"Tell me about it," asked the curious little bunny, sitting down on the mossy ground and slipping his knapsack off his back.

"Well, it happened this way," explained Billy Bat. "I was flying about last evening when, all of a sudden, Hoody Tooty Owl went after me. I guess he thought I was a mouse with wings. I took something like one, don't I?"

"You certainly do," admitted the bunny boy, pulling a pink lollipop from his pocket.

"And that old owl would have caught me," continued Billy Bat, "had I not dodged him. I know how to dodge, if I do say so myself. I'm the best little dodger in the whole Shady Forest."

"Yes, Grandmother Magpie once called you 'Little Zig-Zag,'" laughed the bunny boy, nibbling a piece off the pink lollipop. "That name fits you, doesn't it?"

"I've been called 'Fitter Mouse,' answered Billy Bat. "Come to think of it, over that name fits me mighty well. I believe I'm the only animal that has real wings. The thin skin that stretches from the tips of my four fingers to my toes is better than feathers. Yes sir. From the tip of my right hand to the toes on my right foot, and from the tip of my left hand to the toes on my left foot I have a pair of wings that are the best in the Shady Forest to my way of thinking. Why, I can

Our Coal Areas

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—It is pleasing to note that popular interest still adheres to the question of development of our coal areas as shown recently in the appearance in your columns of several articles dealing with the matter. Those articles attracted much attention from their timeliness and from the capable manner in which their writers dealt with the important subject.

That there remains a real and living interest in such a time-worn question goes to show how earnestly the people consider it, and the writer of this desires to show that popularly considered nobody could do us a greater service than to demonstrate by whatever means most practicable the absence or presence of commercially valuable coal in our country.

The courage and devotion to the matter displayed through years of unrequited labor on the part of the St. George's Coal Fields, Ltd., deserve our gratitude and support. If the company engaged in the exploration of those coal areas needs assistance from the country I think they deserve it and should receive it.

I am not learned enough in such matters to know just in what way such assistance could be given to insure the maximum benefit, but I rather from such writings as above referred to, it might take the practical form of boring operations on the more scientific side of a thorough survey. It seems to me, a layman, and one not specially qualified in any way that the practical way would be the best way.

Could not the Government undertake some boring operations in the area believed to contain valuable coal seams and so assist in a most substantial way the group of men who have given so patiently many years of toil and spent so much money in a brave effort to solve the question.

There is I believe a pressing moral obligation on the country to assist in determining for the St. George's Coal Fields, Ltd., the value of those coal areas, for only on the basis of geological information officially given has the company spent its money.

If the data supplied are not complete but just enough to allow men to adventure their capital and toil, it is our duty to obtain the fullest information. I cannot discuss this question fully because I am not a geologist, but it appears to me we have left the St. George's Coal Fields, Ltd., fully partially equipped with reliable data. I speak now only as a layman, who can boast of no particular knowledge, but it seems to me we have left the question undecided and dropped it just where it appears most alluring and yet obscure enough to discourage the always skeptical capitalist.

Mr. Freeman and others who have been on the ground are most optimistic, and they support this belief by statements that leave no room for doubt in the ordinary mind. The coal must be there, then let us discover it. The development of a coal mine of our own would have far-reaching influence on the future of this country, and the prospect is so encouraging to the vision that it surprises me that apathy should go so far as to interfere with our going ahead to explore the possibilities.

Yours truly,
CARBON.

The Education Myth Exploded

Comparatively sane, as we understand sanity, quite unprovoked, and I must admit unasked, I am going to explode all this superstition known as Education to the four winds, and by sheer force of logic prove that ignorance is bliss.

In other words, I maintain that what we call Education is not so much inadequate but quite unnecessary to the laws of life, and that we should be better off if the system became effete.

The general custom is to take a child in the ray, allowing time of course for him to become independent of his mother, place him with a score of similar children, and in the course of six or seven painful years so fill him with education, that the poor little fellow soon becomes too dazed to do anything but serve tinned foods, or yard goods behind a counter, next door to an uneducated fellow who sells the same goods just as well, although he doesn't know Algebra at all.

