SNATCHED FROM DEATH'S JAWS AFTER HUNDRED HOURS' FIGHT

Successful Termination of Efforts to Rescue Joshua Sanford From His Living Tomb.

Says Dr. Dunton.

SHOWMEN WOULD EXHIBIT HIM

Credit Due "Dick" Thomson, John Carnie, A. J. Cartwright. "Bob" Hamilton and "Dick" Doyle.

"Into the jaws of death," the poet's metaphor for a well-nigh hopeless encounter with the Great Destroyer, never had a more literal illustration than the case of Joshua Sanford, the young well-digger who at 5:30 o'clock on Saturday afternoon was rescued from his perilous plight in the old well shaft on the Skelly farm near Paris. Death's jaws had gripped him with vicelike tenacity, and it requires little stretch of the fancy to picture the grim old monster, like some ravenous beast, trying to draw his victim down to the recesses of his dark lair-the grave—there to batten upon his body. Well for Joshua Sanford that there were found men who dared for hours to stand face to face with grisly old Death, fighting him back inch by inch, and themselves never knowing at what instant he might make them his captives also. Only to those who stood, as an Advertiser representative stood, by the side of the well and the shaft, and heard the ominous settling of the earth which threatened these brave which they strove to rescue another,

Will Be Around in a Week, can form any correct estimate of the perils and dangers which they dared so undauntedly.

One Hundred Hours Under Ground.

It was 1:40 p.m. on Tuesday when Joshua Sanford was buried by the sudden downrush of brick and gravel in the well in which he was working. It was 5:30 p.m. Saturday when the glad news was shouted to the top of the rescue shaft that he was at last free from the restraining grasp of the packed debris. Had his imprisonment lasted but ten more minutes, he would have completed one hundred hours of imprisonment—one hundred hours of such pain and suffering, privation and endurance, despair and hope, as the ordinary mortal may not know in the whole span of a lifetime. Yet after this almost unparalleled experience, Sanford lies today comparatively little changed from the strong, sturdy man he was a week ago. Many predictions made during his long imprisonment—that his hair would turn white from fear, that his limbs would be shattered, that his system could not withstand such shock—have all been disproved. Another week at most will see repaired what ravages have been made by his long entombment, and in a few days more Sanford will again walk among his fellowmen, never again to stand so close to Death until his final summons comes.

Changed Plan of Rescue. As midday approached on Saturday, it became apparent that a crisis was at hand in the work of rescue. Although nearly a full day had elapsed since Sanford had been found by the rescuing party, he was still clutched tightly by the mass of bricks and sand which his legs were buried. The position in which he was lying, and the smallness of the passage between the old well and the new shaft, made Sanmen with the same fate as that from ford himself the sole person who could

THE QUEEN'S CROWN. The travelers and dressmakers alone can form an approximate estimate of the cost of the coronation clothes and diamonds which were on exhibition Thursday. The Queen's crown is described to me by one who has seen it in the hands of the jeweler as containing 4,000 diamonds or other jewels, and as valued at £40,000 or £50,000, without the famous Kohinoor, which flashed in the front. The jeweler was employed nine months in making this crown. Nearly all the peeresses had their jewels reset or polished for the ceremony which was deferred. One

The world will not know until another coronation whether the peeresses carry their coronets upright between the thumb and finger, as in the old prints, and how high their hair was dressed as a safe foundation for the insignia of rank. The titled ladies made a point of refusing to be photographed in their coronation robes before the ceremony, and the few illustrations printed were drawings supplied by the dressmakers, with peeresses' heads inserted. These pictures were hardly more trustworthy than the full-page illustrations of the coronation scene in the Abbey supplied by enterprising journals in advance of the postponement of the ceremony. How many millions were expended upon the coronation robes, dresses and jewels it is idle to conjecture.

Treaty Between Austria-Hun- By Never Sleeping in Any of gary, Italy and Germany

Signed Again at Berlin-The Act a Commander Never Slept at the Same Foregone Conclusion.

Berlin, June 30.-The treaty providing for the prolongation of the alliance between Germany, Austria, Hungary, and Italy (the dreibund), was signed in Berlin Saturday morning by the imperial chancellor, Count von Buelow: the Austrian ambassador. L. von Szogyfy-Marich, and the Italian ambassador, Count Lanza di Busca.

The alliance was renewed in its ori-

The announcement of the signing of the document did not cause surprise, the renewal of the dreibund having been taken as a foregone conclusion since Count von Buelow's conference with the Italian and Austrian ministers, during the Easter holidays. The German officials have never evinced the slightest concern at the many reports emanating from Paris and other diplomatic centers, representing the prospects of a renewal of the dreibund to be gloomy, for they felt all along that Italy's flirtation with France was not intended to be disloyal to her Teutonic allies. The officials here regard the signing as the preparing the way for a renewal of the commercial treaties between the three countries, although imphasizing Germany's determination to keep political and economic questions apart.

SOME INSTRUCTIVE STATISTICS

Conservative Vote in Ontarie Constituencies Given Undue Representation at Ottawa.

[Brantford Expositor.] We hear a good deal from the Conservative press these days about the enormity of the Ross Government attempting to hold on to office in view of the fact that it did not secure a majority of the popular vote in the recent elections. The cry is a silly one, for the reason that the popular vote is distributed over 98 constituencies, and members of parliament are not returned on the basis of the aggregate vote, but on the vote by constituencies.

