

PROGRESS. EDWARD S. CARTER, EDITOR. ST. JOHN, N. B., SATURDAY, JULY 21.

THE BISHOP'S DILEMMA. FRANK R. STOCKTON little knew what he was doing when he wrote the fatal words: "Which came out of the door, the lady or the tiger?"

The gifted author whom his parents, blinded by love, had intended for the ministry, made frenzied readers understand that he would, in another story, tell which came out of the door.

The increasing trouble that Mr. STOCKTON'S story brought upon him—for at length he made the unfortunate admission that he did not himself know which came out of the door—did not deter others from following in his uncertain footsteps.

OSCAR FAY ADAMS is the latest offender in this line. Professor ADAMS has made a careful study of the eccentricities of bishops, the results of which he has given to the wicked world in the form of admirable short tales, which clearly show what some people do not seem to realize, or want to realize—that bishops are as human as other people.

A St. John lady who, after reading the story, was inclined to believe that the BISHOP OF OKLAHO, being the BISHOP OF OKLAHO, went on the train for Chicago, and yet hoped that she was mistaken, wrote to Professor ADAMS, asking him if the train really did "leave without the bishop."

My DEAR MR. ADAMS:—At last accounts the BISHOP OF OKLAHO was having a much needed rest from his episcopal duties, and was spending a year in Euro-pan travel, but I have learned nothing further with definiteness.

It will be noticed that the professor is much more satisfactory than Mr. STOCKTON in replying to ladies' questions. Mr. STOCKTON, when his hostess set two ice-creams before him, one in the likeness of a lady, the other in the shape of a tiger, and asked him which he would have, promptly answered, after the manner of the commercial traveller, "Both."

ACTION AND INTERACTION. The universe is a unit. Between all its various parts, scattered throughout the most prodigious stretches of space, there is continually going on an action and interaction which indissolubly bind them into one.

tists tell us, not really in contact, though our senses are too gross to detect the infinitesimal distances which part them. They too are in constant motion, circling round each other and variously affecting each other exactly as their larger brethren.

No illy-muffled hum of summer bee But finds some coupling with the spinning stars. The stamp of a baby's foot moves "the great globe itself," even though the keenest human perception, aided by the most powerful scientific instruments, may fail to detect the motion.

SHELLEY, in speaking of the mysteries of the stars, says: "So is it in the world of living men." What corresponding phenomena to those already described have we in the human universe? It is plain that whenever two or more human beings are measurably in contact each must affect all the rest and be affected in turn.

In early days societies were small, their wants but little, and the range of interdependence among their units was comparatively limited, and between the various societies themselves there was little intercourse save in the line of war.

And even MARK TWAIN thinks that he must keep up with the procession. He has just written some verses for the Galaxy; but, although his prose is far purer and funnier than that of NYE, who feels compelled to bolster his alleged wit with vulgarities, and who makes himself a laughing-stock to that people who laugh at his jokes, Mr. CLEMENS has failed to produce even passably good verse, and gives no promise of becoming as good a humorous poet as he who as a minstrel is almost silent—EDGAR WILLIAM NYE.

DA GAMA now writes to PEIXOTO: "I'll come to Brazil, for I've got to; I'll surrender to you; I'll permit you to do with me just as folks think that you'd ought to."

Tuesday's Sun had the following editorial comment: When two boats in a series of forty or fifty mile races come to a finish within a few minutes of each other every time, there is not much to choose between them.

Philadelphia was the city in which the independence of the United States was proclaimed to the world, and where the great Declaration was drawn up and signed.

Five men are trying to be the democratic nominee for governor of Texas. Each thinks that there should be free coinage of silver as well as of gold, that the country should run its own ratio, and that there is only one man who is fitted to be standard-bearer of the democratic party, and eventually governor of Texas.

The oath which the brilliant Mr. COREY drew up for the conscientious Mr. ALL-BRIGHT contains a touch of humor, despite its solemnity. Having heavily served to engage in the counter-fet business with Governor G. COMY, I do solemnly promise to be just and true while I have health and breath, so help me God.

