The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

Metropolitan Toronto Library
Canadian History Department

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol \rightarrow (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ∇ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

Metropolitan Toronto Library
Canadian History Department

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole \rightarrow signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole ∇ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

P R E F A C E.

HAVING for some years past made Geography my study upon a particular occasion, which perhaps may appear hereafter, I could not help taking notice of the deficiency of all compendiums of this kind, both with respect to the number and length of the articles. For which reason I hoped to do my country some service, in giving them another more copious and more complete, continuing its portableness at the same time. The description of our own country has been greatly neglected, as if it was hardly worth our notice, though it ought to be the first and principal object of enquiry to every Briton. This is not unlike the sending young gentlemen abroad to visit foreign parts, before they have obtained any adequate knowledge of the laws, constitution, trade, product, and geography of the realm in which they drew their first breath.

Perhaps the deficiencies may be thought only to relate to pocket treatises of this kind; but the same objections will lie against larger volumes with relation to the number of the articles: which, that it may appear more readily, the reader may observe that those wanting in others, are marked with an asterisk thus (*)

However, these are not all, for there are several other considerable towns and provinces, which should have been thus distinguished, and which have been overlooked.

As for the usefulness of geography in general, nothing need be said, it being a study now greatly in vogue; and there are none but the very dregs of the people that have not some occasion or other to be acquainted therewith. It is absolutely necessary to men of letters, because no history can be well understood without it: as also to politicians, it being impossible to understand the true interest of different states and countries, without the knowledge of this science. Officers, both by sea and land, have great need of it, because it lets them into the nature and circumstances of places and towns, and enables them to take their measures accordingly. Merchants and traders ought to study it beyond all doubt, because it assists them in taking prudent measures in order to establish a beneficial commerce. In short, all those who have either interest or curiosity to know any thing of the transactions of the world, or are desirous of forming some judgment of the different events, which happen in the times of war or peace, ought not to be ignorant of geography.

The discoveries that have been made of late years in different parts of the globe, and the various settlements and emigrations in consequence thereof, render the old systematical writers of little or no use; especially as they had very little knowledge of the places they treated of, and have stuffed their books full of absurd and monstrous stories, the natural offspring of the credulity of those times. I wish I could say our modern relations were more to be depended upon in many instances; for most travellers seem to be very fond of the marvellous, and for that reason greedily swallow the most improbable fables. As for instance, Mr. Ovington, afterwards the king's chaplain, tells us that in the island of Johanna, the inhabitants have a custom of burning the devil every year, and that he in revenge constantly steals one of their children annually, notwithstanding the utmost care to prevent it. However, this demon is so good-natured as to inform them, after certain invocations, of the time of the arrival of any foreign ship. He adds, that they often meet him in the highways and streets in the evening, and by the water-side. Now if so learned a man could give credit to such extravagant stories, it is no wonder that ignorant sailors should so often be imposed upon, or be willing to impose upon others.

The places in this dictionary generally have the appellation of towns, which in others are termed cities; because all cities are towns, though all towns are not cities. Besides, geographers are not agreed about the properties that constitute a city. In England and Wales every bishop's see is a city, though the number of houses are hardly sufficient to deserve the name of a village. In the Low Countries every large walled place is a city, though it neither is, nor ever was a bishop's see, as for instance Lille: and yet in France they have a great number of cities that have no walls or other fortifications. The French distinguish their towns by the names of Ville, Cité, Bourg, Bourgade and Village; but what the difference is between Ville and Cité is very hard to say. Many would have Cité to be the most ancient part of a town, and yet we find some have been lately dignified with that title, perhaps by charter like our corporations, having some particular privileges; but then what shall we say to Paris, one part of which is a Ville, and the other a Cité. But be this as it will, the method I have taken is the least liable to create confusion, because it is always said, whether it is walled or not, and whether it is a bishop's see or not.

The easiest way of finding places in a map is by the longitude and latitude, the former being numbered on the top, and the latter on the sides: and therefore where lines drawn from each point may be supposed to meet, there the town will be found. Besides this, there are the distances from some remarkable place or places, and the river, lake, or coast on which any town is seated. The best method of understanding the map of any country, is first to become acquainted with the most remarkable rivers, because all towns of any considerable note are seated thereon, and then those that fall thereinto, and the places they pass by, as also in what manner any town is seated with respect to others in the same country, of which a particular map should always be procured.

The longitude is always reckoned from Ferro one of the Canary islands, according to the best French maps, which are far more accurate than any done in England. It is carried ried on eastward all round the globe, and if you want the difference of the longitude of any place from London, it is only subtracting the least number from the greatest. Thus London is 17 degrees 35 minutes east of Ferro, and Berlin is 31. 7. Subtract the former from the latter, and you will find that Berlin is more easterly than London 13. 32. The longitude of Edinburgh is 14. 35, that is less than that of London, and therefore more westerly by three degrees. Likewise by subtracting the longitude of London from that of any other place, you will have the longitude of that place in our English maps. They make use of west longitude for America; for which reason you must subtract that in this dictionary from 360 degrees, and to the difference add the longitude of London, and you will have the west longitude from thence. Thus take 306, that of Boston in New England, from 360, and the difference will be 54; To which add 17. 35, and the longitude west of Boston will be found to be 71. 35. And here it must be noted, that 60 minutes make one degree.

In the descriptions of the empires, countries, provinces, districts, counties, cities, boroughs, and towns, every remarkable circumstance is taken notice as far as our room would admit. I have shewn how each country is bounded, its extent, productions, manufactories, forces, the numbers of the inhabitants, manners and religion, at least as far as I could obtain any certain account. The distances of places in England and Wales, are reckoned according to English statute miles, of which there are 69 to a degree; but every where else I follow the marine measure of 60 to a degree, and in general this last is most convenient, because the graduation on the side of the map, will always serve instead of a scale of miles.

There are great improvements in the geography of England and Wales, care having been taken to get an exact account of the present state of the towns, or at least the greatest part thereof: to which are added not only the market-days, but those of the fairs according to new style; nor are those kept in the villages of every county forgotten. An exact account has been obtained of the counties in Ireland, land, with regard to the number of houses, parishes, buronies and boroughs; and it were to be wished the same could have been done for Scotland.

Upon the whole, though I cannot say with Echard that this dictionary will be of standing use to succeeding ages; yet as great care has been taken to render it complete according to the size of the volume; it is hoped it will meet with a reception proportional to its merit; than which nothing more is or can be desired.

I might complain, as others have done before me, of the difficulties of writing dictionaries in general, and more particularly those of Geography, on account of the different orthography of the countries and towns; the contradictions met with in the best treatises of this kind, as well as in maps, charts, and the relations of travellers: yet as I was not pressed into the service, but was to all intents and purposes a volunteer, I have no body to blame but myself, for entering upon so laborious a task.

However, I have been better enabled to reconcile differences, to expunge falsities, and to set aside impositions, from having seen a considerable part of the world myself; and from having made such observations as in some measure qualify me to judge of places which I have not seen. Here you will find no felling of winds, no diabolical conjurations, no nations of canibals or men-eaters; nor indeed any thing else that is shocking to common-sense, or evidently repugnant to the customs and practices of other parts of the world; unless the strange accounts of the different objects of worship may be so esteemed: but then we find others to match them in very distant parts. Thus if we find some that adore a fly, we shall meet with others that pay divine honours to a monkey's tooth; some to a serpent, others to a tree; not to mention the vast variety of image worship all over the world: and therefore we cannot reject such extravagant practices, from their seeming absurdity.

It likewise requires some share of judgment to make a proper choice of books of voyages and travels, for there are several extant full of nothing but fabulous stories. Thus one tells us he travelled through North America, and met with a great number of elephants and lions, and another informs us of the mad pranks he played in his journey into Arabia the Happy, giving an account of transactions impossible to be true. Nor has our own country escaped romantic descriptions, and particularly one of a very late date, which, out of respect to the memory of the very ingenious author, I forbear to mention. All such Utopian writers as these, I have endeavoured to avoid; and therefore hope there is nothing to be met with in this dictionary, but what may be depended upon; at least with regard to the most material circumstances.

THE science which treats of the disposition and assemblage of all parts of the universe, and the relation they have to each other, is called Cosmography; that is, a description of the world. And, as the universe is represented by the celestial and terrestrial globes, it follows from hence that cosmography has two principal parts; namely Astronomy, that takes notice of the heavenly bodies and their motions; and Geography, which is a description of the earth. This last part is our principal object; but, as the study of the sphere ought necessarily to precede that of geography, it will be proper to gain some knowledge of this part of cosmography before we proceed any farther.

Of the Celestial Globe.

The celestial globe represents the heavens with the stars, which are distinguished into the fixed and wandering, and these are called planets. The fixed stars are bodies, which shine with their own native light; and they are called fixed, because they always keep the same distance with respect to each other. According to Ptolemy they have two distinct motions; one which is common to the whole heavens, by which they turn from east to west on the poles of the world in twenty-four hours, carrying the stars along with them. They have also another motion, according to him, from west to east upon the poles of the ecliptic; but this is very slow, for it only amounts to a degree in seventy-two years. However, it is now well known that it is the earth which moves, and not the heavens; and that it turns about its own axis in twenty-four hours: hence proceeds the apparent diurnal motion of the fixed stars and seeming progressive motion, which is now called the retrocession of the equinoxial points.

T H E The planets, or wandering stars, have received that name from their being sometimes near, and sometimes at a great distance from each other. These are opaque bodies, which the fixed stars are not, but have a light of their own; insomuch, that now astronomers look upon them as so many suns which appear small on account of their immense distance from the earth; and that which is nearest it, according to Huygens, is at least twenty-seven thousand times more distant than the sun. The planets are generally said to be seven in number, namely Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Sol, or the Sun, Venus, Mercury, Luna, or the Moon; but the sun is improperly called a planet, because it is fixed in the center of our system; but Terra, or the earth, performs the same motions which have been attributed to that luminous body; and the moon is only a satellite of the earth. The planets in their annual motions always keep within the zodiac, and they seem to have a double motion like the fixed stars; but that from west to east is visible to the naked eye, and is in reality what it appears to be; for they all, except the moon, revolve about the sun as their center. They describe each a circle, which cuts the ecliptic in different points. Saturn, Jupiter, and Mars, are at a greater distance from the sun than the earth, and Mercury and Venus are nearer; upon which account they have sensible phases like the moon. Saturn makes its revolution about the sun in thirty years, Jupiter in twelve, Mars in two, Venus in about seven months and a half, and Mercury in about three months. Venus never wanders more than forty-eight degrees of the ecliptic distant from the sun, and Mercury only twenty-eight. Saturn is thought to turn upon its own axis, because he has five satellites, which revolve about him in the same manner as the moon round the earth; therefore some give them the name of moons, but we are uncertain in what time their revolution is made.

Jupiter has four satellites, or moons, the periods of whose revolutions are now very well known; and by their eclipses the longitude of places may with certainty be discovered. According to Cassini, Jupiter turns about his own axis in ten hours, and consequently the days in this planet are five hours long, and the nights as much. Saturn is 980 times bigger than the earth, and Jupiter 1170 times. Mars only one fifth as big as the earth; Venus is of the same size as the earth; and Mercury is only a twenty-seventh part as big; but the sun is a million of times larger.

Mars is thought to revolve about its own axis in twenty-four hours forty minutes time; and Venus, according to Bianchini, in twenty-four days and eight hours; but, according to the opinion of Cassini, it is performed in twenty-four hours and a few odd minutes. When this planet precedes the sun, she is called Lucifer, or the Morning-star; and when she sets after the sun, she is named Vesperus, or the Evening-star. As for Mercury, we are not certain whether he turns about his own axis or not.

Of the Sun.

The sun, or rather the earth, is more regular in its motions than any of the other planets; or at least, according to appearance, he continually moves in the ecliptic circle, and never wanders from it. The circle described by his daily motion is parallel to the equator; and his apogee is about the seventh degree of Cancer, at which point he is at the greatest distance from the earth. His perigee, where he is nearest the earth, is about the seventh degree of Capricorn; while he is near the former, he must of necessity move somewhat slower, and when near the latter, a little faster; from whence it comes to pass, that he is seven days longer in his motion from September to March, than from March to September. Some perhaps may wonder the weather should be so much colder when the sun is nearest the earth than it is when he is farther from it. To solve this difficulty difficulty, it must be observed that in the winter the sun is elevated much less above the horizon than in the summer, and consequently, that his rays fall more obliquely on that part of the surface of the earth which we inhabit. Besides, he continues a much shorter time above the horizon. He advances about a degree every day from west to east by his own proper motion; and as there are 360 degrees in the ecliptic, he passes thro' them in 365 days, 5 hours, and 49 minutes. Hence the common year consists of 365 days; and the remaining hours and minutes make about a day in four years; for which reason in that space one year is called Bissextile, and consists of 366 days. But, because this is eleven minutes too much for every year, they amount in 400 years to three whole days; for which reason astronomers have judged proper to retrench three days in every 400 years, and to leave out the Bissextile the first year of every century. Upon this account the year 1700, according to the New Style, was not Bissextile no more than the years 1800 and 1900 will be.

Of the Moon.

Though the moon seems to be much greater than all the other planets, except the sun, it is nevertheless the least of all; and that which makes her appear so large, is because she is much nearer the earth; for she is only 60 diameters of the earth from it in her apogee and 56 in her perigee. She is no more than equal to a fiftieth part of the globe of the earth. The moon is an opaque body, having no light but what she receives from the sun; and the different manners in which she turns towards the sun, are the causes of what we call the phases of the moon. These are generally said to be four, namely, the new and full moon, and the first and last quarter. The new moon is when she is in conjunction with the sun; and she being at that time between the sun and the earth, the enlightened part must be towards the sun, and consequently she cannot shine upon us. But, as she moves forward from the sun, a portion of the enlightened part will appear to us, which increasing daily till she has performed a fourth part of her revolution, she will then arrive at her first quarter. After this she proceeds till one half of her revolution is performed, and then she is in the full, and in opposition to the sun. Then she draws nearer the sun again till she has passed three parts of her revolution, and then she is in her last quarter. In the first part of her course the enlightened side is towards the west, and in the latter towards the east.

The moon performs her revolution through the zodiac in twenty-seven days and about eight hours; but as the sun during that time proceeds twenty seven degrees forward, the moon must be about two days in overtaking him; from whence it follows that from one new moon to another, there are twenty nine days and twelve hours. The lunar year consists of twelve of these new moons, and the lunar months of twenty nine and thirty days alternately. The whole year contains 354 days, and consequently is eleven days less than the solar year. The Turks and other Mahometans, reckon their time by these years, upon which account their high festivals are always kept at different parts of the solar year.

The proper motion of the moon is in a circle, which cuts the ecliptic in the points called the Nodes. This circle is a little distant in the other parts from the ecliptic, for which reason the sun is not eclipsed every full moon; but only when she is near her nodes at those times. The eclipses of the moon happen only when she is at full, and likewise near either of her nodes; for then the earth comes between the sun and the moon, and consequently the moon will be eclipsed. The moon happens to be in an eclipse much oftener than the sun, with regard to a particular place; for the moon being an opaque body which borrows her light from the sun, when the earth hinders her from being enlightened by the sun, she will appear eclipsed wherever she is visible: but it is not the same with the sun; for the moon, being much less than he may appear eclipsed to the people in some parts of the earth, and not in others. This may be readily conceived by putting one hoop of a hoghead into another; for this will give a true notion of the declination of the orbit, or path of the moon, from the circle of the ecliptic. The most distant parts of these hoops may be about three or four inches asunder; and then one will represent the ecliptic, and the other the orbit of the moon; likewise, the places where they cut each other will represent the nodes of the moon, called the Dragon's Head and Tail. The first is, when the moon passes the ecliptic from the south to the north; and it is called the Ascending or North Node, or more usually, the Dragon's Head. The other is at the passage of the moon across the ecliptic, from north to south, and is termed the Descending and South Node, or the Dragon's Tail. These nodes are not fixed, but are continually moving backwards, and consequently are sometimes in one place and sometimes in another.

On the celestial globe there are fifty constellations, of which twelve are in the zodiac, and are called signs; twenty-three in the north part, and fifteen in the south. Astronomers allow the breadth of the zodiac to be sixteen degrees; that is, eight on the north side of the ecliptic, and eight on the south. But this and the other circles are best represented in what is called an armillary sphere, for there the zodiac in particular will appear in its proper dimensions with the twelve signs engraven thereon. The names of the six northern signs are Aries, Taurus, Gemini, Cancer, Leo, and Virgo; and the six southern, Libra, Scorpio, Sagittarius, Capricornus, Aquarius, and Pisces.

But to be more particular, an armillary sphere is a machine composed of several circles, and a small globe in the middle to represent the earth. These circles are ten in number, of which six are great, namely the equator, the zodiac, the meridian, the horizon, and the two colures; four small, viz. the two tropics, and the two polar circles. The first are called great, because they cut the sphere into two equal parts; and the others are termed small, because they divide it into two unequal parts. However, every circle of the sphere is supposed to be divided into 360 degrees, each degree into 60 minutes, and each minute into 60 seconds. We have already taken notice of the zodiac, and therefore shall proceed to the other circles.

The Equator of the world to turn round artificial spheres, derived whole machine into points. The equal parts of this circle, world; and use of this and that in and that is. The points when the first every part begins at either of the same

Of the Equator.

The Equator is a great circle, ninety degrees distant from the poles of the world; and to understand what these are, the world is supposed to turn round an axis, which may be readily conceived, by viewing an artificial sphere. The points by which it enters and goes out, are called poles, derived from a Greek word, signifying to turn; because the whole machine of the universe is supposed to turn upon these two points. The Equator is so named, because it divides the world into two equal parts. It is also called the equinoxial, because when the sun is in this circle, there is then an equality of days and nights all over the world; and hence these points are called the equinoxes. The principal use of this circle is to divide the world into two equal parts as above, and that in which the arctic pole is found, is called the Northern half; and that in which the antarctic pole is placed, is the Southern half. The points where the ecliptic cuts this circle, are the equinoxes; for when the sun comes to these, there is an equality of days and nights in every part of the earth, except under the poles; for then the sun begins at either of these to make a day six months in length, and a night of the same duration in the contrary part.

Of the Meridian.

The Meridian is a great circle, supposed to pass through the poles of the world and those of the horizon, cutting the sphere into two hemispheres, or into two equal parts, the one oriental, and the other occidental. It also passes through the zenith and nadir in every place, and it cuts the horizon at right angles. It is called the Meridian, because it marks half the space of time during which the sun and the other stars appear above the horizon. As there are an infinite number of zeniths and horizons, that of the Meridian is also infinite; for the Meridian is changed as well as the zenith and horizon, every step we take towards the East or West; but if we pass in a right line Northwards or Southwards, we still continue under the same Meridian, though we constantly change the zenith and horizon. However, geographers only reckon 360 Meridians, which are supposed to pass through every degree of the equator.

It has been customary for geographers to establish a first Meridian; though this is altogether arbitrary; Ptolemy placed it at the island of Ferro, which is the most Western of the Canaries; the French do the same, and this has likewise been observed in the following Dictionary, because the best maps now extant are graduated after that manner; but the Dutch place it at the pike of Teneriff, and others at the Western Islands. As for astronomers, they generally fix theirs at the place where they make their observations. The use of the Meridian in a globe is to shew when it is noon or midnight at the place to which it is applied; and to divide the visible hemisphere into two parts, namely, into oriental and occidental. On the same circle they reckon the greatest altitude or elevation of the stars and planets above the horizon. It also determines the right ascension of the stars upon the equator, and the longitude of places upon the earth; for they are both nothing more than an arch of the equator, reckoned with regard to the stars from the equinoctial colure; and with respect to the places upon the earth, from the first Meridian to the Meridian of the proposed place. It also serves to determine the declination of the stars, and the latitude of towns; both the one and the other being an arch of the Meridian, counted from the equator to the star, or town proposed; for what is called declination in astronomy, is the same as latitude in geography. On this circle the elevation or height of the pole is taken, which is an arch of the Meridian, reckoned from the horizon to the pole, and is always equal to the latitude, whose compliment is the height of the equator above the horizon. The horizon and the meridian taken together, divide the heavens into four parts, of which the first is the superior oriental, the second the superior occidental, the third the inferior occidental, and the fourth the inferior oriental.

Of the Horizon.

The Horizon is a great circle, which divides the world into two equal parts or hemispheres, of which one is superior and visible, and the other inferior and invisible. This circle in a globe is the largest of all; and the meridian is inclosed therein with all the rest of the sphere. Besides, it is immovable, and on the circumference are marked the degrees of the twelve signs of the zodiac, the days of the twelve months of the year, and the thirty-two winds; and they are of equal use with regard to spheres and globes. In the natural sphere, the Horizon is the great circle, that seems to join the earth or sea with the heavens, and which bounds and terminates our sight. Each particular place has its Horizon fixed and immovable, and yet we change it every step we take; however, every one is in the center of his own Horizon. The poles of this circle are in the zenith or the point directly over our heads, as well as the nadir, which is directly opposite thereto.

The Horizon is divided into a rational and sensible; the rational is that which may be conceived to pass through the centre of the earth, and divide the world into two equal parts, the one the upper, and the other the lower. The sensible Horizon, though nearly as great as the rational, is, however, named a small circle, parallel to the former which touches the surface of the earth at the very place whereon we stand; but it does not divide the heavens into two equal parts like the rational, and yet the difference between them is almost insensible. The rational Horizon makes several angles with the Equator, according to the position of different places, and they are likewise distinguished by several names, according to the different positions of the sphere.

The Horizon divides the world into two Hemispheres, as just observed; from whence it follows, that it is always day in the one and night in the other. It determines the rising and setting of the stars, the length of day and night, and the beginning of twilight and the dawn of the day, both which begin when the sun is eighteen degrees below the Horizon. These degrees likewise serve to determine the duration of twilight and the dawn of the day; for neither the day nor the night are perfect till the sun is entirely risen above the Horizon, or fully depressed below it. It also distinguishes the cardinal points of the world, and where the Meridian and Horizon cut each other is the north and south; and the place which the Horizon cuts the equator, is termed east and west. By the help of these the remaining twenty-eight points are also determined, there being thirty-two in all, as above mentioned.

In spheres and globes, the rational Horizon is generally represented by a great circle, into which the grand meridian enters; and there is some breadth allowed, that there may be room to mark several things on the three different circles which it generally contains. As for instance, the principal winds, are on that next the outside; the months in the middlemost, and on the innermost the signs of the Zodiac answering to every month.

The sphere or globe may be placed in three different manners with regard to the Horizon; from whence comes the distinction of the right, oblique, parallel and right sphere. The right sphere is when the poles of the world are in the Horizon, and the zenith and nadir in the equator. In this position of the sphere, the circle described by the motion of the sun are divided by the Horizon into two equal parts. And in this case the days and nights will be always equal throughout the year, and the inhabitants will perceive the sun pass twice a year directly over their heads; besides, there is no part of the heavens that will not become visible to them; and they may perceive all the stars make their appearance successively.

The parallel sphere is that wherein the Horizon is parallel to the equator, and whose zenith and nadir are in the poles of the world. In this position of the sphere, one half of the ecliptic will always be above the Horizon, and the other half below it. This is the case of those who live directly under the poles; for they will see the sun for six months together above the horizon, and be six months below it, as has been before hinted at, and consequently the day will continue six months without reckoning twilight, which will continue four months; for after that begins the sun, which will be two months in ascending to the Horizon. If to these four months of twilight, are added the light of the moon during the two months of entire night, the length of its appearance, which will be one month in the whole, the inhabitants will have but a single month of entire night; because this luminary in that time performs two of its rotations round the earth, and they will see it shine during a fortnight each time. Besides, some ingenious authors have affirmed, that the twilight is much greater at or near the poles, than in any other part of the earth. And if so, these people will have the much greatest part of the year the benefit of light of one kind or other; though it is certain they never can see above one half of the heavens.

The oblique sphere is that which has an oblique Horizon; and in this position of the sphere, all the circles will be cut unequally by the Horizon, except the equator. This position agrees to all people that inhabit any part between the equator and the poles, for which reason there are no equal days and nights in any place, except at the time of the equinoxes; and consequently, throughout all the rest of the year, the length of the day will be greater or less than the night. This inequality of the days and nights is, because their Horizon cuts the diurnal circles of the sun into unequal parts; and the inhabitants will see a part of the heavens more or less great, according as the pole is more or less elevated above the Horizon.

The two colures are two great circles that cut each other at right angles to the poles of the world. One of these is named the equinoxial colure, because it passes by the two sections of the equator and ecliptic, that mark the points of the equinoxes. The other is termed the solstitial colure, because it cuts the equator in the points called the solstices. The first of these happens when the sun begins to touch Aries, or Libra, and the second when he enters Cancer and Capricorn. These two circles serve to divide the heavens into four parts, and the year into four seasons.

The tropics are two small circles parallel to the equator, described by the first points of the first degrees of the signs termed Cancer and Capricorn, that is, where they touch the ecliptic. They are distant from the equator very near twenty-three degrees and a half. The sun describes these tropics about the 20th day of June, and the 21st day of September. When he touches the tropic of Cancer he makes the longest day for the inhabitants between the equator and the north pole; and when he comes to the beginning of Capricorn he makes the longest day for the people between the equator and the south pole. On the contrary, the shortest day to the former will be when the sun touches the tropic of Capricorn, and to the latter when he comes to the tropic of Cancer. For this reason, these points are called the winter and the summer tropics, as also the southern and northern; and they are as it were the two barriers beyond which the sun never passes. They include that part of the earth usually termed the torrid zone; and they mark upon the Horizon the four collateral points, which are the summer east and west, and the east and west of winter. Likewise the difference from the same points determines the sun's greatest amplitude of rising and setting.

The two polar circles are distinguished by the names of the arctic and antarctic; and they are circles parallel to the equator, described by the poles of the ecliptic, about those of the world, by the revolution of the primum mobile, or first mover. They are termed polar, because they include the poles of the zodiac in their circumference, or rather, because they are near the poles of the world. They serve to bound the frigid and temperate zones, and include the space of the frigid zones, comprehended between those circles and the poles of the world. And likewise they include, with the two tropics, the two temperate zones. They also mark on the two colures, the interval comprehended between the poles of the world and the poles of the ecliptic, which is equal to the greatest declination of the sun, that is, 23 degrees and 29 minutes. The two tropics, and the two polar circles together, divide the heavens and earth into five zones or bands; namely, the torrid, the two temperate, rate, and the two frigid zones. The equator lies in the middle of the torrid zone, and the poles give the middle of the frigid; besides these circles just described, there are several others of great use in astronomy; such as the circles of longitude of the star, those of latitude of the same; the circles of right ascension, as well as those of oblique ascension and declination.

Of the Circles supposed to be described on the Terrestrial Globe.

As the sun, as well as the heavens, seems to turn about the earth, which geographers place in the center of the world, they have transferred to the terrestrial globe the greatest part of the circles of the sphere; for which reason the earth has its poles, its axis, its equator, its zodiac, its meridian, its horizon, its tropics, and polar circles; but with regard to the colures, they have rejected them as useless.

The two poles of the earth are the two points of the surface through which the axis of the world is supposed to pass; and the axis of the earth is like a line drawn through the center of the earth, correspondent to that in the heavens. The equinoctial line, or equator, is a great circle on the surface of the globe, over-against the equator in the heavens. It cuts the globe into two equal parts, the one north and the other south. The zodiac of the earth is a great circle, which answers to the zodiac in the heavens, or rather the ecliptic, and is divided into twelve signs. Its greatest distance from the equator is 23 degrees 29 minutes, as above. Its tropics are lesser circles at the same distance from the equator, and the polar circles are those of the small kind, at the like distance from the poles. The horizon is a great circle which divides the globe into two hemispheres, the upper and the lower, as has been already observed. The horizon of the globe may become the horizon of any particular people; and what is called placing the globe horizontally, is to make the horizon of the globe become the horizon of the place; which is done by putting the place under the grand meridian, and elevating the pole above the horizon to the same height as the latitude of the place.

The meridian is a great circle which passes by the globes of the terrestrial globe, and cuts the horizon at the north and south points. Each people has its different meridian, as before-mentioned; and the meridian divides the globe into two parts, the one eastern and the other western. The first meridian, as has been before observed, is arbitrary, and may be placed where-ever a person pleases; but let it be placed where-soever it will, the longitude of a place is the distance between the first meridian and the meridian of the place; or otherwise it is the arch of the parallel comprehended between the first meridian and the meridian of the place. The latitude of a place is the distance between the zenith of that place and the equator, and it is either north or south. It may also be said to be the elevation of the pole of the place above the horizon. Thus with regard to London, as the arch of the parallel comprehended between the first meridian and the meridian of London is the longitude, it follows from thence that the degrees of longitude should be reckoned upon parallel circles. In like manner the latitude of London being an arch of the meridian comprehended between the equator and the zenith of London, the degrees of latitude must be reckoned on the meridians; that is to say, on the great circles which pass by the poles.

It may be readily perceived from hence, what longitude and latitude are, and that the degrees of latitude are all equal. They contain about 69 English statute miles, or 20 marine leagues; but those of longitude, on the contrary, have no where that extent, except under the equator; for they continually diminish as they approach the poles, according to the following table.

On the globes and maps of the world the degrees of longitude are marked on the equator, and those of latitude on the grand meridian; but on particular maps the longitudes are always at the top and bottom, and the latitudes on the sides to the right and left.

Of the Divisions of the Earth formed by the Circles of the Globe.

The tropics and polar circles form the first division of the earth into zones and shadows; and the meridians and circles of latitude produce a second with the parallel circles of those of longitude.

As the tropics and polar circles divide the heaven into five parts, they may be said to do the same on the earth. Thus the torrid zone is comprehended between the two tropics, and contains 47 degrees or 940 marine leagues, and the inhabitants are named Amphiscians, because they have their shadows turned sometimes towards one pole, and sometimes towards the other. The two temperate zones are comprehended between the tropics and the polar circles, and contain the same number of degrees each. The people that inhabit them are termed Heteroscians, because they have their shadows at noon turned always the same way; that is, always towards the north or south poles. The two frigid zones are included between the polar circles and the poles, and have only half the breadth of the former; that is, twenty-three degrees and a half, which answer to 470 marine leagues. Those who live within these limits are called Periscians, because their shadows always turn round about them, according to the different motions of the sun.

As the polar circles and tropics divide the earth into five zones, and form a three-fold diversity of shadows; the same may be said with regard to the difference of longitudes and latitudes, which form a three-fold distinction among the inhabitants of the earth. Those who live in the same latitude, in the same hemisphere, and at the distance of 180 degrees of longitude are called Perioeciens; and are in the same climate, but the hours are opposite; for when it is noon at one place, it is midnight at the other. Those who live in equal degrees of longitude and latitude in different hemispheres, are called Antœcians; that is to say, opposite inhabitants; and these have opposite seasons; that is, when it is winter at one place, it is summer at the other, and the contrary. The Antipodes are those who live diametrically opposite to each other, having equal latitude and longitude; but with a difference of 180 degrees of the latter; and these have not only their seasons, but days and hours opposite to each other.

Of the Climates.

A climate is a space of the earth comprehended between two parallels, at the end of which the length of the longest days are increased half an hour in the summer season. The better to understand this we must observe, that under the equator the greatest day is no more than twelve hours, and that, in proportion as we advance towards the polar circles, the days of each climate encrease half an hour till we arrive at the polar circles; for then the longest days consist of twenty-four hours. Thus there is twenty-four climates in all on each side of the equator. Some, after this, talk of climates of months; but this is so useless a distinction, that it is not worth the reader's notice. However, it will not be improper to observe, that the spaces of the half-hour climates, if they were marked on the globe, would become narrower as they advanced near the poles. It is easy to know in what climate a city is, by observing the longest day; as for instance, at London, where the days are sixteen hours long, we need only subtract twelve from the number, and there will remain four; then multiply this by two, and you will have eight, which is the climate of London. The same may be done for any other climate.

To rectify the globe for a particular place, such as London, the north pole must be elevated to the same height: as for instance, 51 degrees 30 minutes, in the same manner as has been already taught, and then London must be placed under the grand meridian. And here it may be observed, that the number of degrees to which the pole must be elevated, is always equal to the latitude of the place. To find the longitude and latitude of a place, you must turn the globe till it comes under the grand meridian, and then stick the point of a needle perpendicularly over it, and it will mark the latitude at the meridian, which will determine its longitude on the equator.

To find the place of the sun on an appointed day; as for instance, the eighteenth of August, seek this day on the horizon, and you will find it answer to the 23d degree of Leo, in the circle of the signs. Afterwards seek for the same degree in the zodiac of the globe, and that will be the place of the sun on the eighteenth of August; that is, the sun will be in that degree of the celestial zodiac, which answers to that of the terrestrial zodiac. To find on what day the sun passes perpendicularly over a place in the torrid zone, you must observe whether it be in that zone or not. Suppose the place to be Goa, which lies in the 16th degree of north latitude, you must put it under the grand meridian, and turn the globe about, and see what degrees of the zodiac will pass under this latitude; and you will find two, namely, the thirteenth degree of Taurus, and the seventeenth degree of Leo; then when the sun comes to the thirteenth degree of Taurus, that is, on the 3d of May, and to the 17th degree of Leo, on the 11th of August, it will be perpendicular at Goa.

To know the rising and setting of the sun on a proposed day; as for instance, on the 15th of May at Paris, elevate the pole 48 degrees 50 minutes, and then seek the place of the sun on the 15th of May, which will be in the 24th degree of Taurus. Put this place under the grand meridian, and the horary needle to the south. Turn the globe towards the east till the 24th degree of Taurus touch the horizon; do the same westerly, and observe the hour on the horary quarter, and you will see for the morning four hours and a half, and seven hours and a half for the evening. By these means you may know the length of the day; that is, by adding seven hours and a half to seven hours and a half, and that will give fifteen hours. Besides, the number of half hours more than twelve will shew what climate the place lies in; but it will not be improper to observe, that these are now scarcely ever taken notice of by those that are conversant in this sort of learning.

To know what hour it is at one place when it is noon at another; as for instance, what hour it is at Vienna when it is noon at Paris, you must put Paris under the grand meridian and the horary needle on the south; turn then the globe towards the west till Vienna comes under the grand meridian, and the needle will shew what hour it is after noon. The globe is turned that way, because Vienna lies to the east, the space of fifteen degrees, or one hour. To know what hour it is in any part of the earth, at any hour proposed as eight o'clock in the morning at London, you must proceed as you did before, this proposition being only a consequence of the former.

Of the Points of the Compass.

The earth may be considered with regard to the four cardinal points, which are the north, south, east and west; and all the points included between them may have respect to a particular place. By this means we know the situation of the countries of the world, with regard to each other; for some are oriental, or towards the east, with regard to those that are occidental, or lie westerly of them. Thus England is to the west of France; and Poland is to the east of Germany; as also Africa is to the south of Europe.

We may easily distinguish the points that lie between those that are cardinal; thus, though Spain is to the south of France, yet it likewise lies to the westward thereof; but as they do not lie exactly south or west of each other, Spain may be said to lie south-west of France; and for the same reason, on the contrary, France will be north-east, with regard to Spain. The like may be said of any two other countries.

For the more readily finding upon the terrestrial globe the situation of places, with respect to the four cardinal points, you must consider that the equator, and the circles of latitude parallel thereto, precisely mark the places that are oriental and occidental of each other; and that the meridians will readily discover those that lie north and south of each other. Thus all places lying under the equator, or any of its parallels, are east and west of each other, and those that are seated under the same meridian, are north and south one of another. But all other places that are not seated in this manner, decline from the four cardinal points either more or less.

The circumference of the horizon is divided into thirty-two equal parts, by as many circles of position; and these same circles will represent the thirty-two winds that are of so great use in navigation. These winds are distinguished into the four principal or cardinal, four seconds, eight thirds, and sixteen fourths. The four principal are the east, west, north, and south; and the east and west are the two points of the rising and setting of the sun on the days of the equinoxes. These are called cardinal winds.

The four secondary winds are by some called collateral, lying exactly between the four former, and with them divide the horizon into eight equal equal parts. They take their names from the former; for that which is between the north and east is called the North-east; that between the north and west is named the North-west; between the south and east, the South-east; and that between the south and west the South-west. These are the eight principal winds.

The eight that are of the third sort lie between the former, and take their names from thence. Thus for that which is between the north and north-east is called the North, North-east; and that between the south and south east is called South, South-east; and so of the rest.

The sixteen remaining winds divide the former into two equal parts, and their names are likewise derived from them. Thus those which lie nearest the four cardinal; as for instance, between the north and the north-west, is termed North and by West: the next beyond the north, north-west, is called North-west and by North; that which follows beyond the north-west is called North-west by West; and, lastly, that after west north-west, is termed West and by North. These are the names which are in one quarter of the compass; from whence the rest may readily receive their proper denominations.

The distance of places is measured by an arch of a great circle of the terrestrial globe, by means of which the number of degrees between one place and another may be readily known; and these degrees being multiplied by the number of leagues, or miles, each degree contains, according to the custom of the country where any one happens to be, the product will shew how many leagues or miles are contained in this distance. Thus there are 60 marine or Italian miles in one degree; which is the same thing as 20 marine leagues. The English measured or statute miles require about 69 and a quarter to make a degree. The Russian verst or verst contains 3504 English feet, and there is about one hundred and four or five to a degree. There are about 56 Arabian miles in a degree, and 25 common French Leagues; but the great French leagues are the same as the marine. Fifteen German miles make a degree, and about 19 Dutch miles. Polish miles are the same as the marine leagues; but there are seventeen and a half Spanish marine leagues in a degree. Common computed Scotch miles are 40 in a degree, as well as the Irish; and there are 10 Hungarian miles in the same space. There are 12 Swedish and Danish leagues in a degree; and those of Switzerland are of the same length. An Indian kos is of the same length as a common French league; but there are only 12 kos to a degree in the same country. Besides these settled measures, there are others, called by some stations, and of these there are three in a degree; stages or days journeys have only two in the same space.

Of the Terms used in Geography.

The word Geography comes from the Greek, and signifies a description of the earth; by the earth is meant the terraqueous globe, composed of land and water, and it is commonly called the terrestrial globe. Chorography is the description of a country, province, or county; as for instance, instance, York as a town, such as ocean.

instance, Yorkshire, Topography is the description of a particular place, as a town, and the like. Hydrography is a description of the water, such as oceans, seas, and lakes.

As the earth may be represented either in the whole, or in part, thence comes the difference between geographical charts or maps, which however may be reduced to two kinds; namely, general and particular. Among the former, is the map of the world, or planisphere, which shews the two surfaces of the whole terrestrial globe, which is, as it were, cut in two by the first meridian; as also the maps which describe some principal part of the globe; such as Europe, Asia, Africa, and America: and even kingdoms; as for instance, Poland, Spain, Italy, Great Britain, and the like. However, those maps may be called particular, which represent any particular country; but they are more properly such as give an account only of a part, as Naples in Italy, Normandy in France, and Staffordshire in England.

After all, nothing can give a better or more general idea of the earth than a globe, because it is of the same shape and figure; but as it is impossible to make one large enough to shew every part of the earth and sea distinctly, there is a necessity of having recourse to general and particular maps.

Geography, as well as other arts and sciences, has terms proper to itself; some of which have relation to the earth, and others to the water.

A continent, called by some Terra Firma, is a large part of the earth, which comprehends several countries that are not separated by any sea; thus Europe is a continent.

An island, or isle, is a portion of the earth entirely surrounded with water. A peninsula, or chersonese, is a quantity of land which is only joined to a continent by a neck of the same, it being every where else encompassed with water.

An isthmus, or neck of land, is that part by which a peninsula is joined to the land, as the isthmus of Suez and Darien.

A promontory is a high part of land, which advances or stretches into the sea, and is commonly called a cape, when it appears like a mountain; but when the advanced part has little elevation, it is termed a point. Thus the Cape of Good Hope is a mountainous promontory.

An ocean is a large collection of waters surrounding a considerable part of the continent; such as the Atlantic and Northern Oceans.

A sea is a smaller collection of waters, when understood in a strict sense, as the British and Irish Seas; but, in general, every part of the ocean may be called the sea; and it is still more general, when the terrestrial globe is said to consist of land and sea.

A gulph is a part of the sea surrounded with land, except in one part, where it communicates with the ocean; as the Gulph of Bengal, the Gulph of Florida; and yet these are more properly seas than the Mediterranean, the Baltick, and the Black Seas, which, properly speaking are Gulphs, as well as the Gulph of Venice.

A bay is said to differ from a gulph only in being less, and more narrow at the entrance than within; but this is far from being true, for a bay has a wider entrance in proportion than a gulph; and it may be also larger than some gulphs; as for instance, the Bay of Biscay; tho' it must be acknowledged bays in general are much smaller. A creek is a small inlet, and is always much less than a bay.

A road is a place upon any coast where there is good anchorage, and where vessels, in some sense, are sheltered from the wind.

A strait is a narrow passage which joins two seas, two gulphs, or a sea and a gulph; such as the Sound, near the Baltic; and the straits of Gibraltar, between the Atlantic Ocean and the Mediterranean.

A lake is a collection of standing water surrounded by land, having no visible communication with the sea. Thus the Caspian Sea is truly and properly a lake; and there is another near it, called the Lake of Aral, which has hardly ever been taken notice of by former geographers, it being but a late discovery. It is about one third as big as the Caspian sea, and several rivers are now known to run into it, which by former writers were said to fall into the Caspian sea. Smaller lakes are those of Ladoga, Geneva, and several others to be mentioned hereafter.

A river is a stream of water that has its source from a spring, which always keeps running till it falls into some other river, or into the sea.

A general Account of the most remarkable Parts of the Terrestrial Globe.

The terrestrial globe, as has been already observed, may be divided into two parts; namely, the land and the sea. The land contains the old world, the new, and the parts unknown. The ancient world includes the continents and the islands. The continent contains Europe, Asia, and Africa.

In Europe, towards the north is Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Muscovy or Russia. About the middle, from west to east, France, Germany, Bohemia, Hungary, and Poland. And towards the south, Spain, Portugal, Italy, and Turkey in Europe.

The north part of Asia contains Russia, Siberia, and Muscovite Tartary. In the middle, from west to east, is Turkey in Asia, Persia, Grand Tartary, Thibet, and China. Towards the south is Arabia, the Mogul's country, and India on this side and beyond the Ganges.

In Africa, to the north of the equator, are Barbary, Egypt, Negroland, Guinea, Nubia, and Abyssinia; and to the south of the equator, are Congo, the country of the Hottentots, and many others not entirely discovered. Here it will be proper to observe, that the principal countries are only taken notice of to avoid too great a repetition of what is contained in the body of the Dictionary.

Of the Islands.

The islands are divided into those of Europe, Asia, and Africa. The islands of the ocean are Great Britain, Ireland, Iceland, and the isles of the Baltic Sea. In the Mediterranean, from east to west, Majorca, Minorca, Malta, Sicily, Sardinia, Corsica, Candia, Corfu, and the islands of the Archipelago.

The islands of Asia, in the Ocean, are the Maldives, Ceylon, Sumatra, Java, and Borneo, called the isles of Sunda, the Moluccas, the Philippines, and the Mary-Anns. More towards east are the isles of Formosa and those of Japan, and in the Mediterranean, are Cyprus and Rhodes.

The islands of Africa, in the Atlantic Ocean, are the Canaries, the islands of Cape de Verd, of St. Thomas, Ascension, and St. Helena. To the east of Africa are Madagafcar, the Isle of Bourbon, Mauritius, and the islands of Comora.

The New World contains the continent and the isles. The continent is divided into North and South America; and the northern part comprehends Canada, New England, Maryland, Virginia, Nova Scotia, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Carolina, Georgia, and the other part of Florida: add to these, New Mexico, California, and Mexico, or New Spain. South America comprehends Terra Firma, or Golden Castile, Peru, Brazil, Paraguay, Chili, and Terra Magellanica. The islands to the west or the South Sea, are those of Solomon, and many others. Those to the east, from north to south, are Newfoundland, the Western Islands, the Luccays, and the Carribee Islands, or the West Indies.

The islands and land towards the North Pole, some parts of which are not fully discovered, are Greenland, Spitzbergen, and Nova Zembla. Those places between the equator and the southern Pole, not fully discovered, are New Guinea, New Britain, Carpentaria, and New Holland. Near the South of America is Terra del Fuego, and several other places.

The principal isthmus's of the world are, the isthmus of Coriath, which joins the Morea, formerly Peloponnesus, with Greece: the isthmus of Pre-cop, that joins Little Tartary to Crim Tartary.

The most remarkable isthmus in Asia, is that of Tenefferim, which unites the peninsula of Malacca with the kingdom of Siam in India beyond the Ganges.

In Africa is one extremely remarkable, already mentioned, which is the isthmus of Suez, that joins Asia to Africa, and is about 75 miles over. Different monarchs were formerly tempted to join the Ocean with the Mediterranean, by cutting a canal across. Some pretend they abandoned this work for fear the lower part of Egypt should be laid under water.

In America the principal isthmus is that of Panama, which joins the north part of America to the south.

Of the Sea.

The sea is divided into that which surrounds the continents and the interior; that is, that which is almost enclosed and surrounded by the continent.

That of the Old Continent has four different names, according to the four cardinal parts of the world; namely, the Northern or Frozen Ocean, the Eastern or Indian Ocean, the South or Ethiopic Ocean, and the Western or Atlantic Ocean.

The exterior sea of the new continent preserves the general name of Sea, viz. that of the North, which washes the eastern part of America; and the South Sea, or Pacific Ocean, which is between Asia and America, and is to the west of the last.

The interior seas of our continent are the Mediterranean, the Baltic Sea, the White Sea, or Gulph of Russia, between Finland and the port of Archangel; the Black, or Euxine Sea; the Sea of Marmora, formerly the Propontis; the Sea of Zabach, or Azoph, anciently the Palus Meotis, near the Black Sea; the Caspian Sea, which is more properly a lake; the Red Sea, or the Arabian Gulph; the Gulph of Persia, between Arabia and Persia.

The interior seas, near America, are the Vermillion Sea, near California; the Gulph of St. Lawrence, near Newfoundland; and the Gulph of Mexico, between North and South America.

The principal gulphs in the world are, the Mediterranean Sea, the Baltic Sea, and the White Sea in Europe. In Asia there are the Gulph of Bengal, the Persian Gulph, and the Arabian Gulph, commonly, but improperly termed the Red Sea; for that known by that name to the ancients, is the sea to the south of Arabia.

There are two in America, viz. the Gulph of Mexico, between North and South America; and the Gulph of California, or the Vermillion Gulph.

A strait is a narrow passage which joins two seas, two gulphs, or a sea and a gulph, as before-mentioned; and these the most remarkable, are the Straits of Magellan, in South America; and Hudson's Straits, in North America. The first separates South America from Terra Australis; and the second, North America from the arctic lands. The most remarkable straits of our continent are those of Gibraltar, between Africa and Europe, at the entrance into the Mediterranean Sea. The strait of Bab-el-mandel is between Asia and Africa, and joins the Arabian Gulph, or Red Sea, to the Ocean. There is also the strait called the Sound. The most famous lakes in Europe are those of Ladoga and Onega, on the confines of Russia; the Lake of Geneva in Switzerland: besides which, there are others of less account. In Asia there is the Caspian Sea, which, having no communication with any other, is accounted only a lake. To the east of it is the Lake Aral, which, as has been already observed, is nearly one third as big as the Caspian Sea itself. There are several other large lakes which lie to the east of this; but none are so large as the Lake Baikal. Geographers mention another large lake to the south of the former, called Chemoy; but this is imperfectly known. In Africa there are several of these mentioned in the maps, but of these we know so little, that we shall forbear giving any description of them. However, there is one now pretty well known in Abyssinia, from whence the river Nile proceeds, and which is very considerable. In South America there are lakes, but neither their names nor extent have been ascertained. But in North America there are many, as the Lake Superior; those of Huron, Michigan, Erie, and Ontario; besides the lakes of Assiniboels and Caritinaux, which some think to be larger than any of the former.

The most noted rivers in Europe are, the Thames in England; the Torneo in Sweden, at the bottom of the Gulph of Bothnia; the Volga, or Wolga, in Russia; the Danube, which runs a considerable way through

In Asia the principal rivers are, the Tigris and Euphrates, in Turkey in Europe; the river Sind, or Indus, and the Ganges in India; the Kian and Hoan in China; and the Jelisca and Oby in Siberia.

In Africa there are the Nile, whose source is in Abyssinia, which runs through the middle of Egypt to the Mediterranean Sea; the Niger in Negroland, of which some would have the Senegal and Gambia to be two branches; but this is uncertain. The Za'ire is in Congo, and Cuama near the country of Hottentots.

In North America there are very considerable rivers; namely, St. Lawrence, which has its course through Canada; and the Mississippi, which runs from north to south through Louisiana, and falls into the Gulph of Mexico. In South America there is the River of the Amazons, which some take to be the greatest in the world, and the river of Paraguay, or Plata.

Of the Religions of the World.

All the different religions in every part of the world may be reduced to four; Judaism, Christianity, Mahometanism, and Paganism. Judaism has two branches; Judaism, properly so called, and the Samaritan religion, which differs from the former in many particulars.

Christianity has three branches; that called the Roman Catholic religion; that of the Greek church, which is divided into different sects; and the Protestants. These last are divided into that of the Lutherans, the Calvinists, Anabaptists, Socinians, and Quakers. However, the church of England, which is the best constituted in the world, cannot properly be said to be any of these.

Mahometanism is divided into two sects; namely, that of Omar, followed by the Turks, Moguls, and the Mahometans of Africa; and that of Aly, son-in-law of Mahomet, followed by the Persians. There are Pagans over all the world except in Europe; but their religions are of different kinds, and so numerous that it is impossible to describe them all. Paganism is said to extend over one half of Asia, five parts in six of Africa, and nineteen parts of twenty of the inhabitants of America. The most extensive is that of Fo, which prevails over Thibet, or the western Tartary, the two peninsulas of the Indies, with seven parts in eight of the inhabitants of the Mogul's empire, China, and most of the Indian islands.

Christianity prevails all over Europe, and among all the European settlements in America; and it is still professed in many parts of the Turkish dominions; not to mention the converts made by the Portuguese in Africa and the East Indies.

The Jews are no longer a nation, and therefore Judaism cannot properly be said to be established any where; but as the Jews themselves are spread all over the old continent, their religion is still kept up among them. They are said of late to have got footing in America; but they are so few in number they are not worth notice.

Mahometanism prevails over all the Turkish empire in Europe and Asia, Little Tartary, Arabia, Persia, Great and Little Bocharia, the Mogul's empire, many of the Indian islands, and the northern and eastern coasts of Africa; insomuch that some pretend to tell us it is six times more extended than Christianity.

Of the different Languages.

Some geographers inform us, that there are fifteen general languages; namely, the Latin, Teutonic, the Slavonian, the Greek, the Arabian, the Tartarian, the Chinese, the African, or Bereberan, the Ethiopian, that of the Negroes, the Mexican, the Peruvian, the Taphuyan, the Guyaran, and the Calibayan. These five last are spoke in America; but are not so general as these authors pretend; for even in North America, which is best known to the Europeans in general, there is so great a variety, that it would be very difficult to enumerate them all. The same may be said of the language of the Negroes; for there is no person whatever who has sailed along the coast of Africa from the river of Senegal to the Cape of Good Hope, but must have met with a great number of tongues not understood by their neighbours; even in those small districts to which the Europeans have given the name of kingdoms. The same may be said of the inhabitants of the eastern coast of Africa from the Cape of Good Hope to the Straits of Bab-el-mandel.

The Latin is now a dead language, though it continues to be taught in schools all over Europe. Some would have the Teutonic to be the natural language of Germany, Scandinavia, and the British islands, they being only different dialects of the same tongue. However, some affirm the Celtic, or Keltic, was the original and general language of Europe; and that it still prevails in the north of Scotland, Ireland, and Wales.

The Slavonian is said to be the original of the Dalmatian, Bosnian, Albanian, Servian, Bulgarian, Moldavian, Bohemian, Silesian, Polish, Russian, Mingrelian, and Circassian.

The Greek was extended where-ever its empire prevailed, as did the Latin throughout the Roman empire, and which, in some measure, swallowed up the Greek; however, this last is still spoken, though corruptly, in the southern part of Turkey in Europe; that is, in ancient Greece, and the islands of the Archipelago, as also in Natolia in Asia. The Arabic is spoken, or at least understood in Arabia, Turkey in Asia, Persia, and India; and likewise in Barbary, Egypt, Zara, Nubia, and Zanguebar.

The Tartarian is understood in Great Tartary, Muscovite Tartary, and in some parts of Turkey in Asia, the Mogul's country, and China. The Chinese is not only spoken in China, but in some parts of India, and many of the islands of Asia.

The Latin tongue, as was observed before, is now a dead language; but there is still a strong tincture of it in the Italian, French, Spanish, and Portuguese languages. It has also furnished not only the English but almost all the languages in Europe with a great number of words; and even the Greek is generally made use of in our technical terms, because arts and sciences were in some sense derived from the Grecians. But we must not forget the Chaldaic, from which the Western Syriac, the Hebrew, the Arabic, and the Abyssinian languages are derived. The Malayan tongue prevails over a great part of India beyond the Ganges, and many of the islands near it. There is still another, called the Manchew, which prevails in the eastern parts of Tartary; besides twenty-two more, of which specimens are given by Strahlenberg, who was thirteen years a captive in Siberia. After all, there is no doubt to be made but there are many others of which we have not the least account; therefore that of all the languages spoken at present in different parts of the world, must needs be very imperfect; not to mention that there are many countries whose coasts have been touched upon by navigators, whose languages are entirely unknown.

Of the different Inhabitants of the Earth.

Though there is a great variety of complexions, or colours of the skin, in different parts of the world, yet they may all be reduced to four; namely, the white, the black, the tawney, and the red. Among the whites, may be reckoned the Europeans, the inhabitants of Natolia, Armenia, Georgia, the inhabitants of Persia near the Caspian Sea, some of the Tartars, and the Chinese in the northern parts of China.

The people are tawney in Barbary, Egypt, Zara, Sahara, and Zanguebar; that is, in the north parts of Africa; as also the inhabitants of Asia in Syria, Diarbec, Arabia, the southern provinces of China, and in some of the most eastern islands of Asia. Many of the Indians are yellowish, but not so perfectly as to deserve being placed in a distinct class.

All the Americans, except the Eskimaux, are red, which appears more or less bright, according to their different manner of living and being exposed more or less to the inclemency of the air: besides, it is almost an universal custom to dawb themselves over with bears-grease or oil, which, in some measure, conceals their real complexion; therefore it is no wonder that many travellers have affirmed that their colour is olive. But where they are more civilized, and have been prevailed upon to cloath themselves, they are all of a bright red copper colour; and, which is very remarkable, have no hair on any parts of their bodies, except their heads, where it is black and coarse, like horse-hair. Some have observed, that they employ their women to pull off their beards by the roots; and in this most geographers have blindly copied each other. However, it is now well known, from the relations of the most intelligent and curious travellers, who have been in different parts of America, that they have not the least sign of a beard; and therefore they could not be deprived of them in that manner. Besides, we have had Americans here in England, whose beards must have appeared, if they ever had any; because it is well known, that if you pluck up as many hairs by the roots as you please, they will all grow again, which every one has it in his power to experience.

The Africans in general are all black, except those above-mentioned; and these, as some pretend, were originally colonies from different parts of Europe and Asia. The hair of their heads is curled like wool, and this without any exception, unless on the eastern coasts of Africa and Madagascar, where Arabians have settled among them; and even in these places the skins continue black, and their hair, though long, always curls. There are a great many blacks in Asia, particularly in India on this side the Ganges; but their hair is long and straight. Some would have these to be only of an olive complexion, because they are not quite so black as the Negroes; but be this true or false, it is of very little moment.

The visages of the inhabitants of different parts of the world are also very different; for some are very frightful, such as the Laplanders, the Eskimaux, and more particularly the Samoïdes. As for the Europeans, their features are well known to every one, and in general, they are the most beautiful of all mankind, except the inhabitants of Georgia in Asia, who are thought to have the best complexions, and the most handsome faces in the world. The Spaniards and Portuguese are not so fair as some other Europeans, which is thought to be owing to their mixture with the Moors, who originally came out of Syria and Arabia. The inhabitants of the peninsulas of India, though their complexions are so dark, have generally European features; whereas the blacks of Africa have almost universally thick lips and flat noses. There might be many other distinctions between the people of different countries; but as they more or less approach in their aspect to those already mentioned, they need not be particularly taken notice of; for as for the inhabitants of New Guinea and New Holland, though they always have their eyes almost shut, and a tooth wanting in the upper jaw before, yet this is only an accidental difference.

Of the Government and Trade of England.

THOUGH it is common in books of geography to insert a superficial account of the divisions and peculiarities of the different countries of the world, yet as this has been already done in the body of this Dictionary, it would be altogether unnecessary to give a short account here of what has been more fully treated of already. All that seems to be wanting to complete this work relates to the government and trade of England, of which we shall now give a more particular description.

Of the Ecclesiastical Government and Courts.

The convocation formerly, at least, had the principal part of the ecclesiastical government; for this is a national body of the clergy assembled together, to consider of the state of the church, and to call those to an account who have broached new opinions, inconsistent with the doctrines of the church of England. But in a late reign, they having been thought to proceed with too great severity against the delinquents of this kind, they have not been permitted to sit any long time since. However, they are called together at the same time as the parliament, by the authority of the king, who directs his writs to the archbishop of each province to summons all bishops, deans, archdeacons, &c. to meet at a certain time and place. The convocation consists of one proctor sent from each cathedral and collegiate church, and two from the body of the inferior clergy of each diocese. The upper house in the province of Canterbury consists of the archbishop, who is president, and twenty-two bishops; and the lower house is composed of all the deans, archdeacons, and proctors, as above; in all, one hundred and sixty-six. The archbishop of York may likewise hold a convocation at the same time.

King Henry the VIIIth's chapel, at Westminster, is generally the place of meeting for the province of Canterbury; and York for the province of York. The first business of the lower house is to chuse a prolocutor, who is presented to the upper house by two of the members; one of them making a speech in Latin, and the prolocutor else another; to which the archbishop returns an answer in the same language.

Under these two archbishops there are twenty-four bishops; that is, twenty-one in the province of Canterbury, and three in the province of York. These have all the title of lords, on account of the baronies annexed to the bishopric; and they take place of all other barons, as well in parliament as in other assemblies. The first of these is the bishop of London, who is dean of the episcopal church of that province; the next is Durham, and then Winchester; but all the rest take place according to the seniority of their consecrations.

The business of a bishop, according to his episcopal order, is to ordain priests and deacons, to consecrate churches and burying-places, and to administer the rites and ceremonies of confirmation.

The jurisdiction of a bishop relates to the probation of wills; to grant administration of goods to such as die intestate; to take care of perishable goods, when no one will administer; to collate benefices; to grant institutions to livings; to defend the liberties of the church; and to visit his own diocese once in three years. Besides these, there are many other particulars which our room will not permit us to mention.

The court of Arches is the most ancient consistory of the province of Canterbury, and all appeals in church matters are directed to this court. The processes run in the name of the judge, who is called Dean of the Arches; and the advocates who plead in this court must be Doctors of the Civil Law. The court of Audience has the same authority as this, and the archbishop's Chancery was formerly joined to this. The Prærogative Court is that wherein wills are proved, and administrations taken out.

The court of Peculiaris, relating to certain parishes, have a jurisdiction among themselves for the probate of wills; and therefore are exempt from the bishop's courts. The see of Canterbury has no less than fifty-seven of these Peculiaris.

The court of Delegates is so called, because it consists of commoners delegated or appointed by the royal commission; but it is no standing court.

Besides these, every bishop has a court of his own, which is held in the cathedral of his diocese, and is called the Consistory-court. Likewise, every arch-deacon has his court as well as the dean and chapter of every cathedral.

Of the Parliament of Great-Britain.

This august body consists of two houses, one of which is called the house of lords, and the other the house of commons. Before the union, the house of lords consisted of the spiritual and temporal peers of England; and the house of commons of 513 knights, burgesses, and citizens. But since the union, there are sixteen peers of Scotland added to the house of lords, and 45 commoners to the house of commons. The first of these are chosen before the sitting of every new parliament, by the peers of Scotland, out of their own body.

The design of parliaments is to maintain the constitution, to support the dignity of the crown, and to keep inviolable the privileges of the people. They are also to raise subsidies, to make laws, and to redress all public grievances. The power of calling a parliament, and of adjourning and proroguing the same, is entirely lodged in the sovereign.

The sitting of the parliament is appointed by the king's proclamation, with the advice of the privy-council; and in choosing a new one, writs are issued out by the lord chancellor to the lords, to appear at the time and place appointed. Writs are also sent to the sheriffs of every county, commanding them to summon the electors, to chuse as many knights, citizens, and burgesses, in their respective counties, as are to sit in the house of commons. The writs for Scotland are directed to the privy council, for summoning the 16 peers, and for electing the 45 members.

No judge, sheriff, or clergyman, can be elected; and no gentleman, unless he has 600l. a year. Formerly parliaments met at different places in the kingdom; but of late they assemble at Westminster, at what was formerly called St. Stephen's chapel.

When the king comes to parliament, the usher of the black rod is ordered to call the commons up to the house of lords, where they stand without the bar, and the king commands them by the lord chancellor, to chuse one of the members for their speaker, and to present him such a day. The choice being made by a majority of votes, at the day appointed, he is presented to the king in the house of lords, between two members for his approbation. The lord chancellor, or keeper for the time being, is always speaker for the house of peers. Since the reformation, no Roman catholic can sit in either house, till he has first taken the oaths.

Though the number of the house of commons is so great, yet 300 are commonly reckoned a full house; and there can be no business done if there are less than forty. At the first meeting of the parliament, they always appoint standing grand committees, for privileges, elections, grievances, trade, and religion.

The chief business of the parliament is to revive or abrogate old laws, and to make new ones; but whenever a new law is proposed, it must be first put in writing, and then it is called a bill; but the commons have only the power of introducing money bills. Before any bill can pass into a law, it must be read three several times in each house, except a bill of indemnity, which requires only once reading. The leave of the house must be obtained to bring in any private bill, and the house must be acquainted with the substance of it, either by motion or petition. After it has been read the first time, the speaker recites an abstract of the bill, and puts the question, whether it shall be read a second time, or not. But if a bill comes from the house of lords, so much favour and respect is shown, that if it be spoken against in the first reading, the speaker puts the question for the second reading before it is rejected, if that should be the case. Bills are seldom read twice the first day, unless upon very extraordinary occasions, and require the utmost expedition. Upon the second reading, if none speak against the bill, and several for it, the speaker may put the question for engrossing it.

When debates arise upon the second reading, and they are over, the house commonly calls for committing the bill to the committee of the whole house, or to a select committee. Sometimes it may happen, the bill may be recommitted before the speaker puts the question for engrossing. After a bill has been engrossed, it is to be read a third time, in order to have it passed. But when any debate happens after it is over, the speaker holds the bill in his hand, and says, As many as are of opinion that this bill should pass, say yea; and as many as are of the contrary opinion, say no. Upon which he informs the house, whether the yeas or no's have it. But when the thing is doubtful, two tellers are appointed for each side, one to number the yeas and the other the no's; however, the question is first put, which of these shall go out of the house, and this is called dividing the house. After the numbering them is over, the tellers declare to the speaker the number of yeas and no's; upon which all return to their places. If the no's have it, the bill is said to pass in the negative. But if it passes in the affirmative, they order it to be sent to the house of lords for their concurrence.

When a bill is sent by the lords to the commons, they send none of their members, but only masters in chancery, who deliver the bill to the speaker. When there is a disagreement in the houses about a bill, a conference is demanded, which is held in the Painted-chamber. In voting in the house of lords, they begin with the lowest baron, and so proceed to the highest peer; who each for himself, says Content, or Not content; and if the voices are equal, the negative carries it. After an adjournment of either house, they may resume the business they were upon, but after a prorogation they cannot, for then the sessions is ended. Every one knows that after the dissolution of the old parliament, a new one must be elected in the manner mentioned above.

The courts of Justice, sitting at Westminster, are opened four times a year, that is at Easter, Trinity, Michaelmas, and Hilary terms. There are four courts, namly, the courts of Chancery, King's Bench, Common Pleas, and the court of Exchequer, not to mention that of the dutchy of Lancaster, because that only takes cognizance of all the causes relating to the revenue of this dutchy, which has been long annexed to the crown; the chief judge of this court is called the Chancellor of this dutchy.

The Court of Chancery is a court of equity, and designed to relieve the subject against cheats, breaches of trust, and other oppressions, to temper the rigour of the law. However, the remedy has often proved worse than the disease, on account of the length of time before the cause has been determined. The chief judge is the lord-chancellor, or lord-keeper; and the form of proceeding is by bills, answers, and decrees; and the witnesses are examined in private: however, it must be observed that the decrees of this court are only binding to the persons of those concerned in them; for they do not affect their lands and goods; and consequently, if a man refuses to comply with the terms, they can do nothing more to him than send him to prison. This court is not like others, which have no power except in term time; for this is always open; and if a man be sent to prison, the lord chancellor, in any vacation, can grant a Habeas Corpus, if he sees there is reason so to do. He may also at these times grant prohibitions.

The lord chancellor has twelve assistants, called masters in Chancery, whose business is to take affidavits or depositions upon oath, concerning any matter for which an oath is required by the rules of the court, and they have an office in Chancery-Lane. They also examine accounts depending on this court, of which they make their report in writing. Besides these, there are several masters extraordinary, to take affidavits in the country.

The master of the rolls is the principal of the twelve, and he has the custody of all charters, customs, commissions, deeds, and recognizances; which being made on rolls of parchment, gave occasion to his name, and the repository of them is called the Rolls; here all the rolls are kept since the beginning of the reign of Richard III. This is a great officer, and usually hears causes in Chancery, when the chancellor himself is absent. He keeps a court at the Rolls, where he hears and determines causes that come there before him; he has the gift of the six clerks offices, and those possessed of them are next in degree to the masters in Chancery. Their business is to enrol all patents, commissions, licences, pardons, and other instruments that pass the great seal. When the master of the rolls sits in the house of lords, his place is next to the lord chief justice of England, upon the second woolfack. Besides what is said above, the court of Chancery has the power of sending out commissions for charitable uses, and of enquiring into all the frauds and abuses which have been committed in the disposal of all charities throughout the kingdom, and can oblige the trustees to perform their trust, according to the intent of their respective donors. Under the six clerks there were formerly sixty, but now there are ninety, and these, with their under-clerks, perform the business of their office.

The Court of King's Bench is the highest court in England, in common law, except the house of Lords in Parliament. All pleas are brought into this court between the king and the subject, such as treason, felonies, breach of peace, and any kind of oppression. This court has also power to examine and correct all errors of all the judges and justices of England, in their judgments and proceedings: this not only in pleas of the crown, but in those that are really personal and mixed, except only in the Exchequer. There are four judges belonging to this court, the chief whereof is stiled the lord chief justice of the King's Bench; and, according to an act of parliament just passed, all the judges are to hold their places, notwithstanding the demise of the crown, but with the same restriction as formerly; that is, while they do nothing to occasion the forfeiture of their places. None can be a judge in this court except a serjeant at law. All matters of fact, relating either to civil or criminal causes, are determined in the court of King's Bench by a jury.

The Court of Common Pleas is so called, because the pleas usually here debated are between subject and subject. None but serjeants at law may plead in this court; and here all civil causes real or personal are usually tried, and real actions are pleadable in no other court. Likewise, no fines can be levied or recoveries suffered, except in this court at Westminster, at a judge's chamber, at the assizes, or by a special commission out of chancery. There are four judges also belonging to this court, the first of whom is called lord chief justice of the common pleas.

The Court of Exchequer consists of two courts, one of which tries causes according to law, and the other according to equity. The court of equity is held in the exchequer chamber, before the lord-treasurer, the chancellor of the exchequer, the lord chief baron, and the three barons of the exchequer; besides a cursitor baron. But the two first sit very seldom, and the five last almost always. Here are tried all causes relating to the king's revenue, namely, such as relate to accompts, disbursements, customs, and fines imposed. All judicial proceedings according to law, are only before the barons; but the court of equity is held as above.

There are Assizes and Sessions held in the different counties of England, for the more easy distribution of justice; and the assizes are courts kept twice a year. The twelve judges are commissioned by the king for this purpose, and this they call going the circuit. At these assizes all civil and criminal causes may be determined: the first is called Lent assizes, soon after Hilary term, and the other called the summer assizes, after Trinity term. There are six of these circuits, besides those in Wales, in which principality two distinct judges are appointed; and both in England and Wales all causes are determined by a jury. The jury are chosen by the sheriff of the county, and they are only directed in point of law by the judges.

The commitment of malefactors is generally made by a justice of the peace, who examines witnesses to the fact upon oath. At the evidence is plain, he makes a mittimus, and sends the malefactor to the county goal, where he continues till the next assizes or sessions.

There are justices of the peace in every county, designed to keep the peace thereof; and such of them that the king is supposed to have greater confidence in, are called justices of the quorum; because in their decessus's there are these words quorum A. B. unum esse volumus; the meaning of which is, that no business of consequence must be transacted, unless with the concurrence of one of these. Their office is to call before them, examine, and commit to prison, all thieves, murderers, vagabonds, and all disturbers of the peace of what kind soever.

The Quarter Sessions are so called from the meeting of the justices every quarter of a year, at the shire or other chief town in their respective counties, where they have a power of trying all criminal causes in the same manner as at the assizes, though they commonly confine themselves to acts of a lesser degree of guilt.

There is a sheriff appointed for the execution of laws in every county, except Westmoreland and Durham, who is nominated by the king every Michaelmas term. His office is to execute the king's mandates, and all writs directed to him out of the king's courts. He also impanels juries to bring causes and criminals to trial, and is to take care that the sentences both in civil and criminal affairs be duly executed. He appoints an under-sheriff, stewards of courts, bailiffs of hundreds, constables, and jaylors, and has many men, in rich liveries, to attend upon him on horseback at the reception of the judges, and during the assizes.

The office of a high-constable, petty constable, headborough, or thirdborough, is to execute the warrants and orders of the justice of the peace; but the high-constable only disperses them upon some occasions to the petty constables.

Every city and corporation in England may chuse their own magistrates, which may be either a mayor, or a bailiff, with aldermen, common councilmen, or capital burgeses; and these regulate all affairs which immediately belong to their respective corporations. Likewise, some cities have counties, and have a power of trying all malefactors taken in their counties; but this is seldom undertaken without the assistance of one or more of the twelve judges. Some of these officers during their magistracy are justices of the peace: these are commonly the mayor and an alderman or two; but they cannot exercise their power out of their own liberties.

The lord-licutenants and deputy-licutenants had formerly a more considerable power and influence than they have at present, and they are chosen by the king himself out of the principal peers of this kingdom. Their business was to arm, array, and form companies, troops, and regiments; and the men so raised were called the militia. But this having been seldom done of late, on account of the standing forces kept continually in pay, these forces became in a great measure useless. However, it having been found necessary, since our last war with France, to have a militia properly regulated and disciplined, for the defence of the country against all foreign invasions, an act of parliament is made, by which they are put under new regulations, and in consequence whereof a new militia has been actually raised in most parts of the kingdom. The officers are to be men of fortune, and the private men are to be raised by balloting; but these last are to be changed every three years. This has put the kingdom into such a state of defence, that we can now venture to send our regular forces abroad upon any emergent occasion; and it is not improbable but these last, in times of peace, will become entirely useless.

Besides the courts already mentioned, there are Court-Leets and Court-Barons, which properly belong to the lords of the Manors, who appoint stewards to hold them in their name. The first is a Court of Record, it being reputed the King's Court, because its authority is derived from the Crown. It is kept twice a year, and in it enquiry may be made of riots, and other criminal matters; but all great offences must be certified to the justices of assize.

A Court Baron is incident to every Manor, though the other is not so, and is so called from the Lord of the Manor, who was anciently styled baron; all tenants belonging to the Manor are summoned to this Court; here part of them are sworn for a jury, and here the steward sits as judge. The jury is directed to enquire after the decease of copy-holders and free-holders, and to bring in their next heir, and also of the encroachments of any tenant. Likewise here they make orders and laws among themselves, with a penalty for transgressors, payable to the lord of the Manor. There are also Sheriff Courts, and Hundred Courts, held every month in all parts of England, where small causes are determined. A Court of request has been long held in London, for the recovery of small debts under forty shillings; there has been some erected in Westminster, and other out-parts about London; as also in two or three towns in the country, and it is thought that from time to time they will be erected elsewhere. The officers called bailiffs of the hundred, and other bailiff and seigniors, are appointed by the sheriff to execute writs, to distrain goods, and to summon to the county sessions and assizes.

Navigation in this kingdom was formerly greatly neglected to what it is at present, notwithstanding the vast advantage received therefrom; for it enables the inhabitants of the country where it flourishes, to export what they have, and to import what they have not. When it happens that we are in want of materials for the manufacturing any particular commodity, by the means of our shipping we can purchase them in other countries, and manufacture them at home. In consequence of which we employ more hands, and receive a national benefit by selling them again: those that have an adequate knowledge of the wants of other countries, and the means by which they may be supplied, have a fair opportunity of enriching themselves, by being the agents and carriers of the different sorts of goods from place to place. While we were strangers to navigation our country was thin of people, because we lived as it were upon the main stock. We had indeed a few staple commodities, and a very few manufactories, which were sold to foreigners at their own rates; but when navigation began to flourish, and we had vessels of our own, the face of affairs soon began to change; and we brought home the product of other countries at a small expence, in comparison to what they cost us formerly: likewise we disposed of our own commodities at much higher rates. We procured manufacturers from different places, some of which taught us to weave in a much better manner, others to dye, and others again to fabricate a great variety of stuffs and silks. From the Germans we learned watch and clock work; the art of making glass from Italy, and from the Dutch the method of casting types for printing. In short, by navigation we have received so many benefits and improvements, that it would require a small volume to recite them all.

At present a trade is carried on to the Turkish dominions and the Levant, by the Turkey company, and the commodities we send to those parts are lead, tin, iron, broad-cloth, and long cloths; not to mention French and Lisbon sugars as well as bullion. We take in return great quantities of raw silk, which serves for making stockings, gallions, gold and silver lace; and it is also proper for the warp for any kind of silk. We import also program yarn, dying stuffs of various kinds, drugs, soap, leather, cotton, fruits, and oil,

To Italy we carry tin, lead, pilchards, herrings, salmon, cod, and various kinds of East-India goods; besides some of our own manufactories, such as broad-cloth, long cloths, bays, druggets, camblets, leather, and other things. We import from thence wine, oil, soap, olives, dying-stuffs, as well as silk, raw, thrown, and wrought. From the king of Sardinia's dominions, we have the fine silk called Organzine, which is thrown by an engine. We have long had a remarkable one of these at Derby, and for some time at two or three towns in Cheshire.

We send to Spain much the same sort of commodities as in Italy, many of which are exported from thence to their colonies in America. In return we have wine, oil, fruits, wool, indigo, cochineal, and other drugs; and in times of peace gold and silver, in specie or bullion. From whence it appears that these two countries are so necessary to each other, that it never can be for our interest to go to war with Spain.

The Kingdom of Portugal takes from us almost all kinds of our commodities; we take from thence wine, oil, salt, and fruits. It is generally believed that the balance of trade with Portugal is greatly in our favour, and yet they have no reason to complain; because they would be at a loss to vend what we take of them at other markets; besides, as they send great quantities of our goods to Brazil, they are enabled from thence to draw an immense treasure yearly, which renders Portugal one of the richest countries in Europe.

In times of peace we export to France tin, lead, corn, horn-plates, and great quantities of tobacco, besides a little flannel; and we receive from thence brandy, wine, linnen, lace, and many other things, there being a trade carried on by smugglers, for which they convey to France gold, silver, and wool, to the great detriment of England. We send to Flanders, tin, lead, iron wares, sugar, tobacco, ferges, flannels, and a few fruits, for which we receive fine laces, linnen, tapes, inckles, and other goods of that kind. We had formerly large quantities of their cambrics; but at present these are prohibited, for which reason the trade is not quite so much against us as formerly.

We export to Germany tin, lead, tobacco, sugar, ginger, woollen manufactories of every kind, as well as all sorts of East-India goods. In return, we have from thence tin-plates, linnen, and several other things. However, in many places several of our manufactories are prohibited, and yet the balance of trade is thought to be considerably on our side.

With Denmark and Norway we have very little trade, except for a few coarse woollen-goods; for which reason we are forced to pay for most things we have of them. We have also a decaying trade with Sweden, for they buy little of us, and we purchase of them copper, iron, and naval stores; but it is hoped this disadvantage will be remedied in part, since we have allowed iron to be imported from our own plantations.

We send to Russia tin, lead, coarse cloths, long ells, worsted stuffs, and a great quantity of tobacco; and we import from thence tallow, furs, iron, pet-asches, hemp, flax, linnen, coarse Russian cloth, and leather; this trade is carried on by a particular company, in a manner very beneficial to this kingdom.

To Holland we send almost all sorts of commodities, and manufactory goods, whether of our own, or imported from abroad; and from thence we receive vast quantities of fine linnens, tapes, inckles, whale-fins, all sorts of spices, and various kinds of dyeing stuffs: upon the whole, the balance of trade must needs be of our side.

The African trade is of great advantage, for we not only send many of our own and the East-India manufactories, for the purchase of slaves, but we supply our several plantations with these last; and we also have from thence gold-dust, red wood, ivory, palm oil, mangueta, gum seneca, and many other valuable commodities.

The East-India trade is of very great consequence to this nation, and there have been several hot disputes about it, relating to its advantage or disadvantage; however, it is certain they purchase their goods at a very low rate, and are sold here extremely high. Some would have it entirely suppressed, but we are now so accustomed to several goods consumed in this nation, and particularly tea, that all attempts of this nature must needs prove abortive.

As for our own plantations and colonies abroad, every one is sensible of what vast advantages they are to England; for upon a moderate computation, Virginia only is worth to Great-Britain no less than 1,200,000 pounds a year. In times of peace, there are more than 100,000 hogheads hogsheads of tobacco exported every year from this colony, and there are between 3 and 400 ships employed in the trade, with about 4000 seamen; and this alone will bring the above-mentioned sum to this nation.

All other colonies, settlements, and establishments, contribute their proportion, there being sent to all, more or less, linnen, silks, Indian goods, wine, and other foreign productions; besides cloth, coarse and fine serges, stuffs, bays, hats, houthold goods, haberdashery ware, hose, bills, nails, adzes, knives, and other iron ware, biscuit, flower, stockings, shoes, and, in short, every thing else that is made in England.

of Twente, which it runs through, and enters that of Sallant, where it joins the Vecht, a little above the small town of Omme.

* AA, or ALPHA, a river of Swisserland, that rises in mount Brenig, in the canton of Underwald, crosses it from S. to N. waters Sarnen, and falls into the lake of Lucern.

* AA, or ALPHA, a small river of Swisserland, that rises in the canton of Lucern, near Sempach, forms two small lakes in its course, waters Lentzburgh, and falls into the river Aar.

AA, a large river in the duchy of Courland, that rises in Samojitia, and falls into the bay of Riga.

AALBORG. See ALBURG, as also other words that begin with two AA's, and not found here.

AALHEIDE, a large heath of Denmark, in North Jutland, lying between Skive and Kolding; it is seven miles long, and almost entirely barren.

ABACH, of WELTENBURG, a town of Germany, in the circle of Bavaria, defended by a citadel, and seated on the river Danube, seven miles distant from Ratibon. Lon. 27. 30. lat. 48. 50.

ABAKEN, a river of Siberia, in Asia, that falls into the Jenchi soon after it rises.

ABAKANSKOY, a town of Siberia, seated on the river Janeska; it was founded in 1707, and rebuilt in 1725; it is provided with artillery, and has a garrison. Lon. 111. 35. lat. 53. 5.

ABALAK, a town in Siberia, two miles from Tobolskoi, where there is a famous image of the Virgin Mary, that is constantly visited by a great number of pilgrims: the clergy carry this image every year in procession to Tobolskoi; where it is kept for a fortnight. Lon. 84. 40. lat. 57. 1.

ABANO, a village in the territory of Padua, in Italy, famous for the warm baths that are near it. There is one called Bagno di Fango, in which the patients are covered all over with the warm mud or slime, in hopes of a cure. Lon. 27. 30. lat. 45. 30.

* ABRANER, a town of Turcomania, in Asia, where the archbishop of Nakhivan often resides; he is an Armenian, and yet there are 300 Roman Catholics said to be in this place. It is 20 miles N. of Nakhivan. Lon. 64. 0. lat. 39. 50.

* ABASCIA, a country of Asia, which may be said to be in Georgia, taken in general. It has Mingrelia on the E. the Circaffian Tartars, or Black Circassia, to the N. and W. and the Black Sea to the S. It has very few towns, and those that are, of little consequence; the inhabitants are called Abacians, and are well-made and strong; but they live in continual dread of each other; because those that have most power seize as many as they can of the poorer sort, to sell them to the Turks. Lon. from 56. to 60. lat. 43. to 45.

* ABASCIA, a river of Mingrelia, in Asia, which falls into the Fasso.

ABAZKAJA, a town of Asia, in Siberia, seated on the river Ichim. The church is surrounded with a wall, and has a guard of dragoons therein. Lon. 86. 35. lat. 50. 10.

* ABENOW, a mountain of Germany, in Suabia, and in the principality of Furstenberg, 23 miles from Eriburg. It is remarkable for the source of the Danube, and for communicating its name to a long chain of mountains, that extends from the Rline to the Necker, and from the Forest Towns to the city of Thorstheim.

ABENSPURG, a town of Germany, in the circle of Bavaria, subject to the duke of that name: it is seated on the river Abens, near the Danube, 15 miles S. W. of Ratibon. Lon. 19. 22. lat. 48. 42.

ABENRADE, a town of Denmark, in Sleswick, which is now in a flourishing condition, it being twice as large as formerly, and built in a better taste: it is seated on a spacious open bay of the east sea, which is surrounded on three sides by high mountains, that render the harbour secure: however the sea is not so deep as to admit shipping as far up as the bridge. Lon. 27. 37. lat. 54. 52.

ABBEVILLE, a considerable town of France, in Lower Picardy, and capital of the county of Ponthieu: it is seated in a pleasant valley, where the river Somme divides into several branches, and it is separated by that river into two parts. There was a manufactory set up here of woollen cloth in 1665: they also make sail cloth, and coarse linen, as well as black and green soap. It carries on a good trade, by means of the river Somme, in which the tide rises to the height of six feet. It is 15 miles from the British Channel, 20 N. W. of Amiens, 52 S. of Calais, and 90 N. of Paris. Lon. 19. 30. lat. 50. 7.

14. 50. lat. 50. 40.

ABBOT'S-BROMLEY, otherwise called PA-CET'S-BROMLEY, a town of Staffordshire, with a market on Tuesdays, and three fairs, on Thursday before midlent; Sunday, May 22, and August 24, which are all for horses and horned cattle. It is six miles E. of Stafford, seven N. of Litchfield, and 128 N. W. of London.
Lon. 15. 45. lat. 52. 45.

ABBEY-HOLM, a town in Cumberland, so called from an abbey built here by David king of Scots. It stands on an arm of the sea, and had a market on Saturdays; it has now a fair on October 29, for horses and horned cattle: It is 16 miles
S. W. of Carlisle. Lon. 13. 30. lat. 54. 45.

ABBEY-MILTON, or MIDDLETON, an ancient but mean town of Dorsetshire, where there was formerly a low abbey. The market is come to nothing; but it has a fair on the Tuesday after July 25, for cattle and toys. It is 12 miles S. E. of Dorchester. Lon. 15. 5. lat. 50. 42.

ABCISSAINS, inhabitants of Asia, in Abas-sia: they are a brutish sort of people, and much addicted to theft; for they live without law or religion.

ABBEYBOYLE, a town of Ireland, in the county of Roscommon, and province of Connaught, 23 miles N. of Roscommon.
Lon. 9. 5. lat. 55. 54. It is remarkable for an old abbey.

ABENRADE, or APENRADE, a jurisdiction in the duchy of Sleswick, in Denmark; whose woods contain plenty of game,
and the rivers abound in fish.

ABERAVON, a town of Glamorganshire, in Wales, that had a market which is now diminued. It is seated at the mouth of the river Avon, 19 miles S. W. of Cow-bridge, and 194 W. of London. Lon.
13. 47. lat. 51. 40.

ABERCONWAY. See CONWAY.

ABERDEEN, or ABERDEENHOC, a town of Scotland, in the shire of Angus, seated on the river Tay. It had a monastery, which was demolished at the time of the reformation; but there are yet magnificent ruins to be seen. There are two churches, one of which is half ruined.
It has a pretty good harbour, advantageous for trade, and it stands on a fertile plain. It is 15 miles N. E. of St. Andrew's, and 40. N. N. E. of Edinburgh.
Lon. 15. 15. lat. 56. 30.

ABERDEEN, a maritime town in the north of Scotland, divided into two towns, the old and the new. It was formerly a bishop's see; and it is now capital of the county, where there is a university, which has produced several famous men. It has a harbour at the mouth of the river Donne, which belongs to old Aberdeen, and another on the river Dee, that apper-tains to the new. There is a stone bridge of seven arches over this last river. It is 84 miles N. E. of Edinburgh, and 58
N. E. of St. Andrews. Lon. 15. 50.
lat. 57. 0.

ABERDEENSHIRE is comprehended in that of Marr; but it sends two members to parliament.

ABERDEEN, a small town of Scotland in the shire of Fife, seated on the fifth of Tay, 52 miles N. W. of Edinburgh.

ABERFORD, or ABERFORTH, a town in the west-riding of Yorkshire, with a market on Wednesdays; and four fairs, on the first Wednesday in April, on the first Wednesday in May, on the first Wednesday in October, and on the Wednesday after St. Luke's day; which are all for horses, horned cattle, and sheep. It is
of London. Lon. 16. 20. lat. 55. 20.

ABERGAVENNY, a town of Merionethshire, which is well-built, and contains about 500 houses, with two parish churches, and an old castle. It has two markets on Tuesdays and Fridays; and three fairs, on May 13, for lean cattle and sheep; the first Tuesday after Trinity Sunday, for linen and woollen cloth; and on September 25, for hogs, horses, and flannels. It is 16 miles W. of Men-mouth, and 142 W. by N. of London.
Lon. 14. 30. lat. 51. 50.

ABERFRAW, a town of North Wales, in the isle of Anglesey, which was a place of great account formerly, when the kings of North Wales had a palace here.
It is now reduced to a small village, tho' it has four fairs, on March 7, Wednesday after Trinity Sunday, October 23, and Dec. 11, all for cattle. It is six miles N. W. of Newburgh. Lon. 13. 5.
lat. 53. 7.

ABERGFLY, a village of North Wales, in Denbighshire, that has four fairs, on April 2, the day before Holy Thursday, August 20, and October 9, all for cattle.
It is 5 miles W. by S. of St. Asaph.
Lon. 13. 40. lat. 53. 10.

lage of South Wales, in Carmarthenshire,

- with two fairs, on October 2 and October 27, for cattle, horses, and pedlars ware. It is 12 miles N. by E. of Carmarthen. Lon. 13. 20. lat. 52. 10.
- ABERNETHY, a town of Scotland, in Strathern, a district of Perthshire. It is seated on the river Tay, a little above the mouth of the Erne. It is said to have been the seat of the Pictish kings; and was afterwards the see of an archbishop, since transferred to St. Andrew's. It is now greatly decayed.
- ABERYSTWICH, a town of Cardiganshire, in Wales, seated on the river Riddal, near its confluence with the Istwith, where it falls into the sea. It is but a poor town, there being not above 100 houses, and yet the market on Monday is considerable. It is 30 miles N. E. of Cardigan, and 199 W. S. W. of London. Lon. 13. 20. lat. 52. 30.
- ABEX, a country of Africa, that lies along the Red Sea, which bounds it on the E. Abyssinia and Nubia lie on the E. Egypt on the N. and the coast of Ajan to the S. The principal towns are Ercoco and Suaquam, which is the capital and the seat of a governor. It is very sandy, and destitute of water; for which reason it cannot be fertile. The inhabitants are Mahometans.
- * ABIAD, a town of Africa, on the coast of Abex. It is seated on a high mountain, and is remarkable for its trade in ebony and aromatic plants.
- ABIAGRASSO, a small town of Italy, seated on a canal, in the duchy of Milan. Lon. 16. 54. lat. 45. 20.
- ABINGTON, or ABINGDON, a town of Berkshire, which is a good thoroughfare, and pretty well built. It has a market on Mondays and Fridays; and the fairs are on the first Monday in Lent, June 20, September 19, and December 11; all which are for horses and other cattle. It sends one member to parliament, and is six miles S. of Oxford, and 55 W. of London. Lon. 16. 16. lat. 51. 41.

ARRAUZO, a province of Naples, about 87 miles in length, and 62 in breadth. It is bounded on the E. by the gulph of Venice; on the N. and W. by the march of Ancona, Umbria, and the campagna of Rome; and on the S. by the terra di Lavoro and Molise. It is divided into two parts by the river Pescara, whereof one is called Ulterior, and has Aquila for its capital; and the other Citerior, of which Solmona is the capital. Besides the Appennine mountains, there are two others, called Monte Cavallo and Monte Mayallo. The top of this last is always covered with snow. This country is fertile in corn, rice, fruit, and saffron; but the woods abound with bears and wolves. Lon. from 30. 40. to 30. 45. lat. 41. 45. to 42. 52.

* ABERPERG, a small town in Suabia, in the Norgow, near Anspach.

ABSTEINEN, a bailiwick and farm beyond the river Memel, in the circle of Tapiau and Isterburg, belonging to the kingdom of Prussia. It is a mountainous, but pleasant country, and abounds in corn and cattle.

ABYDOS, a town and castle of Lesser Asia; which is now the southern castle of the Dardanelles at the Strait, which joins the Archipelago to the Propontis. This Strait is otherwise called Gallipoli, and is two miles in breadth. Lon. 45. 5. lat. 40. 0.

ABYO, or ABUYO, one of the Philippine islands, in the East-Indies, between Mindanao and Luzon, where the Spaniards have a fort. Lon. 153. 10. lat. 10. 0.

ABYSSINIA, a kingdom of Africa, bounded on the N. by that of Sennar, or Nubia; on the E. partly by the Red Sea, and partly by Danaela; on the W. by Gorcham and Gingiro; and on the S. by Alaba and Omno Zaidi. It was formerly of greater extent than it is at present, because several provinces have revolted, and the Turks have made encroachments to the East. The land is fertile in many places, and the air is very hot, except in the rainy season, and then it is very temperate. For four months in the year there are greater rains fall than perhaps in any other part of the world, which occasion the swelling of the river Nile, that has its source in this country. It contains mines of all sorts of metal except tin; but the inhabitants make no great advantage thereof. The fields are watered by several streams, except in the mountainous parts. The emperor, or king, is called Negus; and he has been commonly taken for Prester John. His authority is absolute, and he often dwells with his whole court in tents. However, Abyssinia is not without cities, as some pretend; for Gondar is a large place, where he commonly resides when he is not in the field. The inhabitants are black, or very near it; but they are not so ugly as the Negroes. They make profession of the Christian religion; but it has a great mixture of Judaism. The habit of persons of quality is a silken vest, with a sort of scarf; but the common people wear nothing but a pair of drawers.

ACADIA, or NEW SCOTLAND, is a country in North America, bounded by the river St. Lawrence on the N. by the ocean on the W. by the bay of Fundy, and the sea of Acadia on the S. and by Canada and New England on the W. It was ceded to the French by the treaty of Breda in 1661; but being afterwards taken by the English, it was by the treaty of Utrecht yielded up to them, where they have planted a colony. It is a very fruitful country, and affords plenty of game, besides fish. Lon. from 311. to 316. lat. 43. to 46.

* ACAMBOU, a kingdom on the coast of Guinea, in Africa, whose king is absolute, and all his subjects slaves, which, however, does not prevent them from being haughty and insolent.

* ACANNY, an inland country on the gold coast of Guinea, in Africa, which affords the best gold, and in great plenty. There is a town or village of the same name. Lon. 17. 40. lat. 8. 30.

ACAPULCO, a considerable town of Mexico, in America, seated on a bay on the South Sea. The harbour is very commodious, and will hold near 100 vessels. Here they embark for Peru and the Philippine islands; and every year they send a rich ship to Manilla, one of those islands; and another returns annually from thence to the same port, laden with the best commodities of the East-Indies. One of these laden with silver was taken by commodore Anson in the year 1743. Lon. 276. 0. lat. 17. 30.

ACARAI, a town of South America, in Paraguay, built by the jesuits in 1624. Lon. 260. 55. lat. south 26. 0.

ACERNO, a town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in the citerior principality, with a bishop's see. It is 17 miles S. W. of Conza, and 12 N. E. of Salerno. Lon. 31. 58. lat. 40. 55. ACERRAS

ACERRA, a town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in the Terra di Lavoro. It is seated on the river Agno, seven miles N. E. of Naples, and 20 S. W. of Benevento. Lon. 37. 58. lat. 40. 55.

ACERENZA, a small town of Italy, in the province of Basilicata, belonging to the kingdom of Naples, with the title of a dutchy. It was formerly the see of an archbishop. Lon. 33. 34. lat. 40. 20.

ACHAIA, a province of Turkey in Europe, now called Livadia; of which Athens was the capital, at present named Sal-thines, or Seines. See Livadia.

ACHAM, a country of Asia, in the East-Indies, bounded on the N. by Bouton, on the E. by China, on the S. by Ava, and on the W. by Patan and Jesuat, in Bengal. This country is very little known to the Europeans.

ACHEN, or ACHEM, a capital town of a kingdom of the same name, in the N. part of the island of Sumatra, in the East-Indies. This kingdom extends as far as the line, and contains many animals, trees, and fruits, unknown to the Europeans. The inhabitants are generally very superstitious. It has for a considerable time been a noted place for trade, and was formerly governed by a queen; but in 1700, a faid, or preacher, had interest enough to obtain the government. It has nothing of its own but gold dust, which is exceeding good, for the Elephants teeth are brought thither out of the country. They punish theft very severely, and yet robberies and murders are very frequent among them. This town is feated by the side of a river, in a large plain, and the king's palace is in the middle of the town, being so well fortified that it commands the whole. It stands on the N. part of the island, and is 450 miles N. W. of Malacca, and 1000 S. E. of Fort St. George. Lon. 113. 30. lat. 5. 30.

ACHERON, a river of Albany, in the Turkish empire, now called Delicli. According to the ancient poets, it was one of the rivers of Hell.

ACHONKY, a small town of Ireland, in the province of Connaught, and county of Sligo, seated on the river Shannon.

ACKEN, or ACHEN, a small town of Germany, in the circle of Lower Saxony, and dutchy of Magdeburg, with a good citadel. It is seated on the river Elb, five miles below Dessau.

ACHMETSCHEIT, a town in the peninsula of the Crimea, and the residence of the sultan

Galgas, who is eldest son of the Khan of Tartary. Lon. 51. 20. lat. 45. 0.

ACHYR, a strong town and castle of Ukraïn, subject to the Russians since 1667. It is on the river Uorklo, near the frontiers of Russia, 127 miles W. of Kiow. Lon. 53. 35. lat. 49. 32.

ACOMA, a town of North America, in New Mexico, seated on a high mountain, with a strong castle. It is the capital of the province, and was taken by the Spaniard in 1599. Lon. 269. 0. lat. 35. 0.

ACOMAC, a county of Virginia, in North America, being a peninsula; bounded on the N. by Maryland; on the E. and S. by the Ocean; and on the W. by the bay of Chesapeake. Cape Charles is at the entrance of the bay, being the most southern promontory of this county.

ACIERNO, a town in the hither principality, in the kingdom of Naples, with a bishop's see. It is 15 miles E. of Salerno. Lon. 54. 35. lat. 40. 52.

Acos, a town at the foot of the Pyrenean mountains, in the government of Foix, in France. It takes its name from the hot waters in these parts. Lon. 19. 10. lat. 43. 0.

Acos. See DAX.

ACQUA, a town in the grand dutchy of Tuscany, where there are warm baths. Lon. 29. 40. lat. 43. 45.

ACQUAVIVA, a small town in terra di Bari, a province in the kingdom of Naples, with a title of count. Lon. 35. 0. lat. 41. 10.

ACQUAPENDENTE, a pretty large town of Italy, in the territory of the church, and patrimony of St. Peter, with a bishop's see. It is seated on a mountain, near the river Paglia; 10 miles W. of Orvieto, and 57 N. by W. of Rome. Lon. 29. 28. lat. 42. 43.

ACQUA-CHE-FAVELLA, a celebrated fountain of Italy, in Calabria-citerior, a province of Naples. It is near the mouth of the river Crata, and the ruins called Sibui Re-inata. It has been said to beautify those that washed in it.

ACQUARIA, a small town of Italy, in Frigiana, a district of Modena, which is remarkable for its medicinal waters. It is 12 miles S. of the city of Modena. Lon. 28. 32. lat. 44. 24.

ACQUA, a town in Italy, in the dutchy of Monterrat, with a bishop's see, and commodious baths. It was taken by the Spaniards in 1745, and retaken by the Piedmontese in 1746; but after this it was taken again and dismantled by the French, ACRA, a town of Africa, on the coast of Guinea, where the English, Dutch, and Danes have strong forts, and each fort has its particular village. Lon. 17. 33. lat. 5. 0.

ACRE, or ACRA, a sea-port town of Syria, in Asia, and in Palestine. It was formerly called Ptolemais, and is a bishop's see. It was very famous in the time of the Crusades, and underwent several sieges, as well by the Christians as Saracens. It is now inconsiderable to what it was formerly, being entirely supported by its harbour, which is frequented by several ships. It is 20 miles S. of Tyre, and 37 N. of Jerusalem. Lon. 57. 0. lat. 32. 40.

ACRON, a territory on the gold coast of Guinea, in Africa, bordering on the Fantean country. The Dutch have a fort here called Fort Patience; and under it is the village, inhabited only by fishermen. The other inhabitants are addècted to husbandry, and they sell their corn to other countries. There is plenty of game, which is very commodious for the Dutch factory. The people are very ignorant and brutish, and go naked like the rest of the Negroes. This is called Little Acron, for Great Acron is farther inland, and is a kind of a republick.

ACROTERRI, a town in the island of Santorin, that lies in the sea of Candia. Lon. 43. 1. lat. 36. 25.

ACUMOLO, a small town in Abruzzo ulterior, in the province of the kingdom of Naples. Lon. 34. 5. 0. lat. 40. 30.

ADAMSHIDE, a district of the circle of Rastenburg, belonging to the king of Prussia, which with Dombroffen was bought in 1737, for 42,000 dollars.

* ADAM'S-PIEK, a high mountain of the East-Indies, in the island of Ceylon: on the top of which they believe the first man was created; and there is the shape of a man's foot cut out of the rock, about five or six feet in length, which they pretend is the print of his foot. And near this is a reef of rocks, which run over to the continent, called Adam's bridge; for they say it was made by angels to carry him over to the main land. However, we must observe that these are European names, for the first man is not called Adam by them. Lon. 98. 25. lat. 5. 55.

* ADANA, an ancient, handsome, and agreeable town of Natcha, seated under the most charming climate in the world, with a bishop's see. It is seated on the river Choquen, 25 miles N. E. of Tarsus. Lon. 54. 0. lat. 38. 10.

ADDA, a river of Switzerland and Italy, which rises in mount Braulio, in the country of the Grisons, and passing thro' the Valteline, runs thro' the lake Como and the Milanese, falling into the Po near Cremona.

ADIA, a province of Anian, on the East coast of Africa. See ADEL.

ADEL, or ADEN, a kingdom of Africa, called also Zeila, from its capital town. It lies on the S. coast of the strait of Bab-el-mandel. It seldom rains here, and yet the country is fruitful, it being well watered with rivers. It abounds with wheat, millet, frankincense, and pepper; and the tails of their sheep weigh 25 lb. each. The inhabitants are Mahometans.

ADEN, formerly a rich and considerable town of Arabia the Happy, in Asia. It is seated by the sea-side; but has been ruined and abandoned for some years. Lon. 63. 20. lat. 12. 50.

ADENBURG, or ALDENBURG, a town of Westphalia, and duchy of Burg, subject to the elector palatine. It is 12 miles N. E. of Cologne, and 17 W. of Bonn. Lon. 25. 0. lat. 51. 2.

ADERBIGAN, a province of Persia; bounded on the N. by Proper Armenia; on the S. by Irac-Agemi; on the E. by Ghilan; and on the W. by Curdistan. The principal town is Tauris. Lon. from 60. to 66. lat. 36. to 39.

ADOLPH FREDERICK'S SCHACHT, a silver mine in Sweden, which from 1742 to 1747, produced a great quantity of silver.

ADON, a populous village, in the province of Stuhl-Weissenburg, belonging to Hungary. It lies in a fruitful country, towards the river Danube. Lon. 36. 55. lat. 47. 30.

ADOUR, a river of France, which arises in the mountains of Bigorre, and running N. by Tarbes, thro' Gascony, afterwards turns E. and passing by Dax, falls into the bay of Biscay below Bayonne.

ADRA, a sea-port town of Spain, in the kingdom of Granada, 37 miles S. E. of Granada, and 12 S. W. of Almeria. Lon. 16. 25. lat. 36. 0.

ADRIA, a town of Italy, which gives its name to the Adriatick sea. At present it is very inconsiderable, though it has a bishop's see. It is in the Polesin-de-Rovigo, in the territory of Venice, 27 miles S. W. of Venice. Lon. 29. 38. lat. 45. 5.

ADRIANO A SIERRA, or mountain of Adriana, in Guipuzcoa, a subdivision of the province of Biscay, in Spain. There is a road over it to Alaba and Old Castile, which is very difficult: at its beginning there is a dark path of 40 or 50 paces cut through a rock; after which is the mountain that must be passed over, which is one of the highest of the Pyrennees. These mountains are little frequented; and there are no inhabitants, except a few shepherds who live in cottages.

ADRIANOPLE, a celebrated town of Turkey in Europe, and in Romania, with an archbishop's see. It is seated on a fine plain, on the river Mariza; 115 miles N. W. of Constantinople; and 320 S. E. of Belgrade. The Grand Signior often visits this place. It is eight miles in circumference, but the streets are narrow and crooked. Lon. 44. 51. lat. 41. 45.

ADULA, a mountain of Navarre, in Spain, lying between Pamplona and St. Jean de Pic de Port.

ADZEL, a poor place in the general government of Riga, belonging to Russia. Lon. 55. 35. lat. 56. 30.

ADELFOR, a gold mine in the parish of Alsheda, and in the district of Jonkioping, in the province of Smaland, in Sweden. It was first discovered in the year 1738; and there are ducats coined with its gold.

ADWALTON, a village in the West-riding of Yorkshire, five miles S. W. of Leeds, with the following fairs; January 26, February 26, Thursday in Easter-week, Thursday fortnight after Easter, Thursday month after Easter, Whit-Thursday, and every Thursday fortnight after till Michaelmas; all for horses, sheep, pedlars, and tin-ware.

ÆGÆDES, or ÆGATES, are small islands, lying on the W. side of Sicily, opposite to the main land between Marsella and Trapani: their names are Levenzo, Favignana, and Maretana.

ÆGELSTAWIK, a good harbour, lying about half a mile from the town of Soderlege, in Suder-torn, a district of Sudermanuland, in Sweden.

ÆNGINA, one of the islands in the Archipelago. It lies in the bay of Engia, and the town of that name contains about 800 houses and a castle; and near it are the ruins of a magnificent structure, which was probably a temple.

ÆTHRA, a river of Sweden, that rises in the lake Alsuagan, and runs by Falkenburg, in South Halland, and falls into the sea.

ÆRSHOT, a town in the Netherlands, in the dutchy of Brabant, and capital of the dutchy of Aerthot. It was taken by the French in 1746, and was restored back by the treaty of Aix-la-chapelle. It is seated on the river Demur, ten miles E. of Malins, or Mechlin, and eight N. of Louvain. Lon. 26. 10. lat. 51. 5.

AFRICA, one of the four principal parts of the world; bounded on the N. by the Mediterranean sea; on the W. and S. by the ocean; on the E. by the Arabick gulph, and the isthmus of Suez. It is in the form of a pyramid, whose base from Tangier to the isthmus of Suez, is about 2000 miles. From the top of the pyramid, that is to say, from the Cape of Good-Hope, to the most northern part, is 3600 miles; and in the broadest part, that is, from Cape Verd to Cape Guardafui, it is 3500. The greatest part of it is within the Torrid Zone, which renders the heat almost insupportable in many places. However, the coasts in general are very fruitful, the fruits excellent, and the plants extraordinary. The flesh of the animals is in general very good; and there are more wild beasts than in any other part of the world; such as lions, tygers, leopards, panthers, rhinoceroses, crocods, and elephants. There are some animals that are found no where else; such as the hippopotamus, or the sea-horse, whose teeth are so large that they serve instead of ivory, and are much better; the rhinoceros, with two horns on its nose; and the most beautiful striped wild ass, which is esteemed a fine present for the greatest princes. As for the crocodiles, which were thought formerly to be peculiar to Africa, are now met with in other places, or at least, creatures so much like them, that it is hard to know the difference. Besides these, they have ostriches, camels, various sorts of monkeys, and many other animals not to be met with in Europe. There are several deserts, particularly one of a large extent, which is almost without water; and whose sands are so loose, that, by means of a strong wind, they will sometimes bury whole caravans at a time. However, this is not quite without inhabitants, for there are wild Arabs, and other people, who rove from place to place, partly in search of pasture, and partly to lie in wait for the rich caravans that travel from Barbary and Egypt, to Negroeland and Abyssinia. There are many large rivers; but the principal are the Nile and the Niger. This last is thought by some to have its source near that of the Nile, and to run quite across Africa, from E. to W. and to fall into the Atlantick ocean in several branches, of which the Senegal is the chief: but this is doubted by others, and not without reason. There are very high mountains in divers parts, particularly in Abyssinia and Barbary; in which last country is Mount Atlas, that separates Barbary from Biledulgerid, and runs from E. to W. Their religion is Mahometanism and Paganism, though there are Christians in some parts, as in Abyssinia, and among the Portuguese settlements. Africa is variously divided, according to different geographers: however, the best distinguish them by the names of Egypt, Barbary, Guinea, Congo, Cafferia, Abyssinia, Nubia, and Nigritia, with the islands that surround it. See these articles. The Lon. is from 1 deg. to 71. The lat. from 1. to 35. S. and from 1. to 37. N.

AFRICA, a sea-port town of Tunis, seated on the coast of Barbary, 70 miles S. of Tunis. This was taken by the emperor Charles V. who demolished the fortifications. Lon. 25. 55. lat. 36. 0.

AFWELSTAD, a large copper-work belonging to the crown of Sweden, which lies on the Dale, in the province of Dalcarlia, in Sweden. It looks like a town, and has its own church. Here they make copper-plates; and it has a mint for small silver coin, as well as a royal post-house. Lon. 35. 59. lat. 58. 10.

AGYROWARA, a village, in the district of Kantelenen, in Lapland, which lies in the midst of mountains, and consists of 22 Laplanders houses, that pay tribute to Norway. It has a bailiwick and a court of justice. Lon. 44. 10. lat. 69. 20.

AGRA, the capital town of a province of the same name, in Indostan, and in the dominions of the Great Mogul. It is looked upon as the largest city in these parts, and is in the form of a half moon. A man on horseback can hardly ride round it in a day. It is surrounded with a wall of red stone, and with a ditch 100 feet wide. The Great Mogul sometimes resides here, and his palace is prodigiously large, and the seraglio is commonly filled with above 1000 women. There are above 800 baths in this town; but that which travellers admire most, is the manufactory of one of the Mogul's wives, which was 20 years in building. The indigo of Agra is the most valuable of all that comes from the East-Indies. It is seated on the river Jenma, about 30 miles above its confluence with the Tchemel, and is 300 miles N. E. of Surat. ALESSANDRIA, or ALEXANDRIA, a strong and considerable town of Italy, in the duchy of Milan, in the district of Alexandrino, with a bishop's see, and a strong castle. It was taken by prince Eugene in 1706, and by the French in 1745; but it was retaken next year by the King of Sardinia. It is seated on the river Tenarolo, 15 miles S. E. of Casal, 35 N. W. of Genoa, and 40 S. by E. of Milan. Lon. 26. 15. lat. 44. 55. The territory formerly belonged to the duchy of Milan; but in 1707, it was ceded to the emperor of Germany, and confirmed to him by the treaty of Utrecht.

ALESHAM, a small neat town in Norfolk, with a market on Tuesdays, and two fairs, on March 23, and the last Tuesday in September, for lean cattle, ordinary horses, and petty chapmen. It is 15 miles N. of Norwich, and 121 N. E. by N. of London. Lon. 19. 1. lat. 52. 53. The town consists of about 400 pretty good houses; but the streets are narrow, tho' well-paved.

ALESSANO, a town in the kingdom of Naples, with the title of duchy, and a bishop's see in the province of Otranto, 17 miles S. W. of the town of Otranto. Lon. 36. 0. lat. 40. 12.

ALESSIA, a town of Turkey, in Europe, and in the province of Albania, with a bishop's see. It is seated near the mouth of the river Drino, 25 miles S. E. of Anrivaris, and 40 W. of Albanopols. Lon. 37. 15. lat. 41. 48.

ALESIO, a town of Turkey, in Dalmatia, and in the kingdom of Hungary. It is a bishop's see, and seated on a mountain, 25 miles from Spalatto.

