Cold Storage Employees Found Unconscious and Badly Frost Bitten in Locked Refrigerator Room—ex-Alderman J. G. Richter Declares Chief Engineer Gaby's Depreciation Charge is What He Has Always Advocated—Hon. Adam Beck Practically Confirms Strathcona Sanatorium Grant

DID STRATHCONA MAKE BIG GRANT TO SANATORIUM?

Hon. Adam Beck Practically
Admits Receipt of Large Donations, Which He Was Keeping As Surprise.

WISHED TO ANNOUNCE
NEWS TO ASSOCIATION

But Secret Leaked Out, and
Mr. Beck Does Not Deny
Report Recently Circulated in City.

SAYS THAT IT IS
NOBODY'S BUSINESS

But It Is Apparent That High
Commissioner and His Wife
Were Generous in Aiding Fight on White Plague.

Though with much reluctance Hon. Adam Beck practically admitted to The Advertiser last night that he had received some time ago grants from Lord Strathcona and Lady Strathcona for the Alexandria Sanatorium.

A few days ago it was stated in The Advertiser that such gifts to the sanatorium had been made by the Strathconas more than six months ago. It was not known definitely that such was the fact, but it was practically confirmed by Mr. Beck when he was interviewed.

Kept as a Surprise.
Mr. Beck did not wish the information to become public last night. He thought that the London Health Association should be the first to receive the information if there was any to be given. Mr. Beck had evidently sought to keep the gifts as a surprise to the association.

The information The Advertiser received was that some time ago Mr. Beck had received a letter from Lord Strathcona inclosing a check for $15,000 from Lord Strathcona, and a check for $5,000 from Lady Strathcona. Until Mr. Beck had returned from England there was no possibility of confirming the reports, and the opportunity was not given The Advertiser until last night.

Made Another Grant.
The Strathconas were greatly interested in the movement for the alleviation of tuberculosis in Canada, and at the time of the building of the local they made a grant of $5,000.

Mr. Beck was very insistent that the matter should not be made public. He thought that "if there was anything to be given out" it should be given to the Health Association first. He would not give any facts as to the amount of the grant nor how long ago it was that he had received it. Mr. Beck would not even admit directly that the money had been received, but he certainly did not deny it, and made statements, the reasonable inference from which was that there was truth in the story.

"We are informed," said The Advertiser, "that Lord Strathcona gave you a check for $15,000 by the Byron Sanatorium."

Report to Association.
"I think it is better not to say anything about this matter until it is reported to the Health Association," Mr. Beck replied. "I believe that it is nobody's business at all. I am sure that the ladies of the sanatorium should not be hampered in their work by undue publicity."

The recent report published in The Advertiser to the effect that a grant had been received caused much satisfaction among the supporters of the institution. They are hoping that the story is true, and expect Mr. Beck to make a formal announcement before long.

EMPLOYEES NEAR DEATH IN COLD STORAGE ROOM

Locked in by Automatic Door the Two Men Are Frozen and Nearly Suffocated in Refrigerator Room

Found unconscious, badly frost nipped, and all but dead, Thomas Arnold and Arthur Webster, two cold storage employees, had the narrowest escapes of their lives in a refrigerator room at the cold storage plant late yesterday afternoon. The automatic closing of a door imprisoned them in the airless, below-zero temperature of the room, and only the timely arrival of another employee prevented their lives being snuffed out by the machinery designed for the preservation of meats and vegetables.

The men were engaged in cleaning out the room preparatory to its being restocked, when in some unknown manner the door slammed to, locking them in. The men being airtight the oxygen in the room was exhausted in a short time, and the imprisoned employees found themselves suffocating. Dashing to the door they made desperate efforts to open it, but it was impossible to move the lock from the inside. An attempt to attract the attention of other employees by hammering on the door likewise failed. The men were in another part of the building, and the thick sound-proof walls prevented any sound being heard.

Two hours after the door had slammed to, Williams, another employee, had occasion to go to the freezing room. Opening the door he found Arnold and Webster lying unconscious on the floor, both having collapsed after their ineffectual attempt to escape. Other employees were immediately called, and the two men were carried out. First aid was applied and medical assistance summoned.

Today both men are occupying beds in their respective King street board-in-houses, with their faces and ears frost-bitten.

NORTHERN BELT IS PLANNED FOR STREET RAILWAY

New Route Will Be Worked Out by City Engineer as Result of Conference
Today.

Controller G. E. Rose, City Engineer W. N. Ashplant and the mayor held a conference this morning with Manager C. B. King and Superintendent H. H. Humeston, of the London Street Railway Company, regarding the schedule of speed and service drawn up some months ago by the city engineer.

On the recommendation of the mayor and Controller Rose, the engineer will make a recommendation to the city council to replace the Ottawa cars on Dundas street, and to arrange a new belt line to serve Richmond, Chapside, Adelaide and Dundas streets. In this way, he is pointed out, the residents of the north end will get a service interrupted by only two railway crossings, and persons living on Adelaide street, Lorne avenue and others in that district, will be able to get down town without changing cars.

The controllers will discuss the amended Sunday car agreement at their session on Monday morning, while the speed and service schedule will be considered at the next meeting of the council.

STREET RAILWAY NEEDS COMMISSIONER'S CONSENT

Cannot Run Sunday Cars to Springbank Without It.

Another phase of the Sunday car situation has developed. In the event of Springbank being annexed to the city and a decision to have the seven-day service to that point, the consent of the water commissioners will be necessary in order that the cars may enter the grounds.

Philip Pocock, chairman of the water commission, told The Advertiser that such permission would certainly have to be secured before the London Street Railway Company could operate its cars into the park, as the tracks are laid on private right-of-way, the property of the commission.