The great strike struck Uncle SAM in the pocket, but the old gentleman is getting even. DRESS is in jail, and PULLMAN will have to pay a rattling good income tax.

BY MEN IN OTHER LINES. The names of ROBERT J. BURDETTE, GEORGE DU MAURIER and A. CONAN DOYLE are familiar ones, but are not generally associated with poetry.

GEORGE DU MAURIER'S little poem, with its touch of theosophy, is as grand a burst of genius as his novel, or as any picture he ever drew. And now that CONAN DOYLE has killed SHERLOCK HOLMES, when he might just as well have saved him with his eternal revolver instead of with his everlasting macebat, it is to be hoped that he will expiate his sin by producing more such ballads as that of the "Eurydice."

While speaking of poetry written by great men who are not in the regular poetry business, it may be mentioned that BILL NYE has written a poem that is far ahead of the most of his prose. The following verse gives an idea of the poem: 'Twas the reason that the deacon did exactly as he did, And he got to using language very much like Captain Kidd, And out of that blamed hos-trade he finally backslid.

MELLO FOR MISCHIEF. Among the personal anecdotes told of Peter Burrows, the celebrated barrister, and one of Ireland's worthies, is the following remarkable instance of absence of mind: A friend called upon him one morning in his dressing room, and found him shaving with his face to the wall. He asked him why he chose so strange an attitude. The answer was, "To look in the glass."

A Marguerite. I know a lovely Marguerite, As mythical as the May; The summer of her life is sweet As roses by the way.

One tender song she sweetly sings Of loving hearts and hands; United, strengthen friendship's tie Along time'sateful sands.

When Dr. Murray wrote to Browning in the interest of the Philological Society's new dictionary, asking for the significance of certain words as used by the poet, Browning replied: "Don't know what I mean, ask the Browning Society."

VERSES OF YESTERDAY AND TODAY

Under the Maples. Under the maples sat Jennie and I, Ever so many years ago in mine; Watching a streamlet gilding by, Gurgling a love song in its flow;

It seemed not strange that her tiny hand Should nuzzle so trustfully fond in mine; That her soft brown ringlets' shining strand My clumsy fingers like silk should twine;

For I that old, old story had told, A story of anxious hopes and fears,— As over her ringlets' bright brown gold Was falling a shower of pearly tears,—

Lays of Summer-Time. I. IN JULY. Lie on your back and look "up in the sky"; Hear the grasshoppers chirp and the catbirds cry; 'Tis the right state of mind for July: Dry Is the sky— And so am I!

Music on the Squares. The musical correspondent of PROGRESS talks about music on the squares in his own columns and suggests that some move be made in the matter. Music on the squares is probably out of the question but there should be plenty of chances to hold hand concerts elsewhere.

Which Will Wear the Laurel? The Kentville Advertiser says: "A poetical contest between the well known local poets, Professor William Ellis, and E. F. Johnstone, will be held in Scotia Hall, about the 26th of this month. The reputation these talented rivals enjoy will certainly tend to draw a large and enthusiastic audience."

Just Them Two. The woods are sweet with buds of May On the slope of old Rye Hill; Where Aspogagan lifts her face Over the waters still.

Old Aspogagan, your glory lies, On a path to your stony crest; In a dreamy shadow beneath a tree, In a summer twilight's rest.

Old Aspogagan, good friends are we, Though a thousand miles and more May lie between us across the world To a dim and distant shore.

The warm sun saw a flower and sank Hastily down the sky; And over the green sedans leaves Whispered a last good-bye.

One tender song she sweetly sings Of loving hearts and hands; United, strengthen friendship's tie Along time'sateful sands.

Should fortune lead her on the way, To some enchanted hall; May memory turn the jeweled key And there my name recall.

Change. 'Tis unstarbed azure, we were late describing, At early morn is faded with misty gray; And where pale windows late last eve were lying Waves the bright starry green of yesterday.

From change to change we go, from gloom to glory; And from the glow again into the gloom; All, all are good,—the frozen time and hoary, 'Tis autumnal splendor and the vernal bloom!