ALERT, a town of France, in Lower Languedoc, with a bishop's see. It is remarkable for its baths, and for the grains of gold and silver that are found in the stream which run from the Pyrenean mountains, at the foot of which it stands. It is seated on the river Aude, 15 miles S. of Carcassone, and 37 N. W. of Narbonne. Lon. 19. 52. lat. 42. 59.

ALEXANDETTA, or SCANDeroon, a town of Syria, in Asia, at the extremity of the Mediterranean Sea, and the seaport town of Aleppo. The air is unwholesome on account of the marshes among which it stands; for which reason, while the heats are excessive, the inhabitants retire to the neighbouring villages, that is the richest part of them, particularly to Balan, a village ten miles off, seated among very high mountains, where there is excellent water, and delicious fruit. They used formerly to send pigeons with letters to give notice of the arrival of any ship; but that custom is left off. It is 70 miles W. of Aleppo. Lon. 34. 0. lat. 36. 35.

ALEXANDRIA, or SCANDERIA, a handsome, rich, ancient, and famous town of Egypt, though it is much decayed from what it was formerly: however, there are some remains of its ancient splendor; there is Pompey's pillar, and two obelisks full of hieroglyphicks. The ancient Pharos, so famous in antiquity, that it was numbered among the seven wonders of the world, is now in ruins, or rather is turned into a castle called Pharillon, now made use of to direct vessels into the harbour. This city was first built by Alexander the Great, and now consists chiefly of one long street, which faces the harbour; the rest being a heap of ruins, only part of the walls are standing, with great square towers 200 paces distant; each of these would contain 200 soldiers, and had a cistern in it, to which the water of the Nile was conveyed. It was formerly a place of very great trade, where all the treasures of the East Indies were deposited; but since the Portuguese have discovered the way to these rich countries by sea, this trade is in a great measure lost. The land on which the town stands is so low, that the flames can hardly discover it till they are very near. The gates of the town are of Thebaick and Granite marble, and Pompey's pillar is one entire piece of Granite 70 feet high, and 25 in in circumference. This place is subject to the Grand Signior, who however has but a limited authority. It is seated on the most westerly branch of the river Nile, 125 miles N. W. of Cairo. Lon. 27. 50. lat. 31. 11.

LFACKS, the name of certain islands near the mouth of the Ebro, in the principality of Catalonia, in Spain.

ALFAYATTS, a town of Beira, in Portugal, containing 500 inhabitants, with a district of two parishes.

ALFEIZERAO, a small town of Portugal, in Estramadura, seated on the seaside, and containing about 700 inhabitants.

ALFELD, a town of Germany, in the bishoprick of Hildesheim and circle of Lower Saxony, ten miles S. of Hildesheim. Lon. 27. 25. lat. 52. 0.

ALFEDENA, an ancient town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in the citerior Abruzzo, with the title of a marquise. It was famous in the war of the Samnites. Lon. 31. 40. lat. 41. 48.

ALGAGIOLA, a small sea-port town in the island of Corsica, fortified with walls and bastions. It was almost destroyed by the malecontents in 1751, but has since been repaired. Lon. 27. 15. lat. 42. 20.

* ALFRISTON, a village in Suffex, eight miles S. E. of Lewin's, with two fairs, on May 12, and November 30, for pedlar's wares.

ALFORD, a town in Lincolnshire, with a market on Tuesdays for provisions and a little corn; and two fairs, on Whit-tuesday, and November 8, for cattle and sheep. It is seated on a small brook that runs through the town, and is a compact place. It is six miles from the sea, and 20 N. of Boston. Lon. 17. 50. lat. 53. 30.

* ALFORD, a town in Derbyshire, with a small market on Mondays; and one fair on July 20, for horses and horned cattle. It is pleasantly seated on a small hill, and is 13 miles North of Derby, and 155 N. N. W. of London. Lon. 16. 0. lat. 53. 0.

ALGARRIA, a district of Spain, in the most northern part of New Castile. It is very fertile.

ALGARVA, a province in the kingdom of Portugal, 67 miles in length, and 20 in breadth. It is bounded on the W. and S. by the sea, on the E. by the river Guadiana, and on the N. by Alentejo. Algarva in the Moorish language signifies a fertile country, and indeed it is very fertile in excellent fish, almonds, dates, olives, and excellent wine; besides the fishery brings in large sums. The capital town is Faro. It contains four cities, 12 towns, 67 parishes, and 60,038 inhabitants.

ALGER, or ALGERI, a town of the island of Sardinia, seated on the N. W. coast, with a bishop's see. It is 16 miles S. of Sassari; and is subject to the king of Sardinia. Lon. 26. 15. lat. 41. 30.

ALGIERS, a kingdom of Africa, bounded on the E. by the kingdom of Tunis, on the N. by the Mediterranean, on the S. by mount Atlas, and on the W. by the kingdoms of Morocco and Tafilet. It extends 600 miles from E. to W. along the Barbary coast, and is the largest of the six kingdoms which lie thereon. The air is very temperate, and the land toward the North is very fertile in corn; the valleys are full of fruit; but a great part is dry, mountainous, and barren. The melons have an exquisite taste, some of which are ripe in summer, and others in winter. The stems of the vines are so large, that a man can hardly grasp them in his arms; and the bunches of grapes are a foot and a half long. It is divided into three provinces, namely, Tlemfan on the W. Tittenie on the S. and Constantinia to the E. of the city of Algiers. The Turks, who have the government in their hands, are not above 7000 in number; and yet the Moors or natives of Africa have no share in it. It is only a kind of republick under the protection of the Grand Signior, who keeps a bathay, or viceroi there; but he can do nothing of consequence without the council of the Janissaries. The Arabs, who live in tents, are a distinct people, who are governed by their own laws and magistrates, tho' the Turks interpose as often as they please. Turkish soldiers, and frequently deposed, and put to death by them. They have murdered four of their deys, and deposed two, within the space of 20 years. The revenues of the government arise from the tribute paid by the Moors and Arabs, a detachment of the army being sent into each; revince every year to collect it; and the prizes they take at sea sometimes equal the taxes they lay upon the natives. The dey has several thousand Moors in his service, both horse and foot; and the deys, or viceroys of the provinces, have each an army under his command. Their religion is Mahometanism, and their language a dialect of the Arabick. They have likewise a jargon, composed of Italian, French, and Spanish, called Lingua Franca, that is understood by the common people and merchants. The complexion of the natives is tawny, and they are strong and well-made. Lon. from 16. to 29. lat. 34. to 37.

ALGIERS, a large and strong town of Africa, in Barbary, and capital of the kingdom of Algiers. It is square, and built on the declivity of a mountain, and is in the form of an amphitheatre next the harbour; inasmuch, that the houses appearing one above another, make a very fine appearance from the sea. The tops of the houses are all flat, for which reason they walk upon them in the evening to take the air; besides, they are covered with earth, and serve for a sort of gardens. The streets are extremely narrow, and serve to keep off the extreme heat of the sun. The mole of the harbour is 500 paces in length, extending from the continent to a small island, where there is a castle and a large battery of guns. The number of inhabitants is said to consist of 100,000 Mahometans, 15,000 Jews, and 2000 Christian slaves. Their chief subsistence is derived from their pyracies, for they make prizes of all Christian ships that are not at peace with them. The country about Algiers is adorned with gardens and fine villa's, watered with fountains and rivulets; and thither the inhabitants resort in the hot seasons. The English burnt their vessels in the harbour in 1655 and in 1670. It was bombarded by the French in 1683. It stands on the sea-side over against the island of Minorca, and is 300 miles W. of Tunis, and above 400 E. of Gibraltar. Lon. 21. 20. lat. 36. 30.

ALGIZIRA, a strong town of Spain, in Andalusia, with a harbour on the coast of the Straits of Gibraltar. It was taken from the Moors, after a long siege, in 1344. It is likewise called Old Gibraltar. It is ten miles W. of Gibraltar, and ten E. of T. M. Lon. 12. 23. lat. 36. 0. It is at present in a mean condition, on account of the harbour being decayed.

- ALGOSQUINS, a people of North America, in Canada, who live a wandering life near the Lake Ontario; their language is the most esteemed of any in North America.
- ALBARRA, a small river in Spain, in the kingdom of Arragon, which falls into the Ebro.
- ALBAMA, a handsome and pretty large town of Spain, in the kingdom of Granada. There are hot baths a little below it, which are accounted the best in Spain. It is seated in a valley bounded with craggy mountains, 25 miles S. W. of Granada. Lon. 14. 20. lat. 36. 50.
- ALBANY, a small, but rich, and strong town of Spain, in the kingdom of Valencia, and territory of Segura. It is remarkable for its harbour, which is defended by strong battions; for its excellent wine, and for the fertility of its soil, which produces excellent fruits, and plenty of rosemary of an extraordinary size. It has a great trade, and the English, Dutch, French, and Italians, have consuls there. The castle, which stands on a high rock, was reckoned impregnable; however, it was taken by the English in 1706. It was likewise taken by the French and Spaniards after a siege of almost two years; and then part of the rock on which the castle stood was blown up. It is seated on the Mediterranean, and on a bay of the same name, 37 miles N. E. of Murcia, and 75 S. of Valencia. Lon. 17. 40. lat. 38. 14.
- ALICATA, a town of Sicily, remarkable for its good wine, and the corn that is sowed there. It was plundered by the Turks in 1553, and is seated in a fort of peninsula near the sea, 21 miles S. E. of Girgenti, and 50 N. W. of Modica. Lon. 31. 37. lat. 37. 11.
- ALICANT, see APALICHTAN.
- ALICE, a river of Prussia, which rises in Ermland, and falls into the Vistula, near Wehlau.
- ALLEGHANSIA, a small island of Africa, and one of the Canaries, lying to the N. of Granada, to the N. W. of Rocca, and to the E. of St. Clara. There are several castles that defend the harbour.

- * ALLÈGÈS, a town of France, in Auvergne, with the title of a marquisate. It is seated at the foot of a mountain, on the top of which there is a great lake, and a large strong castle. Lon. 21. 22. lat. 45. 10.
- ALLENBORG, a small town in the circle of the Upper Rhine, and in the landgravate of Hesse-Cassel, remarkable for its salt-works, and three stone bridges. It is seated on the river Weser, 15 miles E. of Cassel. Lon. 27. 40. lat. 51. 20.
- ALLER, a river which rises in the dutchy of Magdeburg, and runs N. W. through the dutchy of Lunenburg, in Lower Saxony, and passing by Zell, continues its course N. W. till it falls into the river Weser a little below Verden.
- ALLERIA, an open decayed town, in Corsica, in the district on this side the mountain, with a bishop's see. This is the place where King Theodoric first landed in 1756. Lon. 26. 20. lat. 47. 5.
- * ALLERTONS, a village of Northumberland, eight miles S. W. of Hexham, with two fairs, on May 10, and November 14, for horned cattle, linen-cloth, green and dry hides.
- ALLIER, a river of France, in the government of Languedoc, that rises at Chabellier, in Cevennades, and runs through the province of Nivernois, Bourbonnais, and Auvergne; it begins to be navigable near Viale, and at length falls into the Loire.
- ALLOWAY, a sea-port town of Mentieth, in Scotland, seated on the river Forth, five miles E. of Stirling, and remarkable for its fine cattle, the seat of the earl of Mar, and for the coal-mines near it. Lon. 15. 30. lat. 56. 10.
- ALMACARRON, a sea-port town of Spain, in the province of Murcia, seated at the mouth of the river Guadalquivir, near the Mediterranean, 13 miles S. W. of Cartagena. Lon. 18. 30. lat. 37. 40.
- ALMANZA, a little town of Spain, in New Castile, on the frontiers of the kingdom of Valencia. It is remarkable for the victory gained by the French and Spaniards, over the allies in 1707, when most of the English were either killed or taken, they having been abandoned by the Portuguese horse at the first charge. It is 50 miles S. W. of Valencia, and 50 N. W. of Alicante. Lon. 16. 35. lat. 38. 51.
- ALMEDA, a town of Portugal, in Ultramarina, seated on the river Tage, and opposite to Lisbon, being ten miles S. from it. Lon. 9. 0. lat. 38. 42.
- ALMEDIA, a frontier town of Portugal, in

- the province of Tra-os-montes, on the confines of Leon, where there was a very brisk action between the French and Portuguese in 1663. It is 17 miles N. W. of Ciudad Rodrigo, and ten S. E. of Pinhel. Lon. 11. 20. lat. 40. 41.
- ALMEIDA, a fortified town of Portugal, in the province of Beira, with a castle on the river Coa; it contains but one parish church, and yet there are near 2200 inhabitants; it has also an alms-house, an hospital, and a convent; but its district comprehends two parishes. Lon. 11. 10. lat. 40. 38.
- ALMENDVALAJO, a small town of Spain, in Estramadura, near the borders of Portugal. It is 15 miles S. of Madrid. Lon. 13. 36. lat. 38. 36.
- ALMERIA, a sea-port town of Spain in the kingdom of Granada, with a bishop's see. It is seated on the river Almorja, on the Mediterranean, 62 miles S. E. of Granada, and 12 S. W. of Auda. Lon. 15. 45. lat. 36. 51.
- ALMISEA, a small strong town of Dalmatia, famous for its piracies. It is ten miles E. of Spalatro. Lon. 36. 0. lat. 45. 50. It is seated at the mouth of the river Cetina.
- ALMENECA, a sea-port town in the kingdom of Granada, seated on the Mediterranean, with a good harbour, defended by a strong castle. It is 20 miles S. of Alhama, and 42 E. of Malaga. Lon. 14. 37. lat. 36. 50.
- ALSWICK, a thoroughfare town of Northumberland, on the road to Berwick, with a market on Saturdays, and five fairs, on Palm-Sunday-eve, for shoes, hats, and pedlar's ware; on May 12, for horned cattle, horses, and pedlar's ware, and the last Monday in July for horned cattle, horses, and woollen and linen cloth; on the first Tuesday in October, for horned cattle, horses, and pedlar's; and on Saturday before Christmas, for shoes, hats, poultry, and linen cloth. It is a populous, well-built town, with a town-hall, where the quarter-sessions and county-courts are held, and the members of parliament elected. It has three gates, which remain almost entire, and thence that it was formerly surrounded by a wall. It is defended by an old stately Gothic castle, the seat of the right hon. the earl of Northumberland, being lately repaired and beautified by the present earl. It is 37 miles N. of Newcastle, 29 S. of Berwick, and 370 N. by W. of London. Lon. 10. 15. lat. 55. 24.

ARINGTON, or ARRINGTON, a village in Devonshire, two miles S. of Exeter, with two fairs, on the first Thursday in June, for horned cattle, and October 16, for horses and horned cattle.

ALPS, the highest mountains in Europe, which separate Italy from France and Germany. They begin on the side of France, towards the coast of the Mediterranean, between the territory of Genoa and county of Nice, and they terminate at the gulph of Carrara, which is part of the gulph of Venice. There are few passes over them, and those of difficult access, which are the chief security of Piedmont against the attempts of France. Switzerland takes up a good part of these mountains, or rather the valleys between them, and for that reason are secure against the Germans and French. The famous Leopold attempted to cross the Alps on the side of Piedmont in the winter season, when he invaded Italy, and lost most of his elephants amongst them.

ALPARGATES, high mountains of Spain in the kingdom of Granada, near the coast of the Mediterranean. They are inhabited by the ancient Moabites, who are very careful in cultivating the ground, and they produce excellent wines and fruits.

ALLESFORD, a town in Hampshire, with a market on Thursdays, and a fair on June 24, for sheep, horses, and cows. It is about three furlongs in length, and is governed by a bailiff. It is 18 miles E. N. E. of Southampton, and 60 W. S. W. of London. Lon. 11. 20. lat. 50. 23. It has one church, about 20 houses, and only two principal streets, which are large and broad. There is a small manufacture of Endieys.

ALZASER, a province of France, bounded on the E. by the Rhine, on the S. by Switzerland and the Franche-Compté, on the W. by Lorraine, and on the N. by the palatinate of the Rhine. It is a very fertile country, producing plenty of all sorts of corn, wine, pasture, wood, flax, tobacco, pulic, and fruit-trees. There are mines of silver, copper, and lead, as well as mineral waters. It is diversified with pleasant hills, and mountains covered with forests, and there are pine trees 120 feet high. It is divided into the Upper and Lower, and Stralsung is the capital of both. The prevailing religion is the Roman Catholic, though the protestants are allowed a free exercise of theirs. The language is the German, it having been part of that empire, and is still accounted for by some geographers. Lon. from 24. 30. to 25. 50. lat. 47. 30. 49.

ALSKEN, an island of Denmark, in the Baltic Sea, being in the Lesser Belt, between Skawick and Funen. It has nothing remarkable but two castles, and is 100 miles W. of Copenhagen. It is subject to Denmark.

ALSTEDT, a town of Germany, in the duchy of Mecklenburg, ten miles N. W. of Magurg, and 75 S. of Hele Castle. Lon. 26. 55. lat. 50. 40. It is an ancient town and well built, and the inhabitants were the first of this country who embraced the reformation.

ALSTON, a parish of Swarth, in the province of Shropshire, where a gold mine was discovered in 1735.

ALTON, a town in Cumberland, with a market on Saturdays, and two fairs, on the last Thursday in May, and the first Thursdays in September, for horned cattle, horses, sheep, and woollen cloth. It is built on a hill, the top of which runs for some miles, with a stone bridge over it, and there is plenty of lead ore near it. It is 70 miles E. by S. of Carlisle, and 200 N. N. W. of London. Lon. 11. 05. lat. 54. 40.

ALTONEN, an inland lake of Sweden, in the province of Halland, from which the river Falkenberg rises.

ALTRANOST, a very handsome town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in Calabria Citerior, 12 miles N. W. of Bagnoli. Lon. 21. 10. lat. 49. 40.

ALTRAVERA, a town of Naples, in the territory of Bari, with the title of a principality. It is seated at the foot of the Apennine mountains. Lon. 34. 13. lat. 41. 0.

ALZAS, a sea-port town of Spain, in the kingdom of Valencia. It was taken in 1705, with all Valencia, in favour of the archduke Charles; but was lost after the famous battle of Almansa. It is seated on the Mediterranean, 42 miles S. E. of Valencia, and 110 S. by E. of Madrid. Lon. 40. 50. lat. 40. 31.

AMASIA, an ancient town of Turkey, in Natolia, remarkable for the birth of Strabo, the geographer. It is the residence of a Bahaw, and gives its name to the province it stands in, where there are the best wines and the best fruits in Natolia. It is seated near the river of Catalack, 50 miles N. W. of Tocat, and 35 S. of the Black Sea. Lon. 33. 40. lat. 39. 55.

AMAZONS, a supposed race of warlike women, who lived in lesser Asia, now called Ammia, on the banks of the Black Sea. It is now very much doubted whether they ever had any existence in the manner related by authors.

AMAZONS, a greater river of South America, which has its source in Peru, not far from the South Sea, and running East, falls into the ocean directly under the Equinotial line. Its course is at least 3000 miles, and it is supposed to be the greatest river in the world. As it runs along, it takes in a great number of other rivers and streams, and we have an accurate map of it by Mr. Condamine, who went into those parts to measure a degree of the Meridian. He made particular enquiry after the warlike women called Amazons, but could get no account of them; and therefore we may conclude, that what has been said by travellers relating to this affair is a mere fiction. Orellana was the first that entered this river, about the year 1539.

AMBAR, a river which rises in the S. W. part of Bavaria, and runs to the N. E. by Landspurg and Dachau, and falls into the Iser a little above Landshut.

AMBERG, a handsome town of Germany, in Nordgow, and capital of the Upper Palatinate of Bavaria, with a strong castle. It is seated on the river Ills, 30 miles E. of Nuremberg, and 22 N. of Ratibon. Lon. 29. 50. lat. 49. 26.

- AMBLESIDE, a town of Westmoreland, with a market on Wednesdays, and two fairs, on Wednesday after Whitfsunday, for horned cattle, and on October 29, for horned cattle and sheep. It is feated at one end of Winander Meer, 13 miles N. W. by N. of Kendal, and 250 N. N. W. of London. Lon. 15. 0. lat. 54. 30.

AMBLETREUSE, a sea-port town of France, in Picardy. The harbour is defended with a battery well furnished wth cannon. It is eight miles N. of Boulogne, and 12 S. W. of Calais.

AMBOISE, a town of France in Touraine, with a caſtle. It is feated at the confluence of the river Loire, and Maffée, 12 miles E. of Tours, and 118 S. by W. of Paris. Lon. 18. 39. lat. 47. 25.

AMBOYNA, an island of Asia, in the East Indies, with a town of the same name, wherein there is a garrison. It is the chief of the Moluccas, and is remarkable for the quantity of cloves it produces, as well as nutmegs. The English and Dutch had each of them factories here at the beginning of the 17th century; but the Dutch expelled the English by force, and tortured and put to death many of them. Since this they have possessed the entire dominion of the spice islands, and have excluded all the rest of the world from trading here. The natives wear large whickers, and their dress is only a slight piece of stuff wrapped round their middle. The men buy their wives here of their parents, and if they prove barren, the marriage is null and void. They are generally Mahometans; but there are some Roman Catholics among them. The women are extremely fond of the Europeans, and when they are forsaken by their gallanis, they generally give them a dose of poison. Lon. 145. 0. lat. 4. 0.

AMBRUNE. See EMBRUNE.

● AMDEBY, or AMBERBURY, a town in Wiltshire, with a market on Fridays, and three fairs, on May 6, June 11, and November 15, for hortes. It is a scattering place, and is six miles N. of Salisbury, and 80 W. of London. Lon. 15. 55. lat. 51. 20.

AMBY, a town of the Netherlands, in the province of Limburg, feated on the E. side of the river Meuse, opposite to the city of Maestricht. Lon. 5. 45. lat. 50. 56.

AMELIA, an ancient town of Italy, in the dutchy of Spoleto, with a bishop's see.

It is feated on a mountain, between the rivers Tiber and Nira, in a pleasant fertile country, 20 miles S. W. of Spoleto, and 45 N. of Rome. Lon. 30. 4. lat. 42. 37.

AMERICA, one of the four parts of the world, and by much the largest. It is bounded on all sides by the ocean, as appears from the latest discoveries; it being formerly supposed to join to the North East part of Asia. It took its name from Americus Vesputius, a Florentine, who is said to have discovered that part of this country feated under the line; but several good authors have proved this to be a mistake. America was first discovered by Christopher Columbus, a Genese, in 1491. Some call it a new world, and with a great deal of propriety; for not only the men, but the birds and beasts differ in some respects from those that were known before. It has likewise a great number of trees, shrubs, and plants, that grew no where else, before they they were transplanted to other places. All the men, except the Esquimaux, near Greenland, seem to have the same original; for they agree in every particular from the Straits of Magellan, in the S. to Hudson's Bay, in the N. Their skins, unless dabbled with grease or oil, are of a red copper colour, and they have no beards, or hair on any other part of their bodies, except the head, where it is black, straight, and coarse. Many are the conjectures about the peopling this vast continent, and are almost as various as the authors who wrote about it. However, we have not room to enter into a detail of these particulars, and therefore shall only observe, that when the original of the Negroes is settled, we may also be pretty certain from whence those people descended. America is so long, that it takes in not only all the Torrid, but also the Temperate and Frigid Zones. It is hard to say how many different languages there are in America, there being such a vast number spoken by the different people in different parts; and as to their religion, there is no giving any tolerable account of it in general, though some of the most civilized among them seem to have worshipped the sun. The principal motive of the Spaniards in sending so many colonies here was the thirst of gold; and indeed they and the Portuguese are possessed of all these parts.

which it is found in greatest plenty; but I defer entering into farther particulars, till the several countries under the dominion of the Europeans come to be spoken of. In general, it is divided into N. and S. America, and the principal kingdoms in these are Mexico and Peru. But the Portuguese are in possession of Brazil in S. America, and the English are masters of most of the E. Coast in N. America. That part belonging to the French is called Canada, and they also lay claim to all the country on the bank of our settlements, from the river of St. Lawrence to the gulph of Florida. But as Quebec was taken on October 18, 1759, the French will probably be obliged to relinquish the rest; that is, all the country they call Louisiana, after Lewis XIV. Besides those already mentioned in S. America, there are Paraguay within land, Chili on the S. Sea, and Terra Magellanica to the N. of the Straits of Magellan, whose bounds are not certainly determined. The names of the English settlements are Georgia, Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, New-York, New-Jersey, New-England, and Nova-Scotia; besides several of the Caribbee islands, in what is commonly called the West-Indies.

AMERSFORT, a considerable town of the Netherlands, in the province of Utrecht. It is agreeably seated in a country fertile in corn and excellent pastures, on the river Ems, 12 miles E. of Utrecht, and 30 S. E. of Amsterdam. Lon. 23. 0. lat. 52. 14.

AMERSHAM, a town of Buckinghamshire, with a market on Tuesday, and two fairs, on Whitmondays, and September 29, for sheep. It consists of a long street, lying in the road, and about the middle there is a cross-way, and in the intersection stands the church. The town-hall, or market house, is a brick building, supported by arched pillars, with a Lion-throne and clock at the top, and freestones at the corner. It sends two members to parliament, chosen by the free tenants of the borough, who pay not a poll, and are about 150 in number. It is 31 miles S. W. of Buckingham, and 29 N. W. of London. Lon. 10. 55. lat. 51. 40.

* AMID, a town in Turkey, in Asia, and in Natolia, 40 miles from Amara, and 60 from Teocat. Lon. 54. 20. lat. 20. 38.

AMIENT, a hardstone, but an ancient town of France, the capital of Picardy, with a bishop's see. The nave of the cathedral church is a finished piece of building, and the whole structure is stately; besides which there are ten parish-churches, and one in the suburbs, several religious houses, an academy of belles lettres, five gates, and about 35,000 inhabitants. The branches of the river Somme enter this city, over which there are as many bridges; and it lies in the road from Calais to Paris. It was taken by the Spaniards in 1597, by the following stratagem: soldiers, disguised like peasants, conducted a cart loaded with nuts, and let a bag of them fall just as the gate was opened; and while the guard was busy in gathering up the nuts, the Spaniards entered, and became masters of the town. It was retaken by Henry IV. who built a citadel here. It has manufactures in linen and woollen cloth, and is seated on the river Somme, 20 miles S. E. of Abbeville, 70 S. of Calais, 50 N. E. of Rouen, and 75 N. of Paris. Lon. 20. 2. lat. 49. 54.

AMENOTS, a town of France, in the government of Picardy, and Attois.

AMIX, a district of France, in the kingdom of Lower Navarre.

* AMOI, a town of Asia, in the country of the Uzbeks, seated on the river Coken, 60 miles W. of Bokera. Lon. 82. 0. lat. 39. 20.

AMON, a district of France, in the government of Franche-Compté, containing three bailiwicks.

AMOROS, an island of the Archipelago, fertile in wine, oil, and corn. It is well cultivated, and the inhabitants are affable, and generally of the Greek church. The best parts belong to a monastery, where there are a great number of calycers, or monks. The greatest consumption of this island is the want of wool. It is 27 miles N. of Candy, and 24 S. W. of Naxos, being 30 miles in circumference. Lon. 44. 15. lat. 36. 30.

AMOUR, a river of China, whose source is in Malacca, and it runs E. through Chinese Territory, and falls into the bay of Korea, in the sea of that name.

* AMOUR, SE. a small town of France, in the Franche-Compté, 15 miles from Auxois. Lon. 23. 08. lat. 46. 54.

AMOI, an island of China, in the province of Cheky, and of the S. W. coast, where the English had a factory, which they abandoned on account of the impositions of the inhabitants of those parts.

* AMWCH, or AMWUCH, a village of Wales, on the North side of the Isle of Anglesey, with a fair on November 12, for cattle.

AMPHIPOLIS, a town of Turkey, in Europe, anciently the capital of Macedonia, seated on the river Stymon, 70 miles N. E. of Salonichi. Lon. 57. 46. lat. 41. 38.

AMPTHILL, a town in Bedfordshire, with a market on Thursdays, seated pleasantly between two hills, but in a barren soil. It has two fairs, on May 4, and December 11, for cattle. It is six miles S. of Bedford, and 43 N. W. of London. Lon. 17. 10. lat. 52. 2.

AMPUGNANO, a district of Corsica, in the country on this side the mountains.

AMPURIAS, a sea-port town of Spain, in Catalonia. It is seated at the mouth of the river Fluvia, 60 miles N. E. of Barcelona. Lon. 20. 40. lat. 42. 5.

AMPAS, a very strong castle in Germany, very agreeably seated in the Tirol, two miles S. E. of Inspruck. It is remarkable for the rarities of all kinds which are contained in it, as well as its rich library, adorned with the portraits of many learned men. Lon. 29. 10. lat. 47. 0.

AMSTERDAM, a large, rich, populous, trading, handsome city of the United Provinces, and capital of all the Dutch Netherlands. It was formerly a lordship belonging to the lords of Amstel, was ruined in 1590, but afterwards rebuilt. The walls are high, and well fortified; and the bridge which joins the rampart that is built over the river Amstel, is one of the finest pieces of architecture in these parts. There are few cities whose publick buildings are so fine, numerous, and well-kept. There are a great many handsome churches, and hospitals for persons of all ages, sexes, religions, and countries. One great cause of the populousness of Amsterdam is their tolerating all religions, who have the use of churches and bells; though the reigning religion is the Protestant. The exchange is one of the principal ornaments of the city, and the harbour is one of the largest and finest in Europe, where a vast number of merchant ships may always be seen; and yet there is a bar at its entrance, which is a great security against foreign enemies. The foundation of this town is upon piles, driven into a moat, and the stadt-houze alone has 15,000 piles of wood, upon which it is built. The houses are brick and stone, the streets spacious, and well-paved, and most of them have canals, with rows of trees on each side. With regard to its magnitude, it is computed to be about half as big as London, and none of the inhabitants are idle. It is governed by a college of 30 senators, who hold their places for life, and 12 burgo-masters, four of whom are always sitting. It is seated at the confluence of the rivers Amstel and Wye. It is 65 miles N. of Antwerp, 175 E. by N. of London, 240 N. of Paris, 330 W. of Copenhagen, 460 N. W. of Vienna, and 870 N. W. of Rome. Lon. 22. 39. lat. 52. 25.

AMT, or the German district in France, in the government of Lorraine and Barre. It lies along the river Saar, and is so called because the inhabitants speak the German language.

ANADIE, a considerable river in Siberia, in Asia, that falls into the Eastern ocean.

ANAGNI, a small town of Italy, in Campania, and in the territory of the church, with a bishop's see. It is 32 miles E. of Rome. Lon. 33. 25. lat. 48. 6.

ANCASTER, a town in Lincolnshire, 15 miles S. of Lincoln, and eight from Grantham. It has neither fair nor market, but gives title to a duke.

* ANCAPANO, a town of Italy, in the march of Ancona, five miles N. of Ancoli, and 31 N. E. of Rome. Lon. 31. 24. lat. 42. 48.

ANGERS, a town of France, in Britanny, seated on the river Loire, 15 miles E. of Nantz, and 25 W. of Angers. Lon. 16. 28. lat. 47. 22.

ANCIAM, a strong town of Germany, in the circle of Upper Saxony, and duchy of Pomerania, remarkable for its excellent pastures. It is seated on the river Pere, 20 miles S. of Griffswald, and 35 N. W. of Stetin. Lon. 31. 55. lat. 54. 0.

ANCOBER, a territory on the gold coast of Guinea, with a river of the same name, whose length is uncertain, that is, how far it is up the country; however, as far as it is known, the banks are very pleasant, adorned with fine lofty trees, which afford the most agreeable shade in the world. Among these there are very beautiful birds, and very diverting monkeys. There is likewise a very populous village on the western shore.

ANCONA, an ancient and considerable town of Italy, in the territory of the Pope, and the march of Ancona, with a citadel, a bishop's see, and a harbour.

ANCONA, the name of a march, or marquisate in Italy, belonging to the ecclesiastical state, and lying on the Adriatick Sea. There is a sort of a shell-fish found here, called Balani, among the stones taken out of the harbour, which is in high esteem at Rome. Lon. from 30, 26, to 31, 40. lat. from 42, 37, to 43, 54.

* ANCRE, a town of France, in Picardy, with the title of a marquisate. It is 12 miles N. E. of Amiens, and 12 E. of Pesterne. Lon. 20. 15. lat. 46. 50.

ANDEJA, a river of Spain, in Old Castile, that falls into the Douro.

ANDUSIA, a province of Spain, about 250 miles in length, and 150 in breadth. It is bounded on the S. by the kingdom of Granada, on the W. by the sea, and by Algarve, on the N. by Estramadura, and on the E. by the kingdom of Murcia. The river Guadalquivir runs through the whole length; and it is the most fertile, rich, agreeable, and trading country in Spain. The capital town is Seville. Lon. from 11, to 19. lat. 36, to 38.

ANDUSIA NEW, a province of Terra-Firma, in South America, lying on the coast of the N. Sea, opposite to the Leeward Islands, having the river Oronoko on the W.

ANDAMANS, certain islands on the E. side of the entrance in the bay of Bengal. The inhabitants are a harmless inoffensive people, living chiefly on the rice, fruits, and herbs, with which they furnish ships that come that way. ANGOLA, a kingdom of Africa, between the rivers Dande and Coanza, in Congo. This country produces Indian corn, beans, oranges, lemons, and several other fruits. The inhabitants are very lazy, and generally idolaters, taking as many wives as they think fit. The country is divided among several petty princes, and the Portuguese have several colonies and settlements on the coast. However, the English and Dutch traffick with the natives, and purchase a great number of slaves. These are the most lazy and ungovernable of any on the Coast of Guinea; because they are generally brought from inland countries, where they have not the least knowledge of the rest of the world. They go almost naked, and are very fond of dog's flesh, though they have plenty of other provisions. All the males are circumcised; but for what reason they cannot tell.

AOSTA, a town of Italy, in Piedmont, and capital of a duchy of the same name, with a bishop's see, is subject to the King of Sardinia. It is remarkable for several monuments of the Romans, and for the birth of Anselm, archbishop of Canterbury. It is seated at the foot of the Alps, on the river Doria, 37 miles N. of Suza, 50 N. of Turin, and 62 S. E. of Geneva. Lon. 25. 3. lat. 45. 38.

AOUSSA, a territory of Piedmont, with the title of a duchy. It is a valley 30 miles in length, and extends from the p^{ar}is of St. Martin's, near the frontiers of Yvree, and of the Milanese, as far as St. Bernard. It abounds in pastures, and all sorts of fruits, and the capital is of the same name.

* APALACHE, a river of North America, in Florida, which divides it into six provinces, that have each their own chief. The country is full of high mountains, whose valleys are very fruitful. These mountains are called by some the Apalachian mountains; but very improperly, for their true name is Albany, so called from the river of that name, usually known by the title of the Ohio. These mountains lie W. of the British plantations, between 35 and 44 degrees of lat. It is also very doubtful, whether there is any river now known named Apalache, for it is not to be found in the most modern maps.

- three parts, Arabia Petrea, Deserta, and Felix, or the Happy. Arabia Petrea is the smallest of the three, and towards the N. is full of mountains, with few inhabitants, on account of its barrenness. It had its name from the town Petrea, its ancient capital, now destroyed. It differs little from Arabia Deserta, which is so called from the nature of the soil, that is generally a barren sand. However, there are great flocks of sheep, and herds of cattle near the Euphrates, where the land is good. In the desert there are great numbers of ostriches, and there is a fine breed of camels in several places. Arabia Felix is so called, on account of its fertility, with regard to the rest. Some give it the name of Yemen, but improperly; for it is a kingdom on the S. coast, whose capital is Sanaa. The Arabs in the desert live wandering lives, removing from place to place, partly for the sake of pasture, and partly to lie in wait for the caravans, which they often rob. There are caravans which travel over part of this desert from Bufferah to Aleppo, and from Egypt to Mecca, in order to visit Mahomet's tomb. Arabia Felix produces frankincense, myrrh, halm of Gilead, gum-arabick, and more especially coffee, of which they export prodigious quantities. The Arabs that live in the desert have no houses, but tents. The famous Mahomet was a native of this country, and his followers soon after his death conquered a great part of Asia, Africa, and Europe, establishing their religion wherever they came. Lon. from 52. 10 77. lat. 12. to 34.
- ARABO, commonly called RAAB, one of the principal rivers in the kingdom of Hungary, which has its source in Steirmack, and falls into the Danube.
- ARACAN, a small maritime kingdom of Asia, in the East Indies, bounded on the S. by the bay of Bengal, on the E. and N. by the kingdom of Ava, and on the W. by the kingdom of Bengal. It is a fertile country, but thin of people, which produces the fruits proper to the East Indies. They have only two seasons; the rainy season, which continues from April to October, and the fair season, which continues all the rest of the year, and is called the summer. The inhabitants are idolaters, and the women are tolerably fair; but the longest ears are reckoned the most beautiful, and in these they wear many rings. There are great numbers of elephants, buffaloes, and tigers.

ARAFAT, or GIBBEL-L-ARAFAT, which signifies in Arabick, the mountain of knowledge, is not far from Mecca, and thither the pilgrims resort to the number 70,000 every year. There are certain stones placed as boundaries, to shew how far the sacred ground extends. Here they implore pardon for their sins, and receive the blessing of the imaums, which is performed in the most solemn manner; and here they first receive the title of Hadgis. Before they go to rest, each person gathers 49 small stones, which the next morning they carry to a place called Mina, which they say is the place where Abraham went to offer up his son Isaac. Here they pitch their tents, and throw their stones against a little square stone building, which is done to shew their defiance of the devil. This is done at three several times, and three several places. This ended, they each buy a sheep, which are brought by the country people for that purpose, which they sacrifice, eating part of it themselves, and giving the rest to the poor.

ARAL, a lake of Asia, lying to the E. of the Caspian Sea, from which it is distant above 200 miles. It is but lately discovered, and is above 300 miles in length, and in some places 150 in breadth. - * ARQUES, a town of France, in Normandy, in the territory of Caux, seated on a small river of the same name, four miles S. E. of Dieppe, and three N. E. of Longueville. Lon. 18. 50. lat. 49. 54.
- ARRAGON, a kingdom, and one of the most considerable provinces of Spain, bounded on the N. by the Pyrenean mountains, which separate it from France, on the W. by Navarre and the two Castiles, on the S. by the kingdom of Valencia, on the E. by a part of Valencia and Catalonia. The air is pure and wholesome; but the country, tho' abounding in rivers, is in want of good water to drink. It is fertile in corn, wine, flax, and fruit, near the rivers; but in other places it is dry and sandy. It produces saffron, and there are mines of salt in plenty. It was united to the crown of Spain in 1478. Saragossa is the capital town, and the Ebro is the most considerable river.
- ARRAN, an island in Scotland, in the fifth of Clyde, between Cantire and Cunningham, with the title of an Earldom. There is plenty of fishing about it.
- ARRAN, a town of Switzerland, seated on the river Aar, 25 miles S. W. of Baden, where the Protestant cantons hold their diet.
- ARRAS, a town of the Netherlands, and capital of the county of Artois, with a bishop's see. It is remarkable for its fine church, and well furnished library. ARTOIS, a province of France, in the Netherlands; bounded on the N. by Flanders, and partly on the E. and by Hainhalt, Cambresis, and Picardy on the S. and W. It is one of the best provinces in France; and is 62 miles in length, and about 30 in breadth. Its trade consists of corn, flax, hops, wool, oil, and cloth. The inhabitants are sincere and laborious; and are greatly attached to the ancient customs and privileges.

* ARTONNE, an ancient but small town of France, in Lower Auverne, seated on the river Merges; and famous for being the abode of several popish saints.

* ARVERI, an isle of France, in Saintonge, to the S. of the mouth of the river Suder, and to the E. of the river of Marene. It produces a great number of ever-green trees; and has a town of the same name.

ARUBA, an island near the continent of Terra Firma, in America; subject to the Dutch. Lon. 308. 5. lat. 12. 30.

ARUNDEL, a town in Suffex, with the title of an earldom; and which has a great market on Thursdays, and a small one on Saturdays. The fairs are on May 14 for cattle and hogs; on August 21 for hogs, cattle, and sheep; on December 25 for cattle and sheep; and on December 17 for cattle and pedlar's ware. It is seated on the side of a hill on the river Arun, over which it has a wooden bridge, where ships of 100 tons may ride. The ancient castle is seated on the river Tame, and is said to be a mile in compass. It is 8 miles E. of Chichester, and 55 S. W. by S. of London. It is governed by a mayor and burgeses, and sends two members to parliament. It has two streets paved with stone; about 200 houses, which are also built with stone, and about 800 inhabitants. Lon. 17. 5. lat. 50. 45.

ARZILLA, an ancient and handsome sea-port town of Africa, in the kingdom of Fez. It was once in the possession of the Portuguese, who abandoned it long since. It is 100 miles N. W. of Fez; and 60 S. S. W. of Tangier. Lon. 12. 10. lat. 35. 30.

* ASAD-ABAD, or ASED-ABAD, a handsome town of Asia, in Persia, in Irac-agemi; 68 miles N. E. of Amaden. Long. 66. 5. lat. 36. 20.

ASAPH, ST. a town in Flintshire, in North Wales, with a bishop's see; and is commonly called a city on that account. It is seated on the river Elwy, where it unites with the river Clayd; and over both there is a bridge. It is a very poor place; and is of note only for its cathedral. It has a small market on Saturdays; and four fairs on Easter Tuefday, July 15, October 16, and December 26, all for cattle. It is 24 miles W. N. W. of Chester; and 212 N. W. of London. Lon. 14. 5. lat. 53. 18.

* ASCHERLEBEN, a town of Germany, in the principality of Anhalt, seated on the river Eine. It was raised out of the ruins of Ascania, from whence the princes of the house of Anhalt proceeded.

ASCHAFFENBURG, a town of Germany, in the Circle of the Lower Rhine, and territory of the elector of Mentz, who has a palace in this city. It is the place where the king of Great Britain took up his quarters the night before the battle of Dettingen, in 1743. His army was attacked by the French the next day in their march to Hanaw; but they were repulsed. It is 20 miles E. of Franckfort, and 40 E. of Mentz. Lon. 26. 35. lat. 50. 14.

ASCENTION, an island in the ocean between Africa and Brasil, discovered in 1508. It was said to be in want of water; but that is a mistake, for there is a good spring 8 miles from the sea-side, behind a very high mountain. If any ships should happen to touch there, there are plenty of good tortoises or turtles for their subsistence; besides goats, and land-crabs. Sometimes the East India ships, in their return home, call here to supply themselves with these turtles, which often prove a great succour. Lon. 5. 0. lat. 8. 0.

ASCOLI, a pretty large and populous town of Italy, in the Marche of Ancona, and territory of the church, with a bishop's see. It is seated on a mountain, at the bottom of which runs the river Fronto; 30 miles N. E. of Aquila; 50 S. of Ancona; and 75 N. E. of Rome. Long. 31. 23. lat. 42. 47.

* ASHTON UNDER LINE, a village in Lancashire, six miles E. of Manchester, with two fairs on August 5, and December 3, for horned cattle, horses, and toys.

ASIA, one of the four great parts of the world, and the second in order. It is bounded on the N. by the Frozen Sea, on the E. by the Eastern Ocean, which is part of the South Sea, on the S. by the Indian Sea, and on the W. by Europe and Africa. It is of larger extent than any of the three parts in our continent; and is generally said that the first man was created here; though many are of a different opinion, arising from the uncertainty where the garden of Eden was placed. But, be that as it will, arts and sciences were early cultivated here; though they are thought to come originally from Egypt: but all the considerable religions now known had their first beginning in Asia; and there are still a great number of people who maintain their ancient tenets, which, according to them, are a hundred thousand years old. They have one sort of religion in China, and another in India, whose priests are the Brachmins; not to mention the Jews, Christians, and Mahometans, whose beginnings are sufficiently known to all the world. This was the seat of several ancient empires, or monarchies; such as that of the Assyrians, Medes, Persians, and Greeks. It is 4740 miles in length from the Dardanel on the W. to the eastern shore of Tartary; and 4380 in breadth from the most southern part of Malacca, to the most northern cape of Nova Zembla. It may be divided into 10 great parts, namely, Turkey in Asia, Arabia, Persia, the Mogul's Empire, with the two Peninsulas of India, Thibet, China, and Corea, Corea, Great and Little Bocharia, with Carazm, Little and Great Tartary, Siberia, and the Islands. The governments of Asia are generally monarchical; and Turkey, Persia, the Mogul's Empire, Thibet, and China, are subject to single monarchs; but the rest is divided among several sovereigns; inasmuch, that there are reckoned seven emperors, and 30 kings, besides petty princes, and the rajas of India, which are very numerous. With regard to the extent of their religions, the Christian is but small in respect of the Mahometan, which comprehends one third of Asia; and the Pagan is about twice as much extended as the Mahometan. Beside these, some pretend there is the natural religion, which has about as many followers as the Christian. The languages are so many and so various, that it is impossible to enumerate them; but the chief are the Turkish, the Grecian, the Arabick, the Chinese, the Persian, and the Old Indian. In short, every country and island has almost a distinct language. Besides the animals we have in Europe, there are lions, leopards, tigers, camels, elephants, rhinoceroses, and many others. There are several great lakes; but the principal are the Caspian Sea, which is 2000 miles in circumference, and the Lake Aral, which is about half as much, and has not been long known to the Europeans. As for the rivers, I shall not mention them here, but refer to their proper places.

ASIA THE LESS, now called Natolia; which see.

* ASINARA, an island of Italy, on the western coast of Sardinia, 17 miles N. of Salsari. Lon. 26. o. lat. 41. o.

ASITO, a town of Italy, in Perugia, and in the pope's territories, 16 miles S. E. of Perugia, and 80 N. of Rome. Lon. 41. 10. lat. 43. o.

ASKEATON, a town of Ireland, in the province of Munster, in the county of Limerick, seated on the river Shannon, and sends two members to parliament.

* ASKRIG, a town in the N. Riding of Yorkshire, with three fairs on May 11, and the first Tuesday in June, for woollen cloth, pewter, brass, and millenary goods; and in October 28 and 29 for horned cattle, woollen-cloth, pewter, and millenary goods. It is six miles S. by E. of York, and 175 N. of London. Lon. 16. 35. lat. 53. 50.

ASMER, a province of India, on this side the Ganges, between the river Sind, or Indus, and the province of Delli.

ASMIND, or ASMILD, an old celebrated convent of Denmark, in North Jutland, founded in 1164, but at present is a royal fief.

* ASNA, or ESNA, a town of Upper Egypt, seated on the river Nile, so near the cataract that it may be heard from thence. In the middle of it there is an ancient temple closed on three sides; and in the front there are 24 columns very well preserved; they support stones placed cross ways, on which rest great tables adorned with hieroglyphicks, in the same manner as the sides and columns. The people here drive a considerable trade into Egypt and Nubia, by means of the Nile, and the caravans that pass over the deserts. The inhabitants are all Arabs, and are governed by a caissif and two sheriffs of their own nation. Lon. 49. 10. lat. 38. 15.

* ASOLA, a town of Italy, in Lombardy, and in the Bressan, being part of the territory of the republic of Venice. It is 20 miles S. E. of Bressa, 20 N. E. of Cremona, and 25 N. W. of Mantua. Lon. 27. 48. lat. 45. 15.

* ASOLO, a town of Italy, in the Trevisan, seated on a mountain 17 miles N. W. of Trevisan, and 10 N. E. of Bassano. Lon. 29. 30. lat. 45. 49.

ASOPH, a town of Coban Tartary, in Asia, seated on the river Don, near its mouth, a little to the E. of the Palus Meotis, or the Sea of Afoph. It has been several times taken and retaken of late years; but in 1739, the contending powers agreed that the fortifications should be demolished, and that the town should remain under the subjection of Russia. Lon. 58. o. lat. 47. 18.

* ASPEROSA, a town of Turkey, in Europe, and in Romania, with a bishop's see, and a harbour. It is seated on the coast of the Archipelago, 22 miles S. E. of Nicopoli. Lon. 42. 50. lat. 40. 58.

ATHENS, a town of Greece, greatly celebrated for the learned men it has produced, it having been the principal academy of the Roman empire. It is now called Athina, and is an archbishop's see: though at present it is inconsiderable to what it was formerly. It contains about 15000 inhabitants, who are chiefly christians of the Greek church, and they speak a corrupt sort of Greek. It has undergone various revolutions, and was taken by the Venetians in 1464, and in 1687, but they were obliged to abandon it, and it is now under the dominion of the Turks. The citadel, formerly called Acropolis, is built on a craggy rock, and has no entrance but on the W. side, and there are several magnificent ruins which sufficiently testify its former grandeur. It is the capital of Livadia, and it is situated on the Gulph Engia, 100 miles N. E. of Misitra, or Lacedemon, 143 S. by E. of Larissa, and 320 S. by W. of Constantinople. Lon. 41. 55. lat. 38. 5.

AVA, a kingdom of Asia, beyond the Ganges, lying on the gulph of Bengal. It has a capital of the same name, which is pretty large and populous. The houses are all of wood, and the streets are as frait as a line. The king's palace is very large, and built of stone, and greatly embellished with gilding. The inhabitants are well shaped, with good features, and an olive complexion. The women are small, but whiter than the men, and very well shaped. Their black hair is tied up behind; and when they go abroad they wear a piece of cotton cloth loose on the top of their heads. They wear a cotton garment close to their bodies, which reaches down to the middle of the thigh, and under that they have a kind of petticoat which is open before, and almost every step will discover what decency should oblige them to hide. This, they say, was an invention of a queen of this country to draw the men from unnatural crimes. They are very fond of the Europeans, and any stranger may have a wife for the time he stays in the country; and during this time they are very careful in the management of the men's affairs, buying and selling all sorts of commodities. If the man has a mind to keep her while he is abroad, he must pay the value of six shillings and eight pence per month, and then she cannot colabit with any other man. The women here are thought to be never the worse for these sort of bargains. Lon. 114. 0. lat. 21. 0.

* AVA, a kingdom of Japan, with a town of the same name, which is the capital. It is seated in an island that lies between those of Niphon and Bongo. Lon. 131. 10. lat. 33. 0. There is another kingdom of Ava in Japan, in the peninsula of Niphon. Lon. 159. 0. lat. 35. 20.

AUSBURG, or AUGSBURG, a handsome, large, famous, and ancient town of Germany, and circle of Swabia, with a bishop's see. It is an imperial city, or sovereign state, being governed by the town-council and the representatives of the burghers, who are half Protestants and half Papists. The churches, town-house, and other public buildings are very magnificent. It is surrounded with fine pasture land, beautiful and very fertile plains, with large forests full of all sorts of game. It was in the bishop's palace where the Lutherans presented their confession of faith to the emperor Charles, held in the year 1550; and from hence it is called the confession of Ausburg, which occasioned a civil war in the empire between the Protestants and Papists, that lasted upwards of 20 years. The bishop is one of the ecclesiastical princes of the empire, but has no share in the government of the town. It was taken by the French in 1703, but they abandoned it in the year following, after the battle of Hockstadt. It is seated between the river Werdach and Lech, 20 miles

AUSTRIA, a country of Germany, bounded on the N. by Bohemia and Moravia, on the E. by Hungary, on the S. by Styria, and on the W. by the archbishopric of Saltzberg. The river Ens divided it into the Upper and Lower; Vienna is the capital of the Lower, and Lintz is capital of the Upper. Austria excels all the provinces of Germany by the fertility of its soil, the plenty of its pastures, the wholesomeness of the air, and the beauty of the country. Corn, wine, and fruit are very plenty; and the saffron is better than that which comes from the East-Indies. We must not confound Proper Austria with the Circle of Austria, which is the chief of the Circles of the empire; nor yet with the territories of the house of Austria. It was long since made an archduchy, and enjoys great privileges.

AUTHIE, a river of France, that rises on the borders of Picardy and Artois, and runs between the mouths of the Somme and Canche into the sea.

BABYLON, once a famous city in Asia, and perhaps at that time the largest in the world. It is now so ruined that the place where it stood cannot be discovered with any certainty. However, we are sure that it was seated on the river Euphrates; and as some think over against Bagdad, on the Tygris. This last place is, by many travellers, falsely called Babylon. This was also the name of a city in Egypt, supposed to stand near the place where Cairo stands now. What authors tell us concerning the bigness of Old Babylon is almost incredible; for they affirm it was 366 stadia in circumference, which is about 50 of our statute miles; however, it was not full of houses; for, within the walls, there were not only gardens and orchards, but cultivated fields. It was divided by the Euphrates into two equal parts that communicated by a stone bridge 625 feet in length, and 50 broad. The tower of Babel within this city was built in a square form, and was 460 cubits high; and the circumference at the bottom was 4 or 5000. The hanging gardens at Babylon were such a prodigious work that they passed for one of the seven wonders of the world. There were four of them that contained each four acres of land, and they were supported by vast columns at the top of a palace that was 2,500 paces in circumference, and they were disposed in the form of an amphitheatre. The walls of Babylon were also astonishing, that these also passed for one of the seven wonders; and they were built of bricks, and instead of mortar they made use of bitumen; the circumference was 50 miles as above, and they were 200 feet high, and 50 thick, according to some. There was also a temple consecrated to Belus, whose magnificence corresponded with the grandeur of the city, which was the capital of the Assyrian empire, and afterwards of the Kingdom of Babylon founded by Nabonassar.

There are a great many seals in it which are all of a blackish colour, with multitudes of fish, particularly sturgeons of a monstrous size. The river Angara runs out of this lake to the N. N. W. There are camels here of a very large size, as also musk-deer, which look very like a young buck without horns. They sell their camels to travellers, for which they receive such commodities as they want, for they will not take money. Both men and women are robust, large, and handsome, especially considering the country. In winter both sexes wear long coats made of sheep skins, with a broad girdle round their waists. They have also caps made so as to draw over their ears in cold weather: but as they never wash themselves, or pare their nails, they look very frightful. Their religion is next to none, for they worship dead animals.

- They live in huts made of wood and covered with earth, on the top of which there is a hole to let out the smoke, the fire being made in the middle of them. In spring and autumn great companies of them go out together on horseback to hunt stags, wild sheep, and roe-bucks, of which there are prodigious numbers.

BANKS OF NEWFOUNDLAND, are well known for the great fishery carried on there. They are so frequented by most of the European nations, that there are sometimes no less than 4 or 500 sail of ships loaded with cod-fish here every year; and the season continues from the spring to the autumn. That which is called the great bank is the largest shoal of sand as yet known in the ocean; however, it is not at all dangerous.

BANTAM, a large town of Asia, in the East-Indies, and the most powerful of the island of Java, being capital of a kingdom of the same name, with a good harbour, and a fortified castle. It is divided into two towns, which are separated by a river, and one of them is inhabited by Chinese. The English and Danes had factories here till 1682, when they were forced away by the intrigues of the Dutch. The only produce is pepper, of which the Dutch export vast quantities every year, they being the only Europeans that have footing here; and they are so powerful, that they have deposed the kings of the ancient race; and suffer nothing to be done in this kingdom but what they please. It is seated on the N. W. coast of the island. Lon. 123. 30. lat. S. 6. 20.

BANTRY, a town of Ireland, in the county of Cork, and province of Munster. It is seated on a bay of the sea, to which it gives its name, in the S. W. part of the kingdom. Lon. 8. 15. lat. 51. 30.

now almost all consumed with carrying on the sugar-works. The commodities which they export are sugar, rum, cotton, indigo, and ginger; and they have most of the fruits common to the climate. A college has been built here by Col. Codrington and other benefactors; but it has not answered the intention of the founders. The number of the white inhabitants are about 20,000, who have 100,000 negro slaves. They have no manufactures among them, nor do they breed many cattle; for which reason they receive most of their corn, cattle, flesh, and salted fish, from our colonies in North America; and their cloaths and furniture from England. They are subject to hurricanes in July and August; but not so much as in the Carribee Islands; however, it is the most healthy island of any in these parts, because, unless when there is a hurricane, they have always the advantage of a constant settled easterly wind, commonly called the trade-wind. The sugar that is brought to England from hence is whiter and finer than that of any other plantation; and they have one particular production, called Barbadoes tar, which rises out of the earth, and swims upon the surface of the water. It is of great use in the dry belly-ach, and in diseases of the breast. It is 70 miles E. of the island of St. Vincent, and 90 S. E. of Martinico. The capital town is St. Michael, or Bridge-town, which lies in lon. 518. 40. lat. 13. 20.

BARBARY, a large country of Africa, included between the Atlantic Ocean, the Mediterranean Sea, and Egypt, extending itself along the sea-shore on the side of the Mediterranean. However, some reckon that it extends southward as far as Negroland, but very improperly. It includes the kingdoms of Barca, Tripoly, Tunis, Algiers, Fez, and Morocco; and is near 2000 miles in length, and in some places 750 in breadth. It was known to the ancients by the name of Mauritania, Numidia, Proper Africa, and Lybia. It is the best country in all Africa, except Egypt; and is fertile in corn, maize, wine, and fruits; particularly, there are citrons, oranges, figs, almonds, olives, dates, and melons. Their chief trade consists in the sale of their fruits, in the horses called barbs, Morocco-leather, ostrich-feathers, Indigo, wax, tin, and coral. The reigning religion is the Mahometan, and there are some Jews; but no christians, except the slaves.

that the famous temple of Jupiter Armon was seated, that was very difficult of access on account of the sands.

BARCELONA, a handsome, large, rich, and strong town of Spain, in Catalonia, of which it is capital, with a bishop's see, and a good harbour. It is seated on a fine plain, which lies along the shore of the Mediterranean Sea, and is of an oblong form, containing about 15000 houses. It is defended by a fort, or citadel, called Mont Joy, which stands on a rocky mountain, near a mile to the W. of the town. It has double walls on the N. and E. and the sea on the S. with a mole running out for the security of small vessels. It is divided into the new and old town, separated from each other by a wall and a ditch. There are several beautiful streets and squares, which are very clean, and paved with large flag-stones. It is the seat of a viceroy, and has a fine university, besides an inquisition. It is adorned with several handsome structures; and the cathedral church, which is large, has two lofty towers. The palace of the viceroy is much admired, and the arsenal contains arms for several thousand men. There is an exchange where the merchants meet, and a yard with docks to build galleys in. The palace where the nobility meet is built with large hewn stones, and adorned with marble pillars. It is a place of great trade, and they have houses where they make curious works in glass, and the best in all Spain. The knives are likewise in great reputation, as well as the blankets, which are greatly used in France. The inhabitants are laborious and polite, and the women are handsome, lively, and free in their conversation. It has been several times taken and retaken by different nations, and, in 1705, Lord Peterborough got possession of it, after a siege of three weeks. In 1706, Philip V. invested it with a numerous army; but Sir John Leake raised the siege. In 1714, it was taken, after a long siege, by the French and Spaniards, when it was deprived of all its privileges, and the citadel was built to keep it in awe. It is seated in a very pleasant fruitful country, watered by springs and rivulets, and thick set with villages, 250 miles E. of Madrid, 180 N. E. of Valencia, and 90 N. of the island of Majorca. Lon. 19. 50. lat. 41. 26.

BASIL, BASLE, or BALE, the capital town of the canton of Basil, in Switzerland. It is a large, rich, populous place, and the most handsome in all Switzerland, with a bishop's see, and a famous university. It is divided into two towns by the river Rhine; the largest of which is on the side of Switzerland, and the least on that of Germany; but they are joined together by a handsome bridge. It has five gates, six suburbs, 220 streets, six large squares, and 46 fountains, and is partly seated on a hill. The lesser Basle stands in a plain, and has but two gates, with several streets and fountains. The town-house, with fine paintings in Fresco, and the picture done by Holben, which represents the passion of Jesus Christ, are much admired by travellers. The library contains a prodigious number of books, as well in manuscript as printed: and there is a rich collection of medals, among which there are several exceeding scarce. The clocks here always go an hour too fast, because it did so on the day appointed to murder the magistrates, by which the conspiracy was discovered. This town is surrounded with thick walls, flanked with towers and bastions, and yet it is not a strong place. The BATAVIA, a handsome, large, and very strong town of Asia, in the island of Java, and in the kingdom of Bantam, with a castle. This is the capital of all the Dutch settlements and colonies in the East-Indies. The fort, or citadel, is built at a little distance from the town, and the greatest part of it is of stone, which was brought from Europe. Besides this, they have five other forts about the city, to defend it from all insults. In general the place is very beautiful, and is built with white stone; and they have canals in the principal streets, planted on each side with ever-green trees. Batavia contains a prodigious number of inhabitants, of every nation and country in these parts; and particularly there were a great number of Chinese, till many thousands of them were massacred in cold blood in 1741, and their wealth was confiscated for the use of the Dutch. It is the residence of the general-governor of all the Dutch colonies in the East-Indies, who continues but 3 years, and is replaced by another, sent by the United Provinces. It has a handsome hospital and arsenal; and all the goods brought from other parts of the East-Indies are laid up here till they are exported to the places of their destination. There is always a large fleet here, that is sufficient to maintain their power in these parts, and to hinder other nations from molesting their trade, particularly in spices, which they have all to themselves

The harbour is excellent, and is seated on the N. E. part of the island, S. E. of Sumatra, and N. W. of Borneo. Lon. 134. 30. lat. 5. 6. 10.

BAVARIA, a considerable country of Germany, with a title of a dutchy. It is bounded on the N. by Bohemia, and the Upper Palatinate, on the E. by Austria, the archbishopsric of Saltzburg, and the bishopsric of Passau, on the S. by the bishopsric of Brixen, and the Tyrol, and on the W. by the river Lech. It is about 125 miles in length from E. to W. and 87 in breadth from N. to S. The principal rivers are the Danube, the Inn, the Isar, and the Lech. The air is wholesome, and the soil fertile in wine, wheat, and good pastures; but the country is poor, because it has little trade. It is divided into the upper and lower; and the duke is one of the electors since the year 1623. We must not confound the dutchy of Bavaria with the circle of that name, which is much more extensive, comprehending, besides the former, the Upper Palatinate, the archbishopsric of Saltzburg, the bishopsric of Freisingen, Braffaw, and Ratibon, and the dutchy of Neuburg. It is bounded on the E. and S. by the circle of Austria, and on the W. and N. by the circle of Franconia, Swabia, and Bohemia. The palatinate of Bavaria is part of Nortgaw, and whose capital is Amberg.

BAVAY, a little town of the province of Hainhalt, in the French Netherlands, to which the French retired after the terrible battle in 1709, wherein more men were killed than in any during that war. It is 3 miles S. W. of Malplaquet, 10 E. of Valenciennes, and 12 S. W. of Mons. Lon. 21. 15. lat. 50. 25.

BAUGE, a small town of France, in Anjou, with a castle. It is famous for a battle fought here in 1421, and is seated on the river Coesnon, 13 miles E. of Angiers. Lon. 17. 30. lat. 47. 30.

* BAUGE, a town of France, in Bresse, pleasantly seated on a fruitful hill, with the title of a marquise. It is three miles from Macon. Lon. 22. 24. lat. 46. 20.

* BAUGNET, a town of France, in Proper Orleansois, where there is an Augustine abbey.

* BALME, St. a mountain of France, in Provence, between Aix, Marseilles, and Toulon. It is pretended Mary Magdalen died here, upon which account it is much frequented.

* BAUME-LES-NONES, a town of France, in the Franche Comte, with a rich nunnery, seated on the river Doux, 15 miles N. E. of Befanzon. Five miles from this town there is a famous cavern, whose entrance is 20 paces wide, and after descending 300 paces, a gate of a grotto is seen, twice as large as a city gate. It is 35 paces deep, 60 wide, and is covered with a kind of a vaulted roof, from which water continually drops. There is also a small brook, which is frozen in summer, but not in winter, and at the bottom there are stones that perfectly resemble candied citron-peel. When the peasants perceive a mist proceeding from the mouth of the cave, they are certain it will rain the next day. Lon. 23. 50. lat. 47. 12.

* BAUMEN, or BAUMAN, a cave of Germany, in Lower Saxony, about a mile from Wermigerode, and 18 from Goslar. The entrance through a rock is so narrow, that not above one person can pass at a time. There are several paths in it, which the peasants have disturbed in searching for the bones of animals, which they sell for unicorns horns. Some think it reaches as far as Goslar; but, be that as it will, it is certain the skeletons of men have been found there of the common size, who are supposed to have been lost there in the turnings and windings. Not far from the entrance there is a brook that falls from a rock, whose water is good for the stone. The water that drops from the top turns into a stone, or spar, as is common in vast cavities. When reduced to powder it heals the wounds of animals.

BAUSK, or BAUTKO, a small but important town in the dutchy of Courland, and on the frontiers of Poland, with a strong castle built on a rock. It was taken by the Swedes in 1625, and by the Russians in 1705, after a bloody battle between them and the Swedes. It is seated on the river Musza, 15 miles E. of Mittaw. Lon. 42. 14. lat. 56. 30.

* BAUTRY, or BAUTRY, a town in the W. Riding of Yorkshire, on the borders of Nottinghamshire, with a market on Saturdays, and two fairs on Holy-Thursday, and November 22, for cattle and horses. It is three furlongs in length on the road from London to York, and has been long noted for mill-stones and grind-stones, which are brought hither up the river Idle, on which it is seated. It is seven miles S. by E. of Doncaster, 45 S of York, and 147 N. of London. Lon. 16. 30. lat. 53. 27.

BAUTZEN, or BUDISSEN, a considerable town of Germany, and capital of Upper Lusatia, subject to the elector of Saxony, with a strong citadel. The protestants as well as the papists have the free exercise of their religion. It is seated on the river Sprehe, 30 miles E. of Dresden, 22 W. of Gorlitz, and 65 N. of Prague. Lon. 32. 12. lat. 51. 10.

* BAUX, a town of France, in Provence, with the title of a marquise. It is seated on a rock, at the top of which there is a strong castle. It is eight miles E. by N. of Arles. Lon. 22. 30. lat. 43. 42.

* BAYA, or BAJA, a small town of lower Hungary, in the county of Bath, seated near the Danube, 32 miles N. of Eisek, and 65 S. of Buda. Lon. 37. 0. lat. 46. 25.

BAYEUX, a considerable town of France, in Normandy, and capital of Bessin, with a rich bishop's see. The cathedral church is accounted the finest in that province; its front and three high steeples are said to be the best in France, and that in the middle contains the town clock. There are 17 parish churches in the town and suburbs, besides 7 convents, that is, three for men, and four for women. The inhabitants are laborious, and addicted to trade. It is seated on the river Aar, 4 miles from the English Channel, 15 N. W. of Caen, 75 W. of Rouen, and 140 W. by N. of Paris. Lon. 16. 57. lat. 49. 16.

* BAYON, or BAYONA, a town of France, in Galicia, seated on a small gulph of the Atlantic ocean, about 12 miles from Tuy, and as much N. of the river Minho. Lon. 8. 0. lat. 42. 3. It has a very commodious harbour; the country about is fertile, and there is excellent fish on the coast.

BAYONNE, a town of France, in Gascony, with a bishop's see. It is seated three miles from the sea, at the confluence of the rivers Nive and Adour; the first washes it on one, and the second divides it into two unequal parts: there is an excellent harbour, which renders this town a place of great trade. In the suburbs of St. Esprit, there is a bridge that leads to the smallest part of the town, which is called Little Bayonne, and it is separated from the other by the Nive; and by this the vessels come up to the middle of the town. There are chains that shut up the avenues. The Pont-majour is the largest bridge, and it leads to a street inhabited by merchants. The cathedral church is dedicated to the Virgin Mary; but there is nothing remarkable in it, except the shrine of St. Leon, patron of the town. The new castle that defends the harbour is seated at the mouth of the Nive, and is flanked with six gross round towers; the town college is near it, and in the high-street of Little Bayonne the Capuchins and Dominicans have their convents. The Palace of Audience is on the Key, from whence the harbour may be seen full of ships from different parts of the world. There is also a castle in Great Bayonne, which consists of four low round towers, but very thick, with ditches full of water; there are a great number of cannon, which appear on the top of the walls. The Dutch buy a great quantity of wine every year in exchange for spices. Bayonne is the capital town of Labour, and is 25 miles S. W. of Dax, 42 N. of Pampelona in Spain, 40 W. of Pau, and 425 S. by W. of Paris.

- BENCOOLEN, a fort and town of Asia, on the S. W. coast of the island of Sumatra, belonging to the English. About a quarter of a mile from the sea stands an Indian village, whose houses are small and low, and built on posts. The natives have a swarthy complexion, and their stature is slender and frail. They are very desirous of trade; but when affronted, are very treacherous and revengeful. There are a few smiths among them; but most of them are carpenters. There are also fishermen, who get their livelihood by fishing. The country about Bencoolen is mountainous and woody; and there are several volcanos in the island. The air is unwholesome, and the mountains are continually covered with thick heavy clouds, that produce lightning, thunder, and rain. There is no beef to be had, except that of buffaloes, which is not very palatable; and indeed all provisions, except fruit, are pretty scarce. The chief trade here is in pepper, of which there is a large quantity. There are frequent bickerings betwixt the natives and the factory, to the no small injury of the East-India company. The factory was once entirely deserted; and, if the natives had not found their trade decrease, they would scarce ever have been invited there again. Lon. 118. 35. lat. S. 4. 0.
- BENDERMASSEN, a town of Asia, and capital of a kingdom of the same name, in the island of Borneo, with a good harbour. Lon. 131. 20. lat. S. 2. 40.
- BENDER, a town of Turkey in Europe, in Bessarabia, seated on the river Niester, 100 miles N. W. of Belgorod, and 100 S. E. of Blacklaw. It is remarkable for the residence of Charles XII. King of Sweden, who retired hither after he had been defeated by the Russians at Pultowa. He was assassinated by the Turks here several years, till he was at last forced from thence to a place near Adrianople, where he remained another year; after which

* BENESOUF, a town of Africa, in Egypt, remarkable for its hemp and flax. It is seated on the western shore of the Nile, and is the residence of a Bey, who is the governor of it. The mosques give it a grand look. It is 50 miles S. of Cairo. Lon. 48. 30. lat. 29. 10.

BENEVENTO, a handsome, large, and rich town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in the Ulterior Principate, with an archbishop's see. It has suffered greatly by earthquakes, and particularly in 1683; and the archbishop, afterwards Pope Benedict XIII was dug out of the ruins alive. When he was advanced to the Papal chair, he rebuilt this place. It is subject to the Pope, and is seated in a delightful and fertile valley, near the confluence of the rivers Sabato and Calore, 15 miles from Capua, 12 N. from Avellino; and 30 N. E. of Naples. Lon. 32. 27. lat. 41. 6.

BENGAL, a country of Asia, in India, lying near the mouth of the river Ganges, bounded on the N. by the provinces of Patna and Jessat; on the E. by the kingdoms of Arracan and Tipra; on the S. by the bay of Bengal and the province of Orissa; and on the W. by provinces of Narvar and Malva; being about 400 miles in length from E. to W. and 300 in breadth from N. to S. In this province, the English, Dutch, and French, have factories; and the principal of that of the English is called Calcutta, or Fort St. George. This country has the same advantage as Egypt, which is annually overflowed by the river Nile; for this is watered in the same manner by the Ganges. The inhabitants are chiefly Gentoes, whose women had a custom of burning themselves with their dead husbands; but this practice is now greatly restrained, by the authority of the Great Mogul. It is governed by a Nabob, one of whom lately took Fort St. George, and committed great cruelties among the people of the factory;

but he has since been deposed, and killed, and there is now a friend to the English in his room. In general, Bengal is a fruitful, pleasant country, by some esteemed a sort of earthly paradise, and it lies very convenient for carrying on a trade with the parts round about it, and for purchasing their various commodities and manufactures.

BENGOELA, a territory of Angola, in Africa, whose principal town is of the same name, and is under the dominion of the Portuguese. This is 300 miles N. of Cape Negro, and 120 S. of the island of Leando. Lon. 31. 35. lat. S. 11. 0.

* BENIARAX, an ancient and considerable town of Africa, in the kingdom of Algiers, seated in a soil abounding in corn, honey, and pastures. It is 37 miles S. W. of Oran, and as much N. E. of Tlemcen. Lon. 17. 0. lat. 35. 0.

BENIN, a large town, capital of a kingdom of the same name, in Africa. Some give it the title of a city, which it does not deserve, though the streets are vastly long and broad, in which markets are kept for cows, cotton, elephant's teeth, and European wares. It was formerly very close built, and very populous, as appears from the ruins of the houses; but at present they stand widely distant from each other: they are all built with clay-walls, and covered with reeds, straw, or leaves, having no stone in the country. The women here are kept greatly in subjection; for, besides their household affairs, they are obliged to keep the markets, and till the ground. The king's court, which makes a principal part of the town, is seated in a very large plain, with no other houses near it; but has nothing remarkable, except the extent of ground on which it stands. The river of Benin is extremely large and wide at the mouth; but how far it extends up the country, is not certainly known. The land about it is low and marshy, and its banks are adorned with great numbers of trees: upon this account it is pestered with great numbers of musquitoes, which are extremely troublesome to strangers, and sting them so severely, that their faces can hardly be known by their acquaintance. It is a very fatal country to the Europeans; for no ships ever arrive here, without losing a great part of their company. The natives dress all alike with a long cloth wrapped about their middle, which only differs in goodness, according to their quality: but the children all go naked; the boys till they are twelve years of age, and the girls till they are fit for marriage. The men have as many wives as their circumstances will allow; for their is no restraint in regard to number. They take care to keep their wives from their own countrymen; but they are so far from jealousy of the Europeans, that they will often bring them into their company, and leave them behind. If a negroe lies with another man's wife, if he is found out, he forfeits all his goods to the husband, and the wife is punished severely with a cudgel. The custom of circumcision is here universally practised, though there is no other reason to be given for it, than that their ancestors have done it before them. The government of this country is vested in the king, and three great men under him; and each province has its particular governor. They have a sort of religion; but it is so absurd and perplexed, that it is almost impossible to describe it; however, it is certain that every thing that is extraordinary, is esteemed as a god, and they make offerings to it accordingly. There are sometimes a few boiled yams mixed with oil, which they lay before the images: sometimes they offer a cock; but then the idol must be contented with the blood, for they eat the flesh themselves. They have a sort of a Sabbath every fifth day, which the great men observe by killing cows, sheep, and goats; and others are contented with dogs, cats, and chickens: but whatever is then killed, is distributed to the poor. The animals are the same here as in other parts of Guinea, as well as the rest of the productions of this country. They have some sorts of manufactures, and are particularly skilful in weaving and dying, their cloths being made of cotton, which grows here in great plenty; and they export many thousands of them every year to other places. The town is seated near the river, 37 miles N. W. of Coffo, and 115 N. W. of Oavera. Lon. 26. 0. lat. 7. 40.

BERMUDA ISLANDS are a cluster of very small islands, almost in the form of a shepherd's crook, and surrounded with rocks, which render them almost inaccessible to strangers. They lie in the Atlantic Ocean, about 500 miles E. of Carolina. They are inhabited by the English, and enjoy a pure and temperate air, having plenty of flesh, fish, and garden-stuff. The common employment of the inhabitants is in building of sloops, and the making of women's hats, well known in England by the name of Bermudas hats. They were discovered by John Bermudez, a Spaniard; but they were not inhabited till 1609, when Sir George Summers was cast away upon them, and they belong to Britain ever since. Dean Berkeley intended to have founded an university here; but by mistake he was carried to New-England, which prevented his design. Lat. 32. 30. Some travellers talk of spiders webs here, which are so strong that they will catch small birds.

- BOCCA CUTCA, the freight, or entrance into the harbour of Carthage, in S. America; it is defended by several forts and platforms of guns, which were all taken by the British forces in 1741; but through some mismanagement, they did not take the town itself.
- BOCCA-DEL-DRAGO, a freight so called, between the Island of Trinidad, and Andalusia, in the province of Terra Firma, in S. America.
- BOCHAR. See BOKHARA.
- BOCHETTA, a place of Italy, in the territory of Genoa, which was famous in the war of 1646 and 1647. It is a chain of mountains, over which the great road lies from Lombardy to Genoa; and on the very peak of the highest mountain, there is a narrow pass which will hardly admit 3 men to go a-breadth. This pass is properly called the Bochetta; for the defence of which there are three forts. It is the key of the city of Genoa, and was taken in 1746 by the Imperialists, by which means they opened a way to that city.
- BOCKHOLT, a town of Germany, in Westphalia, and the diocese of Munster, capital of a small district. It is 20 miles E. of Cleff, or Cleves, and is subject to the bishop of Munster. Lon. 122. 55. lat. 51. 40.
- * BOCKING, a very large village in Essex, adjoining to Braintree, from which it is only separated by a small stream. Its church is a deanry, and very large, and there are here two or three meeting-houses: but the market is kept at Braintree. In both parishes there are about 1500 houses, which are in general but indifferent ones, and the streets are narrow and badly paved. There is a large manufactory of bays, chiefly for exportation. It is 42 miles N. E. of London.
- * BODGAM, a village in Suffex, 9 miles N. W. of Winchelsea, with one fair, on June 6, for cattle and pedlars ware.
- BODMIN, a town of Cornwall, with a market on Saturdays, and four fairs, on January 25, Saturday after Mid-Lent Sunday, Wednesday before Whit-Sunday, and December 6, for horses, oxen, sheep, cloth, and a few hops. It is seated in a bottom between two high hills, which renders the air very unwholesome. It chiefly consists of one street, and the many decayed houses shew it has been a - place of greater note. It is a mayer-town, and sends two members to parliament, and formerly had the privilege of the coinage of tin. It is 32 miles N. E. of Falmouth, and 263 W. by S. of London. It has the title of a viscounty. Lon. 12. 25. lat. 50. 32.

BOHEMIA, a kingdom of Europe, bounded on the N. by Misnia and Luface, on the E. by Silefia and Moravia, on the S. by Austria, and the W. by Bavaria. Some place Silefia and Moravia in this kingdom: but about this geographers differ; and some will have it only to consist of Proper Bohemia and Moravia; but this is a distinction of no consequence. It is about 200 miles in length, and 150 in breadth, and is very fertile in corn, saffron, hops, and pastures. In the mountains there are mines of gold and silver, and in some places they find diamonds, granates, copper, and lead. The Roman Catholic religion is the principal, though there are many Protestants. The chief rivers are only the Muldau, the Elbe, and the Oder. Their language is the Slavonian, with a mixture of the German. The capital town, or city, is Prague. It is subject to the house of Austria.

BOIS-LE-DUC, a large, strong, and handsome town of the Netherlands, in Dutch Brabant, with several forts. There are yet here a great many Papists, who are allowed to say mass in private houses. It is seated between the rivers Domnel and Aa, among morasses, 22 miles E. of Breda, 45 N. E. of Antwerp, and 45 S. of Amsterdam. Lon. 23. 46. lat. 51. 45.

BOKHARA, a town of Tartary, in the country of the Usbecks, and capital of a kingdom of the same name. It is a large, populous place, and is seated on a rising ground, with a slender wall of earth, and a dry ditch. The houses are low, and mostly built of mud; but the caravanserais, and the mosques, which are numerous, are all of brick. The Bazars, or market-places, have been stately buildings; but the greatest part of them now are in ruins. The cows generally built of stone and wood. Here is also a factory belonging to the nation of the priests, though they are Mahometans, they hate the Turks more than the Christians. The air and soil are wholesome; but the water is bad, and breeds worms, between the skin and the flesh, of great length. There are a great number of Jews and Arabians, who frequent this place; but the Khan seizes on their possessions at his pleasure. The produce of the country is cotton, lamb-turs, down, rice, and cattle; and they manufacture, soap, cotton, and calicoe. They import rhubarb, musk, and castor, besides many other valuable drugs, from the Black Calmucks, and Tatischeund. It is 70 miles E. of the river Amo, and 13 W. by S. of Samarcand. Lon. 83. 20. lat. 39. 15. The river Amo runs into the Lake Aral, and not into the Caspian Sea, as was formerly thought.

* BOKE-MEALIE, a capital town of a province of the same name lying under the Line in Africa. This country is inhabited by Jagas, who purchase elephants teeth from their neighbours, and bring them to Guinea, to be sold.

BOLONGNA, an ancient and large, rich and very handsome town of Italy, in the territory of the Church, and capital of the Bolognese, with an archbishop's see, and and an univerty. The public buildings are magnificent, as well with regard to the architecture, as the ornaments, and especially the paintings, which are done by the greatest masters. There are a great number of superb palaces, particularly that where the Pope's Nuncio resides; and the private houses are also well built. It contains about 80,000 inhabitants, and 169 churches. All the gates and windows are open in the summer; inasmuch that you may see into their apartments and gardens, where are vast numbers of orange-trees, which perfume the air. It is a place of great trade, which is in some measure owing to a canal that runs from this city to the river Po. The Reno, which runs near Bologna, turns 400 mills, which are employed in the silk-works; besides, they deal in wax, soap, hams, sausages, and even lap-dogs, which are greatly esteemed. It is seated at the foot of the Appennine Mountains, 22 miles S. E. of Modena, 25 S. W. of Ferrara, 37 W. of Ravenna, 42 N. of Florence, and 175 N. W. of Rome. Lon. 29. 0. lat. 44. 27.

- BORNEO, an island of Asia, in the East-Indies, and the largest in the known world. It is about 1800 miles in circumference, and is almost of a round form. The inland country is very mountainous; but, towards the sea, very low and marshy, occasioned by the great rains that fall 8 months in the year. It produces rice, and many sorts of fruits, besides several animals unknown to the Europeans. Pepper is peculiar to the countries about Bangaar; and to the westward they have small diamonds of a yellow water. Sambas, another part of this island, produces gold, pearls, and bees-wax, which last is used instead of money. The people in general are very swarthy, but not quite black, and they go almost naked. There are Mahometans on the sea-coast; but all the rest are Centows, or Pagans. The E. India company have had factories there; but differences arising between them and the natives, they have been all driven away, or murdered; however, the English have still a liberty

- of trading thither. The sea-coast is usually overflowed half the year, and when the waters go off, the earth is covered with ooze and mud; for which reason, some of the houses are built on floats, and others on high pillars, or posts. The capital town is of the same name, and it is large and populous, with a good harbour. It is built upon piles, and is seated on the N. side of the island, 42 miles S. W. of Bacafa, and 82 N. It is bounded on the N. by Slavonia, on the E. by Servia, on the S. by Albania, and on the W. by Croatia and Dalmatia. It is the department of a Beglerbeg, who resides at Bagni-Altch, which is the capital town. Mahemet II. took Stephen the last King, and freed him alive.

BOSPHORUS OF THRACE, or the Channel of Constantinople, is a strait by which the sea of Marmora communicates with the Black-Sea. It is about 20 miles in length, and a mile and a quarter in breadth where it is narrowest. The Turks have built two castles over against each other, to defend the passage. It separates Asia from Europe; and the country about it is very pleasant. On one side of it stands Scutari, where the Grand Seignior has a palace, and it is looked upon as a suburb to Constantinople.

BOSSNEY, or BOSS-CASTLE, a town in Cornwall, whose market is discontinued, but it has two fairs, on August 5, and November 22, for horses, oxen, sheep, cloth, and a few hops. It is seated on the sea-coast, 17 miles N. W. of Launceston, and 242 W. by S. of London. Lon. 12. 35. Lat. 50. 40. It sends two members to parliament.

BOSTON, a town of Lincolnshire, with two markets, on Wednesdays and Saturdays, and three fairs, on May 4, for sheep, another on August 11, called Tom-Fair, and on December 11, for horses. It is commodiously seated on both sides the river Witham, over which it has a handsome, high, wooden-bridge; and, being not far from its influx into the sea, enjoys a good trade. It is a large handsome town, with a spacious market-place; as also a high steeple, which some pretend is the best built tower in the world; and it serves as a land-mark for sailors. It's 37 miles S. E. of Lincoln, 48 N. by N. E. of Peterborough, and 114 N. from London. Lon. 17. 50. Lat. 53. 3.

BOSTON, the capital town of N. W. England, in North-America, seated on a peninsula at the bottom of a fine bay, covered by small islands and rocks, and defended by a castle and platforms of guns, which render the approach of an enemy very difficult. It lies in the form of a crescent about the harbour; and the country beyond rising gradually, affords a delightful prospect. There is but one safe channel to approach the harbour; and that is so narrow, that three ships can scarce sail abreast; but within the harbour, there is room for 500 sail to lye at anchor. At the bottom of the bay, there is a pier, near 2000 feet in length, which ships of the greatest burden may come up close to; and, on the N. side, there are warehouses for the merchants. The streets are handsome, and the chief runs from the pier to the town-house. There are 10 churches of all denominations, of which 6 belong to the independents. At each end of the town there is a battery of eight guns; and, about a league from it, there is a beautiful strong castle, with a large garrison in time of war. The number of inhabitants are reckoned to be about 14,000; and it is one of the most flourishing towns in North-America. Lon. 506. 0. Lat. 42. 24.

BOSWORTH, a town in Leicestershire, with a market on Wednesdays, and two fairs, on May 8, for horses, cows, and sheep, and on July 10, for horses and cows. It is seated on a pretty high hill, in a country fertile in corn and grass. It is noted for a bloody battle fought here between Richard III. and Henry earl of Richmond, afterwards Henry VII. where-in King Richard lost his life and crown. It is 13 miles S. W. of Leicester, and 104 N. N. W. of London. Lon. 16. 10. Lat. 52. 45.

BOTHNIA, a considerable province of Sweden, lying on a gulph of the same name, which divides it into two parts, called E. and W. Bothnia. The coasts of this gulph are full of inhabitants.

- BOULOGNE, a large and handsome town of France, in Picardy, and capital of the Boulonois, with a harbour, and a bishop's see. It is divided into two towns,

- the higher and the lower. The former is strong, both by nature and art; and the latter is only surrounded with a single wall. The harbour has a mole, for the safety of the ships; and which, at the same time, prevents it from being choaked up. The lower town is inhabited by merchants, wherein there are three large streets; one of which leads to the high town, and the other two run in a line on the side of the river. Many of the English and Scots reside here, when, from rebellion, or any other cause, they are obliged to fly from their native country. It is seated at the mouth of the river Laine, 22 miles W. of St. Omer's, 50 N. W. of Arras, 55 N. E. of Lille, and 17 S. of Calais. Lon. 19. 17. lat. 50. 42. This place is commonly called by the English BULLEN.

BOURDEAUX, an ancient, large, handsome, and rich town of France, capital of Guienne, with an archbishop's see, an university, and an academy of Arts and Sciences. It is built in the form of a bow, of which the river Garonne is the string. This river is bordered by a large quay, and the water rises 4 yards at full tide, for which reason the largest vessels can come up to it very readily. The castle, called the Trumpet, is seated at the entrance of the quay, and the river runs round its walls. Most of the great streets lead to the quay; but they are all very narrow, except one. The town has 12 gates; and there is another castle, near which there are fine walks under several rows of trees. The most remarkable antiquities are an ancient temple, dedicated to the titular gods, now entirely demolished, to make room for the fortifications; the palace of Calienas, built like an amphitheatre, and several aqueducts in different places. It is a town of a very considerable trade; and they ship every year 100,000 tons of wine and brandy. This is the place where Edward the Black Prince resided several years; and his son, afterwards Richard II. was born here. There is a handsome square near the river, with an equestrian statue of Lewis XV. It is 87 miles S. of Rochelle, 35 N. W. of Bazas, and 325 S. W. of Paris. Lon. 16. 56. lat. 44. 50.

BRANDENBURG, THE MARCHE OF, a large country of Germany, bounded on the N. by Pomerania and Mecklenburg, on the E. by Poland, on the S. by Silesia, Luface, Upper Saxony, and Magdeburg, and on the W. by the territory of Lunenburg. It is divided into five principal parts, namely, the Old Marche, Pregnitz, the Middle Marche, Uckermark, and the New Marche. Berlin is the capital town; and the principal rivers are the Elbe, the Havel, the Sprey, the Ucker, the Oder, and the Warta; the court is Calvinist, but the greatest part of the inhabitants are Lutherans; however, the Papists are here tolerated. We must not confound the electorate of Brandenburg with the countries subject to the Elector of Brandenburg, which comprehends, besides the Marche, the Farther Pomerania, the dutchies of Magdeburg and Cleves, the principalities of Halberstadt and Minden, the counties of March, Ravensburg, Lingen, Moers, and Tecklinburg, and lately Silesia, and West-Friesland.

BRANDENBURG, a town of Germany, divided into three parts. The first is Burg-Brandenburg, which is the place where the cathedral now stands. The second is Alt-Brandenburg, seated near the river Havel, on the side of Westphalia; this is pretty large and populous, and is supposed to be the ancient Bfenanus. The third is New Brandenburg, which is a large well-built town, opposite to the former, and is seated on the other side of the river. Great numbers of French refugees having been lately settled here, they have introduced their manufactures, which has rendered it a prosperous trading place. It is 20 miles E. of Warin, 26 W. of Berlin, and 4 W. of Stetin. Lon. 31. 40. lat. 43. 39.

BRASIL, a large country of S. America, with the title of a principality, which is given to the presumptive heir of the crown of Portugal. The most Eastern part of South-America is comprehended under this name, and lies between the equinoctial line and the tropic of Capricorn, being about 1560 miles in length, and 1000 in breadth; but, measuring along the coast, it is near 2000 miles long, and is bordered with mountains that open from time to time, and form good harbours, where vessels may lye in safety. It was discovered by chance in 1498; for Alvarez Cabral, a Portuguese, was forced upon it by a tempest; and the Kings of Portugal have continued masters of it ever since. Some time after the revolt of the United Provinces from the King of Spain, the Dutch drove away the Spaniards, to whom it then belonged; but the Portuguese, in their turn, obliged the Dutch to leave it in 1655. The air of this country, though within the torrid zone, is pretty temperate and wholesome; inasmuch that people live there a long while. The waters in general are very good, and the soil fertile and excellent: there comes more sugar from thence, than all other parts of the world: besides this, it produces tobacco, Indian corn, several sorts of fruits, and medicinal drugs. The wood brought from Brazil, and hence so called, is of very great use in dying red; and, within the country, there is gold, and several sorts of precious stones: likewise the cattle, carried over from Europe, increase prodigiously, inasmuch that there is no want of provisions. They have several sorts of animals not known in Europe; and among the rest, a bird called Colibri, whose body is not much larger than that of a fly-bug, and it sings as harmoniously as a nightingale; it is a perfect beauty, and the neck is of such a lively red, that it might be mistaken for a ruby; the belly, and the upper part of the wings, are of the colour of gold, and the thighs are as green as an emerald; the legs and the bill are as black as polished ebony, and the eyes resemble two oval diamonds, being of the colour of burnished steel; the head is green, with a mixture of gold, and of a surprizing lustre; that of the cock is adorned with a small tuft: it is almost impossible to conceive how so small a bird can have so loud a note. The Portuguese chiefly inhabit the coast, for they have not penetrated far into the country. The inland parts are full of people of different languages; but they all agree in wearing no sort of cloaths. They are of a copper-colour, with long coarse black hair on their heads, but without any on the other parts of their bodies like the rest of the Americans. They are strong, lively, and gay; and, as they are subject to few diseases, they live a long time. They love to adorn themselves with feathers, and they are very fond of feasts; at which they dance and skip about immoderately. They have no temples, nor any other sign of religion; and they make no manner of scruple to marry their nearest relations. Some pretend that they are cannibals, and eat those that they have taken in war: but this is a fable. They have huts made of the branches of trees, and covered with palm-tree leaves. Their furniture consists chiefly in their hammocks, and dishes, or cups, made of calabashes, painted without of a red colour, and black within; their knives are made of a sort of stone and split ones; and they have likewise baskets of different sizes, chiefly made of palm-tree leaves. Their arms are only bows, arrows, and wooden clubs. When they travel, they fasten their hammocks between two trees, and sleep all night therein. The Portuguese divide Brazil into sixteen governments or captaincies; eight of which belong to the King of Portugal, and the rest to great men, who have peopled them at their own expence. There are all under a Viceroy, who resides at St. Salvador, the capital of the whole country.

BREMEN, a large, populous, and very strong town of Germany, capital of a dutchy of the same name, with an arch-bishop's see, secularized in favour of the Swedes, but now belongs to the Elector of Hanover. The river Weser runs through the middle, and divides it into the Old and New Town. In September 1739, while the inhabitants were asleep, the magazine of powder was set on fire by lightening, and all the houses were shock, as if there had been a violent earthquake, which threw them into a terrible consternation. This town is divided into 4 quarters, each of which has a burgo-master; and in the middle there is a large market-place, with the statue of Rolando. It is seated on the river Weser, 22 miles E. of Oldenburg, 90 N. W. of Brunswick, 70 W. by S. of Lauenburg, and 325 N. W. of Vienna. Lon. 26. 20. lat. 53. 40.

BREMEN, the dutchy of, a province of Germany, in the province of Lower Saxony, lying between the rivers Weser and the Elbe; of which the former separates it from the dutchy of Oldenburg, and the other from that of Holstein. The air is cold; but the country is fertile, and well peopled. It formerly belonged to the Swedes, but was afterwards sold to the King of Great Britain, as Elector of Hanover, in 1716. In the winter it is subject to inundations, and particularly in 1617, on Christmas-day, several 1000 cattle were drowned, besides several 100 of men; and the country was so covered with water, that it has cost immense sums to repair the dykes. Bremen is the capital town.

BREMENVOERD, a town of Germany, in the circle of Lower Saxony, and dutchy of Bremen. It was formerly a fortified town, with a strong castle; but, since the year 1683, the fortifications have been demolished, and it is now an open place. It is 27 miles N. of Bremen. Lon. 26. 10. lat. 53. 48.

BRETON CAPE, an island so called, near the eastern continent of N. America, between 45 and 48 degrees of latitude. It is separated from Nova Scotia by a narrow freight, called Camo, and is about 100 miles in length, and 50 in breadth. It is a barren country, producing but little corn or grass, and subject to fogs throughout the year. It is covered with snow in winter, and is excessive cold. It is of very small importance to England, but of great consequence to the French, because it commands the navigation of the river St. Lawrence, through which they pass to Canada; and therefore it would greatly distress them if in our hands in the time of war. There is likewise an excellent fishery on this coast, from which they reap great advantage. It was taken by the English in 1745, and restored to the French in 1748, by the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle. It was again retaken by the English, on July 26, 1758, when all the garrison, consisting of upwards of 5600 men, were made prisoners of war, while the loss of the English was very inconsiderable. There were 11 men of war in the harbour, which were all either taken, sunk, or destroyed.

They have an exchange like that of London, which was opened in September 1743. The key is on the river Froome, a little above its confluence with the Avon, over which there is a draw-bridge, for the admittance of ships that come up with the tide; and this leads to the College-Green, where the cathedral stands. They have a prodigious trade; for it is reckoned they send 2000 ships yearly to several parts of the world. Here are no less than 15 glass-houses, they having plenty of coal from King's-wood and Mendip-hills. The hot-well is resorted to for the cure of several diseases, and is about a mile from the town, on the side of the river Avon. St. Vincent's Rock, above this well, is noted for a sort of soft diamonds, called Bristol-stones. Besides this well, there is a cold spring, which gushes out of a rock on the side of the said river, that supplies the cold bath. There are several manufactures, particularly woolen stuffs, carried on by the French refugees. From the College-Green there is a delightful prospect over the city and harbour, and in it stands a stately high cross of Gothic structure, with the effigies of several of the Kings of England around it. Near Queen's-square, which is adorned with rows of trees, and an equestrian statue of K. William III. stands the custom-house. The number of houses are computed at 13,000, and the inhabitants at 93,000. The walls have been demolished a long time ago; but there are several gates yet standing. They use sledges or sleds, instead of carts, because the vaults of the common shores will not admit them. It has two markets, on Wednesdays and Saturdays, and two fairs, on St. James's day, and January 25, which are very large; inasmuch that there is a great resort to the former, not only from the neighbouring towns, but from London. The Londoners have shops at both fairs; during which time the neighbouring inns make 100 beds a-piece for their guests; and all sorts of goods are then bought and sold. It sends 2 members to parliament, and has the title of an earldom. It is 35 miles W. S. W. of Cirencester, 50 S. of Hereford, 105 S. of Shrewsbury, 145 S. of Chester, 78 N. E. of Exeter, 36 S. S. BRITAIN NEW, called also Terra Labrador, and Ekikimau, a country in N. America, between the river of St. Lawrence and Hudson's-bay. It is said to be subject to Great Britain; but we have no settlement in it, nor are there any inhabitants but a rude savage sort of people, called Ekikimau, who have neither laws nor religion. They have no houses, but live in caves and holes in the sides of hills, and are the only people in America which have not the same origin as the original natives; for they have beards which almost hide their faces, and cloath themselves with the skins of birds and fishes. The chief produce is skins and furs.

This quarter is bounded on the E. by that of Louvain, on the N. by that of Antwerp, on the W. by Flanders, and on the S. by Hainhalt. Brussels is the capital city of this quarter, and all Brabant.

MELKOPOLITAN LIBRARY CENTRAL

BRUSSELS, the most handsome and rich town, or city, of the Netherlands, and capital of Brabant, which is the seat of the governor of the Austrian Low Countries, to whom they pay almost the same honours as to their sovereign. The ducal palace, where the governor resides, the town-house, and the arsenal, are superb structures. The academy is famous, where young gentlemen perform their exercises; and they have dug a canal, that runs from Brussels to Antwerp, which is a very pleasant passage for those who go from the one place to the other. The trade and manufacture of the inhabitants is in camblets, laces, and fine tapestry, which are exported all over Europe. It was bombarded by the French in 1695, by which 4000 houses were burnt, which, however, were rebuilt better than before. In 1708 it was besieged by the Elector of Bavaria; but the Duke of Marlborough made him decamp with precipitation. It was taken by the French in 1746; but was rendered back again soon after by the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle. It is seated partly on an eminence, and partly on an agreeable fertile plain on the river Senne, 22 miles S. of Antwerp, 26 S. E. of Ghent, 148 N. by E. of Paris, and 172 E. of London. Lon. 21. 56. lat. 50. 51.

* BUDA, the hegerbeglio of, was one of the chief governments of the Turks in Europe. It included all the countries of Upper Hungary, between the rivers Teisse and Danube, and between Agra and Novigrad, all Lower Hungary from Gran and Canita, the eastern part of Slavonia, and almost all Servia; but a good part of this government now belongs to the C. of Hungary.

BUDA, a large, strong, and famous town, capital of Lower Hungary, and of all the kingdom, with a good citadel. The churches and public buildings are very handsome, and the air is agreeable, being on the side of a hill, on the S. W. banks of the river Danube. In the adjacent country, there are vineyards, which produce excellent wine; and there are baths so hot, that they will boil an egg in a very short time: these baths were in excellent order, with magnificent rooms, while the Turks had possession of this place. It was taken by the Turks in 1526, and retaken by the Austrians the same year. The Turks took it again in 1529, and it was afterwards besieged several times by the Christians to no purpose, till 1686, when it was taken by the Germans, commanded by the Duke of Lorraine, since which time it has continued in the hands of the house of Austria. It is 105 miles S. E. of Vienna, 172 N. by W. of Belgrade, 80 S. E. of Presburg, and 560 N. W. of Constantinople. Lon. 36. 45. lat. 47. 20.

BURNTWOOD. See BRENTWOOD.

* BURSA is one of the largest and finest towns of Turkey in Asia, and in Natolia. It was the capital of the ancient Bithynia, and extends itself from E. to W. at the foot of the small hills of Mount Olympus, and on the edge of a large fine plain full of mulberry and fruit-trees. There are so many springs proceed from the Mount, that every house has its own fountains. The mosques are very fine, covered with lead, and adorned with domes; as are also the caravanfaries, which are very fine and commodious. The Bezestine is a large structure, full of warehouses and shops, containing all the commodities of the E. besides their own manufactures in silk. Here are the best workmen in all Turkey, and are excellent imitators of the tapestry of Italy and France. This place is in general very pleasant, and the quarter of the Bazars is particularly well paved and neat. It contains above 40,000 Turks, 400 families of Jews, 500 of Armenians, and 300 of Greeks. None but Mufflemen are permitted to dwell in the city; but the suburbs, which are vastly finer and better peopled, are filled with Jews, Armenians, and Greeks. The Jews came hither from Granada in Spain, and speak good Spanish to this day. They have good wine and other provisions in great plenty; and this was the seat of the Turkish empire before they passed into Europe. It is 75 miles S. of Constantinople, 172 S. E. of Adrianople, and 90 S. of the Black Sea. Lon. 46. 40. lat. 35. 53.

BURTON UPON TRENT, a town of Staffordshire, with a market on Thursdays, and four fairs, on April 5, for horned cattle and horses, on Holy Thursday, for horned cattle, on July 16, for toys, and on October 29, which is considerable for horses and horned cattle. It had formerly a large abbey; and over the river Trent it has now a famous bridge of free-stone, about a quarter of a mile in length, supported by 37 arches. It consists chiefly of one long street, which runs from the place where the abbey stood to the bridge; and it has a good market for corn and provisions. Burtonale is accounted the best of any country ale brought to London. It is 12 miles N. E. of Litchfield, 11 S. W. of Derby, and 123 N. N. W. of London. Lon. 15. 59. lat. 52. 48.

BURTON, a town of Lincolnshire, with a market on Mondays. It is seated on a hill near the river Trent, and is but a small place. It is 30 miles N. of Lincoln, and 150 N. by W. of London. Lon. 17. 5. lat. 53. 40.

BURTON, a town of Westmoreland, with a market on Tuesdays. It is seated in a valley, near a great hill called Farleton-Knothill. The town is pretty well built, but the market is very small; and it is on the great road from Lancaster to Carlisle. It is 11 miles N. of Lancaster, 57 S. of Carlisle, and 244 N. N. W. of London. Lon. 15. 0. lat. 54. 10.

* BURWASH, a village in Suffex, 8 miles W. of Battle-Abbey, with two fairs, on May 12, and September 4, for cattle and pedlars ware.

BURY-ST. EDMUND'S, a town of Suffolk, with a market on Wednesdays, and two fairs, on September 21, which lasts three weeks, and on December 3, which continues three days, for horses, butter and cheese. The situation is exceeding pleasant, and the air is supposed to be the best in England, for which reason it is frequented by the better sort of people. It was formerly of great note for its abbey, which was said to be the finest and richest of any in England, and stood between the two churches, which are both very large, and seated in one church-yard. In St. Mary's, one of these churches, lies Mary Q. of France, who was married to Thomas Duke of Norfolk. It sends two members to parliament, and is governed by a recorder, 12 aldermen, and 24 common council. The streets, which are always clean, are pretty wide, and well paved; and it contains about 1000 houses, which are in general well-built, and 7000 inhabitants. The town took its name from St. Edmund the King's being buried here, after being murdered in a wood, and his head severed from his body. Besides the above churches, there are one Presbyterian, one Independent, and one Quakers meeting. Here is a spacious market-hall, a grammar-school, a fine fair-field, and a beautiful cross. The market is very large for corn, fish, and fowl. The assizes for the county are held here. It is 14 miles E. of Newmarket, 25 W. N. W. of Ipswich, 43 N. of Chelmsford, and 75 N. N. E. of London. Lon. 18. 20. lat. 52. 20.

BURY, a town of Lancashire, with a market on Thursdays, and two fairs, on August 22, and April 22, for horned cattle, horses, and woollen-loth. It is a small place, and of no great account. It is 36 miles S. E. of Lancaster, and 195 N. N. W. of London. Lon. 15. 15. lat. 53. 36.

BUSSARAH, or BASSRAH, a sea-port town of Turkey in Asia, and in Irac Arabi, seated on the W. side of the river Euphrates, about 40 miles N. W. of the Gulph of Persia. It stands between the river Euphrates and the Desert, which last comes up close to the walls. Some geographers place this town at some distance from that river; but it is a mistake, for the E. end is on the side of the river: however, there is a canal from the Euphrates, which runs from the one end of the city to the other, and divides it into two parts; and over it there is a bridge of boats, to keep up a communication between them. The circumference is very large, which is owing in some measure to the great number of date-trees planted within the walls. The houses are generally two stories high, flat on the top. They are constructed with bricks burnt in the sun, and have the meanest aspect of any place in these parts; and even the governor's house is no better than a dog-hole: there is somewhat of architecture in the mosques; but they lean in such a manner; that they seem ready to tumble down. The ramparts are very much out of repair, and on the walls there are a great number of bastions, or round towers. This city is governed by a Turkish Bashaw, and a Mausoleum, and there is a garrison consisting of 3000 Janifaries. There are many Jews, who live by brokerage and exchanging money; but they are kept very poor, for political reasons. There are but a very few Christians of the Greek church, and these have no priest of their own. In 1691 it was visited with the plague, which destroyed 80,000 of the inhabitants, and the rest ran away; but it was afterwards repopled by the wild Arabs, who were soon brought under the subjection of the Turks. The trade here is not so considerable as it was formerly, which is owing to the infolence of the Turks. It is 250 miles S. by E. of Bagdad. Lon. 66. o. lat. 30. 20.

BUTESHIRE, in Scotland, consists of the islands of Arran and Bute, which lie in the Frith of Clyde, to the S. of Argyleshire. They are fertile in corn and pastures, and there is a considerable herring fishery. This shire, together with Caithness, sends one member to parliament.

* BUTRAGO, a town of Spain, in New-Castile, formerly a bishop's see. It is seated on the river Lozoya, 30 miles N. by E. of Madrid. Lon. 14. 40. lat. 40. 56.

BUTRINTO, a sea-port town of Albania, seated on the canal of Corfu, with a bishop's see, and a good harbour. It stands at the entrance of the gulph of Venice, 30 miles S. E. of Chimera. Lon. 53. 15. lat. 30. 45.

BUTTON'S-BAY is the N. part of Hudson's-Bay, in N. America, through which attempts have been made to discover a N. W. passage to China. It is so called from Sir Thomas Button, who here lost his ship, and came back in a sloop built in the country. It lies between 60 and 66 degrees of N. latitude.

* BE TZAW, a town of Germany, in Lower Saxony, and in the bisheprie of Swerin. It had a castle, where the bishops of Swerin formerly resided. It is 17 miles S. W. of Rostock, and 30 E. N. E. of Swerin. Lon. 30. 47. lat. 54. 50.

* BUXSTEAD, or BUCKSTEAD, a village in Suffex, 10 miles S. S. E. of East-Grinstead, with one fair on June 30, for cattle and pedlars ware.

BUXTON-WELLS, in Derbyshire, formerly noted for 2 springs which were near each other, one of which was very hot, and the other very cold; but the wonder is now lost, for they are both blended together. It lies at the bottom of a dirty village of the same name, and there is a public inn, which is very large and commodious, and a great deal of good company resort there in the summertime, as well for air and exercise as for the benefit of bathing. There is plenty of grouse or moor-gaine for those who love shooting, and trout and greyings for those that love fishing. In short, here is diversions of all sorts at an easy rate. The water is not pow so warm as the hot-well at Brittel. It is 23 miles S. E. of Manchester, 32 N. W. of Derby, and 160 N. N. W. of London. Lon. 15. 35. lat. 33. 20.

* BUZBACH, a town of Germany, in Wetteravia, and in the county of Solmes, on the confines of that of Hanau. It is 8 miles S. of Gießen, and 20 N. by E. of Franckfort. Lon. 26. 26. lat. 50. 22.

BYEHOW, a town of Poland, in Lithuania, and in the palatinate of Miskilaw. It is seated on the river Nieper, 32 miles from Mohilow, 35 N. E. of Rohaczos, and 180 S. W. of Wilna. Lon. 49. 10. lat. 53. 37.

BYZANTIUM, the ancient name of the city of Constantinople.

CABO-DE-ESTRIA, the capital town of the province of Estria, in the territory of Venice, seated on the coast of the Gulph of Venice, 12 miles S. of Trieste. It stands on a small island, and is joined to the main-land by draw-bridges; it is a bishop's see.

* CABRA, a town of Africa, in the kingdom of Tombut. It is a large place, but without walls, and is seated on the river Niger, 12 miles from Tombut. From hence the merchants, that travel to the kingdoms of Ghinea and Mella, go by water. The houses are built in the shape of bells, and the walls are flakes, or bundles, plastered over with clay, and the coverings are of reeds. They make a great deal of cotton-cloth themselves; but swollen-cloths and Ruffs are brought from Barbary. The people are Negroes; and it is frequented by a great number of negroes, who come thither by water. It is governed by a viceroi, and is 900 miles N. of Algiers. Lon. 18. 25. lat. 14. 10.

CABREDA, a small island in the Mediterranean Sea, to the S. of Majorca, from which it is distant 7 or 8 miles. It has a large secure harbour, defended by a castle.

CABUL, a large town of Asia, in India, and capital of Cabulistan, with 2 strong castles, and many palaces. This, together with the province, were ceded to Fuli-Khan by the Great Mogul, on his quitting the rest of his conquests in India in 1759. It is on the road from Lahor to Samarcand, and is about 100 miles E. of Candahar in Persia.

* CABULISTAN, a province of Asia, formerly in the territories of the Great Mogul, but now in Persia. It is bounded on the N. by Tartary, on the E. by Calcutra, on the W. by Sablestan and Candahar, and on the S. by Multan. It contains iron-mines, besides several forts of drugs. This country is not very fertile, but it is rich on account of trade. Cabul is the capital town.

* CACARA, a town of Africa, in the kingdom of Fez, near Malilla. The Moors retook it from the Spaniards in 1534; and it has a fort upon a rock, which cannot be undermined. Lon. 14. 40. lat. 35. 2.

CACERES, a town of Spain, in Estremadura, near the confines of Portugal. Between this town and Biocos is a wood, in which the Allies defeated the French army in 1766. It is famous for its fine wool, and is seated on the river Sabiet, 22 miles S. E. of Alcantara, and 35 S. W. of Placentia. Lon. 12. 8. lat. 39. 15.