"Of course," said Mr. Pocock, "I do not anticipate that there will be any difficulty in securing that permission, but the company certainly have to give us some remuneration for the privilege, as its present agreement only calls for a six-day operation. A straight five cent fare to the park or some other equivalent would be demanded."

HIGHLAND RESIDENCE BURNED BY MILITANTS

Inverness, Scotland, Feb. 7.—An "arson squad" of militant suffragettes today set fire to and burned to the ground Hazlebank House, a highland residence in Tomatin, 16 miles from here. The house was temporarily unoccupied. The usual traces of the presence of suffragettes were found in the grounds in the shape of a quantity of suffrage literature.

Hysterical Pup Starts "Something"

Dog Show Was Too Much For "Pommy's" Nerves, So He Threw Fit and Departed.

A dog owner was taking his exhibit at the dog show for an airing yesterday afternoon in the market square. Now, the owner doesn't know just exactly what ails his bow-wow, but the veterinary surgeon says that it certainly threw a fit, with hysterics, caused by the undue excitement brought on by the unfamiliar barking of big rough dogs, for know you, that this canine spasm is a delicate, diminutive Pomeranian, and with a pedigree as long as King Manue's title.

Suddenly, right on Covent Garden Square, the little blue ribbon started to gurgle and whine, and walk on the bias, and then he left. Across the market, up Talbot street to Carling, and down Carling to Richmond street scouted the Pom, with the anxious owner following fast. Pommy might have escaped, but as he was rounding the curve at the custom house, he skidded just the least bit, and spilt with a despairing yelp, the runaway shot into the grating of the custom house cellar.

The owner fished him out, and the veterinary prescribed:

"No more dog show."

CREW RESCUED OFF WATERLOGGED VESSEL

Tobeatic, of St. John, Had Only
Short Time to Remain Afloat.

[Canadian Press.]

New Orleans, Feb. 7.—Rescued from their waterlogged vessel off the Nova Scotia coast after a series of hurricanes had stripped her of masts and burst open seams, captain John B. White and crew of five, of the British schooner Tobeatic, arrived here yesterday aboard the German tanker Leda. They told a story of a week's fight for life when they expected every hour to be their last. The death of the ship's cook from pneumonia added to their hardships.

The Leda took the Tobeatic's crew off January 27. In the opinion of that vessel's crew, the abandoned ship had but a short time to remain afloat.

The Tobeatic was bound from a Spanish port to St. John. She was owned by A. S. Reynolds, St. John.

ANOTHER FATALITY ON LEVEL CROSSING

Ashgrove Man Killed and Two Girls Injured by G. T. R.
Train.

Esqueving, Ont., Feb. 7.—Driving over a G. T. R. crossing in a blinding snow storm yesterday, Robert Wright, aged 26 years, a farmer of Ashgrove, was killed, and two girls, Miss Mildred Bessey, aged 16, and Miss Pearl Bessey, aged 14, were injured when a westbound passenger train struck the cutter. The accident occurred three and a half miles west of Georgetown, and the occupants of the cutter were thrown 100 feet into a snowdrift. From this they were rescued by passengers of the train, who formed a human chain down the 30-foot icy embankment and brought up the injured. They were rushed to Georgetown, where they were taken to the hospital. The train was delayed for some time. The driver of the cutter was killed. The girls were severely injured. An inquest will be held this afternoon.

SUFFRAGE SOCIETY BOOSTS NUMBER OF WOMEN VOTERS

Efforts Produce Increase of 10 Per Cent in Number
Who Exercise Franchise at Municipal Elections.

Twenty per cent of the women of London exercised their franchise last year, the percentage was 10 and the increase seems to indicate that the efforts of the local suffrage association have not been without result.

The complete statistics of the voting on New Year's Day have been compiled by City Clerk Samuel Baker, and show that 312 women cast their ballots, just one-fifth of the number who could have voted. With the exception of 1909, when 35 per cent of the women exercised the franchise, the chief attraction being an educational issue, the 1914 figure is the highest in the past five years. In 1910 it was 18 per cent, in 1911, 11 per cent, in 1912 12 per cent, and in 1913 10 per cent.

"It is a much more difficult matter to notify the women voters," said the city clerk to The Advertiser, "than to notify the men, and a large percentage of the women are unable to get out to the polls on New Year's Day owing to sickness and the extra work in the home consequent upon the holiday. The 10 per cent increase over last year, is an indication of the increased interest in spite of the fact that there was practically no organization to bring the female vote out. If the interest keeps up I anticipate that fully one-third will exercise their franchise next year. I believe that a percentage of 40 of the women voters is about as high as we may expect."

Among the men voters there were increases all along the line. The percentage of male voters on all civic questions was 52 per cent, as against 50 per cent last year, while school voters only the percentage was 7 per cent, last year's figure in this department being 2 per cent. In 1913 41 per cent of the men voted to vote on all or any questions cast their ballots and the figure this year was 43 per cent. The bylaw voters increased from 32 to 55 per cent.

STRAIN OF PROBES IS TOO MUCH FOR SOME CONCERNED

Even Stenographers at Quebec
Found the Pace Too

A JOURNALIST FOOLED

Believed "Mr. Sampson" To Be Millionaire American, and Was Much Impressed.

Quebec, Feb. 7.—The probes into the Montreal Mail graft allegations rested today after a strenuous week. The worst known and the legislators of both the Upper House and Lower House are relieved that the allegations have not covered more ground, a little more digging remains to be done.

The Leda took the Tobeatic's crew off January 27. In the opinion of that vessel's crew, the abandoned ship had but a short time to remain afloat.

The Tobeatic was bound from a Spanish port to St. John. She was owned by A. S. Reynolds, St. John.