Under this system, the Conserva-tive party has usually been representat Ottawa out of all proportion to its strength in the province, but we have never heard from its newspaper advocates in this province any protest because of this fact against minority representation. In this connection the appended statistics will be found most

Lib. Con. Lib. C Total Ontario vote in: 1900 207,482 215,775 In 1882 when the first general election after the gerrymander was held, the Liberals were only in a minority of 3,761 in the popular vote, but the Conservatives sent 54 members to Ottawa, while the Liberals sent only 38, or sixteen less. Had the principle of representation on the basis of the aggregate vote been maintained, the two parties would have been about equaly represented.

A similar discrepancy prevailed as a result of the general elections of 1877, when the Conservatives, with a majority of only 4,885 of the aggregate vote, sent to Ottawa 18 more representatives than their opponents.
In the general elections of 1891, the Liberals had a majority of the popular vote in this province, yet they were placed in a minority of four as regards representation at Ottawa. În 1896 the Liberals had a majority of 3,637 of the popular vote, and a majority of two at Ottawa. This is the nearest example of representation in proportion to actual voting strength in the province which the record of Ontario representation at Ottawa affords. In 1900 the Liberals were in a popular minority of 8,293, but the Conservative preponderance in representation was out of all proportion thereto, or 18.

The Great Hood Farm Auction Sale.

Largest and Best Sale of Jerseys in This Country for Years.

The recent auction sale at Hood Farm, Lowell, Mass., dispersed 154 beautiful Jerseys to breeders and farmers all over the country from Maine to Oregon, it being the largest and most successful sale of Americanbred Jerseys that has been held in this from Walter C. The sale was conducted by Peter C. Kellogg, of New York.

The remarkably good prices brought by the young heifers of Hood Farm Pogis 9th show that breeders appreciate the great breeding represented in this young bull and his progeny. None of these helfers are in milk, their average age being about 14 months. One of them brought $330, this being the highest price paid for any female not in milk. Hood Farm Pogis 9th is retained at the head of the Hood Farm herd. He is a son of the famous cow Figgis, by the great show bull Hood Farm Pogis. Figgis herself was the great plum of the sale and was bought by the well known banker and copper magnate, Mr. Thomas W. Lawof Boston. The price paid was

Their Counsel Fined $2,000 Each-One to Sent Penitentiary.

Chicago, June 30.-The omnibus trial of alleged jury bribers, which has been in progress for three weeks, terminated Saturday evening, all of the defendants, seven in number, being found guilty. Wm. J. Gallagher is given an indeterminate term in the penitentiary, P. H. O'Donnell and Jas. T. Brady and Cyrus S. Simon, lawyers, are fined $2,000 each; John O'Donnell, a brother of P. P. O'Donnell, a fine of $500; H. T. Lawrence and Herbert Rothery, jurors, a fine of $200

The trial grew out of the troubles of the residents of the suburb of Austin, with the Union Traction Com-pany, which operates practically all the street car systems on the north and west sides of the city.

The people of Austin, demanded that they be granted, in compliance with an ordinance, passed by the city council, passage to the city for a single fare. The company refused to obey the ordinance and caused the ejectment of a number of people from the cars.

Those so ejected brought action against the company, and the suits, which were defended by Cyrus S. Simon, an attorney, regularly employed by the company, and by O'Donnell and Brady, as special counsel, were decided in favor of the company. FACTS ABOUT THE EYES

Oculists Declare Brown Eyes To Ee the Strongest.

Eyes of any color with weak brows and long, concave lashes are indicative of a weak constitution. People of melancholic temperament rarely have clear blue eyes. The chameleon is almost the only reptile provided with an eyelid. Eyes with long, sharp corners indicate great discernment and penetra-

It seldom happens that both eyes are exctly alike. An examination with a magnifying glass usually discovers many differences between the two. A red object is not nearly so visible at a distance as one in white. A red globe a foot in diameter can be perceived clearly only a distance of 8,000 feet, and a blue glass a little farther. It is said that the prevailing color of eyes among patients of asylums are brown or black. Brown eyes are said by occulists to

of an unsettled mind. The ostrich is believed to see objects behind him as well as those in front. Persons standing directly be-hind an ostrich can see the pupils of his eyes and are thus easily seen by the bird.—Philadelphia Record.

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD.

There is no faith cure about Dr.

Chase's Nerve Food. You do not need to imagine it is doing good. You can prove it by keeping a record of your weight. This food cure acts in a perfect natural way. In fact, it is nature's own cure, and is composed of the most powerful restoratives and invigorators that science has yet discovered. Take the case of Mrs. West, as described in her letter quoted below. She was pale, weak and run down in health. Her blood was thin and watery, and her nerves so starved and exhausted that she was prostrated. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured her, and added new, firm flesh to her body to the extent of eleven pounds. You will find her letter interesting. Mrs. S. W. West, Drayton, Wellington county, Ont., writes: "About two years ago I got terribly run down, and finally became a victim of nervous prostration. I had no appetite, seemed to lose interest and ambition and could scarcely drag myself about. Hearing of good results from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I used three boxes with great benefit. In a short time I gained eleven pounds, and as I was very thin when I began to use the remedy me up, and gave me such a good appetite that I wanted to eat nearly half the time. I was so pleased with the cure the Nerve Food brought about that I recommended it to others, and they have told me of the benefits they had obtained from this preparation. You may use this testimonial in order that others may learn of the there is in Dr. Chase's Nerve Food." If you have been affected as Mrs West has, if you are not feeling real strong and well, you will be surprised at the good that Dr. Chase's Nerve be the strongest.