CACERES-DE-CAPARINHA, a town of Asia, in the Isle of Luzon, with a bishop's see, and subject to Spain. Lon. 142. 25. lat. 14. 15.

CACHAN, or CASHAN, a considerable town of Persia, in Irac Agendi, where they carry on a considerable trade in silks, silver and gold brocades, and fine earthen ware. There are a great number of Christians and Guebies in this place. It is seated in a vast plain, 55 miles from Ispahar, and in the road to Koum. Lon. 67. 57. lat. 34. 10.

CACHAO, a large town of Asia, in the E. Indies, and capital of a province of the same name, in the kingdom of Tonquin. It stands in a high country, about 80 miles from the sea, seated on the west-side of the river Houti. It contains about 20,000 houses, whose walls are mud, and covered with thatch; and each have a yard, in which is a small arched building, like an oven, with the mouth to the ground: in these they put their goods, to secure them from fire. The Kings of Tonquin have two or three palaces in it, such as they be. The house of the English factory is seated at the north end of the town, fronting the river, and is the best in the place. The trading-people are civil to strangers, but the great men haughty, and the poor thievish. The men here buy their wives and mistresses, and the young women offer themselves to strangers of their own accord, and they are of all prices; for the poor lascars belonging to ships are never without. The great men will offer their daughters to merchants and officers, if they stay half a-year in the country. The children of these girls are always better looked upon, because their complexion is fairer than that of the other inhabitants; nor does this commerce prevent their having husbands. The Dutch generally keep their mistresses in pay during their absence, to buy in commodities, which they do at the dead time of the year, particularly raw silk; and they employ poor people when work is scarce, and so get it cheaper and better done. Their religion is Paganism, and they have a great number of pagods to place their idols in. The factories purchase silks and lacquered ware, as in China. It is 100 miles N. W. of the mouth of the river. Lon. 123. 32. lat. 22. 0.

CACHEO, a town of Africa, in Negroland, on the river of St. Domingo. It is subject to the Portuguese, who have three forts; and here they carry on a great trade in wax and slaves. Lon. 2. 40. lat. 12. 0.

CACHMIRE. See CASHMIRE.

* CACONGO, a small kingdom of Africa, lying on the river Zaire, whose inhabitants are addicted to trade. Their manners, religion, and government are the same as in Loango. Malemba is the capital town.

* CACORLA, a town of Spain, in Andalusia, seated on the rivulet Vega between two mountains, about two miles from the source of the Guadalquivir, on the frontiers of the kingdom of Granada. It belongs to the archbishop of Toledo, and is 15 miles E. S. E. of Ubeda. Lon. 19. 30. lat. 37. 56.

* CADAN, a town of Bohemia, in the circle of Zatz, seated on the northern bank of the river Egra, 18 miles W. by N. of Zatz. Lon. 31. 9. lat. 50. 20.

* CADEA, OR, THE LEAGUE OF THE HOUSE OF GOD, is one of those that compose the Republic of the Grisons, and it is the most powerful and extensive of them all. It contains the bishopric of Coire, the great valley of Engadine, and that of Brezaille, or Prejel. Of the 11 great, or 21 small communities, there are but two that speak the German language: that of the rest is called the Rhetic, and is a dialect of the Italian. The Protestant religion is the most predominant in this League, which is allied to the Seven Swiss Cantons, ever since the year 1498. Coire is the capital town.

* CADENAC, a town of France, in Querci, on the confines of Rouergue, and seated on the river Lot, 27 miles E. N. E. of Cahors, and 38 N. of Alby. Lon. 19. 47. lat. 44. 36.

* CADENET, a town of France, in Provence, and in the Viguire of Apt. It is 28 miles S. E. of Avignon, 12 N. of Aix, and 10 S. of Apt. Lon. 23. 5. lat. 43. 40.

* CADILLAC, a town of France, in Guienne, and in Bazadois, near the river Garonne, with a handsome castle. It is 15 miles S. E. of Bourdeaux, and 17 N. of Bazaz. Lon. 17. 20. lat. 44. 37.

CADIZ, a handsome, large, strong, rich, and famous town of Spain, in Andalusia, with a good harbour, frequented by merchant ships from all parts, and two fortresses. It is a bishop's see, and is seated on an island, about 18 miles in length on the S. W. and is about 9 in breadth; but the N. W. end, where the town stands, is not two broad. It has a communication with the continent on the opposite shore by a bridge. The bay formed by it is 12 miles in length, and 6 in breadth. The S. side is inaccessible by sea, because it is edged with craggy rocks, and the two forts, called Puntal and Matagorda, command the passage into the harbour. It is a very ancient place, it being built by the Phœnicians, and afterwards was a Roman town, and there are several remains of Roman antiquities. The inhabitants have no water but what they get from wells. All the Spanish ships go from hence to the W. Indies, and return hither back, as well to and from other parts of the world; it is rendered hereby a trading place, and the inhabitants are very rich. It was taken and plundered by the English in 1596; but being attempted again in 1702, they had not the like success. It contains about 5000 houses, and 50,000 inhabitants; and the cathedral is a very handsome structure. It is 20 miles W. of Medina-Sidonia, 45 N. W. of Gibraltar, 90 W. by S. of Malaga, and 65 S. by W. of Seville. Lon. 12. 0. lat. 36. 25.

There is no place of note in it, except Cadiz; and there are a great number of salt-works around the harbour.

* CADORE, or PIEVE DI CADORE, a town of Italy, in the territory of Venice, and capital of a district called Cadorino, which is famous for the birth of Titian the painter. It is 15 miles N. of Belluno, and 45 E. of Bolzano. Lon. 31. 20. lat. 46. 25.

CADORINO, a province of Italy, in the territory of Venice. It is bounded on the E. by Proper Friuli, on the S. by Bellunese, which also bounds it on the W. and by the bishopric of Brixen on the N. It is a very mountainous country, and yet is pretty populous. The only town is Pieve di Cadore.

CADZAND, an island on the coast of Dutch Flanders, at the mouth of the river Scheld, which gives the Dutch the command of that navigable river.

* CAEGWRLECY, a village of N. Wales in Flintshire, 7 miles S. by W. of Chester, with four fairs, on Shrove-Tuesday, May 16, August 12, and October 27, all for cattle.

CAEN, a handsome, and considerable town of France, capital of Lower Normandy, with a celebrated university, and an academy of literature. It contains 60 streets, and 12 parishes, and among the churches that of the Holy Cross is best built. The front has two towers, upon which there are two spires of a considerable height. Here are nine convents for men, and seven for women; to each of which there is a church, and the most handsome among them are the Cordeliers, the Ursuline Nuns, and the Visitation. The castle has four towers; and those, as well as the wall, were built by the English. Here is likewise and episcopal palace belonging to the bishop of Bayeux, where he sometimes resides. The town-house is a large building, with four great towers. The Royal-Square is the handsomest in all Normandy, and has fine houses on three sides of it; and in the middle is the statue of Lewis XIV. in a Roman habit, standing on a marble pedestal, and surrounded with an iron balustrade. It is seated in a pleasant country, on the river Orne. There is a harbour about eight miles from the sea, which renders it a trading place. William the Conquerer was buried here, in the abbey of St. Stephen, which he founded. It is 65 miles W. by S. of Rouen, 42 E. of Coutances, and 125 W. of Paris. Lon. 17. 18. lat. 49. 11.

* CAERFFILLY, a town of Glamorgan-shire, in South-Wales, with a market on Thursdays, and five fairs, on March 25, Thursday after Trinity, July 29, August 14, and Thursday before Christmas, all for cattle and stockings. It is seated between the rivers Taff and Rumney, in a moorish ground, and among the hills. It is thought the walls now in ruins were built by the Romans; for there are often Roman coins dug up here. It is 5 miles N. of Landaff, and 122 W. of London. Lon. 14. 20. lat. 51. 35.

CAERLEON, a town of Monmouthshire, with a market on Thursdays, and three fairs, on May 20, July 20, and September 21, for cattle. It is a place of great antiquity, and was a Roman town, as is evident from the many Roman antiquities found here. It is commodiously seated on the river Usk, over which there is a large wooden bridge. The houses are generally built of stone; and there are the ruins of a castle still to be seen. It is 19 miles S. W. of Monmouth, and 141 W. by N. of London. Lon. 14. 35. lat. 51. 40.

CAERWIS, a town of Flintshire, in N. Wales, with a market on Tuesdays, and six fairs, on March 16, the last Tuesday in April, Trinity-Thursday, the first Tuesday after July 7, September 9, and November 10, all for cattle. It is seated on an ascent; and, though it is but a small place, the market is very good for corn and provisions. It is 5 miles E. of St. Asaph, 5 W. of Flint, and 192 N. W. of London. Lon. 14. 10. lat. 53. 20.

CAFFA, or KAFFA, an ancient and considerable town, capital of Crim-Tartary, with an excellent harbour. It was taken by the Genoese in 1266, who made it the seat of trade in the East, by which it was rendered one of the most flourishing towns in Asia; but since it was taken by the Turks in 1474, it is much decayed; and their only trade now is in slaves, which are brought from the neighneighbouring countries, and sold to the Turks. It contains about 5 or 6000 houses; but they have no handsome buildings, except the remainder of those of the Genoese. It is inhabited by Jews, Mingians, Armenians, Greeks, Roman Catholics, and Turks, who have all liberty of conscience; and the Turks have always a strong garrison here. It is seated on the Black Sea, 150 miles N. by E. of Constantinople, and 425 S. of Moscow. Lon. 52. 30. lat. 44. 58.

CAPRERIA, a large country of Africa, towards the South. It is bounded on the N. by Negroland and Abyssinia, on the W. by a part of Guinea, Congo and the sea, on the S. by the Cape of Good-Hope, and on the E. by the sea. It is divided into several territories and kingdoms, of which we know little more than the names, except the Hottentots, where the Dutch are masters of the sea-coast, and, particularly, they have a town and castle near the Cape of Good-Hope.

* CAGEAN, a province of Asia, in the northern part of the Isle of Louzen, seated on a river of the same name. It is inhabited by Idolaters and Christians, and is so fertile, and full of bees, that the poor people burn nothing but wax-candles.

CAELI, an ancient town of Italy, in the duchy of Urbino, with a bishop's see. It is seated at the foot of the Appennine Mountains, 20 miles S. of Urbino, 17 E. of Città-di-Castello, and 50 W. of Loretto. Lon. 50. 18. lat. 43. 30.

CAGLIARI, an ancient, large, and rich town of Italy, capital of the Island of Sardinia, with an archbishop's see, an university, a castle, and a good harbour. It is the seat of the viceroy, and was taken, with the whole island, by the English in 1708, who transferred it to the Emperor Charles VI.; but it was retaken by the Spaniards in 1717, and, about two years afterwards, ceded to the Duke of Savoy, in lieu of Sicily, and from hence he has the title of King of Sardinia.

CABORS, a considerable town of France, in Quercy in Guienne, with a bishop's see, and an university. It is seated on a peninsula made by the river Lot, and is partly built on a craggy rock; and over the river there is a large stone-bridge, besides two other bridges, and several mills for different trades. The principal street is very narrow, and terminates in the market-place, in which is the town-house. The cathedral church is a Gothic structure, and has a large square steeple. The fortifications are regular, and the town is surrounded with thick walls. It is 50 miles N. W. of Albi, 62 N. of Toulouse, 102 E. of Bourdeaux, and 287 S. of Paris. Lon. 19. 7. lat. 44. 26.

CAJANABURG, the capital town of the province of Cajania, or East-Bothnia, in Sweden, seated on the N. E. part of the lake Cajania, 300 miles N. E. of Abo, Lon. 44. 35. lat. 63. 50.

CAJAZZO, or CAJIZZO, a town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, in the Terra-di-Lavoro, with a bishop's see. It is 8 miles N. E. of Capua, and 22 N. E. of Naples. Lon. 32. 0. lat. 41. 10.

* CAICOS, islands of America, to the N. of St. Domingo, which take their name from the principal. Lon. from 305. 25. to 306. 25. lat. 21. 40.

CAIFONG, a large, rich, and populous town of Asia, in China, seated in the middle of a large and well cultivated plain. It stands in a bottom; and when it was besieged by the rebels in 1642, they ordered the dykes of the river Hohang ho to be cut, which drowned the city, and destroyed 300,000 of the inhabitants. Lon. 151. 30. lat. 35. 0.

CAIMAN ISLANDS, in the W. Indies, lying between 296 and 301 degrees of longitude, and in lat. 21. c. They are frequented by the inhabitants of Jamaica, who come hither to catch tortoises, which they carry home alive. They are to the S. of Cuba, and to the N. W. of Jamaica.

CAIRO, a large city of Africa, and capital of Egypt, built in 795. It consists of three towns, or cities, about a mile apart; that is, Old Cairo, Cairo properly so called, and the port termed Buick. The ancient town, which seems to have succeeded Babylon, and was built near it, had the name of Meira. Old Cairo is reduced to a very small place, being not above two miles in circumference; and it is the harbour for boats that come from Upper Egypt. Some of the Jews have country houses here, to which they retire when the country is overflowed by the Nile. New Cairo is seated about a mile from the river, and extends near it about two miles from the mountains, and is about 7 miles in circumference. It has three or four very grand gates, of very good workmanship; but the streets are very narrow, and look like Roman lanes. The finest houses are built round a court, in which they make the best appearance; but there are few or no windows next the street, which makes them look very disagreeable to strangers. There are a great number of mosques, some of which are very magnificent; but the most remarkable of all is that of Sultan Hassan, built at the foot of the castle-hill. The castle itself stands upon a rock, and is walled round. To the west of the castle are the remains of some very grand apartments, covered with domes, and adorned with Mosaric pictures of trees and houses: they are now used for weaving and embroidering. Still higher than this is Joseph's Hall, from whence there is a most delightful prospect over the city, the pyramids, and all the country round. It was probably a terrace to that magnificent room which is now open on the top, and is adorned with very large beautiful pillars of red granite. There are several public bagnios, which are very handsome within, and are used as places of retirement and diversion, especially for the women. They go there twice a-week; but the wives of great men are deprived of this pleasure, by having baths at home. This city is exceeding populous; for there are several families live in one house, and there a number of people in each room of it: for this reason, in the busy time of the day, the streets are so crowded, that it is difficult to pass along. The women have greater liberty here than in other parts of Turkey; and there are particular streets, where the courtizans sit at the doors, richly dressed, and bare-faced, to invite in customers. Here are likewise several tea-houses, or caravansaries, three stories high, for lodging strangers. The Kallih is a canal which serves to convey the waters of the Nile into the city; it is 12 or 20 feet broad, and there are houses built on each side of it. As soon as the water begins to rise, they close the mouth of the canal with earth, and they place a mark, to show the time when this, and all other canals in the kingdom are to be opened, which is done with great solemnity; and the most lascivious dances are the least marks of their joy. The mouth of the Well of Joseph is 24 feet long, and 13 broad; and in depth 276, being cut into a rock: and there are oxen in proper places within it, which are employed in drawing up the water. This city was formerly a place of much greater trade than it is at present, since the way was found out to the East-Indies by the Cape of Good Hope. The principal merchandizes for exportation are flax, thread, cotton, leather, callicots, yellow wax, sal-ammoniac, and saffron. Besides these, there are prodigious quantities of coffee from Mecha, drugs, spices, callices, and other merchandizes, from the East-Indies. Joseph's Granary is in Old Cairo, and is surrounded by a square wall, and within there are divers partitions. Here they lay up the corn that is paid as a tax to the Grand Seignior. Notwithstanding its name, it was certainly built in the time of the Saracens. The Europeans still have their consuls and factors here, for the protection and management of the Turkey trade on that side. It is seated near the eastern banks of the Nile, about 100 miles S. of its mouth. Lon. 29. 6. lat. 30. 2.

CAIRO-S, or KAIROAN, a town of Africa, in the Kingdom of Tunis, seated on the river Marna. 60 miles S. of Tunis. It has been a long time the seat of the princes of the Arabs. Lon. 29. 6. lat. 35. 40.

CARNA, a town of Asia, in Persia, and in the province of Gurristan, near Mount Caucasus. Its trade consists chiefly in silks. Lon. 63. 50. lat. 43. 22.

CATASEA, a little town and barony of France, in Maine, with a Benedictine abbey.

CALABRIA, a country of Italy, in the Kingdom of Naples, which is divided into Calabria Ultra, and Calabria Citra, commonly called Ulterior and Citerior, or Farther and Nearer Calabria. Calabria Citra is one of the 12 provinces of the Kingdom of Naples, and is bounded on the S. by Calabria Ultra, on the N. by P. Sicilia, and on the W. and E. by the Sea; Corfua is the capital. Calabria Ultra is washed by the Mediterranean Sea on the E. S. and W. and is bounded by Calabria Citra on the N. Reggio is the capital town.

CAIAHONRA, a town of Spain, in Old Castile, with a bishop's see. It is seated in a fertile soil, on the side of a hill, which extends to the banks of the river Ebro,

- Ebro, 70 miles E. of Burgos, 75 N. by E. of Sigüenza, and 62 N. W. of Saragossa. Lon. 15. 48. lat. 42. 12.
- CALAIS, a strong town of France, in Lower Picardy, with a citadel, and a fortified harbour. It is built in the form of a triangle, one side of which is towards the sea. The citadel is as large as the town, and has but one entrance. It is a trading place, with handsome streets; it has but one parish, and yet there are several churches and monasteries, and the number of inhabitants is reckoned to be 4000. It was taken by King Edward III. of England in 1347; and was lost in Q. Mary's time in 1557. It was bombarded by the English in 1696, without doing much damage. The fortifications are good; but its greatest strength is its situation among the marshes, which may be overflowed at the approach of an enemy. The harbour is not so good as formerly, nor will it admit vessels of any great burden. In times of peace there are packet-boats, which go backward and forward twice a-week, from Dover to Calais, which is 21 miles distance. It is 25 miles W. of Dunkirk, 55 N. of Abbeville, and 152 N. of Paris. Lon. 19. 31. lat. 50. 58.
- CALAMATA, a considerable town of Turkey in Europe, in the Morea, and in the province of Belvedera, with a fort. It was taken by the Venetians in 1685; but the Turks retook it afterwards, with all the Morea. It is seated on the river Spinarza, 8 miles from the sea, and 27 W. of Mistra. Lon. 39. 45. lat. 37. 8.
- * CALAMIANES, an island of Asia, in the East-Indies, between Borneo and the Philippines.
- * CALAMO, or CALAMINE, an island of the Archipelago, near the coast of Asia, and to the S. of the Isle of Lero, with a town of the same name, and subject to the Turks.

CALICOUAN, or QUILON, a town on the coast of Malabar, in the E. Indies, and in the peninsula on this side the Ganges, where the Dutch have a factory. It is 150 miles S. of Calicut. Lon. 92. 40. lat. 9. 5.

CALICUT, a town of Asia, in the E. Indies, seated on the Malabar coast, 300 miles S. of Goa, and 320 S. W. of Fort St. George, subject to its own prince. The English have a factory here; from whence they export peper and other Indian merchandises. This was the first place which the Portuguese discovered, when they came to the E. Indies by the Cape of Good-Hope in 1498. It is seated on the sea-side, and contains about 7000 houses, with a garden to each. Lon. 93. 10. lat. 11. 21.

* CALICUT, a kingdom of Asia, in the E. Indies, on the coast of Malabar, 62 miles in length, and about as much in breadth. It is full of woods, rivers, and marshes, and produces pepper, ginger, aloes, and rice, and the trees are always green, inasmuch that there is almost a perpetual spring. There is a particular sort of a tree, which produces a kind of dates, from which they obtain sugar and oil. The king is very powerful, and assumes the title of Samerin, which answers to that of Emperor. Contrary to the custom of most other countries, the women have several husbands, and the sister's children always inherit. The inhabitants go almost naked; and they write upon palm-tree leaves. Their religion is not very well known; but it is said they believe in One God, who commits the government of the world to inferior beings, to whom they offer sacrifices. They have temples; but they are neither large nor beautiful, and the images are black and deformed. Captain Hamilton affirms, that the greatest men in this country never live with their wives, till they have had conversation with the priests; and that every woman may have 12 husbands, of her own cast, or tribe; and, when she proves with child, she names the father, who is to take care of its education. Calicut is the principal town.

CALIFORNIA, a peninsula of N. America, lying on the S. Sea, which was formerly supposed to have been an island. It was visited by Sir Francis Drake in 1578, who called it New Albion, and took possession of it in the name of Queen Elizabeth. In summer the heats are very violent along the coasts, for it seldom rains during that season; but up the country the air is more temperate. In winter the rains are excessive; and, when they are over, there is a great dew every morning. It is very healthy; for strangers, who have been there for five years together, never had any sickness. It abounds with wide extended plains, pleasant valleys, and excellent pastures, full of fine springs; the rivers and rivulets are beset with willows, reeds, and wild vines. It abounds with California is a very fruitful country; and there are several trees and plants peculiar to it. They have fourteen sorts of grain, which the inhabitants feed upon; and they make bread of the seeds of trees and plants. Some of the trees, it is said by the Jesuits, bear fruit twice a-year. They have two kinds of four-footed animals peculiar to the country. One of which is about the size of a calf of two years old, with a head like a stag, and horns like a ram; their hair is long, and the hoofs like oxen. The other are a kind of sheep, some white and others black; but they differ from the European in several respects. The other animals are like those of Mexico. The inland country, especially northern, is very populous; but they have no houses, for they live in a sort of arbour, made of the boughs of trees, in summer; and in winter they creep into caves dug in the earth. The men go quite naked; only they have a piece of fine linen about their heads; and they have ornaments made of shells, mixed with little round berries.

berries, about their necks and arms. Their weapons are bows, arrows, and javelins, which they always carry about in their hands; for they are often at war with each other. The women wear a sort of apron made of plaited reeds, and cover their shoulders with the skins of beasts, with a sort of net-work on their heads. They have also neck-laces and bracelets like the men: they make these ornaments of a kind of grass; as also bags for different uses, and fishing-nets: with this grass they also make cups, plates, dishes, and sometimes umbrellas for women. They have no form of government, and but very little religion; for, if they have any, it seems to regard the moon. They are of a red copper colour, with coarse, black hair, and no beard like the rest of the native Americans. The Jesuits pretend they have made many converts here; but this may be doubted, if they are like the Americans in other places. If this country can be said to belong to any, it must be to the Spaniards; because no other people have ever made any stay here.

* CALLAA, a town of Africa, in Barbary, and in the king dom of Tremesen. It is seated on the side of a hill between two mountains, and several rich merchants dwell there.

CALLAO, a sea-port town of S. America, in Peru. The harbour is large, and accounted the best in the South-Sea; for which reason it has a good trade. The governor is sent from Spain, and is changed every five years. It is 5 miles from the city of Lima; but was almost totally destroyed by an earthquake in the year 1745. Lon. 301. o. lat. S. 12. 29.

* CALLA-SUSUNG, a town of Asia, in the Island of Bouton, in the E. Indies. It is a large town, seated within 3 miles of the anchoring place, and about a mile from the sea, on the top of a small hill, in a pleasant plain, encompassed with cocoa-nut-trees. There is a strong stone-wall round the town, and the houses are built upon posts. The religion of the inhabitants is the Mahometan, and they speak the Malayan language. The people are small, well-shaped, and of a dark olive colour. Lon. 141. 20. lat. S. South.

CALLOO, a fortress of the Netherlands, in the territory of Waes, on the river Scheld, and subject to the house of Austria. The Dutch were defeated here by the Spaniards in 1638. It is 5 miles W. of Antwerp. Lon. 22. o. lat. 51. 15.

CALMAR, a strong town of Sweden, in the province of Smaland, with a harbour and a strong castle. It is divided into two towns, the Old and the New; but of the former there remains no more than the church and a few houses. The New town is built a little way from the other, and has large handsome streets. It is near the Baltic Sea, 150 miles S. W. of Stockholm, and 125 N. E. of Copenhagen. Lon. 34. 33. lat. 56. 48.

CALMUCKS, a people of Asia, in Great Tartary, between the rivers Mengul and Wolga. They are of the middle size, robust and well set, with broad heads, flat faces, and olive-coloured complexions. Their eyes are black and sparkling, far asunder, and narrow; the bridge of their noses is so flat, that there is nothing to be seen but a bit at the end, and two nostrils; their ears are very large, their beards thin, and their hair black, and as strong as horse-hair; and the women have the same features, but not so large, and they are well shaped. Their shirts are of a sort of callicoe, and their other garments are of sheep-skins. They don't cultivate the ground, but live upon their cattle and sheep; but they neither touch hogs nor poultry. They are of the Pagan religion; are divided into several hords; live in tents, and wander from place to place in search of food. They have no trade; but traffick for what they want with the Russians.

CALNE, a town of Wiltshire, with a market on Tuesdays, and two fairs, on May 6, for horses, horned cattle, sheep, and cheese; and on August 2, for toys. It is seated on a river of the same name, and is a dirty discontinued place; however, it has a handsome church, and sends CAMA, a considerable river of Russia, in Europe, which falls into the Volga.

* CAMARANA, an island of Arabia, in the Red Sea, whose inhabitants are little and black. It is the most fertile and pleasant island in all the gulph, and here they fish for white coral, and pearl oysters.

* CAMARET, a town of France, in Lower Bretagne, seated on a bay. The English made a descent upon this place in 1694, by which they lost a considerable number of men.

CAMARGUE, a fertile island of France, in Provence, at the mouth of the river Rhone. It is an assemblage of several other islands, separated from each other by channels.

* CAMARINES, a country of Asia, in the island of Luzon, one of the Philippines. Here is a mountain, wherein there are several springs of hot water, one of which petrifies every thing that falls into it.

CAMBATA, or CAMPAY, a town of Asia, in India, and in the peninsula on this side the Ganges, which is capital of a province of the same name: but it is more commonly called Guzarat. It is seated at the bottom of a gulph of the same name on a small river. It is a large place with high walls, and has a pretty good trade, though not half inhabited. The product and manufactures are inferior to few towns in India; for it abounds in corn, cattle, and silk; and cornelian and agate stones are found in its rivers. The inhabitants are noted for embroidery; and some of their quilts have been valued at 40 l. It is subject to the Great Mogul. Lon. 89. o. lat. 22. 30.

CAMBODIA, a kingdom of Asia, in the E. Indies, bounded on the N. by the kingdom of Laos, on the E. by Cochin, China, and Chiapa, and on the S. and W. by the gulph and kingdom of Siam. It is divided by a large river of the same name, by some called Mecon. The capital town is of the same name, seated on the western bank of the said river, about 150 miles N. of its mouth. This country is annually overflowed in the rainy season, between June and October; and its productions and fruits are much the same as those that are usually found between the Tropicks. Lon. 122. 30. lat. 12. 40.

CAMBRAY, a handsome, large, and very strong town of the Netherlands, capital of Cambresis, with an archbishop's see, a citadel, and a fort. It is well built, and stands in a fruitful country, and is considerable for its linen manufactory, and especially cambricks, which took their name from this city. It is looked upon as one of the strongest towns in the Netherlands; and the country about it may be overflowed upon occasion. It was taken by the French from the Spaniards in 1677, and has continued in their hands ever since. It is seated on the river Scheld, which divides it in two, and is 22 miles S. E. of Arras, 15 S. E. of Douay, 17 S. W. of Valenciennes, 15 S. W. of Mons, 40 N. E. of Amiens, and 102 N. of Paris. Lon. 20. 54. lat. 50. 11.

CAMBRESIS, a province of France, in the Netherlands, about 25 miles in length. It is bounded on the N. and E. by Hainhalt, on the S. by Picardy, and on the W. by Artois. It is a very fertile and populous country; and the inhabitants are industrious, active, and ingenious. The trade consists principally in corn, sheep, very fine wool, and fine linen-cloth. Cambray is the capital town.

CAMBRIDGE, the county-town of Cambridgeshire, with the title of a duchy, and an university, which is one of the most ancient and flourishing in Europe, and it is thought to have been founded during the Saxon heptarchy. The town consists of 14 parishes, and is governed by a mayor, recorder, a bailiff, and a town-clerk, 12 aldermen, and 24 common council; and the mayor, when he enters upon his office, takes an oath to maintain the privileges, liberties, and customs of the university, to which he is subservient. Its situation is low, and consequently the air is not so good as that of Oxford. It has a market on Wednesdays and Saturdays, and a very large fair, called Sturbich, is held, about a mile from the town, on September 18, which lasts 14 days, and is famous for hops, leather, wool, cloths, and many other commodities: another fair is held on Midsummer-day, for horses, earthen ware, and wood, which lasts 7 days. The town sends two members to parliament, and there are also two sent by the university. It consists of 16 colleges and halls, and about 1500 students. It has about 2500 middling houses, and the inhabitants are computed at 6000. The streets are generally narrow, tho' pretty well paved, yet lying low, makes them very dirty. In the midst of the marketplace is a very good conduit continually running, and a navigable river runs through the town from Lynn; but it is a dull place for trade. It is 80 miles E. N. E. of Oxford, 55 E. by N. of Buckingham, 28 on the same point from Bedford, 50 E. of Northampton, 81 E. S. E. of Coventry, 17 S. of Ely, and 52 N. by E. of London. Lon. 17. 40. lat. 52. 15.

CAMBRIDGE NEW, a town of New-England, in N. America, 3 miles W. of Boston, and has an university, consisting of three colleges. Lon. 307. 39. lat. 42. 0.

CAMBRIDGE-SHIRE, an inland county of England, 47 miles in length, and 18 in breadth, and is bounded on the E. by Suffolk and Norfolk, on the S. by Essex and Hertfordshire, on the W. by Bedford and Huntingdon shires, and on the N. by Lincoln and part of Nottingham shires. It contains 8 parishes, 10 towns, 163 parishes, 7000 houses, and about 140,000 inhabitants; and it sends 6 members to parliament. The principal river is the Ouse, which runs through the county from W. to E. The air and soil of the S. part is very good; but the N. fenny and aguith; and where there are large wares and meers full of fish. The capital town is Cambridge: besides which there is Ely, a bishop's see.

CAMPELFORD, a town of Cornwall, with a market on Fridays, and four fairs, on Friday after March 10, May 26, July 17, and September 17, for horses, oxen, sheep, cloth, and a few hops. It is seated on the river Camel, and sends 2 members to parliament, and is governed by a mayor, aldermen, and recorder. It has one church, situated half a mile out of the town, and about 100 houses badly built, but the streets are broad and well paved. Here is a large market for yarn; a great quantity of which is spun in this place and its neighbourhood. It is 24 miles W. of Launceston, and 250 W. by S. of London. Lon. 12. 35. lat. 50. 47.

CAMERET BAY is in the province of Brittany, in France, and forms the harbour of Brest, which is a station for the French men of war.

CAMERINO, a town of Italy, in the territory of the Pope, with a bishop's see. It is ancient, strong, and pretty well peopled, seated on a mountain near the Appennines and the river Chiento. It is 25 miles N. E. of Spoleto, and 40 S. W. of Ancona. Lon. 30. 42. lat. 43. 5.

CAMERON CAFF, a promontary on the N. part of the province of Honduras in N. America.

CAMINHA, a sea-port town of Portugal, in the province of Entra Duera e Minho, with the title of a duchy. It is seated at the mouth of the river Minho, 10 miles N. of Viana. Lon. 9. 5. lat. 41. 44.

CAMMIN, a sea-port town of Germany, in Farther Pomerania, seated on the eastern mouth of the river Oder, opposite to the Isle of Wollin, 30 miles N. of Stetin. Lon. 32. 45. lat. 54. 4.

W. by the sea, on the S. by Terra di Lavoro, on the E. by Abruzzo, and on N. by Sabina. Though the soil is good, it produces little or nothing, on account of the heavy duties upon corn; and though the waters are good, the air is unwholesome. It is subject to the Pope, and is about 60 miles in length on the Mediterranean Sea.

CAMPBELLTON, a parliament town of Scotland, with a harbour. It is seated on the eastern coast of Cantire, in the shire of Argyle, 10 miles W. of the Isle of Arran. Lon. 12. 25. lat. 53. 35.

CAMPDEN, a town in Gloucestershire, with a market on Wednesdays, and four fairs, on Ath-Wednesday, April 23, July 26, and November 3, for horses, cows, sheep, linen cloth, and stockings. It is a large but poor town, and contains about 200 houses. It gives title to a viscount, and sends two members to parliament. It is 22 miles S. E. of Worcester, 22 N. E. of Gloucester, and 87 N. W. by W. of London. Lon. 15. 45. lat. 52. 0.

CAMPEACHY, a town of S. America, in New-Spain, in the peninsula of Yucatan, on the western coast of the Bay of Campeachy, defended by good walls and strong forts. It is not so rich nor trading a town as formerly, and is noted for logwood, though it does not grow very near it. It was taken by the English in 1659, by the Buccaneers in 1678, and by the Freebooters of St. Domingo in 1685, who burnt it, and blew up the citadel. Lon. 287. 0. lat. 19. 20.

CAMPEN, a strong town of the United Provinces, in Overijssel, with a citadel, and a harbour almost cloaked up with sand. It was taken by the Dutch in 1578, and by the French in 1672; but they abandoned it the following year. It is seated near the mouth of the river Yssel and Zuider Zee, 20 miles N. W. of Deventer, and 4 N. E. of Amsterd. Lon. 23. 28. lat. 52. 38.

* CAMPINE, a territory of the Netherlands, partly in the United Provinces, and partly in the bishopric of Liege.

* CAMPION, a town of Asia, in Tartary, often mentioned by travellers who have gone from Persia to China; but our latest and best maps take no notice of it; however, some place it 55 miles from the Clinckfe-Wall. Lon. 122. 30. lat. 40. 25.

* CAMPOLI, or CAMPOLI, a town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in the Farther Abruzzo, 28 miles N. by E. of Aquila. Lon. 31. 30. lat. 42. 38.

* CAMPO BASSO, a town of Italy, in the Capitanata, which is rich and populous, and where there is held a famous fair.

CAMPO MAJOR, a town of Portugal, in the province of Alentejo, 10 miles N. of Elvas, 27 N. W. of Badajoz, and 100 E. of Lisbon. It has strong walls and a castle. Lon. 11. 17. lat. 38. 50.

* CAMPO SANTO, a place of Italy, in the duchy of Modena, lying on the left bank of the river Panaro, and remarkable for a battle fought there in 1743 between the Spaniards and Austrians.

CAMPREDON, a town of Spain, in Catalonia, seated at the foot of the Pyrenean Mountains. The fortifications were demolished by the French in 1697. It is seated on the river Ter, 50 miles N. of Barcelona. Lon. 18. 0. lat. 42. 20.

* CAMRAS, a village in Pembrokeshire, 3 miles N. W. of Haverford-West, with two fairs, on February 15, and November 12, for cattle, horses, and sheep.

* CAMUL, a town of Asia, standing on the eastern extremity of the kingdom of Cialis, on the frontiers of Tangut, in Tartary. Lon. 115. 40. lat. 37. 15.

CANADA, or NEW FRANCE, a large country of N. America, which, according to the French, is bounded on the W. by the Ocean, on the S. by Mississippi, on the E. by the English colonies, and on the N. by the river St. Lawrence and the territory of the Hudson's-Bay company. It was discovered by John and Sebastian Cabot, father and son, in 1497. This country in general is pretty good; but the winter continues for six months very severe. The land that is cleared of trees is very fertile, and the wheat that is sowed in May is reaped the latter end of August. Pulse in general, and especially pease, thrive very well, and are very good. The woods are full of wild vines, game, and animals peculiar to N. America; but the beaver is the most useful and curious of them all. The rivers and lakes are full of fish, and there are a great number of trees unknown in Europe. Canada is esteemed for its balsamic qualities, qualities, and for the disorders of the breast and stomach. The original natives of this country speak four different languages, and may be divided into as many different tribes, viz. the Sioufe, the Algeriere, the Houtonne, and that of the Ekimaux. Most of them live in a wandering life, and maintain themselves by hunting. Their complexion is of red copper colour, like the rest of the Americans, with coarse hair, and no beards, except the Ekimaux, who are a hairy, cruel, savage nation. They are very fond of brandy, and, when they are drunk, they become almost mad. They all seem to worship the sun, and acknowledge tutelary gods as well as the First Being. Their wars are bloody, and at present they make use of firearms. The French inhabitants are about 30,000, who have a governor, an intendant, and a bishop. Quebec is the capital town; which was taken by the English on the 13th of September in the year 1759; at the siege of which the brave General Wolfe lost his life, but not before he perceived that the English forces were victorious.

• CANAL ROYAL, or, The Canal of Languedoc, so called, because it passes thro' the S. part of Languedoc, and maintains a communication between the Mediterranean and the Ocean. It is 170 miles long, 30 feet wide, and is a wonderful work; but that which is most surprising is the place called Malpas, where a very hard rock is pierced through, to make a passage for the water. This canal was begun in 1666, and finished in 1681.

• CANANOR, a large maritime town of Asia, on the coast of Malabar, in a kingdom of the same name, with a very large and safe harbour. It formerly belonged to the Portuguese, and had a strong fort to guard it; but in 1683, the Dutch, together with the natives, drove them away; and, after they became masters of the town, enlarged the fortifications. They have but a very small trade; but there is a town at the bottom of the bay independent of the Dutch, whose prince can bring 20,000 men into the field. The Dutch fort is large, and the governor's lodgings are at a good distance from the gate; so that when there was a skirmish between the factory and the natives, he knew nothing of it till it was over. Lon. 95. 45. lat. 12. 0.

raise a considerable army. The natives are generally Mahometans, and the country produces pepper, cardamoms, ginger, murobolans, and tamarinds, which they drive a considerable trade.

• CANARA, a kingdom of Aita, on the coast of Malabar. The inhabitants are Gentoos, or Pagans; and there is a pagod, or temple, called Ramtrut, which is visited every year by a great number of pilgrims. Sometimes they carry the image in procession, which is more like a monkey than a man; and it is put in a vehicle like a tower, 15 feet high, at which time the streets are prodigiously crowded with people, who come to behold the ceremony. Here the custom of burning the wives with their husbands had its beginning, and is practiced to this day. This country is generally governed by a woman, who keeps her court at a town called Baydor, two days journey from the sea. She may marry whom she pleases, and is not obliged to burn with her husband, like her female subjects. They are such observers of their laws, that a robbery or murder is scarce ever heard of among them. None but the principal men are suffered to ride upon horses, mules, or elephants; and therefore the common people make use of oxen, or buffaloes. The Canarins have forts built of earth along the coast, which are garrisoned with 2 or 300 soldiers, to guard against the robberies of their neighbours. The lower grounds yield every year two crops of corn or rice; and the higher produce pepper, betel nuts, sandal wood, iron, and steel. The Portuguese clergy here live shameless lives, and make no scruple of procuring women for strangers.

CANARY-ISLANDS, were anciently called the Fortunate Islands, and are seven in number, lying in the Atlantic Ocean, near the continent of Africa. Their names are, Palma, Ferro, (from which the Longitude in this treatise is taken) Gomera, Teneriff, the Grand Canary, Fuerteventura, and Lancerota; to which may be added several smaller isles, as Graciosa, Roccas, Allegranza, St. Clare, Inferno, and Lobos. They belong to the Spaniards, and produce barley, sugar-canes, and excellent wine; and it is from thence that the Canary birds originally came. Lon. from 0. 5. to 5. 0. lat. from 27. 30. to 29. 30.

It abounds in corn, wine, fruit, cattle, and game, besides oxen, camels, goats, sheep, capons, hens, ducks, pigeons, and large partridges; but it is in want of wood. The capital town is of the same name. Lon. 2. 15. lat. 28. 4.

* CANARY, OF CIUDAD DI PALMAS, the capital town of the Grand Canary with a bishop's see, a tribunal of the Inquisition, and the Supreme Council of the Seven Islands. The castle is seated on a hill, but is very mean and despicable. Most of the houses are well built, two stories high, and flat-roofed, and the cathedral is very handsome. The inhabitants are gay and rich; and, as the soil is sandy, the streets are always very clean. The air is very temperate, and free from the extremes of heat and cold. They have two wheat harvests, in February and May, and the corn makes bread as white as snow. They have also 12 sugar-houses, in which a great quantity of sugar is made. The wine called Palm-Sack has its name from hence, as well as common sack, often termed Canary. It is computed that 70,000 hogheads are sent annually from hence to England in time of peace. The original inhabitants had no resemblance, either in language, manners, or customs, to their neighbours on the continents of Europe or Africa, and their complexion was of an olive colour. The French have a consul at this place. Lon. 2. 15. lat. 28. 4.

CANCALE, a town of France, in Upper Brittany, by the sea-side, where there is a road. It was here the English landed in 1758, in their way to St. Maloes, where they burnt a great number of ships in the harbour, and then retired without loss. This town was in their power; but they acted like generous enemies, and did no hurt to this nor any other town on the coast. It is 8 miles E. of St. Maloes, and 200 W. of Paris. Lon. 15. 48. lat. 48. 41.

CANDAHAR, a very rich, trading town of Asia, and capital of a province of the same name, in India, with 2 citadels. This is almost the only passage from Persia to India by land, and now belongs to Persia. It is extremely strong by situation, and is furrounded on all sides by fens and rocks. Lon. 85. 0. lat. 33. 0.

* CANDAHAR, a province of Asia, bounded on the N. by Balk, on the E. by the province of Cabul, on the S. by that of Bukor and Sageshan, and on the W. by other provinces of Persia.

CANDIA, an island in the Mediterranean, formerly called Crete, and lies to the S. of the Archipelago. The capital town is of the same name, which, though populous formerly, is now little better than a desert, there being nothing but rubbish, except at the Bazar or market-place; likewise the harbour of Candia is now fit for nothing but boats: however, the walls of the town are yet standing, which are pretty strong; and it is the see of a Greek archbishop. Here are some Greeks, a few Jews, and some Armenians, besides three or four French families, with a vice-consul. It was taken by the Turks in 1669, after above a three years siege. It was attempted to be retaken by the Venetians in 1692, but without effect. The product of this island is corn, wine, oil, wool, silk, and excellent honey. The air is good, as well as the water; and it is chiefly inhabited by Greeks, who bear a very good character. It is divided into three parts, the principal of which is Candia, where the Beglerbey resides; the second is Canea, where there is a Bashaw; and the third is that of Retimo, where there is another Bashaw. Mount Ida, so famous in history, is in the middle of this island, and is nothing but a huge, overgrown, ugly, sharp-pointed eminence, with not the least shadow of a landscape; no delightful grotto, no publick spring, nor no purling rivulet are to be seen thereon. It is about 200 miles in length, 50 in breadth, and 500 in circumference. It is 1250 miles from Marseilles, 500 from Constantinople, 325 from Dalmatia, in Egypt, and 250 from the Island of Cyprus. Lon. 42. 58. lat. 35. 20.

CANDISH, a considerable province of Asia, in the dominions of the Great Mogul, bounded by Chitor and Malva on the N. Orisa on the E. Decan on the S. and Guzarat on the W. It is populous and rich, and abounds in cotton, rice, and indigo. Brampore is the capital town.

through which the roads and paths are narrow and difficult, the king has them guarded, to prevent his subjects from going into other countries. It is full of hills, from whence rivulets proceed which are full of fish; but as they run among the rocks, they are not fit for boats: however, the inhabitants are very dexterous in turning them to water their land, which is fruitful in rice, pulse, and hemp. The king is absolute, and his subjects are idolaters. The capital town is of the same name.

CANDY, a town of Asia, and capital of a kingdom of the same name, in the Island of Ceylon. It has been often burnt by the Portuguese when they were masters of these coasts. The houses are very poor, low, and badly furnished. Lon. 98. 30. lat. 7. 35.

CANEA, a strong and considerable town of the Island of Candia, where a Bashaw resides. It is inhabited by 1500 Turks, 2000 Greeks, some Jews, and a few French merchants, with their consul. The harbour is pretty good; but the fortifications are much out of repair. The environs of the town are admirable; being adorned with forests of olive trees mixed with fields, vineyards, gardens, and brooks bordered with myrtle-trees and laurel-roses. The chief revenue of this town consists in oil olive. Lon. 4. 43. lat. 35. 28.

* CANELLE, or CANE-LAND, a large country in the Island of Ceylon, called formerly the Kingdom of Cota. It contains a great number of cantons, the principal of which are occupied by the Dutch. The chief riches of this country consists in cinnamon, of which there are large forests. There are five towns on the coast, some forts, and a great number of harbours. The rest of the countries are inhabited by the natives; and there are several rich mines, from whence they get rubies, sapphires, topazes, cats-eyes, and several other precious stones.

CANETO, a strong town of Italy, in the dutchy of Mantua, seated on the river Oglio, which was taken by the Imperialists in 1701; by the French in 1702; afterwards by the Imperialists; and then by the French in 1705. It is 20 miles W. of Mantua, and 17 E. of Cremona. Lon. 27. 55. lat. 40. 55.

They may be seen between the mouth of the river Ofanto and the town Camosa. It was rendered famous by Hannibal, who here vanquished the Romans, and killed 40,000 men, among whom were a great number of Roman knights.

* CANNES, a town of France, in Provence, and in the viguerie of Grasse, seated on the coast of the Mediterranean Sea, with a harbour and a castle. It is 5 miles W. of Antibes. Lon. 24. 42. lat. 43. 34.

* CANO, a kingdom of Africa, in Negroeland, with a town of the same name. It is bounded by Zaara on the N. by the river Niger on the S. the kingdom of Agades on the W. and that of Cassina on the E. Some of the inhabitants are herdsmen, and others till the ground and dwell in villages. It produces corn, rice, and cotton. Here are also many deserts, and mountains covered with woods, in which are wild citrons, and lemon-trees. The walls and houses of the town are made of clay, and the principal inhabitants are merchants. It is 700 miles S. of Tripoli in Barbary. Lon. 33. 50. lat. 21. 5.

 - * CANTECROIX, a small territory of the Netherlands, in Brabant, and in the quarter of Antwerp, with the title of a principality; there is a town of the same name, but Lire is the capital.
- CANTERBURY, the capital town or city of the county of Kent, with an archbishop's see, founded by Augustine the monk. The cathedral is a large superb structure, and was once very famous for the shrine of Thomas Becket. Besides this it has 14 parish churches, and there are the remains of a great many Roman antiquities. Here is a castle much like that at Rochester, and the walls are of the same thickness; there are also walls round the town, with a deep ditch close underneath, and a great rampart of earth within. In general it is a large, populous, trading place, and has a good silk manufactory, which was introduced by the Walloons in the reign of Q. Elizabeth. It has two markets, on Wednesdays and Saturdays, and one fair, on September 29, for toys. It sends two members to parliament, and is seated on the river Stour, 15 miles N. W. by W. of Dover, 26 S. E. by E. of Rochester, and 50 on the same point from London. Lon. 18. 50. lat. 51. 16.

- CANTIRE, a peninsula of Scotland, stretching into the Irish sea, and which lies W. of the Isle of Arran.

- CANTON, a large, populous, wealthy city and sea-port town of the province of Quantong in China. It is seated on the banks of one of the finest rivers in the empire, and it is deep enough for large vessels to come up to this place, where all the curiosities of China are brought. They have manufactures of their own, especially in silk stuffs, and the number of tradesmen is incredible. It yields a fine prospect going up the river, being almost surrounded with green fields mixed with pleasant groves and little hills one above another. It consists of three towns, divided by very high walls, and is about as large as Paris. The streets are long and strait, are paved with flagstones, and adorned with several triumphal arches. There are also Bazars, or covered market-places, full of shops. The houses are only a ground floor, built with earth, or ornamented with bricks, and covered with tiles; however, the shops give it a very neat look. The better sort of people are carried about in chairs; but the common sort walk bare-footed and bare-headed; and their goods are carried by porters, for they have no waggons. At the end of every street there is a barrier, which is shut up every evening, as well as the gates of the city; so that people are obliged to be at home early. The river is covered with barks, which have apartments in them for families, where many live and die. The number of inhabitants is computed at 1,000,000. Lon. 230. 5. lat. 25. 20.

CAPE-COAST CASTLE, a fortress of Africa, on the coast of Guinea, and the chief that the English have in these parts. It is a strong place, and furnished with good rooms, and makes a handsome appearance, having a turret on the top. Very near there is a round tower, seated on a hill, and furnished with great guns. Just by the castle is a negro town, which is the best built of any upon the coast: however, the inhabitants here, as well as in other parts, go quite naked, except a clout or cloth, to cover what decency obliges them to hide. Lon. 17. 10. lat. 4. 40.

CAPE OF GOOD-HOPE, the South extremity of Africa, first discovered by the Portuguese. It is now in the hands of the Dutch, who have built a good town and fort here; and it is the capital of the settlements among the Hottentots, and inhabited by Dutch and French refugees, who have made it a delightful place, with charming gardens, full of fruit trees of various kinds, as well as kitchen herbs, and very beautiful flowers. The Hottentots are reckoned the nastiest people in the known world, and they have little or no religion. They are not so black as the negroes, and yet appear so, because they daub themselves with grease mixed with foot. All their dress consists in a skin which they throw over their shoulders, and a clout to hide their nakedness; but the women are provided with one by nature, of a considerable length, and in this they differ from all other women in the world. They have many strange customs, that are too long to enumerate: however, I shall mention one or two. They deprive all the males of one testicle, for which they can give no reason, except custom. At a wedding all the company, both men and women, sit in a ring, and one of their old men besprinkles each with his urine. The girls, from their infancy to 12 years of age, wear bull-rushes tied in rings about their legs, from the knee to the ankle, and after that they are changed for rings made of the skins of sheep, or calves, and some grown women have above 100 of these upon each leg, one above another: these some superficial travellers have taken for guts. They are very fond, like other savages, of necklaces and bracelets, which are of much better materials than before the Europeans came among them; for now their beads are either of brass or glass. The men always distinguish themselves by the bladders of the wild beasts they have killed, and they blow them up and fasten them to their hair. They are so nasty in their eating, that they greedily devour the guts of their animals without emptying them. They have a great many animals, fruits, and vegetables, to be found in no other place, or not far from thence. The rhinoceroses have two horns on their noses, one above another; whereas those of Asia have but one. Sea or river horses are common, and they have some resemblance to an elephant in the form of the legs, and in their hides, which are without hair; and, with regard to shape he resembles a rhinoceros; he has four tuks, that is, two on each side, the one crooked, the other straight, which are as large as oxen horns, being a foot and a half long, and of the weight of ten pounds: this far surpasses ivory for all curious works. The afs is one of the most beautiful creatures ever seen; for the body, neck, legs, and indeed all other parts, are adorned with stripes of several colours. They have several kinds of goats of divers colours, and a sort of an elk, with straight horns, and without branches; with many other curious animals which we have not room to describe. The English were once in possession of this country, which they afterwards abandoned for St. Helena. In short, in this settlement there is great plenty of excellent wines, corn, and fruits; as also cattle, venison, poultry, and fish, which render it a delightful place to dwell in. The principal inconvenience is the violent storms they are subject to, both in winter and summer. Lon. 37. 44. lat. S. 34. 40.

- * CAPRAROLA, one of the most magnificent palaces in Italy, is seated on a hill, in Ronciglione, whose foot is watered by the river Tircia. It was built by cardinal Farnese, and has five fronts, in the middle of which is a round court, and yet all the rooms are square, and well-proportioned. It is 27 m. N.W. of Rome.
- * CAPRI, an island of the Mediterranean in the kingdom of Naples, and in the Hither Principato, over against Sorrento, famous for being the retreat of the Emperor Tiberius. A vast quantity of quails come here every year, which make the principal revenue of the bishop, who is hence called the Bishop of Quails. It is five miles in length, and two in breadth, and is 3 miles S. of Viterbo, and 2 N. of Rome. Capri is the capital town.
- * CAPRI, a town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in an island of the same name, with a bishop's see, and a strong castle garrisoned by the inhabitants. It was once a delightful place, and embellished with variety of magnificent works, which were demolished after the death of Tiberius. Lon. 31. 41. lat. 40. 31.
- * CAPUA, a town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in the Terra-di-Lavoro, with an archbishop's see. It is 2 miles from the ancient Capua, and was built out of its ruins. It is the place where Hannibal and his officers trilled away their time in pleasures, during which the Romans recovered from their consternation after the battle of Cannæ. It was taken by the Allied army in 1707; and is seated on the river Volturno, 15 miles N. of Naples, 25 W. of Benevento, and 95 S. of Rome. Lon. 31. 55. lat. 41. 7.
- * CAPUL, an island in Asia, and one of the Philippines, 8 miles in compass. It is both fertile and pleasant.
- * CARACAS, CARACOS, or ST. JOHN DE LEON, a considerable town of S. America, in Terra Firma, and in the province of Venezuela. It is rich, and situated in a plain abounding in cattle, and coconuts, of which chocolate is made. It was plundered by the French in 1679. Lon. 312. 35. lat. 9. 40.
- * CARAMANIA, a considerable province of Turkey in Asia, and in the S. part of Natolia. Most of the houses have turnets for contrived, as to cool the rooms in summer. Satalia is the capital town.
- * CARAMANTA, a town in S. America, capital of a province of the same name, in the audience of Santa Fe, and in Terra Firma. Lon. 305. 0. lat. 5. 28.

- * CARAMANTA, a province of S. America, which lies on both sides the river Cauca; and is bounded on the N. by the district of Carthagená, on the E. by New Granada, on the S. by Popayan, and on the W. by the same, and by the audience of Panama. It is a valley surrounded by high mountains, and there are rivulets from whence the natives get very good salt.

CARARA, a small town of Italy, in the dutchy of Massa, between the town of Massa and Sarzana, and five miles from each. Near this place there are several quarries of marble, of divers colours, from whence it probably took its name. It is seated in a handsome plain, three miles from the sea. Lon. 27. 45. lat. 44. 1.

CARASU-MESTRO, a river of Romania, in Turkey, which takes its rise in Mount Rhodolpho, and it falls into the Archipelago.

CARASU, a river of Natolia, in Asia, which rises in Great Caramania, crosses part of Aladula, and at length falls into the Mediterranean Sea. The water of this river is so cold, that when Alexander the Great bathed in it, it threw him into a dangerous disease. The emperor Barbarossa was killed by it on his return from the Holy-Land, in the year 1100.

- * CARASUI, a famous lake in Eulgaría, and in the country of the Dobusian-Tartars. It is said to be 55 miles in circumference, and to contain several small islands. It is formed by a branch of the Danube, not far from the place where it falls into the Black Sea.

- * CARAVACCA, or, THE CROSS OF CARAVACCA, is a town of Spain, seated among the mountains near the river Segura in Murcia, on the confines of Andalusía and New Castile. They pretend to have a cross here, which was brought by an angel to a priest, who was going to say mass to a Moorish king; therefore it is no wonder that it should perform miracles. It is 50 miles N. W. of Carthagená. Lon. 15. 30. lat. 38. 5.

CARAVANS generally consist of a great number of merchants, with their camels and horses, on which they carry their merchandize to distant countries. They chiefly travel in this manner for their mutual defence, especially when they pass over the Deserts of Arabia and Africa: however, there are some who go from Russia to China, from Persia to India, and many other places, in all which it would be dangerous to travel in small companies.

CARAVANSARAYS, are a sort of public inns built on great roads, for the accommodation of caravans; which are the more necessary, because there is no inns for passengers as in Europe. Some of these are very magnificent; and there are people who attend, to accommodate travellers: however there is no furniture, and in some places there are no other provisions but what the caravans bring along with them. There are many of these in the great towns of Asia and Africa, especially in the Turkish and Persian dominions. They are generally built in the form of a square, and round a quadrangle, like a college.

CARCASSONE, an ancient and considerable town of France, in Lower Languedoc, with a bishop's see. It is divided into the Higher and Lower town by the river Aude. In the Upper there is a strong castle and the cathedral church. The Lower is almost square, and very regularly built. They have manufactures of all sorts of cloth, which makes the inhabitants very rich. It is seated on the river Aude, 15 miles W. of Narbonne, 48 S. E. of Toulouze, 37 N. E. of Foix, and 400 S. of Paris. Lon. 20. 1. lat. 43. 11.

CARDIFF, a town of S. Wales, in Glamorganshire, with two markets, on Wednesdays and Saturdays, and three fairs, on June 29, September 8, and November 30, for cattle. It is seated on the river Tawe, over which there is a handsome bridge, and is a large, compact, well-built town, having a castle, a wall, and four gates. It has a considerable trade with Bristol; for vessels of small burden can come to the bridge. At present it has but one church, the water having destroyed the other. The constable of the castle is the chief magistrate, whom they call mayor; besides him, there are two bailiffs, a recorder, 12 aldermen, 12 common-councilmen, 2 serjeants at mace, and 8 constables. It contains 2 parishes, and about CARDIGAN, a principal town of Cardigan-shire in S. Wales, with a market on Saturdays, and four fairs, viz. on Feb. 13, and April 5, for small horses and pedlar's ware; Sept. 8, and Nov. 19, for the same and cattle. It is pleasantly situated on the river Tivy, over which there is a handsome stone bridge with several arches. It is the shire town where the assizes are held, and the county goal kept. The shire-hall is well built; and it has but one church. It sends one member to parliament, and has the title of an earldom. It is 33 miles N. E. by E. of St. David's, 36 N. of Pembroke, and 138 W. N. W. of London. Lon. 12. 55. lat. 52. 15.

• CARDIGANSHIRE, a county in S. Wales, 42 m. in length, and 20 in breadth, being upon the coast of the Irish sea, which bounds it on the W. Radnorshire is on the E. and Merionethshire on the N. and Carmarthenshire on the S. The air is more pleasant, and milder here than in other parts of Wales: and to the W. and S. there are plains fruitful in corn. It contains 3150 houses, 35380 inhabitants, 64 parishes, and 4 market-towns; and sends one member to parliament. There are several small rivers, which, rising in the mountains, fall into the sea, but the Tivy is the principal. It abounds with veins of lead and silver ore; a ton of which last will yield 70 or 80 ounces of silver. The mines have been worked several times to great advantage; and particularly Sir Hugh Middleton cleared 2000l. a month for several years together, which enabled him to bring the New River water to London. Some private adventurers have attempted to work them, but have failed for want of a sufficient stock. An ancient British writer has affirmed there were beavers in this country; but he bestowed this name on otters, as some natural historians have done, for there are now plenty of these animals to be found near the river.

CARDONA, a handsome strong town of Spain, in Catalonia, with a strong castle, and the title of a duchy. Near it there is an inexhaustible mountain of salt of several colours, as red, white, carnation, and green; but when washed it becomes white. Nothing can be more pleasant to behold than this mountain when the sun shines upon it. There are also vineyards which produce excellent wine, and very lofty pine-trees. It is seated on an eminence near the river Cardenero, 37 miles N. E. of Taragona, and 37 S. W. of Barcelona. Lon. 19. 10. Lat. 41. 42.

Nevis, and several smaller, belong to the English; Hispaniola, to the Spaniards and French; Cuba, which is the largest, to the Spaniards; Martinico, to the French; Eustatia, to the Dutch; besides many others as will be taken notice of in their proper places.

CARIBBEES, the original inhabitants of the Caribbee Islands, who are now almost rooted out, except in some that are not possessed by the Europeans. They have generally been accounted cannibals or men-eaters, but very falsely. They are of a melancholy, thoughtful, and idle disposition, and generally live a long while. They are of a copper colour, with long black coarse hair, and beardless, like the rest of the native Americans. They went stark naked before the coming of the Europeans; but now those that live the same islands with them are a more modest. They have several laws without any regard to confanguinity; but as for their religion it is hard to say what it is.

CARIBEANA, now called PARIA, or NEW ANDALUSIA, a country in S. America: the inhabitants have much the same customs as the Caribbees.

CARIGNANO, a town of Piedmont in Italy, with the title of a principality. It is in a district of the same name, which is very fertile and pleasant. It was taken by the French in 1544, who demolished the fortifications, but spared the castle. It was also taken and retaken in 1691; and is seated on the river Po, 8 miles S. of Turin, and 15 S. E. of Pignerol. Lon. 25. 20. Lat. 44. 45.

CARINTHIA, a province of Germany, in the dominions of Austria, with the title of a duchy. It is bounded on the N. by Austria, on the E. by Styria, on the S. by Carniola and Friuli, and on the W. by Tirol, and the archbishoprick of Salzburg. It produces no wine, but abounds in corn, and the greatest part belongs to the house of Austria; the rest to the bishop of Bamberg, the count of Ungnad, and the archbishop of Salzburg. Clagenfurt is the capital town.

CARIPOUS, a people of S. America, inhabiting a country to the N. of the river of the Amazons, who are always at war with the Caribbees. They are brisk, bold, courageous, and very well disposed, considering they are savages.

CARLISLE, a town or city of Cumberland, of which it is capital, with a market on Saturdays; and four fairs, viz. Aug. 26, for horned cattle and Linen; Sept. 19, for horses and horned cattle; and on the first and second Saturdays after Oct. 10, for Scotch horned cattle. It is a place of great antiquity, and is seated at the confluence of several rivers, which almost encompass it. The river Peterill being on the E. Cauda on the W. and Eden on the N. which soon after falls into the sea. It is surrounded with walls, and fortified with a castle, which stands on the West side of the town: the houses are well-built, and the cathedral church is a stately structure, with curious workmanship. It is a place of some trade in fustians, and sends two members to parliament. The gates are called Irish, English, and Scotch. It is 60 miles S. of Edinburgh, 70 N. of Lancaster, and 301 N. N. W. of London. Lon. 11. 5. Lat. 54. 45. The Piets, or Roman wall, runs from hence to Newcastle, of which there are still some remains, and from which it is 60 miles distant to the W. and from Berwick-upon-Tweed 80 S. W. It was possessed by the rebels in 1745, and was retaken by the D. of Cumberland 25 days afterwards, that is Dec. 10.

Brecknock and Glamorganshires on the E. and Pembrokeshire on the W. It is fruitful in corn and grass, having many pleasant and rich meadows; and it has also wood, coal, and sea-fish, especially salmon, which is exceeding good. The air is pretty mild and wholesome, it not being so mountainous as other counties. It contains 2765 houses, 16590 inhabitants, 145 parishes, 8 market-towns, and sends two members to parliament, one for the county, and one for the shire town. It is watered with several rivers and small streams. The chief town is Carmarthen.

* CARMEL, a high mountain in Palestine, noted for being the retreat of the prophet Elias, and a monastery of Carmelites. It is covered with shrubs and groves, which shelter game of every kind; about it there are several villages belonging to the Arabs.

CARMON, a town of Italy in Friuli, and in the county of Goritz, seated on a mountain near the river Indri. It belongs to the house of Austria, and is 7 miles N. W. of Goritz. Lon. 31. 8. lat. 46. 15.

CARMONA, an ancient town of Spain in Andalusia. The gate, which is towards Seville, is one of the most extraordinary pieces of antiquity in all Spain. It is seated in a fertile country, 15 miles E. of Seville. Lon. 12. 52. lat. 37. 24.

CARNARVON, a town of Carnarvonshire in N. Wales, with a market on Saturdays, and four fairs, viz. on Feb. 25, May 16, Aug. 4, and Dec. 5, for cattle and pedlar's ware. It is commodiously seated on the sea-shore, and has a prospect into the Isle of Anglesea: it is a place of great strength, as well by nature as art, being surrounded on all sides, except the E. with the sea and two rivers. It had a strong castle, which is now in ruins; and has only one parish church, but the houses and streets are tolerably handsome. It has the title of an earldom, and sends one member to parliament: is governed by the constable of the castle, who, by patent, is always mayor. It is 7 miles S. W. of Bangor, 18 S. W. of Aberconway, and 251 N. W. of London. Lon. 13. 10. lat. 53. 20.

* CARNARVONSHIRE, a county of N. Wales, 50 miles in length, 13 in breadth, and bounded on the N. and W. by the sea, on the S. by Merionethshire, and on the E. by Denbighshire. The air is sharp and cold, it being full of high mountains, lakes, and rocks; however, there are several fruitful bottoms and pleasant valleys, which feed sheep, cattle, and goats; and its rivers are full of fish. It contains 2765 houses, 16790 inhabitants, 63 parishes, and 6 market-towns. The highest mountain is called Snowden-Hill, which is boggy on the top, and has two lakes full of fish. The sheep, which feed on the sides of it, yield the sweetest mutton in Wales. It sends two members to parliament, one for the county, and one for Carnarvon, which is the principal town. * CAR-

- CARNERO, the name of a part of the Gulph of Venice, which extends from the western side of Istria to the island of Groffa, and to the coasts of Morlakkia.
- CARNIA, a province of Turkey in Europe, in Lower Albania, called Alfos Despotat.
- CARNIOLA, a considerable province of Germany, in the territories of the house of Austria, bounded on the N. by Carinthia and Styria, on the E. by Slavonia and Croatia, on the S. by Morlakkia and Istria, and on the W. by Friuli. It is full of rocks and mountains, and yet produces corn, wine, and oil. Laubach is the capital town.
- CAROLINA, a large country of N. America, comprehending N. and S. Carolina and Georgia, which are English settlements. It is bounded on the N. by Virginia, on the E. by the ocean, on the S. by Spanish Florida, and on the W. by Louisiana, lying between 30 and 35 degrees N. Lat. The chief produce is tobacco, indigo, and rice; but they are attempting to breed silk worms for the production of silk. They have a much more extensive trade than formerly, and it is still capable of great improvements. The animals, trees, fruits, and plants, are much the same as in Virginia; such as a wild animal resembling a bull, with very long hair, short legs, large bodies, and great bunches on their backs near the shoulders. Their horns are black and short, and they have a great beard under their muzzels, and so much hair on their heads, that it hides their eyes, which gives them a hideous look. They have bears, whose flesh is esteemed good eating; and they make hams of their legs. Besides these they have cat-a-mountains, wild cats, wolves, a sort of tygers, beavers, otters, musk-rats, possums, raccoons, minxes, water-rats, a kind of rabbits, elks, different from the European, stags, fallow deer, several sorts of squirrels, foxes, and two sorts of rats. The birds are so numerous, that it would be tedious even to mention their names, as well belonging to the land as water; and there are many sorts of fish, quite unknown in these parts of the world. Their fruits and trees are much the same as in Virginia, and they have some of the best kind of fruits transplanted from Europe, which thrive very well. The native Americans are of the same shape, colour, and stature, as in other parts of America; they being all of a red cop-

- CARPATHIAN MOUNTAINS, are those which divide Hungary and Transylvania from Poland.
- CARPENTER LAND, a country of Asia to the S. of New Guiney, and in New Holland, of which we know but little. The natives are all blacks, and paint their bodies; but whether for ornament or terror is uncertain. They have the worst features of any people in the world yet known: they are much tormented with flies, and, perhaps, on that account keep them almost shut. Their hair is frizzled, and all that have been yet seen, want two of their fore teeth. They live chiefly on shell-fish, which they get on the shore; and they have no houses, or at least none that the sailors could see.
- CARPENTRAS, a town of France in Provence, and capital of Venaissin, with a bishop's see, and a Jewish synagogue. It is subject to the pope, and is seated on the river Aupon, at the foot of a mountain, 12 miles S. E. of Orange, and 12 N. E. of Avignon. Lon. 22. 43. lat. 44. 4.

CARRICK-FERGUS, a town of Ireland, in the county of Antrim and province of Ulster, which is a borough and market-town, and is a very rich and populous place, with a good harbour and a castle, and which sends two members to parliament. It is seated on a bay of the Irish channel of the same name: is 14 miles E. of Antrim, and 85 N. of Dublin. Lon. 11. 20. lat. 54. 45.

CARS, or KARS, a considerable and strong town of Asia in Armenia, or Turcomania, seated on a river of the same name, with a fortified castle, which is almost impregnable. It is 120 miles N. E. of Erzerum, and 100 S. of Trabifond. Lon. 61. 35. lat. 41. 30.

* CARSCHI, a large town of Asia in Tartary, and in Bokaria. It is seated in a very fertile country, and is a very populous trading place.

CARTAMA, a town of Spain in the kingdom of Granada, which was formerly pretty considerable. It is seated at the foot of a mountain near the river Guadala-medina, 8 miles N. W. of Malaga, and 25 S. W. of Antequera. Lon. 13. 5. lat. 36. 40.

CARTESURA, a town of Asia in the East-Indies, and capital of the empire of Java, in an island of the same name.

CARTERET, a county of N. America, in S. Carolina.

CARTHAGENA, a famous sea-port town of Spain in the kingdom of Murcia, and capital of a territory of the same name. It was built by Asdrubal, a Carthaginian general, and was named after Carthage. It has the best harbour in all Spain, but it has nothing very considerable; for the bishop's see is transferred to Toledo. It was taken by Sir John Leek in 1706, but the duke of Berwick retook it afterwards. It is seated on a gulph of the same name, 27 miles S. of Murcia. Lon. 17. 6. lat. 37. 36.

CARTHAGENA, a large, rich, and strong town of S. America, and capital of a province of the same name on the coast of Terra Firma, with a bishop's see, and one of the best harbours in America. The entrance into this is so narrow that only one ship can enter at a time; and it is defended by three forts. All the revenues of the K. of Spain from New Granada and Terra Firma, are brought here; besides, it carries on a great trade, especially in pearls. It was taken by the English 1585, and by the French in 1697, who found a great booty: but admiral

Vernon, in 1741, though he had taken the harbour, was obliged to abandon the siege, on account of the want of skill in the commanders of the land-forces, and the sickness that was among them, not to mention the difference between the admiral and general. Lon. 302. 10. lat. 10. 30.

CARTHAGE, a famous town in Africa, which once disputed the empire of the world with Rome, but it was at length levelled with the ground by the Romans, and some of the ruins are yet to be seen on the coast of the Mediterranean Sea, 30 miles N. W. of Tunis, and 350 E. of Algiers, near a promontory, still called Cape Carthage. Lon. 26. 35. lat. 36. 30.

CARTHAGO, now a considerable town of N. America in Mexico, in the province of Costarica, with a bishop's see, and a Spanish governor. It is a very rich trading-place, and is 360 miles W. of Panama. Lon. 296. 15. lat. 9. 5.

CARTMEL, a town of Lancashire, with a market on Mondays, and two fairs on Whit-monday and the first Tuesday after October 23, for pedlars ware. It is seated among the hills called Carmel-Fells, not far from the sea, and near the river Kent. It is adorned with a very handsome church, built in the form of a cross like a cathedral. The market is well supplied with corn, sheep, and fish. It is 12 miles N. by W. of Lancaster, and 260 N. N. W. of London. Lon. 14. 55. lat. 54. 15.

CARWAR, a town of Asia, on the coast of Malabar in the E. Indies, and where the E. India company have a factory, which is fortified with two bastions. The valleys about it abound in corn and pepper, which last is the best in the E. Indies. The woods on the mountains abound with quadrupedes, such as tygers, wolves, monkeys, wild hogs, deer, elks, and a sort of beeves of a prodigious size. One of these being killed, the four quarters weighed above a ton weight, besides head, hide, and guts. The horns were 23 inches in circumference about the roots, and the marrowbones were so large that the marrow was taken out with a silver table-spoon, but the flesh was not so good as common beef. There are three kinds of tygers in the woods; the smallest is not above two feet high, and is the fiercest. The second sort is about three feet high, and hunts deer, wild hogs, and a little creature called pissay; this has the the shape of a deer, and the head of a hog, and has also two long tusks growing upward from the nether jaw, like a wild boar. It has likewise two long sharp teeth, which grow downward from the upper jaw, and reach to the under part of the lower jaw. It is very harmless and fearful, feeds on grass and herbs, and is of the size of a cat. The largest tigers are about three feet and an half high, and attack men very seldom. The religion of the natives is Paganism; and they have a great many strange and superstitious customs. It is 60 miles S. of Goa. Lon. 73. 0. lat. 15. 0.

CASA DEL CAMPO, a palace belonging to the king of Spain, seated on the W. side of Madrid in New Castle, directly opposite the castle on the other side of the river. It is a delightful place, and has an enchanting grove.

CASAL, a strong town of Italy in Montferrat, with a citadel and a bishop's see. It was taken by the French from the Spaniards in 1640; and the D. of Mantua sold it to the French in 1681. In 1695 it was taken by the Allies, who demolished the fortifications, but the French retook it, and fortified it again. The K. of Sardinia became master of it in 1706, from whom the French took it in 1745; however, the K. of Sardinia got possession again in 1746. It is seated on the river Po, 37 miles N. E. of Turin, 35 S. W. of Milan, and 50 N. W. of Genoa. Lon. 26. 4. lat. 45. 7.

CASAL-MAGGIORE, a small strong town of Italy, in the duchy of Milan, seated on the river Po, 20 miles S. E. of Cremona, and 15 N. of Parma. Lon. 27. 50. lat. 45. 6.

CASAN, a considerable town of Asia, and capital of a kingdom of the same name in the Russian empire, with a strong castle, a citadel, and an archbishop's see. The country about is very fertile in all sorts of fruits, corn, and pulse. It carries on a great trade in furs, and furnishes wood for the building of ships. The kingdom is bounded on the N. by Permian, on the E. by Siberia, on the S. by the river Wolga, and on the W. by the province of Moscow. Lon. 69. 0. lat. 55. 38.

* CASBA, a town of Africa, in the kingdom of Tunis, seated in a fertile plain, 5 miles from Tunis.

CASRIN, or CASWIN, a large town of Persia in Irac-Azamb, where several of the kings of Persia have resided. The houses are, for the most part, below the surface of the earth near them; as are many of the gardens adjoining thereto. They are generally built with sun-dried bricks, and have flat roofs whereon they sleep. In the wall within there are niches, which answer the purpose of tables, and the floors are covered with large worsted carpets. In the wings of the house there are small rooms for lodging; the womens apartment stands by itself, into which no man is permitted to enter except the master. The air is subject to such sudden changes, from hot to cold, and the contrary, that it is very unwholesome for strangers to live in. Nadir-Shah has built a palace here, enclosed with a wall a mile and an half in circumference. The town is enclosed with a wall of about 4 miles in circumference; and there are a great number of turrets and port-holes for arrows. It carries on a great trade, and is seated near the high mountain Elwend, where there are fine quarries of white marble. It is 180 miles N. of Ispahan. Lon. 67. 35. lat. 36. 30.

* CASHGAR, a town of Asia, capital of a kingdom of the same name: it stands at the foot of the mountains, and was formerly the capital place, and still enjoys a pretty good trade with the neighbouring countries. The houses are of stone and very good; but they have neither chairs nor tables, and they lie on quilts, covering themselves with a cotton carpet. They go to bed stark naked, and sit cross-legged like the Turks. Both men and women have gowns which fall down to the calves of their legs, and fastened to their bodies with girdles; with close breeches, and boots of Russia leather, for both sexes dress alike. Their complexion is swarthy, and they have all black hair; but it is hard to say what their religion is exactly. Some of the men have two wives; but the women may leave their husbands when they please, though they can carry nothing away with them. Lon. 91. 0. lat. 41. 30.

* CASHMIRE, a province of Asia, in the dominions of the great mogul, about 75 miles in length, and 30 in breadth. It is surrounded with high mountains on all sides, and some pretend to say it has been a lake, but is now dried up. It is an exceeding pleasant country, very populous, and abounds with pasture, cattle, rice, wheat, pulse, and honey. The inhabitants are well-made, active, ingenious, and have several curious manufactures, much valued in India. The natives are all Mahometans or idolaters. Their complexion is as good as any in Europe; and they are well-made, with very regular features, being like the Tartars in nothing at all, tho' they border upon them. Cashmire is the capital town.

CASHMIRE, a large town of Asia, capital of a province of the same name in the dominions of the great mogul. It is seated on the side of a large fresh water-lake. Lon. 93. 0. lat. 34. 30.

* CASLONA, a town of Spain in Andalusia, 5 miles N. W. of Baeza, which formerly was a bishop's see.

CASPIAN SEA, a great lake or sea of Asia, bounded by the country of the Caspuck

Tartars on the N. by Bocharia and part of Persia on the E. by another part of Persia on the S. and by another part of Persia and Circasia on the W. being about 400 miles in length from N. to S. and 300 in breadth from E. to W. Several great rivers fall into this sea, and yet it never seems to increase, though it has no communication with any other sea. It is sometimes very dangerous for sailors to sail upon, and hath no observable tide. It abounds in fish, which are thought to be better than in other seas. Lon. from 67 to 73. lat. from 37. to 47.

CASSANO, a small town of Italy, in the duchy of Milan, with a fortified castle. It is memorable for an obstinate battle fought here by the Austrians and French in 1705. It is seated on the river Adda, 15 miles N. E. of Milan, and 25 N. W. of Crema. Lon. 27. 55. lat. 45. 20.

CASSEL, a town of Germany in the circle of the Upper Rhine, and capital of the landgrate of He'le-Cassel, with a palace, where the landgrave resides, which is nearly as strong as a citadel, and is accounted one of the handiomest in all Germany. The town is divided into the old, the new, and the upper; the last of which is without the walls, and is chiefly inhabited by French refugees, who carry on a woollen manufactory. The streets are broad, the market-places spacious, and there are four churches. The castle or palace from whence there is an extensive delightful prospect, is built with free stone. The gardens, the arsenal, and the cabinet of curiosities, deserve the attention of travellers. The French refugees have a church of their own. It is seated near the river Fuld, on the frontiers of Brunwick, 45 miles N. E. of Marburg, 27 N. E. of Waldeck, and 40 S. of Laderborn. Lon. 26. 10. lat. 51. 20.

CASSEL, a town of French Flanders, and capital of a chatellance of the same name, formerly very strong, but now open. It is remarkable for several battles fought here: it is seated on a mountain, where the ground-plot of the castle still remains, from whence might be seen 32 towns, and commands a prospect of the sea, tho' 50 miles from it. It is 10 miles.

and falls into the river Guadiana, at Badajoz in Spanish Estremadura.

CAYENNE, a rich town and island of S. America, and capital of the French settlements there, bounded on the N. by the Dutch colonies of Surinam. It lies at the mouth of the river of the Amazons; and the French have given it the title of Equinoctial-France, from its situation nearly under the equinoctial line. It is about 45 miles in circumference, and the anchorage for vessels is between Cape Ceperou in the island, and that of Corbin in Terra Firma. The French settled here in 1635, but leaving it in 1654, the English staid here till 1664, when the French took possession of it again. The Dutch became masters of it in 1676, but the French drove them away the year following. There are not above 130 French families, because it is a difficult matter to bring up children here. The greatest heats commonly begin towards the end of June, and terminate at the end of November, and this is the dry season; but from December till the end of June, it always rains more or less: however, on account of the easterly winds the air is very healthy. Sugar and Roucou are the principal commodities of this isle, for they have neglected the cultivation of indico: however, since the year 1722, they have begun to plant coffee-shrubs, and the coffee-berries are thought to be full as good as those in Arabia. Lon. 325. 25. lat. 5. 0.

CELEBES, an island of Asia in the East-Indian Sea, lying under the equator, and likewise called Macassar, to the S. of the Philippines, to the E. of the island of Borneo, and to the W. of the Moluccas, properly so called. The heat would be insupportable but for the N. winds, and the rains which constantly fall 5 days before and after the full moons, and during two months that the sun is nearly over their heads. The fruits are ripe here at all times of the year, and there are a great number of monkeys, some of which walk only upon their hind feet. The natives profess the Mahometan religion, and are the best soldiers in all these parts. Formerly the Portuguese had got possession here, but they were drove away by the assistance of the Dutch; and now the latter have strong forts and numerous garrisons, by which they keep the natives in awe. Their settlements here are with a view to defend the Spice-Islands. The inhabitants go almost naked, as in other places near it under the torrid zone. They are of an olive colour, and the women are well-shaped and tolerably handsome; but both sexes are of a low stature. The custom of selling the women prevails here, and the Chinese and Dutch in this island often buy them for bed-slaves: they are very loving and faithful if well used, but exceedingly revengeful when they meet with bad treatment. Lon. from 133. 0. to 141. 0. lat. from 2. 0. N. to 6. 0. S.

CEYLON, a large island in the East-Indies, about 250 miles in length, and 195 in breadth. In general the air is very good, and tho' the country is full of mountains, there are fertile valleys: in some places the mountains are very high and barren, being nothing but dreadful rocks without water. It is particularly remarkable for its plenty of cinnamon, which is all in the possession of the Dutch, who drove away the Portuguese. In some places there are rich mines, from whence are got rubies, sapphires, topazes, and cat-eyes, besides other stones of less value. In the kingdom of Candy there is plenty of cardamoms, which are very large. The pepper that is got here is so good, that it sells dearer than that of other places. Here is plenty of wood for all sorts of uses, and some proper for dyeing red. It abounds in cows, buffaloes, goats, hogs, deer, hares, dogs, jackals, monkeys, tygers, and bears: they have a quadrupede no bigger than a hare, which perfectly resembles a deer. Besides the buffalo, there is another of the beeve-kind, which hath a high back and four white feet; but this is a great rarity. Their elephants are like those in other places, and they have some likewise that are spotted, which are very scarce. They have great variety of birds, some of which are not to be met with in other places. They have very dangerous serpents and ants, which do a great deal of mischief. The most remarkable tree in this island is the tallipot, one of whose leaves will cover ten men, and keep them from the rain: they are very light, and travellers carry them from place to place, and use them instead of tents. There are two sorts of inhabitants here, the savage, or wild, and the civilized: the first live upon hunting, particularly deer, whose flesh they dry and sell what they do not use to the other inhabitants: they go almost naked, and never cut their hair but tie it on the top of their heads: their religion is peculiar to themselves, and what it is, is very hard to say. As for the civilized inhabitants they are well made, and have a better aspect than most of the Indians. They wear a cloth about their middles, and a cap on their heads: they are very active and ingenious, proper for all sorts of employ. They are divided into several tribes, from the nobleman down to the makers of mats, and

and all the children follow the same business as their father; nor is it lawful to marry into any other tribe; and they have each a particular mark of distinction in their dress: they pretend to be great admirers of morality, and yet they reckon incest no crime. Their religion is idolatry; and tho' they acknowledge a supreme God, they worship none but the inferior sort, and among these they reckon the sun and moon. Their pagods, or temples, are very numerous, in which there are images, whereof some are very well done, tho' their figures are monstrous: some are of silver, others of copper, and other metals. The different sorts of gods have various priests, who have all some privileges. Their houses are small and low, with walls made of hurdles, smoothly covered with clay, and the roofs are thatched; and as they have only a ground-floor, it is no wonder that every one builds his own. They have no chimneys, and they are quite black within-side with smoke; their furniture is only a few earthen vessels, with two copper-basons, and only two or three stools; for none but the king is allowed to sit in a chair. With regard to eating, they are generally contented with rice and salt, and their common drink is water, which they pour into their mouths out of a vessel like a tea pot, thro' the spout, never touching it with their lips. Their treat, when a visit is made, is lime, beet-leaves, neck nuts, and tobacco. They have a bedstead without curtains, which is only for the master of the house; for the women and children always lie upon mats near the fire, towards which they place their feet; and they have no other bolsters than a log of wood. The women, before they are married, are not ashamed of lying with any men of the same tribe; and in this they are encouraged by their parents; but then there are no public prostitutes. When they are married the husband may kill his wife if she is taken in a luteury; but this does not prevent their intrigues, in which they act so cautiously, that they are seldom found out. All marriages are made by the parents; and they are attended with no ceremony, unless of taking their wives home. If the parties do not agree, they make no scruple of leaving each other; for which reason both men and women generally marry four or five times before they are content: but what is more strange than all, one woman has often two husbands. They have no markets throughout the island; but in the towns they have shops where they sell linen, rice, salt, tobacco, lime, drugs, fruits, swords, steel, copper, and the like: they are very ignorant, for all their learning generally consists in reading and writing: their books treat of nothing but religion, physics, and astronomy; and this last is only understood by the chief priests. There are inscriptions on the rocks, which must be very ancient, for they are not understood by any of the present inhabitants. The Dutch are possessed of all the principal places along the sea-coasts. Lon. from 95. 0. to 99. 0. lat. from 6. c. to 10. 0.

CHATEAU G

CHARTREUSE, or THE GRAND CHARTREUSE, is one of the most celebrated monasteries in France, and lies in the province of Dauphiny, 8 miles N. of Grenoble. It is seated on the top of a high mountain, which stands in a valley 3 miles in length, into which there is no entrance but by one way, which is shut up by a gate. It is the chief of the monasteries of the order of Chartreux, and it is so large, that there are lodgings for all the deputies of the order throughout France, who meet here once a-year. Some pretend that the monks are not allowed to speak to each other, but at certain hours and places. However, this seems not to be altogether true; for, on holidays they may walk out and talk as much as they please: besides, they are employed in all sorts of mechanic arts, and spin and weave their own cloaths. Lon. 23. 25. lat. 45. 20.

CHARYBDIS, a whirlpool 30 paces diameter, in the strait of Messina, between Italy and Sicily. It was formerly thought dangerous in navigation, but now it is not much minded by sailors.

- CHIELEPA, a strong town of Turkey in Europe, in the Morea, and in Zacania. It was taken by the Venetians in 1685; but after that the Turks retook it, with all the Morea. Lon. 40. 6. lat. 26. 50.
- * CHIEMSEFF, a lake of Germany, in Bavaria, which contains a town of the same name, where there is a bishop's see. The island it stands in is about 17 miles in circumference, and it lies 22 miles W. S. W. of Saltzburg, and 35 E. S. E. of Munich.
- CHIERI, a fortified town of Italy, in Piedmont, subject to the King of Sardinia. It is seated on the declivity of a hill, in a very pleasant country, bordered on all sides with hills covered with vines, and there is no town in Italy more frequented by the nobility. It is 8 miles E. of Turin, 17 N. of Asti, and 12 N. E. of Carmagnola. Lon. 25. 20. lat. 44. 50.
- * CHILETI, a town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and capital of the Fiefther Abruzzo, with an archbishop's see. It is seated on a mountain near the river Pescara, 8 miles S. W. of Pescara, and 15 N. W. of Anzano. Lon. 31. 48. lat. 42. 22.
- CHIHRI, or PORT CHEER, a maritime town of Happy Arabia, with a harbour. Some pretend to say, that the inhabitants are very civil and sincere, and that they offer their daughters to strangers who arrive there; but this may be justly doubted, for the Mahometans are very jealous of their women. It carries on a considerable trade. Lon. 67. 0. lat. 14. 40.
- * CHILHAM, a village in Kent, 6 miles S. W. of Canterbury, with one fair on November 8, for cattle.
- * CHILMARK, a village in Wiltshire, 12 miles W. of Salisbury, with one fair, on July 30, for cattle, sheep, horses, hogs, and cheese.
- CHILI, a large country and kingdom of S. America, lying along the side of the S. Sea, which is 750 miles in length, and from 37 to 50 in breadth. It may be divided into three principal parts; viz. the bishoprick of Iago, the bishoprick of Imperial, and Cuzco. It was discovered by Don Diego d'Almagro in 1525. It abounds in trees, fruits, Indian corn, cattle, and mines of all kinds. The greatest part is inhabited by the native Americans, who have neither towns nor villages, properly speaking, but only wretched huts, at a distance from each - other. They are much addicted to women and drunkenness. The colour of their skin is that of a red copper, as in all other parts of America; and, since the introduction of horses by the Europeans, they seldom travel without one, there being such a prodigious plenty of them. Some would have Chili extend as far as Cape Horn, but very improperly. It is bounded on the W. by the S. Sea, and on the E. by that prodigious ridge of Mountains called the Andes of Cordoleira.

- * CHILMARK, a village in Wiltshire, 12 miles W. of Salisbury, with one fair, on July 30, for cattle, sheep, horses, hogs, and cheese.
- * CHILE, an island of America, on the coast of Chili, and in the South-Sea, being about 125 miles in length, and 17 in breadth. The principal town is Castro.
- CHILFERN, a chain of chalky hills, running from E. to W. through Buckinghamshire.
- CHIMAY, a town of the French Netherlands, in the province of Hanhalt. It was ceded to the French by the Spaniards in 1684. It is seated on the river Blanche, 20 miles S. of Charleroy, and 18 S. E. of Maubeuge. Lon. 21. 17. lat. 50. 30.
- CHIMAY, a considerable lake of Asia, in Afem, a country that lies between Tibet on the N. and Bengal on the S.
- CHIMARRA, an ancient and strong town of Turkey in Europe, and in Albania, capital of a territory of the same name, which comprehends a chain of mountains, of which one part is free, and the other subject to the Turks. It is seated on a rock near the sea, 15 miles N. of Cortu, and 57 S. E. of Valona, at the entrance of the Gulph of Venice. Lon. 37. 43. lat. 40. 10.
- * CHIMBLEIGH, a town in Devonshire, with a market on Thursdays, and one fair, on August 2, for cattle. It is seated on the river Dert, which fetching a compass like a bow, surrounds three parts of it. It is but a small place, and the market is inconsiderable. It is 21 miles N. N. W. of Exeter, 17 S. S. E. of Barnstable, and 184 W. by S. of London. Lon. 13. 30. lat. 51. 0.
- CHINA, the empire of, in Asia, is bounded on the E. by the ocean, on the N. by a great wall, above 1000 miles in length, which separates it from Tartary; on the W. by high mountains and deserts, and on the S. by the ocean, and the kingdoms of Tonquin, Cochinchina, and Laos. It is included between 112 and 152 degrees of Longitude, and between 21 and 55 of Latitude. Some pretend it is bounded without the great wall by the empire of Russia, but improperly; for that country has always been known by the name of Tartary, though it is now in the Chinese dominions. It is about 2000 miles in length, from N. to S. and 1500 in breadth, from E. to W. and is divided into 16 provinces, which contain 155 towns of the first rank, 1312 of the second, besides 2557 fortified towns; in all which there may be about 50,000,000 of people. There are several large rivers, and where these are wanting, there are artificial canals, for the more ready communication and trading from one part to another; for they are all made navigable for large barks. It is generally a plain campaign country, and they scarce let an inch of ground remain uncultivated; for the hills are cut into several stages, or stories, from the bottom to the top, that the rain may water them all pretty equally, and render them more fruitful. Even the mountains are cultivated and covered with trees; and there are mines of iron, tin, copper, quick-silver, gold, and silver. There are corn and pulse of all sorts, especially rice; and there are a great number of simples, and several trees and fruits proper to the country, particularly one tree produces pease, very little different from those of Europe; another bears a kind of gum, which makes excellent varnish; and a third bears white berries, of the size of a hazel nut, whose pulp is nothing but a sort of tallow, of which they make candles; and a fourth, called the white-wax tree, produces white shining wax, of much greater value than the common bees-wax. The Bamboo cane grows to the height of an ordinary tree; and, though it is hollow within, yet the wood is very hard, and proper for many uses, such as pipes to convey water in, boxes, baskets, and for the making of paper, after it is reduced into a sort of paste. It is now well known to all Europe, that this is the only country from whence all sorts of teas are imported. The complexion of the Chinese is a sort of tawney, and they have large foreheads, small eyes, short noses, large ears, long beards, and black hair; and these are thought to be most handsome who are most bulky. The women affect a great deal of modesty, and are remarkable for their little feet. The men endeavour to make as pompous an appearance as possible, when they go abroad; and yet their houses are but mean and low, consisting only of a ground-floor. They are addicted to all sorts of learning, particularly to arts and sciences; and they were the first inventors of printing, gun-powder, and the mariners compass, they all having been known here for a considerable number of years before the knowledge of them in any other part of the globe. The government of this empire is absolute, and the emperor has a privilege of naming his successor; but the chief mandarin has permission to remind him of his faults. He looks upon his subjects as his children, and pretends to govern them with a fatherly affection. There is no country in the world where the inhabitants are so ceremonious as here; and yet, notwithstanding their seeming sincerity, they cheat as much in their dealings as in the most uncivilized countries. It is certain that their empire is very ancient, and they themselves pretend it has existed many thousand years before our era of Noah's flood. However, it is generally allowed to have continued 4000 without interruption, though they have had twenty-two different families on the throne. The last family, now reigning, is that of the Tartars, who conquered China in 1640. Their religion is Paganism, and the sect of Fo is the principal. The Popish missionaries had formerly got a great footing here, and had made many proselytes; but of late they have been all banished, and the emperor cannot be persuaded to admit them into his dominions again. They allow polygamy, and they keep their wives pretty close. Their writing is very particular; for every letter is a word, and consequently they have as many letters, or characters, as words in their language: But, what is most remarkable, it is said the Japanese use the same, and understand them very well, though their language is quite different. All their cities and towns are so much alike, that those that know one, are acquainted with all, and therefore the principal and most remarkable will only be taken notice of. computed at 21,000,000 sterling yearly; and the forces are said to consist of about 5,000,000 of men in times of peace; however, since their being conquered by the Tartars, they have no enemies to cope with. The Chinese pretend to have a great veneration for their ancestors; and some keep images of them in their houses, to which they pay a sort of devotion. They have laws which regulate the civilities and ceremonious salutation they pay each other, for which reason they always appear to be extremely good-natured; and yet there is but little dependance on their friendship, for they are as deceitful, and as great hypocrites, as any people in the world.

CHINCA, a large and famous valley of S. America, in Peru, and in the province of Lima. It has a sea-port town of the same name, and is seated on a river, 60 miles S. of Lima. Lon. 293. 35. lat. 13. 0.

* CHIOURLIC, an ancient town of Turkey in Europe, and in Romania, with a see of a Greek bishop. It is seated on a river of the same name, 50 miles N. W. of Constantinople, and 62 S. E. of Andrianople. Lon. 45. 22. lat. 41. 18.

CHIOZZO, an ancient and handsome town of Italy, in the territory of Venice, and in a small island, near the Lagunes, with a podesta, a bishop's see, and a harbour, defended by a fort. It is 15 miles S. of Venice, and 22 S. E. of Padua. Lon. 26. 28. lat. 45. 17.

CHIPPENHAM, a town of Wiltshire, with a market on Saturdays, and four fairs, viz. May 6, June 11, October 18, and November 30, for horned cattle, sheep, horses, and hogs. It is seated on the river Avon, and the market is well supplied with corn and provisions. It is a good thoroughfare town, has a handsome-bridge over the river, consisting of 16 arches, and it sends two members to parliament. It is 21 miles E. of Bristol, 18 W. of Marlborough, and 94 W. of London. Lon. 15. 23. lat. 51. 25.

* CHIPPING, a village in Lancashire, 10 miles E. of Carlisle, with two fairs, on Easter-Tuesday, and August 21, for cattle.

CHIPPING-WYCOMB, a town of Buckinghamshire, with a market on Fridays, and one fair, on September 25, for hiring of servants. It is seated on a small river, which falls into the Thames, in a pleasant valley, and is well-built, containing about 200 houses, with several good inns, and the market is considerable for fish, flesh, and other provisions. It is a mayor-town, and sends two members to parliament. It is 12 mil S. S. of Ailbury, 14 W. N. W. of Uxbridge, and 33 W. of London. Lon. 16. 53. lat. 51. 35.

CHIPPING-NORTON, a town of Oxfordshire, with a market on Wednesdays, and seven fairs, viz. March 7, May 6, the last Friday in May, July 18, September 5, November 8, and the last Friday in November, all for horses, cows, sheep, and cheefe. It has a dry situation on the side of a hill, and near a small rivulet, and is a straggling town, except about the market-place. It is a corporation; and the market is good for corn, cattle, and provisions. It is 12 miles S. W. of Banbury, 18 N. W. of Oxford, and 76 N. W. of London. Lon. 16. 5. lat. 51. 53.

CRITOR, a famous town of Asia, in the dominions of the Great Mogul, and in a province of the same name. It is not now so considerable as formerly; however, some suppose it to be the capital of the dominions of Fouus, who fought against Alexander the Great. It is 250 miles N. E. of Surat, and 270 S. W. of Agra. Lon. 94. 0. lat. 23. 30.

CRIGOR, a town of Italy, in Piedmont, seated on the river Po, 10 miles N. of Turin. It was taken by the French in 1705, but was recovered by the confederates the year following, and it is now subject to the King of Sardinia. Lon. 25. 5. lat. 45. 12.

CRITRO, a town of Turkey in Europe, seated on the Bay of Salenichii. It is the place where the mother, wife, and son of Alexander the Great were murdered by Cassander; as also where Perseus king of Macedonia was defeated by Paulus Aemilius the Roman consul. Lon. 40. 40. lat. 40. 30.

CHIVAS, a strong town of Italy, in Piedmont, which has been several times taken and retaken in the late wars, particularly in 1705, by the French; but was retaken the next year by the confederates after the victory at Turin. It is so advantageously situated near the river Po, that whoever is master of it has the key of the territory of Turin, Canavez, Vercellois, Monferat, and Lombardy. It is 12 miles N. E. of Turin, and 9 W. of Verue. Lon. 25. 30. lat. 45. 3.

CHIUSI, a town of Italy, in Tuscany, and in the Siennese, with a bishop's see. It is poorly peopled on account of the unwholesome air, and is 85 miles S. E. of Sienna. Lon. 29. 30. lat. 43. 0.

CHRISTINA, anciently called LEPTOA, one of the islands of the Archipelago, lying on the S. side of Candia.

CHRISTOPHERS, IS. one of the Caribbee Islands, in America, lying to the N. W. of Nevis, and about 60 mile W. of Antigua. It was formerly inhabited by the French and English; but, in 1713, it was ceded to the latter. It is about 20 miles in breadth, and 7 in length, and has high mountains in the middle, from whence rivulets run down, which are of great use to the inhabitants. Between the mountains are dreadful rocks, horrid precipices, and thick woods; and in the S. W. part of the island, hot sulphurous springs at the foot of them. The air is good, the soil light, sandy, and fruitful; but it is subject to hurricanes. The houses are as good as any in these parts; and the Caribbees, or original inhabitants, if any left, go stark-naked. The sea-coast of the island being upon a level, there is a road all round it. The animals are the same as in the other islands, and therefore need not here be mentioned. The produce is chiefly sugar, cotton, ginger, indigo, and the Tropical fruits. Lon. 315. 0. lat. 17. 30.

They cannot enter before they are 7 years of age, nor after 12, and they continue till they are 20 years and three months old. The house is a most magnificent structure.
- * CIRAN SE. a town of France, in the diocese of Bouge, in Berri, seated on the river Claise, with a celebrated Benedictine abbey.
- CIRCASSIA, a large country of Asia, lying between the rivers Don and Volga. It is bounded on the N. by Russia, on the E. by Astrachan and the Caspian Sea, on the S. by Georgia and Dagistan, and on the W. by the Sea of Zabach. It is full of mountains and forests, and has no other city but Terky, which is seated on the Caspian Sea. It is a kind of republic; for the people put themselves under the protection of Persia, Russia, and the Turks; however, the last are in possession of Terky, the capital town. They are Tartars of a middle stature, well-set, with coarse black hair, and broad flat faces. They wear a vest of coarse grey cloth, and over it a sheep's skin, which they turn to the side from which the wind or rain comes. They have boots of horse-leather, clumsily made; and on their heads they have round bonnets of coarse felt, or black cloth. The women pass among the Turks for very great beauties, their complexion being extremely fine. The men are not jealous; for they allow their wives all imaginable liberties. These, in the summer, wear nothing but a shift open down to the navel; but, in the winter, they have furred gowns, like the Russians. They are very fond of necklaces, which consist of strings of pearls, or coloured glass. It is not a little surprising, that the men should be so ugly, and the women so extremely handsome. Their religion is a mixture of Christianity and Mahometanism; and, like the Jews, they marry their brother's wives, if they have no children. The men are good horsemen, and they subsist chiefly by hunting and robbing, though some are addicted to husbandry. In winter they live in sorry huts, and in the summer in tents. Their female children are generally bought by the Turks and Persians, who CIRENCESTER, a town of Gloucestershire, with two markets, on Mondays and Fridays, and three fairs, on Easter Tuesday, July 18, and November 8, for cattle, sheep, horses, wool, oil, and leather. The market on Mondays is chiefly for corn, and on Fridays for wool, yarn, and provisions. It is seated on the river Churn, over which it has a bridge. It was a place of great account in the time of the Romans, being then 2 miles in circumference, and the ruins of the walls are yet to be seen. A great many Roman antiquities have been found here; and here the Roman roads met and crossed each other. It had also a castle and an abbey, long since demolished. It is now a borough-town, and sends two members to parliament. It is 35 miles E. N. E. of Bristol, 18 S. E. of Gloucester, and 85 W. by N. of London. Lon. 15. 35. lat. 51. 42.

COCHIN-CHINA, a maritime kingdom of Asia, bounded on the E. by the sea, on the N. by Tonquin, on the W. by Cambodia, and on the S. by Ciampa. It is much larger than Cambodia, and much richer; but the inhabitants are not so conversable nor civil to strangers. It abounds in gold, raw silk, and drugs; their religion is much the same as that of China, and their cities and towns have gates at the end of each street like those of the Chinese, which are shut up every night. If any fire breaks out in a ward, all the inhabitants are destroyed except the women and children. The inhabitants are of a light brown complexion, very well shaped, with long hair and thin beards. The women are handsome, but not very modest; that is, they are like the rest of the females in this part of the world, and the men of quality will offer their daughters to strangers who come here to trade.

COCKERMOUTH, a town of Cumberland, with a market on Mondays, and two fairs the first Monday in May for horned cattle, and on October 10 for horses and horned cattle. It is a place of great antiquity, and is pleasantly and commodiously seated on the S. side of the river Colne, which is navigable within a mile of the town, on the declivity of a hill, and extends from E. to W. It was surrounded with a wall which had six gates, and three posterns, besides nine watch-towers; but now these are, in a great measure, demolished. It had 16 parish-churches, but now only 12 are used, these are not very large, and most of them were damaged in Cromwell's time. There are here also five meeting-houses. The town consists of about 3000 dwelling-houses, most of them old built, with some few good brick ones; the streets are not very broad, though they are tolerably paved. The number of the inhabitants amount to about 5000. The town suffered greatly in the civil wars. There is a large manufactory of bays, for Spain and Portugal, and the town is famous for oysters and eringo-roots, and imports wine, brandy, coals, deals, &c. It was lately a corporation, but has lost its charter for some misdemeanour; however it still sends two members to parliament. COLOGN, an ancient, handsome, large, rich, and celebrated town of Germany, with an archbishop's see, and an university. It has 10 parishes, 37 monasteries, and 365 churches and chapels, with a vast number of monks and nuns. It is fortified in the ancient manner, with strong walls, flanked with 83 large towers, and surrounded with 3 ditches; however, it is a place of no great strength, and the inhabitants are but few for so large a place. It is a free imperial city, and though the elector has a palace here, he has not the liberty of staying in it for many days together, nor is he admitted to come at all with a numerous attendance. It is in shape like a half-moon, and is seated on the western banks of the Rhine, which renders it more strong. There are always some thousands of students belonging to the university, who have the same privileges as at Paris. The town is governed by six burgo-masters, of whom two are regents, not unlike the consuls at Rome; besides whom, they have a council composed of 49 persons, which are chosen out of 150, for no more are allowed to act at a time. The inhabitants are generally Roman Catholics, and there are some Protestants, who are obliged to perform their devotions at Milheim, in the duchy of Berg, near three miles from the city. There are a vast number of reliques, but the most remarkable are the bodies of the three Magi, called the Three Kings, and every seven years there is a procession of Hungarians, who come to return them thanks for procuring rain in a dry season. It is 17 miles E. of Juliers, 75 N. by E. of Treves, 85 W. by N. of Mentz, and 260 N. E. of Paris. Lon. 24. 45. lat. 50. 50.

It is divided into the diocese and the domain. The diocese is divided into the upper and lower; the domain comprehends the dutchy of Westphalia, and the territory of Recklineusen. The elector is arch-chancellor of the empire for Italy, and has a right to consecrate the emperor for Italy, with that of Mentz. This electorate is thought to be the most fertile and pleasant country of all Germany; and it abounds in corn, wine, pastures, and all the necessaries of life. The revenues of Cologne are computed to amount to 130,000 l. a-year, and those of the rest of his territories to as much more. He is not only archbishop of Cologne, but bishop of Munster, Osnabrug, Paderborn, and Hildesheim; however, some of these only belong to the present elector, and when he dies, will pass into other hands. He was elected bishop of Munster and Paderborn in 1710, was raised to the electorate in 1723, was made bishop of Hildesheim. 1724, of Osnabrug 1728, and grand-master of the Teutonick Order in 1732.

- * CONDÉ, a town of France, in Normandy, and in the Bessin, which carries on a considerable trade. It is seated on the river Nerou, 10 miles from Tinchebray, and 125 W. of Paris. Lon. 26. 35. lat. 48. 50.
- CONDÉPEO, a cape or promontory of N. America, in the province of Yucatan, 100 miles W. of Merida. Lon. 290. 0. lat. 21. 0.
- CONDOM, a town of France, in Gascony, and capital of the Condomois, with a bishop's see. It is but a poor place, and the trade is very small. It is seated on the river Gelise, 22 miles N. W. of Auch, and 75 S. E. of Bourdeaux. Lon. 18. 2. lat. 44. 0.
- * CONDOMOIS, a small territory of France, in Gascony, of which Condom is the capital town.
- CONDORÉ, or PULO CONDORÉ, is the principal of a number of islands which lie in lat. 8. 40. and about 60 miles S. by E. from the mouth of the river Cambodia. The mould is blackish, and pretty deep, only on the hills it is stony; it is covered with trees, but not very thick. The mangoes grow on trees, as large as apple-trees, and the fruit is of the size of a small peach, and, when ripe, has a pleasant smell and taste. Pickled mangoes are now well known in England. The animals are, lizards, guanees, and hogs, as also parrots, paroquets, doves, pigeons, wild-cocks, and hens. The inhabitants are small in stature, well shaped, and of a dark olive complexion; their faces are long, with black straight hair, small black eyes, high noses, thin lips, white teeth, and little mouths. They are very poor, and their chief employment is getting tar out of the trees. They are very free of their women, for when any ships arrive there, they will bring them on board, and offer them to the sailors. Their religion is Paganism, but of what kind is not certainly known. They have a little idol temple, built of wood, and thatched like their houses, which are very mean. In this there was the image of an elephant, but there were others, of different kinds. The English E. India company had a settlement here in 1702, but the factors falling out with the natives, most of them were murdered, and the rest driven from thence in 1705. Lon. 201. 0. lat. 9. 30.
- * CONDRIEU, a town in France, in Lyons, remarkable for its excellent wines,

- It is seated at the foot of a hill, near the river Rhone, 8 miles S. W. of Vienne, 35 N. of Valence, and 17 S. of Lyons. Lon. 22. 28. lat. 45. 28.
- * CONDROS, a district of Germany, in the county of Westphalia, and in the territory of Biele. Huy is the capital town.
- * CONFLANÇEN-JARNEST, a town of Lorraine, on the confines of the Franche Compté, seated at the confluence of the rivers Iron and Orn. Lon. 23. 50. lat. 47. 45.
- CONFLANS, a beautiful palace of France, which belongs to the archbishop of Paris, and is seated at the confluence of the rivers Seine and Marne.
- * CONFLENS, a town of France, in La Marche, seated on the river Vienne. Lon. 13. 23. lat. 46. 55.
- * CONGERBURY, a village in Somersetshire, 6 miles N. of Axbridge, with one fair, on September 14, for cattle and horses.
- CONGLETON, a town of Cheshire, with a market on Saturdays, and four fairs, on the Thursday before Shrove-tide, May 12, July 5, and July 13, for cattle, and pechias ware. It is seated on the river Dane, and is a large mayor-town, tho' it has nothing but a chapel of ease, the church being a stately structure, and is two miles distant. Its manufactory is the making of leather-gloves, but the most considerable is silk, there being a large silk mill lately erected here by some Turkey merchants, which employs 700 hands. It is 7 miles S. of Macclesfield, 24 N. E. of Nantwich, and 157 N. W. of London. Lon. 15. 22. lat. 53. 7.
- CONGO, a large country of Africa, between the equinoctial line and 18 degrees of S. latitude, containing the counties of Loango, Angola, and Benguela. It is bounded on the N. by the kingdom of Benin, by the inland parts of Africa on the E. by Mataman on the S. and by the Atlantic Ocean on the W. It is sometimes called Lower Guiney; and the Portuguese have a great many settlements on the coast, as well as in the inland country, which were first begun soon after the year 1482, at which time it was discovered. The heat is almost insupportable, especially in the summer months. They have many desert places within land, in which are many wild beasts; such as elephants, tigers, leopards, monkeys, and monstrous serpents; but, near the coast, the soil is more fertile.

tile; and there are fruits of many kinds, besides palm-trees, from which they get wine and oil. The greatest part of the inhabitants are negroes, going almost naked, worshipping the sun, moon, and stars, besides animals of different kinds. But the Portuguese have made a great number of converts, such as they are. Congo, properly so called, is about 150 miles in length along the coast, and 372 in breadth. From March to September is called the winter season, when it rains almost every day; and the summer is from October to March, and then the weather is always serene. The inhabitants are skilful in weaving cotton-cloths, which serve them to hide their nakedness; and they trade in slaves, ivory, cassia, and tamarinds. This country contains vast numbers of elephants, whose teeth are prodigiously large. Some pretend there are serpents here near 30 yards long, with a rattle at their tails; but this is a fable. The river Zaire is full of crocodiles, and sea and river horses. Some say there are gold mines here, but that the inhabitants do not know how to work them. Their current money is sea-shells. The principal town is St. Salvador. The trade is open to all European nations.

CONI, a strong town of Italy, in Piedmont, and capital of a territory of that name, with a good citadel. This town being divided into two factions, it surrendered to the French in 1641; but was restored to the Duke of Savoy soon after. The French besieged it again in 1691 and 1706, but they were obliged to raise the siege. In 1744, the French and Spaniards laid siege to it again, but they were obliged to raise it, and a battle ensued, wherein a great many men were killed on both sides. It is seated at the confluence of the rivers Greffe and Sture, 35 miles S. of Turin, 15 S. E. of Pignerol, and 15 N. W. of Final. Lon. 5. 20. lat. 44. 23.