The strain of the probes has been most strenuous. First of all J. O. Mousseau of the Lower House, charged by the Mail with accepting bribes was brought down with an attack of nervous prostration at the mere thought of the inquiry, and is not likely to be able to give evidence before the committee proper.

Mr. Bisillon, counsel for the Mail, was forced to return home ill. Last night the pace at the Lower House inquiry was so furious that three French stenographers found themselves unable to stand the strain.

Newspaper Man Fooled.
A good story was told today of how the alleged "Mr. Sampson" fooled a Montreal newspaperman. The latter met the detective going from Montreal to Quebec and the two got quite chummy. The newspaperman liked the genial and generous "American millionaire" so much that he sent him a copy of his latest book, which happened to be a detective story called "The Traitor." The journalist also offered to introduce Mr. Sampson to Mr. Edward Beck, who had really employed the sleuth, but Mr. Sampson said: "No, I would rather not meet him. One must draw the line somewhere with newspapermen, though of course I except you."

The newspaperman was immensely impressed with Sampson, because he claimed that he drank champagne for breakfast!

DISCOVERER OF M'GEAN WRECK TELLS OF FINDING HULL

Charles Naftal Says the Freighter Lies Three-Quarters of a Mile Off His Farm—Fifty Feet of the Hulk
Is Visible.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Bayfield, Feb. 7.—Charles Naftal, who resides on the lake shore, seven miles west of Bayfield, stated to The Advertiser today, that there was the hull of a vessel believed to be the big American freighter John McGean, lying three-quarters of a mile off the point which has been called Naftal's Point.

While the wreck is not visible at the present time owing to the ice and the stillness of the water, it was plainly seen by many persons, and pieces of wreckage have convinced them that the hull is the wreck of the McGean, whose crew perished in the awful November storm.

See 50 Feet of Hull.
"We saw this wreck some weeks ago while there was no ice on the lake," said Mr. Naftal. "It could be seen only when the heavy waves broke over it, and left the water shallow on the shore side. From our farm it appeared to be about 50 feet of the hull that showed, though it may have been 200 feet in length. Since the time we saw it it has been impossible to reach it because of the broken ice fields. As soon as possible an effort will be made to reach the wreck and make an investigation. There is no doubt in my mind that it is one of the vessels lost in the storm, and no doubt it is the McGean, as wreckage has come ashore right at the point opposite the wreck."

Carruthers Further Out.
"The Carruthers has been reported further out, but it is not possible to get any confirmation of this report, excepting that wreckage from a new boat has been coming in. A Carruthers lifeboat was found not long ago in the locality."

The owners of the McGean have been notified of the discovery, and have given instructions to reach the wreck at the earliest possible moment. It is believed that there will be a great deal of salvage in the vessel.

Bodies in the Wreck.
As soon as the ice goes out, wrecking tugs and divers will start work off the point in an endeavor to see whether the boats can be raised, and to release any parts of the cargo that can be salvaged, as well as any bodies, many of which are still supposed to be imprisoned within the steel walls of the boat's hull.

Say It Will Raise Itself.
D. Cunningham, of Clinton, who, with Mr. Naftal, first discovered the McGean's hull, are experienced lake men. Both declare that the McGean will raise herself still higher as soon as the spring thaws carry out the ice. They base their assertion on the fact that when any object, fastened like the boat, begins to shift, the expectations are that the entire submerged surface will be exposed. That the boats are being lightened by the action of ice and waves is apparent from the amount of wreckage strewn on the ice.

Notice Against Wrecking.
The notices, posted some time ago, warning residents and passersby against "wrecking" any of the salvage, still remain in place, and are being enforced. All valuables washed ashore are being forwarded to the Wrecking Association office in Goderich.

East Londoner's Want New Library

Strongly Support Proposal to Establish Branch in That Section.

East Londoners heartily welcome the proposal of the library board to locate a branch library in the east end.

Principal M. W. Althouse, of Rectory street public school, declares that a branch public library in East London would be of immense educational value and incalculable convenience and assistance through its reference department to pupils both of the public schools of East London and the students of the Collegiate Institute who reside there.

Ald. Joseph Leah is heartily in sympathy with the proposal, and pointed out that about a year ago the East London Progressive Association mooted the question of a library for the east end, at the same time suggesting the old town hall as a suitable location. Ald. Leah pointed out that the town hall is still available, and that the upper floor, recently occupied as a picture theatre, could be readily fitted up for library purposes. He favored the town hall as a temporary location for the library until the extent of its patronage was known, and would justify a new building.

T. H. Lashbrook, of London Junction, thought the branch library should be located as far east as possible, and suggested the fair grounds as a desirable site for a new building.

Ottawa, Feb. 6.—Open and active hostility exists between the war office of England, and the Militia Depart-rumblings for some days, but the open declaration was made in Parliament today by Col. Sam Hughes, minister of militia.

Under the influence of the war of-ruled that no aperture sight may be used at the next national rifle meet.

This shuts out the Ross rifle, the arm of Canada's militia. Colonel Hughes declares that he will provide no funds rifle with the aperture sight. The British authorities have to come down or the Canadian team stays at home

GREAT CROWDS AT OPENING OF LONDON'S LATEST SCHOOL BUILDINGS

500 Attend Interesting Exercises in Remodeled Chesley Ave. School—Dr. Pakenham Compares Old Educational System With New.

The new addition of Chesley Avenue Public School was formally opened yesterday afternoon by Dr. William Pakenham, dean of the faculty of education, Toronto University, who was the chief speaker to an audience of more than 500, mostly women.

The assembly room, where the address was made, was decorated with flags and bunting. After a prayer by Rev. Dr. McCrae, and the singing of "O Canada" by a chorus of little girls from the platform, Trustee E. L. Dennis, chairman for the afternoon, opened the program of addresses. He gave a short talk on the work of the school, past and present, and praised the principal, E. E. Gibbs, and the teachers, and also the mothers' club of the school, for their excellent work in the interests of the institution and its pupils.