The eyes should not be used in Food will do you. It puts color in the cheeks, rounds out angular and wasted forms, and brings new hopes, nev confidence and new life to take the place of despondency, weakness and disease. 50 cents a box, six boxes for $2 50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Dominion Day.

Tomorrow is the natal day of the Dominion. Thirty-five years ago was witnessed the final process in the forging of the chain that now binds the erstwhile segregated provinces of Canada in an harmonious confederation. This young country has had its trials and vicissitudes, some of which threatened its political unity; but these have been surmounted, and the outlook is less troubled than ever before. We have passed through our adolescence and attained the stature of nationhood

While Canada is entering upon a new era of development which will make the rate of progress in the past slow by contrast, still the achievements since Confederation have been truly remarkable. A few statistics will not be out of the way:

In 1868, the Federal revenue amounted to $13,687,928; the expenditure, $13,-486,092. In 1901 the revenue was $52,and the expenditure, $46,866,-

The population of Canada, at the first taking of the census after Confederation, was 3,485,761; according to the last Dominion census it was nearly 5,400,000.

In 1871 the imports amounted to $73,-459,644, and exports to $57,567,888; that is, our imports exceeded our exports by nearly sixteen million dollars. Our imports in 1901 amounted to $190,415,-525, and our exports to $196,487,632. Thirty years have witnessed a vast increase in Canada's foreign trade, and a corresponding increase in domestic production and interprovincial trade.

In 1867 Canada had only 3,000 miles of steam railways; today there are 19,000 miles in operation, and hundreds of miles building. Four millions of passengers were carried in 1867; last year, the number was 18,385,722.

Since Confederation we have spent $78,000,000 in canals and have provided a 14-foot waterway from the great lakes to tidal water.

In 1868 the sea-going shipping en-

In 1868 there were 3,638 postoffices in Canada; last year 9,834. The total of letters posted was 18,100,000 in 1868 and 191,650,000 in 1901. The number of newspapers, periodicals, books and parcels sent through the mails increased in the same period from 18,-884,800 to 124,362,404.

The life insurance in force in Canada in 1869 was $35,680,082; in 1901,

The total on deposit in Canadian banks increased between 1868 and 1901 from $33,653,594 to $349,573,327; the note circulation from $9,350,646 to $50,601,-205; and the bank assets from $79,-860,976 to $531,829,324. The deposits in the Government savings banks in the same time have risen from $5,057,607 to $75,174,056; the amount per capita from $1 50 to $13 95; and the number of depositors from 2,102 to 157,368. Figures like these illustrate the economic progress of the country, but they do not tell the whole story. Politically, the most outstanding fact in the past 35 years has been the growth of the imperial idea, and the convictien that Canada will work out her destiny within the British Empire, not in the status of a colony, but as one of a group of free nations owning a common allegiance to the British crown. That 7,000 Canadians would go to fight the battles of the mother country on the other side of the world, is something that could not have entered the imagination a few years ago. It demonstrates that organic anion is not essential to the co-operation of the component parts of the Empire when its integrity is assailed, but that race and affection are the strongest and surest ties. Since Contederation the Dominion has had internal as well as external problems. With her own strength she has crushed two rebellions. Almost as dangerous have been difficulties of race and creed which have been composed. finally, it is hoped, through the spirit of toleration among Canadian people and the statesmanship of their public

The past 35 years have been fruitful for the Dominion, but in all that relates to material progress they promise to be greatly transcended by promise to be greatly transcended by That I received when I was but a lad, the next 35. At Confederation the Taking and giving lickings. great Northwest was only a geographical expression; but with the tide of population now rolling in, who can predict what is in store for Canada even ten years hence?

The Heroes of the Well.

Our cheers, our laurels, our memorials, are usually reserved for the heoes of war. It seems we like heroism finely staged, and there is nothing like the battlefield for that. Someone has said that it is not the willingness to kill, but to be killed, that constitutes the real heroism of the soldier, and wins adoration. All honor to the brave boys who so nobly demonstrated the possession of this virtue at Paardeberg, and Hart's River; but all honor, too, to the humble heroes of peace, to the man who will risk his own life to save another's in simple obedience to God-given instinct, without thought of reward or of self. The sublimest qualities of courage are latent in many nawhich seem commonplace enough: but these qualities are suddenly brought to the surface by some untoward event, and the man whom we thought commonplace stands transfigured. We see this in the episode in a neighboring county, where five workmen performed astonishing feats of endurance, and took their lives in their hands, in the effort to rescue a fellowman from a living death. John Carnie, Wm. Thomson, John Blanchard, Henry Allan, George Wentworth and Richard Doyle-their names cannot be too well known-are heroes of the loftiest type. They had none of the incitements of the battlefield to fire the blood and the passions, but only one motive, to save a fellow-creature at whatever cost to themselves. Such men raise the dignity of human nature.

Impressions of the Yukon,

The Popular Science Monthly for July contains an article by Professor Miers, of Oxford University, on Gold Mining in the Klondike. Professor Miers, on the invitation of Hon. Mr. Sifton, Minister of the Interior, journeyed to the gold country last summer on a semi-scientific mission. A reord from the pen of such a noted mineralogist is instructive, as well as interesting. Dawson City, only four years ago a ollection of huts at the confluence of the Yukon and Klondike rivers, is described as a town of "about 10,000 inhabitants, consisting, it is true, of wooden buildings and chiefly of log cabins, but possessing hotels, clubs, theaters, sawmills, large stores, electric light, telephones, power works and all the resources of modern civilization.