When Dr. Murray wrote to Browning in the interest of the Philological Society's new dictionary, asking for the significance of certain words as used by the poet, Browning replied: "Don't know what I mean, ask the Browning Society."

WOMAN and HER WORK.

If you don't want to be hopelessly out of style this season you must have either a linen or duck suit. The linen may take the old fashioned form of holland, or it may be white and sheer like butcher's linen; but whatever the color and material, the manner of making is the same, and that is, tailor-made just as rigidly as if it was of cloth, or serge. The coat and plain skirt is the accepted model and the skirt has merely a four inch hem, finished with two or three rows of stitching, and the coat is frequently made by the skilful hands of a tailor. A blouse of some very light sheer lawn is worn with these smart suits, and many ladies rip the sleeves out for the sake of coolness, and transform them into sleeveless vests. The surplice is a very favorite shape for these blouses.

THREE VERY SEASONABLE COWNS.
The figure in the center shows a dotted swiss muslin frock, with Russian lace ruffles and flat trimming. The belt is of cherry moire and has loops and ends in the back. The figure at the right shows a frock of figured, iridescent taffetas, with a deep bertha and shoulder caps of plain silk. The figure at the left represents an apple green challie, with self ruffles at the bottom and a fichu bertha edged with white embroidery. The yoke is shirred.

The holland linens of today are by no means the colorless material that used to be used as furniture covering, a generation ago! The old fine "grass cloth" as it used to be called, is still, like a novel Scott's, a standard article, but the holland suitings of today closely resemble the chevrons and tweeds of the winter months. They are shown in plaids, stripes and checks. For instance narrow white stripes in groups of two and three, are shown, on a ground of light brown, while a fawn colorsonable, showing the least spot and spending fully half of its existence between the wash tub and the ironing board; indeed to have any comfort one would really need two suits. The blue and brown ducks are lovely, especially the former, which are in all shades from darkest navy to palest forget-me-not, and these are very effective when made up with white vest, and trimming. Whatever you do, girls, don't let the difference in price turn you into purchasing cotton, instead of linen duck, for your summer suit. One will look well up to the very last hour of its existence, and the other will never be fit to be seen after it has been washed.

One fancy, which adds very much to the tailor effect of linen suits, is the single row of machine stitching which is placed on each side of every seam in the skirt, as well as the coat, in true tailor fashion. Linen batistes are once more in favor, and very pretty they are, but the silk and linen are still prettier, though very perishable, as of course they won't wash.

FOR A GARDEN PARTY.
The dress on the right is of pink crepon, embroidered in black chenille. The sleeves, waist, panel, jabot and panier are of pink mousseline de soie puffed. The yoke and lower sleeves are of black lace over crepon. The hat is of straw, trimmed with pink asnelles and ribbon. The gown at the left is of pale blue fishnet, with navy blue velvet accessories. The basque is of fishnet over taffetas, with navy blue velvet accessories. The hat is of straw, trimmed with blue fishnet and corianders.

ed ground shows wavy lines of white in raised cord. A seal brown has stripes of golden brown and white, and others again lines and checks of blue, red, and pink. White duck and white linen were the rage for a time, but the fate is frequently

The summer silks are lovely this year, and it looks almost as if woolen fabrics have had their day, and silk would reign once more; so varied are the designs shown. The new check silks have rivalled the figured china silks shown earlier in the year, and they bid fair to be very popular. Black and white is the favorite, but some charming combinations are seen in violet and white, rose and turquoise, navy blue and white, brown and white, and green and white. These pretty materials are made up with plain, full skirts five gored, and flaring at the back and sides, round bodice, literally covered with coru lace, full bertha and large sleeves to the elbow, where they are met by wrinkled gloves, when the costume is used for street wear.

The Dresden china revival shows itself in the dainty cotton fabrics for summer wear, as well as in the drawing room bric-a-brac, and the high priced parasol handle. Charming cambrics are shown in the best shops, in cream white figures with tiny blossoms, both in clusters and singly, in all the colors and patterns of old Dresden china. These goods look very like the old brilliants and are called dimities, by dress-makers; they are almost as heavy as a teen, and very durable.