To grasp the advantages and beauties of sheer ignorance, read what a paramount chief of a cannibalistic tribe in Borneo says with perfect sincerity: "My people are said to be among the lowest races of human beings existing. I have lived amongst them all my life, having seen and partaken of rum and white men twice, and all I can say about Education is, that if it makes people so plump and tasteless, better do away with it altogether." The chief is a perfect school boy, and enjoys life to the full.

Education is the parent of many evils, such as Socialism, Bolshevism, Micro-Organisms, and Poisons. It helped men to discover or rather to catalogue, diseases, continents and new stars, all of which don't matter

- 5—Fine after-effects—due to palm and olive oil content.

YOU'RE not interested in the chemistry of soap, I know. But I believe you are interested in what soap contributes to making your shave more satisfactory, faster, more comfortable.

Here's Palmolive Shaving Cream. Millions of men have been won over to it—away from other shaving creams and soaps. Why? [And here is where I interest you.]

Because in 5 distinct ways, it offers better shaves. Faster shaves. More comfortable.

Will you check up on that claim? Judge whether or not it's justified? Accept a tube for the purpose, with our compliments.

1,000 men told us

Our 60 years of soap-making experience went into it.

1,000 men told us what they wished in a new shaving cream. Eighteen months were spent, making up and testing no less than 130 formulas—before the right one was hit upon.

But that final one revolutionized ideas for shaving comfort and speed—for millions of men. With more being won over, every day.

It's reasonable to request that you test Palmolive Shaving Cream. You'll agree there, we know. The risk is all on our side. You stand to win new shaving comfort and convenience.

As a final touch to shaving luxury, we created Palmolive After Shaving Talc—especially for men. Doesn't show. Leaves skin smooth and fresh and gives that well-groomed look.

an awful lot, and cannot certainly add greater happiness to life.

In the good old days, before Education took such a grip on imagination, and we used to travel about in skins, we were happier and healthier creatures; when we shined we did so out of ignorance, and found ignorance a great help that way. When we were hungry we dug up a couple of tasty roots or pulled a handful of berries off a bush to sustain us awhile; if we wanted a hearty meal we ran a rabbit down, skinned it and devoured it, and you bet it tasted a whole lot better than what we eat nowadays. In those times, eating was merely a side line, to-day it seems to be a habit. We don't need to get one quarter what we do, but astronomy has become an art just as painting it.

With the growth of education came the increase of the population of this globe, and the consequent spread of disease; man is no longer the product he was, he is now part and parcel of the mass production system, and just as liable to loose screws as a Ford. In fact he is a hurriedly made article of inferior quality, disoriented with life, and with very little vitality.

No matter what we know and how much of it we understand, the fact remains we know nothing, so why bother. For sheer value a plate of porridge is infinitely superior to all the Algebra, Geometry and so forth that has ever been taught.

In the words of that happy heathen Omar Khayyam:

"Myself when young did eagerly frequent
Prophet and sage and heard great argument
About it and about, but ever more
Came out the same door, as I went."

While you've come to be known as a gloomy old bear.

They can't understand why your heart seemed to harden,
And want to kill rabbits who came to your garden.
Or than accident sad
Peter's father once had
When Mrs. McGregor cooked him in a pie.
For they think it too bad any rabbit should die.

I presume there are millions of parents like me
Who read Peter Rabbit to children
And each little beggar
Thinks Mr. McGregor
The meanest and crosslest old man
That he knows.

For chasing poor Peter and keeping his clothes.
It's too bad, I'm sure, that they mentioned your name
And linked it forever with hard-hearted shame
To my baby, in vain,
I have tried to explain
That Peter deserved every scare that he got,
But she still calls you mean, though I've said you are not.

O Mr. McGregor, I fear through the As a cross-patch, with children, you're doomed now to stand.

A Flight to Mars?

PASSENGERS IN A ROCKET.

A machine that sets the law of gravitation at defiance and is able to travel in inter-planetary space has been constructed in Germany, and will be demonstrated publicly during the autumn (says a writer in the 'Daily Express').