Speaking of the mineral deposits, the writer states that gold has been exclusively won from the gravels in the valleys, and not from the quartz veins. In other words, mining operations are confined to placer deposits. Very little auriferous, or gold-bearing, quarty has so far been found though many quartz claims have been staked. tered and cleared at Canadian ports Yet the theory is that the gold in the was 4,319,321 tons; last year it was valley gravels must have been derived perity of the country, according to Professor Miers, depends upon the extent to which auriferous quartz may be discovered, and the other resources developed. But despite the apparent dearth of gold quartz, the placer deposits are by no means becoming exhausted. There is yet a considerable lighted with such evidence of the ingham Palace Saturday afternoon in quantity of ground to be worked in the Klondike creeks, to which attention has been drawn by the extraordinary wealth of that area. The whole of the Yukon territory is gold-bearing, and will in time come under the eye of the prospector.

Girls Wanted.

[Johannesburg Star.] In a new country an influx of women from home, apart altogether from its economic importance, is to be desired on higher grounds. Women, and especially women with an English training, and imbued with the ideals of English life, are a humanizing and a civilizing influence; and, more than that, they are a potent instrument in Anglicizing or keeping alive the English sentiment of a colony and strengthening those ideal ties that bind the mother country and her daughters into one imperial whole.

Rough on the Duke.

[Hamilton Herald.] Again the Duke of Marlboro is mentioned as a probable successor of Lord Minto at Ottawa. Let there be a general protest against this appointment. In the first place, the fussy little duke is not a man of sufficient intellectual caliber for the office of governor-general of Canada. In the second place the little duke's wife is a New York girl, and her presence in Canada as the first lady of the land would be likely to subject Canada to insufferable patronage from the American snobocracy.

Lord Cranborne authorizes the following statement: "The King is getting better, and the ment, therefore, seems most appropriate for public rejoicing. As chairman of the bonfires committee, I suggest that bonfires throughout the country be lighted Monday night."

Letters to the Editor.

To the Editor of The Advertiser: Has no one noted the lack of good judgment in the watering of our streets? Street watering may be necessary, when the weather is hot and dry, but to keep our streets muddy in cool and rainy weather is about the most insane thing we know. Whoever is responsible for this state of affairs should be compelled to follow the watering carts with a bicycle and be made to keep in the middle of the road. RATEPAYER.

THE SPRINGBANK CARS. When returning from Springbank last Saturday evening I happened to be on a car with two trailers When s short distance this side of Woodland Cemetery the trolley-pole left the wire and it was fully two minutes before connections were again made with the wire, leaving the cars in complete darkness, so that another car following could not possibly see us until it would be about 25 yards from us, which would give him a very slim chance of stopping before it would run into the rear end of the car ahead, especially if the rail should be wet. The street railway company should provide hand-lamps for each of their cars, which should be kept all ready lighted for instant use in such cases as this, and the conductors should take immediate steps to protect the rear of their cars.

I also noticed in ascending hills, the conductor on our car was on the next one ahead, when he should be on his own car, and at the break, in case of a reak-loose. As it was Saturday night, if the car had broken loose it would have started back and pitched into the car following. These precautions are necessary between here and Springbank Park just the same as on any of our railroads. These are two very large loopholes for an accident, and it would be well for the street railway company to look into them at once before some accident does occur. Yours truly, SAFETY. London, June 30, 1902.

London, June 28 .- While King Edward's health remains the paramount subject of conversation, the imperial conference is looming up as a remnant of the coronation fetes. The colonial statesmen are discussing among themselves the work of the conference, and are not disposed to commit themselves to any premature statements of policy. It is not likely that the colonial statesmen will put themselves in an attitude of coming before the United Kingdom and asking for concessions or privileges at the expense of the British taxpayers. They, it is argued, will consider it unworthy the dignity of self-governing commonwealths to appeal for tariff preferences when the British Government, in order to trust within the meaning of the Shercomply with their demands, will be compelled to raise the cost of living thereon. in the United Kingdom. What is more likely is a general agreement between the Canadian, Australian, New Zealand and South African statesmen attending the conference to confine their tariff discussich to existing fiscal arrangements, with a view to relaxation to the present system. As long as Sir Michael Hicks-Beach is chancellor of the exchequer an imperial zollverein is believed to be impracticable, and there is no evidence than any influential representative of Canada or Australia favors it.

Montreal, June 30 .- The Indiana, of the Hansa-St. Lawrence Line, which went aground in the Lower St. Lawrence, is believed to be in a dan-gerous position. The agents of the line today received a telegram from the captain of the Indiana, asking for assistance, and stating that so far the weather was satisfactory. The place where the Indiana has struck is about 25 miles north of Anticosti, and as there are a large number of reefs in this vicinity, shipping men are of the opinion that the vessel will become a wreck. The large new wrecking steamer Lord Strathcona and lighters will be sent to the scene for the purpose of taking off the live stock and salving the valuable cargo.

The Indiana was constructed specially for the St. Lawrence trade, and is only a few months old, this being her maiden trip. The Indiana's deadweight capacity is 6,500 tons, and is worth in the neighborhood of $220,000. Her cargo is worth fully as much more. BERGS IN THE STRAITS.