CONINGSIECK, a town of Germany, in the circle of Suabia, and capital of a county of the same name. It is 20 miles N. of Constance. Lon. 26. 55. lat. 47. 50.

CONNAUGHT, one of the four provinces of Ireland, bounded on the E. by that of Leinster, on the W. by the ocean, on the N. and N. W. by part of the ocean and province of Ulster, and on the S. and E. by Munster. It is about 150 miles in length, and 84 in breadth. It has no rivers of any great note, besides the Shannon. It has several convenient bays and creeks, and is fertile in many places. It had several dangerous bogs, over-run with woods, which are now in some measure cleared away. This province produces abundance of cattle, sheep, deer, hawks, and honey; but the inhabitants being lazy, it is the least cultivated of all the four provinces. It contains 1 archbishoprick, 5 bishopricks, 6 counties, 7 market towns, 8 places of trade, 10 boroughs that send members to parliament, 47,256 houses, 24 old castles, besides fortresses that have been erected of late, and 330 parishes. The principal town is Galway.

CONNECTICUT, a province of N. America, in New England, bounded on the N. E. by the colony of Massachusetts, on the S. by the sea, and on the W. by New York, and is 100 miles in length, and 80 in breadth. It is a distinct government by itself, chusing its own governor, deputy-governor, council, and assembly.

CONNOR, a town of Ireland, in the county of Antrim, and province of Ulster, with a bishop's see. It is 6 miles N. of Antrim. Lon. 11. 5. lat. 54. 50.

CONQUET, a handsome maritime town of France, in Lower Brittany, in the district of Cornwall, with a good harbour and road. It is very rich, and is seated 12 miles W. of Brest. Lon. 12. 49. lat. 48. 26.

CONSERANS, or COUSERANS, a small district of France, in Gascony, bounded by the counties of Foix, Comminges, and Catalonia. It lies along the river Salat, and has nothing considerable but St. Lizier, which is the capital town.

CONSTANCE, a strong town of Germany, in the circle of Suabia, with a bishop's see, whose bishop is a prince of the empire. It has a handsome bridge, several fine structures, as well sacred as profane. It carries on a great trade and is well-fortified; and though it pretends to be an imperial town, the Austrians keep a garrison here. It is famous for a council held here in 1514, when there were three popes; but they were all deposed, and Martin V. was elected in their room. This council caused Jerom of Prague to be burnt, though the emperor Sigismund had given him a safe conduct, in pursuance of this maxim, that no faith is to be kept with heretics. They likewise condemned the doctrine of Wickliff, and ordered his bones to be burned burned 40 years after he was dead. However, the inhabitants now are Protestants. It is seated on a lake of the same name, 35 miles N. E. of Zurich, 62 W. of Baile, and 62 S. W. of Ulm. Lon. 26. 58. lat. 47. 35.

CONSTANCE, a great lake of Germany, between Suabia and Switzerland. It is 30 miles in length, and 8 in breadth. It is crossed by the river Rhine, and there are several towns on its banks.

CONSTANTINA, a strong and considerable town of Africa, in the kingdom of Algiers, and capital of a territory of the same name. It is the largest and strongest place in all the eastern parts, and it is seated at the top of a great rock. There is no way to it but up steps cut out of the rock; and the usual way of punishing criminals here is to throw them down the cliff. Here are a great many Roman antiquities, particularly a triumphal arch. It is 75 miles from the sea, 175 W. by S. of Tunis, and 200 E. by S. of Algiers. Lon. 25. 12. lat. 36. 4.

CONSTANTINA, a town of Spain, in Andalusia, and capital of a small territory of the same name, with a castle seated on a mountain. It is seated among high mountains, 40 miles N. E. of Seville. Lon. 12. 6. lat. 37. 40.

CONSTANTINE, a kingdom of Barbary of that name, in Africa. It is bounded on the N. by the Mediterranean, on the E. by the kingdom of Tunis, on the S. by Belidulgerid, and on the W. by the river Sufegmar, which separates it from the kingdom of Bugia. This country is the New Numidia of the ancients, and had its own king; but it is now a province to Algiers.

CONSTANTINOPLE, one of the largest and most celebrated cities of Europe, standing at the eastern extremity of Romania, and capital of the Ottoman Empire. It is seated on a small neck of land, which advances towards Natolia, from which it is separated by a channel of a mile in breadth. The Sea of Marmora washes its walls on the S. and a gulph of the channel of Constantinople does the same on the N. It is delightfully situated between the Black Sea and the Archipelago, from whence it is supplied with all necessaries. Constantine the Great, being obliged to reside in the East, chose this place for his abode, and rebuilt it after the model of Rome. It was taken by the Turks in May 1453, who have kept possession of it ever since. The Grand

Seignior's palace, called the Seraglio, is seated on the sea-side, and is surrounded with walls flanked with towers, and separated from the city by canals. It is said the harbour will easily hold 1200 ships. The number of houses must needs be prodigious, since one fire has burnt down 30,000 in a day, without greatly changing the aspect of the city. However, in general, they are but mean, especially on the out-side, where there are few or no windows, and the streets being narrow, gives them a melancholy look. They reckon that there are 3770 streets, small and great; but they are seldom or never clean; and the people are infested with the plague almost every year. The inhabitants are half Turks, and the rest Jews. Here are a great number of ancient monuments still remaining, and particularly the superb temple of Sophia, which is turned into a mosque, and far surpasses all the rest. The street called Adrianople, is the longest and broadest in the city, and the Bazars, or Bezeiteins, are the markets for selling all sorts of merchandize. The old and the new are pretty near each other, and are large square buildings, covered with domes, and supported by arches and pilasters. The New is the best, and contains all sorts of goods, which are there exposed to sale. The market for slaves, of both sexes, is not far off, and the Jews are the principal merchants, who bring them here to be sold. There are a great number of young girls brought from Hungary, Greece, Candia, Russia, Mingrelia, and Georgia, for the service of the Turks, who generally buy them for their seragios. The Great Square, near the mosque of Sultan Bajazet, is the place for public diversions, where the jugglers and mountebanks play a great variety of tricks. The circumference of this city is by some said to be 15 miles, and by Mr. Tournefort 23 miles; to which, if we add the suburbs, it may be 34 miles in compass. The suburb called Pera is charmingly situated, and is the place where the ambassadors of England, France, Venice, and Holland, reside. This city is built in the form of a triangle; and as the ground rises gradually, there is a view of the whole town from the sea. The public buildings, such as the palaces, the mosques, bagnios, and caravansaries for the en-

- * CONSTANTINOW, a town of Poland, in Volhinia, remarkable for two battles fought in 1648 and 1651. It is seated on the river Seluczca, 30 miles S. E. of Bar, and 62 N. E. of Kamieck. Lon. 46. 12. lat. 49. 46.
- CONTESSA, a sea-port town of Turkey in Europe, and in Macedonia, seated on a gulph of the same name in the Archipelago. It is 42 miles N. E. of Salonica, and 200 W. of Constantinople. Lon. 41. 35. lat. 40. 58.
- CONTI, a town of France, in Picardy, with the title of a principality. It is seated on the river Seille, 12 miles S. W. of Amiens, and 62 N. of Paris. Lon. 19. 34. lat. 49. 54.
- * CONVERSANO, a considerable town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in Terri di Bari, with a bishop's see. It is seated 10 miles from the Gulph of Venice, 8 S. W. of Polignano, and 15 S. E. of Bari. Lon. 34. 50. lat. 41. 10.
- CONWAY, a town of N. Wales, in Carnarvonshire, with a market on Fridays, and four fairs, viz. on April 6, September 4, October 10, and November 8, for cattle. It is seated at the mouth of the river Conway, and is a large walled town, with a castle, and the houses are well-built and well-inhabited, and yet the market is but small. Near this town corn, timber, and oak-bark, are in great plenty; and they clear out at the custom-house here from 11 to 12,000 bushels of grain every year. There is a vast body of marcasite up the river, with which copperas is made; and some think there are veins of copper ore near it. Formerly it was famous for pearl-fishing, and there is still plenty of pearl-mussels, but they are now neglected. It is 14 miles N. W. of Denbigh, 57 W. S. W. of Chester, and 209 N. W. of London. Lon. 15. 45. lat. 53. 20.
- * CONWYDD, a village in Met onethshire, in N. Wales, with one fair, on October 21, for sheep, horned cattle, and horses.
- CONZA, a small ancient town in the kingdom of Naples, and in the Farther Principato, with an archbishop's see. It was so greatly ruined by an earthquake in

- 1694, that the place where the cathedral stood is hardly known. It is 32 miles N. E. of Salerno, 30 S. E. of Benevento, and 52 E. of Naples. Lon. 32. 55. lat. 40. 50.
- * COOS, an island in the Archipelago, 56 miles W. of the Isle of Rhodes, and is subject to the Turks. Lon. 45. 9. lat. 37. 27.
- COPENHAGEN, a large, rich, and strong town or city of Denmark, with a famous university. There was a new palace built here in 1730, which is very magnificent; besides which, there are two others, in which the king sometimes resides. The citadel is a regular fort, defended by five good bastions, a double ditch full of water, and several advanced works. The arsenal is furnished with naval stores sufficient to fit out a whole fleet. The exchange of the E. India company, their arsenal, the king's stables, the college, the house and provisions, the orphan-house, the opera-house, and the military school, are all superb structures. The royal library contains above 40,000 manuscripts and printed books, collected from all parts. The inhabitants are reckoned at about 60,000, without counting the soldiers and sailors. Before the terrible fire in 1728, there were above 6000 houses, of which 3785 were reduced to ashes, with a prodigious quantity of merchandizes of all sorts. It is about five miles in circumference, and is seated on the eastern shore of the Isle of Zealand, upon a fine bay of the Baltic Sea, near the straits called the Sound. It is 200 miles S. W. of Stockholm, 450 N. W. of Vienna, 500 N. E. of London, and 550 N. N. E. of Paris. Lon. 30. 25. lat. 55. 51.
- COPIAPO, a great river of S. America, with a town of the same name, in Chili, and a harbour. It carries on a great trade, and is seated in a fertile country, near the S. Sea, 500 miles N. of St. Jago, and is subject to Spain. Lon. 309. 0. lat. 26. 0.
- COPILOWATS, a pretty large town of Turkey in Europe, in Bulgaria. There were formerly several Albanian merchants in this place, who professed the Roman Catholic religion; but they were expelled in 1700. Lon. 55. 0. lat. 43. 40.
- * COPORIA, a town of the Russian empire, at the mouth of a small river of the same name, in Ingria. It was ceded to the Swedes in 1617; but it was taken from them

- them by Peter the Great in 1703. It is seated on the present river of the present lat. 59. 36.
- COQUIMBO, a sea-port town in Chili, seated on the river of the same name. It abounds in silver, and is rich in precious metals, and is a green, though a little barren. It has a good harbour, and is often pillaged by the Indians. Lat. 29. 44.
- CORBACH, a town of Prussia, in the principality of Waldeck, 30 miles S. E. of Cassel, and 26. 30. lat. 51. 20.
- CORBECK, a town of Flanders, in Brabant, 22. 20. lat. 51. 20.
- CORBELL, a town of France, in the province of Seigne. It is 17 S. from Paris. Lat. 48. 58.
- CORBIE, a town of France, with a celebrated abbey. The fortification of Lewis XIV. is on the river Somme, and 75 N. of Paris. Lat. 49. 54.
- CORBIERS, a fine town of Languedoc, in the same name, a victory that the Saracens in 711.
- CORBY, a town of Westmoreland, whose abbey, whose abbey, and has a plenary, his territory pretty extensive, river Weser. Lat. 40.
- * CORBY, a village of N. of London, on August 10, before October 10, cattle.
- * CORCANG, a town of Persia, on the Oxus, which is a channel, the sandy desert, consequence the greatest in ruins, and them by Peter the Great in the beginning of the present century. Lon. 47. 25. lat. 59. 36.

CORQUIMBO, a sea-port town of S. America, in Chili, seated on a river of the same name. It abounds in fruits, and mines of different metals, and the fields are always green, though it seldom or never rains. It has a good harbour, and has been often pillaged by the English. Lon. 306. 24. lat. 29. 44.

CORBACH, a town of Germany, in Hesse, and in the principality of Waldeck, formerly imperial. It is 10 miles N. W. of Waldeck, 32 S. of Paderborn, 27 W. of Cassel, and 35 N. of Marburg. Lon. 26. 30. lat. 51. 15.

CORBECK, a town of the Austrian Netherlands, in Brabant, 3 miles S. of Louvain. Lon. 22. 20. lat. 51. 0.

CORBEIL, a town of the Isle of France, which is divided into two by the river Seine. It is 8 miles from Melun, and 17 S. from Paris. Lon. 20. 6. lat. 48. 58.

CORBIE, a town of France, in Picardy, with a celebrated Benedictine abbey. The fortifications were demolished by Lewis XIV. in 1673. It is seated on the river Somme, 10 miles E. of Amiens, and 75 N. of Paris. Lon. 20. 10. lat. 49. 54.

CORBIERS, a small territory of France, in Languedoc, in which there is a valley of the same name. It is remarkable for a victory that Charlemagne gained over the Saracens in 737.

CORBY, a town of Germany, on the confines of Westphalia, with a famous abbey, whose abbot is a sovereign prince, and has a place in the Diet of the Empire, his territories about the town being pretty extensive. It is seated upon the river Weser. Lon. 26. 55. lat. 51. 40.

* CORBY, a village in Lincolnshire, 12 miles N. of Stamford, with two fairs, viz. on August 26, and on Monday before October 10, for horses and horned cattle.

* CORCANG, otherwise called JURGANTZ. It is seated on a river anciently called OXUS, which did run from the Caspian Sea to the lake Aral; but the Tartars have found out means to dry up the channel, the country about it being a sandy desert. It was formerly of more consequence than it is at present; for the greatest part of the houses are now in ruins, and those remaining are mean low buildings. It is 90 miles S. of the lake Arle. Lon. 91. 50. lat. 40. 57.

CORDOBA, a strong town of Spain, in Andalusia, with a bishop's see. It is one of the most considerable towns of Spain, and is remarkable for its antiquity; and the rather because it has preserved its splendor, dignity, power, and riches, through so many ages, it being well known to the Romans by the name of Corduba. It is very pleasantly seated on the river Guadalquivir, over which there is a magnificent stone-bridge. On the N. there are high mountains, and on the S. a very extensive plain. The circumference is very large, but it is not peopled in proportion to its extent, for there are a great many orchards and gardens within the walls. There are many superb structures, palaces, churches, and religious houses, particularly the cathedral, which is very magnificent; it was formerly a mosque, when the Moors possessed the town, for which reason it still retains the name of Mezquita, which has the same meaning. The square called the Plaza Major, is surrounded with very fine houses, under which there are piazzas. Many people of quality live here, for which reason there are a great many coaches. The trade is flourishing on account of the river, which consists of wine, silk, and Cordovan leather; and in the neighbourhood of this place there are a vast number of orange and lemon trees, which renders their fruits exceeding cheap. The best horses in Spain come from hence. It is 75 miles N. E. of Seville, 85 N. of Malaga, and 135 S. by W. of Madrid. Lon. 13. 48. lat. 37. 42. It is remarkable for fine leather.

* CORDUA NEW, a considerable town of S. America, in the province of Tucuman, with a bishop's see. It is 175 miles from St. Jago. Lon. 316. 30. lat. S. 32. 10.

CORDUAN, a famous pharos or light-house of France, in Guienne, at the mouth of the river Girond. The architecture is extremely fine, and it is placed there, to hinder vessels from running on the sand-banks at the mouth of the river. It is 55 miles N. W. of Bourdeaux, and 37 S. W. of Rochelle. Lon. 16. 26. lat. 45. 36.

COREA, a peninsula lying to the N. E. of China, between 137 and 147 degrees of Longitude, and between 32 and 45 of Latitude. It is divided into 8 provinces, which contain 40 cities of the 1st rank, 51 of the 2d, and 70 of the 3d. The capital of the whole is Hanching, and is the place where the king resides. The Jesuits say, the people are well-made, are of a sweet and tractable disposition, and fond of learning, musick, and dancing, and in general resemble the Chinese pretty nearly. Their houses are mean, being covered with thatch; and they have no beds, but lie on the floor. They have little silk, and therefore make use of linen-cloth in its room. Their arms are cross bows, and very long fabres, or swords. Their trade consists in white paper, pencils, gingseng, gold, silver, iron, yellow varnish, towels whose tails are 3 feet long, horses no more than 3 feet in height, sable skins, castor and mineral salt. In general it is a fertile country, though abounding in mountains. They never bury their dead 'till 3 years after their decease, but keep them close shut up in coffins for that time. It is tributary to China.

CORFE-CASTLE, a town of Dorsetshire, with a market on Thursdays, and two fairs, viz. on May 12, and October 19, for hogs and toys. It is seated in a peninsula called Purbeck, on a river, and in a barren soil between two hills, on one of which stands the castle. It has one church, and 150 houses; the streets are however bad, and not paved. It is governed by a mayor and aldermen, and sends two members to parliament. It is 18 miles S. by W. of Pool, 20 E. by N. of Weymouth, and 116 W. by S. of London. Lon. 15. 27. lat. 50. 33.

CORFU, a considerable island of Europe, lying near the coast of Epirus, subject to the Venetians. It is the most important place they have in these parts; because it commands the Adriatic Sea, for which reason they have always here about 15 galleys, and several other vessels. The metropolitan church of the Greeks, which stands in the capital town, is very handsome, and is adorned with several rich silver lamps, and one of gold. The Turks have often attempted to become masters of it, but in vain. It is defended by the castle called St. Ange, which passes for impregnable. It formerly belonged to the kingdom of Naples; but the inhabitants submitted to the Venetians about the year 1536, and it is accounted the key of Venice. Here they make a great deal of salt; and the country abounds in vineyards, lemons, olives, and cedar trees. The capital town is of the same name as the island, in which there is always a good garrison; and it is seated towards the middle of the eastern coast of the island, over-against Canina. Lon. 37. 48. lat. 39. 40.

CORIA, a town of Spain, in the kingdom of Leon, and in Arremadura, with a bishop's see. It was taken by the Allies in 1706. It is seated on the river Aligon, 25 miles S. W. of Placentia, 25 N. E. of Alcantara, and 120 S. W. of Madrid. Lon. 12. 2. lat. 39. 36.

CORINTH, now called CORANTO, or GERAME, an ancient town, and formerly much celebrated, in the Morea, with a Greek archbishop's see. It was one of the most important places in Greece, on account of its antiquity, its situation on the passage from Greece into the Morea, by its castle, standing on the top of an almost inaccessible rock, by its harbours on the gulphs of Lepanto and Egina, by its riches, and by its architects, sculptures, and painters, who were the most skillful in all Greece. It belonged, a great while, to the Venetians, till it was taken by Mahomet II. but they retook it in 1678; the Turks became masters of it again in 1715, and they have kept it ever since. It is now greatly decayed, for the houses are not contiguous, but intermixed with fields and gardens, which make it look like a village. The country about it abounds with corn, wine, and oil; and, from the castle above mentioned, yet standing, there is one of the finest prospects in the world, over the Sea to the E. and W. and a fine country N. and S. The narrowest part of the isthmus, on which it stands, is above six miles over; and on a mount there, called Onceus, were formerly celebrated the Isthmian games. There are still the ruins of a town upon it, and of the temples dedicated to the Sun, Pluto, Diana, Neptune, Ceres, and Bacchus. The inhabitants are most of them Christians, of the Greek church, who are allowed liberty of conscience by the Turks. It is seated on an isthmus of the same name, 40 miles N. W. of Athens, 15 S. of Thebes or Stives, and 70 N. by E. of Missina. Lon. 40. 58. lat. 38. 14.

It contains 43,286 houses, 232 parishes, 19 baronies, and 12 boroughs. It sends 26 members to parliament, 2 for the county, 2 for Cork, 2 for Youghal, 2 for Kinsale, 2 for Bandon-bridge, 2 for Mallow, 2 for Baltimore, 2 for Cloghnikely, 2 for Charleville, 2 for Castle-Matyre, 2 for Middleton, 2 for Rathcormack, and 2 for Doneraile. It is fertile, rich, and populous, and has two remarkable rivers, namely, black-Water, and Lee. The principal town is of the same name.

CORK, the capital town of the county of Cork, in the province of Munster, in Ireland, with a bishop's see. It is a neat, wealthy, and populous place, seated on the river Lee, where it has a commodious harbour. It is a place of some strength, and is inclosed with walls, in the form of an egg; and the river runs round about it, over which there are bridges. It surpasses all the towns in Ireland, for trade except Dublin. It contains 8113 houses, and is 13 miles W. of Balleora, and 124 S. W. of Dublin. Lon. 9. 16. lat. 51. 40.

CORITZ, a town of Germany, in Farther Pomerania, belonging formerly to the bishop of Camin, and now to the king of Prussia. It was besieged by the Imperialists in 1677, but to no purpose. It is seated on the river Peasant, 8 miles S. E. of Colberg. Lon. 53. 46. lat. 44. 12.

* CORNHILL, a village in the bishoprick of Durham, with one fair, on December 6, for mercantile goods, and shepherds curs.

CORNWALL, an English county, surrounded on all sides by the sea, except to the E. which joins to Devonshire, from which it is separated by the river Tamer. It is 75 miles in length, and 26 in breadth, but grows narrower gradually towards the land's end. It contains 27,620 houses, 165,660 inhabitants, 161 parishes, 27 market-towns, and sends 44 members to parliament. It is remarkable for the stannaries, where they get tinn, and to these belong particular laws, immunities, and privileges. And there are particular places which have the coinage of tin, to which all the tin must be carried, to be stamped. The other commodities are, blue slate, corn, fruits, cattle, and a little silver. Sometimes a sort of diamonds have been found here, but not so hard as the true. This county was one of the places to which the ancient Britons retreated, whose language they retained for a considerable time, but is now almost extinct, unless at two or three parishes, at the land's end. The soil is generally hilly and rocky, covered with shallow earth, though there are many fruitful valleys, particularly near the sea, which they manure with sea-weeds, and fit sand. The air is pretty healthy, though they are much subject to high winds, and storms. It has the title of a duchy, and the king's eldest son is duke of Cornwall.

COROMANDEL, the coast so called, is the eastern coast of the peninsula, on this side the Ganges, in Asia. It is bounded on the N. by Gelconda, on the E. by the bay of Bengal, on the S. by Madura, and on the W. by Binnagar, tho' some Geographers give it different bounds. Here are several factories and trading towns on this coast, the principal of which I shall just mention; and first, Tranquabar is a fortress and colony, belonging to the Danes, which is miserably poor; Porto Novo formerly belonged to the Portuguese, but now to the Great Mogul, who called it Mahomet-Bander. The country is fertile, healthy, and pleasant. The bulk of the people are Gentoos, and have various manufactures of cotton-cloth. Fort St. David is an English factory and fortress, near which they make all sorts of long cloth in great quantities, as also fallampores, gingham, and several others. Pondicherry belongs to the French, who have very fine, regular, and strong fortifications, the produce is the same as at St. David's. Congameer is the next place, where the English had a factory, before they purchased Fort St. David's. There are several pagods here, to one of which pilgrims flock every year. The images are very obscene, and the women that attend them very lewd. Saderas is a small factory, belonging to the Dutch, who buy up the long cloths. Cabelon is next, and did belong to the Ostend company. St. Thomas is three miles S. of Fort St. George, the town was built by the Portuguese, and at present is a place of very little trade. Fort St. George, or Madras, belongs to the English, and has a very incommensurate situation. Palicate is the next place of any note, and belongs to the Dutch, the people are employed chiefly in knitting cotton-sockings. Here are several other small places, between this and Madraspatan, which formerly had trade, but now are neglected. The English had formerly a factory at this last place, and the Dutch have now, where they purchase chintzes. Narapore is next, where the English also had a Factory, now withdrawn. Watraw is noted for rice, which is exported from hence. Visagapatan is an English factory, and well fortified; the country about it produces cotton-cloth, and striped muslins; there are many ancient pagods, or temples, in this country, but there is one, in particular, which stands on a little mountain, where they worship live monkeys. Twelve miles N. E. from hence, is Bimilipitan, where the Dutch have a small factory, and buy up the cotton-cloths, which they send to Batavia. Gangan is the last place on this coast worth notice, and is kept chiefly for the use of Visagapatan. The country about it abounds in rice and sugar-canes, of which they make sugar. Here is a pagod, with a very obscene image, which is sometimes carried about in a coach, on which are very indecent representations. This is particularly adored by virgins, and married women who never had children.

CORON, a sea-port town of Turkey in Europe, in the territory of Belvidera, and in the Morea, it is said to be a strong place, and yet it made but little defence in 1715, when the Turks took it, and all the Morea, from the Venetians. CORSTICA, a large island in the Mediterranean Sea, about 88 miles in length, and 40 in breadth. The air is very unwholesome, and the land hilly, full of stones, and cultivated very poorly; however, the valleys produce wheat, and the hills fruits, viz. olives, figs, grapes, almonds and chestnuts. They have hoeses also, of a very fiery nature. Besides, there are mines of iron, and a great deal of nsh and coral on the coast. In the middle there is the mountain Gradaccio, where there are two lakes, near each other, from whence proceed the two principal rivers. COSSACKS, a people inhabiting the confines of Poland, Russia, Tartary, and Turkey. They are divided into several branches, the Kofakki-fa-Parovi, the Kofakki-Donski, and the Kofakki-Jaici. These last are the wildest of them all, though they dwell in large villages, along the banks of the river Yaik, near its fall into the Caspian Sea. They live on husbandry, fishing, and their cattle, but rob their neighbours as often as they have opportunity. In the winter they keep at home, but in summer they rove in boats, on the Caspian Sea, with an intent to attack the vessels sailing thereon. Their religion is a mixture of Paganism, Mahometanism, and Christianity. Their only town is Yaikskoy. The banks of the rivers are exceeding fertile, and produce all the necessaries of life. Kofakki-fa-Parovi are the principal of the three branches, and dwell near the river Boristhenes or Nieper. These people are large and well made, have blue eyes, brown hair, and aquiline noses; the women are handsome, well shaped, and very complaisant to strangers. These are the people, who, joining with the Russian army, do so much mischief in the king of Prussia's dominions. The country which they now inhabit, is called Ukraïn, and is one continued and exceeding fertile plain, which produces corn, pulse, tobacco, and honey. The pastures are so good, that their cattle are the largest in Europe. Their towns are all built of wood, after the manner of the Russians. Kofakki-Donski dwell on both sides the river Don, and are much the same for size and shape, as the former; these are under the protection of Russia, and profess the same religion. They live upon their cattle, husbandry, and robbing.

COZUMEL, a considerable island of America, on the W. coast of Yucatan, where Cortez landed, and refreshed his troops, before he attempted the conquest of Mexico. It is very fertile, and abounds in fruits, pulse, cattle, and fowls. The original natives still possess this island, though it is in some sense subject to Spain.

CRACOW, the capital town or city of Poland, and the most important place therein. The streets are broad and strait, but very nasty; and the houses are about five stories high, built with stone, and covered with shingles. The royal palace, or castle, was a magnificent structure, and seated on a rock, and there was as fine a view from it as from any place in Europe. The kings of Poland resided here before they removed to Warsaw. It was burnt to the ground in 1702 by the Swedes, and is not likely to be rebuilt very soon. The city has 2 large suburbs, and is surrounded with deep ditches and thick walls, fortified with towers; and yet it never held out any long siege. Here are several churches, but the principal is that dedicated to St. Stanislaus, which is immensely rich. The Jesuits have also a handsome church as well as the Dominicans; and there is a famous university, consisting of 11 colleges. During the civil wars of Poland, this city suffered greatly. War, famine, the plague, and a fire, made great havoc of the inhabitants all at the same time, insomuch that half of them were destroyed. The Regalia are kept here, this being the place where the Kings of Poland are crowned; and likewise the supreme courts are held here. It is seated in an extensive plain on the rivers Vistula, Weiffel, or Weiffer, 112 miles S. W. of Warsaw, 180 N. E. of Vienna, 150 S. of Buda, 750 E. by N. of Paris, and 970 E. by N. of London. Lon. 37. 30. lat. 50. 10.

* CRACOW, the palatinate of, is one of the three provinces of Lesser Poland. It is bounded on the E. by the palatinate of Sandomir, on the N. by that of Sired, which is part of Great Poland, on the W. by Silesia, and on the S. by Hungary. Here are mines of lead which contain a little silver, at Slenkow, and elsewhere; of copper, at Sandeck; of vitriol, at Biecz; and of salt, at Wielicz and Bochnia. It is tolerably fertile, and watered with several rivers, of which the Vistula, or Weiffer, is the chief, Cracow is the capital town, CRICKLADE, a town in Wiltshire, with a market on Saturdays, and two fairs, on the second Wednesday in April, for sheep, cows, and calves; and on September 21, for hiring of servants, and chapmen goods. It is seated upon the Isis, which almost surrounds it, and here begins to be navigable. It sends two members to parliament; and is 30 miles S. W. of Oxford, and 80 W. of London. Lon. 15. 30. lat. 51. 35.

CRIM-TARTARS are a people of Asia so called, because they originally came from Crimea, who rove from place to place in search of pastures, their houses being drawn on carts. There are great numbers of them about Astrachan, to which place they flock in the winter time; but they are not permitted to enter the city; for this reason they erect huts up and down in the open fields, which are made either of bull-rushes or reeds, being about 12 feet in diameter, of a round form, and with a hole at the top to let out the smoke. Their fuel is turf, or cow-dung, and, when the weather is very cold, they cover the hut with a coarse cloth, and sometimes they pass several days without stirring out. They are generally of small stature, with large faces, little eyes, and of an olive complexion. The men are generally so wrinkled in their faces, that they look like old women. Their common food is fish dried in the sun, which serves them instead of bread, and they eat the flesh of horses, as well as camels. Their drink is water and milk, especially mares milk, which they carry about in patty leathern bags. Their garments are of coarse grey cloth, with a loose mantle, made of a black sheep's skin, with a cap of the same. The women are clothed in white linen, with which likewise they dress their heads, hanging a great many Mo'covian pence about them, and there is likewise a hole left to stick feathers in. As for their religion, they are a sort of Mahometans, but do not coop up their women like the Turks.

CRIM-TARTARY, or CRIMEA, is the ancient Taurica Cheronesus, and is a peninsula, lying on the Black Sea, by which it is bounded on the W. and S. on the E. by Circassia, and on the N. by the Palus Meotis. It is between 44 and 46 degrees of latitude, and 40 and 44 of longitude. The towns are, Batscha-Sara, which is seated about the middle, and is the usual residence of the Khan. It contains about 3000 houses, and is inhabited only by Tartars and Jews. The town of Crim is seated in a very pleasant, and fertile plain, and was formerly capital of the country, but it is now gone to ruin, and does not contain above 600 thatched huts. Perekop is on the E. side of the Isthmus, which joins Crimea to the continent; it is the key of this country, and yet is a pitiful place, having only 600 houses, with a half ruined castle, and some ill contrived fortifications. Kasla is the principal town, and was a long while in the hands of the Genoese, and was then a trading place; at present they only deal in slaves, which they steal from their neighbours, and sell to the Turks. It contains about 5000 houses, which are nothing like what they were in the time of the Genoese, and is inhabited by Jews, Mingrelians, Turks, and Christians, of different persuasions. The Turks are at present masters of the town, who keep a strong garrison here. Balucawa is on the southern coast, and has a good harbour; however, at present it does not contain above 300 houses, though it is of great importance, and the Turks are masters of it. The Tartars are short and squat, with swarthy complexions, pigs eyes, square and flat faces; their hair is black, and as strong as horse-hair, with very little beards. Their shirts and drawers are cotton-cloth, and over them they have cloaks of felt, or sheep's skins. The women are too much like their husbands to be handsome, however the men usually make use of the slaves which they steal from their neighbours, and are continually roving from one place to another. The best sort have tents, but the others are contented with their cloaks. When they kill their cattle, they kill them. When they return, Khan has the tithe is so much under the Turks, that they do and set up another oblige him to furnish they take the and ravaged this country, but they did not keep it. In exchange have rice, coffee, death, and he fruitful, and the great in any other tars make no other their cattle.

When they return from robbing, the Khan has the title of all the booty, who is so much under the disposal of the Turks, that they dispose him at pleasure, and set up another, and they generally oblige him to furnish 30,000 men when they take the field. The Russians ravaged this country in 1738, and 1739, but they did not think it worth while to keep it. In exchange for the slaves they have rice, coffee, raisins, dates, and cleavage. The country is naturally fruitful, and the produce would be very great in any other hands, but the Tartars make no other use of it than to feed their cattle.

CROMER, a town in Norfolk, with a market on Saturdays, and a fair on Whit-Monday, for petty chapmen. It is seated near the sea-side, and was formerly more considerable than it is at present, for it had two churches, one of which, with several houses, was swallowed up by the sea. The inhabitants are now chiefly fishermen. It had formerly a good harbour, but it is now little used. The part of a church, which still remains, was built in the time of the Saxons, of curious flint, and the tower was raised to a great height; this indeed is all that stands, and the other part of the structure being decayed, Divine Service is performed once a fortnight in the steep'e. The town has been walled round, some remains of which are still to be seen; but it at present consists of only about 200 houses, straggling here and there, without form or order. It is 23 miles N. of Norwich, and 66 N. E. of London. Lon. 19. 0. lat. 52. 55.

CRONACH, a strong town of Germany, in the circle of Franconia, and bishoprick of Bamberg, with a strong citadel. It is subject to that bishop, and is 12 miles E. of Coberg, and 25 N. E. of Bamberg. Lon. 28. 55. lat. 50. 25.

CRONENBURG, a town of Germany, in the circle of the Upper Rhine, and in the Langravate of Hesse-Cassel, with a strong castle. It is seated at the foot of a high mountain, in a fertile soil, and is surrounded with a double wall. It is 10 miles N. of Franfort on the Maine. Lon. 25. 50. lat. 50. 15.

CRONENBURG, a strong fortress of Denmark, in the isle of Zealand, at the entrance of the Sound, where the Danes take toll of such ships as are bound for the Baltic. It was very richly furnished, but was pillaged by the Swedes in 1658, who took away the furniture, among which were statues of massy silver. It is built upon piles. Lon. 30. 25. lat. 56. 0.

CRONSLOT, a town and fortress of Russia, in a little island of the same name, seated at the mouth of the river Neva, near the entrance of the gulf of Finland, with a good harbour, which is the station of the Russian fleet, and where the great magazines of naval stores, as well as docks and yards for building ships, are. CUBA, an island of N. America, at the entrance of the gulf of Mexico, about 700 miles in length, and 87 in breadth. It was discovered by Christopher Columbus, in 1494. The Spaniards are entirely masters of it, they having rooted out the ancient inhabitants. The soil is not extremely fertile, but there are pastures sufficient to feed a great number of heaves, sheep, and hogs, which were originally brought thither. There are several sorts of mines in the mountains, and forests full of game. The produce is sugar-canes, ginger, cassia, wild cinnamon, and very good tobacco, called by the Spaniards Cigarros. The hills run through the middle of the island from E. to W. but, near the coast, the land is generally plain. Here are a great many rivulets, which run down from the hills to the N. and S. but they have a very short course. The air is pretty temperate and wholesome, and here are cedar-trees so large, that canoes made of them will carry 50 men. Between St. Jago and St. Salvador there is a valley full of round stones, which, upon occasion, might serve for great guns; Havannah is the capital town, and is seated on the western side of the isle, next Florida. The English landed on the S. W. side of the island, in 1771, but the rainy season coming on, it prevented their doing any thing. The galleons that return annually to Spain rendezvous at Havannah. This island is about 120 miles S. of Florida, 50 W. of Hispaniola, and 75 N. of Jamaica.

CYCLADES, a name anciently given to some of those islands of the Archipelago which lie near Negrepoint. They are disposed in the form of a circle, as their name imports.

CYPRUS, an island of Asia, in the Mediterranean Sea, near the coast of Syria and Natolia. It was taken by the Turks from the Venetians in 1570. It is divided into four provinces, namely, Paphia to the E. Salamina to the W. Amathusia to the S. and Lapithia to the N. Nicosia is the capital, which is seated almost in the center of the island, and is the see of a Greek archbishop. It is well peopled, and has some fortifications. Famagusta is seated near the sea, and has a good harbour, which carries on almost all the business of the island. Batta, formerly called Paphos, is a large place, and a trading town, but has no fortifications. It is famous for a temple built to the honour of Venus. The soil is an excellent, fertile clay, and, if the natives were industrious, they might make it a perfect paradise, for, though there are no rivers, the defect is supplied with plenty of springs. They are much infested with locusts, and the inhabitants are obliged to tack bells to their boots to fright away the aeps, the tarantulas, and other venomous reptiles. There is one kind of serpent, about two yards long, and of a blackish colour, with a sort of a coronet on its head, which it carries majestically about a foot high, as it waves along. The Grecian women are wantonly superb, and they are as great libertines as the old inhabitants. The men will martyr any women that have but money enough, though they have earned it by the sweat of their bodies. This island brings in the Turks 1250 l. annually, though the governor is changed every year. The judges are so corrupt, that they always favour him who bids highest. There is one archbishop and three bishops, who join with the Turks to fleece the people. The priests are extremely ignorant, and they submit to the most servile employments for money. The exports of the island are, silks, wool, wax, and wine; the imports are, French and Venetian broad cloths, and sometimes a few bales of English manufactory, cutlery wares, toys, sugar, tin, lead, and all sorts of silks. But the people are so miserably poor, that there is no great consumption of any of these things.

CZACKHURN, a strong place of Germany, in Austria, and on the frontiers of Hungary. It is seated between the rivers Drave and Muhr, 40 miles S. E. of Gratz, and 100 S. of Vienna. Lon. 34. 54. lat. 46. 24.

CZASLAW, a town of Behemia, and capital of a circle of the same name. Here is the highest tower in all Bohemia, and it was near this place that the king of Prussia gained a battle over the Austrians in May 1742. It is seated on the river Cudenka, 42 miles S. E. of Prague. Lon. 33. 18. lat. 49. 50.

CZENSTOKOW, a town of Poland, in the palatinate of Cracovia, with a fort, in which they keep a rich treasure, called the treasure of the virgin Mary. The pilgrims flock hither so much, for the sake of a convent near it, that it is called the Loretto of Poland. It is seated on the river Warta, 50 miles N. by W. of Cracow, and 75 S. E. of Breslaw. Lon. 36. 50. lat. 50. 48.

CZEPCESSI, a town of Poland, in the Ukraine, and in the palatinate of Kiow, with a castle. It is seated near the river Nieper, 85 miles S. E. of Kiow. Lon. 50. 40. lat. 49. 0.

CZERNIC, a town of Carniola, in the circle of Austria. It is remarkable for its lake, which is 15 miles in length, and 5 in breadth, and produces fish, game, and corn every year; for, when the waters fall from the mountains, it becomes full, and abounds with fish, and, after some time, it sinks into the earth, and then it is cultivated, and produces grass and corn. It is probable there is some gulph to which the fish retire with the waters. Lon. 32. 35. lat. 46. 12.

CZERNIKOW, a considerable town of Muscovy, and capital of a duchy of the same name, with a castle. It is seated on the river Dezna, 75 miles N. E. of Kiow. Lon. 50. 48. lat. 51. 20.

CZERSKO, a town of Poland, in Mazovia, seated on the river Vistula, 20 miles W. of Warsaw. Lon. 30. 6. lat. 52. 26.

CZERNOPET, a town of Upper Hungary, and capital of a territory of the same name, at the confluence of the rivers Theiss and Kores. It is 15 miles N. of Segedin. Lon. 58. 32. lat. 46. 32.

DABUL, a town of Asia, in the E. Indies, on the coast of Malabar, and to the S. of the gulph of Cambaye, on a navigable river. It is not so flourishing now as it was formerly, its principal trade consisting in pepper and salt. It either did, or does belong to the Portuguese, and is 160 miles N. of Goa. Lon. 91. 30. lat. 17. 30.

DACA, a town of Asia, in the kingdom of Bengal, and seated on the river Ganges. It is the largest in Bengal, and its manufacture of cotton and silk is the best and cheapest. Provisions of all sorts are exceedingly cheap and plenty, and the inhabitants very numerous, but so cowardly, that five or six armed men will drive away a thousand. Lon. 106. 45. lat. 24. 0.

DACHAU, a town of Germany, in Bavaria, which is pretty large, well built, and seated on a mountain. The Elector has a palace here, with fine gardens, in a sweet air. It is seated on the river Amber, 7 miles N. W. of Munich. Lon. 29. 5. lat. 48. 20.

DACHSTEIN, a town of Lower Alsace, in the bishoprick of Strasburg, with a palace belonging to the bishop of Strasburg. It was taken by the Swedes 1633. Lon. 25. 20. lat. 48. 35.

DADIVAR, a plain of Asia, in Persia, and in Faristat, about 12 miles in circumference. It is covered with orange, citron, and pomegranate trees. It is between the towns of Shiras and Lar, and sometimes the Europeans from Combroon come to take their pleasure here, in the hot season of the year.

DAPAR, or DOFAP, a town of Asia, in Arabia the Happy, seated on a bay of the same name, on the S. coast. Lon. 73. 0. lat. 16. 30.

DAGHESTAN, a province of Asia, bounded on the E. by the Caspian Sea, on the W. by the mountains of Caucasus, on the N. by Circassia, and on the S. by Shirvan. It is inhabited by Tartars, who are of a swarthy complexion, with hard features, and black hair as coarse as a horse's tail. Their horses are small, but exceeding swift, and expert in climbing mountains. They have great herds of cattle, which they leave to the care of the women and slaves. They kill all strangers that fall in their way, and steal women and children from the neighbouring countries. They dwell in towns and villages, and have hitherto kept themselves independant. With regard to religion, they are a sort of Mahometans. Some say they rove about in tents, but that is a mistake. Sometimes they put themselves under the protection of one power, sometimes under another. When Kouli Khan attacked them, he lost a great part of his army in the mountains. The towns of Tarku and Derbent are in this country, which sometimes are in possession of the Russians, and sometimes of the Persians.

DAGO, or DAGHO, an island in the Baltic Sea, on the coast of Livonia, between the gulph of Finland and Riga. It is of a triangular figure, and may be about 20 miles in circumference. It has nothing considerable but two castles, called Dagerwort and Paden. Lon. 40. 5. lat. 58. 48.

DAGNO, a town of Turkey in Europe, in Albania, with a bishop's see. It is capital of the district of Ducagini, and it is seated on the rivers Drino and Nero, near their confluence. It is 15 miles S. E. of Scutari, and 15. N. E. of Alessio. Lon. 37. 23. lat. 42. 0.

DAROME, a Kingdom of Africa, on the coast of Guinea, to the N. of Whidaw, or Fida. The king of this country conquered Whidaw, and very much disturbed the slave-trade of the Europeans.

DALACA, an island of the Red Sea, over against the coast of Abex, about 72 miles in length, and 15 in breadth. It is very fertile, populous, and remarkable for a pearl fishery. The inhabitants are negroes, and great enemies to the Mahometans. There is a town seated over against Abassia. Lon. from 58. 30. to 59. 1. lat. from 14. 20. to 16. 15.

DALEBURG, a town of Sweden, and capital of the province of Dalia, seated on the western bank of the lake Wener, 50 miles N. of Gottenburg. Lon. 30. 35. lat. 59. 0.

DALCARLIA, a province of Sweden, so called from a river of the same name, on which it lies, near Norway. It is divided into three parts, which they call valleys, and is about 175 miles in length, and 100 in breadth. It is full of mountains, which abound in mines of copper and iron, some of which are of a prodigious depth. The towns are very small, and Iera is the capital. The inhabitants are rough, robust, and warlike, and DALMATIA, a province of Europe. It is bounded on the N. by Bosnia, on the S. by the Gulph of Venice, on the E. by Servia, and on the W. by Morlachia. Spalatro is the capital of that part belonging to the Venetians; and Ragusa, of a republic of that name; the Turks have a third, whose capital is Herzegovina. The air is wholesome, and the soil fruitful; and it abounds in wine, corn, and oil.

DALTON, a town in Lancashire, with a market on Saturdays, and two fairs, on June 6, for horned cattle, and on October 23, for horned cattle, horses, and pedlars ware. It is seated on the spring-head of a river, in a champaign country, not far from the sea; and the ancient castle is made use of, to keep the records, and prisoners for debt in the liberty of Furnes. It is 20 miles N. W. of Lancaster, and 257 N. N. W. of London. Lon. 14. 35. lat. 54. 18.

DAMAR, a famous and considerable town of Asia, in Arabia the Happy. Lon. 67. 0. lat. 16. 0.

DAMASCUS, now called SHAM, a town of Turkey in Asia, and in Syria. It is a very ancient place, which has been in several hands, and was at last taken by the Turks in 1516. It once had three walls, which are almost entirely ruined; and of the several suburbs which it formerly had, there remains only one, which extends three miles in length from N. to W. The form of this town is an exact square, each side being a mile and a half long. The extraordinary beauty of this place is owing to several streams, which run a-cross the plain of Damascus, and water all the gardens, supply the public fountains, and run into every house. The most remarkable things are the caravansaries, which consist of long galleries, supported by marble pillars, and surrounding a great square court. There is a mesque belonging to one, which is very handsome, and adorned on the inside with columns of curious marble. The castle is like a little town, having its own streets and houses, and the famous Damascus steel was kept here in a magazine. The houses of this place are built of wood, with their fronts backward, and within is a court. In the street there is nothing to be seen but walls without windows, and yet the insides are richly adorned. The mosques are the handsomest buildings, of which there are about 200, whereof the most stately was a Christian church. The only thing besides this, worth notice, is the strait street which runs a-cross the city and suburbs in a direct line; on each side there are shops, where all sorts of rich merchandises are to be sold. The gardens are always extremely handsome; and they have several manufactures, among which that of sabres and knives has been most famous. It is an archbishop's see, and contains great numbers of Christians and Jews. In short, many would have it to have been the seat of paradise. It stands on the river Barida, in a very fertile plain, 112 miles

- DAMBREA, a province of Africa, in Abyssinia, near a great lake of the same name, not far from the river Nile. Its fertile and watered by several rivers. Some pretend the capital town is called Dambea; but this is uncertain.
- DAMGARTIN, a town of Germany, in Pomerania, with a castle. It belongs to the Swedes, and is seated on the river Recknits, 17 miles W. of Stralsund. Lon. 30. 45. lat. 54. 20.
- DAMIETTA, an ancient and celebrated town of Africa, in Egypt, seated at one of the eastern mouths of the river Nile, with a good harbour, and a Greek archbishop's see. It is one of the richest places in Egypt, and some take it to be the ancient Pelusium, but others will not allow it. It is 100 miles N. of Cairo, 125 N. E. of Alexandria, and 78 E. of Rosetta. Lon. 45. 55. lat. 31. 6.
- DAMIANO, St. a town of Italy, in Monterrat, famous for a siege it sustained of three months in 1553. The fortifications are now demolished; and it is 18 miles W. by N. of Vercelli. Lon. 23. 38. lat. 45. 33.
- DAMME, a strong town of the Netherlands. It was taken by the Duke of Marlborough in 1706, and belongs to the house of Austria. It is seated near the sea, 3 miles N. E. from Bruges, and 5 S. W. of Sluys. Lon. 20. 50. lat. 51. 14.
- DAMVILLIERS, a town of France, in the duchy of Luxemburg, which was dismantled in 1673. It is seated on a mount in a marshy country, 15 miles N. E. of Verdun, 27 W. of Thionville, and 30 S. W. of Luxemburg. Lon. 23. 8. lat. 49. 22.
- DANCALA, or DONGOLA, a town of Africa, in Nubia, seated on the eastern bank of the river Nile, on the declivity of a dry sandy hill. The houses are ill-built, and the streets half deserted, they being filled with heaps of sand brought down by the waters from the mountain. The castle is in the center of the town, which is large and spacious, but not very strong. It is 150 miles N. of Senaar. Lon. 52. 10. lat. 15. 6.
- DANNEBERG, a town of Germany, in the circle of Lower Saxony, and capital of a district of the same name. It belongs to the Elector of Hanover, and is seated on the river Teitze, near the Elbe. It is 40 miles S. E. of Lauenburg, and 75

- N. by E. of Brunswick. Lon. 29. 20. lat. 53. 18.
- DANTZICK, one of the largest, richest, and strongest towns of Europe, capital of Regal Prussia, and of Pomerelia in Poland, with a famous harbour, a bishop's see, and an university. It is encompassed with a wall and fortifications of great extent. The houses are well built of stone or brick, six or seven stories high; and the granaries, containing vast quantities of corn and naval stores, are still higher, to which the ships lay close, and take in their lading. The arsenal is well provided, and the exchange is a handsome structure. It is reckoned to contain 200,000 inhabitants, though the died of the plague, in 1700, above 30000 persons. The college is provided with very learned professors. It is said to be under the protection of Poland; but in 1706, the English, Dutch and Prussians, entered into an alliance for its protection. In 1734 it was besieged and bombarded by the Russians, because they would not acknowledge Augustus III. for their king. King Stanislaus was then in the town, who finding means to make his escape, it surrendered by capitulation in 1734. It carries on a great trade, particularly in corn, timber, and naval stores, which are chiefly purchased by the Dutch. It is said, that in one year they export 700,000 tons of corn. It is a free hanziatic town, governed by its own laws, and own magistrates, and all extraordinary affairs are decided by the council; but if any thing very important happens, it is carried before the grand chancellor of Poland, or the diet. The established religion is the Lutheran; but there are Papists, Calvinists, and Anabaptists, who are all tolerated. The magistrates consist of 30 senators, four of which are burgo-masters; besides which, there are 13 consuls, who elect the burgo-masters out of their own body, and they likewise appoint all other officers; an hundred burghers are elected to represent the people's grievances, to defend their privileges, and to inspect the administration of the government. They coin money, with the king's head on one side, and the city-arms on the other. The jurisdiction of this town extends about 50 miles round it; and they maintain a garrison at their own expence. It is seated on the western banks of the river Weisfel, or Visula, near the Gulph of Angul, in the Baltic DANUBE, the largest and most considerable river in Europe, which rises in the Black Forest, near Zumberg; and running N. E. through Suedia, passes by Ulm, the capital of that country; then running E. through Bavaria and Austria, passes by Ratibon, Passau, Ens, and Vienna. It then enters Hungary, and runs S. E. from Presburg to Buda, and so on to Belgrade; after which it divides Bulgaria from Moldavia and Moldavia, discharging itself by several channels into the Black Sea, through the province of Bessarabia. Towards the mouth, it was called the Ister by the ancients; and it is now said, that four of the mouths are choked up with sand, and that there are only two now remaining. It begins to be navigable for boats at Ulm, and receives several large rivers as it passes along. It is so deep between Buda and Belgrade, that the Turks and Christians have had men of war upon it; and yet it is not navigable to the Black Sea, on account of the cataracts.

DARAB, a town and fort of Lower Hungary, built by the Turks in 1685, and taken by the Imperialists the next year, in which hands it remains. It is seated on the river Drava, 10 miles from its confluence with the Danube, and at the confluence of Black, 8 miles S. of Banaway, and 20 N. W. of Belgrade. Lon. 36. 45. lat. 45. 45.

DARDANELLES, two ancient and strong castles of Turkey, one of which is in Roman, and the other in Natolia, on each side the canal formerly called the Hellespont. This keeps up a communication with the Archipelago, and the propontis or sea of Marmora. The mouth of the canal is four miles and a half over; and the castles were built in 1650, to secure the Turkish fleet from the inroads of the Venetians. The ships that come from Constantinople are lashed at the cable on the side of Natolia, to see what they have on board. These castles are not built on the foundations of Sestos and Abydos, nor even near the places where they stood, as some have erroneously asserted.

DARFI-HAMARA, a town of Africa, in the kingdom of Fez, built by the Romans. Its trade consists in oil and corn; and it is seated on a mountain. Lon. 6. 6. lat. 34. 20.

DARHA, or DRASS, a large province of Africa, lying on a river of the same name, in the dominions of the king of Morocco. It abounds in honey and excellent dates.

DARIEL, a narrow isthmus, or neck of land, which joins N. and S. America, having the N. Sea on one side, and the S. Sea on the other. It is also the name of a province in Terra Firma, which is not the richest, but of the greatest importance of any in the possession of the Spaniards; for all the wealth of Peru is brought thither, and from hence imported into Europe. There are many high mountains; and the low grounds are often overflowed with the great rains. In this isthmus there are places where the Spaniards have no dominion, particularly where Mr. Water lived for some time. Here the men go stark-naked, and they have a silver plate fastened to their noses, which runs over their mouths, and is in the shape of a half-moon. The women have a ring hanging down in the same manner, which passes through the bridge of the nose. They have also several necklaces, or chains of teeth, shells, beads, and the like, hanging down from the neck to the pit of the stomach. Their houses are mostly thin and scattered, and always by a river side, with plantations lying about them. They are built with small posts set upright, about seven feet high, which are lashed with sticks, and daubed over with earth. The men clear the plantations, and the women cultivate them. The girls are employed in picking and spinning cotton, which the women weave, and the cloths are chiefly used for hammocks. It is the business of the men to make baskets, which they do very neatly with canes, reeds, or palmeto leaves dyed of several colours. Each man has several wives, who live together in great harmony. They are greatly addicted to dancing to the sound of a pipe and drum, and play a great many antick tricks like our tumblers. When they go out a-hunting, the women carry in their buckets plantains, bonanoes, yams, potatoes, and cassava-roots ready roasted. When they travel, they guide themselves by the sun; and when it does not shine, by the wind; for they know the point from which it comes, by the bending of the trees. When they come to rivers, the women and children, as well as men, swim over them. They have no distinction of days, or weeks, but reckon their time by the course of the moon. The animals, as well beasts as birds, are the same as in other countries of the same climate. The peccary is not unlike a hog, and black, with little short legs, and yet is very nimble. They have been generally said to have the naivel on their backs; but this is a mistake; for it is only a gland, which secretes a matter of a stronger smell than that of musk. The warree is another kind of wild hog, with little ears and great tusks, and they are covered all over with thick set bristles. They have plenty of deer, which yet they never kill; and the rabbits are as large as our hares, but they have no tails, and their ears are small, and claws long. There are great droves of monkeys, of several kinds, and of several colours, some with beards, and some without.

DARKING, a town of Surry, with a market on Thursdays, and one fair, viz. on May 23, for horses, bullocks, sheep and toys. It is seated on a branch of the river Mole, not far from Box, or White-Hill, where the river falls into the ground. On this hill there are great plenty of box-trees. The market is noted for corn and provisions, and more particularly for fowls. It is 12 miles E. of Guilford, and 24 S. W. of London. Lon. 17. 15. lat. 51. 18.

* DARLEY-FLASH, a village in Derbyshire, with two fairs, on May 13, and October 27, for sheep and cattle.

DARLINGTON, a town in the county of Durham, with a market on Mondays, and four fairs, viz. on Easter-Monday, Whit-Monday, Monday fortnight after Whit-Monday, and November 22, for cattle, horses, and sheep. It is seated in a flat on the river Skerne, which falls into the Tees. It is a pretty large place consisting of several streets, and has a spacious market-place. The market is well supplied with corn, live cattle, and provisions. It is 19 miles S. of Durham, 30 N. by W. of York, and 243 N. by W. of London. Lon. 16. 20. lat. 54. 30.

DARNESTADT, a town of Germany, in the circle of the Upper Rhine, and capital of the landgraviate of Heils-Bunnsstadt, with a handsome castle, where its own prince generally resides. There has been lately built several handsome houses, and churches, and there is likewise a good college. It is seated on a river of the same name, 15 miles S. of Frankfort, 17 S. E. of Mentz, 20 N. E. of Worms, and 30 N. W. of Heidelberg. Lon. 26. 15. lat. 49. 50.

DARTFORD, a town in Kent, with a market on Saturdays, and one fair, viz. on July 22, for horses and bullocks. It is seated on the river Darent, not far from its influx into the Thames, on the road to Rochester, and is accommodated with good inns. It is 7 miles W. of Gravesend, and 16 E. by S. of London. Lon. 17. 51. lat. 51. 25.

DARTMOUTH, a sea-port town of Devonshire, with a market on Fridays; but no fairs. It is seated on the declivity of a hill, by the river Dert, near its fall into the sea, and has a commodious harbour. It is a well-frequented and inhabited place, having a considerable trade by sea. It is a mayor-town, taken out of several parishes, and is large and well-built, containing 3 churches; but the streets are narrow and bad, though they are all paved. It has the title of an earldom, and sends two members to parliament. It is 31 miles S. S. W. of Exeter, and 19 S. W. by S. of London. Lon. 13. 35. lat. 50. 25.

DARWENT, a river which rises in the Peak of Derbyshire, and running from N. to S. through that county, falls into the Trent.

* DASSEN-EYLAND, OR, THE ISLE OF DEEP, is one of the three small islands to the N. of the Cape of Good-Hope. It is so called, on account of the great number of deer which were first carried thither in 1601. There are also sheep there, whose tails weigh 19 pounds.

DAVENTRY, OR, DAINTRY, a town of Northamptonshire, with a market on Wednesdays, and five fairs, on Easter-Monday, for horses and horned cattle; on June 6, for hogs, and all sorts of goods; on August 3, for horned cattle; on October 2, for cattle, cheese, and onions; and on October 27, called Ram-fair, chiefly for sheep. It is seated on the side of a hill, and is a pretty handsome town on the great road to Chester and Carlisle; and the market is well supplied with horses, cattle, sheep, corn, and provisions. It is 12 miles W. of Northampton, 20 S. E. of Coventry, and 75 N. W. of London. Lon. 16. 20. lat. 52. 12.

feated in a barren soil on the river Hen, not a mile from the sea-shore. It was once a considerable place, and had walls which are now demolished; but it is small at present, and thinly inhabited; however, the cathedral is a pretty good structure. From the cape, near this place, there is a prospect into Ireland. It is 24 miles N. W. of Pembroke, 15 W. N. W. of Haverford-West, and 270 W. by N. of London. Lon. 12. 15. lat. 52. 0.

DAVID'S, ST. a town and fort of Asia, in the peninsula on this side the Ganges, and on the coast of Coromandel. It is an English factory, and one of the strongest places they have in the East-Indies. The fort stands close to the river, and the territory belonging to it is 8 miles on the sea-shore, and 4 within land. It produces good long cloths, chints, callicoos, and muslins. Each house has a garden, and there are plenty of black cattle, but small. The rivers and sea abound with good fish. It is 80 miles S. of Fort St. George, and 10 S. of Pondicherry. Lon. 97. 30. lat. 11. 30.

DAVIS'S STRAITS, an arm of the sea, between Greenland and North-America, which was discovered by Davis in 1585, when he attempted to find a north-west passage to China.

DAUMA, a town and Kingdom of Africa, in Negroland, whose inhabitants are said to be very rich. Lon. 34. 10. lat. 8. 0.

DAUN, a town of Germany, in the electorate of Treves, or Triers, seated on the river Lezer, at the foot of a mountain on which a castle is built that commands it. It is 12 miles N. of Montroyal.

DAUPHIN, an island so called. See MADAGASCAR.

DAUPHIN-FORT, belonging to the French, and built by them on the E. coast of the island of Madagascar, in Africa. Lon. 62. 45. lat. S. 24. 55.

DAUPHINY, a province of France, bounded on the W. by the river Rhone, on the N. by the Rhone and Savoy, on the S. by Provence, and on the E. by the Alps. Hence the presumptive heir of France is called the Dauphin. In some places it is very fertile, and produces corn, wine, olives, wool, coppers, silk, chrystal, iron, and copper. But two thirds of this province is barren, and the inhabitants are obliged to go into other countries for subsistence. The mountains abound in simples, and game of all sorts, and here are fire-trees proper for masts. The principal rivers are, the Rhone, the Durance, the Isere, and the Drone. There are a great number of mineral springs, and Grenoble is the capital town.

DAUX, or ACRS, an ancient town of France, in Gascony, and capital of Landes, with a bishop's see and remarkable baths. It is seated on the river Adour, 25 miles N. E. of Bayonne, 35 W. of Aire, and 75 S. by W. of Bourdeaux. Lon. 16. 36. lat. 43. 42.

DEAD-MAN'S-HEAD, a cape, or point of land, near Tregony, in Cornwall, between St. Maws and Fowey.

DEAD-SEA, a lake of Asia, in Palestine, into which the river Jordan runs. Some have pretended to see the tops of the house of Sodom and Gomorrah in this Lake, but Maundrel assures us it is a fable. It is about 70 miles long, and 20 broad, being enclosed on the E. and W. by high mountains. It abounds in bitumen, which has a resemblance of pitch.

DEAL, a sea-port town in Kent, which, though pretty large, has no market, nor fair. It is seated near the sea, and is a member of Sandwich, governed by a mayor and jurats. It has a church, a chapel, and about 1000 houses, which are mostly low, and built with bricks; these form three long but narrow streets. The inhabitants amount to about 4500; but as no manufacture is carried on here, the trades-people chiefly depend on the sea-faring men who resort thither. This place is defended by a castle built by Henry VIII. and near it are two others. Between this place and Goodwin's Sands are the Downs, where the Ships usually ride at going out or coming home. It is 7 miles S. by E. of Sandwich, 7 N. by E. of Dover, and 75 E. by S. of London. Lon. 19. 5. lat. 51. 16.

* DEAN, a town of Gloucestershire, with a market on Mondays, and two fairs, on Easter-monday, and O'Sober 10, for cattle, sheep, and horses. It had its name from the forest of Dean, in which it is seated, and is a pretty good town. It is 11 miles W. of Gloucester, 14 E. of Monmouth, and 14 W. S. W. of London. Lon. 15. 5. lat. 51. 55. It is called Mitchell-Dean, to distinguish it from a lesser town of the same name. The forest of Dean comprehends that part of Gloucestershire which lies between tween the Severn and Monmouthshire, and contains 23 parishes and four market-towns, with many mines of iron and coal, besides stone-quarries.

DEBENHAM, a town of Suffolk, with a market on Fridays, and one fair, on July 24, for braziers, and toys. It is seated near the head of the river Deben, on the side of a hill. It is but a mean town, and has neither trade nor any thing else remarkable. It is 24 miles E. of St. Edmundsbury, and 86 N. E. of London. Lon. 18. 55. lat. 52. 20.

DEBRECEN, a town of Upper Hungary, capital of a district of the same name. It was taken by the Turks in 1684, and the Imperialists retook it the same year. It is 45 miles S. E. of Tokay, 45 N. of Great Waradin, and 87 E. of Buda. Lon. 38. 46. lat. 47. 30.

DECAN, a kingdom of Asia, in the peninsula on this side the Ganges, which is bounded on the S. by the kingdom of Bijnagar, on the W. by the ocean, on the N. by Mogolistan, and on the E. by the mountains of Balagate, which separate it from the kingdom of Golconda. The chief inland town is Aurengabad, on the coast of Bombay. The principal trade consists in cottons and silks.

DECISE, an ancient town of France, in the Orleanois, and in the district of Nivernois. It is seated on the river Loire, 20 miles S. E. of Nevers, and 125 S. by E. of Paris. Lon. 21. 6. lat. 46. 50.

DECKENDORF, a town of Germany, in Lower Bavaria, 37 miles S. E. of Ratisbon. It was taken by the Swedes in 1641, and is seated near the river Danube. Lon. 30. 44. lat. 48. 46.

DEDDINGTON, a town in Oxfordshire, with a market on Saturdays, and two fairs, on August 10, for horses and cows, and on November 22, for horses, cows, and hogs. It is seated on a rising ground, in a fertile soil, and is a pretty large place. It is 16 miles N. of Oxford, 34 S. of Coventry, and 62 W. N. W. of London. Lon. 16. 15. lat. 51. 55.

* DEBHAM, a town of Essex, which has a market on Tuesdays, and a fair, on Easter-Tuesday and Wednesday for toys, &c. It has one old large church, which has a remarkable fine tower-Archie, of the gothick-order, and has a great deal of carved work about it, but this is much injured by time; here is also a presbyterian meeting house, and three very good schools. The town consists of about 400 loby houses, and the streets, tho' not paved, are very clean, occasioned by their lying pretty high. It is 6 miles N. of Colchester, 5 W. of Manningtree, and 58 N. E. of London. Lon. 18. 45. lat. 52. 5.

DER, a river which riseth in Merionethshire, in N. Wales, and runs E. to the borders of Deubighshire, when, turning N. it washes the walls of Chester, and then, with a broad channel, falls into the Irish Sea.

DEEPING, a town of Lincolnshire, with a market on Thursdays, and 3 fairs, on the second Wednesday after May 11, Wednesday before August 1, and October 10, for horses, stock, and timber of all sorts. It is seated on the river Welland in a ferry ground, and is at present but a small place. It is 6 miles E. of Stamford, and 87 N. of London. Lon. 17. 15. lat. 52. 55.

* DEHEURD, a village of Cardiganshire, in S. Wales, with one fair, on May 9, for pigs and pedlars ware.

* DEINSE, a town of Austrian Flanders, seated on the river Lys, 5 miles S. W. of Ghent, 9 N. W. of Oudergh, and 12 N. E. of Courtray. Lon. 21. 11. lat. 51. 59.

* DELRUGH, a town of Germany, in the circle of Westphalia, and in the bishoprick of Paderborn, near the source of the river Ens.

DELT, a town of the United Provinces, and capital of Zeeland, in the province of Holland. It is a pretty large place, very clean and well built, with canals in the streets, planted on each side with trees. The public buildings, especially the town-house, are very magnificent. Here are two churches, in one of which is the tomb of the prince of Orange, who was assassinated, and in the other that of Admiral Tromp. It has a fine animal, well furnished, is about two miles in circumference, and is defended against inundations by three dams, or dykes. Here a prodigious quantity of fine earthen ware is made, known by the name of Delt-ware, but it has no other trade. It is pleasantly situated among the meadows on the river Schie, 8 miles N. E. of Rotterdam, and 30 S. W. of Amsterdam. Lon. 21. 48. lat. 52. 6.

* DEFEZ, a fortress of the United Provinces, in Groningen, seated on the river Fivel, 10 miles S. W. of Eriskien, and 15 N. of Groningen. Lon. 24. 26. lat. 53. 12.

DELLT, a town of Afga, in the dominions of the Great Mogul, and capital of the province of the same name. It is a large and populous place, being about 10 miles in circumference, and was the residence of the Great Mogul when Kouli Khan invaded India, and took him and his court prisoners, and released him upon very hard conditions. He seized upon the greatest part of his treasure, and obliged him to transfer some of the provinces which lie next to Persia. It is surrounded with a brick-wall, and defended by a fortress. Some are inclined to think that it is the place where King Darius resided, so famous in the history of Alexander the Great. It is seated on the river Gemma, 100 miles N. of Agra, and 112 E. of Lahor. Lon. 97. 0. lat. 28. 20.

DELLY, a province of Afga, in Asia, bounded by Bencab and Jambou on the N. Bicar on the E. Agra on the S. and Indostan on the W.

DEMENTHOVEN, a freest town of Germany, in the circle of Westphalia, and county of Oldenburg. The old castle is entirely demolished. It now belongs to Denmark, and is seated on the river Dale, near the Weiler, 8 miles S. W. of Bremen, and 118 E. of Oldenburg. Lon. 26. 10. lat. 52. 10.

DELOS, an island of the Aegean sea, which lies between two fine channels, the one towards Mycone, and the other towards Rhemus, and is now called Del, not Sidi, as some erroneously have thought. There are abundance of very fine ruins, supposed to be of the temples of Diana and Apollo, whose birth-place it is thought to be. It is about 6 miles in circumference, but is now quite destitute of inhabitants. Lon. 45. 20. lat. 37. 22.

DEMENOS, a town of Turkey, in Asia, in the province formerly called Achiaia, now Libania, where the town of Casiro now stands, which is nothing but a small village. It was formerly famous for the Oracles of Apollo, which they came from all parts to consult.

DEMENTHE, a town of Switzerland, in the bishoprick of Basle, 15 miles N. W. of Solierre, and 20 S. W. of Basle. Lon. 28. 40. lat. 47. 17.

DELTA is a part of Lower Egypt, which takes up a considerable space of ground between the branches of the Nile and the Mediterranean Sea; the ancients called it the island of Delta, because it is in the shape of a triangle, like the Greek letter of that name. It is about 130 miles along the coast from Damietta to Alexandria, and 70 on the sides, from the place where the Nile begins to divide itself. It is the most plentiful country of all Egypt, and it rains more here than in other parts, but the fertility is chiefly owing to the inundation of the river Nile. The principal towns on the coasts are, Damietta, Rosetta, and Alexandria; but, within land, Menechia and Maala, or Elmal.

* DEMENTHOVEN, a town of the Russian Empire, in the county of Smolenskau, seated on the river Ugra. Lon. 21. 0. lat. 52. 30.

* DEMMIS, an ancient town of Germany, in the duchy of Sardin, and in Pomerania, subject to Sweden. It is seated on the river Peen. Lon. 32. 20. lat. 54. 3.

DEMONA, or DEMER, a river of the Austrian Netherlands, which has its source near Bilken, to the W. of Macfricht, in the territory of Leige, where it washes Hasselt, and then entering Erabant, passes to Dils, Sichen, Arschot, and Mechlin, after which it takes the name of Ruppel, and falls into the Schelde over against Ruppelmond.

DEMONA, or the VAL-DE-DEMONA, a considerable valley of Sicily, 100 miles in length, and 62 in breadth, being very fertile, and Messina is the principal town.

* DEMONA, a fort of Italy, in Piedmont, seated on the river Stura, 10 miles S. W. of Coni. It was taken by the prince of Conti in 1744. Lon. 25. 1. lat. 44. 13.

* DEMAIN, a village of the Netherlands, in Hainault, seated on the river Schelde, remarkable for an abbey of canonicks, and for a victory gained by the duke of Villars, in 1712.

DENBIGH, the capital town of Denbighshire, in N. Wales, with a market on Wednesdays, and three fairs, on May 17, July 17, and September 25, for cattle and small pedlars-ware. It is seated on the side of a rocky hill, on a branch of the river Clwyd, which formerly was a place of great strength, with an impregnable castle, now demolished. The town is large, well built, and inhabited by tanners and glovers, and has the title of an earldom. It sends one member to Parliament, and the number is equal for wool, cattle, and provisions.

provisions. It is 27 miles W. of Chester, and 209 N. W. of London. Lon. 14. 5. lat. 53. 15.

DENBIGHSHIRE, a county of N. Wales, 39 miles in length, and 15 in breadth. It is bounded on the E. by Flintshire and Shropshire, on the W. by Carnarvonshire, on the S. by Merionethshire, and on the N. by the Irish Sea. It contains 6400 houses, 38,400 inhabitants, 57 parishes, and 4 market-towns. It has some good pastures, and feeds a great number of horned cattle, sheep, and goats. The air is good, but sharp, and the soil hilly, intermixed with fruitful valleys. Among the hills there are stones called Druid-stones, and small pillars, with inscriptions, which no one hitherto has been able to read.

• DENBURY, a village in Devonshire, to the S. of Newton-buffel, with one fair, on September 8, for cheese and soap.

DENDERMOND, a handsome and strong town of the Austrian Netherlands, in Flanders, with a strong citadel. It was taken by the allies in 1706, and by the French in 1745. It is surrounded by marshes and fine meadows, which the inhabitants can lay under water when they please. It is seated at the confluence of the rivers Dender and Schelde, 15 miles S. W. of Antwerp, 12 E. of Ghent, and 15 W. of Mechlin. Lon. 21. 38. lat. 51. 3.

DENIA, an ancient and strong town of Spain, in the kingdom of Valencia, with a strong castle, and a commodious harbour. It is seated at the foot of a mountain, near the sea, 45 miles S. of Valencia, and 52 N. by E. of Alicant. Lon. 18. 8. lat. 39. 0.

DENMARK, a kingdom of Europe, bounded on the E. by the Baltick Sea, on the W. and N. by the ocean, and on the S. by Germany. The country is generally flat, and the soil a barren sand. The air is rendered foggy by the neighbourhood of the seas and the lakes, of which it is full. Denmark, properly so called, consists of Jutland and the islands of Zealand, and Funen, with the little isles about them; but the king of Denmark's dominions contain the kingdom of Norway, the dutchies of Holstein, Oldenburg, and Delmonhorst. There is no considerable river, and the winter continues 7 or 8 months. In the summer the heat is very considerable, and the days are long. The commodities are corn, pulse, but chiefly horses, and large beees.

The kingdom of Denmark was formerly elective, but since 1660 it was rendered hereditary, even to the daughters, partly by consent, and partly by force; at which time the nobility lost most of their privileges. They have very few laws, and those are so plain that they have little need of lawyers, for causes are soon tried. They allow but of one apothecary in a town, except at Copenhagen, where there are two. Their shops are visited by the physicians once a-week, and all the peevish drugs are destroyed. The inhabitants are protestants since the year 1522, when they embraced the confession of Augsburg. The forces which the king of Denmark has usually on foot are near 40,000, but most of them are in the pay of other princes. The revenues are computed at 500,000 l. a-year, which arise from the crown lands and duties. The produce of Norway consists in pitch, tar, fish, oil, and dealboards. Copenhagen is the capital town. Lon. from 25. 25. to 30. 30. lat. from 54. 0. to 57. 30.

DENYS, ST. a famous town in the island of France, with a Benedictine abbey, wherein are the tombs of the kings of France, and a considerable treasure. It is seated on the small river Croule, five miles N. of Paris. Lon. 20. 1. lat. 48. 56.

• DENYS, ST. a town of France, in Lower Languedoc, and in the diocese of Carcassonne.

DERBY, the county-town of Derbyshire, with 3 markets, on Wednesdays, Fridays, and Saturdays, and 8 fairs, on February 25, which is a meeting, for cheese; on Wednesday in the Lent-af-fize-week for horses, now almost neglected; Friday in Easter-week for horned cattle; first Friday in May, Friday in Whitfun-week, and July 25 for horned cattle; September 27 for cheese, first Friday before Michaelmas for horned cattle. It is seated on the river Derwent, over which there is a handsome stone-bridge, and a small brook runs through the town, under several bridges. It is a large, populous, and well frequented place, containing five parish-churches, whereof All-Saints is the chief, whose tower-spectle is as high as most in the nation. The shire-hall is a stone-building, where the assizes are kept. It has the title of an earldom, and sends two members to parliament. In 1734 there was a mill erected here, of a great length, by Sir Thomas Lombe, for the manufacturing of silk, the model of which he brought from Italy. It is governed by a mayor, 9 aldermen, and other officers, but is a place of no great trade, except in corn. The rebels came as far as this town in 1745, and then returned back into Scotland. It is 36 miles N. of Coventry, 24 N. W. of Leicester, and 122 N. W. by N. of London. The Town is well paved, and adorned with many handsome buildings. Lon. 16. 10. lat. 52. 57.

It is a town of great antiquity, and was much larger than it is at present, the ruins of the walls being still to be seen in some places. It is pleasantly seated on the river Frome, on a Roman road. The houses are well-built, and it has three handsome streets. It sends two members to parliament, is the place where the assize are held, and gives title to a marquis. It is governed by a mayor, 12 aldermen, a recorder, and 27 common council-men. It has 3 churches, and about 1000 houses. The streets are broad and paved, and a fine terrace-walk, planted with trees, almost surrounds the town. This place was formerly a city. At about half a mile's distance stands Maiden-Castle, with intrenchments 30 feet deep, thrown up round it in the time of the Romans. It is 8 miles N. of Weymouth, and 12 1/2 W. by S. of London. Lon. 15. 0. lat. 50. 40.
- DORCHESTER, a town in Oxfordshire, whose market is now disused, and the fair, on Easter-Tuesday, is only for pleasure. It was formerly of much greater account than it is at present; however, being on the great road to Gloucester, it is provided with some very good inns; and the church is a large handsome structure. It was formerly a bishop's see. It is 10 miles S. E. of Oxford, and 49 W. N. W. of London. Lon. 16. 27. lat. 51. 10.

- DORSETSHIRE, a county of England, 52 miles in length, and 27 in breadth. It is bounded on the N. by Wiltshire and Somersetshire, on the S. by the English Channel, on the W. by Devonshire, and on the E. by Hampshire. It contains 21,643 houses, 121,640 inhabitants, 248 parishes, and 22 market-towns, nine of which send members to parliament. It produces all the commodities common to other counties; besides which, it has both linen and woollen manufactures. The air is good, but sharp on the hills, and on the sea-coast it is mild and pleasant. The soil is sandy, except in some rich meadows, plains, and valleys. There are many hills, which feed great numbers of sheep; and on the sea-coasts there is plenty of fish. The principal rivers are the Stour, the Frome, and the Piddle.
- DORSTADT, a town of Germany, in the circle of Westphalia, and county of Mark, belonging to the Elector of Cologne. It is seated on the river Lippe, 20 miles N. E. of Doylburg, 50 N. of Cologne, and 37 S. W. of Munster. Lon. 24. 38. lat. 51. 38.

university. It was taken by the Allies in 1710, and retaken by the French in 1712, after the suspension of arms between Great-Britain and France. It is seated on the river Scarp, from whence there is a canal to Deule, 15 miles N. W. of Cambray, 12 E. of Arras, and 32 S. W. of Mons. Lon. 20. 45. lat. 50. 22.

DOVE, a river which divides Derbyshire from Staffordshire, and falls into the Trent near Burton.

DOVER, a sea-port town in the county of Kent, with two markets, on Wednesdays and Saturdays, and one fair, on November 22, for weaning-apparel and haberdashery-ware. It is strong both by nature and art, being situated between high cliffs, and defended by a strong castle built on a high hill E. from the town; it was repaired in 1756; and there are barracks for 3000 men. The town was once walled round, and had ten gates; but there only now remains three, and these much out of repair. It is one of the cinque ports, and a corporation, consisting of a mayor, and 12 jurats. It sends two members to parliament, and is the station of the packet-boats, that, in time of peace, pass between Dover and Calais, from which it is distant only 21 miles. It was once of much larger extent, and had seven churches, which are now reduced to two in the town, and one in the castle. It consists of four long narrow streets, and several cross-streets, or alleys. The houses, which are about 500, are low, some built with brick, and others with flint-stone. The inhabitants, who amount to about 5600, are chiefly supported by the shipping, and by ship-building, rope-making, and a small manufactory of sacking. From hence, in fine weather, there is a prospect of the coast of France. It is 15 miles S. E. of Canterbury, and 71 S. E. by E. of London. Lon. 19. 0. lat. 51. 6.

DRAVE, a considerable river of Germany, which rises in the Tirol, on the confines of the archbishoprick of Salzburg. It runs a-crook Carinthia, and passes by several towns, and then entering Styria, it passes to Marburg; then it runs along the confines of Slavonia and Lower Hungary, passing by Esbeck, and a little after falls into the Danube.

DRAYTON, a town of Shropshire, with a market on Wednesdays, and three fairs, on Wednesday before Palm-Sunday, on September 19, and on October 24, for horned cattle, horses, sheep, hemp, and woollen-cloth and horses. It is seated on the river Tarn, which here separates this county from Staffordshire. It has a good market for horses and cattle, and but indifferent for any thing else. It is 17 miles E. by N. of Shrewsbury, and 149 N. E. of London. Lon. 15. 5. lat. 52. 50.

DRESDEN, a town of Germany, and capital of the electorate of Saxony, where the elector, who is king of Poland, resided before it came into the hands of the Prussians. It is divided by the river Elbe into the Old and New Towns, which are joined together by a bridge supported by 19 piers, and is 685 paces long. In 1730 balustrades were erected on each side, which are extremely well done; one side is for the foot-passengers that enter into the town, and the other for those that go out. Both towns are fortified with strong fortifications: however, it was taken by the King of Prussia in 1745, but was soon rendered back in consequence of a peace between him and the King of Poland. All the houses are built of square free stone, and are almost all of the same height. They have lately built a very magnificent church for the Roman Catholics, which stands between the Elbe, the bridge, and the cattle; and there has been to many palaces erected since, that it is become one of the handsomest cities in Germany. Before the place where they keep guard in the New Town, there is an equestrian statue of Augustus II, looking towards Poland. Travellers take much notice of the elector's stables, of the cabinet of curiosities, the arsenal, the court of the hunters, the garden, the palaces of Japan and of Holland, the mint, the green-magazine, the elector's library, the great garden without the walls, and other things which cannot be beheld without admiration. With regard to ecclesiastic affairs, there is a superior consistory, on which the two universities depend, as well as the two consistory of viremburg and Leisnick. The principal church is that of the Holy Cross, which is a superb structure, and the steeple is so strong, that cannon may be planted thereon. The situation of this city is but low, and yet there is a fine prospect all round about it. The palaces of Holland and Japan are full of curiosities from that country and China, with a great variety of Dresden porcelain. This city was taken by the King of Prussia in 1760, after he had discovered the designs that the King of Poland and the Empress-Queen; but it was taken in 1759. It is 10 miles S. E. of Meissen, 40 S. EDINBURGH, the capital city of Scotland, whose, for some ages before the union, the kings of Scotland had their usual residence, at Holy-rood-house. It consists principally of one street, with lanes, or synds running from it, which rises gradually from Holy-rood house to the Canon-gate-head, which is a suburb, and from thence to the castle, which is the highest part of the city. The principal street, besides this, is called the Cowgate, and is on the S. side of the other; from this several lanes run up the hill, towards the university and Heriot's-hospital. From the castle to the palace is usually reckoned a Scotch mile in length, but in breadth it is nowhere above half a mile. The houses are built of stone, and are, in the high-street, 6 or 7 stories high, each story being a distinct house; and near the parliament-chase they are 14 stories high, or upwards, but then they are built on the side of a hill, and on the other side they are of the common height. It has a lake on the N. side, and everywhere else is surrounded by a stone wall. The castle is very strong, both by art and nature, and was kept by the king's forces in the last rebellion, though the city itself was taken. The harbour of this city is at Leith, a pretty large town, to which there is a fine walk from Edinburgh. It is seated in the most plentiful part of this kingdom, and water is conveyed to it by leaden-pipes, from excellent springs. The other remarkable buildings are, the parliament-house, with a large court called the Parliament-chase, in the middle of which is the statue of king Charles II. On the W. side of it is the council-house, and to the S. the sessions-house, where the supreme courts of judicature are held. The high-church, which was the cathedral, is now divided into four, which, with the rest, and the chapel in the castle, makes twelve in all. Her-riot's hospital is a stately structure, designed for the education of 140 boys. The college is on the S. side, which has large precincts, enclosed with high walls, and divided into three courts; the public schools are large and commodious, and here are houses for the professors to live in. It was built by King James VI. and has a very good library. The common burying-place of the city is Grey-Friars church-yard, where there are abundance of fine monuments. The cuttle is seated at the W. end, and is inaccessible, except on the side next the city. The palace, called Holy-rood-house, was formerly an abbey, and is a handsome, ornamented structure. This city is governed by a Lord-Bishop, four burgesses, and a common council. It is not so flourishing as it was before the union, because the great men are usually at London. It was the see of a bishop before episcopacy was abolished in 1633. It is 2 miles S. of South, 34 W. N. W. of Berwick, 17 N. E. of York, 15 N. N. W. of London, 22 N. of Grantham, and 201 N. N. W. of York; but if, as Newton says, it is 200 miles from London to York, then Edinburgh will be 400 from London. It funds two members to parliament, one for the city, and another for the shire. It was taken by the French in 1742, but they were forced to render it back the next year. It contains a number of ingenious artists, and its mineral-waters are very famous. It is seated on the river Eger, 65 miles W. of Prague, 57 S. E. of Culmbach, and 205 N. W. of Vienna. Lon. 50. 0. Lat. 50. 2.

EGERSTON, a town in Cumberland, with a market on Saturdays, and one fair, on September 14, for horses and horned cattle. It is seat of not far from the sea, on the banks of a river, over which there are two bridges, and on the top of a pebbled hill there is a strong castle. It is 14 miles S. W. by S. of Cockermouth, 59 on the same point from Carlisle, and 287 N. W. of London. Lon. 14. 20. Lat. 54. 30.

• EGLING, a village in the N. Riding of Yorkshire, not far from Gilsborough, with 4 fairs, on Tuesday before February 15, Tuesday before May 11, September 4, and Tuesday before November 22, for horned cattle, beets, and threes.

EGYPT, a celebrated and considerable country of Africa, about 550 miles in length, and 125 in breadth, where broadest. It is bounded on the N. by the Mediterranean Sea, on the S. by Nubia, on the E. by the Red-Sea and the isthmus of Suez, and on the W. by the Kingdom and desert of Barca. The broadest part is from Alexandria to Dumietta, and from thence it gradually grows narrower and narrower, till it approaches Nubia, where it is enclosed between two chains of mountains, having the Nile and a plain between them, not above half a day's journey over. These mountains run on each side of the Nile very far to the N. in such that, on the side of the desert, they are continued to the Mediterranean Sea, but, on the E. side, they do not reach as far as Cairo. These mountains, from the cataracts of the Nile to Sudi, are not above 12 or 15 miles distant from the banks of that river, but there they begin to be more open, leaving large and beautiful plains, which are watered by the waters of the Nile; then they begin to come nearer each other, as far as the pyramids of Cairo, hence it appears, that this kingdom, so famous in history for its power and the numbers of its people, has not an extent proportionable to the description the au-cents have given of it; for who can believe that it contained 20,000 towns, or cities, that the number of the inhabitants amounted to several millions, that the kings have kept armies on foot of 300,000 men, and that they have executed such prodigious works, whose magnificent ruins are still remaining; but when we consider the fertility of the country, that not a foot of ground remained uncultivated, that there were a great number of canals, which are now filled up, their accounts do not at all seem improbable. Egypt is divided into the Upper, the Middle, and the Lower, which last comprehends the Delta, which reaches from Alexandria to Damietta, and as far as Cairo; the Middle runs no farther S. than Benehah; the Upper, called formerly Thebaid, extends as far as Nubia, and the kingdom of Senar. The ancient divided Egypt into the Upper and Lower, the former of which contained the Delta, and the second the Thebaid. Since Egypt has been under the dominion of the Turks, it has been governed by a Bashaw, who resides at Cairo. Under him there are inferior governors, in the several parts of this country; those in Upper Egypt are generally Arabs, who pay tribute to the Grand-Seignior, and make presents to the Bashaw, living like little tyrants, and are frequently at war with each other. Besides these, there are several Sheiks, who preside over particular places, and are masters of a few villages. Though the air of Egypt is naturally hot, and not very wholesome, it enjoys many other advantages, that it has been all ways extremely populous. They pretend to a prodigious antiquity, and have a catalogue of kings, the first of which began to reign a great many thousand years before the flood, if you will believe their histories. However, this is certain, that their ancient kings governed Egypt till the reign of Cambyſis, who became master of it 525 years before the birth of Christ, and in their time all those wonderful structures were raised, which we cannot now behold without astonishment; these are, the pyramids, the labyrinth, the immense grottos of the Thebaid, the obelisks, the temples, and the pompous palaces, whose plans and designs are given by travellers, not to mention the Lake Mœris, and the vast canals which served both for trade, and to render the land fruitful. After the above conquest Egypt began to change its face, and Cambyſis began to shew his disposition in demolishing the temples, and persecuting the priests. After his death this country continued under the Persian yoke till the time of Alexander the Great, who, having got possession of the Persian dominions, built the famous city of Alexandria. He was succeeded by Ptolemy, the son of Lagus, 322 years before the birth of Christ. Ten of these succeeded each other till Cleopatra, the sister of the last Ptolemy, ascended the throne, in whose reign Egypt became a Roman province, and continued to till the reign of Omar, the second Califf of the Successors of Mahomet, who drove away the Romans, after it had been in their hands 700 years. When the power of the Califfs began to decline, Saladin set up in Egypt the empire of the Mammulukes, which became so powerful in time, that they extended their dominions over a great part of Africa, Syria, and Arabia. Late of all, Selim a Turkish empire, called the Sultan, and conquered Egypt, and the Turk have had possession of it ever since. The inhabitants are of four sorts, Turks, Moors, Arabs, and Christians, Coptis, or Coptis, besides Greeks, Jews, and other foreigners, the Religion of most of them is well known, and as for the Arabs, they are the same as in other places, that is, cheat and robbers, cluſing either to live in the most inaccessible places, or to rove about the deserts in search of pastures, and to way-lay the caravans. As for the Christians, who are pretty numerous in Upper Egypt, they live in extreme indigence and poverty. Egypt has always been noted for a plenty of corn, and they had vineyards planted on the banks of the Nile; but since the Turks and in, they are neglected. There was a certain trade carried on here in the Indian commodities, till the Portuguese found a way round the Cape of Good Hope, which brought it to nothing. However, the merchants of Europe visit the harbours in the Mediterranean Sea, and buy and export several merchandizes, and from other parts the natives get coral, teeth, ebony, gold-dust, musk, ambergris, and civet. The ivory is first brought from Senegal, and Morecco, and then carried over into Europe. The most valuable things which they receive from the purchase of the sea, are, Gum Arabic, rhubarb, benjamin, licia, al-a-mirach, myrrh, saffor salt-petre, sugar, sandal of cotton-wool complexion, tawney, and dark, infumines of Na are most cowardly, all day but and sleep; tremely igno-ridiculously and 53 degrees 21 ar-gard to the-mer is most the excessive-rious diten-autumn, as good an as- seasons, is a very seldom hap-ily sup- tion of the almost every-ture all the and then the to it, with the following plenty of ha-supplied wa- and reserv- miles in w- place in th- cern, flesh, sorts of ga-gypt they- dates, alm- great pl-nt here, that- the closets, together w- the cause o- mon here. tice of by- the largest ground, as- upon a ro- built on l- sizes, and- feet; but- The cover- embalm- ed tity much- in coffin- walls, an- years, at- been bro-myrrh, saffron, frankincense in tears, salt-petre, Storax, aloes, opium, indigo, sugar, sandal-wood, dates, and some sorts of cotton-cloth. With regard to the complexion of the Egyptians, it is tawney, and, the farther S. the more dark, inasmuch, that those on the confines of Nubia are almost black. They are most of them very indolent and cowardly, and the richer sort do nothing all day but drink coffee, smoke tobacco, and sleep; besides this, they are extremely ignorant, proud, haughty, and ridiculously vain. Egypt lies between 47 and 53 degrees of longitude, and between 21 and 31 of latitude. With regard to the weather in Egypt, the summer is most incommensurate on account of the excessive heats, which bring on various distempers; but then the winter, autumn, and spring, are blest with so good an air, that Egypt, during those seasons, is a delightful country. It rains very seldom in Egypt, but that want is happily supplied by the regular inundation of the Nile, as is now known to almost every one. When the waters retire all the ground is covered with mud, and then they only harrow their corn into it, without further trouble, and in the following March they have usually a plentiful harvest. Their rice-fields are supplied with water from their canals and reservoirs, because rice never thrives unless in watery grounds. There is no place in the world better furnished with corn, Beth, fish, sugar, fruits, and all sorts of garden-stuff; and in Lower Egypt they have oranges, lemons, figs, dates, almonds, cassia, and plantains, in great plenty. The sands are so fertile here, that they infiltrate themselves into the closets, chests, and cabinets, which, together with the hot winds, are probably the cause of sore eyes being so very common here. The pyramids are taken notice of by all travellers into Egypt, and the largest of them takes up 10 acres of ground, and is, as well as the rest, built upon a rock; the entire part is chiefly built of large square stones, of unequal sizes, and the height of it is about 700 feet; but travellers differ in this respect. The caverns, out of which they get the embalm'd dead bodies, is another curiosity much taken notice of; they are found in coffins set upright in the niches of the walls, and have continued there 4000 years, at least. Many of these have been brought into England, and were formerly of great use in medicines; but they are now generally neglected. The crocodiles were formerly taken great notice of, but are now to be seen in many other places, inasmuch that there is scarce a sailor but what can describe them. Likewise, the sea and river horses were thought to be only found in Egypt, but it is now known that they are all over the southern parts of Africa. The principal city is Cairo.

ELEPHANTO, an island of Asia, in the E. Indies, and on the coast of Malabar, 8 miles from the island of Bombay. It belongs to the Portuguese, and serves only to feed cattle. It took its name from the figure of an elephant carved out of a black stone 7 feet high. It is to like nature, that, at a little distance, it may be mistaken for a live elephant. In the middle there is a high mountain, taper like a blunt pyramid; and, about half-way to the top, there is a large cavity, with two passages into it, in which are pillars, bawn out of the solid rock, curiously carved. Some are of the figures of men, in several postures, and exceedingly well done; and they are all from twelve to thirteen feet high. Over the heads are represented multitudes of little people in a posture of devotion. It is a very difficult matter to declare who this extraordinary piece of workmanship was done by, for the natives cannot give the least account of it; and, indeed, it far surpasses any thing of this kind which has been done for great numbers of years.

provost is a prince of the empire, and lord of the town. It is seated on the river Jaxt, 17 miles S. E. of Hall, and 25 S. W. of Anspach. Lon. 28. 53. lat. 49. 2.

ELY, a town or city of Cambridgeshire, with a bishop's see, and a market on Saturdays. The fairs are, on Ascension day, for horses; on Thursday in the week that St. Luke's day falls in, that is, October 18, for horses, cheese, and hops. It is seated on an island of the same name, in a fenny country, on the banks of the river Ouse, which renders it very unhealthy. The bishop here has the same power as in a county-palatine, for he appoints a judge, holds the assizes, gaol-delivery, and quarter-sessions of the peace, for the liberty; and yet it is but an indifferent place, though the cathedral is a stately structure, which has a lanthorn of curious architecture; and has also one church. The city consists of only about 600 good houses, and has but one good street, well paved, the rest being not paved, and very dirty. The assizes are held here every twelve months. The river is navigable from Lynn, and the town carries on a pretty good trade; it is 17 miles N. of Cambridge, 30 S. of King's-Lynn, and 69 N. by E. of London. Lon. 17. 50. lat. 52. 24.

* ELY, a village of Glamorganshire, in S. Wales, with one fair, on July 22, for cattle.

EMBDEN, a handsome and strong town of Germany, in the circle of Westphalia, and capital of a county of the same name, called also E. Friedland, with a very good harbour. It is divided into three parts, the Old-town, the Falken, and the two suburbs. The things worth notice are, the town-house, the library, and the cathedral church. The most part of the inhabitants are protestants, or Calvinists, and there are some Lutherans, papists, and Jews. It was formerly under the protection of the United Provinces, but they sold their right to the king of Prussia in 1744, to whom it is now subject. It is seated on the river Ems, near the sea, 25 miles N. E. of Groningen, and 45 N. W. of Oldenburg. Lon. 24. 38. lat. 53. 20.

EMBOLY, a town of Turkey, in Europe, and in Macedonia, with a Greek archbishop's see. It is seated on the river Stromona, 40 miles N. E. of Salonichi, and 5 W. of Costeffa. Lon. 41. 38. lat. 40. 52.

EMERUN, or AMBRUN, a considerable town of France, in Dauphiny, and capital of the Embronnais, with an archbishop's see, whose cathedral is a handsome structure. It was taken by the duke of Savoy in 1692. It is seated near the river Durance, upon a craggy rock, 17 miles E. of Gap, 35 N. E. of Digne, and 55 S. W. of Grenoble. Lon. 24. 9. lat. 44. 34.

* EMESSA, an ancient town of Asia, in Syria, and in the government of the Bashaw of Damascus. There are still several magnificent ruins, that shew it was formerly a magnificent city.

EMMERICK, a large, rich, and handsome town of Germany, in the circle of Westphalia, and dutchy of Cleves. It carries on a considerable trade with Holland, and is seated near the Rhine, 8 miles E. of Cleves, and 20 S. E. of Nimeguen. Lon. 23. 56. lat. 51. 49.

* EMMERGREEN, a village in Dorsetshire, with one fair, on Tuesday before Holy-Thurday, for all sorts of cattle.

EMPOLI, a town of Italy, in Tuscany, with a bishop's see. It is seated on the river Arno, 17 miles S. W. of Florence, and 27 E. of Pisa. Lon. 28. 40. lat. 43. 42.

EMS, a river of Germany, which has its source in the county of Lippe, in Westphalia. It runs first westward, through the county of Ribberg, and then turning N. passes through the county of Tecklenberg, and continuing its course N. through the county of Embsen, discharges itself into the Dolart-bay, at the town of Emden.

ENCHUYSEN, a sea-port town of the United Provinces, in Holland, which was formerly much more considerable than at present, because its harbour is filling up every day. It is seated on the Zunderzee, 8 miles N. E. of Horn, and 25 N. E. of Amsterdam. Lon. 22. 53. lat. 52. 49.

* ENCOPEN, a town of Sweden, in the province of Upland, seated on Mellar-Lake, 40 miles W. of Stockholm. Lon. 34. 5. lat. 59. 50.

* ENNING, a town of Germany, in Swabia, and in Brisgaw; it was formerly free and imperial, but now belongs to the house of Austria. It is seated near the Rhine, 10 miles below Brisach.

ENFIELD, a town of Middlesex, with a market on Saturdays, and one fair, on November 29, for horses, cows, and cheese. It stands in Enfield-Chase, and

* ENGADINE, a country of the Grisons, in Germany. It is a valley, and lies on the side of the river Inn, from the source of that river as far as Tyrol. It has no considerable town, though it is divided into the higher and lower.

ENGERS, a town of Germany, in the circle of the Lower Rhine, and in the electorate of Treves, or Triers, capital of a county of the same name. It is seated on the Rhine, 17 miles N. of Coblentz. Lon. 14. 51. lat. 50. 35.

ENGHLEN, a rich town of the Netherlands, in the county of Fainhaalt, famous for a battle fought near it in 1692, between the French and English, when the former were victorious; this is commonly called the battle of Steinkirk. It is 15 miles S. W. of Brussels, and 15 N. of Mons. Lon. 21. 40. lat. 50. 40.

ENGLIA, or ENGINA, an island of Turkey, in Europe, lying on a gulph of the same name, between Acaja and the Morca, and is about 21 miles S. of Athens, 20 E. of Cynth, and is about 30 in circumference. It is a fruitful country, and abounds with partridges to such a degree, that the people are summoned annually to destroy their eyes, in order to preserve their corn. There is a town upon it, of the same name, which consists of about 600 houses. Lon. 41. 44. lat. 37. 45.

ENGLAND, a considerable country of Europe, and the principal part of the Island of Great Britain, surrounded on all sides by the sea, except where Scotland lies, to the N. It is 400 measured miles in length, from Berwick upon Tweed to Cliehester; and 370 in breadth, from Dover in Kent to Senan in Cornwall. But in other places it varies greatly, particularly in the breadth; for it grows narrower (but not gradually) from the southern coast to the town of Berwick: therefore it would be worth while, for a more particular account of it, to consult a good map. It is happily situated with regard to trade, there being many good towns and harbours on the sea-coast, which are particularly taken notice of in their proper places. The air is generally very good and wholesome, except in the hundreds of Essex and Kent, the fens in Lincolnshire and Cambridge, shire, and some other low marshes near the sea. The winters indeed are sometimes rainy and foggy, and the weather is subject to great variations, which, however, does not much impair the health of the inhabitants who are accustomed thereto, for they generally live as long as in any other countries, and we have frequent instances of people who have lived to a very great age; particularly Henry Jenkins, a Yorkshire man, who was 168 years old when he died; and Thomas Parr, of Shropshire, who was 152, and might have lived longer, if he had not been sent for up to court as a curiosity. The frequent rains, tho' they may sometimes damage the hay and corn, have yet their peculiar advantages; for upon that account they have generally good pastures throughout the year. There are thunder, storms, hurricanes, and earthquakes, as in other countries; but they are, in general, less violent, and do less damage. The principal rivers are the Thames, the Severn, the Trent, and the Ouse; besides a great number of others, which will be taken notice of in their proper places. England is a level and open country; for, what hills there are, of any note, are chiefly towards the north: for this reason, it is extremely proper for the diversion of hunting. There are some remarkable forests; as Windfor Forest, the Forest of Dean, and the New Forest; which last was made by William the Conqueror, who demolished several towns and villages, and thirty-six parish-churches, in order to make it. The soil is different in different parts, but in general very fruitful. There are indeed many heaths, downs, and barren places, which, however, generally produce grass enough to feed flocks of sheep: besides, it is thought, that the care and diligence of good husbandmen might turn many of them to great advantage. It produces all sorts of fruits, trees, and herbs which are proper to the climate: it must be acknowledged there are no vines that are so fit to produce good wine, as in warmer countries; but then there are variety enough which yield good grapes that are made use of as other fruits. However, there are great quantities of cyder, perry, mead, and several kinds of made wines; but the principal drink of the generality, is beer, or ale. The English wool is famous all over the world, as well as the manufactures made therefrom; particularly broad-cloth, which is not to be equalled in any other country. There might also be excellent linen-manufactures, if it was worth while; but as they are come to a great perfection in all kinds of linen in Scotland and Ireland, where they can be made cheaper, we are now chiefly supplied from thence: what linen we have made amongst us, is generally the coarser sort, known by the name of Dowlas. Here are all sorts of materials for building; and there are excellent stone-quarries in several parts. The firing is pit-coal, wood, and turf, which last is used where coals are dear; but in most counties there is plenty of pit-coal. It is generally said that there might be found coal-mines on Black-Heath; but they are not permitted to be opened, because the ships which bring coals from Newcastle to London, are a nursery for seamen. No country in the world is better provided with horses of all sorts, and for every use; and particularly with regard to race-horses, they are seldom equalled by those of other countries. There are dogs of every kind, except wolf-dogs, which, since the wolves were destroyed in England, have been generally neglected; however, the race of these animals is still maintained in Ireland. But there is one sort that is not to be equaled in any part of the world, which is the bull dogs: for these will not only attack the fiercest bull, but any kind of wild beast; nor can any thing, when they have once fastened upon the animal, oblige them to let go their hold. But, what is more strange, when any of them is transported beyond sea, they lose their courage; and the same is said of English cocks. With regard to minerals, there are mines of iron, tin, lead, copper, and in some places silver, besides others of less note. As for the curiosities, they will be mentioned in their proper places, when the counties in particular are treated of. As for the manners, customs, and abilities of the inhabitants, nothing need be said, because they fall under every one's own observations; nor yet of the government, religion, and laws, of which very few can be ignorant. Lat. from 29° 50' to 50° 25'.

ENGLAND NEW, a country of N. America, settled by the English. It comprehends four parts, viz. Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Rhode-Island, and Providence plantation. It is bounded by Canada on the N. W. by Nova-Scotia, or Acadia, on the N. E. by the ocean on the E. and S. and by New-

York on the W. being 300 miles in length, and 200 in breadth. As it lies between 41 and 46 degree of latitude, one would imagine the air should be temperate at all times of the year; and yet we find the winters are far more severe, and last longer, than in Old England; the ground being covered with snow, and the frost continuing for several months. This renders the summers more short, but then they are much hotter than with us. However, we do not find but the climate is as healthy as most of our American plantations; and we have reason to believe, that they all will be without exception in this respect, when the woods are in some measure cleared away, and the countries become more open, that the air may have a more free circulation. The parts above-mentioned have all distinct charters, and have generally different governors. That of Massachusetts is appointed by the crown, as well as all the officers of the admiralty; and all the judges, justices, and sheriffs, are nominated by the governor and council. The governor has a negative in the choice of any member of the council; nor is any act of government valid, without the governor's consent in writing; besides, all laws of the general assembly are sent to England to receive the approbation of the council. The colonies of Connecticut and Rhode-Island are distinct governments, and independent of each other; but their constitution is much the same. They have power to elect their own governor, deputy-governor, council, and assembly; to appoint officers, both civil and military; and to make their own laws. The colony of New Hampshire depends immediately on the crown, and the King appoints their governor, lieutenant-governor, and council, magistrates, and officers; but the freemen elect their representatives, or lower house. However, the laws of all these are liable to be altered and repealed by the parliament of Great Britain. We shall say nothing of the productions of this country, as they have nothing different from the colonies round about them. And as for the uncommon animals, they must be more scarce than in other parts of America, because New England is in a manner surrounded by the other plantations, and as they take no care of the breed of any creatures but what have been brought from Europe. near the sea is generally low; but farther up the country there are a few hills, and the N. E. part is rocky and mountainous. When the wind is at N. W. it must needs blow over a vast tract of land covered with snow and ice, which is the principal reason that the winter is so very severe in these parts. Nothing is to be said of the manners or disposition of the inhabitants, as they all originally came from England. With regard to their religion, they are of the independent persuasion; and they at first persecuted every other sect that differed from them; nor would they suffer any of them to have any posts or places under the government. However, at present, there is a greater harmony among Christians of all persuasions.

• ENO, or ENOS, a town of Turkey in Asia, and in Romania, near a gulph of the same name, with a Greek archbishop's see. It is 125 miles W. of Constantinople. Lon. 43. 50. lat. 40. 46.

• ENS, a river of Germany that rises near St. Weit, in the archbishopric of Saltzburg; it crosses one part of Stiria, washes Steir and Ens in Austria; soon after which it falls into the Danube.

• ENSISHEIM, a town of France, in Upper Alsace, of which it pretends to be the capital. It is seated on the river Ill, 10 miles S. W. of Brisach, and 45 S. by W. of Strasburg. Lon. 25. 2. lat. 47. 52.

• ENSKIRKEN, a town of Germany, in Westphalia, and in the dutchy of Juliers. It is 10 miles N. W. of Juliers, and 15 S. W. of Cologne. Lon. 23. 56. lat. 50. 58.

• ENTRE-DUERO-Y-MINHO, a province of the kingdom of Portugal, about 45 miles in length, and as much in breadth. Braga is the capital town.

• ENTRE-TAYO, and GUADIANO. See ALLENTEJO.

• ENTREVAUX, a town of France, in Provence, seated on the river Var. Lon. 24. 46. lat. 44. 1.

• EPERIES, a town of Upper Hungary, and capital of the county of Saros, remarkable for its fairs and mines of salt. It is seated on the river Tatza, 20 miles N. of Cassovia, 60 S. by W. of Sandomerz, and 125 E. by N. of Presburg. Lon. 38. 36. lat. 48. 50.

• EPHEBUS, an ancient and celebrated town of Turkey in Asia, and in Natolia, and in that part of it which was anciently called Ionia. It is now called Ajafaloue; and there is no city in the world that has so many remains of its ancient splendour. There is nothing to be seen about it but heaps of marble, overturned walls, columns, chapters, and pieces of statues, heaped upon one another. The fortress, which is upon an eminence, seems to be a work of the Greek Emperors. The eastern gate has three Basso-Relievos, taken from some ancient monuments; and that in the middle was constructed by the Romans. The most remarkable structure of all, was, The Temple of Diana, which the ancient Christians had turned into a church; but it is now so entirely ruined, that it is no easy matter to find out the ground-plot: however, there are some ruins of the walls, and of five or six marble columns, all of a piece, 40 feet in length, and 7 in diameter. It was counted one of the seven wonders of the world. It is seated near a gulph of the same name, and has still a good harbour, 40 miles S. of Smyrna. Lon. 48. 8. lat. 37. 58.

• EPHROS, a province of Turkey in Europe, bounded on the N. by Albania, on the E. by Thessalia, on the S. by Achaia, and on the W. by the sea. It has the name of New Ephros, to distinguish it from the ancient country of that name. It is divided into two parts, Chimera, or Canina, which lies to the N. and Cirta, which is to the S. St. Janina is the capital town. It is all in the hands of the Turks, except Parga, which belongs to the Venetians.

• EPPING, a town of Essex, with two markets, on Thursdays for cattle, and on Fridays for provisions; and two fairs, viz. on Whit-Tuesday, and October 13, for horses, cows, and sheep, which are kept in Epping-street, a hamlet about a mile and a half from the church. It is the principal place upon Epping-Forest; and is 17 miles N. by E. of London. Lon. 17. 50. lat. 51. 40.

• EPPINGEN, a town of Germany, in the palatinate of the Rhine, with a castle. It is seated on the river Elzats, 17 miles N. E. of Philipsburg, and 15 N. W. of Hailbron. Lon. 27. 34. lat. 39. 12.

• EPTOM, a town in Surrey, much frequented

ed on account of the waters; and in the season it is well supplied with provisions every day; but it has only one fair, on July 27, for toys. It lies in a pleasant situation, and is full of houses of entertainment, for those that resort to the wells; and on the neighbouring Downs there are horse-races every year. The waters have a purging quality. It is 9 miles N. E. by N. of Darking, and 15 S. W. by S. of London. Len. 17. 15. lat. 51. 25.

* REWOODEN, a village in Lincolnshire, 8 miles S. S. W. of Buxton, with one fair, on September 9, for cattle, hemp, and flax.

REUBEN, a town of Germany, capital of Upper Thuringia, with an university. It was formerly imperial, but is now subject to the elector of Mentz. It is a large place, containing 300 streets; but it is thinly peopled. It is defended by two strong forts, and is surrounded with ditches full of water. A fire happened here in 1756, which burnt down 150 houses, and several churches. It is situated on the river Gere, 30 miles S. E. of Mulhausen, 20 S. E. of Wimar, and 50 N. by E. of Coburg. Len. 23. 50. lat. 51. 4. Its territory comprehends 73 villages, and the inhabitants are at so small a distance from 26 towns that they can go to each and return the same day. With regard to religion, the principal magistrate is sometimes a Protestant, and sometimes a Papist; but the greater part of the burghers are Protestants. There are three fine libraries, one of which belongs to the Papists, another to the university, and a third to the Protestant ministers. They have a bell of a prodigious size, which is 15 cubs in circumference, and 8 in height.

ERIE-LAKE, in N. America, lies between 41 and 42 degrees of latitude. It communicates with the Lake Ontario, by the Strait of Niagara, in which there is a water-fall or cataract, but not the greatest in the world, as some pretend.