Takes Major Beattie's Place.
Dr. English, of Hamilton, and a former chairman of London's school board, spoke in the place of Major Thomas Beattie, M. P., who was unable to attend. Dr. English noted with enthusiasm the fine building, and the successful surroundings of the school, and the improvements in London's educational system since his time.

Major C. M. R. Graham also compared the present school with Chesley Avenue school, when he was on the board, eight years ago. "When four rooms were added in 1907," said the mayor, "we expected that we had made accommodations for a life time to this school, but the wonderful growth of this part of the city has now, only seven years after, necessitated the building of this large addition. If East London continues its wonderful growth, we shall need, in seven more years, a whole new school."

Praises Mothers' Club.
"Co-operation is the life of the school," said Inspector C. B. Edwards, in a short talk in which he praised the Mothers' Club, and the get-together systems of the public schools.

Dr. Pakenham based his address on the great and wonderful changes in educational work in every department. He described the old school house of half a century ago, with its desks arranged facing the walls of the dismal old room, with windows too high for the sun to look out of, and too dirty for the sun to shine through. Dr. Pakenham compared this picture to that of the present building, with every convenience for efficiency and comfort.

Old-time Teachers.
The speaker also described the old-time teachers, ignorant and very often broken-down tradesmen, who could make a living in no other way. Many years ago it was said, "Why educate the common people to make laws? They are not intended to make laws, but to obey them." The speaker then emphasized the usefulness of the public schools since that time.

Everyone now believes in public schools," said Dr. Pakenham, "and although we hear criticism today, it is a different kind of the bitter old days. Now, what we hear is, 'It was not like this in my time, and I don't see why this should be now.'"

In closing the speaker expressed the hope that the Aberdeen school, with its large and modern building, would be the people of the vicinity nearer to education. In such a school the people could get into the habit of the education of the school, he declared.

A Long-Drawn-Out Echo.
The semi-circular auditorium, packed to the ceiling, and clapping of the multitude for half an hour after the conclusion of the addresses. The orchestra played numerous selections throughout the evening, and Miss Edith McBride sang a much-appreciated solo.

Hon. Adam Beck, M. P., Dr. R. W. Shaw, whose names appeared on the program, were unable to attend. The domestic science room, in the basement of the school, at the close of the evening.

Fire and Panic-Proof.
Every precaution has been taken to make this school as fireproof as possible, and provide as much safety as possible. The school is also made panic-proof. The exterior is of red pressed brick with stone trimmings, and presents a most striking appearance, with its original treatment of the blank surfaces, the exterior being designed in such a way that the passing citizen may well at a glance that this structure is a school, there being no superfluity of ornament, the saving gained by this being applied to essentials of the interior.

The cost of the building was $70,000, the contract price being less than the estimated cost. This building cost less per classroom than any school in Western Canada, and within the time limit.

The contractors were John Hayman & Sons, and Watt & Blackwell, the architects.

NEW USE FOR THE MEXICAN ARMY—BRINGS A GOOD PRICE AT SECOND-HAND SALE

business deal it set going the proprietors of the "101 Ranch" will west show become purchasers of all that remains of Gen. Mercado's defeated Mexican army.

[Special Correspondence.]
San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 7.—"For sale: One second hand army, complete in all particulars: men, guns, mules, wagons all present, but in somewhat damaged condition; extra charge if generals and other officers with gold-laced uniforms are desired; army is docile and easily managed; a bargain to the right party; cause of sale, owner forced to evacuate premises."

This insert in papers here brought several replies, and as a result of the business deal it set going the proprietors of the "101 Ranch" will west show become purchasers of all that remains of Gen. Mercado's defeated Mexican army.

WOULD LIMIT CATCHER TO FOUR-FOOT BOX
Chicago, Feb. 7.—A rule limiting the catcher to a box four feet in width will be suggested by umpire Henry O'Day at the baseball sales meeting in New York next Monday as a means of preventing the intentional base on balls.

O'Day, who is one of the National League's representatives at the meeting, believes that a pitcher will have difficulty in "pitching out" or beyond the reach of the batsman's club if the catcher is compelled to stand practically behind the plate.

O'Day will try to get a ruling enforcing the rule that keeps a manager on the bench, and limits protests on umpire's decisions to the field captain.

Winnipeg, Feb. 8.—Trading was light on the wheat market, while prices were decidedly stronger on higher Liverpool prices and sympathy with American market. Influencing factors were colder weather over the United States winter wheat reports, the rise in the Argentine and Australia, and an improved export inquiry.

Oats and flax futures were also stronger.

Wheat opened 1/4c to 3/4c higher and closed 1/4c to 3/4c higher. The inquiry was more active, as one member said: "The best inquiry we have had for months," and prices are about on a line for export, although offerings are as yet all.

The tone, generally, however, is better on the up-train.

Cash wheat closed 1/4c higher for contract grades.

Cash oats closed 1/4c to 1/2c higher. Cash barley closed unchanged.

Cash flax closed 1/4c higher for all grades.

Inspections Thursday totaled 21 cars, against 115 last year, and in sight were 60.

It came out in the debate on capital punishment that a penitentiary guard, reprimanded for not winding his clock on time, replied that he had been cutting down a prisoner attempting to hang himself. "Let him hang, but wind your clock," was the superior official's answer. So time was more important than eternity.

PENSIONS AND BOUNTIES.

THERE would seem to be nothing more conducive to long life than a pension system. The United States has had a very instructive lesson in this matter. The civil war ended in 1865 for all practical purposes. That year the number of pensioners from disability was about 36,000. From that date there has been a steady increase until now the list has reached over half a million; not counting the widows who are some 300,000 more. Of course the Spanish war of 1898 has intervened, and that has swelled the total. But up to that date, the civil war pensioners had increased from 36,000 to over 400,000, and the widows from 50,000 to 250,000.