Gave Flimsy Excuse for Canceling Engagement.

PERHAPS HE KNOWS NO BETTER

Mr. Richard Mansfield (who has, by the concensus of opinion of Mr. Richard Mansfield, been hailed as America's greatest actor) failed to appear at the New Grand on Saturday night to fulfill his engagement to present "Beaucaire," an engagement made more than six weeks ago. Somehow, to those who had heard anything of Mr. Mansfield's peculiar personality, the news did not come altogether as a shock and a surprise. From the first it seemed too much to hope that this poor, insignificant Canadian way-station was to be lit up for several hours with Mr. Mansfield's "illuminating genius," as it is called by his press agent. How should the simple villagers and the rustics of the surrounding country show an appreciation of Mr. Mansfield's "conception of the role, which is in the highest sense art for amusement's sake," to again quote from the thoughtful e say penned by the publicity man? What should they know of a role "bristling with wit, scintillating with polite repartee"? No; it would have been too much for the slothful intellects of the bucolics, and they must have shriveled and been consumed in the fire of the illuminating genius.

However, Mr. Mansfield (who has, by the unanimous verdict of Mr. Mansfield, been proven a much finer actor than David Garrick, Edmund Kean, Edward Booth, Charles Macready, and Sir Henry Irving ever hoped to be, even in their wildest flights of ambitious hope), did not give the foregoing blunt statement of fact as his reason for breaking his London engagement though notoriously lacking in consideration for others, he seems ... the present case to have let London down very easily. Mr. Mansfield's agent telegraphed the local management on Thursday night, asking the amount of the advance sale. The answer went back that already over $1,000 worth of tickets had been sold. The Detroit Free Press, issued a few hours later, contained the announcement that "owing to the King's serious illness," Mr. Mansfield had considerately canceled his Canadian tour. It would, perhaps, be unkind to intimate that the fact that Mr. Mansfield found he could play to perhaps $3,000 by giving matinees and evening performances in Detroit, instead of coming to London for the evening alone, had anything to do with the sudden intention to "cut out" London. It is strange also that the King's serious illness will not prevent Mr. Mansfield from filling his engagement at Hamilton tonight and at Toronto on

In the space of two seasons, Mr. Mansfield has had no less than eight leading ladies, each of whom has left him, some after a connection of a day or two with the company. They day or two with the company. They allege that Mr. Mansfield continually criticised their acting in an insulting manner, declaring that they were ruining his production, although as a matter of fact some of them rank among the most beautiful and talented actresses of America. One of them, who has entered suit against Mr. Mansfield, accuses him of "rude, insulting boorish and ungentlemanly conduct. No fitter description can be applied to Mr. Mansfield's treatment of London's theatergoers.

In the fulsomely egotistical press no-tices sent out on Mr. Mansfield's behalf, one phrase which recurred with sickening frequency was to the effect that it was impossible to say at what hour Mr. Mansfield would arrive in the city. In the present case, he did not arrive at all, and the phrase has taken on a new meaning to local pat-rons of amusements. When Mr. Mansfield does arrive in this city on a future occasion, it is to be hoped that he will meet a well-merited "frost," as a fitting return for the unwarranted insult he has given the people of Lon-

NEWSPAPERS' GREAT OUTLAY

One Illustrated Journal Actually Described the Events-Losses on Fireworks.

New York, June 30 .- A special cable to the Herald from London says that among those who suffered most seriously from the stoppage of the coronation were the proprietors of the illustrated journals. They had been working hard for months, spending enormous sums of money preparing coronation numbers. They had been making stupendous efforts as to who should take the leading place with the public in popularity, and they were all ready with extra fine numbers.

It is announced that the Graphic, the Illustrated London News, the Sphere, Black and White, and the King have lost thousands of pounds. Some of them were bound to let them go. In fact, the copies were in the hands of the trade before they could be stopped, but their sale has been nothing compared to what it might have been.

It is said the Graphic has lost in the most gorgeous number which it prepared about £7,000 ($35,000). The manufacturers of fireworks, too, lost enormously. Take, for instance, just one firm, a statement from which will show the magnitude of the preparations that had been made. For fireworks displays in connection with the coronal on they had made 1,434,000 fairy lamps, 80,000 prismatic gas lamps, 150 crystal electric devices, and 8,000 electric lights. They had put up thirty miles of decorations in various portions of the United Kingdom, and pared 687 bonfires. Their output of fireworks alone amounted to about 580 tons, and this is only one of several great firms. This, however, will not be all lost. The Sun's London correspondent says that the illustrated monthly, Lady's Realm, has actually appeared with a full account of the coronation, discussing and criticising doings which have not occurred. An article on "Society, by a Peer's Daughter," not only describes and discusses personalities in It will be a battle royal, with each side possessing capital in the neighborhood of $60,000,000. CHAPTER IX.

There are some men who seem to be consulted instinctively by everyone in a difficulty. Which of us but has a friend somewhere to whom he flies at a moment's notice when he finds himself in a dilemma, whose opinions he asks eagerly, to whose maxims he listens with respectful deference, for whose brotherly interest he certainly feels intensely grateful, and by whose advice he as certainly refuses to abide?