* ERISSO, a town of Turkey, in Asia, and in Macedonia, it is a bishop's see, and is situated at the bottom of the gulph of Monte Sancto, but at present is inconsiderable, and very thin of people.

ERIVAN, a town of Asia, in Persia, and capital of Persian Armenia, with an Armenian patriarch. It is a large place, and is defended by a fortress, wherein is the governor's palace, and by a castle, some distance from the town. The country about it produces excellent wine, and it is seated on the river Zuergui, near a great lake of its own name. The Meidan is a great open square, 400 paces over, wherein are very fine trees. The baths and caravan-serais have likewise their beauties, but the churches of the Christians are small, and half under ground. The lake is very deep, and 60 miles in circumference, being well stocked with carps and trouts. There is a bridge over the river, which has apartments under it, where the governor comes sometimes for diversion. It is 105 miles N. W. of Aflabat, and 200 E. of Erzerum. Len. 63. 15. lat. 40. 20.

ERKELENS, a town of Germany, in the circle of Westphalia, and duchy of Juliers, with a castle. It is 10 miles N. of Juliers, and is seated on the river Rout. Len. 24. 8. lat. 51. 6.

* ERLANG, a town of Germany, in the circle of Franconia, and marquise of Culmbach. It is seated on the river Regnitz, 12 miles N. W. of Nuremberg, and 20 S. of Bamberg. There are a great number of French refugees here, for whom houses are built, called Nucleans, and there is a new church lately built for their use. Len. 23. 42. lat. 49. 38.

* ERINGTON, a village in Devonshire, with one fair, on February 3, for horned cattle.

* ERAPACH, a town of Germany, in the circle of Franconia, 30 miles S. E. of Franckfort. Len. 26. 26. lat. 49. 42.

ERAPACH, a castle of Germany, in the circle of Suabia, with a town, capital of the county of the same name. It is 8 miles S. E. of Ulm. Len. 27. 42. lat. 48. 25.

ESCORIAL, a famous village of Spain, in New-Castile, where Philip II. built a famous monastery in 1563, in memory of the victory gained over the French near St. Quintin; it is called by the Spaniards the eighth wonder of the world.
 It consists of a royal palace, a church, cloisters, a college, a library, the shops of different artists, apartments for a great number of people, beautiful walks, large allies, an extensive park, and great gardens, adorned with a vast number of fountains. It is built in a dry, barren country, surrounded with rugged mountains, and where nothing grows, but what is cultivated with extraordinary care. It is built with grey stones, which were found in the neighbourhood, and is the principal reason of its being erected on so disagreeable a spot. They worked at this structure 22 years, and it cost

6,000,000 of crowns; some say the expence was 20,000,000, but then they must mean French livres. It is a long square of 250 feet, and 4 stories high; they reckon 800 pillars, 11,000 square windows, and 14000 gates. The most remarkable part is the vaulted chapel, wherein is a magnificent sepulchre, called the Pantheon, because it is built in imitation of that church at Rome; it is the burying-place of all the kings and queens of Spain, and is thought by some to be the most curious piece of architecture in the world. The fathers, which belong to the monastery, are 200 in number, and have an income of 40,000 ducats a-year, which is sufficient to maintain them in great plenty. The church is built after the model of St.
 Peter's at Rome. It was taken by the allies in 1706, and is seated on the river Guadara, 15 miles N. W. of Madrid, and 25 S. of Segovia. Lon. 14. 0. lat.
 40. 35.

* ESHER, a village in Surry, 5 miles S.
 W. of Kintyon, with one fair, on August 4, for horses.

ESK, a river, which is part of the boundary between England and Scotland, and, running from N. E. to S. W. falls into the Solway-firth, giving name to a district of Scotland, called Eskdale.

ESKIMAX, a country of N. America, otherwise called New-Britain, and Terra-de-Labrador. It is inhabited by a savage wild sort of people, who have no fixed abode, but rove from place to place; for they sometimes come as far S. as Newfoundland, and sometimes are met with on the coasts of the frims and bays that the English have been in when they went in search of the N. W. passage. They are of a different race from the other native Americans, for, whereas they have no beards, these have them so thick and large, that it is difficult to discover any features of their faces; they have small eyes, large dirty teeth, and black rugged hair; they are of so bad a

to do what mischief they can to strangers: they will come, in the night-time, to cut the cables of ships which lie at anchor, that they may be wrecked on the coast, and sometimes they will attack ships in the middle of the day, if they find their companies are but small. It is impossible to civilize them; for they never will come near those that want to traffick with them, nor will they eat any thing that is presented them. They are always well clad, for there is nothing to be seen but part of their faces, and their hands. They have a sort of shirts, made of fishes guts, with a coat of bear or birds skins, at the top of which is a cap which they put over their heads. They have likewise breeches, made of skins, with the hair within, and covered with furs without; some say that they have three or four pair of these breeches on at a time. They have also two pair of boots, one over another, of the same sort of skins. In the summer-time they have nothing to cover them in the night, but in the winter they lodge together promiscuously in caves or grottos. The dress of the women is near the same as that of the men. They are very superstitious, and have some sort of sacrifices; and their chief employment is hunting and fishing. This country lies to the N. of the great river of St. Lawrence, and is bounded on the E. by the sea, and on the W. by Hudson's Bay.

ESLINGEN, a town of Germany, in the circle of Suabia, and duchy of Wirtemberg. It is an imperial city, or sovereign state, and is pretty large, having 5 suburbs. The prevailing religion is the protestant, and yet there are several convents. The duke of Wirtemberg is their protector. It is seated on the river Neckar, 5 miles S. E. of Stutgard, 25 N. E. of Tubingen, and 20 N. W. of Ulm. Lon. 27. 50. lat. 48. 40.

ESNAY, or ASNA, a town of Egypt, in Africa, seated on the western banks of the Nile, and supposed, by some, to be the ancient Senna, but Nardn thinks it was Latopolis. It is a large place, adorned with a mosque, and is the residence of an Arab Sheikh. In the middle of Efnay there is an ancient temple, with walls on three sides, and in the front there are 24 columns, very well preserved; they support stone placed crossways, and on which great tables are laid, which form a roof. There are high hieroglyphical figures on almost every part, but those on the inside do not seem to be done by the same hands, for they are much better. Dr. Pocock visited this ancient temple, and he saw the figure of a woman sitting, carved in several parts of the wall, for which reason he takes it to be the temple of Pallas at Latopolis; he tells us the capitals of the pillars are somewhat like Corinthian, however, there are several forts. Within the temple there are three stories of hieroglyphicks, of men about three feet high, and at one end the lowest figures are as big as the life; one of them had the head of Ibis. The ceiling is curiously adorned with all sorts of animals, and painted in very beautiful colours; one of these sat on a sort of a boat, with a circle round him, and two instruments at one end; there was also a ram, with a cross on his head, somewhat like the handle of a sword, and across his neck there was a resemblance of wings; among the rest of the animals there was a beetle and a scorpion. This temple appears to have been used as a church, for there are several inscriptions on the wall, in black letters. On the N. side of the town of Efnay there is another temple, with pillars, though different from the former, somewhat like the Corinthian order. The whole building is very richly carved, with hieroglyphicks; there is one man with a goat's head, and another with that of a crocodile, they are both cut over the middle of the door, opposite to the entrance; there are other crocodiles heads, as also whole crocodiles, which renders it probable that this animal was worshipped here. However, it must be observed, that Strabo mentions the city of Crocodiles as distinct from Aphroditopolis and Latopolis. A mile to the S. of Efnay is the monastery of St. Helen, by whom some say it was founded. It now appears to have been a large burying-ground, and there are many magnificent tombs, with a dome, and 4 arches, besides a little cupola on the top. Some of them have a cross, and others an eagle, with a short Greek inscription. There are now two monks in the convent belonging to this, and the church is near. Efnay lies near the grand cataract. ESSECK, a considerable trading town in Hungary, in Slavonia, in the county of Walpon, with a strong castle, and a mag- nificent bridge, 5 miles in length, over the marshes, or 8865 geometrical paces in length, and 15 in breadth. It is a difficult pass, and there have been feve- ral battles fought here, between the Turks and Christians. There are towers built on the bridge, a quarter of a mile distant from each other, and it is hand- somely raised on each side. There are trees in all the streets of the town, which was taken from the Turks by the Impe- rialists in 1687, since which time it has continued in the hands of the house of Austria. It is seated on the river Drave, 60 miles W. by N. of Belgrade, 112 S. of Buda, and 175 S. by E. of Vienna. Lon. 36. 30. lat. 45. 36.

ESSEN, a town of Germany, in Westpha- lia, it was formerly free and imperial, but is now subject to the abbess of Essen. It is 10 miles N. E. of Duisburg, and 15 N. of Dorsten. Lon. 24. 42. lat. 51. 25.

* ESSEQUEBIA, a rich and considerable

country of S. America, and in Guiana; its borders are inhabited by savages, who are great drunkards, and both men and women go stark naked.

ESSEX, an English county, 44 miles in length, and 42 in breadth, bounded on the S. by the river Thames, on the W. by Hertfordshire and Middlesex, on the N. by Cambridgeshire and Suffolk, and on the E. by the sea. It contains 34,800 houses, 208,800 inhabitants, 415 pa- rishes, and 27 market-towns; the pro- ductions are corn, fish, fowls, cloth, stuffs, hops, oysters, and saffron, which last is the best in the world. The rivers, besides the Thames, are, the Stour, the Lee, the Coln, the Chelmer, the Crouch, and the Roden. The air in the inland parts is heal'y, but in the marshes, near the sea, it produces agues, particu- larly in the hundreds. It sends 8 mem- bers to parliament, that is, 6 for Col- chester, Harwich, and Malden, and 2 for the county. The county-town is Chelmsford; but Colchester is the largest, and most famous.

- ESTREJA, a town of Spain, in Andalusia, with an ancient castle, standing on a mountain. It's 15 miles S. of Sevilja, and 62 N. by W. of Malaga. Lon. 13. 25. lat. 37. 10.
- ESTONIA, a province of the Russian empire, lying to the East of the Baltic-Sea. It is bounded on the N. by the gulph of Finland, on the E. by Latvia, and on the S. by Livonia, with the title of a duchy. It was confirmed to Russia by the treaty of Neufchat.
- ESTRAMADURA, a province of Spain, about 175 miles in length, and 100 in breadth, bounded on the N. by the kingdom of Leon and Old-Castile, on the E. by New-Castile, on the S. by Andalusia, and on the W. by Portugal. It abounds in corn, wine, and fruits, but the air is bad for strangers, on account of the excessive heat. It now makes part of New-Castile.
- ESTRAMADURA, a province of Portugal, lying about the mouth of the river Tago, bounded on the N. by the province of Beira, on the E. and S. by Alentejo, and on the W. by the Atlantic Ocean. It abounds in wine, excellent oil, honey and oranges. Here the oranges were first planted that were brought from China, and which are known by the name of China-oranges. Lubon is the capital town, and of all Portugal.
- ESTREMOS, a town of Portugal, in Alentejo, which is divided into two parts, the high town, and the low: the high town is commanded by a citadel, built on the top of a hill, which is strongly fortified, and surrounded with a large ditch. All the houses are white, and the principal are adorned with fine marble pillars. There is also a tower of the same marble, so finely polished, that it glitters greatly when the sun shines upon it. The lower town is the new, and in it there is a large square, in the middle of which is a basin. They make a sort of earthen ware here, greatly esteemed in many places for its beauty, and fine smell. The Portuguese gained a compleat victory over don John of Austria near this place, in 1663. It is seated on the river Tera, which falls into the Tago, 12 miles W. of Padajoz, and 75 W. of Lisbon. Lon. 10. 46. lat. 38. 44.

- ETIOPIA, a province of Africa, in Belduge, inhabited by the Berberies.
- ETZINGEN, a town of Germany in the territory of the Elector, 25 miles S. E. of Cassel. Lon. 27. 55. lat. 51. 18.
- ETIOPIA, a country of Africa, which contains the greatest part of it, and which is divided into the upper and lower, and contains a great number of slaves and negroes, which now are better known than they were formerly, and therefore there is no occasion to continue the old distinction. Each country will be described in its proper place, at least as far as they are yet discovered.
- ETIVALL, S. E. a considerable town of France, in Forez, remarkable for its manufactures in iron and steel, for the tempering of which the water of the brook Fuzenz, on which it is seated, is extremely good. It is 22 miles S. E. of Fuzenz, 30 S. W. of Lyons, and 27 S. by E. of Paris. Lon. 22. 0. lat. 45. 22.
- ETZINGEN, an ancient town of Germany, in Suabia, and in the margravate of Baden-Durlach. It is 3 miles S. of Durlach, and is seated on the confluence of the rivers Wirim and Entz. Lon. 27. 6. lat. 48. 55.
- ETNA-MOUNT, the name of a volcano, now called Gibel by the inhabitants. It is one of the most celebrated mountains in Europe, and the highest in Sicily, seated in the Val-di-Demona, 10 miles W. of Catania. It is well cultivated all round the foot, and is covered with vine, on the S. side; but on the N. there is nothing but large forests. As for the top, it is always covered with snow, and yet it never ceases to smoke, and often sends forth flames. The cinders, which are thrown out in small quantities, serve for manure to the adjacent lands, but a large torrent does a great deal of mischief. There are new openings made, from time to time, with such a great noise, that the inhabitants are put into terrible frights. The greatest eruptions known of late, happened in the years 1536, 1554, 1566, 1579, 1609, and 1693; which last was very terrible, and was attended with an earth quake which overturned the town of Catania, in a moment, and buried 18000 persons in its ruins. This mountain is 65 miles in circumference at the foot.

EVERHAM, or EVERHOLM, a town of Worcestershire, with a market on Mondays, and four fairs, on February 7, the first Monday after Easter, Whit-Monday, and September 27, for cattle and horses. It is seated on a hill which rises with a gradual ascent from the river Avon which almost surrounds it, and over which it has a stone-bridge. It was formerly noted for its abbey, and it is the best town in the county, except Worcester; for it contains three parish-churches, sends two members to parliament, and of her had or has a considerable manufacture of stockings. The market is considerable for corn, cattle, and provisions. It gives name to an adjacent vale, remarkable for producing plenty of fine cloth. It is 12 miles S. E. of Worcester, and 95 N. W. by W. of London. Lon. 15. 55. Lat. 52. 10.

EVERINGE, a town of Germany, in the circle of Austria, seated on the S. side of the Danube, 17 miles W. of Lintz. Lon. 31. 27. Lat. 48. 20.

EVERSHOR, a town of Dorsetshire, with a market on Friday, and a fair on May 15, for bullocks and toys. It is but a small place, and is 9 miles N. W. of Dorchester, and 21 S. W. by S. of London. Lon. 14. 53. Lat. 50. 46.

* EVERTREV, a village in Hampshire, 9 miles N. of Farnham, with two fairs, on May 16, and October 18, for cattle and toys.

EVORBIO, a town of Italy, in the territory of the Pope, and duchy of Urbino, with a bishop's see. It is 35 miles S. of Urbino, 17 N. W. of Perugia, and 27 N. of Rome. Lon. 30. 60. Lat. 43. 18.

EVYAS, a town of Savoy, in the Chablais, seated on the S. side of the lake of Geneva, 22 miles N. E. of Geneva, and 10 S. W. of Lausanne. Lon. 24. 15. Lat. 46. 23.

* EVVAT, an ancient town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in the Italian

Principato, with the title of a principality. It is 12 miles E. of Salerno. Lon. 27. 56. Lat. 38. 40.

* EVORA, or MONTE, a town of Portugal, in the province of Alentejo. It is 15 miles to Eborac, and 8 from Evremos; and is remarkable for a battle gained here by the Portuguese over the Christians.

EVORA, a considerable town of Portugal, and capital of Alentejo, with an archbishop's see, and an university. It is seated almost in the heart of the province in a country, though a little unequal, yet very pleasant, surrounded on all sides with mountains, which are planted with large tracts of divers sorts, as well fruit-trees as others. It may contain about 5000 burghers capable of bearing arms, and 12,000 inhabitants, and is very well fortified. It is 45 miles E. by S. of Lisbon, 110 N. W. of Seville, and 50 S. W. of Elvas. Lon. 13. 25. Lat. 38. 28.

EVORVIA, a sea-port town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in the Farther Calabria. It is seated on a bay of the sea, 50 miles N. E. of Reggio. Lon. 31. 7. Lat. 39. 22.

EVROZUS, one of the most celebrated rivers in the world. It is the principal of Turkey in Asia, and has its rise about a day's journey from Erzerum; and there is another source about 2 days journey from the same place. They lye to the eastward, on high mountains covered with snow almost the year round. The plain of Erzerum is inclosed between two fine streams, that, when united, are called the Euphrates, or the Frat. After their junction, which is three days journey from Erzerum, it begins to be capable of carrying boats; but the channel is so rocky, that the navigation is not free thereon. At first, it runs S. S. W. then S. till it approaches nearly to Aleppo; then it turns S. E. till it reaches Rakla. It afterwards turns more to the S. till it comes to Mehed; and then it passes S. E. again by Anna, Hit, Cuh, Bi, and Feluria; and, not far from the sea, visits the spot where Old Babylon stood. It then fetches a compass like a bow, till it runs E. and unites with the Tygris; and still retaining its old name, runs down to Bassrah, and from thence into the Gulph of Persia, about 50 miles below it. It first divides Armenia from Natolia; then Syria from Diarbeck; after ter which it runs through the Irac Arabi till it meets with the Tygris; besides, it is the N. eastern boundary of the great Desert of Arabia.

• EURE, a river of France, which has its source in Perche, and in the forest of Logny. It falls into the Seine, a little above Cent-de-Arche, and is navigable for boats.

EVREUX, an ancient town of France, in Normandy, with a bishop's see. The cathedral is a handsome structure; and the trade consists in corn, linen, and woollen cloth. It is seated on the river Iton, 25 miles S. of Rouen, and 55 N. W. of Paris. Lon. 15. 49. Lat. 49. 1.

EURIPUS. See NEGROPONT.

• EUROPE, called by the people of Asia Frankistan, is one of the three general parts of our continent, and one of the four of the habitable world. It is bounded on the N. by the frozen or icy sea, on the S. by the Mediterranean, on the W. by the Western and Northern Ocean, and on the E. by Asia. It lies between 8 and 60 degrees of longitude, and between 55 and 72 degrees of latitude, though it does not fill up all that space. From Cape St. Vincent to the mouth of the river Obi, it is near 5620 miles in length; and, from Cape Matapatam in the Morea, to the N. Cape in Lapland, it is about 2200 miles in breadth. It is much less than either Asia or Africa; but then it surpasses them in many things; and it is entirely within the temperate zone, except a small part of Norway and Muscovy; so that there is neither the excessive heat, nor the insupportable cold, that are to be met with in the other parts of the continent. It does not abound in gold and silver mines, much less in precious stones; nor does it produce sugar and spices; nor yet does it nourish jackals, hyenas, lynxes, leopards, tigers, lions, rhinoceroses, elephants, dromedaries, camels, or crocodiles; but it produces corn, wine, fruits, sheep, oxen, horses, and all other necessaries of life. Besides, it is much more populous, and better cultivated than either Asia or Africa. It is fuller of villages, towns, and cities, and the buildings are more strong, more elegant and commodious, generally speaking, than in the two former. The inhabitants are all whites, and, for the most part, much better made than the Africans, and even the Asiatics. With regard to arts and sciences, there is no manner of comparison; nor yet in trade, navigation, and war. They are more civilized, prudent, sociable, and generous; and consequently are neither savage nor cruel, unless spurred on by the mistaken principles of religion. Whereas in Asia and Africa, there are people who make robbery a profession, and live by pillaging merchants and others. With respect to the division of Europe, it contains, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Great-Britain and Ireland, Muscovy, France, Germany, Poland, Spain, Portugal, Hungary, Switzerland, and Turkey in Europe, besides several small islands, in the Mediterranean and else-where. There are three Emperors; namely, of Germany, Muscovy, and Turkey, which last is commonly called the Grand Signior. The Pope is an ecclesiastical prince, and yet has several territories under his dominion. The Kings are those of Great-Britain and Ireland, France, Spain, Portugal, Poland, Prussia, Denmark, Sweden, Sardinia, Hungary, and of the Two Sicilies. Besides, there is an Archduke of Austria, and a Great Duke of Tuscany. There are four considerable republics; namely, Venice, the states of Holland, the Swiss Cantons, and the republic of Genoa. There are four less, viz. of Geneva, Lucca, San Marino, and Ragusa. The languages are, the Latin, of which the Italian, French, and Spanish, are dialects; the Teutonic, from which proceed those of Germany, Flanders, Holland, Sweden, Denmark, and England; the Slavonian, which reigns (though in disguise) in Poland, Muscovy, Bohemia, and a great part of Turkey in Europe; the Celtic, of which there are dialects in Wales, the Highlands of Scotland, Ireland, Bretagne in France, and Lapland. Besides these, there are the Greek, and several others. The principal rivers are, the Danube and the Rhine, in Germany; the Volga and Dvina, in the Russian empire; the Loire, in France; and the Severn and Thames, in England. The chief lakes are those of Constance, in Germany; of Geneva and Garda, in Italy; the Wener, in Sweden; and of Ladoga and Onega, in Russia. The chief mountains are, the Pyrenean, in Spain; the Alps, in Italy; the Dofrin hills, in Sweden; the Crapach hills, in Hungary; and some of the mountains in Wales.

The religions of Europe are the Jewish, and the Christian; divided into the Greek, Romish, and Protestant churches; as also the Mahometan.

EUSTACE, or EUSTATIA, one of the least Caribbee Islands, in America, which is properly nothing but a mountain that rises in the form of a sugar-loaf, whose top is hollow. It is strong by situation, and has a good fort. It lies to the N. W. of St. Christopher's, and to the S. E. of Sabat, and belongs to the Dutch. Lon. 317. 40. lat. 16. 40.

* EUSUGAGUEN, a strong town of Africa, in the kingdom of Morocco, and in the province of Hea. The inhabitants are the most brutal of all Barbary, and their trade consists in wax and honey.

* EUTIM, a town of Germany, in Holstein, with a castle, where the bishops of Lubeck have their residence. It is three miles from Lubeck, and seven from Keil.

EUXINE SEA. See BLACK SEA.

* EWELL, a town in Sarry, with a market on Thursdays, and two fairs, on May 12, and October 29, for horses, bullock, sheep, and toys. It is but a small place, and the market is inconsiderable. It is 10 miles N. E. by N. of Darling, and 14 S. E. by S. of London. Lon. 57. 0. lat. 51. 25.

* EWHURST, a village in Suffex, with one fair, on July 25, for cattle and pedlars ware.

EXETER, a town, or city, of Devonshire, with two markets, on Wednesdays and Fridays, and four fairs, viz. on Ash-Wednesday, Whit-Monday, August 1, and December 6, for horses, horned cattle, and commodities of all sorts. It is commodiously seated on the top of an easy ascent on the eastern bank of the river Ex, from whence it took its name, and over which there is a handsome stone-bridge. It is a mile and a half in circumference about the walls and ditches; and, with its suburbs, contains 15 parish-churches, and four chapels of ease, besides the cathedral, it being a bishop's see. It suffered greatly in the civil wars; and its river is cloaked up with sand, so that at present they are obliged to load and unload their goods at Topsham, about three miles distant. It has the title of an earldom, and is still in a flourishing condition, and is a good trade. Here are several streets well-paved, and a large number of ferges, druggets, long-ouls, dnoys, and sagathys. It is governed by a mayor, recorder, 23 aldermen, &c. and sends two members to parliament. It is 73 miles S. W. of Bristol, 37 N. N. E. of Dartmouth, 49 S. S. E. of Barnstable, 44 N. E. of Plymouth, 88 W. S. W. of Salisbury, and 173 W. by N. of London. Lon. 13. 55. lat. 50. 44.

EXIGA. See ECVA.

EXILLES, a strong fortress on the frontiers of Piedmont, in Italy, and in the Brianzonnois. It was taken by the Duke of Savoy in 1708, and was confirmed to him by the treaty of Utrecht. It is an important passage, which leads from Brianzon to Suza. It is 8 miles S. W. of Suza, 25 N. W. of Pignerol, and 37 N. E. of Embrun. Lon. 24. 35. lat. 45. 5.

EYE, a town in Suffolk, with a market on Saturdays, and one fair, on Whit-Monday, for cattle and toys. It has a watery situation, is a pretty large place, and has a handsome church, with the ruins of a castle, and of an ancient Benedictine abbey. The women are employed in making bone-lace. It sends two members to parliament; and is 22 miles N. of Ipswich, and 92 N. E. of London. Lon. 18. 38. lat. 52. 27.

* EYMINGE, a village in Kent, with one fair, on July 5, for pedlars ware.

EYNDHOVEN, a small handsome town of the Netherlands, in Dutch Brabant, seated on the river Dommel, 13 miles S. E. of Bois-le-duc, and 30 S. E. of Breda. Lon. 23. 5. lat. 51. 28.

EYRAC. See IRAC.

EYSENACH. See EISENACH.

* EZAGUEN, a rich and ancient town of Africa, in the kingdom of Fez, and in the province of Habat. It is seated in a country fertile in excellent wine, 57 miles from Fez.

* EZERO, a town of Thessaly, in Greece, which was formerly a bishop's see. It is seated on a small lake of the same name, between the Gulph of Armiro and town of Larissa.

* EZZAB, a province of Africa, in the kingdom of Tripoli, which produces excellent saffron.

* FABRIANO, a handsome town of Italy, in the territory of the Church, and in the Marca or Marche of Ancona, famous for its good paper. It is 30 miles N. E. of Foligni, and 33 W. of Macerata. Lon. 30. 3 S. lat. 43. 18.

FAENZA, or FAYENCE, an ancient town of Italy, in the Pope's territories, and in Romania, with a bishop's see. It is famous for its fine earthen-ware, which was here invented. It is seated on the river Amona, 20 miles S. W. of Ravenna, 10 N. W. of Forli, and 4 S. E. of Imoli. Lon. 29. 28. lat. 43. 18.

* FAHLUN, or COPPERBERG, a large town of Sweden, and principal of Dalicaria. The streets are as 'trait as a line; and there are two squares, of which one is large and regular. To the left of this is a large church, with a very high steeple. It is covered with copper, and the gates are of bronze. It is famous for its mines of copper, out of which large quantities are got every year. It is 30 miles W. of Gevali, and 20 E. of Hedemora. Lon. 33. 35. lat. 60. 30.

* FAIRBACH, a village of Carmarthen-shire, in South-Wales, with one fair, on November 22, for cattle, horses, and pedlars ware.

FAIRFIELD, a town of New-England, in the territory of Connecticut, seated near the sea-coast, 100 miles S. W. of Boston. Lon. 305. 35. lat. 41. 0.

FAIRFORD, a town of Gloucestershire, with a market on Thursdays, and two fairs, on May 14, and November 12, for sheep and cattle. The church was built for the sake of the glass, which was taken in a ship as it was going to Rome. It has 28 large windows, curiously painted with scripture-histories, in extreme beautiful colours, and designed by the famous Albert Durel. They are the finest in England. It is 22 miles S. E. of Gloucester, and 78 W. by N. of London. Lon. 15. 49. lat. 51. 42.

FAISANS, or PHEASANTS, an isle formed by the river Bidasson, which separates France from Spain. It is famous for the treaties concluded here between France and Spain, it having been looked upon as a neutral place. Lon. 16. 5. lat. 43. 25.

FAKENHAM, a town of Norfolk, with a market on Thursdays, and one fair, for Scots cattle, which begins a little after Michaelmas, and lasts 14 days. It is situated on a hill, and has one church, a Quakers-meeting, and about 300 houses, with pretty good streets well-paved. The people amount to about 1000. It is 18 miles N. W. of Norwich, and 110 N. N. E. of London. Lon. 16. 35. lat. 52. 50.

FALAISE, an handsome town of France, in Lower Normandy, with a castle, and where there is one of the finest towers in France. It is remarkable for being the birth-place of William the Conqueror, according to the opinion of most; tho' some say Ailotte, his mother, was born here. It carries on a good trade in ferges, linen-cloth, and lace. It is seated on the river Anté, 20 miles S. E. of Caen, 40 N. W. of Seez, and 115 W. of Paris. Lon. 17. 25. lat. 48. 40.

FALKIRK, a town of Scotland, in the county of Sterling. In the month of October a great fair is held here, called Falkirk-Tiill, for Highland cattle; and it is noted for being the place where the rebels defeated the king's forces, on January 17, 1746. It is 8 miles S. of Sterling. Lon. 13. 47. lat. 56. 0.

FALKLAND, a town of Scotland, in the county of Fife, in which is a palace built by some of the Kings of Scotland. It is an handsome town, and is seated at the entrance into a fertile country. It is 24 miles N. of Edinburgh. Lon. 14. 35. lat. 56. 20.

FALMOUTH, a sea-port town of Cornwall, with a market on Thursdays, and two fairs, on July 27, and October 10, for horses, oxen, sheep, cloth, and a few hops. It is now large to what it was formerly; for, about 180 years ago, there were not more than two or three houses; but it is now governed by a mayor, 4 aldermen, and a town-clerk, and gives title to a viscount. It is a place of good trade, and is resorted to by ships; and the inhabitants also have ships of their own. The harbour is so large, that 100 sail may safely ride at anchor at a time; and these of the greatest burthen may come up to the Key. The entrance into it is well defended by Pendennis-castle and 2 forts. The town has one church, and about 300 houses; it chiefly consists of one paved street, which is pretty broad, and about three quarters of a mile in length. It is 10 miles S. of Truro, and 282 W. by N. of London. Lon. 12. 5. lat. 50. 15.

FALSTER, a little island of Denmark, lying near the entrance of the Baltick Sea, between the islands of Zealand, Laland, and Mona. Nykoping is the capital town. Lon. 29. 44. lat. 54. 50.

FAMAGUSTA, a town of Turkey in Asia, and in the Island of Cyprus, with a Greek bishop's see. It had a good harbour, defended by two forts which are over against each other; but it is now almost choaked up, and consequently has lost its trade. It was taken by the Turks from the Venetians, after six months siege, and they spared the Venetian governor alive, besides murdering the inhabitants in cold blood, tho' they surrendered on honourable terms. It is 62 miles N. E. of Nicofia. Lon. 52. 40. lat. 35. 0.

• FAMINE, or FAMENE, a small territory of the Netherlands, whose limits are forgot.

FAMINE PORT, a fortress, seated on the N. E. coast of the Straights of Magellan, in S. America. Here the Spanish garrison perished for want; since which time it has been neglected. Lon. 297. 0. lat. 54. 0.

FANANO, a town of Italy, in the duchy of Modena, seated 25 miles S. of Modena. Lon. 28. 55. lat. 44. 15.

FANO, an ancient and handsome town of Italy, in the territory of the Pope, and duchy of Urbino, with a bishop's see. Here is an ancient triumphal arch, handsome churches, and fine palaces. It is seated on the Gulph of Venice, 8 miles S. of Pisaro, and 20 E. of Urbino. Lon. 30. 20. lat. 43. 53.

* FANTIN, a small kingdom of Africa on the Gold Coast of Guinea, where the English and Dutch have forts. The chief man, whom the sailors call a king, is named the BRASSO in the language of the negroes. The native inhabitants are a very troublesome people, both to the English and the Dutch. It is a populous district, and is very rich in gold, slaves, and all sorts of necessaries, but more especially corn, which they sell to the ships. The inland inhabitants, besides trading, are employed in tilling the ground, and drawing palm-wine, which is much better and stronger than that in other parts of the coast. The principal town, or village, has the same name.

FARE OF MESSINA is the stright between Italy and Sicily, remarkable for having the tide ebb and flow, every six hours, with a great deal of rapidity, though it is but seven miles over.

FARFHAM, a town of Hampshire, with a market on Thursdays, and one fair, on June 29, for toys. It is 12 miles E. of Southampton, and 65 W. by S. of London. Lon. 16. 20. lat. 50. 53.

* FARRELLONS, an island of Africa, in Negreeland, 15 miles in length, where there is plenty of fruits and elephants. Lon. 5. 0. lat. 6. 48.

FERNANDES, JUAN, a little uninhabited island of the S. Sea, reckoned to be in S. America, and province of Chili. It seems to sailors to be a very mountainous place at a distance, and extremely rugged and irregular, but, when they come near it, they are agreeably deceived, for it is covered with woods, every where interspersed with the finest valleys, clothed with a most beautiful verdure, and watered with numerous streams and cascades, there being no valley of any extent but what is watered with a hill. It is visited by all the English ships that pass through the S. Sea, and is of excellent use for recovering the sailors who are sick of the scurvy, for the refreshments it produces soon restore them to their health and vigour. It is the only commodious place in those seas where the British cruizers can refresh and recover their men, after their passage round cape Horn, where they may remain some time without alarming the Spaniards' coast. This island lies in lat. S. 47. 40. and is 350 miles from the continent of Chili. Its greatest length is between 12 and 15 miles, and its greatest breadth not quite 6. The only safe

safe anchoring is on the N. side of this island, in Cumberland-bay. The soil on the northern part is very loose, and shallow, so that trees soon perish for want of root. They are most of them of the aromattick kind, and there are none fit for timber except the myrtles. Here are also pimento and cabbage trees, and a great number of plants, of various kinds, which are unknown in these parts, except water-creffes, purslain, and wild sorrel, besides a vast number of turnips, and Sicilian raddishes, formerly sown here. Here were a great number of goats, but the Spaniards have diminished them by putting large dogs on shore, who have destroyed all those they could come at. There are a great number of seals about the island, and another amphibious creature, called a Sea-hion; they bear some resemblance to a seal, though much larger, for they are from 12 to 20 feet in length, and from 8 to 15 in circumference. Their skins are covered with short hair, of a light dun colour, but their tails and fins, which serve them for feet on shore, are almost black. The sailors feed upon both of these, calling the one veal, and the other beef. Besides, there are very large cod, cavalies, gropers, large breams, maids, silver-fish, congers of a peculiar kind, and, above all, a black fish which is very delicious, called by some a chimney-sweeper, and in shape somewhat resembles a carp. Admiral Anson landed here in 1741, and Alexander Selkirk, a Scotchman, lived here 4 years and 4 months alone, till he was taken in by an English ship which passed that way.

* FERRANDINA, a town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in the Basilicata, with the title of a dutchy. It is near the river Basianto, 25 miles S. W. of Matera, and 25 S. W. of Sirenza. Lon. 34. 10. lat. 40. 40.

FERRARA, a large, handsome, and famous town of Italy, capital of a dutchy of the same name, in the territory of the church, with a bishop's see. It has a magnificent square, superb churches, and a strong citadel, but is not so considerable as it was formerly. It is seated near the river Po, 25 miles N. E. of Bologna, 37 N. W. of Ravenna, and 70 N. by E. of Florence. Lon. 29. 30. lat. 44. 54.

* FERRARA, the dutchy of, or the FERRARESE, a province of Italy, in the territory of the Church, bounded on the N. by the Polesino di Rovigo, on the W. by the dutchy of Mantua, on the S. by the Bolognese and Proper Romagna, and on the E. by the Gulph of Venice. It had its own dukes till 1597, when Pope Clement VIII. re-united it to the apostolick chamber. Since that time it lies almost all uncultivated, though it was a very good country, and one of the finest in Italy. The air is unwholesome, on account of the marshes, and the inhabitants are too thin to drain them. Ferrara is the capital town.

* FERRÈTE or PEITTH, a town of France, in Sungau, and the chief place of a district of the same name, with a castle under the town. It has been subject to the French ever since 1648, and is seated in a very fertile country, 10 miles S. W. of Basle, or Basl, and 25 E. of Montbellard. Lon. 25. 0. lat. 47. 40.

FERRÒ, an island of Africa, and the most western of the Canaries, 6 miles to the W. of Palma, and is but small, being only 38 miles in circumference. It has no fresh water, and it is pretended that there is a tree in the middle of the island, constantly surrounded with a fog, and by that means there is water drops from the leaves, and runs into some cistern; this is now locked upon as a fiction, for those that went purposely in search of it could never find it. This island produces some corn and sugar-canes, plenty of fruits and plants, and abounds with cattle, which furnish the inhabitants with milk and cheefe. There is a volcano upon it, from whence earthquakes sometimes proceed. The French geographers make this their first meridian, to which we have conformed, because the best maps are graduated from thence. Lat. 27. 40.

FERRÒL, a sea-port town of Spain, in the kingdom of Galicia, with a famous harbour, not only one of the best in Spain, but even of all Europe; for here the vessels lie safe from all winds, and here the Spanish squadrons frequently secure themselves in time of war, and the privateers carry in their prizes. It is seated on a bay of the Atlantick Ocean, 20 miles N. E. of the Groyne, and 50 N. of Compostella. Lon. 10. 55. lat. 43. 30.

FESCAN, a considerable town of France, in Normandy, in the district of Caux, with a rich and celebrated Benedictine abbey. It is seated near the sea-shore of the English-channel, and has a harbour by which it carries on a considerable trade. It is 30 miles S. W. of Dieppe, and 110 N. W. of Paris. Lon. 18. 2. lat. 49. 46.

FETIPORE, a town of Asia, in India, and in the province of Agra, where the Great Mogul has a palace. It is 25 miles W. of Agra. Lon. 96. 15. lat. 27. 0.

* FETU, a small kingdom of Africa, on the coast of Guinea, about 10 miles in length, and as much in breadth. This country was formerly so powerful and populous, that their neighbours were in dread of it, but is now almost ruined, the inhabitants not being sufficient to till the ground, though it is a very pleasant and fertile country. It abounds in corn, cattle, palm-wine, and oil, and is full of strait paths, bordered with shady trees. The Dutch have a fort here.

FEVERSHAW, a town of Kent, with two fairs, on February 25 and August 12, for linnen, woollen-drapery, and toys. It is seated on a creek of the river Medway, and is well frequented by small vessels; it is large, well built, and inhabited by tradesmen and inn-keepers. It is opposite to the isle of Sheepy, and a member of the town and port of Dover. It is governed by a mayor, 12 aldermen, 24 jurats, and 2 peace-officers. It has one large church built with stone, newly repaired, and contains about 1100 houses, built with brick. The streets are wide and paved, and the town contains about 6000 inhabitants. It has a large corn-market every Thursday, but no particular manufacture is carried on here. It is 9 miles W. of Canterbury, and 48 E. by S. of London. Lon. 18. 13. lat. 51. 20.

* FEUILLETIN, a town of France, in La

Marche, or the confines of Bourbonnois, and in the election of Gueret.

FEURS, an ancient town of France, and capital of Forez, seated on the river Loire, 25 miles S. E. of Rouane, and 25 S. W. of Lyons. Lon. 21. 54. lat. 45. 44.

FEXEM, a village of the bishoprick of Liege, in the circle of Westphalia, in Germany, noted for a battle fought between the Germans and French in 1746. It is 4 miles W. of Urfet, and 5 N. of Liege. Lon. 23. 15. lat. 50. 50.

* FEZ, a considerable kingdom of Africa, on the coast of Barbary, between the kingdoms of Algiers, which is to the E. and Morocco to the S. it being in other parts surrounded by the sea. It is about 125 miles in length, and much the same in breadth. The air is temperate and wholesome, and the country full of mountains, particularly to the W. and S. where mount Atlas lies. However it is populous and fertile, producing citrons, lemons, oranges, dates, almonds, olives, figs, raisins, sugar, honey, flax, cotton, pitch, and corn, in abundance. The inhabitants breed camels, beeves, sheep, and the finest horses in Barbary, besides lions and other wild beasts. It is watered by several rivers and streams, and the principal town is Fez.

FEZ, the capital town of Fez and Morocco, in Africa. It is ancient, strong, and one of the largest and most handsome cities in all Africa, composed, as it were, of three towns, called Beleyde, Old-Fez, and New-Fez. Old-Fez is the most considerable, and contains above 80,000 inhabitants. The palaces are very magnificent, and there are 700 mosques, great and small, 50 of which are very considerable, adorned with marble pillars, and other ornaments. The houses are built of brick or stone, and adorned with Mosaic work; those of brick are adorned with glazing and colours, like Dutch tiles, and the wood-work and ceilings are carved, painted, and gilt; there is a court to every house, in which are square marble basins; the roofs are flat, and they sleep thereon in the summer-time. Here are two colleges for students, finely built, with marble and paintings; one of these has a hundred rooms, and the sides are adorned with marble-pillars of various colours, whose capitals are built, and the roof glitters, with gold, azure, and purple. Here are many hospitals, some of which look like colleges.

colleges, and there are above 100 public baths, many of which are stately structures. All the trades live in a part of the city by themselves, and the Bazar or exchange, full of all sorts of rich merchandizes, is itself as large as a small town. The gardens are exceeding beautiful, and full of all kinds of fragrant flowers and shrubs, inasmuch that the city, in general, is a sort of terrestrial paradise. The inhabitants are clothed like other Turks, and the Ladies dress is very expensive in the winter, but, in the summer, they wear nothing but a shift. It is the center of the trade of this empire, and from hence caravans go to Mecca, carrying with them ready made garments, abundance of Cordovan-leather, indigo, cochineal, and ostrich-feathers, for which they bring in return silks, muslins, and drugs. Other caravans go to Negroland, particularly to Tombuto, and the river Niger; one of which consists of 20,000 men. They travel over such dry, barren deserts, that every other camel carries water. Their commodities are salt, cowreys, wrought silk, British cloth, and the woollen manufactures of Barbary. Here are a great number of Jews, who have handsome synagogues, but the bulk of the inhabitants are Moors, of a tawney complexion, and there are a great number of blacks. It is 200 miles S. of Gibraltar, 250. E. of Morocco, and 100 N. by E. of Sallee. Lon. 13. 50. lat. 33. 40.

* FIVELCO, a district of the Dutch Netherlands, in the province of Groningen, lying on both sides the river Fivel. An inundation, that happened in 1686, destroyed above 400 people; and another, in December 1717, did vast damages.

* FIUM, a large town of Africa, and capital of a province of the same name, in Egypt. It is very populous, and the Cophti have there a bishop's see. Here are a great many ruins of magnificent ancient structures. They carry on a considerable trade in flax, linen-cloth, mats, raisins, and figs. This province contains the greatest number of canals and bridges that were built by the ancient Egyptians. It is seated on a canal which communicates with the Nile; and is 70 miles S.W. of Cairo. Lon. 40. 4. lat. 29. 0.

FIVME, or ST. WERT, a sea-port town of Fria, on the Gulph of Venice. It is seated in a valley near the sea, and is noted for wine, good figs, and other fruits. It is very populous; and near the arsenal and harbour it is pleasant. The cathedral and Jesuits church are worth observation. It is 38 miles E. of Cabo-di-Istria, and subject to the house of Austria. Lon. 32. 35. lat. 45. 45.

FLADA, one of the Western Isles of Scotland, between Sky and Lewis. It is about three miles in circumference, and is remarkable for its fishery.

FLAMBOROUGH-HEAD, a cape or promontory on the eastern coast of Yorkshire, 5 miles E. of Burlington. Lon. 55. lat. 54. 15.

FLANDERS, a province of the Netherlands, which may be divided into Dutch Flanders, Austrian Flanders, and French Flanders. It is bounded by the German Ocean and the United Provinces on the N. by the province of Brabant on the E. by Hainhalt and Artois on the S. and by another part of Artois and the German Ocean on the W. being about 60 miles in length, and 50 in breadth. It is a flat level country, which is very fertile in grain and pastures, and the air is good. They reckon it contains near 30 walled towns, besides those that are open, 1158 villages, 48 abbeys, and a great number of priories, colleges, and monasteries. The men are heavy, but laborious, and levers of good cheer; and the women are reckoned to be very handsome. They are Papists in all parts, except that which belongs to the Dutch. The produce is fine linen, lace, and tapestry.

* FLAVIGNY, a town of France, in Burgundy, and in Auxois, with a celebrated Benedictine abbey. It is seated upon a mountain, 12 miles E. of Semur, 30 N. of Dijon, and 140 E. of Paris. Lon. 22. 12. lat. 47. 31.

FLIERE, a town of France, in Orleanois, and in Anjou, remarkable for a fine Jesuits college. It is seated on the river Loire, 34 miles E. of Angers, and 25 S. W. of Nantz. Lon. 17. 32. lat. 47. 22.

* FLECKENSTEIN, a castle or palace of France, in Lower Alsace, which is strong, and possessed by the most ancient and considerable family in the country. It is 35 miles W. of Landau, and 50 N. of Hagenau. Lon. 25. 36. lat. 49. 40.

FLENSBURG, a handsome town of Denmark, and capital of Sleiswick, with a strong citadel. It has a harbour in the Baltic Sea, and is 15 miles S. of Apenrade, and 15 N. W. of Sleiswick. Lon. 27. 12. lat. 54. 50.

* FLETCHING, a village in Suffex, with one fair, on Monday before Whitsunday, for pedlars ware.

FLEURS, a village of the Austrian Netherlands, in the province of Namur; remarkable for a battle fought here between the French and Dutch in 1690, when the Dutch horse ran away, but the foot made a fine retreat. It is 6 miles N. E. of Charleroy, and 15 W. of Namur. Lon. 22. 10. lat. 50. 25.

FLEURY, a town of France, in Burgundy, 30 miles N. of Chalons. Lon. 22. 25. lat. 47. 13.

FLIE, or ULY-ISLAND, an island on the coast of Holland, at the entrance of Zuider-Zee.

FLINT, the capital town of Flintshire, in N. Wales. It has no market, but has four fairs, viz. on February 15, June 24, August 10, and November 30, for cattle. It is commodiously seated on the river Dee, and is but a small place, though it sends one member to parliament. It was formerly noted for its castle, where Richard II. took shelter on his arrival from Ireland; but having quitted it, he was taken prisoner by the Duke of Lancaster. The castle now is in a ruinous condition; the offices are still held in the town. It is 12 miles S. W. of Chester, 5 N. E. of Holywell, and 201 N. W. of London. Lon. 14. 23. lat. 53. 20.

* FLINTSHIRE, a county of N. Wales, 29 miles in length, and 18 in breadth; and is bounded on the N. by the sea, on the N. E. by an arm of the sea, on the S. by Denbighshire, and on the S. W. by the same county. It contains about 5400 houses, 32,400 inhabitants, 28 parishes, and 1 market town, which is St. Asaph, for the capital has no market. It is full of hills, intermixed with a few valleys, which are very fruitful; and the inhabitants are long-lived. The rivers are the Wheler, the Tagidog, the Severn, and the Dee. It sends 2 members to parliament; one for the town, and the other for the county.

FLIX, a town and castle of Spain, in Catalonia. It is strong both by art and nature, and is built upon a peninsula in the river Ebro, where it makes an elbow, and is to the town instead of a ditch, and may be conducted quite round it. It is covered with mountains on that side where it does not pass, and defended by a castle built upon an eminency, which commands the town, and

celebrated city of Italy, and capital of Tuscany. It contains 70,000 inhabitants, 3800 houses, 89 convents, 22 hospitals, 152 churches, 9 gates, 7 fountains, 17 large squares, and 160 statues; the most remarkable of which is the Venus of Medeis, and is thought to be the most beautiful and finely finished piece in the world. There are also several libraries, particularly that of St.
Lawrence. The river Arno runs through this city, and divides it into two unequal parts, which communicate with each other by four large and handsome stone-bridges that are built over this river. It is defended by a strong citadel and two forts, besides the walls, which are about six miles in circumference. The streets are paved with flag-stones, and people may walk through every street under piazas; but some of them are so narrow, that carriages cannot pass through them; and there are also many paper-windows. The Great Duke's palace is a superb structure. It is an archbishop's see, and there is an university; likewise, in 1738, there was an academy founded,
to teach young gentlemen their exercises.
The gallery of the ancient palace is about 400 feet in length, and its cabinet is full of curiosities. The present Great Duke was elected Emperor of Germany in 1745. It is seated in a delightful plain, surrounded with pleasant hills. It is 45 miles S. of Bologna, 60 S. by E. of Modena, 85 S. E. of Parma, 90 S. E. of Mantua, 115 S. by W. of Venice, and 125 N. W. of Rome. Lon. 28. 59. lat.

FLORENNES, a town of the Netherlands, in the county of Namur, and subject to the bishop of Liege. It is 5 miles N. E. of Philipville, 12 S. of Namur, and 13
W. of Dinant. Lon. 22. 5. lat. 50.

* FLORENT LE VIEU, ST. a town of France, in Anjou, seated on the banks of the river Loire, 20 miles from Ang-ers, with a rich Benedictine abbey.

FLORENTINE, a town of France, in Champagne, and in the Senois, which gives title to a viscount. It is 15 miles N. E. of Auxerre, 25 S. E. of Sens, and 80 S. E. of Paris. Lon. 21. 20. lat.
47. 56.

* FLORENTINO, one of the three provinces of Tuscany, in Italy. It is bounded on the W. by the republic of Lucca, and the territory of Modena; on the N. by the Appennine mountains; and on the E. by the duchy of Urbino. The river Arno has its source in this province, and runs through the middle of it from E. to W. and the great number of small streams it receives, renders the country very fertile. Florence is the capital city.

FLORES, one of the Azores, or Western-Islands, lying in the Atlantic Ocean. It is about 17 miles in circumference, and abounds in wood and provisions of all kinds. It is so called from the beautiful flowers, which are here in great plenty.
Lon. 327. 0. lat. 39. 25.

FLORENDA, a large country of N. America, which extends from the river Panuco, in New Spain, all along the Gulph of Mexico and the N. Sea to the 38th degree of latitude. It comprehends Louisiana, Spanish Florida, Georgia, and a part of Carolina. Here are a great number of the native Americans, who are of a red copper colour, with long coarse black hair, and without beards, and have no hair on their bodies. They go almost naked, beset their bodies with oil, and worship the sun. They bring their children up to warlike exercises, hunting, and swimming. Both men and women are exceedingly active, and they can climb up the highest trees with incredible agility. They have no European animals but what are brought from the settlements; nor are the birds, trees, or plants like those with us. The only place the Spaniards have in it is the sea-port town of St. Augustine, with a fort at a little distance from it. The English have attempted to take it; but without success.

* FLOTZ, a town of Turkey in Europe, and in Walachia, seated on the river Geniffa, near the place where it falls into the Danube, and over-against the town of Axiopoli.

FLOUR ST. a town of France, in Upper Auvergne, with a bishop's see. It carries on a considerable trade in corn and mules; and is seated on a mountain, 45 miles S. of Clermont, 30 E. of Aurillac, and 270 S. of Paris. Lon. 20. 46. lat.
45. 1.

FLUSHING, an handsome, strong, and considerable town of the United Provinces, in Zealand, and in the Island of Wal-cherin, with a very good harbour, and a great foreign trade. It was put into the hands of Q. Elizabeth for a pledge of their fidelity, and as a security for the money she advanced. It is one of the three places which Charles V. advised Philip II. to preserve with care. It is 3 miles S. W. of Middleburg, 3 N. E. of Sluys, and 25 N. W. of Ghent. Lon. 27. 7. lat. 51. 26.

* FOCHIA NOVA, a town of Natolia, in Asia, and in the province of Sarchan, seated on the Gulph of Sanderly, with a good harbour, and a castle. The Venetians defeated the Turkish fleet near this place in 1650.

* FODDRIA, a town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in the Capitanato. It is seated near the river Cerbero, 10 miles E. of Manfredonia.

* FODVAR, a town of Hungary, over-against Celceza, on the other side of the Danube. Lon. 36. 55. lat. 46. 45.

FOGARAS, a town and castle of Transylvania, seated on the river Alauta. It is 25 miles W. of Cronstat, and 30 N. E. of Hermanstat. Lon. 42. 18. lat. 46. 30.

* FOGLIA, a river of Italy which rises on the confines of Tuscany, crosses the duchy of Urbino, and falls into the Gulph of Venice at Bisaro.

FOGO. See FUGO.

* FOI SP. a town of France, in Guienne, and in the Agennois, seated on the river Dordogne. It is remarkable for having sustained several sieges during the civil wars of France. Lon. 17. 50. lat. 45. 53.

* FOIA, an ancient town of Natolia, in Asia, seated on the Gulph of Smyrna, 30 miles N. of the city of that name. It is still considerable for the goodness of its harbour, and the strong castle that defends it.

FOIX, a town of France, in Upper Languedoc, and capital of a county of the same name. It is seated on the river Ariege, at the foot of the Pyrennees, 8 miles S. of Pamiers, 40 S. of Tolouse, and 25 E. of St. Lizien. Lon. 19. 15. lat. 43. 2.

FOKIEN, a province of China, bounded by Chekiang on the N. by Canton on the S. and on the other parts by the sea, being opposite to the Island of Formosa. The climate is hot; but the air is pure and healthy. It is well-cultivated in every place, not excepting the mountains, which produce a great deal of rice, from a method they have of conveying the water upon a sort of terraces which are placed one above another. It abounds with the same commodities as the other parts of China; and they trade in musk, precious stones, quick-silver, silk, linen-cloth, calicoes, steel, and all sorts of utensils. Every town has its peculiar dialect, which is very inconvenient for travellers that pass through it; but the inhabitants are much addicted to the sciences, and it produces a great number of learned men. Some make Fokien to be the capital of this province; but this is a mistake; for there is no such town of any note in it, if we may believe Duhalde.

FOLIGNI, not FOLIGNO, or FULIGNO, as some write it, a town of Italy, in the territories of the Pope, and district of Umbria, with a bishop's see, handsome churches, and fine palaces. It is a trading place, and remarkable for its sweet-meats, its paper-mills, its silk-manufactures, and its fairs. It is seated on the declivity of a mountain, near a fine fertile plain, 12 miles N. of Spoleto, and 67 N. of Rome. Lon. 30. 18. lat. 42. 55.

FOLKSTONE, a town of Kent, with a market on Thursdays, and one fair, on June 28, for pedlars ware. It was once a flourishing town of large extent, containing five parish-churches, which are now reduced to one small church, and three meeting-houses. It is a member of the port of Dover, and is governed by a mayor, and 12 jurats. It contains about 350 houses, mostly built with brick, and dispersed into three narrow paved streets. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in fishing. Near it is Sangate-castle. It is seated on the sea-coast, 8 miles S. W. of Dover, 17 S. E. of Canterbury, and 69 E. by S. of London. Lon. 18. 55. lat. 51. 2.

* FONBERT, a village in Suffolk, with a fair on September 11, for toys.

* FONCHALL. See FENCHAL.

FONDRI, a town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in the Terra di Lavoro, with a bishop's see. It is seated on a fertile plain, but in a bad air, near a lake of the same name. It is 42 miles N. W. of Capua, 50 N. W. of Naples, and 55 S. E. of Rome. Lon. 31. 3. lat. 41. 22.

FONTAINBLEAU, a town in the Isle of France, and in the Gatenois, remarkable for its fine palace, which has been the place where the kings of France used to lodge when they went a hunting. It was first embellished by Francis I. and all the successive kings have added something thereto; insomuch that may now be called the finest pleasure-house in the world. It stands in the midst of a forest, consisting of 26424 arpents of land, each containing 100 square perches, and each perch 18 feet. It is 35 miles S. E. of Paris. Lon. 20. 18. lat. 48. 22.

* FONTAINE L'ÉVEQUE, a town of the Netherlands, in French Hainhalt, near the river Sambre. It is 3 miles W. of Charleroy, 15 S. W. of Namur, and 10 E. of Mons. Lon. 21. 53. lat. 50. 23.

FONTARABIA, a sea-port town of Spain, in Biscay, and in the territory of Guipuscoa, with a strong castle. It is seated on a peninsula on the sea-shore, and on the river Bidassoa. It is small, but is well fortified both by nature and art. It has a good harbour, though it is dry at low water. It is built in the form of an amphitheatre on the declivity of a hill, and is surrounded on the land side by the high Pyrenean Mountains. It is a very important place, being accounted the key of Spain on that side. The young women have something particular in their dress; for they braid their hair, which falls upon their shoulders; and on their heads they have a small muslin veil, which flutters about their necks; round which they have necklaces of coral; and in their ears pendants of gold and pearl: their garment is a waistcoat with loose sleeves; and they are very alert and vigorous; but this must be understood of those who inhabit the villages near the town. It is 22 miles S. W. of Bayonne, and 62 E. of Bilboa. Lon. 15. 52. lat. 43. 23.

FONTENAI-LE-COMTE, a handsome town of France, in Lower Poitou, remarkable for its trade and its fairs. It is seated on the river Verdee, near the sea, and is 10 miles N. W. of Mailezais, and 25

N. E. of Rochelle. Lon. 15. 42. lat. 46. 30.

FONTENAY, a town or village of the Austrian Netherlands, in the province of Hainhalt, and on the confines of Flanders, remarkable for a battle fought here between the Allies and the French in May 1745, in which the former were worsted. It is 3 miles S. W. of Tournay, and 18 N. W. of Mons. Lon. 20. 55. lat. 50. 35.

* FONTENAY, a village of France, in the dutchy of Burgundy, remarkable for a bloody battle fought here in 841, between the Germans and the French, in which were killed above 100,000 men; and the Germans were defeated. It is 20 miles S. E. of Auxerre, and 40 N. E. of Nevers. Lon. 21. 21. lat. 47. 23.

* FONTEVRAUT, a town of France, in Anjou, with a famous nunnery, the chief of the order. It is three miles from the river Loire, 8 from Saumar, 12 from Chinon, and 160 S. W. of Paris. Lon. 17. 42. lat. 47. 11.

FORCALQUIER, a considerable town of France, in Provence, and capital of a county of the same name. It is seated on a mountain, 17 miles S. W. of Sisteron, and 30 N. E. of Aix. Lon. 23. 32. lat. 43. 58.

FORCHAIN, a strong town of Germany, in Franconia, and in the bishopric of Bamberg, with a fine arsenal. It is seated on the river Rednitz, 15 miles S. of Bamberg, and 15 N. of Nuremberg. Lon. 28. 40. lat. 49. 44.

FORDINGBRIDGE, a town of Hampshire, whose market is deserted, but it has one fair, for pedlars ware and forage colts. It is 26 miles S. W. of Winchester, and 85 W. by S. of London. Lon. 15. 45. lat. 50. 52.

* FORDWICH, a member of the town and port of Sandwich, in Kent, situated on the river Stour, on the N. E. side of Canterbury, and governed by a mayor, jurats, and commonalty. It has one small church, built with stone and brick, and about 60 houses, most of which are brick. The streets are narrow, dirty, and not paved, and the inhabitants amount to about 200. It is noted for its excellent trouts, but has neither fair nor market, and lies 7 miles from Canterbury, and S W. of Sandwich.

* FOREST-ROW, a village in Suffex, with two fairs, on June 25; for pedlars-ware, and October 28 for cattle and pedlars ware.

FOREST-TOWNS, are four towns, so called, of Germany, in the circle of Suabia, lying along the Rhine, and the confines of Swisserland, from Basle, or Basl, to Zurich, at the entrance of the Black Forest. Their names are, Waldshut, Lauffenburg, Seckingen, and Rheinfeld, and they are subject to the house of Austria.

FOREZ, a province of France, bounded on the W. by Auvergne, on the S. by Velay and the Vivarois, on the E. by Lyonnais and Beaugeois, and on the N. by the dutchy of Burgundy and the Bourbonnois. It is watered by the Loire, and several other streams, which render the soil fruitful. It has several mines of pit-coal and iron, for which reason they make large quantities of hard-ware. It is divided into the upper and lower, and Montbrison is the capital town.

* FORFAR, a shire of Scotland, which sends 3 members to parliament, 1 for the shire, and two for the burghs of Perth, &c.

FORFAR, a town of Scotland, in a shire of the same name, seated near a lake, from whence a river proceeds that runs into the Tay. It is 14 miles W. of Montrose. Lon. 15. 3. lat. 56. 25.

* FORRES, a town of France, in Upper Normandy, remarkable for its mineral waters. It is 62 miles N. W. of Paris. Lon. 19. 15. lat. 49. 38.

FORLI, an ancient and considerable town of Italy, and capital of a territory of the same name, in Romagna, with a bishop's see. The publick structures are very handsome, and it is seated in a fertile, healthy, and pleasant country, 10 miles S. E. of Faenza, 20 S. W. of Ravenna, and 45 N. E. of Florence. Lon. 29. 36. lat. 44. 28.

* FORMELLO, a town of Italy, in the patrimony of St. Peter, with a fine palace, belonging to the prince of Chegi.

FORMOSA, a large island in the sea of China, divided into two parts by a chain of mountains, which runs from E. to W. The eastern part is inhabited by the original natives, who are looked upon as savages by the Chinese, and the eastern part is under the dominion of the Chinese, who drove away the Dutch in 1661. It is an excellent country abounding in all the necessaries of life, and the original inhabitants, who go naked, by pricking their skins make the figures of flowers, trees, and animals on their bodies. They are a good sort of people, and are enemies to theft and quarrels. They are very dextrous in shooting with arrows, and are light of course. Lon. from 139. 10. to 141. 28. lat. from 21. 30. to 25. 10.

* FORT-DE-CATAROCOUY, is in New-France, built by court Frontenac. It is seated on the river St. Lawrence, almost at the entrance of the lake Ontario. It was designed to keep the Iroquois in awe, who are fiends to the English. Lon. 202. 20. lat. 44. 20.

* FORT-DE-CHAMBLEY, a strong fort of N. America, in New France, seated over against a small lake, formed by the river Sorel. It is a little to the S. W. of Montreal, and the French look upon it as the best defence on that side of the country, against the English. Lon. 305. 40. lat. 45. 25.

* FORT and PORT DAUPHIN, one of the best harbours the French have in the W. Indies. It is in the island of St. Domingo.

* FORT-DE-FUENTES, a fort of Italy, in the dutchy of Milan, seated on the mountain of Montecchio, at the confluence of the river Adda with the lake Como. Lon. 26. 35. lat. 46. 5.

FORT-LEWIS, a strong place of France, in Alsace, built by Lewis XIV. in an isle formed by the Rhine, 20 miles N. E. of Strasburg, and 267 E. of Paris. Lon. 25. 44. lat. 48. 48.

* FORT-LEWIS, a fort of America, in the island of Cayenne, built by the French in 1643.

FORTEVENTURA, an island of the Atlantick ocean, and one of the Canaries, being 65 miles in length, and of a very irregular breadth, for it consists of two peninsulas, joined by an isthmus 12 miles in breadth. It produces plenty of wheat and barley, as also beeves and goats. It belongs to the Spaniards, Lon. 4. 0. lat. from 28. 20. to 29. 0.

* FORTNOVA, or FORNOVA, a town of Italy, in the dutchy of Parma, 8 miles S. W. of Parma, remarkable for a battle gained here by the French, over the Italians, in 1495. Lon. 27. 38. lat. 44. 44.

* Foules, Folies, or Pholies, are a people of Africa, in the countries lying about the rivers Senegal and Gambia.
They are much like the Arabs, but not so white, nor yet so black as the Negroes. They are Mohometans, and understand Arabick. They live in hords, or clans, build towns, and are not subject to the kings of the country which they inhabit; if they are ill treated by one nation, they will remove to another. They have chiefs of their own, under whom they live quietly. They cultivate the ground, and have plantations of tobacco and cotton about their towns, and beyond these are corn-fields, which are sown with Indian-corn, rice, and two sorts of Guinea-corn. They have also potatoes and yams, besides a sort of pulse, between a kidney-bean and a pea. They are an industrious and frugal people, and are very hospitable to those that visit them. They are very quiet and mild, but yet so courageous, that the negroes dare not attack them.
They breed great numbers of cattle, and they kill as many lions, tigers, and other wild beasts, as they can. They also hunt elephants, for the sake of their teeth, and they smoke-dry and eat their flesh. They are dressed in white cotton garments, and are always neat and clean, especially the women, who keep their houses very sweet. These are placed at a distance from each other, for fear of fires, and they are small round huts, thatched on the top, and have no windows nor light, but what comes through the doors. Their towns are enclosed with pales, and, at some distance from thence, a thick hedge. The space between them is sown with the things above mentioned.

Foulsham, a town of Norfolk, with a market on Tuesdays, but no fairs, seated on a common, and is a pretty large town. It is 12 miles N. W. of Norwich, and 102 N. E. of London. Lon.
18. 45. lat. 42. 48.

Fowey, or Fov, a town of Cornwall, with a market on Saturdays, and two fairs, on May 1, and September 10, for horses, oxen, sheep, cloth, and a few hops. It is by some called Fov, and is a borough town, which sends 2 members to parliament. It is seated on an ascent, is well fortified, and its haven well secured with block-houses. It is at present a good trading place, and its market is well supplied with corn. It is 24 miles W. of Portsmouth, 32 S. W. of Launceston, and 240 W. by S. of London. Lon. 12. 35. lat. 50. 26.

Fov, Sr. a town of Agernois and Guienne, in France, seated on the river Dordogne.
It was formerly fortified by the reformed, but was taken from them in 1662.
It is 35 miles E. of Bourdeaux. Lon.
17. 35. lat. 44. 49.

Fraga, a strong town of Spain, in the kingdom of Arragon, with a handsome castle. It is strong by situation, among the mountains, having the river Cinca before it, whose high banks are difficult of access, and at its back there is a hill, which cannot easily be approached with large cannon. The gardens produce herbs and saffron, but the parts about it are barren. Alphonso VII. king of Arragon, and the first of that name of Castile, was killed here by the Moors in 1134, when he besieged this town. It is 30 miles S. of Balbastro, and 50 S.

for millenary-goods, cloths, and toys. It is seated near the head of a small rivulet, upon a clay hill; it is a large place, and is defended by a high wall, built by the Saxons, but it is walled and double-ditched only on one side, because there is a large meer on the other. It had 13 high towers, but is now much decayed, being turned into a large work-house. However, the out-part looks more like a castle, than the ruins of one. The chief ornament of this town is the church, in which there are several monuments, of the families of the dukes of Norfolk and Richmond, and the Earls of Surrey. In this town there are about 600 houses, which are, in general, mean ones, and the streets not being paved, are very dirty. It is 32 miles E. of Purry, and 86 N. E. of London. Lon. 19. 5. lat. 52. 25.

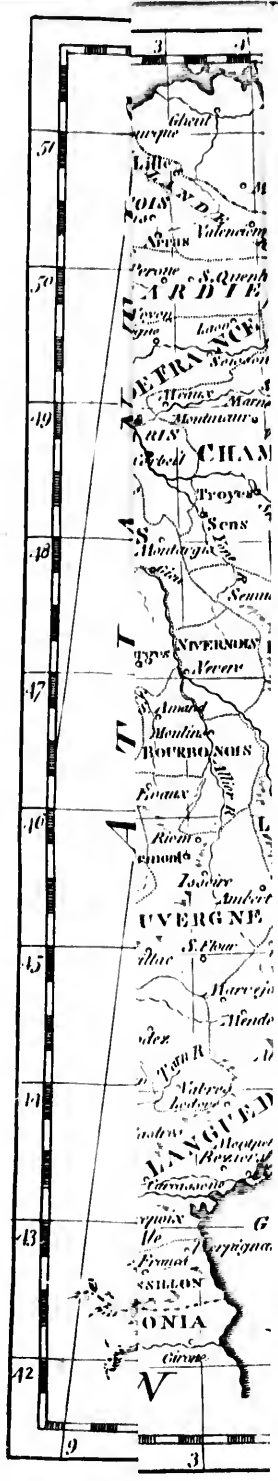

FRAMPTON, a town in Dorsetshire, with a market on Thursdays, and 4 fairs, on March 4, March 7, August 1, and September 4, for all sorts of cattle. It is pleasantly seated on the river Frome, which abounds in trouts and other fish. It is but a small place, 12 miles N. of Weymouth, 62. S. of Bristol, and 117 W. by S. of London. Lon. 14. 53. lat. 50. 43.

FRAMPTON, a village in Gloucestershire, with one fair, on February 14, for small pedlars ware.

FRANCE, a large country of Europe, bounded on the N. by the Netherlands, on the E. by Germany, Switzerland, Savoy, and the Alps, on the S. by the Mediterranean-Sea and the Pyrennees, and on the W. by the ocean. It is about 600 miles in length, and 560 in breadth, and the air is pure, healthy, and temperate. It is so happily seated in the middle of the temperate zone, that some make it equal to Italy, with regard to the delightfulness of the landships, and the fertility of the soil; however, it is certainly much more healthful. The politeness of the inhabitants is well known, but most think them too ceremonious. The soil produces corn, wine, oil, and flax, in great abundance, and they have very large manufactures of linnen, woollen, silk, and lace. They have a foreign trade to Spain, Italy, Turkey, and to the E. and W. Indies, which is prodigiously increased of late, though the present war has given a great check to it. They themselves reckon that the number of the inhabitants is 20,000,000. This kingdom contains 21 universities, 18 archbishopricks, 12 parliaments, 12 board of accounts, 12 courts of aids, 2 courts, and 30 mints for coining money, and 2 supreme councils, besides the grand council, and 31 governors. The king has the title of most christian, and is an absolute prince, to whom his subjects are extremely devoted, though he rules them never so severely. In general they are men of bright parts, and have so high an opinion of themselves, that they look upon other nations with contempt; however they are of a very restless disposition, and are engaged in war more than any other country in Europe, for which reason they are generally poor, though they might certainly be very rich, if they could let their neighbours live in quiet, without attempting continually to enlarge their dominions. They are such ill observers of treaties of peace, that French faith is now become a proverb; for they are bound by no ties, and never fail beginning a war when they think it is for their advantage. The king's revenue is large, his army very numerous, and he has 10,000 men always about his person. The principal provinces are, Alsace, Angoumois, Aijou, Armagnac, Artois, Aenis, Auvergne, Beaujolois, Beauce, Berry, Bigorre, Bourbonnois, Burgundy, the Franche Comte, Bresse, Breagne, Brie, Bugey, Cambiesis, Champagne, Dauphiny, Flanders, Forez, Gasconny, Guienne, Hainault, the Isle of France, Languedoc, Limosin, Lionnois, Maine, Marche, Navarre, Nivernois, Normandy, Orleansois, Perche, Perigord, Picardy, Poitou, Provence, Quersey, Rouergue, Roussillon, Saintonge, Touraine, Vivarais, and Lorrain; all these provinces are divided into districts, which have their particular names. This kingdom is watered by a great number of rivers, of which the four principal are, the Loire, the Seine, the Rhone, and the Garonne, or Gironde, which will all be taken notice of in their proper places. The parliaments have little or no share in the government, and their business now is, to pass the arrets or laws which the king is pleased to send them; however, they don't always pay a blind obedience to the king, for we have instances of their making a noble stand, and that but a few years since. In civil causes these parliaments are still the last resort, providing the court does not interpose. That of Paris is the most considerable, where the king often comes in person to see his royal acts recorded. It consists of the dukes and peers of France, besides the ordinary members, who purchase their places; and they only take cognizance of causes belonging to the crown. The revenues of the crown arise from the taille or land-tax, and the aids which proceed from the customs and duties on all merchandize except salt, for the tax upon that commodity is called the Gabelles; besides these, there are other taxes, as the capitation or poll-tax, the tenths of all estates, offices, and employments; besides the fifteenth penny, from which neither the nobility or clergy are exempted. Add to these the tenths, and free-gifts of the clergy, who are allowed to tax themselves; and lastly, the crown-rents, fines and forfeitures, which bring in a considerable sum. All these are said to amount to 15,000,000 sterling a-year. But the king has other resources and ways of raising money, whenever necessity obliges him. The army, in time of peace, is said to consist of 200,000 men, and in time of war 400,000; among which are many Swiss, Germans, Scotch, Irish, Swedes, and Danes. There is no religion allowed in France but the Roman Catholic; ever since the revocation of the edict of Nantz, in 1685, though they are not so devoted to the Pope as other nations of that communion, nor have they any inquisition among them.

* FRANCE, the Isle of, a province of France so called, because it was formerly bounded by the rivers Seine, Maine, Oise, Aisne, and Ourque. It comprehends, besides Paris, the Beauvoisis, the Valois, the county of Senlis, the Vexin, the Hurepois, the Gâtinais, the Multien, the Goules, and the Mantois. Paris is the capital.

FRANCFORT on the MAINE, an ancient, large, strong, rich, imperial, handiatick, and handsome town of Germany, in Franconia. The chief structure is the town-house, which is very large and handsome, but built in the ancient taste; in this the golden bull is preserved, which is the original of the fundamental laws of the empire. The Emperor is generally elected and crowned here, unless the plague or war will not admit of the solemnities proper to the occasion. Most of the inhabitants are protestants, of the confession of Augsburg; but there are some Calvinists and French refugees, besides papists, who have the cathedral church. There are also a great number of Jews, who live in a quarter by themselves, which is always shut up at night, to prevent disorders. This town is one of the most trading places in Europe, and there are two great fairs here held every year. It is seated in a very fertile plain, upon the river Main, which divides it in two, 15 miles N. E. of Mentz, 45 N. of Heidelberg, 32 N. E. of Worms, 75 S. E. of Cologne, and 350 W. by N. of Vienna. Lon. 26. 15. lat. 49. 55.

FRANCFORT on the ODER, a rich and handsome town of Germany, in the middle Marche of Brandenburg, formerly imperial, but now subject to the king of Prussia. It is remarkable for its three great fairs, and for its university, which is always provided with learned professors. It is 45 miles E. of Berlin, 30 N. E. of Wittemberg, and 80 S. of Stettin. Lon. 32. 35. lat. 52. 20.

FRANCHE COMTE, or the county of Burgundy, a considerable province of France, bounded on the N. by Lorraine, on the E. by Montbelliard and Switzerland, on the W. by Baligny, Burgundy, and Brasse, and on the S. by Bresse. It is about 125 miles in length, and 80 in breadth, and abounds in corn, wine, cattle, horses, mines of iron, copper, and lead. It is watered by the rivers Sone, Lougnon, Doux, Louvre, and Dain. It was conquered by France in 1674, and was ceded to it by the treaty of Nimwegen in 1678. Befanzon is the capital town.

FRANCHEMONT, a town of Germany in the bishoprick of Liege, 13 miles S. E. of Liege. Lon. 23. 23. lat. 50. 30.

FRANCOLINI, a place of Italy, in the territories of the Pope, which formerly had a strong fortress, but at present only a village. It is seated on one of the branches of the river Po. It was here that John Eugene of Savoy passed that river in 1706, in his memorable march to relieve Turin. It is 6 mile N. of Ferrara. Lon. 29. 30. lat. 44. 48.

FRANCONIA, a country or circle of Germany, bounded on the N. by Thuringia, on the E. by Swabia, on the S. by the Upper Palatinate, and on the W. by the Lower Palatinate; being about 88 miles from N. to S. and 95 from E. to W. The middle is very fertile in corn, wine, and fruits, but the borders are full of woods and barren mountains. The ecclesiasticks are rich and powerful, and consequently the people must be poor.

and it is certain a great number of beggars come from thence. It is composed of a great many districts, of which the bishopricks of Bamberg, Witzberg, Aichst, and the Demaine of the Grand Teutonic Order, are the principal. The greatest part of the people are Protestants, but there are many Papists and Calvinists. There are also Jews, who have their synagogues. The Franks came from this province who conquered France, and gave their name to that kingdom.

FRANKER, or FRANKER, a handsome and strong town of the United Provinces, in W. Friesland, with a castle and an university. The publick buildings and the palaces are magnificent. It is 9 miles W. of Leuarden, and 15 N. of Slooten. Lon. 23. 8. lat. 53. 12.

• FRANFIELD, a village in Suffex, with one fair, on June 24, for pedlars ware.

FRANKENDAL, a strong town of Germany, in the dominions of the Elector-palatine. It was taken by the Spaniards in 1623, by the Swedes in 1632, and was burnt by the French in 1688, who demolished the fortifications; but it has now recovered itself a little. It is seated near the Rhine, 12 miles N. W. of Heidelberg, 12 N. by W. of Spire, and 5 S. of Worms. Lon. 26. 4. lat. 49. 28.

FRANKENSTEIN, a town of Germany, in the palatinate of the Rhine, and dutchy of Zuebruggen, 12 miles N. W. of Landau. Lon. 25. 10. lat. 49. 20.

FRASCATI, a handsome town of Italy, seated near the same spot as the Tusculum of M. T. Cicero, with a bishop's see. Here are a great number of magnificent palaces and delightful gardens. It is seated at the foot of a mountain, 12 miles S. E. of Rome, and 10 S. W. of Palestrina. Lon. 30. 18. lat. 41. 43.

• FRAUENFART, a town of Silesia, on the frontiers of Poland, remarkable for a battle the Swedes gained here over the Saxons, in 1706. It is 70 miles N. W. of Breslaw, and 20 N. W. of Glogaw. Lon. 33. 25. lat. 51. 45.

• FRAUENFELD, a town of Swisserland, and capital of the Thorgow. Here is a church for the Papists, and another for the Protestants. It is seated on an eminence, near the river Murg. Lon. 26. 35. lat. 47. 40.

• FREIBURG, a large, rich, strong, and fine town of Germany, in Misnia, remarkable for its mines, and for being the burying-place of the princes of the house of Saxony. It is a delightful place to live in, and is seated on the river Mulda, 57 miles S. E. of Leipzick, and 15 S. W. of Dresden. Lon. 31. 15. lat. 51. 2.

* FREIBENBURG, a town of Germany, in the dutchy and circle of Westphalia, 50 miles W. of Cassel. Lon. 25. 35. lat. 51. 10.

FREDERICA, a town of N. America, in Georgia, seated in the mouth of the river Altamaha, lately built and fortified by general Oglethorpe. The island it stands on is called St. Simons, and is about 13 miles in length, and 4 in breadth. Lon. 266. 0. lat. 31. 0.

FREDERICKSBURG, a castle and palace of the king of Denmark, in the isle of Zealand. It was taken and pillaged by the Swedes in 1659. It is 15 miles N. W. of Copenhagen. Lon. 30. 8. lat. 55. 50.

FREDERICKSBURG, a fort and colony of Brandenburg, on the gold-coast of Guinea, in Africa, near Cape Three-points, and about 75 miles from Cape Coast. It is subject to Denmark. Lon. 16. 20. lat. 4. 30.

FREDERICKS-HALL, or FREDERICKSTADT, a strong town of Norway, in the prefecture of Agerhuys, where Charles XII. king of Sweden was killed by a musket-ball, in 1718, when he was besieging this town. It is seated on the coast of the Catagate, 25 miles S. E. of Anslow, and 35 S. E. of Agerhuys. Lon. 28. 20. lat. 59. 2.

FREDERICKS-ODE, a town of Denmark, in Jutland, taken by the Swedes in 1657, but now subject to Denmark. It is seated near the sea, 30 miles S. of Arhus, 20 N. E. of Colding, and 50 N. of Sleswick. Lon. 27. 35. lat. 55. 42.

FREDERICKSTADT, a town of Denmark, in S. Jutland, built in 1621. It is seated on the river Eyder, 8 miles N. E. of Toningen, and 17 S. W. of Sleswick. Lon. 26. 58. lat. 54. 32.

FREDERICKSTADT, a town of Norway, in the province of Agerhuys, seated on a bay of the sea, called Schaggerrack, near the frontiers of Sweden, 60 miles N. of Gottenburg. Lon. 29. 1. lat. 59. 12.

FREIBENZEN, a handsome and considerable town of Germany, capital of a bishoprick of the same name, in the circle of Bavaria, and subject to the bishop. It is seated on a mountain near the river Iler, 20 miles N. of Unich, 20 S. E. of Land-

FREJUS, an ancient town of France, in Provence, with a bishop's see. It had formerly a harbour, which is now cheaked up. It is seated near the sea, on the river Argens, in a morass, that renders the air unhealthy, 40 miles N. E. of Toulon, and 30 S. W. of Nice. Lon. 24. 28. lat. 44. 25.

* FRESHFORD, a village in Somersetshire, with one fair, on September 16, for cheese.

* FRETtingham, a village in Norfolk, with one fair, on the first Monday in April, for petty chapmen.

* FREUDENSTADT, a handsome and strong town of Germany, in the Black Forest, built in 1600, to defend the passage in and out of this forest. It is 15 miles S. W. of Tubingen, and 22 S. E. of Strasburg. Lon. 26. 2. lat. 48. 25.

* FREWES, a village of Cornwall, with two fairs, on Easter-Tuesday and September 20, for horses, oxen, sheep, cloth, and a few hops.

* FREYSTADT, a town of Upper Hungary, in the county of Neitra, with a strong castle. It has been almost burnt down by the Turks, and is seated on the river Wag, over against Leopoldstadt. Lon. 36. 30. lat. 48. 50.

FREYSTADT, a town of Silesia, in the territory of Teschin, 16 miles E. of Tro-paw. Lon. 35. 30. lat. 50. 0.

* FRIAS, a considerable town of Spain, in Old Castile, seated on a mountain near the river Ebro, 35 miles N. W. of Burgos. Lon. 14. 8. lat. 42. 50.

FRIEBERG, a large town of Germany, and capital of Brisgaw. It is remarkable for the tower-steeple of the great church, which, except that of Strasburg, is the finest in Germany, and for its university. The inhabitants are famous for polishing crystal and precious stones. It has been several times taken and re-taken, particularly by the French in 1744, who demolished the fortifications. It is seated on the river Triser, 10 miles E. of Brisach, 22 N. E. of Basle, and 30 S. of Strasburg. Lon. 25. 32. lat. 48. 4.

FRIEBERG, a town of Swisserland, and capital of the canton of the same name. The publick buildings, especially the cathedral, are very handsome, and the inhabitants are Papists. It is governed in spirituals by the bishop of Laufane, who resides there, and in temporals by a council, over which an Avoyer presides. Its situation is very extraordinary, for only the western side is near plain ground, and all the rest is built among rocks and hills. The streets are clean and large, and it is divided into four parts, the town, the city, the oland or meadow, and the hospital. In 1737 the powder-magazine, which contained 750 tons of gun-powder, was set on fire by lightning, which did considerable damage. It is seated on the river Save, 17 miles S. W. of Bern, 30 N. E. of Lawfan, 35 W. of Soleure, and 75 S. W. of Zurich. Lon. 24. 40. lat. 46. 50.

* FRIEBURG, the canton of, and one of the 13 republicks of Swisserland. It is surrounded on all sides by the canton of Bern, and the land is fruitful in corn, fruits, and pastures. It is said they can send 18,000 men into the field.

* FRIEBURG, the hermitage of, is a celebrated hermitage of Swisserland, three miles from Friburg. It is cut in a rock, and contains a church and steeple, a vestry, a kitchen, a large hall, two rooms on each side two pair of stairs, and a cellar. The church is 63 feet long, 36 broad, and 22 high. But the most wonderful thing of all is the steeple, which is 70 feet high above the rock. The chimney of the kitchen is also very surprising, for the passage up it is 90 feet in height. It is almost inconceivable how one man, with his servant, could perform so difficult a work, though they were 25 years about it.

FRIESENTI, a town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in the Farther Principato, with a bishop's see. It is near the river Tripalto, 20 miles S. E. of Benevento, and 35 N. E. of Salerno. Lon. 32. 48. lat. 40. 59.

* FRIEBERG, a town of Germany, in Wetteravia, much more considerable formerly than it is at present, though it is an imperial town, and governed by its own magistrates. It is seated on a mountain, 10 miles N. E. of Francfort, and 12 S. of Gießen. Lon. 26. 25. lat. 50. 14.

* FRIEBERG, the name of two small towns in Silesia, the one in the dutchy of Javer, and the other in the dutchy of Schweidnitz. This last is remarkable for a battle gained there by the king of Prussia over the Austrians in June 1745.

FRONTIGNAC, or FRONTIGNIAN, a town of France, in Languedoc, remarkable for its excellent Muscadine wines, its jar-raisons, and its handsome town-houfe. This wine is called by the English Frontigniac. It is feated on the lake Maguleone, 15 miles N. E. of Agde, and 17 S. W. of Montpellier. Lon. 21. 24. lat. 43. 48.

FRONTENAC, a lake and fort of N. America. See FORT DE CATAROCOY, and ONTARIO.

FUIDENTALL, a town of Germany, in Silesia, and in the dutchy of Trepaw. It was taken by the king of Prussia in 1741 and 1744, to whom it is now subject.

FUEGO, or FOGO, one of the Cape de Verd islands, in the Atlantick Ocean. It is much higher than any of the rest, and seems to be one single mountain, at sea, though on the sides there are deep valleys. There is a vulcano at the top of it, which burns continually, and may be seen a great way off at sea. It vomits a great deal of fire and smoke, and throws out huge pieces of rock to a vast height; and sometimes there are torrents of brimstone run down the sides. The Portugueze, who first inhabited it, brought negro-slaves with them, and a flock of cows, horses, and hogs; but the chief inhabitants now are blacks, of the Romish religion. It is 30 miles W. of Cape de Verd, and 100 W. of St. Jago. Lon. 353. 12. lat. 15. 20.

FUENTE DUEGNA, a town of Spain, in the province of New Castile, feated on the river Tajo, 35 miles S. E. of Madrid. Lon. 14. 5. lat. 40. 12.

* FUFSEN, a town of Germany, in Suabia, belonging to the bishop of Augsburg, with an ancient castle. It is feated on the river Lech, 40 miles S. E. of Augsburg. Lon. 27. 10. lat. 57. 45.

FULDE, a considerable town of Germany, in the circle of the Upper Rhine, and in the Buchow, with a celebrated abbey, whose abbot is primate of the abbeys of the empire, perpetual chancellor of the Emperor, and sovereign of a small territory lying between Hesse, Franconia, and Thuringia. It is feated on the river Fulde, 55 miles S. of Cassel, 35 N. of Wirtzburg, 37 S. E. of Marpurg, and 58 N. E. of Francfort. Lon. 27. 28. lat. 50. 40.

* FULHAM, a village of Middlesex, 5 miles

F U

W. of London, feated on the river Thames, over which there is a handsome wooden bridge, that leads to Putney, in Surrey. It is a pleasant village, with a great many handsome houfes.

FULIGNO. See FOLIGNI.

FUNCHAL, a town of Madeira, in an island of the Atlantick Ocean, over against the coast of Morocco, with a bishop's see, a dangerous harbour, and several forts. It is large, strong, handsome, and populous, with fine churches. The principal trade consists in sweetmeats and wines. It belongs to the Portugueze, and is feated in a fertile valley, at the foot of a mountain, from whence several streams proceed. Lon. 3. 5. lat. 31. 30.

FUNDY-BAY, feated between New-England and Acadia, or New-Scotland, in which there is an excellent fishery.

FUNEN, or FIONIA, a considerable island in Denmark, feated on the Baltick-Sea, and separated from Jutland by a strait, called the Lesser-Belt, and from the island of Zealand by another, called the Great-Belt. It is fertile in wheat and barley, and abounds in cattle, horses, game of all sorts, and fish. Odensee is the capital town. Lon. from 27. 26. to 28. 40. lat. from 55. 6. to 55. 50.

FURNES, a strong town of the Austrian Netherlands, and in Flanders. The United provinces had a garrison here till 1744, when it was taken by the French; it is feated near the sea, on a canal which runs from Bruges to Dunkirk, 5 miles S. W. of Newport, 8 N. W. of Dixmude, and 12 E. of Dunkirk. Lon. 20. 20. lat. 51. 4.

FURSTENBURG, the county of a sovereign state of Germany, in Suabia, with a castle of the same name, feated on a mountain, near the river Danube. It is bounded by the dutchy of Wirtemberg, the county of Hohenberg, and other territories of the house of Austria, by the Brisgaw, the Black-Forest, the lake, and the bishoprick of Constance. Lon. of the castle, 26. 5. lat. 47. 50.

FURSTENFELD, a town of Germany, in Lower-Stiria, with a castle, on the river Aufnitz, 30 miles N. E. of Gratz, 30 N. W. of Lauiska, and 50 S. of Vienna. Lon. 34. 10. lat. 47. 35.

* FURSTENWALD, a town of Germany, in the middle marche of Brandenburg, feated on the river Spree, 20 miles W. of Francfort on the Oder. It was taken by the Swedes in 1631. Lon. 52. 3. lat. 52. 25.

GABIAN, a village of France, in Languedoc, and in the diocese of Bessiers, famous for its mineral waters. Near it is a rock, out of which proceeds black petroleum, good in several distempers; likewise on a mountain, not far from the spring, there are found small red transparent stones, in the form of a cylinder, and pointed like a diamond.

GABIN, a town of Great Poland, in the palatinate of Rawa, 15 miles S. E. of Plofco, and 40 W. of Warsaw. Lon. 38. 10. lat. 52. 18.

• GAGO, an inland country of Africa, in Negroiland, which carries on a great trade in slaves, for they make no scruple of selling their wives and children. It abounds in corn and flesh, but there is scarce any wine, trees, or fruits. There is a great quantity of European goods brought here by caravans from Barbary, and sold at a prodigious price; but salt is the dearest commodity that is brought. There are nothing but villages throughout the kingdom, whose inhabitants are clothed with skins in the rainy season, but at other times go stark naked. The largest village is called Gago, where the King resides, the houses of which are nothing but poor huts. It is 400 miles S. of Tombuto. Lon. 25. 6. lat. 15. 10.

GAIETA, an ancient, handsome, and strong town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in the Terra di Lavoro, with a fort, a citadel, a harbour, and a bishop's see. It was taken by the Austrians in 1707, by storm, and by the Spaniards in 1734. It is seated at the foot of a mountain, near the sea, 50 miles N. W. of Capua, 37 N. W. of Naples, and 70 S. W. of Rome. Lon. 31. 12. lat. 41. 30.

GAILAC, a town of France, in Upper Languedoc, and in the Albigois, remarkable for its Benedictine abbey, and its trade in wines. It is seated on the river Tarn, 12 miles S. W. of Albi, and 15 N. W. of Lavour. Lon. 19. 30. lat. 43. 50.

* GAILLON, a town of France, in Normandy, and in the diocese of Evreux, remarkable for its magnificent palace, belonging to the archbishop of Rouen, and for its handsome chartreuse, which is about three quarters of a mile from it. It is delightfully seated a mile and a half from the river Seine, 5 from Andilly, and 22 from Rouen.

GAINSBOROUGH, a town of Lincolnshire, with a market on Tuesdays, and 2 fairs, on Easter-Tuesday and October 20, for cattle, sheep, and all sorts of shop-goods. It is seated on the river Trent, near the sea, and is a large well built town, with a pretty good trade. It is 17 miles N. W. of Lincoln, and 137 N. by W. of London. It has the title of an earldom. Lon. 16. 55. lat. 53. 26.

* GALAEZ, a town of Turkey in Europe, and in Bulgaria, seated near the Danube, between the mouths of the rivers Pruth and Seret.

* GALASSO, a small river of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in Otranto; it rises in the opening near Oria, and falls into the gulph of Tarento, near the city of that name.

GALATA, the principal suburb of Constantinople, a city of Turkey in Europe. It is seated opposite to the Seraglio, on the other side of the harbour. It is inhabited by Christians of all sorts, as well as Jews, who exercise their religion publicly, and where wine is sold in taverns, which is not allowed in the city itself. The houses are much better built than those of Constantinople, and there are 5 Roman Catholick convents here.

GALFALLY, a town of Ireland, in the county of Tipperary, and province of Munster, 23 miles S. E. of Limerick. Lon. 9. 15. lat. 52. 15.

GALICIA, a province of Spain, bounded on the N. and W. by the ocean, on the S. by Portugal, and on the E. by Asturias and the kingdom of Leon. The air is temperate along the coast, but, in other places, it is cold and moist. It is but thin of people, and the produce is wine, flax, and citrons; here are also good pastures, copper, and lead; the forests yield wood for building of ships. S. Jago di Compostella is the capital town.

GALICIA, now called also GUADALAJARA, a country of N. America, in New-Spain, bounded on the E. by Old Mexico, on the N. by the New, and on the W. by the S. Sea. The air is temperate, and there is abundance of corn and pulse; here are also mines of silver and copper. The native Americans are fond of dancing to the highest degree, and paint their bodies, adorning themselves with feathers.

GALILEE, anciently a province of Judea, but now of Turkey in Asia. The bounds are not now certainly known, nor yet the places where many of the towns stood.

GALISTIO, a small town of Spain, in Estramadura, near the city of Coria. Here the duke of Berwick opposed the march of the confederate army to Placentia, in April 1706, who shamefully run away at the approach of the latter. It is 17 miles N. W. of Placentia. Lon. 29. 21. lat. 39. 42.

GALL, ST. a considerable town in Switzerland, and in the Upper Thurgow, with a rich and celebrated abbey, whose abbot is a prince of the empire. This place has for some time been a republick, in alliance with the cantons. It is not very large, but is well built, neat, populous, and contains about 10,000 inhabitants, who are chiefly employed in the linen manufacture; inasmuch that it is said that they annually make 40,000 pieces of linen, of 200 ells each, which renders it one of the richest towns in Switzerland. The inhabitants are protestants, for which reason there is often great contests between them and the abbey, about religious affairs. It is seated in a narrow, barren valley, between two mountains, and upon two small streams. 37 miles N. E. of Zurich, 5 W. of the lake Constance, 120 N. E. of Bern, and 62 N. E. of Lucern. Lon. 47. 40. lat. 47. 38.

* GALLA, a considerable fort in the island of Ceylon, belonging to the Dutch, who drove the Portuguese thence in 1640. Some call it Punta-de-Gallo. Lon. 97. 0. lat. 6. 30.

GALLAPAGOS ISLANDS, the name of several islands in the South-Sea, lying on both sides the equator, discovered by the Spaniards, to whom they belong. They are not inhabited; for the Spaniards only call there for fresh water and provisions, when they sail from America to Asia. Here are a great number of birds and excellent tortoises,

* GALLI, a people of Africa, in Abyssinia, great enemies to the Abyssinians, from whom they have taken several provinces. They are a wild cruel people, and live chiefly on the flocks and herds, and by robbing. They are circumcised, have as many wives as they please, and are continually roving from one place to another.

GALLIPOLI, a sea-port town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in the Terra-di-Otranto, with a bishop's see, a fort, and a harbour. It is seated on a rock, surrounded by the sea, and which is joined to the firm land by a bridge. It is 27 miles W. of Otranto, and 45 S. E. of Taranto. Lon. 35. 45. lat. 40. 20.

GALLIPOLI, a sea-port town of Turkey in Europe, in the province of Romania, seated at the mouth of the sea of Marmora, with a good harbour, and a bishop's see. It contains about 10,000 Turks, 3500 Greeks, besides a great number of Jews. The Bazar, or Bezestein, the place where merchandizes are sold, is a handsome structure, with domes covered with lead. It is an open place, and has no other defence than a forry square castle. The houses of the Greeks and Jews have doors, not above two feet and a half high, to prevent the Turks riding into their houses. It is 40 miles S. W. of Rodiste, and 100 S. W. of Constantinople. Lon. 44. 34. lat. 40. 30.

GALLO, an island of the S. Sea, near the sea-coast of Peru, in S. America, which was the first place possessed by the Spaniards, when they attempted the conquest of Peru; it is also the place where the Buccaneers used to come for wood and water, and to refit their vessels, when they were in these parts. Lon. 227. 35. lat. 2. 30.

GALLOWAY, or GALLOWAY, is a county of Scotland, about 170 miles in length, from E. to W. and 100 in breadth, from N. to S. It is bounded on the S. and W. by the sea; on the N. by Carrick and Kyle; and on the S. by Nithsdale. It contains several rivers, and a great number of lakes from half a mile to two miles in length.

* GALWAY, or GALLOWAY, a county of Ireland, which is 82 miles in length, and 42 in breadth; bounded by the counties of Clare, Tipperary, King's-County, Roscommon, and the sea. The river Shannon washes the frontiers of the E. and and S. E. and forms a lake several miles in length. There is another great lake, called Corbes, or Carrib, which is near 20 miles long, and 5 broad. It contains 15,420 houses, and 136 parishes, 17 baronies, 13 boroughs, and sends 8 members to parliament, viz. 2 for the county, 2 for Galway, 2 for Athunry, and 2 for Tuani. The capital town is of the same name.

GALWAY, a town of Ireland, in the county of the same name, and province of Connaught, of which it is the capital. It is surrounded with strong walls, with large strait streets, and the houses are generally well built with stone. It has a good trade into foreign parts, on account of its harbour, which is defended by a fort. It is seated on the bay of Galway on the Western Ocean, 30 miles W. of Athlone, 37 N. of Limerick, and 100 W. of Dublin. Lon. S. 23. lat. 53. 12.

* GAMACHES, a town of France, on the confines of Normandy and Picardy, with the title of a marquissate, and it has a handsome castle, and a collegiate church. It is seated on the river Bresle, and is partly in the diocese of Rouen, and partly in that of Amiens.

GAMBIA, a great river of Africa, in Negroland, which running from E. to W. falls into the Atlantic Ocean. Some of the English factors affirm, that it is navigable for sloops above 600 miles. However, it is certain, that if vessels were sent up it soon after the rainy season, when the channel is full of water, they might go a great deal farther, and make new discoveries. The English have a large factory on James-Island, which lies 20 miles up the river, and almost in the middle of it, three miles from the nearest shore. This island is about a mile in circumference, and there is a fort built, mounted with cannon, with a small garrison to defend it. Besides this, there are small factories at several places, a great way up the river; and they trade with the natives for gold, elephants-teeth, bees-wax, and slaves. They had found out a way to purchase gum-senega; but since the taking of Senegal, the gum-trade is entirely in possession of the English, and it is greatly hoped care will be taken to preserve it. There are several countries and people about this river, which will be mentioned in their proper places. It overflows annually like the Nile, at the same time, and for the same reasons, namely, the heavy and constant rains that fall at the same time of the year up the country.

* GANARA, a kingdom of Africa, in Negroland, lying on the river Niger, and capital of a kingdom of the same name, though some call it Guangara. Besides this, there are nothing but small villages, tho' the country is very populous. It lies very far to the E. and almost borders upon Abyssinia; and travellers affirm, that there is a good deal of gold in the South parts. The roads are unpassable for camels; and therefore their commodities are carried on men's shoulders.

* GANDERSHEIM, a town of Germany, in the circle of Lower Saxony, and in the dutchy of Brunfwick-Wolfembutte, with a celebrated nunnery. It is 17 miles S. W. of Goslar. Lon. 27. 46. lat. 51. 48.

GANDIA, a sea-port town of Spain, in the kingdom of Valencia, with the title of a dutchy, and a small university. It is seated near the sea, 55 miles N. of Alicante, and 32 S. E. of Valencia. Lon. 17. 55. lat. 39. 6.

* GANDICOT, a strong town of Asia, in the peninsula on this side the Ganges, and in the kingdom of Carnate, with a famous pagod, or heathen temple, where in there are several idols of gold and silver.

GANGEA, or GANDJA, a town of Asia, in Persia, and in Georgia, capital of a province of the same name. It is one of the best towns of Persia, and is seated on a pleasant plain, about 80 miles in length. The great number of rivers that meet there, and which the inhabitants make use of to water their gardens, take up a good part of the town, and render the soil about it exceeding fertile. The houses are built among a great number of groves and thickets of lovely trees, and the Bazars, or market-places, are as magnificent as any in the East. There is a particular quarter assigned for every sort of commodity. It is always crowded by a great number of foreigners, who come there to trade. It is 115 miles N. E. of Erivan, and 105 S. by E. of Teflis. Lon. 65. 10. Lon. 41. 32.

GANGES, a large and celebrated river of Asia, in India. It has its source in the mountains, which border on little Tibet, in 96 degrees of longitude, and 35 45 of latitude. It crosses several kingdoms, running from N. to S. and falls into the bay of Bengal, by several mouths.

The waters are lowest in April and May, and highest before the end of September. It overflows yearly like the Nile; and renders the kingdom of Bengal as fruitful as that of the Delta in Egypt. The people in these parts have the water of this river in high veneration; and it is visited annually by a prodigious number of pilgrims from all parts of India. The English have several settlements on this river, which will be taken notice of in their proper places. The greatest happiness that many of the Indians wish for is to dye in this river.

GANI, or COOLUR, a town of Asia, in the kingdom of Gokonda, in which is a rich diamond mine. It is 100 miles E. of Bagnagar, and is subject to the Great Mogul. Lon. 69. 35. lat. 36. 0.

GADGA, a kingdom of Africa, lying on the eastern extremity of Negroland. It is bounded on the E. by Nubia; on the N. by Tagua; on the W. by Gagara; and on the S. by Bourmo. It is about 500 miles in length, and as many in breadth. The inhabitants are little better than brutes, especially those that dwell in the mountains; and they always go naked. The houses are nothing but pitiful huts; but they have plenty of cattle. Between this kingdom and the river Nile there is a desert, which reaches as far N. as the frontiers of Egypt. Religion they have little or none, nor yet any towns.

GAP, an ancient town of France, in Dauphiny, and capital of the Gapennois, with a bishop's see. It was taken by the duke of Savoy in 1692, who burnt a great part of it, and rendered it less considerable than it was before. It is seated at the foot of a mountain, 27 miles N. of Sisteron, 20 W. of Embrun, and 50 S. by E. of Grenoble. Lon. 23. 44. lat. 44. 35.

GARACK, a considerable isle of Asia, in the gulph of Persia, remarkable for the fine pearls which have been fished up on its coasts. Lon. 67. 15. lat. 28. 45.

GARAUF, a promontory of France, in Provence, not far from Antibes, which runs pretty far into the sea, and forms the bay of Cannes.

GARDA, a town of Italy, in the territory of Venice, and in the Venetie. It is seated at the end of a great lake of the same name, which is 30 miles in length, and 10 in breadth. It is 17 miles N. W. of Verona. Lon. 28. 16. lat. 45. 35.

GARDE, an ancient bridge of France, in Lower Languedoc, built by the Romans. It is over the river Gardon; 12 miles from Nismes, and 5 from Uzès. It is built with free-stone, of a surprizing magnitude, and has three rows of arches one above another. The lower row has 35 arches, and is 500 paces in length.

GARDELEHEN, a town of Germany, in the Old Marche of Brandenburg, subject to the king of Prussia. It has a trade in hops and excellent beer. It is seated on the river Belse, 22 miles N. by W. of Magdeburg, and 55 N. E. of Brunsvick. Lon. 29. 30. lat. 52. 42.

GAREB, a town of Africa, in Barbary, in the kingdom of Morocco, and province of Suz, remarkable for its sugar mills.

GARET, a province of the kingdom of Fez, in Barbary. It is a mountainous country, but has good iron mines, and is well peopled, except towards the S. which is desert, and without water. The principal town is Mellila.

GARGANO, or ST. ANGELO, a promontory of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, in the Capitanata. There is one of the eldest and most celebrated convents built thereon in this kingdom, except that on Mount Cassino.

GAPGRAVE, a village in the W. riding of Yorkshire, not far from Ripley, with one fair in December 11, for horned cattle and toys.

GARNERS-STREET, a village in Suffex, with one fair on August 5, for pedlars ware.

GARONNE, a large river of France, which has its source in Catalonia, and in the Pyrenean mountains. It washes part of Gascony, Upper Languedoc, and all Guienne; but having received the Dordogne, it assumes the name of Gironde, under which it falls into the sea of Gascony. It passes by St. Bertrand, Rieux, Toulouse, Verdun, Agen, Bourdeaux, and several less considerable places.

GARRISON, a town of Ireland, in the county of Fermanagh, and in the province of Ulster, 10 miles S. of Bally Shannon. Lon. 9. 15. lat. 54. 16.

GARSTRANG, a town of Lancashire, with a market on Thursdays; and three fairs, on Holy Thursday, for horned cattle; on July 21, and December 3, for horned cattle, wool, and cloth. It is seated on the river Wyre, and is a good thoroughfare to Lancaster, from which it is 10 miles N. and 22 N. W. of London. Lon. 14. 27. lat. 53. 30.

* GARTZ,

- * GARTH, a town of Germany, in Pomerania, on the confines of the Marche of Brandenburg, and subject to the king of Prussia. Lon. 34. 45. lat. 53. 13.
- GASCONY, a large province of France, and part of the general government of Guienne. It is bounded on the N. by Guienne; on the W. by Languedoc and the county of Foix; on the S. by the Pyrenees, which separate it from Spain; and on the W. by the sea of Gascony. It comprehends Landes, Chalosse, Turfan, Marfan, the territory of Albret, the Basques, Bearn, Bigorre, Comminges, Armagnac, Conserans, Condomois, and part of Bazadois, and of Bourdalois. The Gascons are said to have quick parts; but they are given to boast of their valour, which has occasioned the name of Gasconade to be given to all bragging stories. The Gascons, who inhabit the districts near the Pyrenees, are originally of Spain.
- * GASPESIA, a province of N. America; bounded on the N. by the mountains of Notre Dame; on the N. and E. by the gulph of St. Lawrence; on the S. by Nova Scotia; and on the W. by Canada. It is inhabited by savages, who are well-made, robust, active, and nimble. They live constantly in the fields, and rove from one place to another in search of game, for they live by hunting and fishing. They daub their faces with black and red, and some of them pierce the gristle between their nostrils, and hang beads therein. They worship the sun, and are much addicted to drunkenness; but they are not so covetous as the rest of the native Americans.
- GASSENHOVEN, a town of the Austrian Netherlands, 4 miles E. of Tirlemont, and 15 E. of Louvaine. Lon. 22. 25. lat. 50. 55.
- * GASTINOIS, a province of France, about 45 miles in length, and 30 in breadth. It abounds in pastures, forests, and excellent fasson.
- GATY, a long chain of mountains in Asia, in the peninsula, on this side the Ganges, which it divides throughout its length into two unequal parts. But the most remarkable thing is, that on the side of the coast of Malabar the winter begins about the end of June, with a S. W. wind; and at the same time on the other side upon Coromandel coast, they enjoy a pleasant spring, and the finest season in the year.
- * GAYTOR, a town of Surrey, which was

- formerly very large, but is now reduced to a village, and has neither market nor fair. However, it sends two members to parliament. It is 19 miles S. of London. Lon. 17. 25. lat. 51. 18.
- GAVARDO, a town of Italy, in Bresciano, seated on the river Weife, about 7 miles W. of the lake Di Garda, and subject to Venice. The Imperialists retired to this place after their defeat at Garfinado, in April 1705. Lon. 29. 20. lat. 45. 28.
- * GAUDENS, a very populous town of France, and capital of the Neboufan. It is seated on the river Garonne, 5 miles N. E. of St. Bertrand. Lon. 18. 36. lat. 43. 8.
- GAVEREN, or WAVFREN, a town of the Austrian Netherlands, in Flanders. It is seated on the eastern bank of the river Scheld, 8 miles S. E. of Ghent, and 5 N. E. of Oudenard. Lon. 21. 10. lat. 51. 0.
- * GAVI, a town of Italy, in the territory of Genoa, standing on the river Lemo, towards the confines of Monterrat. It is very strongly seated; but the fortifications are not kept in repair. It is 15 miles N. of Genoa, and 12 E. S. E. of Alesandrino. Lon. 26. 32. lat. 44. 37.
- GAUL, a country of Europe, which was formerly very famous. It is bounded by Germany and Italy on the E. the German Ocean and the British Channel on the N. the Western Ocean on the W. and the Mediterranean on the S. It was separated from Italy by the Alps, and from Spain by the Pyrenees. It was not a particular monarchy, but was possessed by a great number of people, independent of each other.
- GAUR, a territory in the province of Chorassan, in Persia, and on the confines of India.
- GAURES, or GUEBRES, a people of Asia, in Persia, and in the E. Indies, who are the remains of the ancient Perses, or Persians, who are noted for their worshipping of fire and the sun; for they say God is light. They pretend to have a fire which has never been extinguished for 4000 years. They make tilling the land an act of religion, and look upon it as the most agreeable to God. They affirm Zoroaster to be the founder of their worship; and they believe two principles, the one good and the other bad. They are a mild innocent sort of people; and have been very patient under persecutions. They live under the conduct and direction of their elders and priests; and look upon Alexander the Great and Mahomet as two wicked men. They marry none but of their own religion; and are allowed but one wife, unless the first proves barren: however, they don't trouble their heads how near a-kin their wives are. The employment of their priests is to take care of the sacred fire, which they say was first lighted by their great prophet Zoroaster, whose return they daily expect. They never bury their dead, but expose them in the open air, in places surrounded with high walls, to be devoured by birds of prey.

* GAYWOOD, a village in Norfolk, a mile E. of King's Lynn, with one fair, kept in the village itself, on June 11, for horses; and another, held at the custom-house quay of Lynn, on October 6, for cheese.

* GAZA, an ancient and celebrated town of Palestine, about 3 miles from the sea, with a harbour called New Gaza. It is at present very small; but we may judge by the ruins that it was formerly a considerable place. There is a castle near it, where a bashaw resides. It is 50 miles S. W. of Jerusalem. Lon. 52. 50. lat. 31. 28.

* GEARON, or JARON, a small town of Asia, in Persia, and in Paristan, between Shiras and Bandar-Congo; in whose territory the best dates of Persia are produced. Lon. 72. 32. lat. 28. 25.

GEET, a river of the Austrian Netherlands, which rising in the S. E. part of Brabant, runs N. near the confines of Liege, and passes by Lande and Leaw, falls into the Demer a little below Halen.

* GEKENRACH, a small, free, and imperial city of Germany, in the circle of Suabia, and in Mordensaw, under the protection of the house of Austria. It is seated on the river Kinzia, 15 miles S. E. of Straßburg, and 25 N. of Eriburg. Lon. 25. 41. lat. 41. 25.

* GRILLDORFF, a town of Germany, in Suabia, seated near the river Kocher, with a castle that belongs to the Lords of Limpurg.