If the pension system prolongs life, the bounty system discovers it. A few years ago, Canada decided to pay a bounty of $100 to the Fenian Raid survivors. Ten thousand men had been actually called out in the little disturbances of 1866 and 1870. The number who got within sound of a rifle shot were probably not much over two thousand. In forty years a large proportion of these would, under ordinary circumstances, have been dead. But already 16,470 have received the bounty; and as many more are claiming it. If they get the money, it will mean that more veterans will have received the bounty than were actually called out forty years ago.

Of course, there is an explanation. In view of the troubles, actual and prospective, during the Fenian raids, a large number were "enlisted," that is, they were "listed," and ready for active service if required. The total number was according to the returns laid before Parliament a few days ago, 166,672. And the bounty is evidently being paid to many men who never went out on service, but whose claim is based on the fact that they were willing to go if required.

We are unable to see any excuse for paying bounties and pensions to people who never did anything to deserve pecuniary recognition. That a man should be willing to serve his country when it is in danger is no virtue; it is the duty of every citizen. To take up arms and expose himself to danger is also a duty; but it is a duty that may very properly be acknowledged by the bestowment of honors or by pecuniary aid—especially if that is needed. To pensions and bounties for those who have accepted discomfort and taken risks for the protection of their neighbors and the defence of their country there can be no reasonable objection. But when it comes to rewarding a man for only being willing to do something he has not done, it is time to draw the line.

MR. GABY CORROBORATES.

THAT he was sharp, but fair and intelligent in every criticism he made, was the worst, or the best, that anyone could say of John G. Richter while he was a member of the city council.

One of the criticisms of the hydro-electric administration was that its officials did not make proper charges for depreciation. Engineer Gaby, of the Ontario hydro-electric commission, proves to be the man to corroborate Mr. Richter's charges. In a letter to the board of water commissioners he instructed these gentlemen that they were not naming a proper charge for depreciation; that a charge of five per cent should be levied against the capitalization of $434,362.64, and that as a consequence the so-called surplus of $38,411.64 should be reduced to the extent of $21,716.49. Mr. Gaby also pointed out that the same charge should have been made in 1912, which would have wiped out the apparent surplus of that year.

No one believes today that hydro-electric can be wrecked except by the wrongful administration of it. But Mr. Gaby is to be complimented on having the courage to notify the board of commissioners of the error they have fallen into. Of course, these same gentlemen would have been inclined to call anyone else who made such a suggestion an enemy of the people.

The citizens of London can lay down the rule for themselves that nine times out of ten John G. Richter was right on a question of finance. They can thank machine tactics and dishonorable methods for his absence from public life at present. Just as he has been vindicated on the question of depreciation and the illegality of many other matters, he will live to see his record strengthened until there will not be a citizen who will withhold from him the credit richly due him.

THE CANAL SITUATION.

PRESIDENT Wilson's announced intention of asking Congress to repeal that section of the Panama Canal act which exempts American coastwise vessels from paying tolls, will appeal to most people as the only action possible. It is a matter of national honor, a keeping of faith with another nation, and we think all fair-minded Americans will applaud the President for his determination to carry out the conditions of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, which puts all nations on the same basis as regards use of the canal. It will remove at once what threatened to become an ugly situation and improve international relationships. This applies particularly to Great Britain, as the British merchant marine promises for a long time to be the greatest carrier through the "Big Ditch." And at this time, too, when the two great English-speaking people are about to celebrate a hundred years of peace, it would have been unfortunate had

THE LEAMINGTON DISTRICT.

CLOSELY approaching the productivity of the Carolinas and the southern parts of the State of Ohio, the Leamington district along the shore of Lake Erie in Essex County, is probably the most versatile tract of land in the whole province. Almost everything in the agricultural category will thrive on the sandy soil, and fortunes have been made through the outting of large 100-acre farms into pieces of 5 and 10 acres. Land that formerly supported one family, sometimes with difficulty, now supports from ten to fifteen families and the type of home and the "style" of the places make certain that thrift dwells inside.

Thrill attracts thrill. Live men come where live men are. The opportunity has only to knock for one and another hears it. Many of the people in the Leamington district have been attracted from the outside, and the land at present is in great demand among the city farmers. Any man who has the "back to the land" germs in his blood, will succumb to a virulent attack of the disease after he has been imbued with the Leamington spirit.

The soil is good, but the men on it are working harder to get more from it, playing fair with Nature at the same time, than many other men on poorer land. The logic is that there are better things to be derived from agriculture by a scientific treatment of the soil than are now derived in most parts of Western Ontario. Leamington is a lesson in progress along modern lines of husbandry. The town is fit companion to the district. Prosperous and full of activity, it seems to be past the threshold of its full development. It has grown more than a thousand inhabitants in a year. Its district attracts industries. Its locality is chosen of the gods. It has progressive rulers and will be one day a thriving city.

According to Uncle Abner. There are too many fellers in this world who make their dyspepsia their religion.

There are a lot of "good" men who are not good for very much else. One thing we never see any more is the good, old-fashioned buckwheat cake which was brown on both sides. If all the loafers in this country had to go to work there probably wouldn't be enough work to go 'round.

ABE MARTIN

Lots o' fellers are not known by th' company they keep. So many clerks seem to have missed their callin'.

An April morning in the year of disgrace, 1180.

"Faint with ennu!" cried the king. "Call the catiff Enochbus!"

Trembling, little Enochbus, the court jester, stood before him.