I have heard experienced counsel affirm that the great difficulty they have to contend with, in the defense of criminal cases, is the extreme unwillingness on the part of the prisoner to confess, even to his adviser "the truth the whole to his adviser, "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth." There is a suppressio veri somewhere in the un-bosoming of even the most candid of culprits, and on this unfortfied point the whole defense is apt to break down. "I could have got him off, if I'd been quite sure he did it," says the astute Balthazar; "but if a man won't trust his coun-sel, he deserves to lose, and be hanged to him!"—which is, perhaps, after all, the result of his ill-advised insincerity. Now, on a point in which his own personal feelings were not concerned (for, on those in which they are, I hold no man to be better than a fool), I would have taken John Gordon's opinion as I would the lord chancellor's. He was one of the few men I have ever known who could calculate the eventual, not the improvides results of any given measure redulate the eventual, not the immediate, results of any given measure. I can find hundreds who will demonstrate clearly that if I pull the trigger the piece will go off; but I could number on my fingers those whose far-sightedness can hazard an opinion as to whether the cartridge will reach the pigeon at which it is aimed or fall short on the breast it is aimed or fall short on the breast of the inglorious crow. John Gordon, like a fine rider across a country, could see his way, so to speak, into the far distance, field by field. I would have been a very queer obstacle that turned him from it when once he had taken his

His whole career had hitherto been one of uncompromising determination. He was well born-indeed, a distant connection of Lady Olivia's-well bred and we'll educated; but he was a second son.

John Gordon's brother had five thousand a year—John Gordon himself had five thousand pounds. He inherited, though, from his mother, a legacy worth five times that amount— an iron constitution, which nothing seem-ed able to impair, and a strength of will rarely equaled at least in his own sexed able to impair, and a strength of will rarely equaled, at least in his own sex. An offshoot from the illustrious stock to which Lady Olivia belonged, the late Mrs. Gordon possessed, in common with her family, a noble obstinacy, which, while it degenerated in the male scions into pig-headedness and stupidity, fortified the females into rulers of absolute and irresponsible authority. This quality had descended to her son, modified, as became his sex, into determination in that course which his reason told him was the most judicious, John owed all the success he ever had in life.

Most young men of the upper class wit Most young men of the upper class with the thousand pounds seem to think is inadequate a provision is hardly worth taking care of, and fritter the principal away in the pursuit of pleasure, with touching resignation and an implicit reliance on Destiny which would do credit to a Moslem. Some more adventurous spirits sink their capital in the purchast of complete the control of th to a Moslem. Some more adventurous spirits sink their capital in the purchase of commissions in the army—a glorious profession, doubtless, but not lucrative. Bellona's noblest prizes will make their winner illustrious certainly, but not independent; and a clean-swept orderly-room is a poor substitute to a middleaged man for the happiness of a home. To be sure, there is the off-chance of a settlement by a violent death, but this can scarčely be placed to the credit side of the account. Few think of making the five thousand into ten thousand; but of these few was John Gordon. At eighteen he thought the matter over in this wise: "What would I wish to be at forty? Certainly at that age one begins to get an old fellow; but I doubt if even then one is quite past all the pleasures of life. I see men at forty as active, as full of energy, as hopeful, as enthusiastic, almost as great fools, as at twenty. I am not sure but that they enjoy the world more than their juniors. Their place is marked out, their positions established and perhaps it is pleasant also to look back." John had seen but little from the latter point of view, and knew as yet nothing of a "sorrow" ergwn of serrow." and perhaps it is pleasant also to look back." John had seen but little from the latter point of view, and knew as yet nothing of a "sorrow's crown of sorrow." "Yes, it is not such a worn-out age, after all. What would I like to be at forty? I should like to be independent, to have influence, a certain station and recognized position in society. Perhaps I might wish to marry; certainly, I should want a home. How are these things to be obtained? I want them, therefore I will have them. I have youth, I feel; I have energy and endurance, I know. I have never been beaten yet in the cricket-ground or the schoolroom; why should I not conquer in the real world outside? Had I lived in the dark ages. I should have taken care to have a good horse under me, a good sword by my side—as many men-at-arms as I could command at my back. In those days such were the accessories which wrested power and independence and the enjoyments of life. What constitutes power now? What is the talisman that obtains for a man respect, regard, friendship, applause and admiration? Is it genius?—no; courage?—no; benevolence and philanthropy?—no. I have already seen men with each and all of these qualities go irremediably to the walf. What is it, then?—money! Am all of these qualities go irremediably to the wall. What is it, then?—money! Am I satisfied of this—thoroughly. Money, then, I want, and money I will have. How am I to get it? I have two-andtwenty years before me, and five thou-sand down the day I come of age. I will go into business at once. What have I to do with aristocratic prejudices? and I to do with aristocratic prejudices? and what need I care for the sneers of my smart friends? Will the blood they talk about so much provide me with a fine coat, as it does a thoroughbred horse? Of what use is an escutcheon without a hall to hang it up in? I will go into business tomorrow. If I live to see my fortieth birthday, it shall not be my fault if I am in a worse position than my elder brother."

A prettier pitching contest than that between McLaughlin and Phillips has seldom, if ever, been seen at Spring-bank Park. Added to this was the fact that all the players were in the finest fighting trim. McClarys started the match with bright prospects, hav-ing up till the sixth inning four runs to their opponents' 1, but received their death-blow in the seventh, when five runs were made by the brewers. B. Hammond's good batting won him much favorable comment, as did that of Peacock, who had three opportune-ly-made hits chalked up against Me-

Laughlin's account.