Its scientific sponsor and inventor is Dr. Friedrich Nier, professor of astronomy and hydrostatics, who is associated with the remarkable Deutsche Museum at Munich.

Existing methods of mechanical propulsion would fail in outer space because of the lack of atmospheric resistance—there is nothing on which a screw or propeller could "bite"—but the new machine works like a rocket. It is really a "recurrent rocket."

What Will Happen!

The whole force of the propulsive explosion takes effect inside the machine itself. Little or no power is lost in overcoming atmospheric resistance, and none would be lost from this source in outer space.

Each explosion is timed to begin as the preceding one dies away, so that the power exerted against gravitational "pull" would be continuous. It is proposed to send three of these "recurrent rockets" into space from various points on the earth's surface to see what happens to them.

They may return after a week or so and drop into someone's back garden; they may reach the moon or Mars, or they may stop at the "dead centre" of gravity between the earth and one of its neighbours, and become unauthorized additions to the solar system.

1,000 Miles an Hour.

The demonstrational rocket, which it is claimed, can attain within the earth's atmosphere a speed of one thousand miles an hour, will be "tried out" on a journey from Munich to Berlin, a distance in direct line of about three hundred miles, which it is proposed to cover in about twenty minutes.

Cotton Trade Marks

THE task of revising 171 bulky volumes containing 39,000 drawings and specimens of cotton goods trade marks, compiled 50 years ago, is shortly to be undertaken by the keeper of cotton marks at Manchester.

The volumes contain the "common" marks for which registration was refused in 1875, when the registration was instituted. Many of them are now "dead" because their claimants have ceased to exist, and the volumes themselves are dilapidated after half a century of constant research in the comparison of new claims.

After the end of next June the ancient volumes will go out of use, but will have to be preserved in case of future litigation. More than 100,000 cotton trade marks are carefully preserved in 500 "scrap books" at the Manchester Branch Patent Office.

THE HELPERS.

There are a thousand ways of making the old world brighter while you stay, and have men say, "That lad is taking, in uplift work, the better way. We see him do no grandstand playing, he does not linger for applause, but strictly tends to his crocheting—the wisest plan that ever was. For he who does his task with vigor, who does it well, with skill and grace, has made the spread of sunshine bigger, has made the world a better place." The weary business men are eating their midday lunch in Charlie's Joint, they always give him cordial greeting, for Charlie is a case in point. His fame, I'm sure, will never thunder much further than the edge of town, you'll never see him stagger under a laurel wreath or victor's crown. Along his humble way he teeters, and dishes up, in cleanly style, such billy grub that all the eaters regard him with a loving smile. The weary business men have swallowed the soothing of the chaste goulash; and if, at a time, they're followed by village church a steeple, to minister a car, to help the poor heathen people in Timbuctoo or the bar, they dig up coin and dig it up, they'd help out any cause, find, or any get 'twixt Noma, Neligh, for Charlie's grub has them kind. So any fellow, clerk, writer, mortician, cop or ass, may help to make the gray world brighter by working wisely at his here.

Impressions of the Labor Party

OF THE PARLIAMENTARY DELEGATES.

(L.C.M.)

Whatever divergence of opinion may exist as to the purpose of the Parliamentary Delegation with which Newfoundland has been honoured, there cannot be any doubt whatever as to the success of the delegation as such. The delegation presented many features of interest, both to Newfoundland and the Empire, and the personnel of the delegation seemed to be well balanced.

The general interest of the public was keen in an especial manner, but in an especial manner the members of the Labour Party attracted attention. Hence their speeches at the dinner tendered there were eagerly listened to by all present, and the dinner was patronized by a widely representative class of people, both professional, commercial, and industrial. The promoters of the dinner can well feel satisfied with their tribute to the reception of the delegates, and also with the response which the citizens gave by their presence at the Grenfell Hall—it was all a success.

The great attraction was, of course, delegates and not the dinner, good as it was. The delegates were five in number, and they gave the impression of being fair-minded men and men of fairly good training and education. In their department and utterances they displayed much good taste, nor did they waste their time with anything trashy or undignified. They made the best of their opportunity, and really won the applause which was given them.