* GEISENGEN, a handsome imperial town of Germany, in Suabia, 17 miles N. W. of Ulm. Lon. 27. 37. lat. 48. 58.

and the river Senegal, on the side of which it lies, was by ancient authors called the Niger. It is about 500 miles in length, and extends to above 150 miles on the above river. It is very fruitful in rice, fish, and cattle; and they drive a trade with the Barbary merchants, who come in large caravans from that country. There is neither town nor castle; but has one large village, inhabited by their principal people. Their houses are built like bells, pointed at the top with walls of clay, and roofs of reeds. When the river overflows in July, August, and September, the merchants of Tombou bring their wares hither in canoes. This is thought to be the country from whence the coast of Guinea derives its name; and of late it has undergone several revolutions. The principal village is said to be 120 miles below Tombou.

GENÈE, or GENÈRE, a strong town of Germany, in the circle of Westphalia, with a castle. It was taken by the Dutch in 1631, and by the French in 1672. It is now subject to the king of Prussia, and is seated on the river Neers, near the Maese, 2 miles S. W. of Cleves, 12 S. E. of Nimwegen, and 25 N. of Venlow. Lon. 23. 25. Lat. 51. 41.

GENÈVA, an ancient, large, and populous town, capital of a republick of the same name, near the confines of France and Switzerland. It is a very ancient, and was well known in the time of the Romans. Julius Cæsar made use of it as a bulwark against the Helvetians. It is well built, rich, and strongly fortified. Here are always a great number of Ambassadors, who are travelling from France to Italy, or from Italy to France. It is divided by the river Rhone into two unequal parts, and which also forms an isle, full of fine houses, and here is an ancient structure, called the tower of Cæsar. The largest part is built on a hill, which descends by a gentle declivity, and lies to the S. of the river; the other part communicates with the island by two large wooden bridges. St. Peter's church is a new structure, built in the Gothic taste, and has three towers, the least of which is covered with tin plates. The arsenal is well furnished, and there is a strong garrison. The college, where there is a magnificent library, is well worth observation. In general it is a very agreeable place, and there is nothing omitted so render it delightful. The principal riches of the inhabitants proceed from their manufactures, of which they have a great number; but the most considerable are, watches, cloths, and gold and silver lace. The revenues of the republick arise from the duty on merchandizes which are carried out of the city, and from a prodigious quantity of corn which the magistrats buy, and sell to the inhabitants. The sovereignty of this republick is lodged in the assembly of the citizens and burgher, but there are several bodies of the magistracy, who have each their proper province, and whose heads are chosen by the people. The great council consists of 200 persons, from among whom there are 25 counsellors chosen, of which 4 are Souders, who are heads of the republick, and chosen every year. They are jealous of their liberties, and are in alliance with the cantons of Bern, Zurich, and Soleure. It was formerly a free imperial city, and a bishop's see, but the bishop was expelled when they embraced Calvinism, in 1535. They will not allow playing at cards, or drinking at publick houses; but they allow their militia, play at bowls, and use other exercises on a Sunday. It is 70 miles N. E. of Lyons, 65 S. of Befanzon, 40 N. E. of Chambery, and 135 N. by W. of Turin. Lon. 23. 50. Lat. 46. 13.

ria, whence it has the name of Genoa the proud. It is very populous, and one of the most trading places in Italy. They reckon there is 70,000 inhabitants, of which 25,000 families are employ'd in making velvets, silks, and the like. It is an archbishop's see, has an academy, a great harbour, and lofty walls, fortified in such places where they are most likely to be attacked. There is a large aqueduct, which supplies a great number of fountains with water, in all parts of the city. The houses are well built, and are 5 or 6 stories high; and here are 17 churches, 17 convents, and 2 large hospitals. The government is aristocratic, because none but the nobility can have any share in it; these are of two sorts, the old and the new, from whence there are 80 persons chosen, who make the great council, in which their sovereignty resides. Besides these, there is a senate, composed of the Doge and 12 senators, who have the common administration of affairs. The Doge continues in his office but two years. The harbour is very considerable, and to preserve it they have built a mole of 260 paces in length, and 15 in breadth; they have raised it 15 feet above the level of the water, that it may the better shelter the ships, and break the force of the waves. Upon this mole there is a tower, with 260 steps to go up to the top, where in the night-time they place a great number of lanterns. The harbour may be shut up with a chain, which will hinder the going out or coming in of the vessels. It was bombard'd by the French in 1684, and submitted to the Hungarians in 1716, but a citizen being abused by an Austrian officer, the inhabitants rose and massacred part of the soldiers, and drove away the rest. It was besieged afterwards by the Austrians; but the French coming to the assistance of the town, they were obliged to raise the siege, in July 1747. The ordinary revenue of this republick is 200,000 L. a year, and there is a bank, which is partly supported by publick duties. They generally keep two or three years provision of corn, wine, and oil, in their magazines, which they sell to the people in scarce times. It is 70 miles S. of Milan, 62 S. E. of Turin, 65 S. W. of Paris, 112 N. W. of Florence, and 225 N. W. of Rome. Lon. 26. 32. lat. 44. 25.

GENOA, the territory of the republick of comprehends the coast of Genoa, the island of Corsica, and the island of Capriva, on the coast of Tuscany; but it was formerly more considerable than it is at present. The coast of Genoa extends along the Mediterranean Sea, which is to the S. between Tuscany and the duchy of Massa; to the E. the county of Nice, the principality of Monaco, and the Appennine mountains to the W. and the duchies of Milan, Parma, and Monterrat to the N. It is about 130 miles in length, but not much above 20 miles in breadth. It is populous, well cultivated, and fertile near the sea; but the inner parts are very mountainous, and barren in several places, having neither trees nor grats upon them.

GEORGE, ST. DEL MINA, a fort of Africa, on the gold-coast of Guinea, and the principal settlement the Dutch have in those parts. It was taken from the Portuguese in 1630, by the Dutch, who have kept it ever since. The fort or castle is the best upon the coast of Guinea, and is built square, with very high walls, having four good batteries. Here is room for a garrison of above 400 men, with convenient lodgings for officers. Under the castle is the town, called by the natives Oddena, which is very long, and pretty broad. The houses are built with stone, which is very extraordinary, for in all other places they are composed only of clay and wood. It was once very populous, but the inhabitants were destroyed by the small pox, so that it is greatly reduced, and they are become very poor. It is about 10 miles W. of Cape-coast-castle. Lon. 17. 20. lat. 5. 20.

GEORGE, ST. a fort and town of Asia, in the peninsula on this side the Ganges, and on the coast of Cormandel, belonging to the English; it is otherwise called Madras, and by the natives Chulipattam. It fronts the sea, and has a salt-water river on its backside, which hinders the fresh water springs from coming near the town, so that they have no good water within a mile of them. In the rainy season it is incommoded by inundations, and from April to September it is so scorching hot, that if the sea-breezes did not cool the air, there would be no living there. There are two towns, one of which is called the white town, which is walled round, and has several bastions and batteries to defend it: it is 400 paces long, and 150 broad, and is divided into regular streets. Here are two churches, one for the Protestants, and the other for the Papists; as also a good hospital, a town-hall, and a prison for debtors. They are a corporation, and have a mayor and aldermen, with other proper officers. The black town is inhabited by Gentows, Mahometans, and Portuguese and Armenian Christians, and each religion have their temples and churches. This, as well as the white town, is ruled by the English governor, and his council. The diamond mines are but a week's journey from this place, which renders them pretty plentiful, but there are no large ones since that great diamond was procured by governor Pitt. This colony produces very little of its own growth or manufacture for foreign markets, and the trade is in the hands of the Armenians and Gentows. The chief things the English deal in, besides diamonds, are, calicoes, chintz, muslins, and the like. This colony may consist of 80,000 inhabitants, in the towns and villages, and there are generally 4 or 500 Europeans: their rice is brought by sea from Gangam and Oriza, their wheat from Surat and Bengal, and their fire-wood from the islands of Diu, insomuch that an enemy, with a superior force at sea, may easily distress them. The houses of the white town are built with brick, and have lofty rooms, and flat roofs; but the black town consists chiefly of thatched cottages. The military power is lodged in the governor and council, who are also the last resort in civil causes. The company have two chaplains, who officiate by turns, and have each 100 l. a-year, besides the advantages of trade. They never attempt to make proselytes, but leave that to the popish missionaries. The salaries of the company's writers are very small, but, if they have any fortune of their own, they make it up by trade, which must generally be the case, for they commonly grow rich. It was taken by the French in 1746, who rendered it back after the peace. It is 63 miles N. of Pondicherry. Lon. 98. S. lat. 13. 13.

- GEORGE'S, ST. a small island in the territory of Venice, lying to the S. of that capital. In it there is a Benedictine monastery, whose church is one of the finest in Italy, and is embellished with a great number of fine pictures.

GEORGE'S, ST. the largest of the Bermuda or Summer-Islands, lying 500 miles E. of the continent of N. America. Lon. 312. 35. lat. 32. 30.

GEORGIA, or GURGISTAN, a province of Asia, partly belonging to Persia, and partly to the Turks. It is bounded on the N. by Circassia, on the S. by Turkomania and Erivan, on the E. by Shirvan and the Tartars of Dagestan, and by the Black Sea on the W. There are but few towns, but the bread, wine, pomegranates, cattle, and all the necessaries of life are cheap and excellent. The inhabitants are very fair, and the women are accounted the most beautiful in the world, and yet they cannot help painting. In general it is a mountainous country, for which reason some parts of it were never conquered, and yet the soil is very fruitful. The inhabitants are a sort of Christians, but their doctrines greatly differ from those which are taught by other sects. Their disposition is pretty mild, but they are extremely ignorant and addicted to sensual pleasures. But they have one barbarous custom, which is that of selling their female children to the Turks and Persians, to fill their seraglios, nor do the boys escape being sold for other purposes. They have a patriarch and several bishops, but the Persian viceroy is a Mahometan. The river Kur crosses the whole country, and is navigable for boats, which is not very common in the rivers of Persia. Tefis is the capital town.

GEORGIA, an English plantation in N. America, bounded on the N. by Carolina, from which it is separated by the river Savannah; on the E. by the ocean, on the S. by St. John's river, which divides it from Spanish Florida on the S. and W. on the E. is Louisiana, which is claimed by the French, but the title to it is now in dispute. There is a range of islands along the coast, which defend it from the fury of the ocean, and these, as well as the continent, being well wooded, the channel between them is extremely pleasant. There are sand-banks upwards of 70 miles from the coast, whereon the water shoals gradually till within 6 miles of the land, and then the banks are so shallow, that there is no passage except in the channels which lie between the bars. However, the Spaniards found a way through them, and would have taken St. Simon's island

- in 1742, if they had not been prevented by general Oglethorpe. The river Savannah is navigable for 600 miles with canoes, and 300 with boats, and in the mouth of it there is a commodious and secure harbour, and to the S. there is another, called Tcky-Sound, where a large fleet may lie at anchor in 14 fathom water, secure from the winds. The tides on this coast generally flow 7 feet. There are several towns already built, of which Savannah, Ebenezer, and Frederica are the chief. There are also several forts, one of which was taken by the Spaniards in 1642, but they fled at the approach of general Oglethorpe. It is a good barrier against the French and Spaniards; but it would have been better fortified if there had not been a misunderstanding between the above general and the government of Carolina.
- GEPPING, an imperial town of Germany, in the circle of Suabia, and dutchy of Wirtemberg, seated on the river Wills, 25 miles E. of Strugard, 12 S. W. of Germund, and 25 N. W. of Ulm. Lon. 27. 10. lat. 48. 24.
 - GERA, a town of Germany, in the circle of Upper Saxony, and in Misnia, with a handsome college. It is seated on the river Elster. Lon. 31. 10. lat. 51. 10.

- church of the Carmelites is very handsome, and it is seated on the river Agne.
- GERGENTI, a town of Italy, in Sicily, with a castle, and a bishop's see. It is seated in the valley of Mazara, near the river St. Blaise, 60 miles E. by S. of Mazara, and 50 S. of Palermo. Lon. 31. 21. lat. 47. 23.
- * GERMAIN DE BOURGEUIL, a town of France, in Anjou, with a rich Benedictine abbey, and a castle. It is seated on a small river, near a fore of the same name. Lon. 17. 52. lat. 47. 20.
 - GERMAIN EN LAYE, ST. a handsome town in the isle of France, with a magnificent palace, embellished by several kings, and especially Lewis XIV. It is one of the most beautiful seats in France, as well on account of the apartments and gardens, as of the fine forest that is near it. Here James II. usually resided after he fled to France. It is seated on the river Seine, 10 miles N. W. of Paris. Lon. 19. 40. lat. 48. 52.
 - GERMAIN, ST. a town of Cornwall, with a small market on Fridays, and 2 fairs, on May 28, and August 1, for horses, oxen, sheep, and a few hops. It was once the largest town in the county, but is at present a small place, though it sends 2 members to parliament. It was formerly a bishop's see, and had a cathedral, and what is left of it is used as the parish-church, and near it is the priory, yet standing. It is 10 miles W. of Plymouth, 24 S. of Lancelston, and 231 W. by S. of London. It stands near the sea, and formerly had a good fishery.
 - * GERMAIN [LAVAL, ST. a town of France, in Forez, seated in a territory fertile in excellent wines. It is 225 miles S. E. of Paris. Lon. 21. 32. lat. 45. 50.
 - * GERMANO, ST. a town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in the Terra di Lavoro. It is seated at the foot of mount Cassano, and belongs to an abbey, seated at the top of that mount. Lon. 31. 28. lat. 41. 33.
 - GERMANY, a large country, lying in the middle of Europe, bounded on the E. by Hungary and Poland, on the N. by the Baltick Sea and Denmark, on the W. by the Netherlands France and Swisserland, and on the S. by the Alps, Italy, and Swisserland; being about 640 miles in length, and 550 in breadth. The air is temperate and wholesome, but more inclinable to cold than heat, especially ially by the sea-side. The soil is very proper for corn and pastures, and, in some places, especially along the Rhine, it produces large quantities of wine, known by the name of Rhenish, but as to the particular productions, they will be taken notice of where the circles are described. As to the disposition of the people in general, they are robust, brave, good soldiers, true, laborious, inured to labour, dextrous in manufactures, and fruitful in inventions. The nobility in Germany is the purest in Europe, and they will sooner choose the daughter of a nobleman, without a fortune, than that of the richest citizen. One reason of this is, that there is no obtaining rich benefices, such as canonicates, abbeyes, bishopricks, and archbishopricks, without a full proof of their nobility, as these are almost to many independant sovereignties. Germany is the most singular country in the world, for it contains a great many princes, as well secular as ecclesiastick, who are absolute in their own dominions, and independant of each other. Here are a great number of free towns, or cities, which are for many little republicks, governed by their own laws, and only united by a head, who is elective, and has the title of emperor, who, properly speaking, has but little authority, except in the dominions belonging to him before he was chosen. Upon this account they generally choose one who has territories of his own, and who is able to keep up his dignity. For this reason the emperors have been so often chosen out of the house of Austria. The election of the emperor formerly was made by the German princes, as well ecclesiastick as secular, but, by the famous constitution of the golden bull, the electors were restrained to seven; that is, three ecclesiasticks, which are, the archbishops of Treves, Cologne, and Mentz, and four seculars, namely, the king of Bohemia, the count palatine of the Rhine, the duke of Saxony, and the marguis of Brandenburg. But in 1623 they were obliged, by the treaty of Munster, to constitute an eighth elector, in favour of the son of Frederick V. count palatine of the Rhine, who had been deprived of his dominions and titles in 1622, and put to the ban of the empire because he had been proclaimed king of Bohemia, and his title conferred on the duke of Bavaria. Lastly, in 1690, the emperor Leopold created another elector in favour of Ernest of Brunswick, duke of Hanover, whose son George became king of England in 1714. Each elector bears the title of one of the principal offices of the empire; the elector of Mentz is high chancellor of Germany, and director of the archives of the empire; that of Treves, or Triers, has the title of chanceller of the Gauls, and that of Cologne, that of Italy; the duke of Bavaria is grand master of Bavaria, and carries the golden apple; the elector of Saxony is grand squire, and bears the sword; that of Brandenburg is grand chamberlain, and carries the sceptre; the Palatine is grand treasurer, &c. When the empire is vacant, or the emperor absent, and there is no king of the Romans, the electors Palatine and of Saxony are viceroys, or regents of the empire, though the duke of Bavaria disputes the right of the former. When the emperor would be certain of a successor, he endeavours to prevail with the electors to choose a king of the Romans, and then he will become emperor after the other's death. The emperor assumes the title of always august, of Caesar, and of sacred majesty. Although he is chief of the empire, he does not govern alone, but the supreme authority resides in the general assemblies, called Diets, which he only has a right of appointing, and to which he sends commissioners to preside in his room. These assemblies are composed of three bodies, or colleges; the first of which is that of the electors, the second that of the imperial towns, and the third that of the imperial towns. The electors and princes send their deputies, as well as the imperial towns. When that of the Electors and that of the princes disagree, that of the towns cannot decide the difference; but they are obliged to give their consent when they are of the same opinion. These assemblies have the power of making peace or war, of settling general impositions, and of regulating all the important affairs of the empire. But their deliberations have not the force of a law till the Emperor gives his consent; who also gives the investiture of fiefs, and disposes of these which have devolved to the empire for want of successions, or confiscations. The electors and other sovereigns of Germany have an absolute authority in their own dominions, and they can levy taxes, raise troops, make and dissolve alliances, provided they do not prejudice the empire. They have power over life and death, and determine all civil causes definitively, unless in some particular cases, in which they may make an appeal. These appeals are to two courts, called the Imperial chamber, and the Aulic Council. The three principal religions are, the Roman Catholic, the Lutherans, and the Calvinists; the first prevails in the dominions of the Emperor, in the ecclesiastical electorates, and in that of Bavaria; the second chiefly obtains in the circles of Upper and Lower Saxony, and in a great part of Westphalia, Franconia, Suabia, the Upper Rhine, and in most of the imperial towns; the third is profest in the dominions of the landgrave of Hesse-Cassel, and of some other princes. Vienna is looked upon as the capital city, and the emperors since Charles V. have resided there, till the death of Charles VI. in 1740, and now the present emperor resides there again. The principal rivers of Germany are, the Danube, Rhine, Elbe, Weser, and the Oder. Germany is divided into nine circles, which are as so many large provinces, each of which comprehends several other states, of which the princes, the prelates, and the counts, with the deputies of the imperial towns, meet together about their common affairs. Every circle has one or two directors, and a colonel; the directors have a power of convocating the assembly of the states of their circle, and the colonel commands the army. Each circle is obliged to furnish a certain number of horse and foot, or a certain sum of money, call Roman Months, when the necessity of publick affairs requires it, according to a tax imposed by the register of the states of the empire. The nine circles are, these of Austria, Bavaria, Suabia, Franconia, the Upper and Lower Rhine, Westphalia, and the Upper and Lower Saxony. The imperial towns are now only 52, but were formerly 84. There are also Hanſiatick towns, which have some allowance on account of trade; and there was formerly some in France, Spain, and Italy, but now they are confined to Germany, and are but 5 or 6 in number; but we must except Dantzick, which is in Poland. Besides the religions above mentioned, there are some Independants, Anabaptists, Quakers, and Christians of every other denomination, besides a multitude of Jews in all their great towns. The language of Germany is a dialect of the Teutonic, which succeeded that called the Celtick.

GERMERSHEIM, a town of Germany, in the palatinate of the Rhine, and subject to the Elector-palatine. It is seated near the Rhine, 5 miles W. of Philippsburg, and 3 S. E. of Landau. Lon. 26. 2. lat. 49. 10.

GERTRUDENBERG, an ancient, handsome, and very strong town of the Netherlands, in Dutch Brabant, and one of the principal bulwarks of the Dutch. It was taken from the Spaniards in 1573, and re-taken in 1589, but prince Maurice became master of it again in 1593, after a siege of three months. It is seated on the river Dungen, which falls into a lake called Bies-bos, 10 miles N. of Breda, 12 S. E. of Dordrecht, and 9 S. W. of Gorcum. Lon. 22. 24. lat. 52. 44.

GERUMENHA, an ancient and fortified town of Portugal, in Alentejo, seated on a hill near the western bank of the river Guadiana. It has a strong castle, with 17 towers, and in 1662 maintained a siege for a month, before it was taken by the Spaniards. It is 18 miles below Badajox. Lon. 9. 57. lat. 38. 39.

* GESEKE, a town of Germany, in the circle of Westphalia; it is seated on the river Weyck, 8 miles from Lippe, and 10 from Paderborn.

GESTRICIA, a province of Sweden, bounded on the N. by Helſingia, on the E. by the gulph of Bothnia, on the S. by Upland, and on the W. by Dalcarlia. It produces just as much corn as will maintain the inhabitants. Gevali is the capital town.

* GESULA, a province of Africa, on the coast of Barbary, and in the kingdom of Morocco. It abounds in barley and sheep, and there are several mines of iron and copper; most part of the inhabitants are brasiers and smiths, and there is a fair kept every year, which lasts for two months, when a vast number of foreign merchants come to buy their wares, and, as they say, are maintained at the expence of the province.

GEVALI, OF GAFLI, a town of Sweden, and capital of Gestricia. It is near the gulph of Bothnia, 45 miles N. W. of Upsal, 35 E. of Copperberg, and 65 N. by W. of Stockholm. Lon. 34. 50. lat. 60. 32.

GEVAUDAN, a territory of France, in Languedoc, bounded on the N. by Auvergne, on the W. by Rouergue, on the S. by the Cevennes, and on the E. by Vivarais and Velay. It is a mountainous, barren country, and Mende is the capital town.

GEVER, or GOAR, ST. a town of Germany, in the circle of the Upper Rhine, and territory of Rhinefelden, subject to the prince of Hesse-Rhinefeld. It is seated on the Rhine, 15 miles S. of Coblenz. Lon. 24. 51. lat. 50. 15.

GEX, a town of France, and capital of a Seignory of the same name. It is seated at the foot of mount St. Claude, between mount Jura, the river Rhone, the lake of Geneva, and Swisserland; 10 miles N. W. of Geneva. Lon. 23. 44. lat. 46. 20.

* GEZIRA, a town of Asia, in Diarbeck, and seated on an island formed by the river Tigris, 70 miles N. W. of Mosul, and is governed by a bey. Lon. 59. 45. lat. 36. 30.

GHEENT, a large and handsome town or city, of the Netherlands, and capital of Ault. Flanders, with a strong castle and a bishop's see. It contains within the walls 36,000 houses, 7 parish-churches, and 55 monasteries and nunneries. There are several silk and woollen manufactures here, which are in a flourishing condition, and they have a great trade in corn. The fortifications have nothing extraordinary, but the citadel is very important, which is defended by strong rampart, bastions, and deep ditches. The town is cut by several canals, which divide it into 26 isles, and over the canals there are 300 bridges. On the highest tower-steeple there is a ring of bells, the greatest of which, called Rowland, weighs 110 quintals, each of which is 100 pounds. It was taken twice during the last war, and the French became masters of it by an artifice in 1708, but the duke of Marlborough retook it in December 1709. There is a handsome large canal, which goes from Ghent to Bruges, and from thence to Ostend, which is called the new passage, and on which there are several forts. The civil government is lodged in the burgomaster and schiepins, which are like our mayor and aldermen. It is seated at the confluence of the rivers Schelde, Lis, Lieve, and Moere, 22 miles S. W. of Antwerp, 27 W. of Mechlin, 26 N. W. of Brussels, and 20 S. E. of Middleburg in Flanders. Lon. 21. 35. lat. 51. 24.

GILAN, a considerable province of Asia, in Persia, lying on the side of the Caspian Sea, and to the S. W. of it. It is supposed to be the Hyrcania of the ancients. It is very agreeably situated, having the sea on one side, and high mountains on the other, and there is no entering it but through narrow passes, which may easily be defended. The sides of the mountains are covered with many forts of fruit-trees, and in the highest parts of them there are deer, bears, wolves, leopards, and tigers; which last the Persians have a secret of taming, and hunt with them, as we do with dogs. It is one of the most fruitful provinces of all Persia, and produces abundance of silk, oil, wine, rice, and tobacco, besides excellent fruits. The inhabitants are brave, and of a better complexion than the other Indians, and the women are accounted extremely handsome. Resht is the capital town.

GILLIAN, ST. a town of the French Netherlands, in the province of Hainault, seated on the river Haina, 5 miles W. of Mons. Lon. 21. 20. lat. 50. 30.

* GIBRALION, a town of Spain, in Andalusia, seated on the river Odiel, with a handsome castle, and the title of a marquisate.

GIBRALTAR, a strong town of Spain, in Andalusia, near a mountain of the same name, formerly called Calpe, and supposed to be one of Hercules's pillars, and which he looked upon to be the end of the world. Tarick, a general of the Moors, built a fortress here, which he called Gibel-Tarick, that is to say, Mount-Tarick. Since that time a town has been built at the foot of this rock, which is very well fortified; it can only be approached by a very narrow passage between the mountain and the sea, across which the Spaniards have drawn a line, and fortified it, to prevent the garrison from having any communication with the country. It was formerly thought to be impregnable, but, in 1704, it was taken by the confederate fleet, commanded by sir George Rook. The French and Spaniards attempted to retake it the same year, and 4 or 500 of them crept up the rock which covers the town, in the night-time, but were drove down headlong the next morning. In 1727 the Spaniards besieged it again, and they attempted to blow up the rock, which they found impracticable, and were at length obliged to raise the siege.

for the county, and one for Cardiff. The air is very sharp on the mountains, which are covered with snow; but very mild and temperate near the sea. The N. part is full of steep, high, barren mountains; but the S. is more plain, rich, and fertile, and feeds abundance of cattle and sheep; hence they supply Bristol with many firkins of good butter; and it has likewise several coal-pits. The chief town is Cardiff.

GLANDIVES was a formerly a town of France, in Provence, with a bishop's see; but the inundations of the river Var have destroyed it, and there is nothing left but the bishop's house. It is 25 miles N. W. of Nice, and 47 S. E. of Embrun. Lon. 24. 38. lat. 43. 59.

* GLANDFORD-BRIDGES, a town of Lincolnshire with a good market on Thursdays, but no fairs. It is seated on the river Ancam, and is a pretty good town. It is 24 miles N. of Lincoln, and 153 N. by W. of London. Lon. 17. 10. lat. 53. 43.

GLARUS, the canton of, one of the 13 republicks in Switzerland. It is bounded on the E. by the Grisons; on the S. by the same and the canton Uri, and that of Switz; and on the N. by the river Limath. It is a mountainous country; and their chief trade is in cheese. The government is democratick, and the senate is composed of 62 persons; over which the landaman and pre-consul preside, who are never of the same religion; for the inhabitants are partly Papists and partly Protestants. The capital town is of the same name.

• GLARUS, a large and handsome town of Switzerland, and capital of the canton of the same name. Here the general assemblies are held, and every person above 16 years old is obliged to assist at it with a sword by his side. The inhabitants are Papists and Protestants, and live very peaceably together, for they have both divine service in the same church one after another. It is seated on the river Lante, 25 miles E. of Switz, 17 N. W. of Coire, and 32 S. E. of Zurich. Lon. 26. 48. lat. 47. 6.

GLASGOW, a large town or city of Scotland, in the shire of Clydesdale, with an university, and a magnificent bridge. It is a populous place, and there is a large harbour in the river Clyde, on which it stands, a little below it; and it is called New Glasgow, or the New Town, where the largest vessels may enter: for this reason the inhabitants carry on a large trade to foreign parts. The form of this town is almost square, and is divided into 4 almost equal parts, by 4 large streets, which cross each other in the middle. Near this is the town house, constructed of free stone, with a high tower, and melodious chimies. It was formerly an archbishoprick; and the cathedral church, which is the highest part of the town, is an old handsome Gothic structure. It is properly two churches, one above another, adorned with stately pillars, and a very high steeple. Glasgow is extremely well seated in a fertile soil, and the houses in general are very well built. The college is separated from the town by a very high wall, and consists of divers courts, each of which is surrounded with buildings. It is 10 miles S. W. of Dumbarton, and 35 W. of Edinburgh. Lon. 13. 25. lat. 55. 50.

GLASTONBURY, a town of Somersetshire, with a market on Tuesdays, and a fair on September 8, for all sorts of cattle. It is seated near the Tor, and is of chief note for a famous abbey; some magnificent ruins of which are still remaining, but they are every day diminished for the sake of the stones: however, the curious structure, called the abbot's kitchen is still pretty entire, and is of a very unusual contrivance. It is pretended that the bodies of Joseph of Arimathea, of king Arthur, and of king Edward the Confessor, were buried here. The place is at present pretty large and well-built, containing two parish churches. Near adjoining, on a high steep hill, is placed a tower, which commands a great prospect round about, and serves as a landmark to seamen. It is 6 miles S. W. of Wells, 25 S. W. of Bristol, 54 N. E. of Exeter, and 120 W. by S. of London. Lon. 14. 49. lat. 15. 15. The last abbot of this place was hanged on the top of the Tor, by order of king Henry VIII. for not acknowledging his supremacy.

GLATZ, a handsome and strong town of Bohemia, and capital of a county of the same name. It is seated on the river Neisse, and has pretty good fortifications, with a strong castle built upon a mountain. When the Prussians became masters of it, the Austrians had a strong garrison in it, which were taken prisoners. The county was ceded to the king of Prussia by the queen of Hungary in 1742, and is about 45 miles in length.

URSTADT,

GLUKSTADT, a strong and considerable town of Germany, in the circle of Upper Saxony, and duchy of Holstein, with a strong castle, and subject to Denmark. It is seated on the river Elbe, near its mouth, 30 miles N. W. of Hamburg, and 55 N. of Bremen. Lon. 26. 50. lat. 52. 53.

GNESSA, a large and strong town of Great Poland, of which it is capital, and in the palatinate of Calish, with an archbishop's see, whose archbishop is primate of Poland, and viceroy during the vacancy of the throne. It was the first town built in the kingdom, and was formerly more considerable than it is at present. It is 100 miles N. by E. of Breslaw, 120 S. by E. of Dantzick, and 125 W. of Warsaw. Lon. 35. 55. lat. 52. 28.

GNIFF, or GNIW, a town of Polish Prussia, in the palatinate of Culm, seated on the river Viitula, with a citadel. It was taken by Gustavus Adolphus, King of Sweden, in 1626. The Swedes likewise took it in 1655, but did not keep it long.

GOA, a large and strong town of Asia, in the peninsula on this side the Ganges, and on the Malabar coast. It was taken by the Portuguese in 1509, and is the chief town of all the settlements which the Europeans have in India. It stands in an island about 12 miles in length, and 6 in breadth, and the city is built on the North side of it, having the conveniency of a fine salt-water river, capable of receiving ships of the greatest burthen, where they lie within a mile of the town. The banks of the river are beautified with a great number of handsome structures, such as churches, castles, and gentlemen's houses. The air within the town is unwholesome, for which reason it is not so well inhabited now as it formerly was. The viceroy's palace is a noble building, and stands at a small distance from the river, over one of the gates of the city, which leads to a spacious street, terminated by a beautiful church. This city contains a great number of handsome churches, convents, and cloisters, with a stately large hospital, all well endowed, and kept in good repair. The market-place takes up an acre of ground; and, in the shops about it may be had the produce of Europe, China, Bengal, and other countries of less note. Every church has a set of bells, some of which are continually ringing. Their religion is the Roman Catholick; and they have a severe inquisition. There are a great many Indian converts; but they generally retain some of their old customs, particularly they cannot be brought to eat beef. However, there are many Gentoes in the city who are tolerated, because they are more industrious than the Christians, and better artists. The clergy are very numerous, and illiterate; and the churches are finely embellished, and have great numbers of images. Their houses are large, and make a fine shew; but within they are poorly furnished. The inhabitants are contented with greens, fruits, and roots, which, with a little bread, rice, and fish, is their principal diet, though they have hogs and fowls in plenty. However, they are very much addicted to women, and are generally weak, lean, and feeble. Our author, Capt. Hamilton, stood on a hill near the city, and counted above 80 churches, convents, and monasteries; and he was told, that there were about 50,000 priests and monks. The body of St. Francis Xavier is buried in St. Paul's church, and as they pretend performs a great many miracles. It is remarkable, that none of the churches, except one, have glass-windows; for they make use of clear oyster-shells instead of glass, and all their fine houses have the same. Goa itself has few manufactures or productions, their best trade being in arrack, which they distil from toddy, which is the sap of the cocoa nut tree. The river's mouth is defended by several forts and batteries, well planted with large cannon, on both sides; and there are several other forts in different places. It is 250 miles N. by W. of Cochlin. Lon. 91. 35. lat. 15. 31.

GONCFIS, a town of Germany, in the Palatinate, 18 miles S. E. of Philipsburg. Lon. 28. 31. lat. 49. 21.

* GOUVELINS, a house of Paris, in the suburb of St. Marceau, so called from Giles Gobelin, an excellent dyer, who found out the secret of dying scarlet, in the reign of Francis I. This is the place where they make the finest tapestry in Europe.

GOCU, a town of Germany, in the duchy of Cleves, and in the circle of Westphalia. It was taken by the Dutch, in 1614; but it is now subject to the King of Prussia. It is seated on the river Neers, 6 miles S. E. of Cleve or Cleves. Lon. 23. 37. lat. 51. 40.

* GOCIANO,

GOCIANO, a town of the island of Sardinia, in the province of Lugho-Doria. It is seated on the river Thurso, 25 miles E. of Alger; it has a castle, and is the capital of the county of the same name.

• GODAH, a considerable town of Asia, in Indostan. It is a very pleasant place; but it is not so flourishing as it was formerly. It is 50 miles from Bram-pore.

GODALMING, a town of Surry, with a market on Saturdays, and two fairs; viz. on February 15, for horses, cattle, sheep, and hops; and on July 10, for horses, cattle, sheep, and store-pigs. It is seated on the river Wye, where it divides into several streams and waters the adjacent parts. It is 4 miles S. W. of Guilford, and 34 S. W. of London. Lon. 16. 55. lat. 51. 22.

• GODMANCHESTER, a town of Huntingdonshire, parted from Huntingdon by the river Ouse. It was incorporated by King James I. and is seated in a rich and fertile soil, which yields great plenty of corn. It is inhabited by a great number of yeomen and farmers, who are said to have extraordinary teams of horses, and some say better than in any other part of England. It has no market; nor yet but one fair, which is on Easter-Tuesday, for all sorts of cattle.

GODOLPHIN, a hill in Cornwall, famous for its tin-mines; it lies E. of Mountsbay, and has the title of an earldom.

GOES, a town of Portugal, in Beira, that has between 14 and 1500 inhabitants. It is 26 miles from the city of Beira.

GOES, or TER-GOES, a strong and considerable town of the United Provinces, in Zealand, and capital of the Island of South-Beveland. It communicates with the sea by a canal; and is 10 miles E. of Middleburg, 12 W. of Bergen-op-zoom, and 30 N. of Ghent. Lon. 21. 25. lat. 51. 33.

GOGMAGOG-HILLS, are hills so called, three miles from Cambridge, remarkable for the intrenchments and other works cast up here; whence some suppose it was a Roman camp; and others, that it was the work of the Danes. They are covered with fine dry carpet turf; for which reason, they are resorted to by the Cantabrigians in the winter. The country-people, near these hills, tell strange stories about them.

• GOLAME, a kingdom of Africa, in Abyssinia, lying at the South extremity of the lake Dambis. It is almost surrounded on all sides by the Nile, and is become famous since the discovery of the sources of that river.

GOITO, a town of Italy, in the duchy of Mantua, which was taken by the Germans in 1701, and by the Prince of Hesse in 1706. It is seated on the river Mincio, between the lake of Mantua and that of Garda, 10 miles N. W. of Mantua. Lon. 23. 35. lat. 45. 16.

GOLCONDA, a kingdom of Asia, in the peninsula on this side the Ganges. It is bounded on the N. by that of Orissa; on the W. by that of Balagate; on the S. by Bijnagar; and on the E. by the Gulph of Bengal. It abounds in corn, rice, and cattle; but that which renders it most remarkable, are the diamond-mines, they being the most considerable in the world: they are usually purchased of the black merchants, who buy parcels of ground to search for these precious stones in. They sometimes fail in meeting with any, and in others they find immense riches. They have also mines of salt, fine iron for sword-blades, and curious callices and chintzes. It is subject to the Great Mogul; and has a town of the same name, seated at the foot of a mountain, being one of the largest in the East-Indies. It is about 6 miles in circumference, and was formerly the residence of the kings, till it was conquered by the Great Mogul. It is now much frequented by the European merchants. Lon. 96. 45. lat. 16. 30.

GOLDBERG, a town of Silesia, in the duchy of Lignitz, 36 miles W. of Breslaw, in possession of Prussia. Lon. 34. 45. lat. 51. 3.

GOLD COAST OF GUINEY, a country of Africa, lying along the sea-shore, and where the Europeans have several forts and settlements. It reaches from the Gold river 12 miles W. of Assine, and ends at the village of Ponni, 7 or 8 miles E. of Acraw. It includes several districts, in which there is two or three towns or villages, lying on the sea-shore; though, within land, it is said they have large towns, which however no European has yet seen. Seven of these districts are dignified with the titles of kingdoms, though they do not contain but a small tract of land; for the whole Gold Coast is not above 120 miles in length. The Negro inhabitants are generally very rich, as they carry on a great trade with the Europeans for gold, and many of them

All the inhabitants go almost naked; and those that are best clothed have only some yards of stuff wrapped about their middle. [For farther particulars, we refer to the names of the places and sorts themselves; for here the English, French, and Dutch have settlements.]

GOLDEN-ISLAND lies at the mouth of the river or gulph of Darien in the province of Terra Firma, in S. America. Here the Scots attempted to make a settlement in 1698; but finding it a barren spot, they changed their minds, and took possession of the opposite shore. This place is so strong by nature, that the Spaniards could not have dispossessed them, had not the English contributed thereto. Lon. 196. 8. lat. 9. 0.

GOLDINGEN, a town of Poland, in the duchy of Courland, with a handsome castle. It is seated on the river Wela, 60 miles W. of Mittau, and is subject to the King of Poland. Lon. 40. 6. lat. 56. 48.

* GOLDSITHNAY, a village in Cornwall, with one fair, on August 6, for horses, oxen, sheep, cloth, and a few hops.

GOLSAW, a town of Germany, in Farther Pomerania, subject to the King of Prussia. It is seated on the river Ilna, near the river Oder, 20 miles N. E. of Stetin, and 22 S. of Commin. Lon. 32. 54. lat. 53. 44.

GOLETTA, an island of Africa, lying at the entrance of the Bay of Tunis. It was taken by the Emperor Charles V. when he attempted the siege of Tunis, and was kept by the Christians several years. It is 25 miles N. of Tunis, and 375 E. of Algiers. Lon. 28. 25. lat. 37. 10.

GOMBROON, is a considerable sea-port town of Asia, in Persia, and in the province of Farsistan. It is called by the natives Bandar Abassi, and is seated on a bay, about 12 miles northward of the east end of the island of Kismish, falsely called Quessimo in our maps. It is 9 miles from the famous island of Ormus, where the Portuguese had a settlement. The best houses are built with bricks dried in the sun, and stand close to each other, being flat on the top, with a square turret, having holes on each side for the free passage of the air. Upon these roofs, those that stay in the town sleep every night in the summer season. The common people have wretched huts, made with the boughs of palm-trees, and covered with leaves. The streets are very narrow and irregular; and the better sort of people are clad in the Persian mode; but the poorer sort, both men and women, go quite naked, except a clout to cover what decency requires them to hide. The English and Dutch have factories here, which is a great advantage to the trade of the place. The soil is barren, and there are high rocks near it, and yet provisions brought from other countries are plenty enough. The weather is so exceeding hot in June, July, and August, that this place is extremely unhealthy; and therefore the English factory retire to Assen during those months. It is frequented by people of several nations, as well Europeans as others; and the Banyans are so numerous, that they bribe the governor not to permit any cows to be killed in the town. The profit arising to the East-India company from the factory here is not so considerable as it was formerly. Lon. 75. 0. lat. 27. 0.

GOMERA, an island in the Atlantic Ocean, and one of the Canaries, lying between Ferro and Tcheriff. It has one good town of the same name, with an excellent harbour, where the Spanish fleets often take in refreshments. They have corn and fruits sufficient to support the inhabitants; and one sugar-work, with great plenty of wine and fruits. It is subject to Spain, who conquered it in 1445. Lon. 0. 25. lat. 28. 0.

* GONDAR, a town of Africa, in Abyssinia, where the emperor of that country resides. It is about 10 miles in circumference; but the houses consist only of one story, and most of them resemble a funnel with the narrow end upwards. They have no shops; for they carry on their trade in a large square, where they expose their merchandise to sale. They are laid upon mats; and gold and rock-salt, are the only money made use of. Each bar of salt is a foot in length, and they break off as much as they agree for in the purchase of small wares. There are about 100 churches, and their patriarch depends on that of Alexandria. The priests have a great power with the people, and sometimes they abuse it grossly. The Mahometans, and the European Christians are held equally in horrence, on account of the intrigues carried on by the Jesuits and Missionaries a considerable time ago; inasmuch, that all those who now attempt to enter the city, are sure of being sacrificed. Some have pretended, that this city is nothing else but a camp, in which they were mistaken; for we have our information from an eye witness. The rainy season in these parts begins in April, and does not cease till the end of September; whence the Nile, and other rivers that have their source in Abyssinia, overflow their banks every year. The inhabitants are tall and comely, and their complexion is a dun, or olive colour. The habit of the better sort is made of silks and cottons; but the common people have only drawers to hide their nakedness. It is 180 miles S. E. of Sennar, and near 1000 S. of Grand Cairo. Lon. 56. 0. lat. 13. 10.

* GONDRECOURT, a town of France, in the dutchy of Bar. It is seated on the river Orney, which abounds with excellent trouts, 20 miles S. of St. Milul. Lon. 23. 12. lat. 48. 30.

* GONDREVILLE, a town of Lorraine, seated on the river Moselle. It had formerly a famous palace, and has now a castle, and a magnificent hospital well endowed; and its chapel, in particular, is very fine. It stands very pleasantly on the top of a hill, 3 miles from Toul, and 8 from Nanci. Lon. 23. 38. lat. 48. 40.

* GONSEE, a town of the Isle of France, 10 miles from Paris. It is remarkable for the goodness of its bread, which is brought twice a-week to Paris. Lon. 20. 7. lat. 48. 59.

* GONGA, an ancient town of Turkey in Europe, and in Romania. It is seated near the sea of Marmora, 37 miles N. E. of Gallipoli. Lon. 55. 6. lat. 40. 55.

* GOODNESSSTONE, a village in Kent, with a fair, on September 14, for cattle.

GOR, a town of Asia, in India, and capital of a small kingdom of the same name, which is part of the Great Mogul's dominions. It is near Grand Tibet, and 360 miles N. E. of Dely. Lon. 106. 0. lat. 31. 15.

GORUM, a town of the United Provinces, in S. Holland, which carries on a considerable trade in cheese and butter. It is seated on the rivers Linthe and Maese, 12 miles E. of Dordrecht, 17 N. E. of Breda, and 32 S. of Amsterdam. Lon. 22. 40. lat. 51. 49.

GORDON-CASTLE, a fine palace of Scotland, near Fochabers, in Bamffshire. It stands on the river Spey, and is the seat of the Duke of Gordon.

GOREE, a small island of Africa, near Cape de Verd, lately subject to the French. It is barren, but is of great importance on account of its good trade. It was taken by the English in May 1759. Lon. 30. 0. lat. 14. 30.

GOREE, a capital town of the island of the same name, in Holland, 8 miles S. of Briel. Lon. 21. 25. lat. 51. 55.

GORGONA, a small island of Italy, in the sea of Tuscany, and near that of Corsica, about 8 miles in circumference. It is remarkable for the large quantity of anchovies that are taken near it. Lon. 27. 35. lat. 43. 22.

GORGONA, a small island of the S. Sea, 12 miles W. of the coast of Peru, in America. It is indifferent high land, and very woody, and some of the trees are very tall and large, and proper for masts. It is about 10 miles in circumference, and has several springs and rivulets of excellent water. It would be a very proper place for adventures to lie concealed in, if the constant rains did not rot the rigging of the ships. There are a great number of monkeys, guiney-pigs, lions, lizards, and sloths, which are remarkable for their ugliness and slowness of their motions, though by their shape they seem to be of the monkey kind. Lon. 298. 0. lat. 3. 30.

GORITIA, or GORITZ, a strong town of Germany, in the circle of Austria, and dutchy of Carniola, with a castle. It is seated on the river Lizonzo, 20 miles N. E. of Aquila, and 70 N. E. of Venice. Lon. 31. 18. lat. 46. 12.

GORITZ, a town of Germany, in Upper Lusatia, subject to the Elector of Saxony. It is a handsome strong place, and is seated on the river Neisse, 50 miles E. of Dresden, and 70 N. by E. of Prague. Lon. 32. 50. lat. 51. 10.

on fire in 1728, when 280 houses, and St. Stephen's fine church, were reduced to ashes. It is seated on a mountain, near the river Gose, and near it are rich mines of iron and lead. The inhabitants are famous for brewing excellent beer.
It is 22 miles S. E. of Hildenheim, 17
S. E. of Haberstadt, and 25 S. of Brunwick. Lon. 21. 12. lat. 51. 55.

• GOSPORT, a town in Hampshire, parted from Portsmouth by a narrow arm of the sea, and in some sense it may be reckoned part of it; it has no market, but has two fairs, on May 4, and October 10, for toys.

GOSTYNEK, or GOSTAVIN, a town of Poland, in the palatinate of Rava, 42 miles N. of Rava. Lon. 37. 45. lat.
52. 25.

GOTHA, a town of Germany, in the circle of Upper Saxony, and capital of a dutchy of the same name. Its present duke is brother to the prince's dowager of Wales, who keeps an elegant court there. It is 15 miles W. of Erford, and 15 S. E. of Mullaufen. Lon. 28. 35.
lat. 52. 25.

• GOTHARD, one of the highest mount-

• GOTHAS, an ancient people, who have made a great noise in Europe, whose name some geographers think came from Gutes, a part of Sweden, now Gothland; but the most general opinion is, that they were Getes, a people of European Sarmatia, who inhabited a country on the northern borders of the Black Sea, as far as the river Nieper, and afterwards extended themselves to the mouths of the Danube. After this they crossed Bulgaria and Romania, ravaged Macedonia, Greece, Dalmatia, and Italy, and pillaged Rome. They went and settled in Languedoc under the name of Visigoths, and afterwards in Spain, where they erected a kingdom, which continued for about 300 years, till it was overturned by the Moors. The Ostrogoths likewise founded a kingdom in Italy, which continued only 53 years, for it was destroyed by Narfes, in 552.

GOTTENBURG, a rich and strong town of Sweden, in W. Gothland, with a good harbour, at the mouth of the river Gothelba, which is the best situated for foreign trade of any in Sweden, as it lies

• GOTTSBERG, a town of Germany, in Silesia, and in the dutchy of Schweid-nitz, remarkable for its silver mines.

GOUDA, or TERGOW, a considerable town of the United Provinces, in S. Holland, remarkable for its stately church. It is seated on the river Issel, 8 miles N. E. from Rotterdam, and 12 from Leyden.
Lon. 22. 12. lat. 52. 2.

GOUNBURST, a town in Kent, with a market on Wednesdays, and one fair, on August 26, for cattle. It is 12 miles
S. W. from Maidstone, and 49 E. by
S. of London. Lon. 15. 0. lat. 51.
8.

GOVERNULO, a town of Italy, in the dutchy of Mantua. It was taken by the Imperialists in 1702, and by the French in 1703. It is seated on the river Min-cio, near the Po, 12 miles S. E. of Mantua, and 12 N. W. of Mirandola.
Lon. 28. 30. lat. 37. 10.

 - GRAMPOUND, a town in Cornwall, with a market on Saturdays, and three fairs, on January 18, March 25, and June 11, for horses, cattle, cloth, and a few hops. It is seated on the river Valle, and is but a mean place, of about 100 houses, though it sends 2 members to parliament. The inhabitants have a considerable manufacture of gloves. It is 46 miles S. W. of Lanceson, and 244 W. by S. of London. Lon. 12. 10. lat. 50. 20.
 - GRAN, a handsome, large, and strong town of Lower Hungary, with an archbishop's see. It has been several times taken and retaken, but last of all the Imperialists drove away the Turks from it, in 1683. It is seated on the river Danube, 20 miles S. E. of Comoren, 25 N. W. of Buda, and 87 E. by S. of Vienna. Lon. 36. 35. lat. 48. 0.
 - GRANADA, a considerable province of Spain, with the title of a kingdom; bounded on the N. and W. by Andalusia; on the E. by the kingdom of Murcia; and on the S. by the Mediterranean Sea. It is about 175 miles in length, and 75 in breadth. It is a mountainous country, and yet the soil is good; but it has not been well cultivated since the Moors were driven away. However, it produces corn, wine, oil, sugar, flax, hemp, excellent fruits, honey, wax, grapes, and mulberry trees, which feed a great number of silk-worms. The forests produces gall-nuts, palm-trees, and oaks, whose acorns are sweeter than any nut. This province was taken from the Moors in 1492, and Granada is the capital town.
 - * GRANADA, is a large, handsome, and delightful town of Spain, capital of the Kingdom of Granada, with an archbishop's see, and a university. It is built on 4 hills, and is divided into 4 parts; in one of which is the large church, containing the tombs of Ferdinand and Isabella, who took this place from the Moors in 1492. In another is the palace of the kings of Spain, and an ancient palace of the Moorish kings, with rica, in Terra Firma, about 75 miles in length, and as much in breadth. It is bounded on the N. by Carthagenia and St. Martha; on the E. by Venezuela;

on the S. by Popayan; and on the W.
by Darien. It contains mines of gold, copper, iron, hories, mules, good pastures, corn, and fruits. It belongs to the Spaniards, and Santa-Fu-de-Bagota is the capital town.

GRANADILLOS, the name of some islands of the Caribbees, in America, having
St. Vincent to the N, and Granada to the S. They are so inconsiderable that they are quite neglected.

GRANDE. See RIO GRANDE.

* GRANIC, or GRANTICUS, a small river of Natolia, in Asia, which has its source in Mount Ida, near the ruins of ancient Troy. It falls into the sea of Marmora, to the E. of Lampaco. It was near this river that Alexander the Great obtained
the first victory over the Persians, in which it is said they lost 100,000 men.

* GRANSON, a town of Switzerland, in the country of Vaud, and capital of a balliwick of the same name, with a castle. There was a battle gained here by the Swifs over the duke of Burgundy in 1476. Lon. 24. 10. lat. 44. 48.

highlands of Scotland.

GRANTHAM, a town of Lincolnshire, with a market on Saturdays, and 5 fairs; on the fifth Monday in Lent, for horned cattle, horses, and sheep; on Holy Thursday, for sheep and horses; on July 10, October 26, and December 17, for horned cattle and horses. It is seated on a bottom on the river Whicham, and is a noted place, with a good free school, and a handsome church, famous for its high spire, which seems to lean on one side. It is a corporation, sends 2 members to parliament, and has the title of an earldom. It is 21 miles
N. by W. of Stamford, 14 S. by E. of Newark, and 104 N. by W. from London. Lon. 16. 55. lat. 52. 50.

GRANVILLE, a sea-port town of France,
in Lower Normandy, and is partly seated on a rock, and partly on a plain. It gives title to an English earl, and is 15 miles S. by E. of Coutances, and 185
W. of Paris. Lon. 16. 3. lat. 48. 53.

* GRASSE, a town of France, in Provence, with a bishop's see. It is seated doc, and in the diocese of Carcassone, seated on the river Oubieu, at the foot of the mountains of Coubiere, near a Benedictine abbey.

* GRASSINGTON, a village in Yorkshre,
with 4 fairs; on March 4, for horned cattle; April 24, and June 29, for sheep; and September 26, for horned cattle.

GRATZ, a handsome strong town of Germany, and capital of Stiria, with a castle, seated on a rock, and a university.
The Jesuits have a college; and there are a great number of handsome palaces and a fine arsenal. The castle stands on a very lofty hill, and communicates with
the river, by means of a very deep well.
The emprefs dowager was obliged to retire hither during the war of 1741 and 1742. It is seated on the river Muer,
45 miles N. W. of Waraden, and 85
S. W. of Vienna. Lon. 34. 0. lat.

GRADENTZ, a town of Poland, in the palatinate of Culm, with a handsome castle. It is seated on the river Weusel.

or Vistula, 35 miles N. of Thorn, 60 S. of Dantzick, and 82 N. W. of Warsaw. Lon. 37. 2. lat. 53. 20.

GRAVE, a very strong town of the Netherlands, in Dutch Brabant. It is seated on the river Maese, beyond which there is a fort, 8 miles S. of Nimeguen, and 65 N. E. of Brussels. Lon. 23. 16. lat. 51. 46.

GRAVELINES, a very strong sea-port town of the Netherlands, in French Flanders, with a castle and a harbour. It was ceded to France by the treaty of the Pyrenees, and is seated in a marshy country, on the river Aa, near the sea, 12 miles E. of Calais, 15 S. W. of Dunkirk, and 75 W. of Ghent. Lon. 19. 48. lat. 50. 59.

GRAVENEE, a town of Germany, in the circle of Silesia, and capital of a county of the same name, 50 miles W. of Uhm. Lon. 26. 50. lat. 48. 22.

GRAVESEND, a town of Kent, with 2 markets on Wednesdays and Saturdays, and 2 fairs, on April 23, and November 25, for horses and all other goods, cloths, and toys. It is seated on the banks of the Thames, and is a place of great resort, because it is the common landing place for sea men and strangers in their passages to London, there being tilt boats ready to carry them every tide. It is well stocked with houses of entertainment; and here is a blockhouse over-against Tilbury fort. A great part of it was burnt down with the church in 1727, which has been since rebuilt as one of the 50 new churches, and the houses are much handsomer than before. It is commonly called the corporation of Gravesend and Milton, these two places being united under the government of a mayor, 12 aldermen, 24 common council, a town clerk, &c. This parish, with that of Milton, consists of about 700 houses, mostly small, and built with bricks; the streets are also narrow, but paved with flints. The chief employment of the labouring people is spinning of Leap, to make nets for fishing and ropes. It is also famous for gardening, the best apparatus being produced here of any in the kingdom.

GRAVINA, a town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in the Terra-di-Bari, with a bishop's see, and the title of a duchy. It is 25 miles E. of Cirienza, and 32 S. W. of Bari. Lon. 31. 10. lat. 40. 54.

* GRAY, a town of France, in the French

Comte, and capital of the bailiwick of Amont. It is a trading place, and was very strong before the fortifications were demolished. It is seated on the river Saone, 20 miles N. of Dole, 30 N. W. of Besançon, and 25 N. E. of Digon. Lon. 23. 16. lat. 47. 30.

* GRAYS, a town of Essex, with a market on Thursdays, and 1 fair, on May 23, for cattle and hardware. It is but a poor place, and is seated on the side of the Thames, 19 miles E. of London, Lon. 17. 51. lat. 51. 28.

GREECE, a country of Turky, called by them at present Romelia. It is bounded on the N. by Bulgaria, Serbia, and Dalmatia; on the W. by the gulph of Venice; on the S. by the Mediterranean; and on the E. by the Archipelago, the sea of Manara, the Black Sea, the Straits of the Dardanel, and of Constantinople. It comprehends 6 parts, namely, Macedonia, Albania, Livadia, the Morea, the island of Candia, and the isles of the Archipelago. It enjoys a temperate air, is healthy and has a fruitful soil. It was greatly celebrated by ancient historians, and produced a great number of famous men, who performed very great actions as soldiers, as well as others, who were eminent for their parts and learning. Particularly Alexander the Great and Homer, who were natives of this country. But it now groans under the tyranny of the Turks, and is but the shadow of what it was formerly, it being over-run with ignorance and barbarism, almost all the fine towns being quite destroyed. It is inhabited both by Mahometans and Christians.

* GREAT CHART, a village in Kent, with 1 fair on March 25, for horses, cattle, and pedlars ware.

* GREAT THURLOW, a village in Suffolk, with 1 fair on October 10, for sheep and toys.

It was so called because those that discovered it first found the shores covered with green moss. There has been attempts made to settle in it; but the men always perished with the severity of the cold. A few sailors having been left here accidentally, all underwent the same fate. Some divide it into E. and W. Greenland, making the first belong to Europe, and the other to America; but this is a foolish distinction, because we are not sure that it joins to the continents of either. In the maps it is generally distinguished by the Dutch name of Groenland. Some would have them to be two places, but very improperly; for the best maps have no such distinction. However, there are some who would have Spitzbergen to be Greenland.

GREENOCK, a sea-port town of Scotland, in the county of Renfrew, being near the mouth of the river Clyde, and is the principal station of the herring fishery on that side the island. It is 26 miles W. of Glasgow. Lon. 14. 20. lat. 55. 54.

GREENWICH, a town in Kent, 5 miles E. of London, noted for its magnificent hospital for decayed seamen, its delightful park, and its astronomical observatory. The hospital is thought to be the finest structure of this kind in the world; and its noble hall is finely painted by Sir James Thornhill. It was formerly noted for its palace, where Queen Elizabeth was born; but that was pulled down, and what is so called now serves for apartments for the governor of the hospital, and the ranger of the Park. The King's yatchs generally lye at this place.

GRIGNAN, a handsome, large, populous, and ancient town of France, in Dauphiny, with a bishop's see. It contains a great number of handsome structures, particularly the churches and convents. The cathedral church is a fine ancient building in the Gothic taste; and St. Andrew's church is adorned with a curious spire steeple, and a tomb of excellent workmanship. The leather and gloves that are made here are highly esteemed. It is seated on the river Here, over which there are two bridges to pass into that part called Perche, which is only one large street on the side of the river. It is 27 miles S. of Chamberry, 20 S. E. of Vienne, and 105 W. by N. of Turin. Lon. 23. 24. lat. 45. 12.

* GRESSFORD, a village of Denbighshire, in N. Wales, 2 miles N. of Wrexham, with 3 fairs, on the second Monday in April, the last Monday in August, and the first Monday in December, for cattle.

* GRIFFENHAGEN, a town in Germany, in Prussian Pomerania, and in the dutchy of Stettin, seated on the river Oder. Lon. 38. 45. lat. 53. 17.

* GRIGNAN, a town of France, in Provence, on the confines of Dauphiny. Lon. 22. 35. lat. 44. 25.

* GRIMAUD, a town of France, in Provence, near the Mediterranean Sea, and the gulph of Grimaud. Lon. 24. 16. lat. 43. 50.

GRIMBERGEN, a town of the Austrian Netherlands, in Brabant, and in the quarter of Brussels, seated on a rivulet about a mile from the canal which goes from Brussels to Antwerp, with an abbey, a castle, and the title of a principality. It is 5 miles N. of Brussels. Lon. 21. 50. lat. 50. 55.

* GRIMM, a town of Germany, in the electorate of Saxony, and in Misnia, seated on the river Muldaw, over which there is a bridge. It is 10 miles S. E. of Leipzick, and is defended by a citadel. Lon. 30. 35. lat. 51. 15.

* GRIMMEN, a town of Germany, in Pomerania, and in the dutchy of Bardt, 5 miles S. of Stralsund. Lon. 31. 12. lat. 54. 18.

* GRIMNITZ, a palace and hunting house of Germany, in the middle Marche of Brandenburg, remarkable for a treaty of peace concluded here in 1529, between the houses of Brandenburg and Pomerania.

 name, and soon after falls into the Mediterranean Sea, a little below Valencia.
GUADALCOPE, a handsome town in Spain,
 in Estramadura, with a celebrated convent, whose structure is magnificent,
 and is immensely rich. It is seated on a rivulet of the same name. Lon. 13.
 45. lat. 39. 15.
GUADALOUPE, an island of America, and one of the Caribbees, between the islands of St. Domingo, Marigault, Defiada, and Montserrat, and is in the form of a half-moon. The middle of it is in about 16. 50. of latitude, and it is divided into two parts by a narrow strait, called Beche's Bay or the Salt River, and at this place the land on each side is not above four miles broad, and by this strait the sea on the N. W. communi-cates with that on the S. E. The N.
 W. part is 60 miles in length, 24 in breadth, and 148 in circumference.
 This is divided into Basse-terre and Ca-besterre, which last signifies the head of the land, and is so called because it lies open to the trade-wind, whereas Bas-feterre is under the wind. The eastern part is named Grande Terre, but for what reason is hard to say, for it does not contain more land than the former,
 though the shape is much more irregular.
 The French first sent colonies to this island in 1632, and since that time they have been continually improving and fortifying it, and yet it was taken by the English in 1759, who found it extremely pleasant and fertile. It is generally said to be the best of all the Car-ribbee islands, the soil being exceeding good, and every where well watered near the sea, by rivulets which fall from the mountains, especially in Cabesterre.
 If the true cinnamon-tree is found here,
 as some believe, it will still render this acquisition more valuable: they call it here ballard-cinnamon. The bark is brown, chapped, and thick; and it has the true smell of cinnamon, mixed with that of cloves. The taste is very strong and acute, seeming to be a compound of pepper, cloves, and cinnamon: but O o it

it must be observed, that the person who tasted it did not know that what we call cinnamon is the second bark. The most remarkable curiosity in Guadalupe is the burning mountain, called by the French la Soufriere; it is seated in the N. part of Caballero; and the highest part, or Pike, which is elevated above the rest of the mountains, is 2400 feet high, and 160 in circumference. It consists of a heap of large white calcined stones, and on the top there is a mouth of about 36 yards in diameter; the edges are covered with large stones, mixed with ashes and pieces of sulphur, and there proceeds from it, from time to time, clouds of black, thick, sulphureous smoke, mixed with sparks of fire. Besides this, there are other places which continually emit smoke with sparks of fire, which do not prevent the air from being very cold. The negroes often go in quest of the sulphur, which they purify and sell. The vegetables, fruits, and trees are much the same as in the other islands, excepting the cinnamon-tree, and that which yields balsam of Capivi. Some affirm there are no serpents here.

GUADALQUIVER, one of the most famous rivers of Spain, which rises in Andalusia, near the confines of Granada, and running quite through Andalusia, by the towns of Baiza, Andaxar, Cordova, Seville, and St. Lucar, it falls soon after into the gulph of Cadiz.

GUADARAMA, a town of Spain, in Old Castile, remarkable for its great trade in chiebes. It is seated on the river Guadaram, 25 miles N. W. of Madrid, and 15 S. of Segovia. Lon. 15. 33. lat. 41. 45.

• GUADFI, a town of Asia, in Persia, and in the province of Mekran, with a pretty good harbour. Lon. 80. 30. lat. 25. 0.

GUADIANA, a river of Spain, having its source in New Castile, and passing cross the high mountains it falls down to the lakes called Ojos of Guadiana, from whence it runs to Calatrava, Medellin, Merida, and Badajoz in Estramadura of Spain, and, after having run for some time in Alentejo of Portugal, it passes on to separate the kingdom of Algarve from Andalusia, and falls into the bay or gulph of Cadiz, between Castro Marim and Agramonte.

GUADILIBARRA, a large river of Africa, which rises in Biledulgerid, from whence it runs to Borgio and Descato in the district of Zeh; then it enters the kingdom of Tunis, passes by Malti, and divides into two branches, one of which falls into the sea at Porto Farina, under the name of Magrada, and the other having visited Beja, falls into the sea near Barga, under the name of Guadalquivir.

GUADIX, a town of Spain, in the kingdom of Granada, with a bishop's see. It was taken from the Moers in 1253, who afterwards retook it, but the Spaniards got possession of it again in 1489. It is seated in a fertile country, 30 miles N. E. of Granada, and 15 S. W. of Baza. Lon. 15. 23. lat. 37. 5.

• GUAIATA, a kingdom of Africa, in N. Roland, bounded on the N. by Dervecies, on the S. by the river Senegal, on the E. by a chain of mountains, and on the W. by the river of St. Anthony and by the Ludages. The inhabitants are Negroes, and are said to receive strangers with great hospitality; and the country seems to be the same now known by the name of the Grand Jollois. They have much the same inclinations as the people that live in the deserts, and are fond of mares-milk and horse-flesh. What religion they have is Mahometanism.

• GUALDO, a town of Italy, in the ecclesiastical state, and in the marche of Ancona, towards the confines of the dutchy of Spoleto, and that of Urbino. It is 8 miles N. W. of Nocera, and in 1751 was almost destroyed by an earthquake. Lon. 30. 28. lat. 43. 6.

GALEOR, a large and strong town of Africa, in Indostan, and capital of a province of the same name, with a strong fort. It is 50 miles S. of Agra. Lon. 87. 0. lat. 25. 45.

GUAM, the first and chiefest of the Ladrone Islands, in the S. Sea, being about 100 miles in circumference. It depends upon the Spaniards, who have a garrison here, but the inhabitants are almost all natives of the country, and are reputed to be very skilful in building of boats. The island abounds with excellent fruits, and the air is wholesome, notwithstanding which the natives are subject to a kind of leprosy. Lon. 157. 10. lat. 13. 25.

The inward parts of the country are inhabited by the Aiges, who have different languages and customs; and some of them make their houses on trees, probably to be secure from the inundations of the rivers. The French possess a great part of the coast, which is called Equinoctial France, and the Dutch another. Here is a perpetual spring, and it produces large quantities of sugar canes. One part is inhabited by Caribbees, who were formerly reported to be man-eaters; but this is found to be false. The English and French, that are settled here, trade trade in cotton, silk, sugar, tobacco, Brazil wood, aloes, animal balsam, oranges, and citrous made into sweetmeats, or otherwise. It is divided into two large countries, called Guayana, and Proper Guiana. The former lies chiefly upon the sea-coast. It is between the Equator and 8 degrees of S. Latitude.

GUAYACIN, a town, bay, and harbour of S. America, in Peru, and capital of an A. Province of the same name, with two forts. It stands facing a low island close by the river, partly on the side, and partly at the foot of a hill, which descends gently towards the river. One of the forts stands on low ground, and the other on the hill; and the town makes a very fine prospect, it being beautified with several churches, and other good buildings. It is divided into two parts by a river, which are called the Old and the New, that are joined to other two bays, for transportation, half a mile in length. The situation is in fertile low ground, and is well watered, so that, without the bridge, there would be passage from one to the other. It is built of stone, and has but one regular street, along the river-side. Before the church of St. Jago there is a very handsome parade, but the church itself is going to decay. There are two other churches, well adorned with altars, carved works, and pictures. In the merchants store houses there is plenty of meat, brandy, wine, sugar, clove, nutmeg, cochineal, and iron; at least, this was the case of the town when it was taken by Captain Rogers in 1729. It is 110 miles E. of Puna, and 140 N. E. of Payta. Lon. 30. 40. lat. S. 2. 0.

GUAYMA, a sea-port town of S. America, and on the Caracas coast. The English attempted to take it twice; that is, in 1730, and in 1743; but they were repulsed both times. Lon. 31. 35. lat. 10. 55.

GUENNE, the largest province of France, bounded on the N. by Sainnois, Angoumois, and Limousin; on the E. by Languedoc, Auvergne, and Languedoc; on the S. by the Pyrenees, Lower Navarre, and Béarn; and on the W. by the Ocean. It is about 225 miles in length, and 270 in breadth. It is divided into the Upper and Lower. The Upper comprehends Quercy, Rouergue, Armagnac, the territory of Comminges, and the county of Blaisac. The Lower contains Ponselais, Perigord, Agenois, Condomois, Bazadais, the Lander, Proper Gascony, and the district of Labour. The principal rivers are, the Garonne, the Adour, the Tarn, the Aveyron, and the Lot. Bourdeaux is the capital town.

GUERREBO, a town in Surrey, with a market on Saturdays, and two fairs, viz. on May 2, and November 22, for horses, cattle, sheep, and hogs. It is pleasantly seated on the river Wey, and on the declivity of a hill, and is a large place, containing three parish churches, and sometimes the assizes for the county are held here. It is a great thoroughfare, and has several good inns. It had a large flock of cattle, of which some of the walls are yet standing. It is a mayortown, sends two members to parliament, and has the advantage of sending goods to London by barges. It is 17 miles S. W. of Kingston, 43 N. E. of Portsmouth, and 30 S. W. of London. Lon. 10. 55. lat. 51. 16.

GUERTRAIN ST. a town of the Austrian Netherlands, in Hainault, and in the province of Mons, which it defends by its ditches. It has been several times taken and retaken; but last of all by the French in 1746. It is seated in marshy land on the river Haine, and is 5 miles from Mons. Lon. 21. 29. lat. 50. 24.

GUILESTREFF, a town and castle in the Alps, formerly belonging to Dauphiny, in France. It was taken by Prince Eugene in 1692. It is 9 miles N. E. of Embrun, and 14 S. W. of Briançon. Lon. 23. 55. lat. 44. 45.

GUIMARAENS, an ancient, handsome, strong, and considerable town of Portugal, in the province of Entre-Duero and Minho, and in the Comarcas. It has formerly been the residence of some of their kings, and is divided into the Old and New. The publick buildings are magnificent. It is 10 miles S. E. of Braga, 27 N. by E. of Porto, 40 N. E. of Lamego, and 165 N. E. of Lisbon. Lon. 9. 46. lat. 41. 25.

GUINEY, a large country of Africa, of which little is known except the coasts, for which reason it is called, The Coast of Guiney. It is divided into the Lower and Upper. This last comprehends the Malaguetta Coast, the Tooth-Coast, the Gold-Coast, Whidaw, Great Ardra, and Benin. The lower part is commonly called called Congo. It is very unhealthy for Europeans, though the Negroes live a considerable time. The water is so bad, that it is common for worms to breed between the skin and the flesh, of above an ell long, and of a white silver colour. Most imagine, that this disorder is peculiar to the country; but bad waters do the same in other parts of the world, particularly to the E. of the Caspian Sea, in Asia. The inhabitants in general go almost naked, and there seems to be very little religion or honesty among them. The men take as many wives as they please; and the women are as incontinent as in any part of the world. The commodities purchased there are, gum-geneva, at Senegal; grain, upon the Grain-Coast; elephants-teeth, upon the Tooth-Coast, the greatest plenty of gold, upon the Gold-Coast; and all, in general, furnish slaves, more or less: and indeed, some of all these commodities are to be had in all parts of it. The English, Dutch, French, Danes, and other nations, have factories upon this coast; and purchase slaves, and the other commodities, for the benefit of their employers. The inhabitants of the coast generally buy, steal, or take captive, men and women from the inland parts, to sell for slaves; yet in many places, they make no scruple of killing one another: and even the kings themselves, if their wives displease them, will sell them to the Europeans. There are abundance of little states, whose heads, or chiefs, the sailors have dignified with the name of Kings: however, there are very few that deserve that title. When they are at war with each other, as they often are, the people that are taken, on both sides, are sold for slaves: and it is not uncommon for the nearest of kin to sell each other, when they have power so to do. Though they come on board the ships naked, they seldom fail of stealing something or other, tho' never so well watched, they are such dextrous thieves. Some make Guirey to extend from Cape Blanco, in 20 degrees of N. latitude, to Angola in 10 degrees of S. while others include Guirey within the bounds of the coast above mentioned; but this is a distinction of very little consequence. The French pretend, that some sailors from Die, first discovered this country in 1562; but this seems to be a fable: however, it is certain that the Portuguese found it out in the beginning of the 15th century, and began to trade here.

• GUIREY NEW is a country to the S. of Asia, very imperfectly discovered hitherto; nor is it certain, whether it be an island or a continent. Those that have visited the coast affirm, that there is a great probability of carrying on a good trade with the natives, who are all black. But none have thought it worth their while to make any such attempt hitherto.

• GUINGAMP, a town of France, in Bretagne, and in the duchy of Penthièvre, 258 miles W. of Paris. Lon. 14. 39. lat. 48. 54.

• GUIPESCOA, a small province in the N. part of Spain, bounded on the E. by Bafques; on the N. by the ocean; on the W. by Biscay; and on the S. by Navarre. It abounds in most things, except wheat. Tolosa is the capital town.

GUISE, a small town of France, in Picardy, and in Thierache, with a very strong castle, and the title of a duchy. It is seated on the river Ouse, 15 miles N. E. of St. Quintin, 25 S. E. of Cambrai, and 95 N. by E. of Paris. Lon. 21. 17. lat. 49. 54.

• GUINDLINGS, a town of Germany, in Suabia, with a handsome castle. It is seated on the river Danube, 15 miles from Ulm, and 8 N. of Burgaw. Lon. 28. 6. lat. 48. 36.

• GUINDLISHIM, a town of Germany, in Suabia, and in Gracchow, seated on the river Neckar, with a castle on an eminence.

GUINLET, one of the channels through which flaps enter the mouth of the river Thames.

GUINZBERG, a town of Germany, in the circle of Suabia, and in the margravate of Burgaw. It is seated on the E. side of the Danube, 20 miles N. E. of Ulm. Lon. 27. 50. lat. 48. 35.

• GUINZENHAUSEN, a town of Germany, in Franconia, 5 miles from Weissemburg. It is seated on the river Altmühl, near a forest, and belongs to the Margrave of Anspach.

GURIEL, a province of Asia, in Mingrelia, bounded on the E. by Mount Caucasus; on the N. by Imeretta; on the W. by the Black Sea; and on the S. by Turkey. The inhabitants are a sort of Christians, but are very ignorant, and pay little or no regard to its precepts; for they are great great thieves, treacherous, cruel, drunkards, and thameless. They marry their nearest relations, without any scruple; and if the husband eat-kes a gallant with his wife, the latter is quit by giving the former a pig, which they all three eat very lovingly together. Their principal trade consists in slaves; and they often sell one another to the Turks, especially the females, who are very handsome.

GERR, a town of Germany, in Carinthia, with a bishop's see. It is seated on the river Gurk, 25 miles N. of Clagenfurt, and 55 S. E. of Salzburg. Lon. 31. 50.
lat. 47. 10.

GESTROW, a considerable town of Germany, in Lower Saxony, and in the dutchy of Mecklinburg, with a magnificent castle, or palace, where the Dukes reside. Their religion is according to the confession of Augsburg. It is 12 miles S. W. of Rostock, 27 E. of Wis-mar, and 35 N. E. of Schwerin. Lon.
30. 18. lat. 53. 57.

GUTSKOW, a town of Germany, in the circle of Upper Saxony, and capital of a county of the same name, belonging to Sweden. It is seated on the river Peene, 10 miles S. W. of Wolgatz, and 50 E. by N. of Gultrow. Lon. 31. 32.
lat. 54. 4.

GUTTA, a town of Hungary, seated on the E. side of the Danube, opposite to the island of Schut, 25 miles E. of Presburg. Lon. 35. 35. lat. 48. 10.

GUZURAT, a province of Asia, in Indo-stan, and in the dominions of the Great Mogul. It is made an island by the river Indus, or Sindy; and the inhabitants are still Gentoes, or Pagans, driving their old trade of thieving, or pirating; for they plunder all that come within their power, both by sea and land.
The Great Mogul would certainly restrain them, if their country was passible for an army; but there are many low grounds, marshes, and lakes, which there is no passing over but by boats. However, there is some trade in cotton, coin, and coarse cloth, and in the shells of a fish, in the shape of a perriwinckle, and of the circumference of a man's arm. These being sawed into rings, the women use them for ornaments, and wear them on their arms. The next sea-port town is called Baet, whose inhabitants are nothing but a nest of pirates and robbers.
Mangeroul admits of trade for coarse callicoes, wheat, butter, pulse, pepper, Sugar, and betel-nuts. It is inhabited by Banyans, who never eat any flesh; and the wild-deer and antelopes are so common, that they come into the houses.

Dieu, the next harbour, has been taken notice of in its proper place.

• GUMMARS, a village of Denbighshire, in N. Wales, with one fair, on May 6, for cattle.

GYRHORN, a town of Germany, in the circle of Lower Saxony, and in the dutchy of Lunenburg. It is seated on the rivers Aller and Isa, 25 miles N. of Brunfwick, 22 S. of Zell, and 45
N. E. of Hanover. Lon. 28. 21. lat.
52. 36.

GYULA, a town of Hungary, which was formerly fortified; but, being taken by the Turks in 1566, the fortifications were demolished.

H

H AAG, or HAC, a town of Germany, in the dutchy of Bavaria, seated upon a hill, on the W. side of the river Inn, and is capital of a county. It is 32 miles N. E. of Munich. Lon. 29.
58. lat. 48. 16.

• HABAR, an ancient town of Asia, in Persia, lying on the road from Sultania to Com in Hac-Agemil. Lon. 67. 0.
lat. 36. 12.

HABAT, a province of Asia, in Barbary, and in the kingdom of Fez. It is surrounded by the Mediterranean, the Straits of Gibraltar, and the Atlantick Ocean. The principal towns are Arzilla, Tetuan, and Ceuta, which last is in possession of the Spaniards.

HABSBERG, or HAPSBERG, an ancient castle of Switserland, in the canton of Bern. It is the place where the ancient counts of Hapsburg resided, and is seated near the lake of Lucern, and to the E. of the town of that name. Lon. 25.
45. lat. 47. 22.

HACNA, a sea-port town of S. America, in Terra Firma, seated at the mouth of a river of the same name. It produces the fruits proper to those parts, a great deal of salt, some gold, and precious stones; and here the Spanish galleons touch at their arrival in S. America, from whence exprestes are sent to all the settlements to give them notice of
it. Lon. 305. 35. lat. 11. 30.

• HACZAC, a small territory of Transilvania,

vania, on the confines of Walachia, with the title of a county.

HADAMAK, a town of Germany, in the circle of the Lower Rhine, and in Westphalia, with a handsome castle; a branch of the house of Nassau usually resides here, and is situated near the river Elfs, 22 miles N. W. of Menez, and 15 E. of Coblentz. Lon. 45. 41. lat. 50. 21.

HADDINGTON, a parliament town of Scotland, in L. Lothian, which sends one member to parliament. It is surrounded with the seats of the nobility and gentry; and there are the ruins of a magnificent church. It is 18 miles E. of Edinburgh. Lon. 15. 10. lat. 55. 50.

• HADDELAND, a small territory of Germany, in the circle of Lower Saxony, and dutchy of Bremen. It has nothing remarkable except the bailiwick of Ribbenbutel, which lies along the river Elbe, and belongs to the Hanburghers.

• HADRAMAUT, a town of Africa, in the kingdom of Morocco, and in the province of Hea. It was taken by assault in 1514, by the Portuguese, who carried away a great many beautiful slaves.

HADSBURG, a sea port town of Denmark, in the duchy of Skjwick, with a strong citadel, built upon a small island. It is seated on a bay of the Baltic Sea, and has a well frequented harbour. It is 22 miles E. of Ripen, and 55 N. of Skjwick. Lon. 27. 10. lat. 55. 2.

HADRAMAUT, a town and province of Asia, in Happy Arabia, 115 miles W. of Caravan. Lon. 67. 3. lat. 14. 40.

HADLEY, a town in Surrey, with a market on Mondays, and two fairs, on Wednesday, for tins, and October 15, for butter, cheese, and so. It is seated on a bottom on the river Brentan, and is a pretty large town; and has a very handsome church, and a chapel or else, with one Presbyterian meeting. It has about 600 houses, a few of which are good brick ones, and the rest but indifferent. The streets are pretty broad, but not paved. Large quantities of yarn are spun here for the New-England manufacture; and this town had once a considerable woollen manufactory, which is now decayed. It is 20 miles S. E. of Bury, and 64 N. E. of London. Lon. 18. 35. lat. 51. 7.

• HADSTOCK, a village in Essex, with one fair on July 23, for horse.

HAELSINGLAND, a subdivision of Northland, in Sweden, famous for the valour of its inhabitants, who took several towns, and gave them their own names.

• HAEMONIA, the ancient name for the N. part of Thracia, which extended to Mount Haemus, now called Cebus, Bazar, and Marza, as far as the Euxine or Black Sea.

HAIMUS, the highest mountain of Turkey, in Europe, in Romania, which is now called Collagnazzar.

HAILEM. See HARLEM.

• HAILOUT, a town of Flanders, 5 miles from Ghent, and 5 from Arr. Lon. 20. 12. lat. 50. 43.

• HAIJAR, a town of Asia, in Arabia, and in the province of Haggas, 87 miles N. of Medina. Lon. 57. 50. lat. 25. 40.

HAJIAS, a province of Asia, in Arabia, bounded on the W. by the Red Sea, on the N. by Arabia Petrea, and on the E. by Thebais.

HAGUE, or GRAVEN HAGUE, a town of the United Provinces, in Holland, which geographers pretend is but a village, and yet it may compare with the largest towns or cities in Europe, with regard to its extent, the number and beauty of its palaces, its streets, its agreeable walks, and its great trade, especially in books. The greatest part of the houses have the appearance of palaces, and there are at least 4000 gardens. It is seated 4 miles from the sea, and there is a pavement across the Downs, with trees on each side, which leads to Scheveling, near the sea-side. The ancient counts of Holland resided here, and tho' it be 500 years ago, the wood-work of the palace is yet found. The stadtholder, or governor of the country, generally resides here; and it is the place where the states of the United Provinces assemble, and here the foreign ministers are admitted to audience. As the streets are very broad and long, it is a pleasant sight to behold to many coaches and equipages belonging to the foreign and nobles, in Landseme liveries, driving along them. Here also the supreme court of justice are held, which, together with the particularities above-mentioned, render it so populous, and so much frequented by foreigners, that it is a great wonder that they have but two churches to perform divine service in. It is 5 miles N. W. of Delft, 8 S. W. of Leyden, 10 N. W. of Rotterdam, and 50 S. W. of Amsterdam. Lon. 21. 45. lat. 52. 4.

• HA-

• HAGUE: French, Hague, a town of the Netherlands, in the province of Holland, and in the county of Zeeland, on the river Scheldt, 12 miles N. of Rotterdam, and 12 S. of Delft. Lon. 21. 45. lat. 52. 4.

HAINAN, a considerable island of Asia, belonging to China, which lies to the N. of the gulph of Cochin China, and to the S. of the province of Canton, from which it is 12 miles distant. It is about 400 miles in circumference, and the soil of the northern part is level; but the southern and eastern are very mountainous, among which some of the valleys produce two crops of rice every year. The inhabitants are mostly a wild sort of people, and great cowards, for 50 Chinese will put 1000 of them to flight. In general they are a short and deformed people, and the colour of their skins is reddish. They are only clothed from the waist downward, and they are addicted to painting their faces like other savages. There are mines of gold and lapis-lazuli, which last is carried to HAMADAN. See AMALAN.

• HAMAH, a town of Asia, in Syria, seated among the hills. Some geographers take it for Apamea, which is a great mistake; for this is now called Afamayah, and is a day's journey from hence. It has all along been a considerable place, and has a castle standing on a hill. The town is very large; and as it is seated on the ascent of a hill, the houses being built one above another, make a very agreeable appearance. Many of the best houses are half ruined; but those that are still standing, with the mosques, are built of black and white stoner, as well as the castle. The river Assi, formerly called Orontes, runs close by the side, and tills the ditches about it, which are cut very deep into the solid rock. The bazars, or market places, are pretty good; and they have a trade for linen of their own manufacture. It is 85 miles N. by E. of Damascus, and 78 S. by W. of Aleppo. Lon. 54. 50. lat. 35. 15.

HAMBURG, one of the largest towns in Germany, there being no less than 5020 persons that are born and die here every year. The ancient town itself is pretty large; to which they have added the new town, almost as big as the former. Most of the houses are new, built after the manner of the Dutch, and are richly furnished within. The principal streets of the ancient town have long and broad canals, which are filled twice every 24 hours by the tides. These are not only useful for trade, but serve to keep the houses and the streets clean. It is seated on the river Elbe, which is of vast advantage to the inhabitants; and on the side of Holstein is the Alster, which, before it enters the town by sluices, forms a fine basin that cannot be equalled in Germany; and there are small boats continually rowing on it for pleasure. Their corn all comes by water; and thousands of horned cattle are brought from Jutland and Denmark.

Holstein abounds in calves, sheep, and butter; and Mecklenburg supplies them with hogs, game, and wood; and they have garden-stuff and fruit brought from all parts in cart. The canals are always covered with boats full of sea-fish of all sorts, according as they are in season, all the year round. Hamburg is well fortified all round about, and there is always a sufficient garrison to defend it, with a fine train of artillery. On the ramparts there are handsome walks, on which they take the air in fine weather. The burghers mount guard themselves, and are divided into several companies. The streets are well lighted every night, and there is a guard, which patroles all over the city. This is a pleasant place for foreigners; because, besides the cheapness of provisions, they are sure to meet with people of their own nation; and there are operas, plays, assemblies, balls, concerts, masquerades, walks, and other parties of pleasure for their diversion. The senate of this town is composed of 4 burgo-masters, of whom one only is a tradesman; 4 syndics; 24 senators, of whom 11 are men of letters, and the rest tradesmen; 4 secretaries, one of which is a prothonotary, and another belongs to the archives; in sum, that the whole senate consists of 76 persons. The whole town is divided into five parishes; and out of each are formed several colleges, or companies, who take care of public affairs, unless there is any thing too high for their determination, and then it is judged by a sort of general assembly. Our room will not allow us to take particular notice of their breweries, their public cellars, their timber-yard; their good regulations to shopfires, their pest-house, their churches, and their several pious foundations. It is a place of great trade; which they carry on with Portugal, Spain, France, Tuscany, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Italy, and Russia. They also send vessels every year to Greenland to catch walrus, and there are not less than 200 ships at anchor belonging to foreign nations, as you may see before the city; and there is a large handsome exchange, where the merchants meet. The inhabitants are all Lutherans, and none but the English have the liberty of performing divine service in a chapel of their own. Other religions are tolerated at Altena, which is a large town near the harbour of Hamburg; except the Jews, who have no synagogues. Besides the 5 principal churches, there have 11 smaller ones for particular occasions, some of which belong to hospitals. The cathedral of Notre-Dame is a very fine structure; and has a chapter, consisting of 12 canons, who are all Protestants. It is advantageously seated on the N. bank of the Elbe, 45 miles N. W. of Luncenburg, 37 S. W. of Lubeck, 60 S. of Sleswick, and 53 N. E. of Bremen. Lon. 27. 28. lat. 53. 43.

* HAMELBERG, a town of Germany, in Franconia, and in the territory of the Abbey of Fulda. It is seated on the river Saab, 25 miles S. E. of Fulda. Lon. 27. 56. lat. 50. 10.

HAMELIN, a strong town of Germany, in Lower Saxony, and in the duchy of Calenburg, at the extremity of the duchy of Brunswick, of which it is the key. It is agreeably seated at the confluence of the rivers Hamel and Weser, 22 miles S. W. of Hanover, 40 E. of Paderborn, and 45 S. W. of Brunswick. Lon. 27. 10. 52. 13.

* HAMIEZ-METAGARA, a town of Africa, in Barbary, and in the kingdom of Fez. It is remarkable for its gardens.

HAMILTON, a town of Scotland, in Clydesdale, with the title of a duchy. It is a very pretty neat town, and the Duke of Hamilton has a very magnificent palace and a large park close by it. It is seated on the river Clyde, 11 miles S. E. of Glasgow. Lon. 13. 45. lat. 55. 40.

HAMMERSMITH, a village in Middlesex, 4 miles W. of London, and a little to the N. of the Thames; it is pretty large, and full of handsome houses.

the itching. The air is wholesome, and the soil various; and here is the famous New Forest, for the making of which King William the Conqueror demolished 36 churches. It has 9 walks, as many keepers, a bow-bearer, and a lord-warden. The commodities are corn, wool, wood, iron, sea-fish, and particularly lobsters and oysters. Here are also some woollen-manufactures; but it is most noted for its excellent honey, and the best bacon in the Kingdom. It sends 20 members to parliament; that is, 18 for the towns, and 2 for the county; and Southampton is the capital town.

HAMPSHIRE NEW, a province of N. America, in New-England; bounded on the N. by New-Scotland; on the E. by the ocean; on the S. by Massachusetts-Bay; and on the W. by New-York. It is ruled by a governor and a council appointed by the King, and a house of representatives. As it is a very proper country for producing naval stores, a great part of it has been appropriated for furnishing masts and yards for the royal navy.

* HAMPTON, a town in Gloucestershire, with a market on Tuesdays, and two fairs; viz. on Trinity-Munday, and October 29, for cattle and horses. It is seated on the Cotswold-Hills, and it had formerly a nunnery belonging to it. It is 12 miles S. of Gloucester, and 90 W. of London. Lon. 15. 20. lat. 51. 58.

HAMPTON-COURT, a town of Middlesex, famous for a royal palace, which was built by cardinal Wolsey, and who gave it to Henry VIII. The buildings, garden, and park, to which King William made many additions, are about four miles in circumference, and are watered on three sides by the Thames, over which there is a bridge to Kingston. It is seated on the N. side of the Thames, 22 miles S. W. of London. Lon. 17. 18. lat. 51. 25.

HANSTEAD, a pleasant village of Middlesex, 5 miles N. of London. As the air is exceeding good, it is well furnished with fire seats built in an elegant manner, and is much resorted to in the summer time by all sorts of people; as for the medicinal waters, formerly in request, they are now much neglected.

* HAMSTREET, a village in Kent, with one fair, on May 14, for hories, cattle, and pedlars ware.

HANAU, a handsome and strong town of Germany, in the circle of the Lower Rhine, in Weteravia, capital of a county of the same name. It belongs to its own prince, and had a handsome castle or palace. It is divided into two towns, the Old and the New, and is pretty well fortified. They admit Jews to live among them. It is seated near the river Maine, 10 miles E. of Francfort, 12 N. W. of Aschaffenburg, and 15 N. E. of Darmstadt. Lon. 26. 35. lat. 49. 58.

HANOVER, a town of Germany, in the circle of Lower Saxony, and capital of the King of Great-Britain's German dominions. The elector resided here before he ascended the throne of Great-Britain, in a palace which makes no great show outwardly, but within is richly furnished. The regency of this country is administered in the same manner as if the sovereign was present. It is a large well-built town, and is pretty well fortified. The established religion is the Lutheran; but the Roman Catholics are tolerated, and have a handsome church. It has suffered greatly by the French, who got possession of it and the neighbouring counties in 1757; but they were soon after driven from thence. Hanover is noted for a particular sort of beer, which is reckoned excellent by the people of those parts. It is agreeably seated in a sandy plain, where there are very fine meadows, on the river Leyne, which divides it in two. It is 15 miles E. of Newstadt, and 15 W. of Brunswick. Lon. 27. 40. lat. 22. 5.

* HANOVER, the territory of, comprehended at first nothing but the county of Lawenrood; but now it contains the dutchy of Zell, Sax Lawenburg, Bremen, Lunenburg, the principality of Verden, Grubenhagen, enhagen, and Oberwald. George I. king of Great-Britain, was the first that gained possession of all these states, which mostly lie between the rivers Weser and Elbe, and extend 200 miles in length from S. W. but the breadth is different, being in some places 150 miles, in others, but 50. The produce of them is timber, cattle, hogs, rum, beer, and bacon, besides a little silver, copper, lead, iron, vitriol, brimstone, quick-silver, and coppers. However, the trade is not very great in any of these articles.

HANSE-TOWNS, are a society of sea-port towns, united together for their common interest, and for the protection of their trade; they are so called, from the German word, Hanse. There were a great number of these at first; but about the year 1500 they began to be weakened, and now there are none that have the Hanseatic government, except Bremen and Lubbeck.

HADAMER, a considerable and populous town of Germany, capital of the Lower Palatinate, with a celebrated university. It is noted for its greatness, which holds 700 horse-holds, generally kept full of good Rhenish wine. The island is a pleasant rich country, and was a famous seat of learning; but it has undergone for many calamities, that it is nothing now to what it was formerly. It was first reduced to a heap of ruins in 1622, by the Spaniards; and the rich library was transported, partly to Vienna, and partly to the Vatican at Rome. After this it enjoyed the benefits of peace, till the Protestant ecclesiastical house became extinct, and a bloody war ensued, in which not only the castle was seized, but the tombs and bodies of the elders were shamefully violated and pillaged. This happened in 1693; and the people of the Palatinate were obliged to leave their dwellings, and to go for refuge into foreign countries. To add to these misfortunes, the elector resided at Mannheim, and carried most of the people of distinction along with him; so that it is uncertain whether Heidelberg will ever recover itself or not, though they have begun to rebuild some of the edifications. The great town was broken to pieces in 1693, by the French, and at great expence in 1729 was repaired. It stands on the river Neckar, over which there is a handsome bridge, 15 miles S. E. of Spire, 17 S. E. of Mainz, 42 N. of Frankfurt, and 37 S. E. of Mentz. Lon. 26. 23. lat. 49. 25.

- HEIDZSA, Sr. an island of the Atlantick ocean, which consists of one steep high rock, and looks like a castle in the middle of the sea; and there is no landing place except one, which is defended by a platform of 40 guns; beyond which is a fort, where the governor resides; and near it is a town of 40 or 50 houses, to which the inhabitants bring fresh provisions when any ships arrive. It is about 20 miles in circumference; and the soil wherewith the rock is covered produces all sort of vegetables and fruits except corn, which will not come to perfection, because it is eaten up by the rats. They are about 200 families, descended from the English, it being seized by the E. India company, after being taken it from the Dutch; and it was designed by them to be a place of anchorage for the E. India ships, as they go to or do not from the E. Indies.

- It is 1200 miles W. of the coast of Africa, and 1300 E. of the coast of S. America. Lon. 11. 0. lat. S. 16. 0.

provost is a prince of the empire, and lord of the town. It is seated on the river Jaxt, 17 miles S. E. of Hall, and 25 S. W. of Anspach. Lon. 28. 53. lat. 49. 2.

ELY, a town or city of Cambridgeshire, with a bishop's see, and a market on Saturdays. The fairs are, on Ascension day, for horses; on Thursday in the week that St. Luke's day falls in, that is, October 18, for horses, cheese, and hops. It is seated on an island of the same name, in a fenny country, on the banks of the river Ouse, which renders it very unhealthy. The bishop here has the same power as in a county-palatine, for he appoints a judge, holds the assizes, gaol-delivery, and quarter-sessions of the peace, for the liberty; and yet it is but an indifferent place, though the cathedral is a stately structure, which has a lantern of curious architecture; and has also one church. The city consists of only about 600 good houses, and has but one good street, well paved, the rest being not paved, and very dirty. The assizes are held here every twelve months. The river is navigable from Lynn, and the town carries on a pretty good trade; it is 17 miles N. of Cambridge, 30 S. of King's-Lynn, and 69 N. by E. of London. Lon. 17. 50. lat. 52. 24.

* ELY, a village of Glamorganshire, in S. Wales, with one fair, on July 22, for cattle.

EMBDEN, a handsome and strong town of Germany, in the circle of Westphalia, and capital of a county of the same name, called also E. Friedland, with a very good harbour. It is divided into three parts, the Old-town, the Falkien, and the two suburbs. The things worth notice are, the town-house, the library, and the cathedral church. The most part of the inhabitants are protestants, or Calvinists, and there are some Lutherans, papists, and Jews. It was formerly under the protection of the United Provinces, but they sold their right to the king of Prussia in 1744, to whom it is now subject. It is seated on the river Ems, near the sea, 25 miles N. E. of Groningen, and 45 N. W. of Oldenburg. Lon. 24. 38. lat. 53. 20.

EMBOLY, a town of Turkey, in Europe, and in Macedonia, with a Greek archbishop's see. It is seated on the river Stromona, 40 miles N. E. of Salonichi, and 5 W. of Contestia. Lon. 42. 38. lat. 40. 52.

EMERUN, or AMBRUN, a considerable town of France, in Dauphiny, and capital of the Embronnais, with an archbishop's see, whose cathedral is a handsome structure. It was taken by the duke of Savoy in 1692. It is seated near the river Durance, upon a craggy rock, 17 miles E. of Gap, 35 N. E. of Digne, and 55 S. W. of Grenoble. Lon. 24. 9. lat. 44. 34.

* EMESSA, an ancient town of Asia, in Syria, and in the government of the Bashaw of Damascus. There are still several magnificent ruins, that shew it was formerly a magnificent city.

EMMERICH, a large, rich, and handsome town of Germany, in the circle of Westphalia, and dutchy of Cleves. It carries on a considerable trade with Holland, and is seated near the Rhine, 8 miles E. of Cleves, and 20 S. E. of Nimeguen. Lon. 23. 56. lat. 51. 49.

* EMMEEGREEN, a village in Dorsetshire, with one fair, on Tuesday before Holy-Thursday, for all sorts of cattle.

EMPOLI, a town of Italy, in Tuscany, with a bishop's see. It is seated on the river Arno, 17 miles S. W. of Florence, and 27 E. of Pisa. Lon. 28. 40. lat. 43. 42.

EMS, a river of Germany, which has its source in the county of Lippe, in Westphalia. It runs first westward, through the county of Ribberg, and then turning N. passes through the county of Tecklenberg, and continuing its course N. through the county of Embsen, discharges itself into the Dolart-bay, at the town of Embden.

ENCHUYSSEN, a sea-port town of the United Provinces, in Holland, which was formerly much more considerable than at present, because its harbour is filling up every day. It is seated on the Zuiderzee, 8 miles N. E. of Horn, and 25 N. E. of Amsterdam. Lon. 22. 55. lat. 52. 49.

* ENCOPEN, a town of Sweden, in the province of Upland, seated on Meller-Lake, 40 miles W. of Stockholm. Lon. 34. 5. lat. 59. 50.

* ENDING, a town of Germany, in Sussia, and in Brisgaw; it was formerly free and imperial, but now belongs to the house of Austria. It is seated near the Rhine, 10 miles below Brisach.

ENFIELD, a town of Middlesex, with a market on Saturdays, and one fair, on November 29, for horses, cows, and cheese. It stands in Enfield-Chafe, and

* ENGADINE, a country of the Grisons, in Germany. It is a valley, and lies on the side of the river Inn, from the source of that river as far as Tyrol. It has no considerable town, though it is divided into the higher and lower.

ENGERS, a town of Germany, in the circle of the Lower Rhine, and in the electorate of Treves, or Triers, capital of a county of the same name. It is seated on the Rhine, 17 miles N. of Coblentz. Lon. 14. 51. lat. 50. 35.

ENGELIN, a rich town of the Netherlands, in the county of Fainhaud, famous for a battle fought near it in 1692. between the French and English, when the former were victorious; this is commonly called the battle of Steinkirk. It is 15 miles S. W. of Brussels, and 15 N. of Mons. Lon. 21. 40. lat. 50. 40.

ENGLA, or ENGINA, an island of Turkey, in Europe, lying on a gulf of the same name, between Acaya and the Morza, and is about 21 miles S. of Athens, 30 E. of Corinth, and is about 30 in circumference. It is a fruitful country, and abounds with partridges to such a degree, that the people are summoned annually to destroy their eyes, in order to preserve their corn. There is a town upon it, of the same name, which consists of about 600 houses. Lon. 41. 44. lat. 37. 45.

ENGLAND, a considerable country of Europe, and the principal part of the Island of Great Britain, surrounded on all sides by the sea, except, where Scotland lies, to the N. It is 400 measured miles in length, from Berwick upon Tweed to Chichester; and 370 in breadth, from Dover in Kent to Senan in Cornwall. But in other places it varies greatly, particularly in the breadth; for it grows narrower (but not gradually) from the southern coast to the town of Berwick: therefore it would be worth while, for a more particular account of it, to consult a good map. It is happily situated with regard to trade, there being many good towns and harbours on the sea-coast, which are particularly taken notice of in their proper places. The air is generally very good and wholesome, except in the hundreds of Essex and Kent, the fens in Lincolnshire and Cambridgehire, and some other low marshes near the sea. The winters indeed are sometimes rainy and foggy, and the weather is subject to great variations, which, however, does not much impair the health of the inhabitants who are accustomed thereto, for they generally live as long as in any other countries, and we have frequent instances of people who have lived to a very great age; particularly Henry Jenkins, a Yorkshire man, who was 168 years old when he died; and Thomas Parr, of Shropshire, who was 152, and might have lived longer, if he had not been sent for up to court as a curiosity. The frequent rains, tho' they may sometimes damage the hay and corn, have yet their peculiar advantages; for upon that account they have generally good pastures throughout the year. There are thunder, storms, hurricanes, and earthquakes, as in other countries; but they are, in general, less violent, and do less damage. The principal rivers are the Thames, the Severn, the Trent, and the Ouse; besides a great number of others, which will be taken notice of in their proper places. England is a level and open country; for, what hills there are, of any note, are chiefly towards the north: for this reason, it is extremely proper for the diversion of hunting. There are some remarkable forests; as Windfor Forest, the Forest of Dean, and the New Forest; which last was made by William the Conqueror, who demolished several towns and villages, and thirty-six parish-churches, in order to make it. The soil is different in different parts, but in general very fruitful. There are indeed many heaths, downs, and barren places, which, however, generally produce grass enough to feed flocks of sheep: besides, it is thought, that the care and diligence of good husbandmen might turn many of them to great advantage. It produces all sorts of fruits, trees, and herbs which are proper to the climate: it must be acknowledged there are no vines that are so fit to produce good wine, as in warmer countries; but then there are variety enough which yield good grapes that are made use of as other fruits. However, there are great quantities of cyder, perry, mead, and several kinds of made wines; but the principal drink of the generality, is beer, or ale. The English wool is famous all over the world, as well as the manufactures made therefrom; particularly broad-cloth, which is not to be equalled in any other country. There might also be excellent linen-manufactures, if it was worth while; but as they are come to a great perfection in all kinds of linen in Scotland and Ireland, where they can be made cheaper, we are now chiefly supplied from thence: what linen we have made amongst us, is generally the coarser sort, known by the name of Dowlas. Here are all sorts of materials for building; and there are excellent stone-quarries in several parts. The firing is pit-coal, wood, and turf, which last is used where coals are dear; but in most counties there is plenty of pit-coal. It is generally said that there might be found coal-mines on Black-Heath; but they are not permitted to be opened, because the ships which bring coals from Newcastle to London, are a nursery for seamen. No country in the world is better provided with horses of all sorts, and for every use; and particularly with regard to race-horses, they are seldom equalled by those of other countries. There are dogs of every kind, except wolf-dogs, which, since the wolves were destroyed in England, have been generally neglected; however, the race of these animals is still maintained in Ireland. But there is one sort that is not to be equalled in any part of the world, which is the bull dog: for these will not only attack the fiercest bull, but any kind of wild beast; nor can any thing, when they have once fastened upon the animal, oblige them to let go their hold. But, what is more strange, when any of them is transported beyond sea, they lose their courage; and the same is said of English cocks. With regard to minerals, there are mines of iron, tin, lead, copper, and in some places silver, besides others of less note. As for the curiosities, they will be mentioned in their proper places, when the counties in particular are treated of. As for the manners, customs, and abilities of the inhabitants, nothing need be said, because they fall under every one's own observations; nor yet of the government, religion, and laws, of which very few can be ignorant. Lat. from 49 50. to 51. 45.

ENGLAND NEW, a country of N. America, settled by the English. It comprehends four parts, viz. Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Rhode-Island, and Providence plantation. It is bounded by Canada on the N. W. by Nova-Scotia, or Acadia, on the N. E. by the ocean on the E. and S. and by New-

York on the W. being 300 miles in length, and 200 in breadth. As it lies between 41 and 46 degree of latitude, one would imagine the air should be temperate at all times of the year; and yet we find the winters are far more severe, and last longer, than in Old England; the ground being covered with snow, and the frost continuing for several months. This renders the summers more short, but then they are much hotter than with us. However, we do not find but the climate is as healthy as most of our American plantations; and we have reason to believe, that they all will be without exception in this respect, when the woods are in some measure cleared away, and the countries become more open, that the air may have a more free circulation. The parts above-mentioned have all distinct charters, and have generally different governors. That of Massachusetts colony is appointed by the crown, as well as all the officers of the admiralty; and all the judges, justices, and sheriffs, are nominated by the governor and council. The governor has a negative in the choice of any member of the council; nor is any act of government valid, without the governor's consent in writing: besides, all laws of the general assembly are sent to England to receive the approbation of the council. The colonies of Connecticut and Rhode-Island are distinct governments, and independent of each other; but their constitution is much the same. They have power to elect their own governor, deputy-governor, council, and assembly; to appoint officers, both civil and military; and to make their own laws. The colony of New Hampshire depends immediately on the crown, and the King appoints their governor, lieutenant-governor, and council, magistrates, and officers; but the freemen elect their representatives, or lower house. However, the laws of all these are liable to be altered and repealed by the parliament of Great Britain. We shall say nothing of the productions of this country, as they have nothing different from the colonies round about them. And as for the uncommon animals, they must be more scarce than in other parts of America, because New England is in a manner surrounded by the other plantations, and as they take no care of the breed of any creatures but what have been brought from Europe. - near the sea is generally low; but farther up the country there are a few hills, and the N. E. part is rocky and mountainous. When the wind is at N. W. it must needs blow over a vast tract of land covered with snow and ice, which is the principal reason that the winter is so very severe in these parts. Nothing need to be said of the manners or disposition of the inhabitants, as they all originally came from England. With regard to their religion, they are of the independent persuasion; and they at first persecuted every other sect that differed from them; nor would they suffer any of them to have any posts or places under the government. However, at present, there is a greater harmony among Christians of all persuasions.
- * ENO, or ENOS, a town of Turkey in Asia, and in Romania, near a gulph of the same name, with a Greek archbishop's see. It is 125 miles W. of Constantinople. Lon. 43. 50. lat. 40. 46.
- ENS, a town of Germany, in Upper Austria, seated on a river of the same name, 12 miles S. E. of Linz, and 90 W. of Vienna. Lon. 32. 22. lat. 48. 12.
- * ENS, a river of Germany that rises near St. Weit, in the archbishopric of Salzburg; it crosses one part of Stiria, washes Steir and Ens in Austria; soon after which it falls into the Danube.
- ENSISHEIM, a town of France, in Upper Alsace, of which it pretends to be the capital. It is seated on the river Ill, 10 miles S. W. of Brisach, and 45 S. by W. of Strasburg. Lon. 25. 2. lat. 47. 52.
- ENSKIRKEN, a town of Germany, in Westphalia, and in the dutchy of Juliers. It is 10 miles N. W. of Juliers, and 15 S. W. of Cologne. Lon. 23. 56. lat. 50. 58.
- ENTRE-DUERO-F-MINHO, a province of the kingdom of Portugal, about 45 miles in length, and as much in breadth. Braga is the capital town.
- ENTRE-TAYO, and GUADIANO. See ALLENTEJO.
- ENTREVAUX, a town of France, in Provence, seated on the river Var. Lon. 24. 46. lat. 44. 1.
- * EPERIES, a town of Upper Hungary, and capital of the county of Saros, remarkable for its fairs and mines of salt. It is seated on the river Tatzza, 20 miles N. of Cassovia, 90 S. by W. of Sando-

- merz, and 125 E. by N. of Presburg. Lon. 38. 36. lat. 48. 50.
- EPHESUS, an ancient and celebrated town of Turkey in Asia, and in Natolia, and in that part of it which was anciently called Ionia. It is now called Ajafaloue; and there is no city in the world that has so many remains of its ancient splendour. There is nothing to be seen about it but heaps of marble, overturned walls, columns, chapters, and pieces of statues, heaped upon one another. The fortress, which is upon an eminence, seems to be a work of the Greek Emperors. The eastern gate has three Basso-Relievos, taken from some ancient monuments; and that in the middle was constructed by the Romans. The most remarkable structure of all, was, The Temple of Diana, which the ancient Christians had turned into a church; but it is now so entirely ruined, that it is no easy matter to find out the ground-plot: however, there are some ruins of the walls, and of five or six marble columns, all of a piece, 40 feet in length, and 7 in diameter. It was counted one of the seven wonders of the world. It is seated near a gulph of the same name, and has still a good harbour, 40 miles S. of Smyrna. Lon. 48. 8. lat. 37. 58.
- EPHROS, a province of Turkey in Europe, bounded on the N. by Albania, on the E. by Thessalia, on the S. by Achaia, and on the W. by the sea. It has the name of New Epirus, to distinguish it from the ancient country of that name. It is divided into two parts, Chimera, or Canina, which lies to the N. and Cirta, which is to the S. St. Janina is the capital town. It is all in the hands of the Turks, except Parga, which belongs to the Venetians.
- EPPING, a town of Essex, with two markets, on Thursdays for cattle, and on Fridays for provisions; and two fairs, viz. on Whit-Tuesday, and October 13, for horses, cows, and sheep, which are kept in Epping-street, a hamlet about a mile and a half from the church. It is the principal place upon Epping-Forest; and is 17 miles N. by E. of London. Lon. 17. 30. lat. 51. 40.
- EPPINCEN, a town of Germany, in the palatinate of the Rhine, with a castle. It is seated on the river Elfsas, 17 miles N. E. of Philipsburg, and 15 N. W. of Hailbron. Lon. 27. 34. lat. 39. 12.
- EPROM, a town in Surry, much frequen-ed on account of the waters; and in the evening it is well supplied with provisions every day; but it has only one fair, on July 22, for toys. It lies in a pleasant situation, and is full of houses of entertainment, for those that resort to the wells; and on the neighbouring Downs there are horse-races every year. The waters have a purging quality. It is 9 miles N. E. by N. of Dorking, and 15 S. W. by S. of London. Lon. 17. 15. Lat. 51. 25.

* ERWORTH, a village in Lincolnshire, 8 miles S. S. W. of Bury, with one fair, on September 9, for cattle, hemp, and flax.

ERZBURG, a town of Germany, capital of Upper Thuringia, with an university. It was formerly imperial, but is now subject to the Elector of Mentz. It is a large place, containing 300 streets; but it is thinly peopled. It is defended by two strong forts, and is surrounded with ditches full of water. A fire happened here in 1756, which burnt down 100 houses, and several churches. It is seated on the river Gere, 30 miles S. E. of Mulhausen, 20 S. E. of Wimar, and 50 N. by E. of Coburg. Lon. 28. 50. Lat. 51. 4. Its territory comprehends 75 villages, and the inhabitants are at so small a distance from 26 towns that they can go to each and return the same day. With regard to religion, the principal magistrate is sometimes a Protestant, and sometimes a Papist; but the greater part of the burghers are Protestants. There are three fine libraries, one of which belongs to the Papists, another to the university, and a third to the Protestant ministers. They have a bell of a prodigious size, which is 15 cils in circumference, and 5 in height.