BENNETS 9, RIVERSIDES 7. A large crowd witnessed the game on Saturday afternoon between Bennet nine and the Riversides at the club grounds on Rectory street. The game was a good one, the Bennet team winning by a score of 9 to 7. Early, the pitcher of the Bennet club, was in the box for the second time in one afternoon, he having pitched the first game at Tecumseh Park in the afternoon, with Taylor catching. The features of the game were a home run hit by G. R. Penwarden and a one-hand catch by Allen, of the Riversides. Mr. C. G. Moorhead, as umpire, gave entire satisfaction. Score: Bennets. A.B. R. B.H. Shortly after he was again sent around the circle and reeled off the mile in 2:071/2. The half of the second mile was done in 1:021/2 and the last quarter in 30 seconds. At Grosse Pointe, Lord Derby is reported to have done a mile in better than 2:08. The trotter is standing to his work like a major and Spear is pointing him well for the big events. Whitney and Duryea purchased Irish Lad from J. E. Madden, June 20, and paid, it was rumored, $15,000 for him. Mr. Buttrey, the president of the club, in asking the travelers to do everything possible to promote the interests of the picnic, said that it must not be supposed that this was the club's picnic, but in the broadest sense of the term the picnic of the Western Ontario commercial travelers. It was felt it was time to adopt a more speedy me-thod of release, but the difficulty was to find one which would result in an early rescue without increasing the chances of disaster to both Sanford and those laboring in his behalf. Several of those in charge of the work were strongly in favor of the method already in practice, believing that while painfully slow, it was nevertheless the only safe way. There was a cessation of work for a short time, and it looked as though a disagreement between the advocates of opposing methods was to mar the record of splendid ef-fort which had characterized the work with the prospects for recovery. of rescue. The necessity for prompter action, however, overcame the scru-How the News Spread. ples of those who opposed a new me-thod, and at 11 a m. the new plan was put in operation.

The momentous and dangerous task of putting in operation the new means of rescue was delegated to two men, whose ample fitness was shown by the successful and rapid manner in which they fulfilled it. John Carnie, jun., who had on the previous day spent 19 hours in the shaft, was again found willing to risk life and limb in the work of rescue. Robert Hamilton, one of the two or three men in the neigh-borhood who was personally acquainted with Sanford, showed by his willingness to descend the shaft, that he, too, possessed the nobility of soul, divine in its essence, that prompted him to lay down his life for his friend. The men received able assistance Richard Doyle, Henry Allen and others, but upon them rested the respon-sibility of effecting Sanford's release, and to them is due a large share of the

The situation which they faced was this. Sanford rested in a small space formed by the lodging of loose bricks together in such a manner as to hold up the tons of debris piled above him. Into this tiny cell, which had proved at once a living tomb and a place of salvation, an entry had been made from the new shaft, at a distance of about 46½ feet from the surface of the ground. This opening was con-nected with the shaft by a small tunnel eighteen inches square, and a couple of feet in length. Sanford had been so far released that his head and shoulders could rest in this opening, with the face in a downward position, but his legs were buried in bricks and sand below the level of the small tunnel. It was about 11 a.m. when Carnie and Hamilton proceeded to carry into execution the plan decided upon. They dug vertically in the new shaft, until they had reached a distance of several feet below the level of the small tunnel. They then dug in toward the brick wall of the well, at the same time taking precautions against the caving-in earth surrounding the small tunnel. the pressure on Sanford's limbs de-ereased, and finally ceased. About 3 p.m. a rope had been fastened about farm until after Sanford was released. Sanford's shoulders and carried up the shaft, where it was held taut by a dozen willing hands. This lessened the danger to the imprisoned man by any sudden giving way of the debris, either above or below him. When a sufficient space had been cleared to release his legs, the rope was gradually lowered, and Sanford's body was allowed to slip down to the bottom of

Back to Earth's Surface. It was 5:30 p.m. when the anxious group at the mouth of the shaft heard to the joyous news shouted from below, and just three minutes later Sanford himself reached the surface of the earth. In the meantime the crowd had been asked to keep perfect silence when Sanford was brought up, as any noise might have a serious effect up-on him. Sanford was brought up in the big bucket by Robert Hamilton, the chair-shaped box which was constructed several days ago not being found necessary. Sanford was laid on the wooden stretcher which had been softly padded to receive his bat-tered body. A bandage was hastily

The use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery not only stops the cough but cures the cause. It cures obstinate, deepseated coughs, bronchitis, weak seated coughs, icine "just as good" for weak lungs.

"I was very sick indeed," writes Mrs. Mollie Jacobs, of Felton, Kent Co., Delaware, "and our family doctor said I had consumption. I thought I must die soon for I felt so bad. Had a bad cough, spit blood, was very short of breath, in fact could hardly get my breath at all some times. I had pains in my chest and right lung, also had dyspepsia. Before I took your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets' I was so weak I could not sweep a room, and now I can do a small washing. I worked in the canning factory this fall, and I feel like a new person. I believe that the Lord and your medicine have saved my life. I was sick over two years. I took thirteen bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and four vials of Dr. Pierce's Pellets."