"Now shake thy withered brains and make me laugh, thou mis-shapen funeral director!" roared the king. "Four days has thou monkeyed around this court without stirring in my royal breast any emotion save that of disgust. You are as funny as a gullio-tins in the hands of the mob. Mask of tragedy make me laugh this instant or I shall have you hurled off the highest battlement to the unfeeling flagstones, a thousand feet below!"

"Your highness," quavered the shivering jester, "if it pleases your grace, I should probably feel more pane if you had me hurled through one of the royal windows."

The king clapped a hand to his emulated brow.

"Rotten!" he cried. "Old and awful. But for the effort, small gloom dispenser, thou shalt have one favor. Choose thy window so that it be above the thirteenth floor."

A FINE RECORD. [Kincardine Reporter.] During the month of January there was only one death in the town of Kincardine, being the late John Oliver, and only one body was interred in the cemetery here. This is most remarkable for a winter month.

TO INDEMNIFY CLERGYMEN. [Geoph Mercury.] It is quite likely that Windsor churches will be required to insure their ministers, as it is well known that the marriage fees were held out as an inducement to accept a smaller salary in Windsor than elsewhere. To say the least, it is not putting the work of a minister on a very high level to force him to juggle his marriage fees to make up his stipend.

REASON FOR OPTIMISM. [Galt Reporter.] An optimistic spirit pervaded the annual meeting of the South Waterloo Agricultural Society yesterday. And there was good reason for it. The past year was a successful one, the fair being among the best held in the district. The society showed an improvement, although still carrying a small balance on the wrong side of the ledger. The new house was being erected, and a revived interest among the farmers in the district.

KEEPING BOY ON FARM. [Theftford Tribune.] At the National Farmers' Congress the chief problem was held to be keeping the boys on the farms. It will come about when the farms are made more attractive to the boys. The mistake of those who give advice in this matter is their suggestion that the farmer's boy work hard all day and real agricultural literature at night, gaining his entertainment from sombre bulletins and reports. If the boy is worth his salt he has a right to the joys of life. If he cannot have recreations near his home he will

THE HOROSCOPE

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1914.

Few this day fair luck will find
Since Saturn, alone, is kind.

Astrologers find this an unlucky day, since Venus, the sun and Mars are all in adverse aspect. In the evening Saturn exercises friendly rule, but too late to benefit the usual commercial and domestic activities.

Women should be particularly cautious in their business affairs. The stars indicate difficulties with men who hold positions of authority. The time is most inauspicious for requests that involve favors in the line of advancement or recognition. Dissensions among women organized for political or social movements are indicated by the planets. Tact and wisdom will be much needed by leaders.

Marriages and engagements are subjected to inimical influences today. Divorces will be numerous this month. Saturn's kindly sway should benefit all night-workers, including journalists, actors and singers.

In the evening plumbers, dealers in leather, gardeners, florists and farmers should be lucky. Hospitals and institutions that relieve human suffering of every sort will prosper greatly in 1914, which will be marked by marvelous discoveries for the alleviation and cure of disease.

The rise of a new philanthropist is heralded by the stars. He will belong to the West and will work in novel enterprises for relieving humanity of poverty and suffering.

According to ancient lore conditions today are favorable for certain household operations. Cooking and hiring maid servants are both well aspected.

The late rule of Saturn is interpreted as promising for tomorrow's activities, which are concerned with the products of the earth or any enterprises involving work in the soil. Road-making, surveying, railroading construction and field sports are attended by lucky omens.

Persons whose birth-day it is have, the augury of rather a troublesome year. They should be exceedingly thrifty and careful in managing business affairs. Women should cultivate serenity and avoid misunderstandings and fault-finding.

Children born on this day are likely to be exceedingly self-willed. In business boys probably will be energetic, but they may meet with many difficulties.

Bury in the beans ½ pound of fat salt pork. To 1 cup boiling water; add 1 tablespoon salt, 1 tablespoon onion powder, 3 tablespoons sugar, and pour over beans. Add enough boiling water to cover beans, and more if needed during cooking. Cover the bean jar and bake slowly from 6 to 8 hours. Mustard may be added if the flavor is preferred. This quantity should serve eight persons.

THE HOLLOW OF HER HAND

By GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON

Author of "Graustark," "Truxton King," Etc.

"I say I can understand it, but mother and Vivian will never be able to get it through those tough skulls of theirs. They really don't like Sara. Snobs, both of 'em—of the worst kind, too. Why, mother has always looked upon Sara as a—er—a sort of brigandage, the kind that steals children and holds them for ransom. Of course, old man Grooch was as common as rags—utterly impossible, you know—but that shouldn't stand against Sara. By the way her father called her Sallie. Her mother was a very charming woman, they say. We never knew her. For that matter, we never knew the old man until he became prominent as a father-in-law."

The girl was silent. He went on. "Mother likes you. She doesn't say it in many words, but I can see that she loves you. You can have anything in common with Sara. She prides herself on being able to distinguish blue blood at a glance. Silly notion she's got, but—'Please don't go on,' Mr. Wendall," cried Hetty in distress.

"I'm not saying she isn't friendly to Sara nowadays," he explained. "She's changed a good deal in the last few months. I think she's broadening out a bit. Since that visit to Nice, she's been quite different. As a matter of fact, she expects to see a good bit of Sara and you this summer. It's like a spring thaw, by jove, it is."

"When does she come to the country?" asked Hetty, bent on breaking his train of confidence. "In three or four weeks. But, as I was saying, the matter has taken a great fancy to you, she—"

"It's very nice of her," "She prides herself, as I said before, but she always makes sure by asking questions."

"Questions?" "Yes. Although she could see through you as if you were plate glass, she made it a point to ask Sara all the questions she could think of. Over in Nice, you know. Of course Sara told her everything, and now she's quite sure she can't be mistaken in people. Really, Miss 'tation, she's very amusing sometimes, mother is."