ERIE-LAKE, in N. America, lies between 41 and 42 degrees of latitude. It communicates with the Lake Ontario, by the Strait of Niagara, in which there is a water-fall or cataract, but not the greatest in the world, as some pretend.

* ERISSO, a town of Turkey, in Asia, and in Macedonia, it is a bishop's see, and is seated at the bottom of the gulph of Monte Sanchi, but at present is inconceivable and very thin of people.

ERIVAN, a town of Asia, in Persia, and capital of Persian Armenia, with an Armenian patriarch. It is a large place, and is defended by a fortress, wherein is the emperor's palace, and by a castle, some distance from the town. The country about it produces excellent wine, and it is seated on the river Zuergh, near a great lake of its own name. The Meidan is a great open square, 400 paces over, wherein are very fine trees. The baths and caravanaries have likewise their beauties, but the churches of the Christians are small, and half under ground. The lake is very deep, and 60 miles in circumference, being well stocked with carps and trouts. There is a bridge over the river, which has apartments under it, where the governor comes sometimes for diversion. It is 105 miles N. W. of Astabat, and 200 E. of Erzerum. Lon. 63. 15. Lat. 40. 20.

ERRELENS, a town of Germany, in the circle of Westphalia, and duchy of Juliers, with a castle. It is 10 miles N. of Juliers, and is seated on the river Rour. Lon. 24. 8. Lat. 51. 6.

* ERLANG, a town of Germany, in the circle of Franconia, and marquise of Culmbach. It is seated on the river Reznitz, 12 miles N. W. of Nuremberg, and 20 S. of Bamberg. There are a great number of French refugees here, for whom houses are built, called Nuremberg, and there is a new church lately built for their use. Lon. 23. 42. Lat. 46. 58.

* ERINGTON, a village in Devonshire, with one fair, on February 3, for horned cattle.

* ERRACH, a town of Germany, in the circle of Franconia, 30 miles S. E. of Frankfort. Lon. 26. 25. Lat. 49. 42.

ERZEN, a castle of Germany, in the circle of Suabia, with a town, capital of the county of the same name. It is 8 miles S. E. of Ulm. Lon. 27. 42. Lat. 48. 23.

ERZURUM, a sea-port town of the Red-Sea, on the coast of Abex, in Africa, and subject to Turkey. It is 320 miles S. W. of Mecca. Lon. 56. 55. Lat. 17. 0.

ERZERUM, a large and strong town of Turkey, in Asia, with Armenian and Greek bishops sees, and a keelerbez. It stands in a peninsula, formed by the sources of the river Euphrates, called Fir by the Turks. It is a pretty large place, 5 days journey from the Black-Sea, and 10 from the frontiers of Persia, built in a beautiful plain, at the foot of a chain of mountains, which is fruitful in all sorts of corn. Wood is very scarce, for which reason their fuel is only cow-

ESCHERIA, New-Camous in the vic St. Quinards. It contains cloisters of different great number large gardens fountain country, what I were fo is the p on fo d at this ding. It is surrounded with double walls, defended by square towers. The Turks who are here, are all fanfaries, and are about 12,000 in number; they are most of them tradesmen, and receive no pay. The Armenians have two churches, and the Greeks but one. The Greeks are mostly braziers, and are employed in making copper vessels; and, as they are always making a noise night and day with their hammers, they are obliged to live in the suburbs. They drive a great trade here in furs and galleons. This town is a thorough-fare, and a selling place for the caravans which pass to the Indies. Their merchandizes are Persian silks, cottons, calicoes, and drugs. The wine here is excessively bad, insomuch that it almost poisons new comers. Lon. 57. 50. lat. 40. 0.

ESCAUT. See SCHELD.

ESCHELIES, a town of Savoy, on the frontiers of Dauphiny, 5 miles from the great Chartreuse, remarkable for its great marble sepulchre, 16 miles S. W. of Chamberry, and 20 N. of Grenoble. It is on the confines of Dauphiny, in France, and is seated on the river Guirele-Viv, near a broad caufeway, at the end of which there is part of a rock cut through, which was formerly impassible. Lon. 23. 25. lat. 45. 20.

ESCHWEGEN, a town of Germany, in the Intgravate of Hesse-Cassel, and subject to the Landgrave. It is seated on the river Warra, 22 miles S. E. of Hesse-Cassel. Lon. 27. 25. lat. 17. 51.

ESCLAVONIA. See SCIAVONIA.

ESCORIAL, a famous village of Spain, in New-Castile, where Philip II. built a famous monastery in 1563, in memory of the victory gained over the French near St. Quintin; it is called by the Spaniards the eighth wonder of the world. It consists of a royal palace, a church, cloisters, a college, a library, the shops of different artists, apartments for a great number of people, beautiful walks, large allies, an extensive park, and great gardens, adorned with a vast number of fountains. It is built in a dry, barren country, surrounded with rugged mountains, and where nothing grows, but what is cultivated with extraordinary care. It is built with grey stones, which were found in the neighbourhood, and is the principal reason of its being erected on so disagreeable a spot. They worked at this structure 22 years, and it cost

6,000,000 of crowns; some say the expence was 20,000,000. but then they must mean French livres. It is a long square of 250 feet, and 4 stories high; they reckon 802 pillars, 11,000 square windows, and 14000 gates. The most remarkable part is the vaulted chapel, wherein is a magnificent sepulchre, called the Pantheon, because it is built in imitation of that church at Rome; it is the burying-place of all the kings and queens of Spain, and is thought by some to be the most curious piece of architecture in the world. The fathers, which belong to the monastery, are 200 in number, and have an income of 40,000 ducats a-year, which is sufficient to maintain them in great plenty. The church is built after the model of St. Peter's at Rome. It was taken by the allies in 1706, and is situate on the river Guadara, 15 miles N. W. of Madrid, and 25 S. of Segovia. Lon. 14. 0. lat. 40. 55.

ESSEN, a town of Germany, in Westphalia, and in the county of Embsen, seated on the Rhine, 25 miles N. of the town of that name. Lon. 24. 25. lat. 54. 0.

* ESFARAIN, a town of Asia, in the province of Ghorazan, famous for the great number of writers that it has produced. It is 50 miles E. of Atrabad. Lon. 73. 48. lat. 56. 48.

* ESHER, a village in Surry, 5 miles S. W. of Kingston, with one fair, on August 4, for horses.

ESK, a river, which is part of the boundary between England and Scotland, and, running from N. E. to S. W. falls into the Solway-firth, giving name to a district of Scotland, called Eskdale.

ESKIMAUX, a country of N. America, otherwise called New-Britain, and Terra-de-Labrador. It is inhabited by a savage wild sort of people, who have no fixed abode, but rove from place to place; for they sometimes come as far S. as Newfoundland, and sometimes are met with on the coasts of the Straits and bays that the English have been in when they went in search of the N. W. passage. They are of a different race from the other native Americans, for, whereas they have no beards, these have them so thick and large, that it is difficult to discover any features of their faces; they have small eyes, large dirty teeth, and black rugged hair; they are of so bad a disposition, that they always endeavour

* ESPERNAY, an ancient and handsome town of France, in Champaign, with an Augustine abbey. It is agreeably seated on the river Maine, in a fertile country, which produces excellent wine, 17 miles N. W. of Chalons, 15 S. of Rheims, and 75 E. by N. of Paris. Lon. 21. 46. lat. 49. 2.

* ESPERNON, a town of France, in Beauce, seated on the river Gueule, 5 miles from Chartres. Lon. 13. 20. lat. 48. 35.

ESPINAL, a considerable town of Lorraine, near the mountains of Vosge, with an abbey of canonesses, who are all noble. It is remarkable for the paper-works that are near it. The fortifications are demolished. It is seated on the river Moselle, 35 miles S. E. of Nancy. Lon. 24. 14. lat. 48. 22.

* ESPINOSA, the name of two small islands of Spain, the one in Biscay, and the other in Old Castile. Lon. of the last, 13. 46. lat. 47. 2.

ESSEK, a considerable trading town in Hungary, in Slavonia, in the county of Walpon, with a strong castle, and a magnificent bridge, 5 miles in length, over the marshes, or 8865 geometrical paces in length, and 15 in breadth. It is a difficult pass, and there have been several battles fought here, between the Turks and Christians. There are towers built on the bridge, a quarter of a mile distant from each other, and it is handsomely raised on each side. There are trees in all the trees of the town, which was taken from the Turks by the Imperialists in 1687, since which time it has continued in the hands of the house of Austria. It is seated on the river Drave, 60 miles W. by N. of Belgrade, 112 S. of Buda, and 175 S. by E. of Vienna. Lon. 36. 30. lat. 45. 56.

ESSEN, a town of Germany, in Westphalia, it was formerly free and imperial, but is now subject to the abbots of Essen. It is 10 miles N. E. of Duitburg, and 15 N. of Dorsten. Lon. 24. 42. lat. 51. 25.

* ESSEQUEBIA, a rich and considerable

country of S. America, and in Guiana; its borders are inhabited by savages, who are great drunkards, and both men and women go stark naked.

ESSEX, an English county, 44 miles in length, and 42 in breadth, bounded on the S. by the river Thames, on the W. by Hertfordshire and Middlesex, on the N. by Cambridgeshire and Suffolk, and on the E. by the sea. It contains 34,800 houses, 208,800 inhabitants, 415 parishes, and 27 market-towns; the productions are corn, fish, fowls, cloth, stuffs, hops, oysters, and saffron, which last is the best in the world. The rivers, besides the Thames, are, the Stour, the Lee, the Coln, the Chelmer, the Crouch, and the Roden. The air in the inland parts is healthy, but in the marshes, near the sea, it produces agues, particularly in the hundreds. It sends 8 members to parliament, that is, 6 for Colchester, Harwich, and Malden, and 2 for the county. The county-town is Chelmsford; but Colchester is the largest, and most famous.

* ESTAIN, an ancient town of France, in the duchy of Bar, 15 miles N. E. of Verdun. Lon. 23. 18. lat. 49. 15.

ESTABLES, a town of France, in Picardie, and in Boulonnois, not so considerable as it was formerly. It is seated at the mouth of the river Canches, 10 miles S. of Boulogne, and 122 N. of Paris. Lon. 19. 18. lat. 50. 31.

* ESTAPE, a strong town of America, in New-Spain, inhabited by Spaniards and native Americans. It is seated at the mouth of the river Tlaluc. Lon. 273. 40. lat. 17. 50.

* ESTARKE, an ancient town of Asia, in Persia, and in Farsitan, seated in a country abounding in wine and dates, in which they carry on a great trade; it is 30 miles from Schiras.

* ESTRAVAYER, a handsome town of Switzerland, in the canton of Friburg, with a fine castle. It is seated on the eastern banks of the lake of Neufchatel. Lon. 24. 30. lat. 46. 46.

ESTE, a town of Italy, in the territory of Venice, and in the Paduano, 20 miles S. E. of Vicenza, and 15 S. W. of Padua.

- Padua. Lon. 29. 15. lat. 45. 15.
- ESTERIA, a town of Spain, in the kingdom of Navarre, and capital of a territory of the same name, with a bishop's see. It is seated on the river Ebro, 112 miles W. of Pamplona, and 25 N. of Calahorra. Lon. 15. 50. lat. 42. 15.
- ESTERA, a town of Spain, in Andalusia, with an ancient castle, standing on a mountain. It is 15 miles S. of Leiga, and 62 N. by W. of Malaga. Lon. 13. 25. lat. 37. 10.
- ESTONIA, a province of the Russian empire, lying to the East of the Baltic-Sea. It is bounded on the N. by the gulph of Finland, on the E. by Ingria, and on the S. by Livonia, with the title of a duchy. It was ceded to Russia by the treaty of Neuchâst.
- ESTRAMADURA, a province of Spain, about 175 miles in length, and 100 in breadth, bounded on the N. by the kingdom of Leon and Old-Castile, on the E. by New-Castile, on the S. by Andalusia, and on the W. by Portugal. It abounds in corn, wine, and fruits, but the air is bad for strangers, on account of the excessive heat. It now makes part of New-Castile.
- ESTRAMADURA, a province of Portugal, lying about the mouth of the river Tago, bounded on the N. by the province of Beira, on the E. and S. by Alentejo, and on the W. by the Atlantick Ocean. It abounds in wine, excellent oil, honey and oranges. Here the oranges were first planted that were brought from China, and which are known by the name of China-oranges. Lisbon is the capital town, and of all Portugal.
- ESTREMOZ, a town of Portugal, in Alentejo, which is divided into two parts, the high town, and the low: the high town is commanded by a citadel, built on the top of a hill, which is strongly fortified, and surrounded with a large ditch. All the houses are white, and the principal are adorned with fine marble pillars. There is also a tower of the same marble, so finely polished, that it glitters greatly when the sun shines upon it. The lower town is the newest, and in it there is a large square, in the middle of which is a basin. They make a sort of earthen ware here, greatly esteemed in many places for its beauty, and fine smell. The Portuguese gained a complete victory over don John of Austria near this place, in 1665. It is seated on the river Tera, which falls in-

- to the Tago, 15 miles W. of Padajoz, and 75 E. of Lisbon. Lon. 10. 46. lat. 38. 44.
- ETHIOPIA, a province of Africa, in Bilibidget, and is first by the Beriberics.
- ETZINGEN, a town of Germany in the territory of B. of Carcl, 25 miles S. E. of Chail. Lon. 27. 35. lat. 51. 18.
- ETRUSSIA, a country of Africa, which contains the principal part of it, and which is divided into the upper and lower, and contains a great number of slaves and negroes, which now are better known than they were formerly, and therefore there is no occasion to continue an old distinction. Each country will be described in its proper place, at least as long as they are yet discovered.
- EUROZ, S. a considerable town of France, in Forez, remarkable for its manufactures in iron and steel, for the tempering of which the water of the brook Fuzenz, on which it is seated, is extremely good. It is 22 miles S. E. of Fuers, 30 S. W. of Lyons, and 275 E. by E. of Paris. Lon. 22. 0. lat. 45. 22.
- EUTINGEN, an ancient town of Germany, in Suabia, and in the margravate of Baden-Deutschach. It is 3 miles S. of Dourlach, and is seated on the confluence of the rivers Wirim and Entz. Lon. 27. 6. lat. 48. 55.
- EVANA-MOUNT, the name of a volcano, now called Gibel by the inhabitants. It is one of the most celebrated mountains in Europe, and the highest in Sicily, seated in the Val-di-Demona, 10 miles W. of Catania. It is well cultivated all round the foot, and is covered with vines on the S. side; but on the N. there is nothing but large forests. As for the top, it is always covered with snow, and yet it never ceases to smoke, and often sends forth flames. Theinders, which are thrown out in small quantities, serve for manure to the adjacent lands, but a large torrent does a great deal of mischief. There are new openings made, from time to time, with such a great noise, that the inhabitants are put into terrible frights. The greatest eruptions known of late, happened in the years 1556, 1558, 1566, 1570, 1692, and 1693; which last was very terrible, and was attended with an earthquake which overturned the town of Catania, in a moment, and buried 12000 persons in its ruins. This mountain is 65 miles in circumference at the foot.

Evreux, a sea-port town of France, in Upper Normandy, with a strong castle, and a handsome square. The principal trade is in furs and lace. It is seated in a valley on the river Eure, 17 miles N. E. of Lucapè, 12 S. W. of Abbeville, and 20 N. of Neu-Chatel. Lon. 19. 5. lat. 50. 5.

Evreux, a town of France, in the Bourbonnais, on the confines of Marche, 20 miles from Mount-Loufen. Lon. 23. 10. lat. 46. 15.

EVESHAM, or EVESHOLM, a town of Worcestershire, with a market on Mondays, and four fairs, on February 7, the first Monday after Easter, Whit-Monday, and September 21, for cattle and horses. It is seated on a hill which rises with a gradual ascent from the river Avon which almost surrounds it, and over which it has a stone-bridge. It was formerly noted for its abbey, and it is the best town in the county, except Worcester; for it contains three parish-churches, sends two members to parliament, and either had or has a considerable manufacture of Beekams. The market is considerable for corn, cattle, and provisions. It gives name to an adjacent vale, remarkable for producing plenty of fine corn. It is 12 miles S. E. of Worcester, and 95 N. W. by W. of London. Lon. 15. 35. lat. 52. 10.

EVINGING, a town of Germany, in the circle of Austria, seated on the S. side of the Danube, 17 miles W. of Linz. Lon. 31. 27. lat. 48. 20.

EVERSHAM, a town of Dorsetshire, with a market on Fridays, and a fair on May 15, for bullocks and toys. It is but a small place, and is 9 miles N. W. of Dorchester, and 22 S. W. by S. of London. Lon. 14. 00. lat. 50. 46.

* EVERLEY, a village in Hampshire, 8 miles N. of Emsbury, with two fairs, on May 16, and October 18, for cattle and toys.

EUGUBO, a town of Italy, in the territory of the Pope, and duchy of Urbino, with a bishop's see. It is 35 miles S. of Urbino, 17 N. W. of Perugia, and 27 N. of Rome. Lon. 30. 60. lat. 33. 18.

EVIAN, a town of Savoy, in the Chablais, seated on the S. side of the lake of Geneva, 22 miles N. E. of Geneva, and 10 S. W. of Lausanne. Lon. 24. 15. lat. 46. 23.

* EVOLI, an ancient town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in the Hither

Principato, with the title of a principality. It is 12 miles E. of Salerno. Lon. 27. 56. lat. 38. 40.

* EVORA, or EVORUM, a town of Portugal, in the province of Alentejo. It is 17 miles from Eborac, and 8 from Ekremos; and is remarkable for a battle gained here by the Portuguese over the Castilians.

EVORA, a considerable town of Portugal, and capital of Alentejo, with an archbishop's see, and an university. It is seated almost in the heart of the province in a country, though a little unequal, yet very pleasant, surrounded on all sides with mountains, which are planted with large tracts of divers sorts, as well fruit-trees as others. It may contain about 5,000 burghers capable of bearing arms, and 15,000 inhabitants, and is very well fortified. It is 40 miles E. by S. of Lisbon, 170 N. W. of Seville, and 50 S. W. of Elvas. Lon. 10. 25. lat. 38. 27.

EVORUMIA, a sea-port town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in the Fardus Calabria. It is seated on a bay of the sea, 50 miles N. E. of Reggio. Lon. 34. 7. lat. 39. 0.

EVFRATVS, one of the most celebrated rivers in the world. It is the principal of Turkey in Asia, and has its rise about a day's journey from Erzerum; and there is in the course about 2 days journey from the same place. They lye to the eastward, on high mountains covered with snow about the year round. The plain of Erzerum is inclosed between two fine streams, that, when united, are called the Euphrates, or the Frat. After their junction, which is three days journey from Erzerum, it begins to be capable of carrying boats; but the channel is so rocky, that the navigation is not free thereon. At first, it runs S. S. W. then S. till it approaches near it to Aleppo; then it turns S. E. till it reaches Rakka. It afterwards turns more to the S. till it comes to Meshed; and then it passes S. E. again by Anna, Hit, Caba, El, and Feluria; and, not far from the sea, visits the spot where Old Babylon stood. It then fetches a compass like a bow, till it runs E. and unites with the Tygris; and still retaining its old name, runs down to Bassrah, and from thence into the Gulph of Persia, about 50 miles below it. It first divides Armenia from Natolia; then Syria from Diarbeck; after ter which it runs through the Irac Arabi till it meets with the Tygris: besides, it is the N. eastern boundary of the great Desert of Arabia.

- EURE, a river of France, which has its source in Perche, and in the forest of Logny. It falls into the Seine, a little above Cent-de-Arche, and is navigable for boats.

EUREUX, an ancient town of France, in Normandy, with a bishop's see. The cathedral is a handsome structure; and the trade consists in corn, linen, and woollen cloth. It is seated on the river Iton, 25 miles S. of Rouen, and 55 N. W. of Paris. Lon. 13. 49. Lat. 49. 1.

EURIPIUS. See NEGROPONT.

- EUROPE, called by the people of Asia Frankistan, is one of the three general parts of our continent, and one of the four of the habitable world. It is bounded on the N. by the frozen or icy sea, on the S. by the Mediterranean, on the W. by the Western and Northern Ocean, and on the E. by Asia. It lies between 8 and 60 degrees of longitude, and between 35 and 72 degrees of latitude, though it does not fill up all that space. From Cape St. Vincent to the mouth of the river Obi, it is near 3600 miles in length; and, from Cape Matapan in the Morea, to the N. Cape in Lapland, it is about 2200 miles in breadth. It is much less than either Asia or Africa; but then it surpasses them in many things; and it is entirely within the temperate zone, except a small part of Norway and Muscovy; so that there is neither the excessive heat, nor the insupportable cold, that are to be met with in the other parts of the continent. It does not abound in gold and silver mines, much less in precious stones; nor does it produce sugar and spices; nor yet does it nourish jackals, hyenas, lynxes, leopards, tigers, lions, rhinoceroses, elephants, dromedaries, camels, or crocodiles; but it produces corn, wine, fruits, sheep, oxen, horses, and all other necessaries of life. Besides, it is much more populous, and better cultivated than either Asia or Africa. It is fuller of villages, towns, and cities, and the buildings are more strong, more elegant and commodious, generally speaking, than in the two former. The inhabitants are all whites, and, for the most part, much better made than the Africans, and even the Asiatics. With regard to arts and sciences, there is no manner of comparison; nor yet in trade, navigation, and war. They are more civilized, prudent, sociable, and generous; and consequently are neither savage nor cruel, unless spurred on by the mistaken principles of religion. Whereas in Asia and Africa, there are people who make robbery a profession, and live by pillaging merchants and others. With respect to the division of Europe, it contains, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Great-Britain and Ireland, Muscovy, France, Germany, Poland, Spain, Portugal, Hungary, Switzerland, and Turkey in Europe, besides several small islands, in the Mediterranean and else-where. There are three Emperors; namely, of Germany, Muscovy, and Turkey, which last is commonly called the Grand Seigneur. The Pope is an ecclesiastical prince, and yet has several territories under his dominion. The Kings are those of Great-Britain and Ireland, France, Spain, Portugal, Poland, Prussia, Denmark, Sweden, Sardinia, Hungary, and of the Two Sicilies. Besides, there is an Archduke of Austria, and a Great Duke of Tuscany. There are four considerable republics; namely, Venice, the states of Holland, the Swiss Cantons, and the republic of Genoa. There are four less, viz. of Geneva, Lucca, San Marino, and Ragusa. The languages are, the Latin, of which the Italian, French, and Spanish, are dialects; the Teutonic, from which proceed those of Germany, Flanders, Holland, Sweden, Denmark, and England; the Slavonian, which reigns (though in disguise) in Poland, Muscovy, Bohemia, and a great part of Turkey in Europe; the Celtic, of which there are dialects in Wales, the Highlands of Scotland, Ireland, Bretagne in France, and Lapland. Besides these, there are the Greek, and several others. The principal rivers are, the Danube and the Rhine, in Germany; the Wolga and Dwina, in the Russian empire; the Loire, in France; and the Severn and Thames, in England. The chief lakes are those of Constance, in Germany; of Geneva and Garda, in Italy; the Wener, in Sweden; and of Ladoga and Onega, in Russia. The chief mountains are, the Pyrenean, in Spain; the Alps, in Italy; the Dofrin hills, in Sweden; the Crapach hills, in Hungary; and some of the mountains in Wales.

The religions of Europe are the Jewish, and the Christian; divided into the Greek, Romish, and Protestant churches; as also the Mahometan.

EUSTACE, or EUSTATIA, one of the least Caribbee Islands, in America, which is properly nothing but a mountain that rises in the form of a sugar-loaf, whose top is hollow. It is strong by situation, and has a good fort. It lies to the N. W. of St. Christopher's, and to the S. E. of Sabat, and belongs to the Dutch. Lon. 317. 40. lat. 16. 40.

* EUSUGAGUEN, a strong town of Africa, in the kingdom of Morocco, and in the province of Hea. The inhabitants are the most brutal of all Barbary, and their trade consists in wax and honey.

* EUTIM, a town of Germany, in Holstein, with a castle, where the bishops of Lubeck have their residence. It is three miles from Lubeck, and seven from Keil.

EUXINE SEA. See BLACK SEA.

* EWELL, a town in Surry, with a market on Thursdays, and two fairs, on May 12, and October 29, for horses, bullock, sheep, and toys. It is but a small place, and the market is inconsiderable. It is 10 miles N. E. by N. of Darking, and 14 S. E. by S. of London. Lon. 37. 0. lat. 51. 25.

* EWURST, a village in Suffex, with one fair, on July 25, for cattle and pedlars ware.

EXETER, a town, or city, of Devonshire, with two markets, on Wednesdays and Fridays, and four fairs, viz. on Ash-Wednesday, Whit-Monday, August 1, and December 6, for horses, horned cattle, and commodities of all sorts. It is commodiously seated on the top of an easy ascent on the eastern bank of the river Ex, from whence it took its name, and over which there is a handsome stone-bridge. It is a mile and a half in circumference about the walls and ditches; and, with its suburbs, contains 15 parish-churches, and four chapels of ease, besides the cathedral, it being a bishop's see. It suffered greatly in the civil wars; and its river is choaked up with sand, so that at present they are obliged to load and unload their goods at Topsham, about three miles distant. It has the title of an earldom, and is

FALKIRK, a town of Scotland, in the county of Sterling. In the month of October a great fair is held here, called Falkirk-Tiud, for Highland cattle; and it is noted for being the place where the rebels defeated the king's forces, on January 17, 1746. It is 8 miles S. of Sterling. Lon. 13. 47. lat. 56. 0.

FALKLAND, a town of Scotland, in the county of Fife, in which is a palace built by some of the Kings of Scotland. It is an handsome town, and is seated at the entrance into a fertile country. It is 23 miles N. of Edinburgh. Lon. 14. 35. lat. 56. 20.

FALMOUTH, a sea-port town of Cornwall, with a market on Thursdays, and two fairs, on July 27, and October 10, for horses, oxen, sheep, cloth, and a few hops. It is now large to what it was formerly; for, about 180 years ago, there were not more than two or three houses; but it is now governed by a mayor, 4 aldermen, and a town-clerk, and gives title to a viscount. It is a place of good trade, and is resorted to by ships; and the inhabitants also have ships of their own. The harbour is so large, that 100 sail may safely ride at anchor at a time; and these of the greatest burthen may come up to the key. The entrance into it is well defended by Pendennis-castle and 2 forts. The town has one church, and about 300 houses; it chiefly consists of one paved street, which is pretty broad, and about three quarters of a mile in length. It is 10 miles S. of Truro, and 282 W. by N. of London. Lon. 12. 5. lat. 50. 15.

FALSTER, a little island of Denmark, lying near the entrance of the Baltick Sea, between the islands of Zealand, Laland, and Mona. Nykoping is the capital town. Lon. 29. 44. lat. 54. 50.

FAMAGUSTA, a town of Turkey in Asia, and in the island of Cyprus, with a Greek bishop's see. It had a good harbour, defended by two forts which are over against each other; but it is now almost choaked up, and consequently has lost its trade. It was taken by the Turks from the Venetians, after six months siege, and they fled the Venetian governor alive, besides murdering the inhabitants in cold blood, tho' they surrendered on honourable terms. It is 62 miles N. E. of Nicosia. Lon. 52. 40. lat. 35. 0.

* FAMENE, or FAMENE, a small territory

of the Netherlands, whose limits are forgot.

FAMINE PORT, a fortress, seated on the N. E. coast of the Straights of Magellan, in S. America. Here the Spanish garrison perished for want; since which time it has been neglected. Lon. 297. 0. lat. 54. 0.

FANANO, a town of Italy, in the duchy of Modena, seated 25 miles S. of Modena. Lon. 28. 55. lat. 44. 15.

FANO, an ancient and handsome town of Italy, in the territory of the Pope, and duchy of Urbino, with a bishop's see. Here is an ancient triumphal arch, handsome churches, and fine palaces. It is seated on the Gulph of Venice, 8 miles S. of Pisaro, and 20 E. of Urbino. Lon. 30. 40. lat. 43. 53.

* FANTIN, a small kingdom of Africa on the Gold Coast of Guiney, where the English and Dutch have forts. The chief man, whom the sailors call a king, is named the BRAFFO in the language of the negroes. The native inhabitants are a very troublesome people, both to the English and the Dutch. It is a populous district, and is very rich in gold, slaves, and all sorts of necessaries, but more especially corn, which they sell to the ships. The inland inhabitants, besides trading, are employed in tilling the ground, and drawing palm-wine, which is much better and stronger than that in other parts of the coast. The principal town, or village, has the same name.

FARE OF MESSINA is the streight between Italy and Sicily, remarkable for having the tide ebb and flow, every six hours, with a great deal of rapidity, though it is but seven miles over.

FARFHAM, a town of Hampshire, with a market on Thursdays, and one fair, on June 29, for toys. It is 12 miles E. of Southampton, and 65 W. by S. of London. Lon. 16. 20. lat. 50. 53.

* FARELLONS, an island of Africa, in Negroeland, 15 miles in length, where there is plenty of fruits and elephants. Lon. 5. 0. lat. 6. 48.

FAREWELL CAPE, the most southerly promontory of Greenland, lying at the entrance of Davis's Streight. Lon. 37. 35. lat. 60. 0.

* FARGEAU, an ancient town of France, in the diocese of Auxerre, and principal of the district of Puisaye, with a strong castle, and the title of a duchy. It is 10 miles S. E. of Briare. 25 S. E. of Auxerre, and 90 S. of Paris. Lon. 20. 4. lat. 47. 40.

* FARLEY, a village in Staffordshire, six miles N. of Uttoxeter, with two fairs, on March 21, for cattle, and October 10, for all sorts of cattle.

* FARNHAM, a village in Dorsetshire, 10 miles S. E. of Shaftsbury, with one fair, on August 21, for cheese.

FARNHAM, a town in Surrey, with a market on Thursdays, and three fairs; viz. on Holy-Thursdays, and June 24, for horses, cattle, sheep, and hogs; and on November 2, for horses and cattle. It is seated on the river Wye, and is a pretty good town, with a castle seated on an eminence, where the bishops of Winchester usually have resided; but is now much decayed. The houses are handsome, and the streets well-paved; and the market is large for wheat, oats, and barley. It is 12 miles W. of Guilford, 38 E. N. E. of Southampton, and 41 W. S. W. of London. Lon. 10. 45. lat. 51. 16.

* FARO, a cape or promontory of the valley of Demona, in Sicily, at the entrance of the strait between Italy and Sicily. It is so called, for having had a Faro, or Light-house, built upon it.

FARO, a town of Portugal, in the kingdom of Algarve, with a harbour, on the coast of the Gulph of Cadix, and with a bishop's see. Alphonso, King of Portugal, took it from the Moors, in 1249. It is 20 miles S. W. of Tavira, 35 E. of Lagos, and 100 S. W. of Evora. Lon. 9. 58. lat. 36. 44.

FARRINGTON, a town of Berkshire, with a market on Tuesdays, and three fairs; viz. on February 2, and Whit-Tuesday, for horses and fat cattle; and on October 18, for horses, fat cattle, and abundance of hoes. It is seated pretty high, not far from the river Thames, 18 miles W. of Oxford, 50 E. of Bristol, 54 E. of Gloucester, and 68 W. by N. of London. Lon. 10. 0. lat. 51. 48.

FARS, or FARSISTAN, a province of Asia, in Persia, bounded on the E. by Kerman, on the N. by Irac-Agem, on the W. by Khuseitan, and on the S. by the Gulph of Buffarah. This is one of the most fertile provinces of the kingdom, and is famous for its excellent wines, commonly called the Wines of Shyras, the capital of this province. Here are the Ruins of Persepolis, which perhaps are the most magnificent in the world. Lon. from 68. 36. to 74. 30. lat. from 27. 0. to 31. 20.

* FARTACK, a town of Asia, in Arabia the Happy, and in a kingdom of which it is the capital. Lon. 69. 0. lat. 16. 0.

* FAVAGNANA, a small island of Italy, about 15 miles in compass. It is seated on the western side of Sicily, with a fort called Fort St. Catherine. Lon. 30. 20. lat. 38. 0.

FEMEREN, a small island of Denmark, in the Baltic-Sea, 3 miles from the coast of Holstein, and subject to the duke of that name. It is fertile in corn and pastures. Lon. from 28. 50. to 29. 20. lat. from 54. 30. to 54. 42.

* FENESTRANGE, a town of Lorraine, and capital of a district of the same name, seated on the river Sarre, 17 miles from Marfal, and 17 S. of Deux-ponts. Lon. 24. 46. lat. 28. 52.

FENESTRELLI, a town and fort of Italy, in Piedmont, and in the valley of the Vaudois. It is a strong place, and was taken by the duke of Savoy from the French in 1708, and ceded to him by the treaty of Utrecht. It is 15 miles W. of Turin. Lon. 23. 45. lat. 48. 58.

* FENNY STRATFORD, a thoroughfare town in Buckinghamshire, 2 furlongs in length, and full of inns; it has no market, but has 4 fairs, on April 19, July 18, October 10, and November 28, all for cattle. It is 20 miles N. W. of Dunstable, and 45 N. W. of London.

* FENOULDES, a small territory of France, in Lower Languedoc, and diocese of Alce.

FERABATH, a handsome and agreeable town of Asia, in Persia, among the mountains which bound the Caspian-Sea to the S. and 12 miles from it. Shah-Abbas often passed his winters here, and it is 140 miles N. E. of Gilan. Lon. 70. 2. lat. 36. 54. There is a town called Farabad, a mile and an half from Ispahan, which was taken by the Afghans in the late troubles. It is seated on the banks of the river Zenderond, on the side of which it extends almost 3 miles. It was built by Shah-Abbas, who brought the Armenians here from the former town, after they had revolted from the Turks.

FERDEN, or VERDEN, a considerable town of Germany, in Westphalia; and capital of a province of the same name, subject to the Elector of Hanover, to whom it was ceded by the Danes in 1712, who had taken it from the Swedes. It is seated on the river Aller, near the Weser, 25 miles S. E. of Bremen, 50 S. by W. of Hamberg, 50 N. by W. of Hanover, and 55 S. W. of Lunenburg. Lon. 26. 58. lat. 53. 3.

FERE, a town of France, in Picardy, famous for its powder-mill, and school of matrosses. The fortifications are demolished. It is seated on the rivers Serre and Oise, 20 miles N. of Soissons, 45

S. E. of Amiens, and 75 N. by E. of Paris. Lon. 21. 2. lat. 49. 40.

FERE CHAMPAGNOIS, a town of France, in Champagne, 30 miles N. of Troys. Lon. 21. 40. lat. 48. 40.

FERENTINO, or FIORENTO, a town of Italy, in the state of the Church, and in the Campagna of Rome, with a bishop's see. It is seated on a mountain, 8 miles S. E. of Agnagni, and 37 S. E. of Rome. Lon. 30. 52. lat. 41. 43.

FERMANACH, a county of Ireland, in the province of Ulster, 38 miles in length, and 23 in breadth, bounded on the N. by the counties of Donegal and Tyrone, on the E. by another part of Tyrone and Monaghan, on the S. by Cavan and Leitrim, and on the W. by another part of Leitrim and the Ocean. It contains 5478 Houses, 19 parishes, 8 baronies, and 1 borough, and sends 4 members to parliament, 2 for the county, and 2 for Iniskilling. Iniskilling is the capital town.

FERMO, an ancient and strong town of Italy, in the Pope's territories, and in the Marca, or Marche of Ancona, with an archbishop's see. It is seated near the gulph of Venice, 17 miles S. E. of Macerata, 22 N. E. of Ascoli, 32 S. E. of Ancona, and 100 N. E. of Rome. Lon. 31. 28. lat. 43. 8.

FERNANDES, JUAN, a little uninhabited island of the S. Sea, reckoned to be in S. America, and province of Chili. It seems to sailors to be a very mountainous place at a distance, and extremely rugged and irregular, but, when they come near it, they are agreeably deceived, for it is covered with woods, every where interspersed with the finest valleys, clothed with a most beautiful verdure, and watered with numerous streams and cascades, there being no valley of any extent but what is watered with a hill. It is visited by all the English ships that pass through the S. Sea, and is of excellent use for recovering the sailors who are sick of the fever, for the refreshments it produces soon restore them to their health and vigour. It is the only commodious place in those seas where the British cruisers can refresh and recover their men, after their passage round cape Horn, where they may remain some time without alarming the Spanish coast. This island lies in lat. S. 42. 49. and is 330 miles from the continent of Chili. Its greatest length is between 12 and 15 miles, and its greatest breadth not quite 6. The only

safe anchoring is on the N. side of this island, in Cumberland-bay. The soil on the northern part is very loose, and shallow, so that trees soon perish for want of root. They are most of them of the aromatic kind, and there are none fit for timber except the myrtles. Here are also pimento and cabbage trees, and a great number of plants, of various kinds, which are unknown in these parts, except water-creffes, purslain, and wild sorrel, besides a vast number of turnips, and Sicilian raddishes, formerly sown here. Here were a great number of goats, but the Spaniards have diminished them by putting large dogs on shore, who have destroyed all those they could come at. There are a great number of seals about the island, and another amphibious creature, called a Sea-hog; they bear some resemblance to a seal, though much larger, for they are from 12 to 20 feet in length, and from 8 to 15 in circumference. Their skins are covered with short hair, of a light dun colour, but their tails and fins, which serve them for feet on shore, are almost black. The sailors feed upon both of these, calling the one veal, and the other beef. Besides, there are very large cod, cavalies, gropers, large breams, maids, silver-fish, congers of a peculiar kind, and, above all, a black fish which is very delicious, called by some a chimney-sweeper, and in shape somewhat resembles a carp. Admiral Anson landed here in 1741, and Alexander Selkirk, a Scotchman, lived here 4 years and 4 months alone, till he was taken in by an English ship which passed that way.

* FERRANDINA, a town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in the Basilicata, with the title of a duchy. It is near the river Basianto, 25 miles S. W. of Matera, and 25 S. W. of Sirenza. Lon. 34. 10. lat. 40. 40.

FERRARA, a large, handsome, and famous town of Italy, capital of a duchy of the same name, in the territory of the church, with a bishop's see. It has a magnificent square, superb churches, and a strong citadel, but is not so considerable as it was formerly. It is seated near the river Po, 25 miles N. E. of Bologna, 37 N. W. of Ravenna, and 70 N. by E. of Florence. Lon. 29. 30. lat. 44. 54.

* FERRARA, the duchy of, or the FERRARESE, a province of Italy, in the territory of the Church, bounded on the N. by the Polefino di Rovigo, on the W. by the duchy of Mantua, on the S. by the Bolognese and Propher Romagna, and on the E. by the Gulph of Venice. It had its own dukes till 1597, when Pope Clement VIII. re-united it to the apostolick chamber. Since that time it lies almost all uncultivated, though it was a very good country, and one of the finest in Italy. The air is unwholesome, on account of the marshes, and the inhabitants are too thin to drain them. Ferrara is the capital town.

* FERRÈTE or PRITTH, a town of France, in Sungau, and the chief place of a district of the same name, with a castle under the town. It has been subject to the French ever since 1648, and is seated in a very fertile country, 10 miles S. W. of Batle, or Basil, and 25 E. of Montbelliard. Lon. 25. 0. lat. 47. 40.

FERRO, an island of Africa, and the most western of the Canaries, 6 miles to the W. of Palma, and is but small, being only 38 miles in circumference. It has no fresh water, and it is pretended that there is a tree in the middle of the island, constantly surrounded with a fog, and by that means there is water drops from the leaves, and runs into stone cistern; this is now locked upon as a fiction, for those that went purposely in search of it could never find it. This island produces some corn and sugar-canes, plenty of fruits and plants, and abounds with cattle, which furnish the inhabitants with milk and cheese. There is a volcano upon it, from whence earthquakes sometimes proceed. The French geographers make this their first meridian, to which we have conformed, because the best maps are graduated from thence. Lat. 27. 40.

FERROL, a sea-port town of Spain, in the kingdom of Galicia, with a famous harbour, not only one of the best in Spain, but even of all Europe; for here the vessels lie safe from all winds, and here the Spanish squadrons frequently secure themselves in time of war, and the privateers carry in their prizes. It is seated on a bay of the Atlantick Ocean, 20 miles N. E. of the Groyne, and 50 N. of Compostella. Lon. 10. 55. lat. 43. 30.

* FEZU, a small kingdom of Africa, on the coast of Guinea, about 10 miles in length, and as much in breadth. This country was formerly so powerful and populous, that their neighbours were in dread of it, but is now almost ruined, the inhabitants not being sufficient to till the ground, though it is a very pleasant and fertile country. It abounds in corn, cattle, palm-wine, and oil, and is full of strait paths, bordered with shady trees. The Dutch have a fort here.

FEVERSHAM, a town of Kent, with two fairs, on February 25 and August 12, for linnen, woollen-drapery, and toys. It is seated on a creek of the river Medway, and is well frequented by small vessels; it is large, well built, and inhabited by tradesmen and inn-keepers. It is opposite to the isle of Sheepy, and a member of the town and port of Dover. It is governed by a mayor, 12 aldermen, 24 jurats, and 2 peace-officers. It has one large church built with stone, newly repaired, and contains about 1100 houses, built with brick. The streets are wide and paved, and the town contains about 6000 inhabitants. It has a large corn-market every Thursday, but no particular manufacture is carried on here. It is 9 miles W. of Canterbury, and 48 E. by S. of London. Lon. 18. 13. lat. 51. 20.

* FEUILLETIN, a town of France, in La

Marche, or the confines of Bourbonnois, and in the election of Gueret.

FEZEM, a village of the bishoprick of Liege, in the circle of Westphalia, in Germany, noted for a battle fought between the Germans and French in 1746. It is 4 miles W. of Urset, and 5 N. of Liege. Lon. 23. 15. lat. 50. 50.

* FEZ, a considerable kingdom of Africa, on the coast of Barbary, between the kingdoms of Algiers, which is to the E. and Morocco to the S. it being in other parts surrounded by the sea. It is about 125 miles in length, and much the same in breadth. The air is temperate and wholesome, and the country full of mountains, particularly to the W. and S. where mount Atlas lies. However it is populous and fertile, producing citrons, lemons, oranges, dates, almonds, olives, figs, raisins, sugar, honey, flax, cotton, pitch, and corn, in abundance. The inhabitants breed camels, heeves, sheep, and the finest horses in Barbary, besides lions and other wild beasts. It is watered by several rivers and streams, and the principal town is Fez.

FEZ, the capital town of Fez and Morocco, in Africa. It is ancient, strong, and one of the largest and most handsome cities in all Africa, composed, as it were, of three towns, called Beleyde, Old-Fez, and New-Fez. Old-Fez is the most considerable, and contains above 80,000 inhabitants. The palaces are very magnificent, and there are 700 mosques, great and small, 50 of which are very considerable, adorned with marble pillars, and other ornaments. The houses are built of brick or stone, and adorned with Mosaic work; those of brick are adorned with glazing and colours, like Dutch tiles, and the wood-work and ceilings are carved, painted, and gilt; there is a court to every house, in which are square marble basins; the roofs are flat, and they sleep thereon in the summer-time. Here are two colleges for students, finely built, with marble and paintings; one of these has a hundred rooms, and the sides are adorned with marble-pillars of various colours, whose capitals are built, and the roof glitters, with gold, azure, and purple. Here are many hospitals, some of which look like colleges.

colleges, and there are above 100 public baths, many of which are stately structures. All the trades live in a part of the city by themselves, and the Bazar or exchange, full of all sorts of rich merchandizes, is itself as large as a small town. The gardens are exceeding beautiful, and full of all kinds of fragrant flowers and shrubs, insomuch that the city, in general, is a sort of terrestrial paradise. The inhabitants are clothed like other Turks, and the Ladies dress is very expensive in the winter, but, in the summer, they wear nothing but a shift. It is the center of the trade of this empire, and from hence caravans go to Mecca, carrying with them ready made garments, abundance of Cordovan-leather, indigo, cochineal, and ostrich-feathers, for which they bring in return silks, muslins, and drugs. Other caravans go to Negroland, particularly to Tombuto, and the river Niger; one of which consists of 20,000 men. They travel over such dry, barren deserts, that every other camel carries water. Their commodities are salt, cowreys, wrought silk, British cloth, and the woollen manufactures of Barbary. Here are a great number of Jews, who have handsome synagogues, but the bulk of the inhabitants are Moors, of a tawney complexion, and there are a great number of blacks. It is 200 miles S. of Gibraltar, 250. E. of Morocco, and 100 N. by E. of Sallee. Lon. 13. 50. lat. 33. 40.

FLORENCE, an ancient, large, strong, and celebrated city of Italy, and capital of Tuscany. It contains 70,000 inhabitants, 3800 houses, 89 convents, 22 hospitals, 152 churches, 9 gates, 7 fountains, 17 large squares, and 160 statues; the most remarkable of which is the Venus of Medici, and is thought to be the most beautiful and finely finished piece in the world. There are also several libraries, particularly that of St. Lawrence. The river Arno runs through this city, and divides it into two unequal parts, which communicate with each other by four large and handsome stone-bridges that are built over this river. It is defended by a strong citadel and two forts, besides the walls, which are about six miles in circumference. The streets are paved with flag-stones, and people may walk through every street under piazzas; but some of them are so narrow, that carriages cannot pass through them; and there are also many paper-windows. The Great Duke's palace is a superb structure. It is an archbishop's see, and there is an university; likewise, in 1738, there was an academy founded, to teach young gentlemen their exercises. The gallery of the ancient palace is about 400 feet in length, and its cabinet is full of curiosities. The present Great Duke was elected Emperor of Germany in 1745. It is seated in a delightful plain, surrounded with pleasant hills. It is 45 miles S. of Bologna, 60 S. by E. of Modena, 85 S. E. of Parma, 90 S. E. of Mantua, 115 S. by W. of Venice, and 125 N. W. of Rome. Lon. 28. 59. lat. 43. 46.

FLORENFES, a town of the Netherlands, in the county of Namur, and subject to the bishop of Liege. It is 5 miles N. E. of Philipville, 12 S. of Namur, and 13 W. of Dinant. Lon. 22. 5. lat. 50. 20.

* FLORENT LE VIEU, ST. a town of France, in Anjou, seated on the banks of the river Loire, 20 miles from Angers, with a rich Benedictine abbey.

FLORENTINE, a town of France, in Champagne, and in the Senonais, which gives title to a viscount. It is 15 miles N. E. of Auxerre, 25 S. E. of Sens, and 80 S. E. of Paris. Lon. 21. 20. lat. 47. 56.

* FLORENTINO, one of the three provinces of Tuscany, in Italy. It is bounded on the W. by the republick of Lucca, and the territory of Modena; on the N. by the Appennine mountains; and on the E. by the duchy of Urbino. The river Arno has its source in this province, and runs through the middle of it from E. to W. and the great number of small streams it receives, renders the country very fertile. Florence is the capital city.

FLORES, one of the Azores, or Western-Islands, lying in the Atlantic Ocean. It is about 17 miles in circumference, and abounds in wood and provisions of all sorts. It is so called from the beautiful flowers, which are here in great plenty. Lon. 327. 0. lat. 39. 25.

FLORENDA, a large country of N. America, which extends from the river Panuco, in New Spain, all along the Gulph of Mexico and the N. Sea to the 28th degree of latitude. It comprehends Louisiana, Spanish Florida, Georgia, and a part of Carolina. Here are a great number of the native Americans, who are of a red copper colour, with long coarse black hair, and without beards, and have no hair on their bodies. They go almost naked, besmear their bodies with oil, and worship the sun. They bring their children up to warlike exercises, hunting, and swimming. Both men and women are exceedingly active, and they can climb up the highest trees with incredible agility. They have no European animals but what are brought from the settlements; nor are the birds, trees, or plants like those with us. The only place the Spaniards have in it is the sea-port town of St. Augustine, with a fort at a little distance from it. The English have attempted to take it; but without success.

* FLOTZ, a town of Turkey in Europe, and in Walachia, seated on the river Genissa, near the place where it falls into the Danube, and over-against the town of Axiopoli.

FLOUR ST. a town of France, in Upper Auvergne, with a bishop's see. It carries on a considerable trade in corn and mules; and is seated on a mountain, 45 miles S. of Clermont, 30 E. of Aurillac, and 270 S. of Paris. Lon. 20. 46. lat. 45. 1.

FLUSHING, an handsome, strong, and considerable town of the United Provinces, in Zealand, and in the Island of Walcherin, with a very good harbour, and a great foreign trade. It was put into the hands of Q. Elizabeth for a pledge of their fidelity, and as a security for the money here advanced. It is one of the three places which Charles V. advised Philip II. to preserve with care. It is 3 miles S. W. of Middleburg, 3 N. E. of Sluys, and 25 N. W. of Ghent. Lon. 21. 7. lat. 51. 26.

* FOCHIA NOVA, a town of Natolia, in Asia, and in the province of Sarchan, seated on the Gulph of Sanderly, with a good harbour, and a castle. The Venetians defeated the Turkish fleet near this place in 1650.

* FODDRIA, a town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in the Capitanato. It is seated near the river Cerbero, 10 miles E. of Manfredonia.

* FODWAR, a town of Hungary, over-against Celocza, on the other side of the Danube. Lon. 36. 55. lat. 46. 45.

FOGARAS, a town and castle of Transilvania, seated on the river Alauta. It is 25 miles W. of Cronstat, and 30 N. E. of Hermanstat. Lon. 42. 18. lat. 45. 30.

* FOGLIA, a river of Italy which rises on the confines of Tuscany, crosses the duchy of Urbino, and falls into the Gulph of Venice at Pisaro.

FOGO. See FULGO.

* FOI ST. a town of France, in Guienne, and in the Agennois, seated on the river Dordogne. It is remarkable for having sustained several sieges during the civil wars of France. Lon. 17. 50. lat. 45. 53.

* FOIA, an ancient town of Natolia, in Asia, seated on the Gulph of Smyrna, 30 miles N. of the city of that name. It is still considerable for the goodness of its harbour, and the strong castle that defends it.

FOIX, a town of France, in Upper Languedoc, and capital of a county of the same name. It is seated on the river Ariege, at the foot of the Pyrennees, 8 miles S. of Pamiers, 40 S. of Tolouse, and 25 E. of St. Lizien. Lon. 19. 15. lat. 43. 2.

FORIEN, a province of China, bounded by Chekiang on the N. by Canton on the S. and on the other parts by the sea, being opposite to the Island of Formosa. The climate is hot; but the air is pure and healthy. It is well-cultivated in every place, not excepting the mountains, which produce a great deal of rice, from a method they have of conveying the water upon a sort of terraces which are placed one above another. It abounds with the same commodities as the other parts of China; and they trade in musk, precious stones, quick-silver, silk, lincloth, calicoes, steel, and all sorts of utensils. Every town has its peculiar dialect, which is very inconvenient for travellers that pass through it; but the inhabitants are much addicted to the sciences, and it produces a great number of learned men. Some make Fokien to be the capital of this province; but this is a mistake; for there is no such town of any note in it, if we may believe Duhald.

FOLIGNI, not FOLIGNO, or FULIGNO, as some write it, a town of Italy, in the territories of the Pope, and district of Umbria, with a bishop's see, handsome churches, and fine palaces. It is a trading place, and remarkable for its sweetmeats, its paper-mills, its silk-manufactures, and its fairs. It is seated on the declivity of a mountain, near a fine fertile plain, 12 miles N. of Spoleto, and 67 N. of Rome. Lon. 30. 18. lat. 42. 55.

FOLKSTON, a town of Kent, with a market on Thursdays, and one fair, on June 28, for pedlars ware. It was once a flourishing town of large extent, containing five parish-churches, which are now reduced to one small church, and three meeting-houses. It is a member of the port of Dover, and is governed by a mayor, and 12 jurats. It contains about 350 houses, mostly built with brick, and disposed into three narrow paved streets. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in fishing. Near it is Sangate-castle. It is seated on the sea-coast, 2 miles S. W. of Dover, 17 S. E. of Canterbury, and 69 E. by S. of London. Lon. 18. 55. lat. 51. 2.

* FENSEERT, a village in Suffolk, with a fair on September 11, for toys.

Floops. Their country is of a vast extent; but they have no king, or chief; and their towns are fortified with stakes drove all round them, and filled up with clay. They are a very courageous people, and keep the Mundingoes in awe, who are their enemies.

FONTAINBLEAU, a town in the Isle of France, and in the Gatenois, remarkable for its fine palace, which has been the place where the kings of France used to lodge when they went a hunting. It was first embellished by Francis I. and all the successive kings have added something thereto; infomuch that may now be called the finest pleasure-house in the world. It stands in the midst of a forest, consisting of 26424 arpents of land, each containing 100 square perches, and each perch 18 feet. It is 35 miles S. E. of Paris. Lon. 20. 18. lat. 48. 22.

* FONTAINE L'EVEQUE, a town of the Netherlands, in French Hainhalt, near the river Sambre. It is 3 miles W. of Charleroy, 15 S. W. of Namur, and 10 E. of Mons. Lon. 21. 53. lat. 50. 25.

FONTARABIA, a sea-port town of Spain, in Biscay, and in the territory of Guipuzcoa, with a strong castle. It is seated on a peninsula on the sea-shore, and on the river Bidafoa. It is small, but is well fortified both by nature and art. It has a good harbour, though it is dry at low water. It is built in the form of an amphitheatre on the declivity of a hill, and is surrounded on the land side by the high Pyrenean Mountains. It is a very important place, being accounted the key of Spain on that side. The young women have something particular in their dress; for they braid their hair, which falls upon their shoulders; and on their heads they have a small muslin veil, which flutters about their necks; round which they have necklaces of coral; and in their ears pendants of gold and pearl; their garment is a waistcoat with loose sleeves; and they are very alert and vigorous; but this must be understood of those who inhabit the villages near the town. It is 22 miles S. W. of Bayonne, and 62 E. of Bilbao. Lon. 15. 52. lat. 43. 23.

FONTENAI-LE-COMTE, a handsome town of France, in Lower Poitou, remarkable for its trade and its fairs. It is seated on the river Verdee, near the sea, and is 10 miles N. W. of Maillezais, and 25

N. E. of Rochelle. Lon. 15. 42. lat. 46. 30.

FONTENOV, a town or village of the Austrian Netherlands, in the province of Hainhalt, and on the confines of Flanders, remarkable for a battle fought here between the Allies and the French in May 1745, in which the former were worsted. It is 3 miles S. W. of Tournay, and 18 N. W. of Mons. Lon. 20. 55. lat. 50. 35.

* FONTENOV, a village of France, in the dutchy of Burgundy, remarkable for a bloody battle fought here in 841, between the Germans and the French, in which were killed above 700,000 men; and the Germans were defeated. It is 20 miles S. E. of Auxerre, and 40 N. E. of Nevers. Lon. 21. 21. lat. 47. 23.

* FONTEVRAUT, a town of France, in Anjou, with a famous nunnery, the chief of the order. It is three miles from the river Loire, 8 from Saumar, 12 from Chinon, and 160 S. W. of Paris. Lon. 17. 42. lat. 47. 11.

FORCALQUIER, a considerable town of France, in Provence, and capital of a county of the same name. It is seated on a mountain, 17 miles S. W. of Sisteron, and 30 N. E. of Aix. Lon. 23. 32. lat. 43. 58.

FORCHAIN, a strong town of Germany, in Franconia, and in the bishopric of Bamberg, with a fine arsenal. It is seated on the river Rednitz, 15 miles S. of Bamberg, and 15 N. of Nuremberg. Lon. 28. 40. lat. 49. 44.

FORDINGBRIDGE, a town of Hampshire, whose market is deserted, but it has one fair, for pedlars ware and forage colts. It is 26 miles S. W. of Winchester, and 85 W. by S. of London. Lon. 15. 45. lat. 50. 52.

* FORDWICH, a member of the town and port of Sandwich, in Kent, situated on the river Stour, on the N. E. side of Canterbury, and governed by a mayor, jurats, and commonalty. It has one small church, built with stone and brick, and about 60 houses, most of which are brick. The streets are narrow, dirty, and not paved, and the inhabitants amount to about 200. It is noted for its excellent trouts, but has neither fair nor market, and lies 3 miles from Canterbury, and 8 W. of Sandwich.

* FOREST, a parliament town of Scotland, in the shire of Murray, 30 miles W. of Elgin. Lon. 14. 15. lat. 57. 40.

FOREST,

FOREST BLACK. See BLACK FOREST.

* FOREST-ROW, a village in Suffex, with two fairs, on June 25, for pedlars-ware, and October 28 for cattle and pedlars waie.

FOREST-TOWNS, are four towns, so called, of Germany, in the circle of Suabia, lying along the Rhine, and the confines of Swifferland, from Basse, or Basil, to Zurich, at the entrance of the Black Forest. Their names are, Waldshut, Lauffenburg, Seckingen, and Rheinfeld, and they are subject to the house of Austria.

FOREZ, a province of France, bounded on the W. by Auvergne, on the S. by Velay and the Vivarois, on the E. by Lyonnois and Beaugeois, and on the N. by the dutchy of Burgundy and the Bourbonnois. It is watered by the Loire, and several other streams, which render the soil fruitful. It has several mines of pit-coal and iron, for which reason they make large quantities of hard-ware. It is divided into the upper and lower, and Montbrison is the capital town.

* FORFAR, a shire of Scotland, which sends 3 members to parliament, 1 for the shire, and two for the burghs of Perth, &c.

FORFAR, a town of Scotland, in a shire of the same name, seated near a lake, from whence a river proceeds that runs into the Tay. It is 14 miles W. of Montrose. Lon. 15. 2. lat. 56. 25.

* FORGES, a town of France, in Upper Normandy, remarkable for its mineral waters. It is 62 miles N. W. of Paris. Lon. 19. 15. lat. 49. 38.

FORLI, an ancient and considerable town of Italy, and capital of a territory of the same name, in Romagna, with a bishop's see. The publick structures are very handsome, and it is seated in a fertile, healthy, and pleasant country, 10 miles S. E. of Faenza, 20 S. W. of Ravenna, and 45 N. E. of Florence. Lon. 29. 36. lat. 44. 28.

● FORMELLO, a town of Italy, in the patrimony of St. Peter, with a fine palace, belonging to the prince of Chegi.

FORMOSA, a large island in the sea of China, divided into two parts by a chain of mountains, which runs from E. to W. The eastern part is inhabited by the original natives, who are looked upon as savages by the Chinese, and the eastern part is under the dominion of the Chinese, who drove away the Dutch in 1661. It is an excellent country abounding in all the necessaries of life, and the original inhabitants, who go naked, by pricking their skins make the figures of flowers, trees, and animals on their bodies. They are a good sort of people, and are enemies to theft and quarrels. They are very dextrous in shooting with arrows, and are light of course. Lon. from 139. 10. to 141. 28. lat. from 21. 30. to 25. 10.

* FORT-DE-CATAROCOUY, is in New-France, built by count Frontenac. It is seated on the river St. Lawrence, almost at the entrance of the lake Ontario. It was designed to keep the Iroquois in awe, who are friends to the English. Lon. 202. 20. lat. 44. 20.

* FORT-DE-CHAMBLEY, a strong fort of N. America, in New France, seated over against a small lake, formed by the river Sorel. It is a little to the S. W. of Montreal, and the French look upon it as the best defence on that side of the country, against the English. Lon. 395. 40. lat. 45. 25.

* FORT and PORT DAUPHIN, one of the best harbours the French have in the W. Indies. It is in the island of St. Domingo.

* FORT-DE-FUENTES, a fort of Italy, in the dutchy of Milan, seated on the mountain of Montechio, at the confluence of the river Adda with the lake Como. Lon. 26. 35. lat. 46. 5.

FORT-LEWIS, a strong place of France, in Alsace, built by Lewis XIV. in an isle formed by the Rhine, 20 miles N. E. of Strafsburg, and 267 E. of Paris. Lon. 25. 44. lat. 48. 48.

* FORT-LEWIS, a fort of America, in the island of Cayenne, built by the French in 1643.

FORTEVENTURA, an island of the Atlantick ocean, and one of the Canaries, being 65 miles in length, and of a very irregular breadth, for it consists of two peninsulas, joined by an isthmus 12 miles in breadth. It produces plenty of wheat and barley, as also heeves and goats. It belongs to the Spaniards, Lon. 4. 0. lat. from 28. 20. to 29. 0.

* FORTNOVA, or FORNOVA, a town of Italy, in the dutchy of Parma, 8 miles S. W. of Parma, remarkable for a battle gained here by the French, over the Italians, in 1495. Lon. 27. 38. lat. 44. 44.

FOSSANG, a strong town of Italy, in Piedmont, with a strong castle, and a bishop's see. It is seated on the river Stura, 10 miles N. E. of Coni, 25 S. of Turin, and 27 . E. of Pignerol. Lon. 25. 23. lat. 45. 25.

FOSSEMBRONE, a town of Italy, in the territory of the church, and in the duchy of Urbino, with a bishop's see. It is near the river Metro, 17 miles S. W. of Pifaro, and 12 S. E. of Urbino. Lon. 30. 28. lat. 43. 44.

* FOSSE-DI-NOVO, a town of Italy, in Tuscany, in the valley of Magra, subject to their own princes.

FOTHERINGAY, a village in Northamptonshire, with one fair, on the third Monday after July 5, for horses.

FOYE, an ancient and large town of Lower Egypt, seated on the river Nile, in a delightful country, 25 miles S. of Rosetta, and 40 E. of Alexandria. Lon. 49. 0. lat. 30. 40.

FOUGERES, a considerable town of France, in Bretagne, with an ancient castle, and which carries on a considerable trade in leather, seated on the river Cuesnon, 25 miles N. E. of Rennes, 22 S. E. of Avranches, and 150 W. of Paris. Lon. 16. 22. lat. 48. 20.

* FOULIES, FOLIES, or PHOLIES, are a people of Africa, in the countries lying about the rivers Senegal and Gambia. They are much like the Arabs, but not so white, nor yet so black as the Negroes. They are Mohometans, and understand Arabick. They live in hords, or clans, build towns, and are not subject to the kings of the country which they inhabit; if they are ill treated by one nation, they will remove to another. They have chiefs of their own, under whom they live quietly. They cultivate the ground, and have plantations of tobacco and cotton about their towns, and beyond these are corn-fields, which are sown with Indian-corn, rice, and two sorts of Guinea-corn. They have also potatoes and yams, besides a sort of pulse, between a kidney-bean and a pea. They are an industrious and frugal people, and are very hospitable to those that visit them. They are very quiet and mild, but yet so courageous, that the negroes dare not attack them. They breed great numbers of cattle, and they kill as many lions, tigers, and other wild beasts, as they can. They also hunt elephants, for the sake of their teeth, and they smoke-dry and eat their flesh. They are dressed in white cotton garments, and are always neat and clean, especially the women, who keep their houses very sweet. These are placed at a distance from each other, for fear of fires, and they are small round huts, thatched on the top, and have no windows nor light, but what comes through the doors. Their towns are enclosed with pales, and, at some distance from thence, a thick hedge. The space between them is sown with the things above mentioned.

FOULSHAM, a town of Norfolk, with a market on Tuesdays, but no fairs, seated on a common, and is a pretty large town. It is 12 miles N. W. of Norwich, and 102 N. E. of London. Lon. 18. 45. lat. 42. 48.

FOWEY, or FOY, a town of Cornwall, with a market on Saturdays, and two fairs, on May 1, and September 10, for horses, oxen, sheep, cloth, and a few hops. It is by some called Foy, and is a borough town, which sends 2 members to parliament. It is seated on an ascent, is well fortified, and its haven well secured with block-houses. It is at present a good trading place, and its market is well supplied with corn. It is 24 miles W. of Portsmouth, 32 S. W. of Launceston, and 240 W. by S. of London. Lon. 12. 35. lat. 50. 26.

FOY, S. F. a town of Agernois and Guienne, in France, seated on the river Dordogne. It was formerly fortified by the reformed, but was taken from them in 1662. It is 35 miles E. of Bourdeaux. Lon. 17. 35. lat. 44. 49.

FRAGA, a strong town of Spain, in the kingdom of Arragon, with a handsome castle. It is strong by situation, among the mountains, having the river Cinca before it, whose high banks are difficult of access, and at its back there is a hill, which cannot easily be approached with large cannon. The gardens produce herbs and saffron, but the parts about it are barren. Alphonso VII. king of Arragon, and the first of that name of Castile, was killed here by the Moors in 1134, when he besieged this town. It is 30 miles S. of Balbastro, and 50 S. E. of Saragossa. Lon. 17. 58. lat. 41. 23.

FRAMTINGHAM, a town of Suffolk, with a market on Saturdays, and two fairs, on Whit-monday, and September 29, for for millenary-goods, cloths, and toys. It is seated near the head of a small riuulet, upon a clay hill; it is a large place, and is defended by a high wall, built by the Saxons, but it is walled and double-ditched only on one side, because there is a large meer on the other. It had 13 high towers, but is now much decayed, being turned into a large work-house. However, the out-part looks more like a castle, than the ruins of one. The chief ornament of this town is the church, in which there are several monuments, of the families of the dukes of Norfolk and Richmond, and the Earls of Surrey. In this town there are about 600 houses, which are, in general, mean ones, and the streets not being paved, are very dirty. It is 32 miles E. of Bury, and 86 N. E. of London. Lon. 19. 5. lat. 52. 25.

FRAMPTON, a town in Dorsetshire, with a market on Thursdays, and 4 fairs, on March 4, March 7, August 13, and September 4, for all sorts of cattle. It is pleasantly seated on the river Frome, which abounds in trouts and other fish. It is but a small place, 12 miles N. of Weymouth, 62. S. of Bristol, and 117 W. by S. of London. Lon. 14. 53. lat. 50. 43.

FRAMPTON, a village in Gloucestershire, with one fair, on February 14, for small pedlars ware.

FRANCE, a large country of Europe, bounded on the N. by the Netherlands, on the E. by Germany, Switzerland, Savoy, and the Alps, on the S. by the Mediterranean-Sea and the Pyrennees, and on the W. by the ocean. It is about 600 miles in length, and 562 in breadth, and the air is pure, healthy, and temperate. It is so happily seated in the middle of the temperate zone, that some make it equal to Italy, with regard to the delightfulness of the landscapes, and the fertility of the soil; however, it is certainly much more healthful. The politeness of the inhabitants is well known, but most think them too ceremonious. The soil produces corn, wine, oil, and flax, in great abundance, and they have very large manufactures of linnen, woollen, silk, and lace. They have a foreign trade to Spain, Italy, Turkey, and to the E. and W. Indies, which is prodigiously increased of late, though the present war has given a great check to it. They themselves reckon that the number of the inhabitants is 203,000,000. This kingdom contains 21 universities, 18 archbishopricks, 12 parliaments, 12 board of accounts, 12 courts of aids, 2 courts, and 30 mints for coining money, and 2 supreme councils, besides the grand council, and 31 governors. The king has the title of most christian, and is an absolute prince, to whom his subjects are extremely devoted, though he rules them never so severely. In general they are men of bright parts, and have so high an opinion of themselves, that they look upon other nations with contempt; however they are of a very restless disposition, and are engaged in war more than any other country in Europe, for which reason they are generally poor, though they might certainly be very rich, if they could let their neighbours live in quiet, without attempting continually to enlarge their dominions. They are such ill observers of treaties of peace, that French faith is now become a proverb; for they are bound by no ties, and never fail beginning a war when they think it is for their advantage. The king's revenue is large, his army very numerous, and he has 10,000 men always about his person. The principal provinces are, Alsace, Angoumois, Anjou, Armagnac, Artois, Aunis, Auvergne, Beaujolois, Beauce, Berry, Bigorre, Bourbonnois, Burgundy, the Franche Comte, Bresse, Bretagne, Brie, Bugey, Cambresis, Champagne, Dauphiny, Flanders, Forez, Gasconny, Guienne, Hainault, the Isle of France, Languedoc, Limosin, Lionnois, Maine, Marche, Navarre, Nivernois, Normandy, Orlannois, Perche, Perigord, Picardy, Poitou, Provence, Quercy, Rouergue, Roussillon, Saintonge, Touraine, Vivarais, and Lorraine; all these provinces are divided into districts, which have their particular names. This kingdom is watered by a great number of rivers, of which the four principal are, the Loire, the Seine, the Rhone, and the Garonne, or Gironde, which will all be taken notice of in their proper places. The parliaments have little or no share in the government, and their business now is, to pass the arrears or laws which the king is pleased to send them; however, they don't always pay a blind obedience to the king, for we have instances of their making a noble stand, and that but a few years since. In civil causes these parliaments are still the last resort, providing the court does not interpose. That of Paris is the most considerable, where the king often comes in person to see his royal acts recorded. It consists of the dukes and peers of France, besides the ordinary members, who purchase their places; and they only take cognizance of causes belonging to the crown. The revenues of the crown arise from the taille or land-tax, and the aids which proceed from the customs and duties on all merchandize except salt, for the tax upon that commodity is called the Gabelles; besides these, there are other taxes, as the capitation or poll-tax, the tenths of all estates, offices, and employments; besides the fifteenth penny, from which neither the nobility or clergy are exempted. Add to these the tenths, and free-gifts of the clergy, who are allowed to tax themselves; and lastly, the crown-rents, fines and forfeitures, which bring in a considerable sum. All these are said to amount to 15,000,000 sterling a-year. But the king has other resources and ways of raising money, whenever necessity obliges him. The army, in time of peace, is said to consist of 200,000 men, and in time of war 400,000; among which are many Swifs, Germans, Scotch, Irish, Swedes, and Danes. There is no religion allowed in France but the Roman Catholic; ever since the revocation of the edict of Nantz, in 1685, though they are not so devoted to the Pope as other nations of that communion, nor have they any inquisition among them.

* FRANCE, the Isle of, a province of France so called, because it was formerly bounded by the rivers Seine, Marne, Oise, Aisne, and Ourque. It comprehends, besides Paris, the Beauvoisis, the Valois, the county of Senlis, the Vexin, the Hurepois, the Goumois, the Multien, the Goele, and the Mantois. Paris is the capital.

FRANCFORT on the MAINE, an ancient, large, strong, rich, imperial, hanſatick, and handsome town of Germany, in Franconia. The chief structure is the town-house, which is very large and handsome, but built in the ancient taste; in this the golden bull is preserved, which is the original of the fundamental laws of the empire. The Emperor is generally elected and crowned here, unless the plague or war will not admit of the solemnities proper to the occasion. Most of the inhabitants are protestants, of the confession of Augſburg; but there are some Calvinists and French refugees, besides papists, who have the cathedral church. There are also a great number of Jews, who live in a quarter by themselves, which is always shut up at night, to prevent disorders. This town is one of the most trading places in Europe, and there are two great fairs here held every year. It is seated in a very fertile plain, upon the river Main, which divides it in two, 15 miles N. E. of Mentz, 45 N. of Heidelberg, 32 N. E. of Worms, 75 S. E. of Cologne, and 350 W. by N. of Vienna. Lon. 26. 15. lat. 49. 55.

FRANCFORT on the ODER, a rich and handsome town of Germany, in the middle Marche of Brandenburg, formerly imperial, but now subject to the king of Prussia. It is remarkable for its three great fairs, and for its university, which is always provided with learned professors. It is 45 miles S. E. of Berlin, 30 N. E. of Wittenberg, and 80 N. of Steutin. Lon. 32. 35. lat. 52. 20.

FRANCHE COMTE, or the county of Burgundy, a considerable province of France, bounded on the N. by Lorraine, on the E. by Montbelliard and Switzerland, on the W. by Bassigny, Burgundy, and Braſſe, and on the S. by Bresse. It is about 125 miles in length, and 30 in breadth, and abounds in corn, wine, cattle, horses, mines of iron, copper, and lead. It is watered by the rivers Sone, Lounon, Doux, Louvre, and Dain. It was conquered by France in 1674, and ceded to it by the treaty of Nimeguen in 1678. Befanzon is the capital town.

FRANCHEMONT, a town of Germany in the bishoprick of Liege, 13 miles S. E. of Liege. Lon. 23. 23. lat. 50. 30.

FRANCOINT, a place of Italy, in the territories of the Pope, which formerly had a strong fortress, but at present only a village. It is seated on one of the branches of the river Po. It was here that prince Eugene of Savoy passed that river in 1705, in his memorable march to relieve Turin. It is 6 miles N. of Ferrara. Lon. 29. 30. lat. 44. 48.

FRANCONIA, a country or circle of Germany, bounded on the N. by Thuringia, on the S. by Swabia, on the E. by the Upper Palatinate, and on the W. by the Lower Palatinate; being about 88 miles from N. to S. and 92 from E. to W. The middle is very fertile in corn, wine, and fruits, but the borders are full of woods and barren mountains. The ecclesiasticks are rich and powerful, and consequently the people must be poor, and it is certain a great number of beggars come from thence. It is composed of a great many districts, of which the bishopricks of Bamberg, Würzburg, Aichstat, and the Domaine of the Grand Teutonic Order, are the principal. The greatest part of the people are Protestants, but there are many Papists and Calvinists. There are also Jews, who have their synagogues. The Franks came from this province who conquered France, and gave their name to that kingdom.

* FRIAS, a considerable town of Spain, in Old Castile, seated on a mountain near the river Ebro, 35 miles N. W. of Burgos. Lon. 14. 8. lat. 42. 50.

FRIEBURG, a large town of Germany, and capital of Brisgaw. It is remarkable for the tower-teeple of the great church, which, except that of Strasburg, is the finest in Germany, and for its university. The inhabitants are famous for polishing chrysal and precious stones. It has been several times taken and re-taken, particularly by the French in 1744, who demolished the fortifications. It is seated on the river Triser, 10 miles E. of Brisach, 22 N. E. of Basle, and 30 S. of Strasburg. Lon. 25. 32. lat. 48. 4.

FRIEBURG, a town of Swisserland, and capital of the canton of the same name. The publick buildings, especially the cathedral, are very handsome, and the inhabitants are Papists. It is governed in spirituals by the bishop of Laufane, who resides there, and in temporals by a council, over which an Avoyer presides. Its situation is very extraordinary, for only the western side is near plain ground, and all the rest is built among rocks and hills. The streets are clean and large, and it is divided into four parts, the town, the city, the osland or meadow, and the hospital. In 1737 the powder-magazine, which contained 750 tons of gun-powder, was set on fire by lightning, which did considerable damage. It is seated on the river Save, 17 miles S. W. of Bern, 30 N. E. of Lawfan, 35 W. of Soleure, and 75 S. W. of Zurich. Lon. 24. 40. lat. 46. 50.

* FRIBURG, the canton of, and one of the 13 republicks of Swisserland. It is surrounded on all sides by the canton of Bern, and the land is fruitful in corn, fruits, and pastures. It is said they can send 18,000 men into the field.

* FRIBURG, the hermitage of, is a celebrated hermitage of Swisserland, three miles from Friburg. It is cut in a rock, and contains a church and steeple, a vestry, a kitchen, a large hall, two rooms on each side two pair of stairs, and a cellar. The church is 63 feet long, 36 broad, and 22 high. But the most wonderful thing of all is the steeple, which is 70 feet high above the rock. The chimney of the kitchen is also very surprising, for the passage up it is 90 feet in height. It is almost inconceivable how one man, with his servant, could perform so difficult a work, though they were 25 years about it.

FRICENTI, a town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in the Farther Principato, with a bishop's see. It is near the river Tripalto, 20 miles S. E. of Benevento, and 35 N. E. of Salerno. Lon. 32. 48. lat. 40. 59.

* FRIEBERG, a town of Germany, in Wetteravia, much more considerable formerly than it is at present, though it is an imperial town, and governed by its own magistrates. It is seated on a mountain, 10 miles N. E. of Francfort, and 12 S. of Gießen. Lon. 26. 25. lat. 50. 14.

* FRIEBERG, the name of two small towns in Silesia, the one in the duchy of Javer, and the other in the duchy of Schweidnitz. This last is remarkable for a battle gained there by the king of Prussia over the Austrians in June 1745.

GALICIA, now called also GUADALAJARA, a country of N. America, in New-Spain, bounded on the E. by Old Mexico, on the N. by the New, and on the W. by the S. Sea. The air is temperate, and there is abundance of corn and pulse; here are also mines of silver and copper. The native Americans are fond of dancing to the highest degree, and paint their bodies, adorning themselves with feathers.

GALILEE, anciently a province of Judea, but now of Turkey in Asia. The bounds are not now certainly known, nor yet the places where many of the towns stood.

GALISTIO, a small town of Spain, in Estramadura, near the city of Coria. Here the duke of Berwick opposed the march of the confederate army to Placentia, in April 1706, who shamefully run away at the approach of the latter. It is 17 miles N. W. of Placentia. Lon. 29. 21. lat. 39. 42.

GALL, ST. a considerable town in Switzerland, and in the Upper Thurgow, with a rich and celebrated abbey, whose abbot is a prince of the empire. This place has for some time been a republick, in alliance with the cantons. It is not very large, but is well built, neat, populous, and contains about 10,000 inhabitants, who are chiefly employed in the linen manufacture; inasmuch that it is said that they annually make 40,000 pieces of linen, of 200 ells each, which renders it one of the richest towns in Switzerland. The inhabitants are protestants, for which reason there is often great contests between them and the abbey, about religious affairs. It is seated in a narrow, barren valley, between two mountains, and upon two small streams, 37 miles N. E. of Zurich, 5 W. of the lake Constance, 120 N. E. of Bern, and 62 N. E. of Lucern. Lon. 47. 40. lat. 47. 38.

* GALLA, a considerable fort in the island of Ceylon, belonging to the Dutch, who drove the Portuguese thence in 1640. Some call it Punta-de-Gallo. Lon. 97. 0. lat. 6. 30.

GALLAPAGOS ISLANDS, the name of several islands in the South-Sea, lying on both sides the equator, discovered by the Spaniards, to whom they belong. They are not inhabited; for the Spaniards only call there for fresh water and provisions, when they sail from America to Asia. Here are a great number of birds and excellent tortoises,

* GALLI, a people of Africa, in Abyssinia, great enemies to the Abyssinians, from whom they have taken several provinces. They are a wild cruel people, and live chiefly on the flocks and herds, and by robbing. They are circumcised, have as many wives as they please, and are continually roving from one place to another.

GALLIPOLI, a sea-port town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in the Terra-di-Otranto, with a bishop's see, a fort, and a harbour. It is seated on a rock, surrounded by the sea, and which is joined to the firm land by a bridge. It is 27 miles W. of Otranto, and 45 S. E. of Taranto. Lon. 35. 45. lat. 40. 20.

GALLIPOLI, a sea-port town of Turkey in Europe, in the province of Romania, seated at the mouth of the sea of Marmora, with a good harbour, and a bishop's see. It contains about 10,000 Turks, 3500 Greeks, besides a great number of Jews. The Bazar, or Bezestein, the place where merchandizes are sold, is a handsome structure, with domes covered with lead. It is an open place, and has no other defence than a sorry square castle. The houses of the Greeks and Jews have doors, not above two feet and a half high, to prevent the Turks riding into their houses. It is 40 miles S. W. of Rodiste, and 100 S. W. of Constantinople. Lon. 44. 34. lat. 40. 30.

GALLO, an island of the S. Sea, near the sea-coast of Peru, in S. America, which was the first place possessed by the Spaniards, when they attempted the conquest of Peru; it is also the place where the Buccaneers used to come for wood and water, and to rest their vessels, when they were in these parts. Lon. 227. 35. lat. 2. 30.

GALLOWAY, or GALLOWAY, is a county of Scotland, about 170 miles in length, from E. to W. and 100 in breadth, from N. to S. It is bounded on the S. and W. by the sea; on the N. by Carrick and Kyle; and on the S. by Nithsdale. It contains several rivers, and a great number of lakes from half a mile to two miles in length.

* GALWAY, or GALLOWAY, a county of Ireland, which is 82 miles in length, and 42 in breadth; bounded by the counties of Clare, Tipperary, King's-County, Roscommon, and the sea. The river Shannon washes the frontiers of the E. and

and S. E. and forms a lake several miles in length. There is another great lake, called Corbes, or Carrib, which is near 20 miles long, and 5 broad. It contains 15,420 houses, and 136 parishes, 17 baronies, 13 boroughs, and sends 8 members to parliament, viz. 2 for the county, 2 for Galway, 2 for Athlunry, and 2 for Tuam. The capital town is of the same name.

GALWAY, a town of Ireland, in the county of the same name, and province of Connaught, of which it is the capital. It is surrounded with strong walls, with large strait streets, and the houses are generally well built with stone. It has a good trade into foreign parts, on account of its harbour, which is defended by a fort. It is seated on the bay of Galway on the Western Ocean, 30 miles W. of Athlone, 37 N. of Limerick, and 100 W. of Dublin. Lon. 8. 23. lat. 53. 12.

* GANIACHES, a town of France, on the confines of Normandy and Picardy, with the title of a marquissate, and it has a handsome castle, and a collegiate church. It is seated on the river Bresle, and is partly in the diocese of Rouen, and partly in that of Amiens.

GAMBIA, a great river of Africa, in Negroland, which running from E. to W. falls into the Atlantic Ocean. Some of the English factors affirm, that it is navigable for sloops above 600 miles. However, it is certain, that if vessels were sent up it soon after the rainy season, when the channel is full of water, they might go a great deal farther, and make new discoveries. The English have a large factory on James-Island, which lies 20 miles up the river, and almost in the middle of it, three miles from the nearest shore. This island is about a mile in circumference, and there is a fort built, mounted with cannon, with a small garrison to defend it. Besides this, there are small factories at several places, a great way up the river; and they trade with the natives for gold, elephants-teeth, bees-wax, and slaves. They had found out a way to purchase gum-senega; but since the taking of Senegal, the gum-trade is entirely in possession of the English, and it is greatly hoped care will be taken to preserve it. There are several countries and people about this river, which will be mentioned in their proper places. It overflows annually, like the Nile, at the same time, and for the same reasons, namely, the heavy and constant rains that fall at the same time of the year up the country.

* GANARA, a kingdom of Africa, in Negroland, lying on the river Niger, and capital of a kingdom of the same name, though some call it Guangara. Besides this, there are nothing but small villages, tho' the country is very populous. It lies very far to the E. and almost borders upon Abyssinia; and travellers affirm, that there is a good deal of gold in the South parts. The roads are unpassable for camels; and therefore their commodities are carried on men's shoulders.

* GANDERSHEIM, a town of Germany, in the circle of Lower Saxony, and in the duchy of Brunswick-Wolfenbüttele, with a celebrated nunnery. It is 17 miles S. W. of Goslar. Lon. 27. 46. lat. 51. 48.

GANDIA, a sea-port town of Spain, in the kingdom of Valencia, with the title of a duchy, and a small university. It is seated near the sea, 55 miles N. of Alicant, and 32 S. E. of Valencia. Lon. 17. 55. lat. 39. 6.

* GANDICOT, a strong town of Asia, in the peninsula on this side the Ganges, and in the kingdom of Carnate, with a famous pagod, or heathen temple, wherein there are several idols of gold and silver.

GANGEA, or GANDJA, a town of Asia, in Persia, and in Georgia, capital of a province of the same name. It is one of the best towns of Persia, and is seated on a pleasant plain, about 80 miles in length. The great number of rivers that meet there, and which the inhabitants make use of to water their gardens, take up a good part of the town, and render the soil about it exceeding fertile. The houses are built among a great number of groves and thickets of lovely trees, and the Bazars, or market-places, are as magnificent as any in the East. There is a particular quarter assigned for every sort of commodity. It is always crowded by a great number of foreigners, who come there to trade. It is 115 miles N. E. of Erivan, and 105 S. by E. of Teflis. Lon. 65. 10. Lon. 41. 32.

GANGES, a large and celebrated river of Asia, in India. It has its source in the mountains, which border on little Tibet, in 96 degrees of longitude, and 35 45 of latitude. It crosses several kingdoms, running from N. to S. and falls into the bay of Bengal, by several mouths.

The waters are lowest in April and May, and highest before the end of September. It overflows yearly like the Nile; and renders the kingdom of Bengal as fruitful as that of the Delta in Egypt. The people in these parts have the water of this river in high veneration; and it is visited annually by a prodigious number of pilgrims from all parts of India. The English have several settlements on this river, which will be taken notice of in their proper places. The greatest happiness that many of the Indians wish for is to dye in this river.

GANI, or COULOR, a town of Asia, in the kingdom of Golconda, in which is a rich diamond mine. It is 100 miles E. of Bagnagar, and is subject to the Great Mogul. Lon. 60. 35. lat. 36. 0.

* GAAGA, a kingdom of Africa, lying on the eastern extremity of Negroland. It is bounded on the E. by Nubia; on the N. by Tagua; on the W. by Ganguara; and on the S. by Bournio. It is about 500 miles in length, and as many in breadth. The inhabitants are little better than brutes, especially those that dwell in the mountains; and they always go naked. The houses are nothing but pitiful huts; but they have plenty of cattle. Between this kingdom and the river Nile there is a desert, which reaches as far N. as the frontiers of Egypt. Religion they have little or none, nor yet any towns.

GAP, an ancient town of France, in Dauphiny, and capital of the Gapenzois, with a bishop's see. It was taken by the duke of Savoy in 1692, who burnt a great part of it, and rendered it less considerable than it was before. It is seated at the foot of a mountain, 27 miles N. of Sisteron, 20 W. of Embrun, and 50 S. by E. of Grenoble. Lon. 23. 44. lat. 44. 35.

* GARACK, a considerable isle of Asia, in the gulf of Persia, remarkable for the fine pearls which have been fished up on its coasts. Lon. 67. 15. lat. 28. 45.

GARAU, a promontory of France, in Provence, not far from Antibes, which runs pretty far into the sea, and forms the bay on Cannes.

GARDA, a town of Italy, in the territory of Venice, and in the Veronete. It is seated at the end of a great lake of the same name, which is 20 miles in length, and 10 in breadth. It is 17 miles N. W. of Verona. Lon. 28. 16. lat. 45. 35.

* GARDE, an ancient bridge of France, in Lower Languedoc, built by the Romans. It is over the river Gardon; 12 miles from Nifines, and 5 from Uzès. It is built with free-stone, of a surprizing magnitude, and has three rows of arches one above another. The lower row has 35 arches, and is 500 paces in length.

GARDELEBEN, a town of Germany, in the Old Marche of Brandenburg, subject to the king of Prussia. It has a trade in hops and excellent beer. It is seated on the river Belse, 22 miles N. by W. of Magdeburg, and 55 N. E. of Bruntwick. Lon. 29. 30. lat. 52. 42.

* GAREE, a town of Africa, in Barbary, in the kingdom of Morocco, and province of Suz, remarkable for its sugar mills.

* GARET, a province of the kingdom of Fez, in Barbary. It is a mountainous country, but has good iron mines, and is well peopled, except towards the S. which is desert, and without water. The principal town is Mellila.

GARGANO, or ST. ANGELO, a promontory of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, in the Capitanata. There is one of the oldest and most celebrated convents built thereon in this kingdom, except that on Mount Cassino.

* GARGRAVE, a village in the W. riding of Yorkshire, not far from Ripley, with one fair in December 11, for horned cattle and toys.

* GARNERS-STREET, a village in Suffex, with one fair on August 5, for pedlars ware.

GARONNE, a large river of France, which has its source in Catalonia, and in the Pyrenean mountains. It washes part of Gascony, Upper Languedoc, and all Guienne; but having received the Dordogne, it assumes the name of Gironde, under which it falls into the sea of Gascony. It passes by St. Bertrand, Rieux, Toulouse, Verdun, Agen, Bourdeaux, and several less considerable places.

GARRISON, a town of Ireland, in the county of Fermanagh, and in the province of Ulster, 10 miles S. of Bally Shannon. Lon. 9. 15. lat. 54. 16.

GARSTRANG, a town of Lancashire, with a market on Thursdays; and three fairs, on Hely Thursday, for horned cattle; on July 21, and December 3, for horned cattle, wool, and cloth. It is seated on the river Wyre, and is a good thoroughfare to Lancaster, from which it is 10 miles N. and 22 N. N. W. of London. Lon. 14. 55. lat. 53. 50.

* GARTZ,

* GARTS, a town of Germany, in Pomerania, on the confines of the Marche of Brandenburg, and subject to the king of Prussia. Lon. 34. 45. lat. 53. 13.

GASCONY, a large province of France, and part of the general government of Guienne. It is bounded on the N. by Guienne; on the W. by Languedoc and the county of Foix; on the S. by the Pyrenees, which separate it from Spain; and on the W. by the sea of Gascony. It comprehends Landes, Chalosse, Turfan, Marfan, the territory of Albret, the Basques, Bearn, Bigorre, Comminges, Armagnac, Conserans, Condomois, and part of Bazadois, and of Bourdalois. The Gascons are said to have quick parts; but they are given to boast of their valour, which has occasioned the name of Gasconade to be given to all bragging stories. The Gascons, who inhabit the districts near the Pyrenees, are originally of Spain.

* GASPESIA, a province of N. America; bounded on the N. by the mountains of Notre Dame; on the N. and E. by the gulph of St. Lawrence; on the S. by Nova Scotia; and on the W. by Canada. It is inhabited by savages, who are well-made, robust, active, and nimble. They live constantly in the fields, and rove from one place to another in search of game, for they live by hunting and fishing. They daub their faces with black and red, and some of them pierce the gristle between their nostrils, and hang beads therein. They worship the sun, and are much addicted to drunkenness; but they are not so covetous as the rest of the native Americans.

GASSENHOVEN, a town of the Austrian Netherlands, 4 miles E. of Tittlemont, and 15 E. of Louvaine. Lon. 22. 25. lat. 50. 55.

* GASTINOIS, a province of France, about 45 miles in length, and 30 in breadth. It abounds in pastures, forests, and excellent saffron.

GATE, a long chain of mountains in Asia, in the peninsula, on this side the Ganges, which it divides throughout its length into two unequal parts. But the most remarkable thing is, that on the side of the coast of Malabar the winter begins about the end of June, with a S. W. wind; and at the same time on the other side upon Coromandel coast, they enjoy a pleasant spring, and the finest season in the year.

GATTON, a town of Surry, which was formerly very large, but is now reduced to a village, and has neither market nor fair. However, it sends two members to parliament. It is 19 miles S. of London. Lon. 17. 25. lat. 15. 18.

GAVARDO, a town of Italy, in Bresciano, seated on the river Weisse, about 7 miles W. of the lake Di Garda, and subject to Venice. The Imperialists retired to this place after their defeat at Garfinado, in April 1705. Lon. 29. 20. lat. 45. 28.

* GAUDENS, a very populous town of France, and capital of the Neboufan. It is seated on the river Garonne, 5 miles N. E. of St. Bertrand. Lon. 18. 36. lat. 43. 8.

GAVEREN, or WAVEREN, a town of the Austrian Netherlands, in Flanders. It is seated on the eastern bank of the river Scheld, 8 miles S. E. of Ghent, and 5 N. E. of Oudenard. Lon. 21. 10. lat. 51. 0.

* GAVI, a town of Italy, in the territory of Genoa, standing on the river Lemo, towards the confines of Montferrat. It is very strongly seated; but the fortifications are not kept in repair. It is 15 miles N. of Genoa, and 12 S. E. of Alcindrino. Lon. 26. 32. lat. 44. 37.

GAUL, a country of Europe, which was formerly very famous. It is bounded by Germany and Italy on the E. the German Ocean and the British Channel on the N. the Western Ocean on the W. and the Mediterranean on the S. It was separated from Italy by the Alps, and from Spain by the Pyrenees. It was not a particular monarchy, but was possessed by a great number of people, independent of each other.

GAUR, a territory in the province of Chorassen, in Persia, and on the confines of India.

GAURES, or GUEBRES, a people of Asia, in Persia, and in the E. Indies, who are the remains of the ancient Persees, or Persians, who are noted for their worshipping of fire and the sun; for they say God is light. They pretend to have a fire which has never been extinguished for 4000 years. They make tilling the land an act of religion, and look upon it as the most agreeable to God. They affirm Zoroaster to be the founder of their worship; and they believe two principles, the one good and the other bad. They are a mild innocent sort of people; and have been very patient under persecutions. They live under the conduct and direction of their elders and priests; and look upon Alexander the Great and Mahomets as two wicked men. They marry none but of their own religion; and are allowed but one wife, unless the first proves barren: however, they don't trouble their heads how near a-kin their wives are. The employment of their priests is to take care of the sacred fire, which they say was first lighted by their great prophet Zoroaster, whose return they daily expect. They never bury their dead, but expose them in the open air, in places surrounded with high walls, to be devoured by birds of prey.

* GAYWOOD, a village in Norfolk, a mile E. of King's Lynn, with one fair, kept in the village itself, on June 11, for horses; and another, held at the custom-house quay of Lynn, on October 6, for cheese.

* GAZA, an ancient and celebrated town of Palestine, about 3 miles from the sea, with a harbour called New Gaza. It is at present very small; but we may judge by the ruins that it was formerly a considerable place. There is a castle near it, where a bashaw resides. It is 50 miles S. W. of Jerusalem. Lon. 52. 30. lat. 31. 28.

* GEARON, or JARON, a small town of Asia, in Persia, and in Faristan, between Shiras and Bandar-Congo; in whose territory the best dates of Persia are produced. Lon. 72. 32. lat. 28. 25.

GEET, a river of the Austrian Netherlands, which rising in the S. E. part of Brabant, runs N. near the confines of Liege, and passes by Lande and Leaw, falls into the Demer a little below Halen.

* GEGENRACH, a small, free, and imperial city of Germany, in the circle of Suabia, and in Mordenaw, under the protection of the house of Austria. It is seated on the river Kinzia, 15 miles S. E. of Straßburg, and 25 N. of Friburg. Lon. 25. 41. lat. 41. 25.

* GRILLDORFF, a town of Germany, in Suabia, seated near the river Kocher, with a castle that belongs to the Lords of Limpurg.

* GEISELGEN, a handsome imperial town of Germany, in Suabia, 17 miles N. W. of Ulm. Lon. 27. 37. lat. 48. 38.

* GENEWOA, a kingdom of Africa, in Negroland. It is by some called Gheneoa; but the natives themselves call it Genni; and the Europeans Ghitrea. It is bounded by Gualata on the N. by Tombuto on the E. by the river Senegal on the S. and on the W. by the Atlantick ocean. Between Gualata and this country there is a desert, 50 miles broad; and the river General, on the side of which it lies, was by ancient authors called the Niger. It is about 500 miles in length, and extends to above 150 miles on the above river. It is very fruitful in rice, fish, and cattle; and they drive a trade with the Barbary merchants, who come in large caravans from that country. There is neither town nor castle; but has one large village, inhabited by their principal people. Their houses are built like hells, pointed at the top with walls of clay, and roofs of reeds. When the river overflows in July, August, and September, the merchants of Tomba bring their wares hither in canoes. This is thought to be the country from whence the coast of Guinea derives its name; and of late it has undergone several revolutions. The principal village is said to be 120 miles below Tomba.

GENÈRE, or GENNER, a strong town of Germany, in the circle of Westphalia, with a castle. It was taken by the Dutch in 1647, and by the French in 1692. It is now subject to the king of Prussia, and is situated on the river Neer, near the Maese, 20 miles S. W. of Cleve, 12 S. E. of Nimwegen, and 25 N. of Venloo. Lon. 25. 25. lat. 51. 27.

GENÈVA, an ancient, large, and populous town, capital of a republic of the same name, near the confines of France and Switzerland. It is very ancient, and was well known in the time of the Romans, Julius Cæsar made use of it as a Bulwark against the Helvetians. It is well built, rich, and densely peopled. Here are always a great number of Armies, who are travelling from France to Italy, or from Italy to France. It is divided by the river Rhone into two unequal parts, and which also bears another name, full of fine water, and has a very ancient structure, called the tower of Cassin. The largest part is built on a hill, which descends by a gentle declivity, and lies to the S. of the river; the other part communicates with the island by two large wooden bridges. St. Peter's church is a vast structure, built in the Gothic taste, and has three towers, the least of which is covered with the plates of gold. The ascent is well furnished, and there is a strong garrison. The college, where there is a magnificent library, is well worth observation. In general it is a very agreeable place, and there is nothing omitted to render it delightful. The principal riches of the inhabitants proceed from their manufactures, of which they have a great number; but the most considerable are, watches, cloths, and gold and silver lace. The revenues of the republic arise from the duty on merchandizes which are carried out of the city, and from a prodigious quantity of coin which the magistrates buy, and sell to the inhabitants. The sovereignty of this republic is lodged in the assembly of the citizens and burghers, but there are several bodies of the magistracy, who have each their proper province, and whose heads are chosen by the people. The great council consists of 200 persons, from among whom there are 24 counsellors chosen, of which 4 are sénéchals, who are heads of the republic; and chosen every year. They are jealous of their liberties, and are in alliance with the cantons of Bern, Zurich, and Soleure. It was formerly a free imperial city, and a bishop's see, but the bishop was expelled when they embraced Calvinism, in 1535. They will not allow playing at cards, or drinking at publick houses; but they exercise their militia, play at bowls, and use other exercises on a Sunday. It is 20 miles N. E. of Lyons, 65 S. of Basanzon, 20 N. E. of Chambéry, and 135 N. W. of Turin. Lon. 23. 50. lat. 46. 13.

ria, where it has the name of Genoa the proud. It is very populous, and one of the most trading places in Italy. They reckon there is 70,000 inhabitants, of which 25,000 families are employed in making velvets, silks, and the like. It is an archbishop's see, has an academy, a good harbour, and lofty walls, fortified in such places where they are most likely to be attacked. There is a large aqueduct, which supplies a great number of fountains with water, in all parts of the city. The houses are well built, and are 5 or 6 stories high; and here are 17 churches, 17 convents, and 2 large hospitals. The government is aristocratic, because none but the nobility can have any share in it; there are of two sorts, the old and the new, from whence there are 80 persons chosen, who make the great council, in which their sovereignty resides. Besides these, there is a senate, composed of the Doge and 12 senators, who have the common administration of affairs. The Doge continues in his office but two years. The harbour is very considerable, and to preserve it they have built a mole of 260 paces in length, and 15 in breadth; they have raised it 15 feet above the level of the water, that it may the better shelter the ships, and break the force of the waves. Upon this mole there is a tower, with 260 steps to go up to the top, where in the night-time they place a great number of lanterns. The harbour may be shut up with a chain, which will hinder the sailing out or coming in of the vessels. It was bombarded by the French in 1684, and submitted to the Hungarians in 1746, but a citizen being abused by an Austrian officer, the inhabitants rose and massacred part of the soldiers, and drove away the rest. It was besieged afterwards by the Austrians; but the French coming to the assistance of the town, they were obliged to raise the siege, in July 1747. The ordinary revenue of this republick is 300,000 l. a year, and there is a bank which is partly supported by publick duties. They generally keep two or three years provision of corn, wine, and oil, in their magazines, which they sell to the people in scarce times. It is 70 miles S. of Milan, 62 S. E. of Turin, 63 S. W. of Parma, 112 N. W. of Florence, and 227 N. W. of Rome. Lon. 26. 32. lat. 44. 24.

comprehends the coast of Genoa, the island of Corsica, and the island of Capriva, on the coast of Tuscany, but it was formerly more considerable than it is at present. The coast of Genoa extends along the Mediterranean Sea, which is to the S. between Tuscany and the duchy of Massa; to the E. the county of Nice, the principality of Monaco, and the Appennine mountains to the W. and the duchies of Milan, Parma, and Montserrat to the N. It is about 130 miles in length, but not much above 20 miles in breadth. It is populous, well cultivated, and fertile near the sea; but the inner parts are very mountainous, and barren in several places, having neither trees nor grass upon them.

GEORGE, ST. DEL MINA, a fort of Africa, on the gold-coast of Guinea, and the principal settlement the Dutch have in those parts. It was taken from the Portuguese in 1630, by the Dutch, who have kept it ever since. The fort or castle is the best upon the coast of Guinea, and is built square, with very high walls, having four good batteries. Here is room for a garrison of above 400 men, with convenient lodgings for officers. Under the castle is the town, called by the natives Oddena, which is very long, and pretty broad. The houses are built with stone, which is very extraordinary, for in all other places they are composed only of clay and wood. It was once very populous, but the inhabitants were destroyed by the small pox, so that it is greatly reduced, and they are become very poor. It is about 10 miles W. of Cape-coast-castle. Lon. 17. 20. lat. 5. 20.

GEORGE, ST. a fort and town of Asia, in the peninsula on this side the Ganges, and on the coast of Cormandel, belonging to the English; it is otherwise called Madras, and by the natives Chilli-pattam. It fronts the sea, and has a salt-water river on its backside, which hinders the fresh water springs from coming near the town, so that they have no good water within a mile of them. In the rainy season it is incommoded by inundations, and from April to September it is so scorching hot, that if the sea-breezes did not cool the air, there would be no living there. There are two towns, one of which is called the white town, which is walled round, and has several bastions and batteries to defend it: it is 400 paces long, and 150 broad, and is divided into regular streets. Here are two churches, one for the Protestants, and the other for the Papiſts; as also a good hospital, a town-hall, and a prison for debtors. They are a corporation, and have a mayor and aldermen, with other proper officers. The black town is inhabited by Gentows, Mahometans, and Portugueze and Armenian Christians, and each religion have their temples and churches. This, as well as the white town, is ruled by the English governor, and his council. The diamond mines are but a week's journey from this place, which renders them pretty plentiful, but there are no large ones since that great diamond was procured by governor Pitt. This colony produces very little of its own growth or manufacture for foreign markets, and the trade is in the hands of the Armenians and Gentows. The chief things the English deal in, besides diamonds, are, calicoes, chintz, muslins, and the like. This colony may consist of 80,000 inhabitants, in the towns and villages, and there are generally 4 or 500 Europeans: their rice is brought by sea from Gangam and Orixia, their wheat from Surat and Bengal, and their fire-wood from the islands of Miu, insomuch that an enemy, with a superior force at sea, may easily distress them. The houses of the white town are built with brick, and have lofty rooms, and flat roofs; but the black town consists chiefly of thatched cottages. The military power is lodged in the governor and council, who are also the last resort in civil causes. The company have two chaplains, who officiate by turns, and have each 100 l. a-year, besides the advantages of trade. They never attempt to make profelytes, but leave that to the popish missionaries. The salaries of the company's writers are very small, but, if they have any fortune of their own, they make it up by trade, which must generally be the case, for they commonly grow rich. It was taken by the French in 1746, who rendered it back after the peace. It is 63 miles N. of Pondicherry. Lon. 98. 8. lat. 13. 13.

- GEORGE'S, ST. a small island in the territory of Venice, lying to the S. of that capital. In it there is a Benedictine monastery, whose church is one of the finest in Italy, and is embellished with a great number of fine pictures.

GEORGE'S, ST. the largest of the Bermuda or Summer-Islands, lying 500 miles E. of the continent of N. America. Lon. 312. 35. lat. 32. 30.

GEORGIA, OR GURGISTAN, a province of Asia, partly belonging to Persia, and partly to the Turks. It is bounded on the N. by Circassia, on the S. by Turkomania and Erivan, on the E. by Shirvan and the Tartars of Dagestan, and by the Black Sea on the W. There are but few towns, but the bread, wine, pomegranates, cattle, and all the necessaries of life are cheap and excellent. The inhabitants are very fair, and the women are accounted the most beautiful in the world, and yet they cannot help painting. In general it is a mountainous country, for which reason some parts of it were never conquered, and yet the soil is very fruitful. The inhabitants are a sort of Christians, but their doctrines greatly differ from those which are taught by other sects. Their disposition is pretty mild, but they are extremely ignorant and addicted to sensual pleasures. But they have one barbarous custom, which is that of selling their female children to the Turks and Persians, to fill their seraglios, nor do the boys escape being sold for other purposes. They have a patriarch and several bishops, but the Persian viceroy is a Mahometan. The river Kur crosses the whole country, and is navigable for boats, which is not very common in the rivers of Persia. Teflis is the capital town.

GEORGIA, an English plantation in N. America, bounded on the N. by Carolina, from which it is separated by the river Savannah; on the E. by the ocean, on the S. by St. John's river, which divides it from Spanish Florida on the S. and W. on the E. is Louisiana, which is claimed by the French, but the title to it is now in dispute. There is a range of islands along the coast, which defend it from the fury of the ocean, and these, as well as the continent, being well wooded, the channel between them is extremely pleasant. There are sandbanks upwards of 70 miles from the coast, whereon the water shoals gradually till within 6 miles of the land, and then the banks are so shallow, that there is no passage except in the channels which lie between the bars. However, the Spaniards found a way through them, and would have taken St. Simon's island

In 1742, if they had not been prevented by general Oglethorpe. The river Savannah is navigable for 600 miles with canoes, and 300 with boats, and in the mouth of it there is a commodious and secure harbour, and to the S. there is another, called Teky-Sound, where a large fleet may lie at anchor in 14 fathom water, secure from the winds. The tides on this coast generally flow 7 feet. There are several towns already built, of which Savannah, Ebenezer, and Frederica are the chief. There are also several forts, one of which was taken by the Spaniards in 1642, but they fled at the approach of general Oglethorpe. It is a good barrier against the French and Spaniards; but it would have been better fortified if there had not been a misunderstanding between the above general and the government of Carolina.

- GEPPING, an imperial town of Germany, in the circle of Suabia, and duchy of Wirtemberg, seated on the river Wills, 25 miles E. of Strugard, 12 S. W. of Germund, and 25 N. W. of Ulm. Lon. 27. 10. lat. 48. 24.
- GERA, a town of Germany, in the circle of Upper Saxony, and in Misnia, with a handsome college. It is seated on the river Elster. Lon. 31. 10. lat. 51. 10.
- GERAW, a town of Germany, in Hesse Darmstadt, 12 miles N. W. of Darmstadt. Lon. 25. 51. Lat. 49. 56.
- GERAW, a small district of Germany, in the circle of the Upper Rhine, so called from the town Gera, which is 9 miles N. W. of Darmstadt, the capital. It is subject to the prince of Hesse Darmstadt. Lon. 25. 50. lat. 49. 50.
- GERBEROY, a town of France, in Beauvoisis, with a handsome chapter-house. It was taken by the English in 1437, and retaken in 1449. It is 10 miles from Beauvais, and 50 N. of Paris. Lon. 19. 22. lat. 49. 35.
- GERRES, or GERBI, or ZERBI, an island of Africa, in the kingdom of Tunis, on the coast of Barbary, in the Mediterranean Sea. It bears no corn but barley; but there are large quantities of figs, olives, and grapes, which when dried, are raisins, of which their principal trade consists. It depends on the bashaw of Tripoli. Lon. 29. 5. lat. 34. 10.
- GERREVILLERS, a town of Lorrain, 5 miles from Luneville, with the title of a marquisate, and a handsome castle; the church of the Carmelites is very handsome, and it is seated on the river Agne.

GERGENTI, a town of Italy, in Sicily, with a castle, and a bishop's see. It is seated in the valley of Mazara, near the river St. Blaife, 60 miles E. by S. of Mazara, and 50 S. of Palermo. Lon. 31. 21. lat. 47. 23.