placed over his eyes to exclude the sunlight, which would have blinded him after his 100 hours' experience of total darkness and dim lantern light. Careful hands carried their burden to the nearby farm house, between a silent lane of bareheaded men and pitying women. The patient was taken into a bedroom in front of the house, on the lower floor, where soft-voiced kindly nurses were waiting with warm blankets and restoratives. Here Sanford was left with the nurses and the medical attendants, all others being excluded. His father and sisters were allowed to see him for a few minutes only. Dr. Dunton, of Paris, stayed with his patient all the evening, and expressed himself as well satisfied

At the moment when Sanford's release was effected, there were over 2,000 people gathered around the well. While they forbore from making any demonstration of their joy, in deference to the wishes of the medical men, their countenances were an eloquent testimony to the pleasure which filled every heart. Several messengers, mounted on bicycles or behind fast horses, started to do the 21/2 miles to Paris in record time, with the result that in 12 minutes from the time of rescue the news was being bulletined in the London Advertiser office and in other newspaper offices all over Can-ada, where it was awaited with a suspense only a little less acute than that felt by those actually on the scene. In Paris itself the news was hailed with a joy that equaled in its intensity the anxiety and interest which had felt for days as to Sanford's fate. In the Penman mills and the Paris wincey mills, which had closed at 1 p.m. steam was hastily gotten up, and in a few minutes the great mill whistles boomed out, carrying for miles across the rolling hills of Brant county and down the lovely valley of the Grand River the news that Joshua Sanford had emerged from his living tomb.

Sister Warned In a Dream.

While the work of rescue was proceeding in the afternoon, Sanford told his rescuers that a few days before accident he had received a letter from his sister. In this she begged him not to go down any more wells, as she had had a dream in which she had seen him killed by the caving in of a well. The partial fulfillment of her mysterious dream will probably te cited as conclusive evidence by people who believe that there is more in dreams than midnight indigestion, as Talmage called them.

Honor to Whom Honor Is Due.

In addition to Carnie, Hamilton, and the others who took part in the actual labor of rescue, two other men are entitled to a large share of the praise due on account of the successful termination of the work.

One of them was Richard Thomson, assistant manager of the Penman on Saturday night, when the initial work in connection with this big annual event was done. The splendid success that the travelers had last year will undoubtedly be surpassed,

> Dorchester Man Gave Valuable Aid. work of rescue, he having had the benefit of considerable experience in found himself in the neighborhood of the accident by reason of a business engagement, he being an agent for the Gale Manufacturing Company, of the new excavation, whence it was drawn through to the shaft, and the Albion, Mich. On visiting the well, he found that it was the intention of the rescuing party to dig down through the debris of the old well, in an endeavor to reach Sanford. Mr. Cartwright pointed out the fatal consequences which this would almost certainly have, as it would mean the destroying of Sanford's nook of refuge, and his en-gulfment in a shower of bricks and earth. On Mr. Cartwright's suggestion the sinking of the shaft was then pro-ceeded with. Meanwhile he went on to make some experiments along a line to which he had devoted considerable attention, that of estimating distances from the application of principles of acoustics, the science of sound. By a study of the vibrations which convey sounds to the ear, he can judge what distance they have traveled. In experimenting in the well, he found that while the 5-inch iron casing which ran down the center of the well made an excellent conductor of sound, the vibrations were not strong enough reach from Sanford's place of imprisonment to the top of the well, owing to the resistance of the air to the sound

Close Estimate of Sanford's Depth. By descending the old well until he reached the first of the debris which filled it, 27 feet below the surface, Mr. Cartwright found that he could there easily carry on a conversation with Sanford. He learned that the imprisoned man was in great pain, and that he had no idea of his depth, Sanford repeatedly begged that his rescuers would "Hurry up." Mr. Cartwright, by ascending the casing a short distance, and using a small sounder, found the point at which the vibrations were the clearest. From this he made his estimate of the depth at which Sanford was lying, which he fixed at 45 feet or a trifle more. It was the intention of the workers in the shaft to sink it to the depth of the old well, 86 feet, but Mr. Cartwright told them to stop when they were about 47 feet down. This they did, and on tunneling in they found Sanford at depth of 46¼ feet. Then followed the vexatious efforts to release Sanford's legs and feet. Sanford had been found in a different position to that expected by his rescuers, and the tunnel constructed, instead of entering the well squarely, entered it at an opposite angle to that at which Sanford was lying. The edge of the brick wall and the tunnel made an acute angle, around which his body had to be drawn, and this made the work of rescue still more difficult. On realizing the conditions, Mr.Cartwright advised the adoption of the plan which afterwards proved of such signal success, but his advice was not taken for some time. Mr. Thomson and Mr. Carnie, however, recognized its advantages, and with their support the plan was adopted. After the rescue Mr. Cartwright was warmly thanked by Mr. John Penman, Mr. Thomson, Dr. Addison and others for the valuable

The Rescued Man.

Joshua Sanford, the young man for whose safety many anxious wishes Mr. A. J. Cartwright, of Dorchester, have been offered up since Tuesday, is proved of invaluable assistance in the about 28 years of age. He has been following his present trade, that of a well-driller, for about three years. He the drilling of wells. Mr. Cartwright lives at Branchton, 10 or 12 miles from Paris, and is a good son to his mother. Owing to domestic difficulties his fa-ther does not live with his mother, but resides near Galt. There are two sisters, both of them married. The two latter are in attendance on their brother, but Mrs. Sanford is too aged and ill to be present. Young Sanford has been in a couple of similar accidents before, but has each time come out safely. According to statements made by him to his rescuers, he will not abandon his present occupation.