Hetty was looking straight ahead, her face set. "Did Sara tell her about me?" "Oh, all that was necessary to prove to mother that she was right. As if it really made any difference, you know."

"Please explain."

The Enfranchisement Of Women

Written by Mrs. T. C. Duncan and Published in a Woman's Magazine, June 8th, 1895.

(No attempt has been made toward giving the article in full—merely a synopsis—which may prove interesting, as an example of argument used nearly twenty years past. Mrs. Duncan will submit a more modern article for publication shortly.)

It is a generally accepted truth that the position accorded to women by a nation indicates a fair standard by which to measure its degree of civilization and morality. These or similar words have been used many times in a self-congratulatory manner to contrast the lives and surroundings of women of this country with our more barbarous and heathen sisters.

Classed With Criminals.
We boast a higher civilization, but are we willing to be judged by this standard, when we remember that women—Canadian women—are classed with criminals, imbeciles and irresponsible persons? That the position accorded to women in this country is one of such degradation and dishonor, that it is in no degree less than that of a criminal, is a fact which cannot be denied. When confronted by such a question, thoughtful persons question themselves regarding our advancement as a nation.

We are told that we have a truly representative Government, and that the voice of every adult person—who has the right to vote—is heard in our legislative assembly. Is this true? Is it true, that the voice of every adult person—who has the right to vote—is heard in our legislative assembly? Is it true, that the voice of every adult person—who has the right to vote—is heard in our legislative assembly?

The Chinese and other nations are looked upon with pity and contempt, because their women are kept in slavery and bondage; but what is this we find in our own country?—woman classed, not as a sinner, but as an irresponsible person, who is shut out from the privilege of voting in the profit and loss, financially, socially and politically, incurred by our Government. Is this in time must have its due weight and force. Surely this is a relic of barbarism, tolerated too long and only tolerated because women as a class have permitted such a wrong.

A Woman's Right.
The right of franchise is one for which our fathers fought and died on the field of battle, and it may be ours to fight some very worthy battle before the victory is won. Has man a right to deny women a voice in the government of the people, when that government is legislating and permitting evils which every day are blighting not only their lives, but the lives of their children?

Woman asks for the franchise that she may use it as a power to remove these evils. We are told that home is woman's sphere and we believe it is. It may be man's sphere to protect that home, but when we find him in duty, who has a better right than the mother to see that her children are shielded from those evils which tend to ruin them? With all our boasted freedom, she has not the power to say what laws shall govern the nation. God has given into her keeping. Nor can we blame a Parliament for acting sustained by the people.

While the people are satisfied it is unreasonable to expect a Parliament to complain. Then, too, about one-half the people are represented. The world's population is not all of one sex, therefore we cannot possess a truly representative government.

Mental and Moral Equality.
That woman has a right to the ballot on the ground of mental and moral equality is proven every day. We find her successful in educational matters where men often fail. In matters of organization woman has shown herself man's equal, as well as in legislative ability. This is proven by the numerous societies directed and controlled by women.

Among the many arguments used by men—some even in high places—is this, that the use of the ballot will cause woman to become unwomanly. This is not the respect of man, that the home will be neglected and a great many equally senseless arguments are advanced. When we remember that much of this contention has emanated from the home and that it is for the better protection of that home we are pleading, the last named objection cannot stand. Neither is it likely that we have been placed in possession of faculties and powers the exercise of which will cause us to forget the dignity of womanhood.

We boast of the higher level to which our heathen and pagan sisters have been raised during the past few years. Are they less womanly because they share in those privileges intended by the Creator for all? Many in our own land are today bearing poverty and hardships, toiling unceasingly in frantic efforts to feed and clothe the children who constitute their sole wealth, learning in the bitter school of necessity lessons of prudence, and hard-gained economy—women who have been robbed of their lawful rights and to whom the casting of a ballot and the publicity which it might entail would prove as child's play compared with the rougher elements of a life forced upon them because our country sanctions many hard-earned conditions.

Just as soon as the country is ready for it, the suave politicians tell us. When will the country be ready to sweep out of existence those evils which now exist? Not till woman has a voice in the matter.

Votes will carry when reason, justice and humanity plead in vain. It is not sentiment we want, but plain unvarnished fact. Might is in many instances right, therefore we will have might on our side. Has the extension of the franchise ever led to disastrous results? The history of the past proves that it has not; even when granted to a class of men considered at the time ignorant and unintelligent, some knowledge of the present and a dim foresight into the future will convince that in this dawn of the twentieth century the world is moving and that this is a great national question, which must be dealt with as was the emancipation of the blacks from slavery.

The minds of many great and good men are exercised in this matter, reason and justice combine to maintain the right of universal suffrage. Nor is this thing being done in a corner. The movement is broad and is likely to spread over the whole civilized world. It is no longer regarded as a joke or a matter for humor; today it commands earnest attention. The movements has gone beyond the stage of ridicule, through which many another great and ultimately successful movement has had to pass. It continues to advance, and the opposition of ingrained prejudice and

For real statesmanship in the matter, we quote the words of William H. Seward, who said: "Justice is on the side of woman suffrage."

Poets are thought to have the keenest appreciation of the fitness of things, and no one will deny the claim of Henry Longfellow to the title of poet. He said: "Woman suffrage is undoubtedly coming, and I for one expect a great deal of good to result from it."

Our present school system is expected to make fairly well educated children embryo writers, artists and, at the present moment especially, farmers. Our curriculum shows no partiality. It covers all subjects. All that is lacking is the time to carry it out in detail. Well, perhaps, with such a course of study, medical inspection is necessary as there seems to be a danger of brainstorm from a multiplicity of subjects.