Being members of the House of Commons, and representing that section of it known as the Labour Party, their opinions were keenly listened to during the three hours of their delivery. To colonial people it was all a great treat, and whether what was stated be accepted or rejected, the impartiality and sincerity of the speakers could not be doubted. The men were new to St. John's, but the principles which they espoused were not new. What then were these principles? What claims did these men make? Let us see. To put it concisely would be as follows.

They claim that the conditions of society are wrong, and that the masses of the people are oppressed. They claim that labour is not being justly dealt with. They claim that what is a blunder and should be avoided, and that sane and commonsense administration would hinder war. They claim that the health of the people is being destroyed by the housing conditions of the cities, and that the land owners are oppressing the people. They also claim that the Labour Party could institute such reforms as would remedy these conditions.

That things are not as they ought to be, we must all agree, and that reform is desirable cannot be contradicted; but the means by which such reform is to come is a much disputed question, and one we fear which no party government will settle. As a rule, no party holds together long enough to carry out the good resolutions which they make. Ramsay MacDonald's tenure of office was too short to make a fair test, but he gained the respect of the public all the same, and many who differed with his policy at the same time admired his honesty. He may come into power again. The speakers at the dinner intimated that he would.

It was noticeable in the speaking that no reference whatever was made to the church, nor to the teachings of the church. True, the sentiments expressed were humane and fair, and implied to a large degree the principles of the Golden Rule; but it was evident that as an institution the church was not considered. It may not have been intentional, but it was very noticeable. The church ought to be the great reforming agency of the world, but the socialists don't seem to admit this; but the Labour Party disclaimed anything like socialism or anarchy, and declared themselves for the Empire, for law and order, and for the uplifting of the people. There was nothing to fear from the gentlemen who spoke at the dinner; but the question suggests itself, is there nothing further, and are all whom they represent of the same opinion? They spoke with good sense. We were satisfied to join in the applause to 90 per cent. of what they said, but at the same time we kept in view the possibility of extremes.

It was the possibility of extremes that gave rise to this writing, for we heard some of those present say that what the Labour Party stands for, and what it really means, and what its success would lead to, is revolution. This introduces a very big problem, and involves the very fate of the Empire, and is worthy of more consideration than can now be given it. The speakers emphatically declared their purpose and that of their party. They stated that the masses of the people are oppressed and are therefore dissatisfied. This is the sore spot and it may fester to serious complications, which under the pressure of agitators would demoralize the people. The intention to overthrow the order of society may not be entertained, but the tendency of such a campaign is in the direction of revolution.

Judging from the interest with which the members of the Labour Party were heard here in St. John's, it is certain that the same feeling exists in England, and when it is borne in mind how vast is the field and how many are the advocates, it is readily seen what a mighty influence is being exerted by them. All this tells but one story and points in one direction. It tells that at heart the children of men are sick, and that they cry out for healing. The Labour Party think that they have discovered the balm of healing, and therefore they ask a chance to apply their remedy.

Such at least are some of the impressions of the writer, and for what they are worth, we give them to the public. The dinner was a marked success and its promoters have just cause for gratification. By their action they afforded three hundred men of the city an opportunity to see and hear some of the foremost leaders of the Empire and for this we thank them. We are not bound to adopt all their principles, but we believe in their sincerity of purpose in having heard in our city the members of the Labour Party.

Healthy Women, Happy Homes

Good dispositions succumb. Irritability and snappy retort take the place of happiness and amiability. Sunshine is driven out of homes; in fact, they are often wrecked, and friends are estranged because women suffer with ailments peculiar to their sex. The use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will overcome such ailments and restore health and happiness. Do not resort to strong stimulants or narcotics when this great strengthening, healing remedy made from roots and herbs is always within reach.

Last Chance to See "Excuse Me" at Nickel

Rupert Hughes' Story Fall of Wholesome Entertainment.

A picture whose action moves with the rapidity of an express has been found at last. It's "Excuse Me," the picturization of Rupert Hughes' famous stage farce which is now running at the Nickel Theatre. This joyous farce tells of a pair of newly-weds who find themselves aboard an express train at eight o'clock for a midnight dinner. They will never find because he has doffed clerical garb for muffs.