Such dresses, which are intended to be frequently laundered, are made as simply as possible, and a favorite way of cutting the skirt is with four breadths, a gored one in front, and another gore on each side, with plain straight breadths in the back. The front and sides are slightly gathered, and the fulness in the back massed in very full gathers. The foot is trimmed, with three narrow ruffles, overlapping each other, and each ruffle is bordered with from one to three rows of narrowest lace heading, through which black velvet baby ribbon is run. The bodice is made a full round one with a five-inch bertha trimmed, as the flounces are, with lace heading and black velvet ribbon. The collar and the cuffs of the full leg of mutton sleeves are trimmed in the same fashion, with little rosettes of the velvet at the ends of the collar, and the outside seams of the sleeves and the belt is of black velvet. Of course the velvet is removed when the dress is washed. Such a dress makes a very pretty and fresh looking costume, with an indiscribably Parisian look about it.

DEAR SIR:—My family have received great benefits from the use of the PELEE ISLAND GRAPE JUICE during the past four years. It is the best tonic and restorative for debility, nervousness and weak lungs we have ever tried. It is much cheaper and pleasanter than medicine. I would not be without it in the house.

NOVELTIES FOR MIDSUMMER.

The upper right figure shows a stylish blouse for a young girl, made of percale or silk. There is a double shirring across the bust. The sleeves are balloon, with a ruffle at the elbow. The figure in the center is an outing suit of striped novelty goods, with Eton jacket and dotted silk waist and a lace jabot tie. The large black Neapolitan hat is trimmed with black lace, black feathers, black silk bows and rhinestone buckle. At the left is a novel hat with wide side brim, trimmed with velvet ribbon, jet, black plumes and an upright bouquet of several kinds of flowers. The hat is black straw.

The blessed fashion which prevents the skirt and bodice, from being made of different material, has opened up the boundless possibilities in the way of stylish costumes at very little expense, and now although I am far from looking with favor on the revival of the overskirt, I really believe it will prove an additional ally to those who have lean purses, but good taste and clever fingers.

For instance—every economical girl who wants to be well and fashionably dressed at a small expense, should provide herself with a skirt of black moire, made plainly, or else very lightly trimmed; moire is quite cheap now, and it is one of the best materials to wear that can be found, besides being rich looking, and very fashionable. With a moire skirt any of the pretty black draped overskirt lifted at the left side showing the handsome underskirt, which gives a style to almost any material. A dress of checked black and white silk with sleeves, revers and belt of moire would be effective with such a skirt.

LACTATED FOOD HIS DAILY DIET.

A mother residing in the West End of the city of Montreal, says:—

"In July of 1893 baby Freddie was five months old, and his state of health caused us great anxiety and thought. He was a very weak and helpless infant; he cried a great deal and slept badly. Our family doctor could not do much for him for a time. One day, seeing my grief, the doctor asked me to give Lactated Food a trial, as my nursing did not agree with him. That trial of Lactated Food was the turning point in his infant life. My dear baby seemed to revive and gain strength in a few days, and shortly after was out of all danger. From that time until now he has been fed on your wonderful Lactated Food, and you are quite at liberty to mention the fact that your food saved Freddie's life. I recommend Lactated Food at every opportunity, and tell mothers what it did for my child."

THE FAIR REPORTER.

"But if you won't talk to me, I shan't be able to make anything out of it, and I shan't get any money," said she, with a pout. I believed she knew that she was good-looking. She was, in fact, a pretty girl. But had she been Venus herself, I should have pursued the same course.

"I am overwhelmed with regret," I observed, stiffly, in reply to her remark. "It's very ill-natured of you," said she. "It's the merest self-defence," said I. "Now, that tiger-skin?" she suggested, insinuatingly. "I'm sure a tale hangs to that!"

THE MAIDEN'S CHOICE.

"Give me time," murmurs Minnie. This is part of Minnie's plan. She always requires time. She is, in fact, such a good-natured girl that she never says anything so cruel and ugly as a downright "No!" To be positively negative is, in fact, to be impudent.