- * GERMAIN DE BOURGUEIL, a town of France, in Anjou, with a rich Benedictine abbey, and a castle. It is seated on a small river, near a fore of the same name. Lon. 17. 52. lat. 47. 20.
- GERMAIN EN LAYE, ST. a handsome town in the isle of France, with a magnificent palace, embellished by several kings, and especially Lewis XIV. It is one of the most beautiful seats in France, as well on account of the apartments and gardens, as of the fine forest that is near it. Here James II. usually resided after he fled to France. It is seated on the river Seine, 10 miles N. W. of Paris. Lon. 19. 40. lat. 48. 52.
- GERMAIN, ST. a town of Cornwall, with a small market on Fridays, and 2 fairs, on May 28, and August 1, for horses, oxen, sheep, and a few hops. It was once the largest town in the county, but is at present a small place, though it sends 2 members to parliament. It was formerly a bishop's see, and had a cathedral, and what is left of it is used as the parish-church, and near it is the priory, yet standing. It is 10 miles W. of Plymouth, 24 S. of Lancelston, and 231 W. by S. of London. It stands near the sea, and formerly had a good fishery.
- * GERMAIN [LAVAL], ST. a town of France, in Forez, seated in a territory fertile in excellent wines. It is 225 miles S. E. of Paris. Lon. 21. 32. lat. 45. 50.
- * GERMANO, ST. a town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in the Terra di Lavoro. It is seated at the foot of mount Cassano, and belongs to an abbey, seated at the top of that mount. Lon. 31. 28. lat. 41. 33.
- GERMANY, a large country, lying in the middle of Europe, bounded on the E. by Hungary and Poland, on the N. by the Baltick Sea and Denmark, on the W. by the Netherlands France and Swifserland, and on the S. by the Alps, Italy, and Swifserland; being about 640 miles in length, and 550 in breadth. The air is temperate and wholesome, but more inclinable to cold than heat, especially cially by the sea-side. The soil is very proper for corn and pastures, and, in some places, especially along the Rhine, it produces large quantities of wine, known by the name of Rhenish, but as to the particular productions, they will be taken notice of where the circles are described. As to the disposition of the people in general, they are robust, brave, good soldiers, free, laborious, inured to labour, dextrous in manufactures, and fruitful in inventions. The nobility in Germany is the purest in Europe, and they will sooner choose the daughter of a nobleman, without a fortune, than that of the richest citizen. One reason of this is, that there is no obtaining rich benefices, such as canonicates, abbeyes, bishopricks, and archbishopricks, without a full proof of their nobility, as these are almost so many independant sovereignties. Germany is the most singular country in the world, for it contains a great many princes, as well secular as ecclesiastick, who are absolute in their own dominions, and independant of each other. Here are a great number of free towns, or cities, which are so many little republics, governed by their own laws, and only united by a head, who is elective, and has the title of emperor, who, properly speaking, has but little authority, except in the dominions belonging to him before he was chosen. Upon the account they generally choose one who has territories of his own, and who is able to keep up his dignity. For this reason the emperors have been for some chosen out of the house of Austria. The election of the emperor formerly was made by the German princes, as well ecclesiastick as secular, but, by the famous constitution of the golden bull, the electors were restricted to seven; that is, three ecclesiasticks, which are, the archbishops of Treves, Cologne, and Mentz, and four seculars, namely, the king of Bohemia, the count palatine of the Rhine, the duke of Saxony, and the marguis of Brandenburg. But in 1653 they were obliged, by the treaty of Munster, to constitute an eighth elector, in favour of the son of Frederick V. count palatine of the Rhine, who had been deprived of his dominions and titles in 1622, and put to the ban of the empire because he had been proclaimed king of Bohemia, and his title conferred on the duke of Bavaria. Henry, in 1690, the emperor Leopold created another electorate in favour of Ernest of Brunswick, duke of Hanover, whose son George became king of England in 1714. Each elector bears the title of one of the principal princes of the empire; the elector of Mentz is high chancellor of Germany, and elector of the archives of the empire; that of Treves, or Tiers, has the title of chancellor of the Gauls, and that of Cologne, that of Italy; the duke of Bavaria is grand master of Bavaria, and carries the golden apple; the elector of Saxony is grand esquire, and bears the sword; that of Brandenburg is grand chamberlain, and carries the sceptre; the Palatine is grand treasurer, &c. When the empire is vacant, or the emperor absent, and there is no king of the Romans, the electors Palatine and of Saxony are viceroys, or regents of the empire, though the duke of Bavaria disputes the right of the former. When the emperor would be certain of a successor, he endeavours to prevail with the electors to choose a king of the Romans, and then he will become emperor after the other's death. The emperor assumes the title of always august, of Caesar, and of sacred majesty. Although he is chief of the empire, he does not govern alone, but the supreme authority resides in the general assemblies, called Diets, which he only has a right of appointing, and to which he sends commissioners to preside in his room. These assemblies are composed of three bodies, or colleges; the first of which is that of the electors, the second that of the princes, and the third that of the imperial towns. The electors and princes send their deputies, as well as the imperial towns. When that of the Electors and that of the princes disagree, that of the towns cannot decide the difference; but they are obliged to give their consent when they are of the same opinion. These assemblies have the power of making peace or war, of settling general impositions, and of regulating all the important affairs of the empire. But their deliberations have not the force of a law till the Emperor gives his consent; who also gives the investiture of fiefs, and disposes of these which have devolved to the empire for want of successors, or confiscations. The electors and other sovereigns of Germany have an absolute authority in their own dominions, and they can levy taxes, raise troops, make

and dissolve alliances, provided they do not prejudice the empire. They have power over life and death, and determine all civil causes definitively, unless in some particular cases, in which they may make an appeal. Their appeals are to two courts, called the Imperial chamber, and the Aulic Council. The three principal religions are, the Roman Catholic, the Lutherans, and the Calvinists; the first prevails in the dominions of the Emperor, in the ecclesiastical electorates, and in that of Bavaria; the second chiefly obtains in the circles of Upper and Lower Saxony, and in a great part of Westphalia, Franconia, Suabia, the Upper Rhine, and in most of the imperial towns; the third is profest in the dominions of the landgrave of Hesse-Cassel, and of some other princes. Vienna is looked upon as the capital city, and the emperors since Charles V. have resided there, till the death of Charles VI. in 1740, and now the present emperor resides there again. The principal rivers of Germany are, the Danube, Rhine, Elbe, Weser, and the Oder. Germany is divided into nine circles, which are as to many large provinces, each of which comprehends several other states, of which the princes, the prelates, and the counts, with the deputies of the imperial towns, meet together about their common affairs. Every circle has one or two directors, and a colonel; the directors have a power of convocating the assembly of the states of their circle, and the colonel commands the army. Each circle is obliged to furnish a certain number of horse and foot, or a certain sum of money, call Roman Months, when the necessity of publick affairs requires; according to a tax imposed by the register of the states of the empire. The nine circles are, these of Austria, Bavaria, Suabia, Franconia, the Upper and Lower Rhine, Westphalia, and the Upper and Lower Saxony. The imperial towns are now only 52, but were formerly 84. There are also Hanstiatck towns, which have some allowance on account of trade; and there was formerly some in France, Spain, and Italy, but now they are confined to Germany, and are but 5 or 6 in number; but we must except Dantzick, which is in Poland. Besides the religions above mentioned, there are some Independants, Anabaptists, Quakers, and Christians of every other denomination, besides a multitude of Jews in all their great towns. The language of Germany is a dialect of the Teutonick, which succeeded that called the Celtick.

GERMERSHEIM, a town of Germany, in the palatinate of the Rhine, and subject to the Elector-palatine. It is seated near the Rhine, 5 miles W. of Philsburg, and 8 S. E. of Landau. Lon. 26. 2. lat. 49. 10.

GERTRUDENBERG, an ancient, handsome, and very strong town of the Netherlands, in Dutch Brabant, and one of the principal bulwarks of the Dutch. It was taken from the Spaniards in 1573, and re-taken in 1589, but prince Maurice became master of it again in 1593, after a siege of three months. It is seated on the river Dungen, which falls into a lake called Bies-bos, 10 miles N. of Breda, 12 S. E. of Dordrecht, and 9 S. W. of Gorcum. Lon. 22. 24. lat. 52. 44.

GERUMENHA, an ancient and fortified town of Portugal, in Alentejo, seated on a hill near the western bank of the river Guadiana. It has a strong castle, with 17 towers, and in 1662 maintained a siege for a month, before it was taken by the Spaniards. It is 18 miles below Badajox. Lon. 9. 57. lat. 38. 39.

* GESEKE, a town of Germany, in the circle of Westphalia; it is seated on the river Weyck, 8 miles from Lippe, and 10 from Paderboin.

GESTRICIA, a province of Sweden, bounded on the N. by Helsingia, on the E. by the gulph of Bothnia, on the S. by Uppland, and on the W. by Dalcarlia. It produces just as much corn as will maintain the inhabitants. Gevall is the capital town.

* GESULA, a province of Africa, on the coast of Barbary, and in the kingdom of Morocco. It abounds in barley and sheep, and there are several mines of iron and copper; most part of the inhabitants are brassers and smiths, and there is a fair kept every year, which lasts for two months, when a vast number of foreign merchants come to buy their wares, and, as they say, are maintained at the expence of the province.

GEVALI, or GALLE, a town of Sweden, and capital of Gestricia. It is near the gulph of Bothnia, 45 miles N. W. of Upsal, 35 E. of Copperberg, and 65 N. by W. of Stockholm. Lon. 34. 50. lat. 60. 32.

GEVAUDAN, a territory of France, in Languedoc, bounded on the N. by Auvergne, on the W. by Rouerge, on the S. by the Cevennes, and on the E. by Vivarais and Velay. It is a mountainous, barren country, and Mende is the capital town.

GEVER, or GOAR, ST. a town of Germany, in the circle of the Upper Rhine, and territory of Rhinefelden, subject to the prince of Heſſe-Rhinefeld. It is feated on the Rhine, 15 miles S. of Coblentz. Lon. 24. 51. lat. 50. 15.

GEX, a town of France, and capital of a Signory of the fame name. It is feated at the foot of mount St. Claude, between mount Jura, the river Rhone, the lake of Geneva, and Swifferland; 10 miles N. W. of Geneva. Lon. 23. 44. lat. 46. 20.

* GEZIRA, a town of Asia, in Diarbeck, and feated on an island formed by the river Tigris, 70 miles N. W. of Moſul, and is governed by a bey. Lon. 59. 45. lat. 36. 30.

GHEENT, a large and handsome town or city, of the Netherlands, and capital of Ault. Flanders, with a strong castle and a bishop's ſee. It contains within the walls 36,000 houſes, 7 pariſh-churches, and 55 monaſteries and nunneries. There are ſeveral ſilk and woollen manufactures here, which are in a flouriſhing condition, and they have a great trade in corn. The fortifications have nothing extraordinary, but the citadel is very important, which is defended by strong rampart, baſtions, and deep ditches. The town is cut by ſeveral canals, which divide it into 26 iſles, and over the canals there are 300 bridges. On the higheſt tower-ſteeple there is a ring of bells, the greateſt of which, called Rowland, weighs 110 quintals, each of which is 100 pounds. It was taken twice during the laſt war, and the French became maſters of it by an artifice in 1708, but the duke of Marlborough retook it in December 1709. There is a handsome large canal, which goes from Ghent to Bruges, and from thence to Oſtend, which is called the new paſſage, and on which there are ſeveral forts. The civil government is lodged in the burgo-maſter and ſchepins, which are like our mayor and aldermen. It is feated at the confluence of the rivers Schelde, Lis, Lieve, and Moere, 22 miles S. W. of Antwerp, 27 W. of Mechlin, 26 N. W. of Bruſſels, and 20 S. E. of Middleburg in Flanders. Lon. 21. 35. lat. 51. 24.

GUILAN, a conſiderable province of Aſia, in Perſia, lying on the ſide of the Caſpian Sea, and to the S. W. of it. It is ſuppoſed to be the Hyrcania of the ancients. It is very agreeably ſituated, having the ſea on one ſide, and high mountains on the other, and there is no entering it but through narrow paſſes, which may eaſily be defended. The ſides of the mountains are covered with many forts of fruit-trees, and in the higheſt parts of them there are deer, bears, wolves, leopards, and tigers; which laſt the Perſians have a ſecret of taming, and hunt with them, as we do with dogs. It is one of the moſt fruitful provinces of all Perſia, and produces abundance of ſilk, oil, wine, rice, and tobacco, beſides excellent fruits. The inhabitants are brave, and of a better complexion than the other Indians, and the women are accounted extremely handsome. Reſit is the capital town.

* GIBRALION, a town of Spain, in Andaluſia, ſeated on the river Odiel, with a handsome caſtle, and the title of a marquiſate.

GIBRALTAR, a ſtrong town of Spain, in Andaluſia, near a mountain of the ſame name, formerly called Calpe, and ſuppoſed to be one of Hercules's pillars, and which he looked upon to be the end of the world. Tarick, a general of the Moors, built a ſtoreſſes here, which he called Gibel-Tarick, that is to ſay, Mount-Tarick. Since that time a town has been built at the foot of this rock, which is very well fortified; it can only be approached by a very narrow paſſage between the mountain and the ſea, acroſs which the Spaniards have drawn a line, and fortified it, to prevent the gariſſon from having any communication with the country. It was formerly thought to be impregnable, but, in 1704, it was taken by the confederate fleet, commanded by ſir George Rook. The French and Spaniards attempted to retake it the ſame year, and 4 or 500 of them crept up the rock which covers the town, in the night-time, but were drove down headlong the next morning. In 1727 the Spaniards beſieged it again, and they attempted to blow up the rock, which they found impracticable, and were at length obliged to raiſe the ſiege.

Those that have courage enough to climb to the top of the rock, will find a plain on the top, from whence they may have a prospect of the sea on each side the strait, and the kingdoms of Barbary, Fez, and Morocco, besides Seville, and Granada in Spain. The garrison here are cooped up in a very narrow compass, and have no provisions but what are brought from Barbary and England. The strait here is 24 miles in length, and 15 in breadth, and there is always a strong current runs through it from the ocean to the Mediterranean. It was ceded to England by the treaties of Utrecht and Seville. It is 25 miles N. of Ceuta, 45 S. E. of Cadiz, and 80 S. of Seville. Lon. 12. 20. lat. 36. 0.

for the county, and one for Cardiff. The air is very sharp on the mountains, which are covered with snow; but very mild and temperate near the sea. The N. part is full of steep, high, barren mountains; but the S. is more plain, rich, and fertile, and feeds abundance of cattle and sheep; hence they supply Bristol with many firkins of good butter; and it has likewise several coal-pits. The chief town is Cardiff.

GLANDIVES was a formerly a town of France, in Provence, with a bishop's see; but the inundations of the river Var have destroyed it, and there is nothing left but the bishop's house. It is 25 miles N. W. of Nice, and 47 S. E. of Embrun. Lon. 24. 38. lat. 43. 59.

• GLANDFORD-BRIDGES, a town of Lincolnshire with a good market on Thursdays, but no fairs. It is seated on the river Ancam, and is a pretty good town. It is 24 miles N. of Lincoln, and 153 N. by W. of London. Lon. 17. 10. lat. 53. 43.

GLARIS, the canton of, one of the 13 republicks in Switzerland. It is bounded on the E. by the Grisons; on the S. by the same and the canton Uri, and that of Switz; and on the N. by the river Limath. It is a mountainous country; and their chief trade is in cheese. The government is democratick, and the senate is composed of 62 persons; over which the landaman and pre-consul preside, who are never of the same religion; for the inhabitants are partly Papists and partly Protestants. The capital town is of the same name.

• GLARIS, a large and handsome town of Switzerland, and capital of the canton of the same name. Here the general assemblies are held, and every person above 16 years old is obliged to assist at it with a sword by his side. The inhabitants are Papists and Protestants, and live very peaceably together, for they have both divine service in the same church one after another. It is seated on the river Linte, 25 miles E. of Switz, 17 N. W. of Coire, and 32 S. E. of Zurich. Lon. 26. 48. lat. 47. 6.

GLASGOW, a large town or city of Scotland, in the shire of Clydesdale, with an university, and a magnificent bridge. It is a populous place, and there is a large harbour on the river Clyde, on which it stands, a little below it; and it is called New Glasgow, or the New Town, where the largest vessels may enter: for this reason the inhabitants carry on a large trade to foreign parts. The form of this town is almost square, and is divided into 4 almost equal parts, by 4 large streets, which cross each other in the middle. Near this is the town house, constructed of free stone, with a high tower, and melodious chimes. It was formerly an archbishoprick; and the cathedral church, which is the highest part of the town, is an old handsome Gothic structure. It is properly two churches, one above another, adorned with stately pillars, and a very high steeple. Glasgow is extremely well seated in a fertile soil, and the houses in general are very well built. The college is separated from the town by a very high wall, and consists of divers courts, each of which is surrounded with buildings. It is 10 miles S. W. of Dumbarton, and 35 W. of Edinburgh. Lon. 13. 25. lat. 55. 50.

GLASTONBURY, a town of Somersetshire, with a market on Tuesdays, and 1 fair on September 8, for all sorts of cattle. It is seated near the Tor, and is of chief note for a famous abbey; some magnificent ruins of which are still remaining, but they are every day diminished for the sake of the stones: however, the curious structure, called the abbot's kitchen is still pretty entire, and is of a very unusual contrivance. It was pretended that the bodies of Joseph of Arimathea, of king Arthur, and of king Edward the Confessor, were buried here. The place is at present pretty large and well-built, containing two parish churches. Near adjoining, on a high steep hill, is placed a tower, which commands a great prospect round about, and serves as a landmark to seamen. It is 6 miles S. W. of Wells, 25 S. W. of Bristol, 54 N. E. of Exeter, and 120 W. by S. of London. Lon. 14. 49. lat. 15. 15. The last abbot of this place was hanged on the top of the Tor, by order of king Henry VIII. for not acknowledging his supremacy.

GLATZ, a handsome and strong town of Bohemia, and capital of a county of the same name. It is seated on the river Neisse, and has pretty good fortifications, with a strong castle built upon a mountain. When the Prussians became masters of it, the Austrians had a strong garrison in it, which were taken prisoners. The county was ceded to the king of Prussia by the queen of Hungary in 1742, and is about 45 miles in length.

BRUKSTADT,

GLUKSTADT, a strong and considerable town of Germany, in the circle of Upper Saxony, and duchy of Holstein, with a strong castle, and subject to Denmark. It is seated on the river Elbe, near its mouth, 30 miles N. W. of Hamburg, and 55 N. of Bremen. Lon. 26. 30. lat. 52. 53.

GNESNA, a large and strong town of Great Poland, of which it is capital, and in the palatinate of Calish, with an archbishop's see, whose archbishop is primate of Poland, and viceroy during the vacancy of the throne. It was the first town built in the kingdom, and was formerly more considerable than it is at present. It is 100 miles N. by E. of Breslaw, 120 S. by E. of Dantzick, and 125 W. of Warsaw. Lon. 35. 55. lat. 52. 28.

GNIEF, or GNIEW, a town of Polish Prussia, in the palatinate of Culm, seated on the river Vistula, with a citadel. It was taken by Gustavus Adolphus, King of Sweden, in 1626. The Swedes likewise took it in 1655, but did not keep it long.

GOA, a large and strong town of Asia, in the peninsula on this side the Ganges, and on the Malabar coast. It was taken by the Portuguese in 1510, and is the chief town of all the settlements which the Europeans have in India. It stands in an island about 12 miles in length, and 6 in breadth, and the city is built on the North side of it, having the conveniency of a fine salt-water river, capable of receiving ships of the greatest burthen, where they lie within a mile of the town. The banks of the river are beautified with a great number of handsome structures, such as churches, castles, and gentlemen's houses. The air within the town is unwholsome, for which reason it is not so well inhabited now as it formerly was. The viceroy's palace is a noble building, and stands at a small distance from the river, over one of the gates of the city, which leads to a spacious street, terminated by a beautiful church. This city contains a great number of handsome churches, convents, and cloisters, with a stately large hospital, all well endowed, and kept in good repair. The market-place takes up an acre of ground; and, in the shops about it may be had the produce of Europe, China, Bengal, and other countries of less note. Every church has a set of bells, some of which are continually ringing. Their religion is the Roman Catholick; and they have a severe inquisition. There are a great many Indian converts; but they generally retain some of their old customs, particularly they cannot be brought to eat beef. However, there are many Gentoos in the city who are tolerated, because they are more industrious than the Christians, and better artists. The clergy are very numerous, and illiterate; and the churches are finely embellished, and have great numbers of images. Their houses are large, and make a fine shew; but within they are poorly furnished. The inhabitants are contented with greens, fruits, and roots, which, with a little bread, rice, and fish, is their principal diet, though they have hogs and fowls in plenty. However, they are very much addicted to women, and are generally weak, lean, and feeble. Our author, Capt. Hamilton, stood on a hill near the city, and counted above 80 churches, convents, and monasteries; and he was told, that there were about 30,000 priests and monks. The body of St. Francis Xavier is buried in St. Paul's church, and as they pretend performs a great many miracles. It is remarkable, that none of the churches, except one, have glass-windows; for they make use of clear oyster-shells instead of glass, and all their fine houses have the same. Goa itself has few manufactures or productions, their best trade being in arrack, which they distil from toddy, which is the sap of the cocoa nut tree. The river's mouth is defended by several forts and batteries, well planted with large cannon, on both sides; and there are several other forts in different places. It is 250 miles N. by W. of Cochin. Lon. 91. 35. lat. 15. 31.

GOERBIN, a town of Germany, in the Palatinate, 18 miles S. E. of Philippsburg. Lon. 28. 31. lat. 49. 21.

* GOBELINS, a house of Paris, in the suburb of St. Marceau, so called from Giles Gobelin, an excellent dyer, who found out the secret of dying scarlet, in the reign of Francis I. This is the place where they make the finest tapestry in Europe.

GOCH, a town of Germany, in the duchy of Gleves, and in the circle of Westphalia. It was taken by the Dutch, in 1614; but it is now subject to the King of Prussia. It is seated on the river Neers, 6 miles S. E. of Cleeve or Gleves. Lon. 23. 37. lat. 51. 40.

* GOCIANO,

GOCIANO, a town of the island of Sardinia, in the province of Lugho-Dori. It is seated on the river Thurso, 25 miles E. of Algher; it has a castle, and is the capital of the county of the same name.

* GODAH, a considerable town of Asia, in Indofan. It is a very pleasant place; but it is not so flourishing as it was formerly. It is 50 miles from Bram-pore.

GODALMING, a town of Surrey, with a market on Saturdays, and two fairs; viz. on February 13, for horses, cattle, sheep, and hops; and on July 10, for horses, cattle, sheep, and store-pigs. It is seated on the river Wye, where it divides into several streams and waters the adjacent parts. It is 4 miles S. W. of Guilford, and 34 S. W. of London. Lon. 16. 55. lat. 51. 22.

* GODMANCHESTER, a town of Huntingdonshire, parted from Huntingdon by the river Ouse. It was incorporated by King James I. and is seated in a rich and fertile soil, which yields great plenty of corn. It is inhabited by a great number of yeomen and farmers, who are said to have extraordinary teams of horses, and some say better than in any other part of England. It has no market; nor yet but one fair, which is on Easter-Tuesday, for all sorts of cattle.

GODOLPHIN, a hill in Cornwall, famous for its tin-mines; it lies E. of Mountsbay, and has the title of an earldom.

GOES, a town of Portugal, in Beira, that has between 14 and 1500 inhabitants. It is 26 miles from the city of Beira.

GOES, or TER-COFFE, a strong and considerable town of the United Provinces, in Zealand, and capital of the Island of South-Beveland. It communicates with the sea by a canal; and is 10 miles E. of Middleburg, 12 W. of Bergen-op-zoom, and 30 N. of Ghent. Lon. 21. 25. lat. 51. 33.

GOGMAGOG-HILLS, are hills so called, three miles from Cambridge, remarkable for the intrenchments and other work cast up here; whence some suppose it was a Roman camp; and others, that it was the work of the Danes. They are covered with fine dry carpet turf; for which reason, they are resorted to by the Cantabrigians in the winter. The country-people, near these hills, tell strange stories about them.

* GOLAMP, a kingdom of Africa, in Abyssinia, lying at the South extremity of the lake Dambia. It is almost surrounded on all sides by the Nile, and is become famous since the discovery of the sources of that river.

GOITO, a town of Italy, in the duchy of Mantua, which was taken by the Germans in 1701, and by the Prince of Hesse in 1706. It is seated on the river Mincio, between the lake of Mantua and that of Garda, 10 miles N. W. of Mantua. Lon. 28. 35. lat. 45. 16.

GOLCONDA, a kingdom of Asia, in the peninsula on this side the Ganges. It is bounded on the N. by that of Orixia; on the W. by that of Balagate; on the S. by Bijnagar; and on the E. by the Culph of Bengal. It abounds in corn, rice, and cattle; but that which renders it most remarkable, are the diamond-mines, they being the most considerable in the world: they are usually purchased of the black merchants, who buy parcels of ground to search for these precious stones in. They sometimes find in meeting with any, and in others they find immense riches. They have also mines of salt, fine iron for sword-blades, and curious callices and chintzes. It is subject to the Great Mogul; and has a town of the same name, seated at the foot of a mountain, being one of the largest in the East-Indies. It is about 6 miles in circumference, and was formerly the residence of the kings, till it was conquered by the Great Mogul. It is now much frequented by the European merchants. Lon. 06. 45. lat. 16. 30.

GOLDBERG, a town of Silesia, in the duchy of Lignitz, 36 miles W. of Breslaw, in possession of Prussia. Lon. 34. 45. lat. 51. 3.

GOLD COAST OF GUINEY, a country of Africa, lying along the sea-shore, and where the Europeans have several forts and settlements. It reaches from the Gold river 12 miles W. of Assive, and ends at the village of Ponna, 7 or 8 miles E. of Acraw. It includes several districts, in which there is two or three towns or villages, lying on the sea-shore; though, within land, it is said they have large towns, which however no European has yet seen. Seven of these districts are dignified with the titles of kingdoms, though they do not contain but a small tract of land; for the whole Gold Coast is not above 180 miles in length. The Negro inhabitants are generally very rich, as they carry on a great trade with the Europeans for gold, and many of them

almost naked; and those that are best clothed have only some yards of stuff wrapped about their middle. [For farther particulars, we refer to the names of the places and forts themselves; for here the English, French, and Dutch have settlements.]

GOLDEN-ISLAND lies at the mouth of the river or gulph of Darien in the province of Terra Firma, in S. America. Here the Scots attempted to make a settlement in 1698; but finding it a barren spot, they changed their minds, and took possession of the opposite shore. This place is so strong by nature, that the Spaniards could not have dispossessed them, had not the English contributed thereto. Lon.

COMBOON, is a considerable sea-port town of Asia, in Persia, and in the province of Faristan. It is called by the natives Bandar Abassi, and is seated on a bay, about 12 miles northward of the east end of the island of Kismith, falsely called Quessimo in our maps. It is 9 miles from the famous island of Ormus, where the Portuguese had a settlement.
The best houses are built with bricks dried in the sun, and stand close to each other, being flat on the top, with a square turret, having holes on each side for the free passage of the air. Upon these roofs, those that stay in the town sleep every night in the summer season.

The common people have wretched huts, made with the boughs of palm-trees, and and covered with leaves. The streets are very narrow and irregular; and the better sort of people are clad in the Persian mode; but the poorer sort, both men and women, go quite naked, except a clout to cover what decency requires them to hide. The English and Dutch have factories here, which is a great advantage to the trade of the place.
The soil is barren, and there are high rocks near it, and yet provisions brought from other countries are plenty enough.
The weather is so exceeding hot in June,
July, and August, that this place is extremely unhealthy; and therefore the English factory retire to Affeen during those months. It is frequented by people of several nations, as well Europeans as others; and the Banyans are so numerous, that they bribe the governor not to permit any cows to be killed in the town. The profit arising to the East-India company from the factory here is not so considerable as it was formerly.

COMFRA, an island in the Atlantic Ocean, and one of the Canaries, lying between Ferro and Tesseriff. It has one good town of the same name, with an excellent harbour, where the Spanish fleets often take in refreshments. They have corn and fruits sufficient to support the inhabitants; and one sugar-work, with great plenty of wine and fruits. It is subject to Spain, who conquered it in 1445. Lon. 0. 25. lat. 28. 0.

* GONDAR, a town of Africa, in Abyssinia, where the emperor of that country resides. It is about 10 miles in circumference; but the houses consist only of one story, and most of them resemble a funnel with the narrow end upwards.
They have no shops; for they carry on their trade in a large square, where they expose their merchandise to sale. They are laid upon mats; and gold and rock-salt, are the only money made use of.
Each bar of salt is a foot in length, and they break off as much as they agree for in the purchase of small wares. There are about 100 churches, and their patriarch depends on that of Alexandria.
The priests have a great power with the people, and sometimes they abuse it grossly. The Mahometans, and the European Christians are held equally in abhorrence,

horrence, on account of the intrigues carried on by the Jesuits and Missionaries a considerable time ago; inasmuch, that all those who now attempt to enter the city, are sure of being sacrificed. Some have pretended, that this city is nothing else but a camp, in which they were mistaken; for we have our information from an eye witness. The rainy season in these parts begins in April, and does not cease till the end of September; whence the Nile, and other rivers that have their source in Abyssinia, overflow their banks every year. The inhabitants are tall and comely, and their complexion is a dun, or olive colour. The habit of the better sort is made of silks and cottons; but the common people have only drawers to hide their nakedness. It is 180 miles S. E. of Sennar, and near 1000 S. of Grand Cairo. Lon. 56. 0. lat. 15. 10.

GORGONA, a small island of Italy, in the sea of Tuscany, and near that of Corsica, about 8 miles in circumference. It is remarkable for the large quantity of anchovies that are taken near it. Lon. 27. 35. lat. 43. 22.

GORGONA, a small island of the S. Sea, 12 miles W. of the coast of Peru, in America. It is indifferent high land, and very woody, and some of the trees are very tall and large, and proper for masts. It is about 10 miles in circumference, and has several springs and rivulets of excellent water. It would be a very proper place for adventurers to lie concealed in, if the constant rains did not rot the rigging of the ships. There are a great number of monkeys, guiney-pigs, lions, lizards, and I sloths, which are remarkable for their ugliness and slowness of their motions, though by their shape they seem to be of the monkey kind. Lon. 298. 0. lat. 3. 30.

• GOTHS, an ancient people, who have made a great noise in Europe, whose name some geographers think came from Gutes, a part of Sweden, now Gothland; but the most general opinion is,
that they were Getes, a people of European Sarmatia, who inhabited a country on the northern borders of the Black Sea, as far as the river Nieper, and afterwards extended themselves to the mouths of the Danube. After this they crossed Bulgaria and Romania, ravaged Macedonia, Greece, Dalmatia, and Italy, and pillaged Rome. They went and settled in Languedoc under the name of Visigoths, and afterwards in Spain, where they erected a kingdom, which continued for about 300 years, till it was overturned by the Moors. The Ostrogoths

likewise founded a kingdom in Italy,
which continued only 53 years, for it
was destroyed by Narfes, in 552.

GOTTENBURG, a rich and strong town of Sweden, in W. Gothland, with a good harbour, at the mouth of the river Got-
helba, which is the best situated for foreign trade of any in Sweden, as it lies

It is seated on the river Valle, and is but a mean place, of about 100 houses, though it sends 2 members to parliament. The inhabitants have a considerable manufacture of gloves. It is 46 miles S. W. of Lancelton, and 244 W. by S. of London. Lon. 12. 10. lat. 50. 20.
 - GRAN, a handsome, large, and strong town of Lower Hungary, with an archbishop's see. It has been several times taken and retaken, but last of all the Imperialists drove away the Turks from it, in 1683. It is seated on the river Danube, 20 miles S. E. of Comoren, 25 N. W. of Buda, and 87 E. by S. of Vienna. Lon. 36. 35. lat. 48. 0.
 - GRANADA, a considerable province of Spain, with the title of a kingdom; bounded on the N. and W. by Andalusia; on the E. by the kingdom of Murcia; and on the S. by the Mediterranean Sea. It is about 175 miles in length, and 75 in breadth. It is a mountainous country, and yet the soil is good; but it has not been well cultivated since the Moors were driven away. However, it produces corn, wine, oil, sugar, flax, hemp, excellent fruits, honey, wax, grapes, and mulberry trees, which feed a great number of silk-worms. The forests produces gall-nuts, palm-trees, and oaks, whose acorns are sweeter than any nut. This province was taken from the Moors in 1492, and Granada is the capital town.
 - GRANADA, is a large, handsome, and delightful town of Spain, capital of the kingdom of Granada, with an archbishop's see, and a university. It is built on 4 hills, and is divided into 4 parts; in one of which is the large church, containing the tombs of Ferdinand and Isabella, who took this place from the Moors in 1492. rica, in Terra Firma, about 75 miles in length, and as much in breadth. It is bounded on the N. by Carthagena and St. Martha; on the E. by Venizuella;
on the S. by Popayan; and on the W.
by Darien. It contains mines of gold,
copper, iron, hories, mules, good pastures, corn, and fruits. It belongs to the Spaniards, and Santa-Fe-de-Bagota is the capital town.

GRANADILLOES, the name of some islands
of the Caribbees, in America, having
St. Vincent to the N, and Granada to the S. They are so inconsiderable that they are quite neglected.

GRANDE. See RIO GRANDE.

GRAND-PRE, a town of France, in Champaign, and in the diocese of Rheims, seated on the river Ayre, among meadows, 30 miles E. of Rheims. Lon. 22.
25. lat. 49. 18.

* GRANIC, or GRANICUS, a small river of Natolia, in Asia, which has its source
in Mount Ida, near the ruins of ancient Troy. It falls into the sea of Marmora, to the E. of Lampfaco. It was near this river that Alexander the Great obtained
the first victory over the Persians, in which it is said they lost 100,000 men.

* GRANSON, a town of Switzerland, in the country of Vaud, and capital of a bailliwick of the same name, with a castle. There was a battle gained here by the Swifs over the duke of Burgundy in 1476. Lon. 24. 10. lat. 44. 48.

GRANT, the ancient name of the river Cam, which runs by the university of Cambridge.

GRANT, the name of a Clan in the north-
highlands of Scotland.

GRANTHAM, a town of Lincolnshire, with
a market on Saturdays, and 5 fairs; on the fifth Monday in Lent, for horned
cattle, horses, and sheep; on Holy
Thursday, for sheep and horses; on July 10, October 26, and December 17, for horned cattle and horses. It is seated on a bottom on the river Whitham, and is a noted place, with a good free school, and a handsome church, famous for its high spire, which seems to lean
on one side. It is a corporation, sends 2 members to parliament, and has the title of an earldom. It is 21 miles
N. by W. of Stamford, 14 S. by E. of Newark, and 104 N. by W. from London. Lon. 16. 55. lat. 52. 50.

GRANVILLE, a sea-port town of France,
in Lower Normandy, and is partly seated
on a rock, and partly on a plain. It gives title to an English earl, and is 15
miles S. by E. of Coutances, and 185
W. of Paris. Lon. 16. 3. lat. 43. 53.

* GRASSE, a town of France, in Provence, with a bishop's see. It is seated on an eminence, 15 miles W. of Nice, 12 N. W. of Antibes, and 70 N. E. of Aix. Lon. 27. 36. lat. 43. 39.

* GRASSE, a town of France, in Languedoc, and in the diocese of Carcaffone, seated on the river Orbieu, at the foot of the mountains of Courbiere, near a Benedictine abbey.

* GRASSINGTON, a village in Yorkshre,
with 4 fairs; on March 4, for horned
cattle; April 24, and June 29, for sheep; and September 26, for horned
cattle.

GRATZ, a handsome strong town of Germany, and capital of Stiria, with a castle, seated on a rock, and a university.
The Jesuits have a college; and there are a great number of handsome palaces
and a fine arsenal. The castle stands on a very lofty hill, and communicates with
the river, by means of a very deep well.
The empress-dowager was obliged to retire hither during the war of 1741 and 1742. It is seated on the river Muer,
45 miles N. W. of Waraden, and 85
S. W. of Vienna. Lon. 34. o. lat.
47. 4.

GRAUDENTZ, a town of Poland, in the palatinate of Culm, with a handsome castle. It is seated on the river Weiffel, or

or Vistula, 35 miles N. of Thore, 60 S. of Dantzick, and 82 N. W. of Warsaw. Lon. 57. 2. lat. 53. 20.

GRAVE, a very strong town of the Netherlands, in Dutch Brabant. It is seated on the river Maese, beyond which there is a fort, 8 miles S. of Nimeguen, and 65 N. E. of Brussels. Lon. 23. 16. lat. 51. 46.

GRAVELINES, a very strong sea-port town of the Netherlands, in French Flanders, with a castle and a harbour. It was ceded to France by the treaty of the Pyrenees, and is seated in a marshy country, on the river Aa, near the sea, 12 miles E. of Calais, 15 S. W. of Dunkirk, and 75 W. of Ghent. Lon. 19. 48. lat. 50. 59.

GRAVENEC, a town of Germany, in the circle of Silesia, and capital of a county of the same name, 30 miles W. of Ulm. Lon. 26. 30. lat. 48. 22.

GRAVESEND, a town of Kent, with 2 markets on Wednesdays and Saturdays, and 2 fairs, on April 22, and November 25, for horses and all other goods, cloths, and toys. It is seated on the banks of the Thames, and is a place of great resort, because it is the common landing place for sea men and strangers in their passages to London, there being tilt boats ready to carry them every tide. It is well stocked with houses of entertainment; and here is a blockhouse over-against Tilbury fort. A great part of it was burnt down with the church in 1727, which has been since rebuilt as one of the 50 new churches, and the houses are much handsomer than before. It is commonly called the corporation of Gravesend and Milton, these two places being united under the government of a mayor, 12 aldermen, 24 common council, a town clerk, &c. This parish, with that of Milton, consists of about 700 houses, mostly small, and built with bricks; the streets are also narrow, but paved with flints. The chief employment of the labouring people is spinning of hemp, to make nets for fishing and ropes. It is also famous for gardening, the best asparagus being produced here of any in the kingdom.

GRAVINA, a town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, and in the Terra-di-Bari, with a bishop's see, and the title of a duchy. It is 25 miles E. of Cirenza, and 32 S. W. of Bari. Lon. 51. 10. lat. 40. 54.

* GRAY, a town of France, in the French

Comte, and capital of the bailiwick of Anont. It is a trading place, and was very strong before the fortifications were demolished. It is seated on the river Saone, 20 miles N. of Dole, 30 N. W. of Befanzon, and 25 N. E. of Digon. Lon. 23. 16. lat. 47. 30.

* GRAYS, a town of Essex, with a market on Thursdays, and 1 fair, on May 23, for cattle and hardware. It is but a poor place, and is seated on the side of the Thames, 19 miles E. of London, Lon. 17. 51. lat. 51. 28.

GREECE, a country of Turkey, called by them at present Romelia. It is bounded on the N. by Bulgaria, Servia, and Dalmatia; on the W. by the gulph of Venice; on the S. by the Mediterranean; and on the E. by the Archipelago, the sea of Marmara, the Black Sea, the Straits of the Dardanel, and of Constantinople. It comprehends 6 parts, namely, Macedonia, Albania, Livadia, the Morea, the island of Candia, and the isles of the Archipelago. It enjoys a temperate air, is healthy and has a fruitful soil. It was greatly celebrated by ancient historians, and produced a great number of famous men, who performed very great actions as soldiers, as well as others, who were eminent for their parts and learning. Particularly Alexander the Great and Homer, who were natives of this country. But it now groans under the tyranny of the Turks, and is but the shadow of what it was formerly, it being over-run with ignorance and barbarism, almost all the fine towns being quite destroyed. It is inhabited both by Mahometans and Christians.

* GREAT CHART, a village in Kent, with 1 fair on March 25, for horses, cattle, and pedlars ware.

* GREAT THURLOW, a village in Suffolk, with 1 fair on October 10, for sheep and toys.

lish, Dutch, and other nations go every year to catch whales for the sake of their fins and oil. It was so called because those that discovered it first found the shores covered with green moss. There has been attempts made to settle in it; but the men always perished with the feverity of the cold. A few sailors hav-
went the same fate. Some divide it into E. and W. Greenland, making the first belong to Europe, and the other to America; but this is a foolish distinction, because we are not sure that it joins to the continents of either. In the maps it is generally distinguished by the Dutch name of Groenland. Some would have them to be two places, but very improperly; for the best maps have no such distinction. However, there are some who would have Spitzbergen to be Greenland.

GREENOCK, a sea-port town of Scotland, in the county of Renfrew, being near the mouth of the river Clyde, and is the principal station of the herring fishery on that side the island. It is 26 miles
W. of Glasgow. Lon. 14. 20. lat. 55.

GREENWICH, a town in Kent, 5 miles
E. of London, noted for its magnificent hospital for decayed seamen, its delightful park, and its astronomical observatory. The hospital is thought to be the finest structure of this kind in the world; and its noble hall is finely painted by Sir James Thornhill. It was formerly noted for its palace, where Queen Elizabeth was born; but that was pulled down, and what is so called now serves for apartments for the governor of the hospital, and the ranger of the Park.
The King's yachts generally lye at this place.

GRIGNAN, a handsome, large, populous, and ancient town of France, in Dauphiny, with a bishop's see. It contains a great number of handsome structures, particularly the churches and convents.
The cathedral church is a fine ancient building in the Gothic taste; and St.
Andrew's church is adorned with a curious spire steeple, and a tomb of excellent workmanship. The leather and gloves that are made here are highly esteemed. It is seated on the river Isere, over which there are two bridges to pass into that part called Petreine, which is

* GRIMSBY, a sea-port town of Lincolnshire, with 2 markets on Wednesdays and Saturdays, and 2 fairs, on June 17, for sheep; and on September 15, for horses. It is a large place, which had formerly a cattle, and 2 parish churches, with a commodious harbour, which is now almost choked up. It has now only 1 church, which is a large handsome structure like a cathedral. It consists of several streets, whose houses are well built.

built. It is a corporation, and sends 2 members to parliament. It is 35 miles N. E. by E. of Lincoln, and 158 N. of London. Lon. 37. 39. lat. 53. 34.

• GRINGLEY, a village in Nottinghamshire, 4 miles W. of Gaintborough, with 1 fair on December 12, for cattle and merchandize, and particularly for a great number of boots and shoes.

GRINSTEAD EAST. See EAST GRINSTEAD.

• GRINTON, a village in the N. riding of Yorkshire, 8 miles W. of Richmond, with 2 fairs, on Good-Friday, and December 21, for cloth, pewter, brads, tin, and millinery goods.

GRIPSWALD, a strong and considerable town of Germany, in Pomerania, formerly imperial, but now subject to the Swedes, with a good harbour, and a university. It is seated near the sea, 15 miles S. E. of Stralfund, and 55 N. W. of Stetin. Lon. 31. 28. lat. 54. 12.

GRISONS, a people of Italy, inhabiting the mountains of the Alps, and in alliance with Switzerland. They are divided into three parts, called the Leagues, and the whole country is about 87 miles in length, is very populous, and the government is democratick. Each community has its own laws, and is a kind of sovereignty. The publick affairs are determined by diets, which meet once a-year. With regard to religion they are partly Papiſts and partly Protestants. They are gay, bold, brave, haughty, and jealous of their liberty. They still possess the Valteline, and the counties of Borneo and Chievenna. It is said they can send 25,000 men into the field, who are the militia of the country. It is bounded on the S. by the dutchy of Milan and the territories of the Venetians; by Tirol on the E. and partly on the N. and by Switzerland partly on the N. and on the W.

• GRODEC, the name of four towns in Poland, the first of which is in Red Russia, the second in the palatinate of Podolia, the third on the left bank of the Neister, and the fourth in the palatinate of Kioff.

GRODNO, a considerable town of Poland, in Lithuania, and palatinate of Troki, remarkable for a royal palace, the diet that is held here every three years, and a strong citadel. It is seated partly in a plain, on the river Nieman, and partly on a mountain, 75 miles S. W. of Troki, 50 W. of Navogrodeck, and 125 N.

E. of Warfaw. Lon. 42. 45. lat. 53. 18.

GROENDALE, a town of the Austrian Netherlands, in Brabant, seated at the head of the river Iſche, 6 miles S. E. of Brussels. Lon. 22. 0. lat. 50. 45.

N. America, and capital of a rich and fertile province of the same name, with a bishop's see. It is 217 miles W. of Mexico. Lon. 271. 46. lat. 30. 20.

* GUADALAVIAR, a river of Spain, which rises on the confines of Arragon and New Castile, and running by Turwel in Arragon, crosses the kingdom of Valencia, passes by the town of the same name, and soon after falls into the Mediterranean Sea, a little below Valencia.

GUADALOUPE, a handsome town in Spain,
in Estramadura, with a celebrated convent, whose structure is magnificent,
and is immensely rich. It is seated on a rivulet of the same name. Lon. 13.
45. lat. 39. 15.

GUADALOUPE, an island of America, and one of the Caribbees, between the islands of St. Domingo, Marigant, Desiada, and Montserrat, and is in the form of a half moon. The middle of it is in about 16. 31. of latitude, and it is divided into two parts, by a narrow strait, called River of the Salt River, and at this place the land on each side is not above four miles broad, and by this strait the sea on the N. W. communi-cates with that on the S. E. The N.
W. part is 60 miles in length, 24 in breadth, and 148 in circumference.
This is divided into Basseterre and Ca-besterre, which last signifies the head of the land, and is so called because it lies
open to the trade-wind, whereas Bas-fetterre is under the wind. The eastern part is named Grande Terre, but for what reason is hard to say, for it does not contain more land than the former,
though the shape is much more irregular.
The French were first sent to settle to this island in 1632, and since that time they have been continually improving
and fortifying it, and yet it was taken by the English in 1759, who found it extremely pleasant and fertile. It is ve-nerally said to be the best of all the Caribbee islands, the soil being exceeding good, and every where well watered
near the sea, by rivulets which fall from the mountains, especially in Cabesterre.
If the true cinnamon-tree is found here,
as some believe, it will still render this acquisition more valuable: they call it here bassard-cinnamon. The bark is brown, chapped, and thick; and it has
the true smell of cinnamon, mixed with that of cloves. The rale is very strong and acute, seeming to be a compound
of pepper, cloves, and cinnamon: but

it must be observed, that the person who tasted it did not know that what we call cinnamon is the second bark. The most remarkable curiosity in Guadalupe is the burning mountain, called by the French la Soufriere; it is seated in the S. part of Cabezerre; and that called the Piton, or Pike, which is elevated above the rest of the mountains, is 24 yards high, and 160 in circumference. It consists of a heap of large white calcined stones, and on the top there is a mouth of about 36 yards in diameter; the edges are covered with large stones, mixed with ashes and pieces of sulphur, and there proceeds from it, from time to time, clouds of black, thick, sulphureous smoke, mixed with sparks of fire. Besides this, there are other places which continually emit smoke with sparks of fire, which do not prevent the air from being very cold. The negroes often go in quest of the sulphur, which they purify and sell. The vegetables, fruits, and trees are much the same as in the other islands, excepting the cinnamon-tree, and that which yields balsam of Capivi. Some affirm there are no serpents here.

GUADALQUIVIR, one of the most famous rivers of Spain, which rises in Andalusia, near the confines of Granada, and running quite through Andalusia, by the towns of Baiza, Andaxar, Cordova, Seville, and St. Lucar, it falls soon after into the gulph of Cadiz.

GUADARAMA, a town of Spain, in Old Castile, remarkable for its great trade in chaces. It is seated on the river Guadaram, 25 miles N. W. of Madrid, and 15 S. of Segovia. Lon. 15. 33. lat. 41. 43.

* GUADFI, a town of Asia, in Persia, and in the province of Mekran, with a pretty good harbour. Lon. 80. 30. lat. 25. 0.

GUADIANA, a river of Spain, having its source in New Castile, and passing cross the high mountains it falls down to the lakes called Ojos of Guadiana, from whence it runs to Calatrava, Medellin, Merida, and Badajoz in Estramadura of Spain, and, after having run for some time in Alentejo of Portugal, it passes on to separate the kingdom of Algarve from Andalusia, and falls into the bay or gulph of Cadiz, between Castro Marino and Agramonte.

GUADILBARBAP, a large river of Africa, which rises in Biledulgerid, from whence it runs to Borgio and Descato in the district of Zeb; then it enters the kingdom of Tunis, passes by Malti, and divides into two branches, one of which falls into the sea at Porto Farina, under the name of Magrada, and the other having visited Beja, falls into the sea near Barga, under the name of Guadalquivir.

GUADIX, a town of Spain, in the kingdom of Granada, with a bishop's see. It was taken from the Moors in 1253, who afterwards retook it, but the Spaniards got possession of it again in 1489. It is seated in a fertile country, 30 miles N. E. of Granada, and 15 S. W. of Baza. Lon. 15. 23. lat. 37. 5.

* GUAGIDA, a strong town of Africa, in the kingdom of Tremelen, where the mules are said to be the finest in all Africa. It is seated on a pleasant plain, on the river Aresgol, 35 miles from Tremelen.

* GUALATA, a kingdom of Africa, in Negroland, bounded on the N. by Derveches, on the S. by the river Senegal, on the E. by a chain of mountains, and on the W. by the river of St. Anthony and by the Ludages. The inhabitants are Negroes, and are said to receive strangers with great hospitality; and the country seems to be the same now known by the name of the Grand Jollois. They have much the same inclinations as the people that live in the deserts, and are fond of mares-milk and herse-fesh. What religion they have is Mahometanism.

* GUALDO, a town of Italy, in the ecclesiastical state, and in the marche of Ancona, towards the confines of the duchy of Spoleto, and that of Urbino. It is 8 miles N. W. of Nocera, and in 1751 was almost destroyed by an earthquake. Lon. 30. 28. lat. 43. 6.

GALEOR, a large and strong town of Asia, in Indostan, and capital of a province of the same name, with a strong fort. It is 50 miles S. of Agra. Lon. 87. 0. lat. 25. 45.

GUAM, the first and chiefest of the Ladrone Islands, in the S. Sea, being about 100 miles in circumference. It depends upon the Spaniards, who have a garrison here, but the inhabitants are almost all natives of the country, and are reputed to be very skilful in building of boats. The island abounds with excellent fruits, and the air is wholesome, notwithstanding which the natives are subject to a kind of leprosy. Lon. 157. 10. lat. 13. 25.

GUASTALLA, a strong town of Italy, in the dutchy of Mantua, with the title of a dutchy, remarkable for a battle between the French and Imperialists in 1734. It was ceded to the Duke of Parma in 1748, by the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle. It is seated near the river Po, 15 miles N. of Reggio, and 20 S. W. of Mantua. Lon. 28. S. lat. 44. 55.

* GUASTO, or VASTO, a town of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples, between the mouths of the rivers Trigno and Afnel-la, in the Gulph of Venice, 15 miles S. E. of Lanciano. Lon. 34. 50. lat. 42. 30.

* GUATIMALA, the Audience of, in N. America, and in New Spain, is above 750 miles in length, and 450 in breadth. It abounds in chocolate, which they make use of instead of money. It has 12 provinces under it; and the native Americans, under the dominions of Spain, profess Christianity; but it is mixed with a great many of their own superstitions. There is a great chain of high mountains, which run a-cross it from E. to W. and it is subject to earthquakes and storms. It is however very fertile, and produces great quantities of chocolate, cochineal, and cotton.

* GUATIMALA, a province of N. America, in New Spain, and in the Audience of the same name. It is bounded on the W. by Socorjusco; on the N. by Verapaz and Honduras; on the E. by Nicaragua, and on the S. by the S. Sea. St. Jago de Guatimala is the capital of the whole audience.

GUATIMALA, a large and rich town of N. America, in New Spain, and capital of a government of the same name, with a bishop's see, and an university. It carries on a great trade, especially in chocolate. Lon. 286. 5. lat. 14. 0.

* GUATIMALA, the Volcano of, is a mountain, which throws out fire and smelke. St. Jago de Guatimala was almost ruined by it in 1541. It has since been rebuilt at a good distance from this dreadful mountain.

* GUERU, a kingdom of Africa, in Negroland. It lies almost 300 miles eastward of Gago; and between them is a vast desert, without water. Guber is surrounded with high mountains; and the villages, which are many, are inhabited by people who are employed in taking care of their cattle and sheep. There are also abundance of artificers, and linen-weavers, who send their commodities to Timbucto. The whole country is overlowed every year by the inundation of the Niger, and at that time the inhabitants tow their rice. There is one town, which contains almost 2000 families; among whom are many merchants.

* GUERO, or EGGEBIO, a town of Italy, in the territory of the Church, and in the duchy of Urbino, with a bishop's see. It is 35 miles S. of Urbino, 17 N. E. of Perugia, and 23 N. of Rome. Lon. 70. 16. lat. 43. 13.

GUELDERLAND, a territory of the Netherlands, with the title of a duchy. It includes the upper quarter of Gueldres, and is the first of the United Provinces. It comprehends the three counties of Nimwegen, Roermon, and Arnhem. The upper quarter of Gueldres comprehends the quarter of Ruremond, which is possessed by three sovereigns. Gueldres belongs to the King of Prussia: Ruremond and its dependencies to the house of Austria; and Venloe and Stephenwaert belong to the States-General.

GUELTERS, a strong town of the Netherlands, in the duchy of the same name. It was ceded to the King of Prussia by the peace of Utrecht, and is seated among the marshes, 10 miles N. E. of Venloe. Lon. 23. 56. lat. 51. 30.

 Latitude.

GUYANA, a town, bay, and harbour of
 S. America, in Peru, and capital of an Province of the same name, with two forts. It stands facing a low island close by the river, partly on the tide, and partly at the foot of a hill, which descends gently towards the river. One of the forts stands on low ground, and the other on the hill; and the town makes a very fine prospect, it being beautified with several churches, and other good buildings. It is divided into two parts by a river, which are called the Old and the New, that are joined to other by a bridge, for foot-passage, half a mile in length. The situation is on a low ground, and is healthy in every part, without the change, there would be scarce any communication from one side to another. It consists of about 200 houses, and has but one regular street, along the river-side. Before the church of St. Jago the cross is a very handsome parade, but the church itself is going to decay. There are three other churches, well adorned with altars, carved work, and pictures. In the merchants store-houses there is plenty of meal, brands, wine, sugar, cloathing, cordage, and iron: at least, this was the case of the town when it was taken by Captain Rogers in 1720. It is 17 miles E. of Puna, and 140 N. E. of Payta. Lon. 58. 40. lat. S. 2. 0.

GUYANA, a sea-port town of S. America, and on the Guiana coast. The English attempted to take it twice; that is, in 1740, and in 1743; but they were repulsed both times. Lon. 51. 35. lat.
 10. 55.

GUYENNE, the largest province of France, bounded on the N. by Saintonge, Angoumois, and Limousin; on the E. by Languedoc, Auvergne, and Languedoc; on the S. by the Pyrenees, Lower Navarre, and Beau; and on the W. by the Ocean.
 It is about 225 miles in length, and 200 in breadth. It is divided into the Upper and Lower. The Upper comprehends Quercy, Rouergue, Armagnac, the territory of Comminges, and the county of Flourens. The Lower contains Perigord, Périgord, Agenois, Condomois, Bazadais, the Lander, Treper Gascony, and the district of Labour. The principal rivers are, the Garonne, the Adour, the Tarn, the Avignon, and the Lot. Bourdeaux is the capital town.

GUILFORD, a town in Surrey, with a market on Saturdays, and two fairs, viz on May 2, and November 22, for horses, cattle, sheep, and hogs. It is pleasantly seated on the river Wey, and on the declivity of a hill, and is a large place, containing three parish churches, and sometimes the assizes for the county are held here. It is a great thoroughfare, and has several good inns. It had a large stock of cattle, of which some of the walls are yet standing. It is a mayor-town, sends two members to parliament, and has the advantage of sending goods to London by barges. It is 17 miles
 S. W. of Kingston, 43 N. E. of Portfmouth, and 30 S. W. of London. Lon.
 16. 55. lat. 51. 16.

GUILLEMAIN ST. a town of the Austrian Netherlands, in Hainaut, and in the province of Mons, which it defends by its ditches. It has been several times taken and retaken; but last of all by the French in 1746. It is seated in marshy land on the river Haine, and is 5 miles from Mons. Lon. 21. 29. lat.
 50. 23.

GUILLESTREE, a town and castle in the Alps, formerly belonging to Dauphiny, in France. It was taken by Prince Eugene in 1692. It is 9 miles N. E. of Eabron, and 14 S. W. of Brienzon.
 Lon. 23. 55. lat. 44. 45.

GUIMARAENS, an ancient, handsome, strong, and considerable town of Portugal, in the province of Entre-Duero and Minho, and in the Comarcas. It has formerly been the residence of some of their kings, and is divided into the Old and New. The publick buildings are magnificent. It is 10 miles S. E. of Braga, 27 N. by E. of Porto, 40 N. E. of Lamego, and 165 N. E. of Lisbon.
 Lon. 9. 46. lat. 41. 25.

GUINEY, a large country of Africa, of which little is known except the coasts, for which reason it is called, The Coast of Guiney. It is divided into the Lower and Upper. This last comprehends the Malaguetta Coast, the Tooth-Coast, the Gold-Coast, Whidaw, Great Ardra, and Benin. The lower part is commonly called

great thieves, treacherous, cruel, drunkards, and shameless. They marry their nearest relations, without any scruple; and if the husband catches a gallant with his wife, the latter is quit by giving the former a pig, which they all three eat very lovingly together. Their principal trade consists in slaves; and they often sell one another to the Turks, especially the females, who are very handsome.

GURK, a town of Germany, in Carinthia, with a bishop's see. It is seated on the river Gurk, 25 miles N. of Clagenfurt, and 55 S. E. of Salzburg. Lon. 31. 50. lat. 47. 10.

GUSTROW, a considerable town of Germany, in Lower Saxony, and in the duchy of Mecklinburg, with a magnificent castle, or palace, where the Dukes reside. Their religion is according to the confession of Augsburg. It is 12 miles S. W. of Rostock, 27 E. of Wismar, and 35 N. E. of Schwerin. Lon. 30. 18. lat. 53. 57.

GUTSKOW, a town of Germany, in the circle of Upper Saxony, and capital of a county of the same name, belonging to Sweden. It is seated on the river Peene, 10 miles S. W. of Wolgatz, and 50 E. by N. of Guthow. Lon. 31. 32. lat. 54. 4.

GUTTA, a town of Hungary, seated on the E. side of the Danube, opposite to the island of Schut, 25 miles E. of Presburg. Lon. 35. 35. lat. 48. 10.

GUZURAT, a province of Asia, in Indostan, and in the dominions of the Great Mogul. It is made an island by the river Indus, or Sindy; and the inhabitants are still Gentoes, or Pagans, driving their old trade of thieving, or pirating; for they plunder all that come within their power, both by sea and land. The Great Mogul would certainly restrain them, if their country was passible for an army; but there are many low grounds, marshes, and lakes, which there is no passing over but by boats. However, there is some trade in cotton, corn, and coarse cloth, and in the shells of a fish, in the shape of a perrinckle, and of the circumference of a man's arm. These being fixed into rings, the women use them for ornaments, and wear them on their arms. The next sea-port town is called Baer, whose inhabitants are nothing but a nest of pirates and robbers. Mangeroul admits of trade for coarse calicoes, wheat, butter, pulse, pepper, sugar, and betel-nuts. It is inhabited by Banyans, who never eat any flesh; and the wild-deer and antelopes are so familiar, that they come into the houses. Dieu, the next harbour, has been taken notice of in its proper place.

* GWYRRIN, a village of Denbighshire, in N. Wales, with one fair, on May 6, for cattle.

GYBNOR, a town of Germany, in the circle of Lower Saxony, and in the duchy of Lunenburg. It is seated on the rivers Aller and Ifa, 25 miles N. of Brunfwick, 22 S. of Zell, and 45 N. E. of Hanover. Lon. 28. 24. lat. 52. 36.

GYULA, a town of Hungary, which was formerly fortified; but, being taken by the Turks in 1566, the fortifications were demolished.

H

HAAG, or HAG, a town of Germany, in the duchy of Bavaria, seated upon a hill, on the W. side of the river Inn, and is capital of a county. It is 52 miles N. E. of Munich. Lon. 29. 58. 1. t. 48. 16.

* HABAR, an ancient town of Asia, in Persia, lying on the road from Sultania to Com in Irac-Agemi. Lon. 67. 0. lat. 36. 12.

HABAT, a province of Asia, in Barbary, and in the kingdom of Fez. It is surrounded by the Mediterranean, the Straits of Gibraltar, and the Atlantick Ocean. The principal towns are Arzilla, Tetuan, and Ceuta, which last is in possession of the Spaniards.

HABSBERG, or HAPSBERG, an ancient castle of Switzerland, in the canton of Bern. It is the place where the ancient counts of Hapsburg resided, and is seated near the lake of Lucern, and to the E. of the town of that name. Lon. 25. 45. lat. 47. 22.

HACUA, a sea-port town of S. America, in Terra Firma, seated at the mouth of a river of the same name. It produces the fruits proper to those parts, a great deal of salt, some gold, and precious stones; and here the Spanish galleons touch at their arrival in S. America, from whence expresses are sent to all the settlements to give them notice of it. Lon. 305. 35. lat. 11. 30.

* HACUAC, a small territory of Transilvania,

vania, on the confines of Walachia, with the title of a county.

HADAMAR, a town of Germany, in the circle of the Lower Rhine, and in Westphalia, with a handsome castle, a branch of the house of Hanover formerly resides here, and is situated near the river Elbe, 22 miles N. W. of Bremen, and 15 E. of Coblenz. Lon. 25. 41. lat. 52. 21.

HADDINGTON, a parliament town of Scotland, in E. Lothian, which sends one member to parliament. It is surrounded with the seats of the nobility and gentry; and there are the ruins of a magnificent church. It is 18 miles E. of Edinburgh. Lon. 15. 10. lat. 55. 50.

• HADDELAND, a small territory of Germany, in the circle of Lower Saxony, and dutchy of Bremen. It has nothing remarkable except the barony of Ribbenbutel, which lies along the river Elb, and belongs to the Hanoverians.

• HADRAMAUT, a town of Africa, in the kingdom of Morocco, and in the province of Hea. It was taken by assault in 1543, by the Portuguese, who carried away a great many beautiful slaves.

HADSPEREN, a sea port town of Denmark, in the dutchy of Schleswig, with a strong citadel, built upon a small island. It is seated on a bay of the Baltic Sea, and has a well frequented harbour. It is 22 miles E. of Ripen, and 55 N. of Schleswig. Lon. 27. 10. lat. 55. 2.

HADRUMATI, a town and province of Asia, in Happy Arabia, 115 miles W. of Carthage. Lon. 67. 3. lat. 44. 45.

HADLEY, a town in Norfolk, with a market on Monday, and two fairs, on Whit-Monday, for wool, and October 15, for butter, cheese, and wool. It is seated on a bottom on the river Great Ouse, and is a pretty large town; and has a very handsome church, and a chapel of ease, with one Presbyterian meeting. It has about 600 houses, a few of which are good brick ones, and the rest but indifferent. The streets are partly broad, but not paved. Large quantities of yarn are spun here for the woolen manufactory; and this town had once a considerable woollen manufactory, which is now decayed. It is 20 miles S. E. of Bury, and 65 N. E. of London. Lon. 18. 35. lat. 52. 7.

• HADZICHA, a village in E. Prussia, with one fair on July 28, for horse.

HAEUSINGLAND, a subdivision of Norland, in Sweden, famous for the valour of its inhabitants, who took several towns, and gave them their own names.

HAGIAS, a province of Asia, in Arabia, bounded on the W. by the Red Sea, on the N. by Arabia Petrea, and on the E. by Theban.

HAGUE, or GRAVES HAGUE, a town of the United Provinces, in Holland, which geographers pretend is but a village, and yet it may compare with the largest towns or cities in Europe, with regard to its extent, the number and beauty of its palaces, its streets, its agreeable walks, and its great trade, especially in books. The greatest part of the houses have the appearance of palaces, and there are at least 4000 cardinals. It is seated 4 miles from the sea, and there is a pavement across the Downs, with trees on each side, which leads to Scheveling, near the sea-side. The ancient counts of Holland resided here, and tho' it be 500 years ago, the wood work of the palace is yet found. The Stadtholder, or governor of the county, generally resides here; and it is the place where the States of the United Provinces assemble, and here the foreign ministers are admitted to audience. As the streets are very broad and long, it is a pleasant sight to behold to many coaches and equipages belonging to the foreign ambassadors, or handsome liveries, driving along them. Here also the supreme courts of justice are held, which, together with the particularities above-mentioned, render it so populous, and so much frequented by foreigners, that it is a great wonder that they have but two churches to perform divine service in. It is 3 miles N. W. of Delft, 8 S. W. of Leyden, 10 N. W. of Rotterdam, and 30 S. W. of Amsterdam. Lon. 21. 45. lat. 52. 4.

- * HAGUENAU, a town belonging to the French, in Germany, capital of a bailiwick of the same name, and was formerly imperial. It was several times taken and retaken in the late wars, and is seated on the river Motter, which divides it into two parts, near a forest of the same name, 12 miles N. of Strasbourg, 12 W. of Baden, 25 S. W. of Landau, and 255 E. of Paris. Lon. 25. 28. lat. 48. 49.
- HAIK, a market town of Scotland, in the shire of Peebles, seated on the river Tiviot.
- HAIBRON, a handsome, strong, and free imperial town of Germany, in Suabia, and in the duchy of Wittenberg. In the war time there are often magazines here; and the inhabitants, who are Protestants, derive a great advantage from the baths that are near it, and from whence the town has its name, as it signifies the fountain of health. It is advantageously seated on the Neckar, over which there is a stone bridge, in a pleasant fruitful country, productive of wine, 25 miles N. E. of Sturgard, 30 S. E. of Heidenburg, 30 E. of Philippsburg, and 70 N. E. of Straßburg. Lon. 27. 50. lat. 49. 10.
- * HAIMBURG, an ancient town of Germany, in Lower Austria, seated on the river Danube, 10 miles W. of Presburg, and 25 E. of Vienna. Lon. 35. 10. lat. 48. 10.
- * HAIN, a town of Germany, in Upper Saxony, and in the circle of Mitnia, with a manufacture of cloth. It is seated on the river Rhedar, 10 miles N. E. of Meissen, and 72 N. W. of Dresden. Lon. 31. 18. lat. 51. 20.
- HAINAN, a considerable island of Asia, belonging to China, which lies to the N. of the gulph of Cochin China, and to the S. of the province of Canton, from which it is 12 miles distant. It is about 400 miles in circumference, and the soil of the northern part is level; but the southern and eastern are very mountainous, among which some of the valleys produce two crops of rice every year. The inhabitants are mostly a wild sort of people, and great rewards, for 50 Chinese will put 1000 of them to flight. In general they are a short and deformed people, and the colour of their skins is reddish. They are only clothed from the waist downward, and they are addicted to painting their faces like other savages. There are mines of gold and lapis-lazuli, which last is carried to

- Canton, to paint the porcelain with. It produces the same fruits as China, besides sugar, tobacco, cotton, and indigo. Among the animals, there is a great black ape, with features resembling those of the human face; but they are very scarce. The common sort of apes are grey, and very ugly. Some of the inhabitants of the sea coast have submitted to the Chinese.
- HAINAULT, a province of the Netherlands; bounded on the N. by Brabant, on the W. by Flanders and Artois, on the S. by Cambresis, Picardy, and Champagne, and on the E. by part of the territory of Liege and the county of Namur. It is divided into Austrian Hainault, whose capital is Mons; and French Hainault, whose capital is Valenciennes. It is a cold country, and subject to rains, on account of its being near the forest of Ardenne.
- HAINBURG, a town of Germany, in the circle and arch-duchy of Austria, seated on the Danube, 35 miles E. of Vienna. Lon. 34. 45. lat. 48. 20.
- HAINÉ, a river of the Austrian Netherlands, which runs through the province of Hainault, from E. to W. passing by Mons, St. Ghilian, and falling into the Scheldt at Conde.
- HALABAC, a town of Asia, in Indostan, and capital of a province of the same name. It is very large, and defended by a strong citadel. It is seated at the confluence of the rivers Jumna and Ganges, 120 miles W. by N. of Patna, and 180 E. by S. of Agra. Lon. 100. 35. lat. 25. 35.
- HALBERSTADT, a handsome town of Germany, in the circle of Lower Saxony, and capital of a principality of the same name. It was formerly capital of the bishoprick of Halberstadt, now secularized. The cathedral is a superb structure, with a fine peal of bells; and there are two regular abbeys within the town, and one without, which last belongs to Roman Catholick monks. There are also two nunneries. The Jews are tolerated here, and carry on a great trade; and the inhabitants brew excellent beer. It is now subject to the king of Prussia, and is agreeably seated on the river Havel, 32 miles S. E. of Brunswick, 27 S. W. of Magdeburg, and 30 N. W. of Mansfeld. Lon. 10. 4. lat. 52. 6.

HALSTED, a town in Essex, with a market on Fridays, and two fairs, on May 6, and October 20, for cattle, two days each. It is seated on the river Coln, which runs through the middle of it, and the market is good for corn and provisions. It is 10 miles N. of Chelmsford, 27 S. of St. Edmundsbury, and 47
N. E. of London. Lon. 18. 20. lat. 51.
55. It has a pretty large old church, the steeple of which was burnt down by lightning, but rebuilt again at the expense of Robert Fitz. 1169. The town consists of about 600 houses, which are in general pretty good ones: they are situated on a rising ground, and the streets not paved. The number of the people amount to about 4000. There is a good manufactory of fays, bays, cal-lmancoes, &c. In this place is a good free school for 40 boys, and a very antique brickwell.

• HAMA, a town of Asia, in Syria, seated among the hills. Some geographers take it for Apamea, which is a great mistake; for this is now called Afaniyah, and is a day's journey from Haree. It has all along been a considerable place, and has a castle standing on a hill. The town is very large; and as it is seated on the ascent of a hill, the houses being built one above another, make a very agreeable appearance. Many of the best houses are half ruined; but those that are still standing, with the mosques, are built of black and white stones, as well as the castle. The river Aili, formerly called Orontes, runs close by the side, and fills the ditches about it, which are cut very deep into the solid rock. The bazars, or market places, are pretty good; and they have a trade for linen of their own manufactory. It is 83 miles N. by E. of Damascus, and 78 S. by W. of Aleppo. Lon. 54. 50.

for horses; and on the first Tuesday in May, for toys.

HAMBURG, one of the largest towns in Germany, there being no less than 5000 perils that are born and die here every year. The ancient town itself is pretty large; to which they have added the new town, almost as big as the former.
Most of the houses are new, built after the manner of the Dutch, and are richly furnished within. The principal streets of the ancient town have long and broad canals, which are filled twice every 24 hours by the tides. These are not only useful for trade, but serve to keep the houses and the streets clean.
It is seated on the river Elbe, which is of vast advantage to the inhabitants; and on the side of Holstein is the Al-ster, which, before it enters the town by sluices, forms a fine basin that cannot be equalled in Germany; and there are small boats continually rowing on it for pleasure. Their corn all comes by water; and thousands of horned cattle are brought from Jutland and Bremen,

H A

Holstein abounds in calves, sheep, and butter; and Mecklenburg supplies them with hogs, game, and wood; and they have garden-stuff and fruit brought from all parts in carts. The canals are always covered with boats full of sea-fish of all sorts, according as they are in season, all the year round. Hamburg is well fortified all round about, and there is always a souldier garnison to defend it, with a fine train of artillery. On the ramparts there are handsome walks, on which they take the air in fine weather. The burghers mount guard themselves, and are divided into several companies. The streets are well lighted every night, and there is a guard, which patroles all over the city. This is a pleasant place for foreigners; because, besides the cheapness of provisions, they are sure to meet with people of their own nation; and there are operas, plays, assemblies, balls, concerts, masquerades, wauks, and other parties of pleasure for their diversion. The senate of this town is composed of 4 burgo-masters, of whom one only is a tradesman; 4 syndics; 24 senators, of whom 11 are men of letters, and the rest tradesmen; 4 secretaries, one of which is a probationary, and another belongs to the archives; in sum, that the whole senate consists of 46 persons. The whole town is divided into five parishes; and out of each are formed several colleges, or companies, who take care of public affairs, unless there is any thing too high for their determination, and then it is judged by a sort of general assembly. Our room will not allow us to take particular notice of their breweries, their public cellars, their timber-yard, their good regulations to keep fires, their post-house, their churches, and their several pious foundations. It is a place of great trade; which they carry on with Portugal, Spain, France, England, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Italy, and Russia. They also send vessels every year to Greenland to catch whales, and there are not less than 200 ships at a time, belonging to foreign merchants, at anchor before the city; and there is a large handsome exchange, where the merchants meet. The inhabitants are all Lutherans, and none but the English have the the liberty of performing divine service in a chapel of their own. Other religions are tolerated at Altena, which is a large town near the harbour of Hamburg; except the Jews, who have no synagogues. Besides the 5 principal churches, there have 11 smaller ones for particular occasions, some of which belong to hospitals. The cathedral of Notre-Dame is a very fine structure; and has a chapter, consisting of 12 canons, who are all Protestants. It is advantageously seated on the N. bank of the Elbe, 45 miles N. W. of Lunenburg, 37 S. W. of Lubek, 60 S. of Sleswick, and 53 N. E. of Bremen. Lon. 27. 28. lat. 53. 43.

* HAMBELBURG, a town of Germany, in Franconia, and in the territory of the Abbey of Fuld. It is seated on the river Saab, 25 miles S. E. of Fuld. Lon. 27. 36. lat. 50. 10.

HAMELIN, a strong town of Germany, in Lower Saxony, and in the dutchy of Calenburg, at the extremity of the dutchy of Brunswick, of which it is the key. It is agreeably seated at the confluence of the rivers Hamel and Weser, 22 miles S. W. of Hanover, 40 E. of Paderborn, and 45 S. W. of Brunswick. Lon. 27. 10. 52. 13.

* HAMEZ-METAGARA, a town of Africa, in Barbary, and in the kingdom of Fez. It is remarkable for its gardens.

HAMILTON, a town of Scotland, in Clydesdale, with the title of a dutchy. It is a very pretty neat town, and the Duke of Hamilton has a very magnificent palace and a large park close by it. It is seated on the river Clyde, 11 miles S. E. of Glasgow. Lon. 15. 45. lat. 55. 40.

HAMMERSMITH, a village in Middlesex, 4 miles W. of London, and a little to the N. of the Thames; it is pretty large, and full of handsome houses.

* HAMMERTLIN, a fortress of Germany, upon the Rhine, over against Coblentz, and belonging to the elector of Treves, or Tiers. Lon. 25. 28. lat. 50. 30.

It has 9 walks, as many keepers, a bow-bearer, and a lord-warden. The commodities are corn, wool, wood, iron, sea-fish, and particularly lobsters and oysters. Here are also some woollen-manufactures; but it is most noted for its excellent honey, and the best bacon in the kingdom. It sends 20 members to parliament; that is, 18 for the towns, and 2 for the county; and Southampton is the capital town.

HAMSHIRE N. W., a province of N. America, in New-England; bounded on the N. by New-Scotland; on the E. by the ocean; on the S. by Massachusetts-Bay; and on the W. by New-York. It is ruled by a governor and a council appointed by the King, and a house of representatives. As it is a very proper country for producing naval stores, a great part of it has been appropriated for furnishing masts and yards for the royal navy.

HAMPTON, a town in Gloucestershire, with a market on Tuesdays, and two fairs; viz. on Trinity-Monday, and October 26, for cattle and horses. It is seated on the Goswell-Hills, and it had formerly a manory belonging to it. It is 12 miles S. of Gloucester, and 90 W. of London. Lon. 15. 20. lat. 51. 38.

HAMPTON, a sea-port town of N. America, in New-Hampshire. It is seated 40 miles N. of Boston. Lon. 307. 35. lat. 32. 45.

HAMPSTEAD, a town of Middlesex, famous for a royal palace, which was built by Cardinal Wolsey, and who gave it to Henry VIII. The buildings, garden, and park, to which King William made many additions, are about four miles in circumference, and are watered on three sides by the Thames, over which there is a bridge to Kew. It is 20 miles S. of the Thames, 12 miles E. W. of London. Lon. 17. 15. lat. 51. 25.

HAMPSTEAD, a pleasant village of Middlesex, 5 miles N. of London. As the air is exceeding cool, it is well furnished with fine seats built in an elegant manner, and is much resorted to in the summer time by all sorts of people; as for the medicinal waters, formerly in request, they are now much neglected.

HAMSTRETT, a village in Kent, with one fair, on May 14, for horses, cattle, and pedlars ware.

HANAU, a handsome and strong town of Germany, in the circle of the Lower Rhine, in Wetteravia, capital of a county of the same name. It belongs to its own prince, and had a handsome castle or palace. It is divided into two towns, the Old and the New, and is pretty well fortified. They admit Jews to live among them. It is seated near the river Maine, 10 miles E. of Francfort, 12 N. W. of Achaassenburg, and 15 N. E. of Darnilladt. Lon. 26. 35. lat. 49. 58.

HANAU, the county of, is bounded on the E. by the county of Rhyneck, and by the abbey of Fuld; on the W. by the counties of Weissenburg and Solms; and on the N. and S. by the territories of Mentz and Francfort. It 45 miles in length, but its breadth is very small. Its soil is very fruitful; and Hanau is the capital town.

HANDEORD, a village in Suffolk, with two fairs; on May 18, for lean cattle, and on May 22, for lean cattle and lambs.

HANOVER, a town of Germany, in the circle of Lower Saxony, and capital of the King of Great-Britain's German dominions. The elector resided here before he ascended the throne of Great-Britain, in a palace which makes no great show outwardly, but within is richly furnished. The regency of this country is administered in the same manner as if the sovereign was present. It is a large well-built town, and is pretty well fortified. The established religion is the Lutheran; but the Roman Catholics are tolerated, and have a handsome church. It has suffered greatly by the French, who got possession of it and the neighbouring counties in 1757; but they were soon after driven from thence. Hanover is noted for a particular sort of beer, which is reckoned excellent by the people of those parts. It is agreeably seated in a sandy plain, where there are very fine meadows, on the river Leyne, which divides it in two. It is 15 miles E. of Newstadt, and 15 W. of Brunswick. Lon. 27. 40. lat. 22. 5.

HANOVER, the territory of, comprehended at first nothing but the county of Lawenrood; but now it contains the dutchy of Zell, Sax Lawenburg, Bremen, Lunenburg, the principality of Verden, Grubenhagen, enhagen, and Oberwald. George I. king of Great-Britain, was the first that gained possession of all these states, which mostly lie between the rivers Weser and Elbe, and extend 200 miles in length from S. W. but the breadth is different, being in some places 150 miles, in others but 50. The produce of them is timber, cattle, hogs, rum, beer, and bacon, besides a little silver, copper, lead, iron, vitriol, brimstone, quick-silver, and coppers. However, the trade is not very great in any of these articles.

HANSE-TOWNS, are a society of sea-port towns, united together for their common interest, and for the protection of their trade; they are so called, from the German word, Hanseg. There were a great number of these at first; but about the year 1500 they began to be weakened, and now there are none that have the Hanseatic government, except Bremen and Lubek.

* HARRIS, one of the western isles of Scotland, and the easternmost of them all.

* HARRIOTSBAM, a village in Kent, with one fair, on July 5, for horses.

* HARROLD, a village in Bedfordshire, 3 miles W. by N. of Bedford, with 3 fairs, on Tuesday before May 12, Tuesday before July 5, and Tuesday before October 10, for cattle.

* HARTFIELD, a village in Sussex, with one fair, on Tuesday after Whit-week, for cattle and pedlars ware.

HARTFORD, a town in Hertfordshire, of which it is capital, with a market on Saturdays, and four fairs, on Saturday fortnight before Easter, May 12, July 5, and November 8, for horses, horned cattle, and sheep. It is seated on the river Lea, and has been much more considerable than it is at present, for it is much decayed since the great road was turned through Ware. However, it is still the place where the assizes are held, and has the title of a marquisate. It sends 2 members to parliament, is 2 miles W. of Ware, and 21 N. of London. Lon. 37. 30. lat. 51. 43.

HARTFORD, a town of N. America, in New-England, and in the province of Connecticut, seated on the river Connecticut, 50 miles W. of Boston. Lon. 70. 30. lat. 42. 0.

HARTFORDSHIRE, an English county, 31 miles in length, and 28 in breadth, and is bounded on the E. by Essex, on the W. by Buckinghamshire, on the N. by Cambridgeshire and Bedfordshire, and on the S. by Middlesex. It contains 16,570 houses, 120 parishes, and 8 market-towns, whereof only two send members to parliament, namely, Hutterford, and St. Alban's. It abounds in corn, river-fish, sheep, and fat cattle, and the air is good all over the county. The principal rivers are, the Lea, the Ouse, and the Hunton. Hartford is the capital town.

HARTLAND, a town in Devonshire, with a market on Saturdays, and two fairs, on Easter-Wednesday, and September 25, for cattle. It is seated near the Severn sea, near a cape or promontory called Hartland point, 28 miles W. of Barnstable, and 197 W. by S. of London. Lon. 1. 50. lat. 51. 9.

HARTLEPOOL, a sea-port town of the county of Durham, with a market on Saturdays, and 3 fairs, on May 14, August 21, October 9, and November 27, for toys, and plenty of fish. It is commodiously seated on the sea-shore, and partly surrounded with rocks and hills. It is a pretty large but poor place, and the market is come to nothing. It is 16 miles S. E. of Durham, and 236 N. by W. of London. Lon. 10. 40. lat. 44. 20.

* HARTLEY-ROW, a village in Hampshire, 10 miles N. E. of Basingstoke, and in the road from London to Salisbury, with two fairs, on Shrove-Tuesday and June 29, for pedlars ware.

* HARTZENROD, a town of Germany, in Upper Saxony, and in the principality of Hanau, seated on the river Selk, 17 miles S. of Halberstadt.

HARWICH, a sea-port town of Essex, with a market on Tuesdays and Fridays, and 2 fairs, on May 1, and October 13, for toys. It is strong both by nature and art, art, and is surrounded on three parts by the sea and the river Stour; it is not very large, but is well inhabited and frequented, and here the packet-boats are stationed that go to Holland. It is a borough-town, sends 2 members to parliament, and has a commodious harbour. It is governed by a mayor, 8 aldermen, and 24 common council. There is here only a chapel of ease, the mother church, which is small and in bad condition, being at Dover-court, at two miles distance. The town consists of between 8 and 900 houses, which are in general good and lofty, and the streets pretty wide, and well paved. The number of the people amounts to about 4000. The harbour is the finest in England, for in it 400 ships may ride in safety; and opposite the town is a good battery of cannon. Here is also a good dock-yard, in which many ships of war are built. It is 21 miles E. by N. of Colchester, and 73 E. N. E. of London. Lon. 19. 0. lat. 52. 3.

• HASBAT, a province of Africa, in Barbary, and in the Kingdom of Morocco. It abounds in all the necessities of life, and carries on a great trade.

HAVANNA, a sea-port town of America, in the island of Cuba, and on the N. W. part of it, opposite to Florida. It is famous for its harbour, which is so large that it may hold 1000 vessels, and yet the mouth is so narrow, that only one ship can enter at a time. This is the place where all the ships that come from the Spanish settlements rendezvous on their return to Spain. It is near 2 miles in circumference, and contains about 2000 inhabitants, consisting of Spaniards, Mulattoes, and Negroes. The entrance into the harbour is well defended by forts and platforms of great guns, and the bishop of St. Jago resides here, as well as most men of fashion and fortune belonging to the island. It belongs to the Spaniards, who always have a good garrison here. Lon. 27. 3. lat. 25. 0.

The prince of Herle-Cassel, or Colvinnus, of Herle-Darmstadt, Luth. 1653; and the remaining two, which are branches of the second, are Ruffels, a Catholic, and Henckelshorn, a Cal. mil. They take their name from the four principal towns. The country is about 100 miles in length, and 50 in breadth, and is surrounded by woods and mountains, in which are mines of iron and copper; in the middle there are fine plains, fruitful in corn and pasture, and there is plenty of all kinds of fruits and honey. They likewise cultivate a large quantity of hops, which serve to make excellent beer. This is one very common, and they make a great deal of wine of two sorts, which is said to be very excellent. It is so populous that they can raise 30,000 men, without meddlesome artificers, or that fill the ground. The Landgrave of Herle-Cassel is an absolute prince, and his revenue is said to amount to 125,000 pounds per annum. He has had forces a considerable time in the British pay, which is a great advantage to him. The present Landgrave Frederick is lately married to Princess Elizabeth, and his Father and himself are dead.

HIGHLANDERS, a people in the N. of Scotland, who inhabit the mountainous part, and who have been a long while remarkable for their particular dress, which some suppose to be like that of the ancient Romans; but it is now forbid by act of parliament. They are generally strong, able bodied men, and make excellent soldiers; and particularly they have been of great service in the taking of Guadaloupe, Cape Bre-ton, and in beating the French and native Americans to the W. and N. of our English settlements in N. America. They were divided into several clans, each of which had a chief, or head, and whom they generally followed in case of war, or even in a rebellion; but now this feudal custom is taken away by act of parliament, and attempts are making to introduce manufactures and trade among them.

HOLLAND, the most considerable of the Seven United Provinces, lying between the Zuider-zee, the N. Sea, Zealand, and Utrecht. It is divided into N. Holland, W. Friesland, and S. Holland; and these together make but one province, whose states take the title of Holland and W. Friesland. The Ye, a small bay, which is an extension of the Zuider-zee, separates Holland from W. Friesland. The extent is not large, being not above 180 miles in circumference. The land is almost every where lower than the sea. The water is kept out by the downs and dykes, which they are particularly careful of keeping in good repair, lest the whole province should be laid under water. It is crossed by the mouth of the Rhine and Maese, by several small rivers, and by a great number of canals, on which they travel day and night at a small expence. Properly speaking it is nothing but a large meadow, and yet all things are in great plenty, by reason of its trade; and the land serves to feed great numbers of cattle. It is so populous, that no country in the world can match it of so small an extent; the pastures are so rich, that they have plenty of butter and cheese, and the seas and rivers furnish them with fish. There are 400 large towns, and 18 cities, which make up the states of the province, and several others that have not the same privilege. The houses are well built, and extremely neat and clean, as well in the country as in the towns. Learning flourishes here, and they have both linnen and woollen manufactures, besides their building a great number of ships. The Dutch surpass all nations in the world with regard to trade, and by their settlements in foreign countries, especially in the E. Indies, and on the coast of Guinea. This province has a court of justice, which finally determines in all criminal and civil affairs; and its states, in which the sovereignty resides, are composed of the deputies of the nobility and of the cities, besides the satholder. The only established religion is the protestant, for the rest are only tolerated. But we must not confound Holland, properly so called, with the republick, which comprehends the seven United Provinces. Amsterdam is the capital city.

* HOLLAND, NEW, a name given to a small territory on the eastern coast, to the S. of New-England, in N. America. It is also the name of a country to the S. of the Molucca islands, which is very little known except along the coast. The inhabitants are black, and the most ill-looking people in the world; they are tall and thin, and their hair is woolly, like the negroes of Guiney. They are mightily troubled with flies, and perhaps for that reason their eyes are kept almost shut. Those that visited the coast could see no houses, which made them imagine they had none; but this is uncertain.

* HOLLAND, the S. E. division of Lincolnshire, probably so called, because it is a marshy country. It has the title of an earldom.

* HOLLINGTON, a village in Suffex, with one fair, on the second Monday in July, for pedlars ware.

* HOLLOWAY, a village in Somersetshire, with one fair, on May 14, for cattle.

* HOLME, a town of Cumberland, with a market on Saturdays, and one fair, on October 29, for horses and horned cattle. It is sometimes called Abbey-Holme, from an abbey that formerly stood there. It is a small place, seated on an arm of the sea, 12 miles N. of Cocker-mouth, 14 S. W. of Carlisle, and 295 N. N. W. of London. Lon. 14. 25. lat. 55. 3.

HOLSTEIN, a country of Germany, with the title of a duchy, in the circle of Lower Saxony. It is bounded on the N. by Sleswick, on the E. by the Baltic Sea and the duchy of Saxlawenburg, on the S. by the duchies of Bremen and Lunenburg, and on the W. by the German Ocean, being about 100 miles in length, and 50 in breadth. It is a pleasant, fruitful country, and is well seated for trade, which however was more considerable formerly than it is at present. But there are still some very considerable harbours, particularly Hamburg and Lubeck. The king of Denmark and the duke of Holstein Gottorp have a joint-dominion in a great part of it, and of some towns and territories each of them are sole sovereigns. There are some imperial cities, which are governed by their respective magistrates, but the religion of the whole country is Lutheran. The king of Denmark, as duke of Holstein, is a prince of the empire as well as the duke of Holstein-Gottorp. It is divided into four cantons, Hol-

HOLYHEAD, a town and cape of the isle of Anglesea, in Wales, and in the Irish channel, where people usually embark for Dublin, there being three packet-boats that sail for that city every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, wind and weather permitting. It has a very convenient harbour for the northern trade, when taken short by contrary winds. If this was properly repaired, and warehouses built, it would be very convenient for the Irish, to import such of their goods as pay English duty, it being but a few hours sail from Dublin.
Besides, the Dublin merchants might come over with the packets, to see their goods landed. The commodities are, butter, cheese, bacon, wild-fowl, lobsters, crabs, oysters, razor-fish, shrimps, herrings, cod-fish, whittings, whiting-pol-locks, cole-fish, sea-tenchies, turbot, soles, flounders, rays, and plenty of other fish. On the rocks the herb grows of which they make kelp, a fixed salt used in making glass, and in alum works. In the neighbourhood there is a large vein of white fullers earth, and another of yellow, which might be useful to fullers. On the isle of Skerries, 9 miles to the N. is a light-house, which may be seen 24 miles off. Large flocks of puffins are often seen here; they all come in one night, and depart in the same manner. Lon. 12. 55. lat. 53. 20.

HOLY-ISLAND, a small island lying on the coast of England, 6 miles S. of Berwick, in Northumberland. It is not above two miles and a quarter in length, nor much above a mile in breadth. The soil is rocky and full of stones, for which reason it is thinly peopled; it has but one town, with a church and a castle, under which there is a commodious harbour, defended by a block-house.

HOLYWELL, a town of N. Wales, in the county of Flint. It has no market, but has 3 fairs, on April 23, Tuesday after Trinity, and September 2, for cattle.
It is a place of great note, for St. Winnifrid's well, who is reputed to be a virgin-martyr, and it is much frequented by people that come to bath in it, as well as popish-pilgrims, out of devotion.
The spring gushes forth with such impetuosity, that at a small distance it turns several mills. Over the spring there is a chapel built, which stands upon pillars, and on the windows are painted the history of St. Winnifred's life. There is moss about the well, which some foolishly imagine to be St. Winnifred's hair.
It is 12 miles E. of St. Asaph, and 212
N. E. of London. Lon. 14. 20. lat.

HONAN, a province of China, bounded on the N. by that of Pechell and Chanfi, on the W. by Chantü, on the S. by Houquang, and on the E. by Chantoug. It is watered by the river Hohango, and besides the forts, castles, and garrisoned towns, it contains 8 cities of the first rank, and 102 of the second and third.
The air of this province is very temperate and healthful, abounding with wheat, rice, pastures, cattle, oranges of several sorts, pomegranates, and all sorts of European fruits. Towards the W. it is mountainous and woody, and towards the E. it is all cultivated like a garden. It is well watered with fountains, brooks, and rivers, which render it very pleasant.

HONDURAS, a province of N. America, in New-

New-Spain, lying on the N. Sea, being about 370 miles in length, and 200 in breadth; it was discovered by Christopher Columbus in the year 1502. The English have been possessed of the logwood country on the bay of Honduras a great while, and cut large quantities every year. The Mosquito native Americans live in the eastern part, and being independent of the Spaniards, have entered into treaties with the English, and serve them in several capacities. This province is watered by several rivers, which enrich the country by their inundations, and it is very fertile in Indian corn. It is said there are some mines of gold and silver in this province. Valadolid is the capital town.

HONFRON, a town of Devonshire, with a market on Saturdays, and one fair, on the first Wednesday after July 10, for cattle. It is seated near the river Otter, over which there is a bridge, on the road from London to Exeter. A dreadful fire happened here in July 1747, which consumed three parts of the town, and the damage was computed at 43,000 l. It sends two members to parliament, but being no corporation, a portreeve is the returning officer. It has one church, which is half a mile from the town, and a chapel within it, with about 400 houses, which are chiefly in one broad paved street. Here is a large manufactory of bone-lace. It is 16 miles N. E. of Exeter, and 156 W. by S. of London. 14. 14. lat. 50. 43.

HOUGHTON HALL, a fine feat in Norfolk, belonging to the earl of Orford. It is between Castle-rising and Fakenham, and was built by sir Robert Walpole, then prime-minister.

* HOULME, a small district of France, in Lower Normandy, between Domfront and Falaise. It is remarkable for its good cyder, and mines of iron.

HOU-QUANG, a province of Asia, in China, which has a great river called Yang and Tse-chiang, which runs cross it, from E. to W. It is divided into the N.
and S. parts, the former of which contains 8 cities of the first rank, and 60 of the second and third; and the latter, 7 of the first rank, and 5 of the second and third. It is a flat, open country, watered every where with brooks, lakes, and rivers, in which there are great numbers of fish. Here are plenty of wild-fowl, the fields nourish cattle without number, and the soil produces corn, and various kinds of fruits. There is gold found in the sands of the rivers, and in the mines they have iron, tin, and tutenague. In short there is such variety of all sorts of commodities, that it is called the magazine of the empire.

* HOWDEN, a town in the E. riding of Yorkshire, with a large market on Saturdays, and four fairs, on the second Tuesday in January, Tuesday before March 25, the second Tuesday in July, and October 2, for horses, cattle, and flax. It is seated on the rivers Owfe and Derwent, and is a pretty large town, which gives name to a small territory called Howdenshire. It is 16 miles S. E. of York, and 173 N. by W. of London.
Lon. 16. 55. lat. 53. 43.

* HOWEV, a village of Radnorshire, in
S. Wales, with 4 fairs, on February 7, June 19, August 7, and the last Saturday in October, for sheep, horned cattle, and horses.

* HOXNE, or HOXONE, a village in Suffolk, with one fair, on November 2, for Scotch cattle, 3 miles N. of Eye. It continues for a month.

* HOXTER, a town of Germany, in Westphalia, seated on the river Weser, 8 miles N. W. of Corwey, and 27 N. E. of Paderborn. Lon. 27. 0. lat. 51. 50.

* HOY, an island of Scotland, and one of the Orcaides. It is about 10 miles long, and

and that part called Waes is fruitful and pretty populous. It is a good place for fishing, and there is an uncommon bird here, called Yer, which is of the size of a duck, of a singular shape, and extremely fat.

Hove, a town of Germany, in Westphalia, and capital of a county of the same name. It is seated on the river Weser, 43 miles N. W. of Zell, and is subject to the elector of Hanover. Lon. 26. 35. lat. 53. 5.

* Hradisch, a town of Germany, in Moravia, seated on an island in the river Morave, 30 miles S. E. of Olmutz, and 30 E. of Brinn. Lon. 35. 28. lat. 49. 6.

* Hua, or Kahua, a large town of Asia, and capital of Cochlin China, with a handsome palace, where the king commonly resides. It is seated in a beautiful plain, and divided into two parts by a large river. The inhabitants are sincere, good natured, and civil to strangers, and the religion is like that of China. They all blacken their teeth, for they think it a shame to have them white, like dogs; they likewise wear their nails very long. There is always a garrison kept here, and there are a few Christians. Lon. 123. 40. lat. 17. 40.

* Hubert, a town of Africa, in the kingdom of Tremesen, seated on a mountain, one mile and a half from Tremesen. Lon. 17. 15. lat. 34. 32.

Hubert, St. a town of the Austrian Netherlands, in Luxenberg, and in the county of Chiny, with a very handsome abbey, under the protection of France. It is 20 miles N. E. of Boullion, 24 S. E. of Dinant, 40 S. W. of Liege, and 150 N. E. of Paris. Lon. 23. 0. lat. 50. 3.

Hudson's-Bay, a large bay of N. America, between 51 and 63 degrees of latitude, where the English Hudson's-bay company have several forts and settlements, and trade with the natives for beaver-skins, and other rich skins and furs, which turn to a very good account.

* Hudson's-River, a river of N. America, which rises to the E. of lake Ontario, and, running by Albany, and on the back of the S. part of New-England, through part of New-York, falls into a bay of the sea beyond the W. end of Long Island, and below the town of New-York.

* Hudson's-Straits, are the passage cut of the N. passage into Hudson's-bay, lying between 60 and 64 degrees of latitude.

* Hudwichwald, a sea-port town of Sweden, and capital of Helsingia, between the isles of Agan and Holfoon. Lon. 36. 10. lat. 60. 40.

Huesca, an ancient and considerable town of Spain, in the kingdom of Arragon, with a bishop's see, and an university. It is seated on the Ifucla, in a soil producing excellent wine, 22 miles N. W. of Balastro, and 35 N. E. of Saragoffa. Lon. 17. 22. lat. 40. 2.

* Huescar, or Guescar, a town of Spain, in the kingdom of Granada, seated on a plain, with a castle, 60 miles N. E. of Granada. Lon. 15. 50. lat. 37. 32.

* Huesne, or Huena, a small island of the Bahick-sea, in the Sound, in which was the famous observatory of Tycho Brahe. Lon. 30. 40. lat. 55. 54.

Huetta, a town of Spain, in New-Castile, 67 miles E. of Madrid. Lon. 14. 50. lat. 40. 35.

Hugley, a town of Asia, in the kingdom of Bengal, seated on the most westerly branch of the river Ganges. It is a town of large extent, reaching about 2 miles along the river side, and drives a great trade in all the commodities of Bengal; and it affords rich cargoes for 50 or 60 ships every year, besides what is carried in carriages to the neighbouring towns. Salt-petre is brought hither from Patna in vessels above 50 yards long, and 5 broad. There are publick women here, kept on purpose for all comers, who carry on a great trade in their way. The inhabitants are chiefly Indians; but here are Portuguese, English, and other Europeans. It is 50 miles N. of Calcutta, or Fort William. Lon. 105. 30. lat. 22. 0.

Hui, or Huy, a town of the Netherlands, in the bishoprick of Liege, and capital of Condras. It is advantageously seated on the river Maese, over which there is a bridge, 12 miles S. W. of Liege, and 16 N. E. of Namur. Lon. 27. 57. lat. 52. 31.

tar, cordage, and sails are to be sold, and where the ships come to lade and unlade their merchandize, it having a custom-house and a quay. It is very well fortified, and is one of the principal places in England for trade. It is a county of itself, sends 2 members to parliament, and has the title of a dutchy. It is 41 miles N. of Lincoln, 36. S. E. of York, and 170 N. of London. Lon. 17. 29. lat. 53. 45.
HULPEN, a town of the Austrian Netherlands, 9 miles S. E. of Brussels, and 9 E. of Hall. Lon. 21. 25. lat. 51. 20.
HUIST, a strong town of the Dutch Netherlands, in Flanders, and capital of a bailiwick of the same name. It was taken by the French in 1747; it has a very fine town house, and the palace of the commander is the handsomest in all Flanders. It is seated on a plain, which may be overflowed, 15 miles N. W. of Antwerp, and 17 N. E. of Ghent. Lon. 21. 35. lat. 51. 16.
HUMBER, a river formed by the Trent, Ouse, Derwent, and several other streams. It divides Yorkshire from Lincolnshire, and falls into the German-ocean near Holderness.
* HUNDON, a village in Suffolk, with one fair, on Holy-Thursdai, for cattle.
* HUNDSFELD, a town of Germany, in Silecia, in the province of Oels, seated on the river Wide, 8 miles N. E. of Breslau. Lon. 34. 50. lat. 51. 8.
* HUNDZ-RUCK, a small territory of Germany, in the Lower palatinate, between the rivers Rhine, Moselle, and Nab.
HUNGARY, a kingdom of Europe, lying along the river Danube, about 600 miles in length, and 250 in breadth. It is bounded on the N. by Poland, on the W. by Germany, and on the E. and S. by Turkey in Europe. It comprehends three large provinces, namely, Proper Hungary, which is bounded on the N. by Poland, on the W. by the circle of Austria, on the S. by the river Drave, which separates it from Slavonia, and by the Danube, which parts it from Turkey in Europe; and on the E. by Walachia and Transylvania. The other parts are Transylvania and Slavonia. The principal rivers are, the Danube, the Save, the Drave, the Tressie, the Maros, the Raab, the Waag, the Gran, and the Zarwiese. They are so full of fish that they give them to the hogs, but the waters are all unwholesome, except that of the Danube. The air is very unhealthy, occasioned by the lakes and bogs, in-fomuch, that there is a sort of plague vifits them every three or four years, on which account it is called the grave of the Germans; it abounds in all the necessaries of life, and the wine, especially that called Tockay, is excellent. There are mines of gold, silver, copper, and iron, and they have such plenty of game, that hunting is allowed to all. The inhabitants are well shaped, brave, haughty, and revengeful. Their horsemen are called Hussars, and their foot Heydukes.

Almost all the towns of Hungary have two names, the one German and the other Hungarian, and the language is a dialect of the Slavonian. The government is hereditary in the house of Austria, and the established religion is Popery, though there are a great number of Protestants, who have of late been feverely persecuted, but it is now said they have a toleration. No country of the world is better supplied with mineral waters and baths; and those of Buda, when the Turks had it in possession, were reckoned the finest in Europe. Buda is the capital town of Lower Hungary, and Presburg of the Upper, Lon.

* HUNGER-BRUNN, or THE FOUNTAIN OF FAMINE, a fountain of Switserland, in a village called Wanger, 5 miles from Zurich. It is pretended that it is always dry in fruitful years, and that, when it begins to run, it portends a famine; but this is looked upon by the better sort as a fable.
HUNGERFORD, a town of Berkshire, with a market on Wednesdays, and one fair, on August 21, for horses, cows, and sheep. It is seated on the river Kenner, in a low and watery soil, and is noted for the best trouts and craw-fish in all England. It is 8 miles W. of Hungerford, 10 E. of Marlborough, and 64
W. of London. Lon. 16. 0. lat. 51.
26.
HUNNINGUEN, a town of Germany, in Alsace, and in Suntgaw, subject to the French. It is seated on the Rhine, and was fortified by Vauban. It is 3 miles N. of Basle, and 17 S. of Brisac. Lon.
29. 15. lat. 47. 42.
HUNNONBY, or HUNMANBY, a town in the E. Riding of Yorkshire, with a market on Saturdays, and two fairs; viz.
on May 6, and October 29, for toys.
It is 34 miles N. E. of York, and 187
N. of

N. of London. Lon. 17. 31. lat. 54. 15.

* HUNTINGE, a territory of the Netherlands, and one of those called Ommelands, which make part of the province of Groningen. It extends along the German Ocean, from the river Hunfe as far as the territory of Groningen. It contains a great number of villages, but no considerable place.

HUNTINGDON, the chief town of Huntingdonshire, with a market on Saturdays, and one fair, on March 25, for pedlars ware. It is pleasantly seated on a rising ascent on the river Ouse, over which there is a handsome stone-bridge, which leads to Godmanchester. It was once a large place, having no less than fifteen churches, which are now reduced to two. It is a great thoroughfare on the northern road, and on that account is well furnished with inns. It is the place where the assizes are held, and has the title of an earldom. It sends two members to parliament; and is 16 miles W. by N. of Cambridge, and 57 N. by W. of London. Lon. 17. 20. lat. 52. 19.

* HUNTINGDONSHIRE, a county of England, 25 miles in length, 17 in breadth, and is bounded on the E. by Cambridgeshire, on the W. by Northamptonshire, on the N. by Lincolnshire, and on the S. by Bedfordshire. It contains 8220 houses, 49,320 inhabitants, 79 parishes, and 6 market-towns. The air is good, except in the fenny parts, which are aguish; and the soil is generally rich, producing rich pastures, and corn. The principal rivers are, the Ouse, the Nen, and the Cam, which last divides it from Cambridgeshire. It sends 4 members to parliament, viz. two for Huntingdon, which is the shire-town, and two for the county.

* HUNTINGTON, a village in Herefordshire, 3 miles S. of Keynton, with two fairs, on June 28, and November 15, for horned cattle, horses, sheep, and lambs.

* HUNTSBY, a small town in Somersetshire, seated on the river Parrot, near the sea, 5 miles N. of Bridgwater, with one fair, on July 29, for cattle and sheep.

HUQUANG. See HOUQUANG.

* HUREPOIX, a small district of the Isle of France, whose principal towns are Corbeil, Mont-Cheri, Chartres, Ferte-Alais, and Palaiseau.

HURONS, a savage people of N. America, in New-France. Their country is of great extent, but not populous, they having been diminished by their continual wars with the Iroquois. The French pretend that they are almost all become Christians; but if they are, it is to very little purpose, for they are great cheats and thieves. They have an hereditary chief, which is always the son of the woman nearest related; and it is pretended, that the female sex have the principal management of the government. There is a lake here, called the Huron-Lake, which is very large, and is surrounded by four others of great extent, about which these people chiefly inhabit.

HURST-CASTLE, a fortress in Hampshire, not far from Linnington. It is seated on the extreme point of a neck of land which shoots into the sea towards the Isle of Wight, from which it is distant two miles.

* HURST-GREEN, a village in Sussex, with one fair, on July 3, for pedlars ware.

* HURSTPIERPOINT, a village in Sussex, with one fair, on October 10, for pedlars ware.

HUSSARS, a sort of troopers, which were first common in Hungary, but are now introduced into several parts of Europe, and there have been some lately in the English army. They may be more properly called light-horse, and they usually do a great deal of service where they play their parts well.

HUSUM, a town of Denmark, in the duchy of Sleswick, and capital of a bailiwick of the same name, with a strong citadel, and a very handsome church. It is seated near the river Ow, on the German Sea, 20 miles W. of Sleswick, and is subject to the duke of Holstein-Gottorp. Lon. 26. 40. lat. 54. 55.

HUTHERSFIELD, or HUDDERSFIELD, a town in the W. Riding of Yorkshire, whose market is now disused, but it has one fair, on May 24, for lean horned cattle, and horses. It is 42 miles S. W. of York, and 161 N. N. W. of London. Lon. 16. 1. lat. 53. 57.

a battle fought between the allies and the French, in 1746.

JABLONKA, a town of Silesia, in the territory of Trefchen, 30 miles S. E. of Trappaw. Lon. 35. 35. lat. 49. 37.

JACCA, an ancient town of Spain, in the kingdom of Arragon, with a bishop's see, and a fort. It is seated on a river of the same name, among the mountains of Jacca, which are a part of the Pyrennees, and is 22 miles N. of Huefca, and 50 N. by E. of Saragossa. Lon. 17. 16. lat. 44. 22.

• JACI-DE-AGUILA, a sea-port town of Sicily, on the eastern coast, between Catania and Tavormina, with the title of a principality. Lon. 32. 23. lat. 37. 42.

JAEN, a strong and handsome town of Spain, in Andalusia, with a bishop's see, and a strong castle. It is seated in a country producing excellent fruits, and very fine silk, at the foot of a mountain, 15 miles S. W. of Baeza, 40 miles N. of Granada, and 115 S. E. of Seville. Lon. 14. 45. lat. 37. 38.

JAFFA, an ancient town of Asia, in Palestine, formerly called Joppa. It is now entirely fallen from its ancient grandeur, and is 30 miles W. of Jerusalem. Lon. 52. 55. lat. 32. 26.

JAFNAPATAN, a sea-port town of Asia, in the E. Indies, and in the island of Ceylon, seated at the N. end of that island, 100 miles N. of Candy. The Dutch took it from the Portuguese in 1658, and have continued in the possession of it since that time. They export great quantities of tobacco from thence, and some elephants, which are accounted the most docile of any in the world. Lon. 98. 0. lat. 9. 30.

JAGERNDORFF, a town and castle of Silesia, capital of a province of the same name, seated on the river Oppa, 15 miles W. of Troppaw, and 65 S. by E. of Breslaw. Lon. 35. 22. lat. 50. 4.

* JAGO, St. a large river of S. America, which rises in the audience of Quito, in Peru. It is navigable, and falls into the S. Sea, after having watered a fertile country, abounding in cotton-trees, and inhabited by wild Americans.

JAGO, St. the largest, most populous, and fertile of the Cape-de-verd islands, in Africa. It lies about 13 miles westward of the island of Mayo, and abounds with high, barren mountains, but the air, in the rainy season, is unwholesome to strangers. The animals are, beeves, horses, asses, mules, deer, goats, hogs, civet-cats, and well-proportioned monkeys. They have fowls and birds almost of all sorts, as well as in Indian-corn, plantains, bananas, pumpkins, oranges, lemons, tamarinds, pine-apples, maniocokes, cocoa nuts, guavas, tar, apples, and sugar-canes. They have also some cedar-trees, and plenty of cotton. St. Jago, or Ribeira-Grande, is the capital town.

JAGO, St. a handsome and considerable town of S. America, capital of Chili, with a good harbour, a bishop's see, and a royal audience. It is seated in a large, beautiful plain, abounding in all the necessaries of life, at the foot of the Cordillera de los Andes, on the river Mapoche, which runs across it from E. to W. Here are several canals, and a dyke, by means of which they water the gardens, and cool the streets. It is very subject to earthquakes, and the inhabitants are native Americans and Spaniards. Lon. 508. 0. lat. S. 35. 40.

JAGO-DE-CUBA, St. a town of N. America, on the southern coast of the island of Cuba, with a good harbour, seated at the bottom of a bay, and on a river of the same name. Lon. 501. 50. lat. 20. 0.

* JAGO-DE-LOS-CAVALEROS, a town of America, and one of the principal of the island of Hispaniola. It is seated on the river Yague, in a fertile soil, but bad air, 25 miles from Conception-de-la-Vega. Lon. 507. 50. lat. 19. 40.

* JAGO-DEL-ESTERO, St. a town of S. America, and one of the most considerable of Tucuman, which is the usual residence of the inquisitor of the province. It is seated on a large river, in a flat country, where there is game, tygers, guanacos, commonly called camel-sheep, and an animal, to which they have improperly given the name of a lion, for he is nothing like one, and is of a gentle disposition. It is 175 miles from Potofi. Lon. 515. 35. lat. S. 28. 25.

* JAGO-DE-LAS-VALLES, St. a town of N. America, in the audience of Mexico, seated in a plain, on the river Panuco. Lon. 27. 40. lat. 23. 0.

JAGO-DE-LA-VEGA, otherwise called Spanish-town, is the capital of the island of Jamaica, in America, where the assembly and the grand courts of justice are held. It is seated in a fine pleasant valley, on the banks of the Rio Cebre. It was once a large, populous place, containing 2000 houses, 2 churches, a monastery, and several private chapels; but it is now reduced to a small compact, and has only one fine church, and a chapel, with about 500 inhabitants. Being an inland place, its trade is small, but several wealthy merchants and gentlemen reside there, living in a gay manner. There are a great number of coaches, and they have lately got a play-house, with good actors. It is seated near the S. E. part of the island, about 7 miles N. W. of Port-passage, on the bay of Port-royal. Lon. 300. 50. lat. 13. 20.

JAGODNA, a town of Turkey in Europe, in the province of Servia, seated on the river Meraw, 70 miles S. E. of Belgrade. Lon. 39. 53. lat. 43. 40.

* JAGOS, a people of Africa, who live in the deserts, and wander about like the wild Arabs. They inhabit several parts of Lower Ethiopia, but principally the kingdom of Arico. They worship the sun and moon, are very strong, and great robbers. Their arms are an arc, a bow and arrows, and some pretend they feed upon human flesh; but it may be doubted whether there are any such people in the world as men-eaters.