The characters in this uproariously funny photoplay are brought to life by a cast of tried and true cinema favorites. Conrad Nagel and Norma Shearer are the marital aspirants, and Renee Adoree is the French friend who almost disrupts their romance. The supporting cast includes Walter Hiers, John Bolen, Bert Roach and William V. Mong. Alf Goulding was the director, and John Boyle was the photographer. "Excuse Me" is a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture.

As an extra attraction, there is a popular comedy with the celebrated Mack Sennett fun-provokers. It's a riot worth going miles to witness.

Rare Metal Find

An important discovery of osmium has been made in Adams River, Tasmania, and $6,000 worth, it is reported, has been found in a few weeks.

Two hundred men are working there, and it is expected that 1,000 men will shortly be on the field, which experts believe will prove the wealthiest ever discovered in Tasmania.

The present price of osmium is approximately £22 an ounce. Osmidium is an alloy of the rare metals osmium and iridium. It is very hard and durable, and is used in the manufacture of fine instruments. In 1920 the output of this alloy from Tasmania was valued at $27,887.

One-Way Traffic

A scheme for one-way traffic in the Strand has been favourably considered by the Traffic Advisory Committee, and though the committee is at present in recess, it was stated that a trial of the scheme will probably be made shortly.

Owing to the constant congestion of traffic in the Strand, it is proposed that vehicles shall be allowed to travel along it only one way, traffic going in the other direction being diverted along the Embankment.

Details of the scheme have yet to be determined, but the possibility of having one-way traffic is being examined for other London streets which are congested.

A Novel Feature at the Majestic

ANOTHER COMPLETE CHANGE AT THE MAJESTIC TO-DAY.

One of the features of "Around the World in the Speeljacks" that will appeal particularly to picture patrons is that it is entirely different from any picture they have ever seen before. When compared with the best photoplays, the "Speeljacks" strikes a new and refreshing note in motion picture entertainment. The picture not only blazes a new trail in the uses of the film camera, but theatre managers will find that it will open up new fields of patronage in their communities, because this picture has an appeal that will attract persons who are not regular photoplay patrons.

The "Speeljacks," and the adventures of its owner and crew have been before the public for nearly three years. There probably has been no expedition which has received the vast publicity given the cruise of this 88-foot motor yacht. Ever since Mr. and Mrs. Gowen set forth on their voyage on August 21, 1921, column after column has been printed in the newspapers regarding the cruise, the adventures they were undergoing and the perils which they faced. In addition to the great value of the picture itself, this publicity will prove of immense help to exhibitors, because to everybody in America who reads newspapers, the name "Speeljacks" has become synonymous with adventure, danger and courage.

The picture has been edited down to feature length and in its completed form contains all the high spots of the film record which Mr. Gowen made during the two years he was en-route. This is sure to prove one of the sensations of the season.

Admiralty "Axe"

54 DESTROYERS LIKELY TO BE SCRAPPED.

Steps being taken by the Admiralty to redeem its economy pledge were reported recently.

The scrapping of 54 destroyers is foreshadowed in an Admiralty order, which announces that 20 destroyers of the R class are to be taken in hand by the dockyards for any purpose pending instructions.

These destroyers are mostly in the reserve or doing duty as tenders or attached to training establishments. They were built during the war and have done a good deal of service.

According to the Portsmouth Evening News lower-deck pay, which was believed to have been established, is to undergo a reduction proportionate to the fall in the cost of living—a cut of 15 per cent.

Fewer Promotions. In announcing that Vice-Admiral Luce has been placed on the retired list, the Admiralty states that in accordance with the decision to reduce gradually the flag list no further promotion will be made in consequence of this retirement.

Admiral Luce—then Captain Luce—commanded the Glasgow in the action off Coronel on Nov. 1, 1914, when Rear Admiral Craddock, with the Good Hope and the Monmouth, were lost. Later he took part in the engagement of the Falkland Islands when the Glasgow engaged and sank the Leipzig. In March 1915 he commanded the squadron which located and sank the Dresden off Juan Fernandez.