The writer did think that in such an intelligent, well-to-do farming community as is found in the county of Middlesex, the parents could be trusted to look after their children's health. Of course, conditions in a city are somewhat different, where there is often a foreign element to be reckoned with. The writer in several years' experience in our rural schools, has usually found that parents of defective children have those children under their own doctor's care, or, on a word from the teacher, will seek a physician's advice. The parents of Middlesex are not guilty in that respect. However, perhaps the enthusiasts on medical inspection have no children attending school and so they have time to look after other people's.

Let the Women's Institute look after the making of ideal homes and they will do more for "Home and Country" than by wasting energy where there is already trained ability looking after our schools.

However, if they are taking the needs of our rural schools seriously to heart, one of our county inspectors suggests the great need of truant officers in the townships and also the need of more attractive surroundings for the teachers in order that more efficient work may be accomplished. It is possible under existing conditions. Our schools suffer from an overdose of fads and experiments. Surely the home will share some of the burden of child training and not leave everything for the school to do.

Is there any great need of trying to force medical inspection on our rural schools? Do the parents want it?

ORGANIZED BALL IS AFTER TINKER

Will Try and Prevent Him Playing This Year.

GOOD GROUNDS FOR SUIT

Umpire Hank O'Day Has Several Changes in Rules to Bring Before Big League Clubs.

[Canadian Press.]

Chicago, Feb. 6.—An effort to stop Joe Tinker from playing ball this season will be made by organized baseball, according to President Murphy of the Cubs, who said today that he felt sure Tinker had legally accepted terms with the Brooklyn Nationals before he had signed his Federal League contract, thus furnishing grounds for a suit. Murphy's statement was made after a conference with Charles Ebbets of the Brooklyn Club, who returned home after signing pitcher Wagner.

The expected shift of the Federal League franchise to Cincinnati or Cleveland may take place tomorrow at the meeting of the league heads here, President Gilmore is expected back from the Canadian city with a report on conditions. Arthur Irwin, representing the New York Americans, is due in Chicago today for a conference with Rollo Zeider, who has signed a Federal League contract and Sweeney who is on the fence between offers from the Yankees and the Buffalo Federals. None of the three appeared at places usually frequented by baseball men and if any conference took place they were secret.

Umpire Henry O'Day will present to the rules meeting at New York next week several changes which he says are important. O'Day is the inventor of the foul strike rule. Confirmation of the story that Al Bridwell, shortstop had signed with the St. Louis Federals came today in a letter from Bridwell to President Murphy.

TORONTO ROWING CLUB AND T. R. AND A. A. TIE

Play Three Overtime Periods Without Being Able to Decide a Winner.

Toronto, Feb. 7.—At twenty minutes to one this (Saturday) morning, the Toronto Rowing Club and the T. R. and A. A., the latter the senior champions of the O. H. A., agreed to quit with the score of 1 to 1. The teams had played three ten-minute periods of overtime without being able to break the tie.

The score at half time was 1 to 0 in favor of the T. R. and A. A., but the Rowing Club scored one minute after the commencement of the second half. The game was called off with the permission of the O. H. A. Owing to the enormous ice space of the Arena and the terrific checking which featured the game from end to end, the players were unable to continue. A date will be appointed on which to play off the tie.

Had the T. R. and A. A. been beaten, their chances for the group championship would have been materially reduced. The teams:

Toronto Rowing Club—Goal, Laird; defence, Sidley and Hunter; rover, Burrell; centre, Farris; forwards, Dopp and Skinner. T. R. and A. A.—Goal, Smith; defence, Heffernan and Gooch; rover, Stevenson; centre, G. Meeking; forwards, H. Meeking and McLean. Referee—J. M. Egan.

HAMBY SHORE, the splendid point player for the Ottawa hockey team. This is Hamby's tenth year in the game. He started with Ottawa in the 1904-05 season and played in the Capital City till 1907; then went to Winnipeg for a season and returned to Ottawa where he has been a fixture ever since.

Every time a legislature is about to pass a bill of compensation that will admit of the passing of a boxing bill along comes Tommy Burns and pulls something that arouses the solons to the fact that the things that killed it are still possible.

If no one else wants that $500 that both Red Killifer and Charlie Weegman are refusing to accept, our address is not hard to find.

FINEST EXAMPLE OF PURE GRIT ON THE BASEBALL DIAMOND IS RUSSELL BLACKBURNE, SAYS HUGH S. FULLERTON

[BY HUGH S. FULLERTON.]

Russell Blackburne is coming back to the major leagues. Blackburne's case affords perhaps the finest example of pure grit, determination and effort to make good in the history of baseball, and an object lesson that every young man, whether ball player or not, should study.

His return to the Chicago White Sox is the most important because it happens at a time when, if he plays up to the standard every one who knows believes he can, he will fill the big gap in the Sox infield and make them the strongest contenders for the pennant against the Athletics.

There are scores of men in baseball, players, owners, managers and experts, who are pulling for Blackburne to return triumphantly and prove that a man can conquer over all difficulties. If he fails this time he ought to go down in the history of baseball as the rival of Fred Merkle and "Old Dog" Nichols, as the hardest luck player.

Blackburne came from Providence to Chicago. He was touted by the wisest baseball men in America as the greatest minor league player that had developed in a decade. He was aided and pressed against all over the land. He joined the team; a high strung, ambitious, thoroughbred youth, frantic with desire to show what he could do. He was on edge. He felt that he must play the whole game; do everything; play better than anyone ever had played. As a result he overplayed himself; fought the ball, erred, broke, and made a miserable showing.

The fans who had expected so much attacked him mercilessly. The thing that convinced me he was a great player was that, under the merciless abuse, he never wavered, but tried harder. The more errors he made the harder he tried.

Hugh Duffy, then manager, stuck to him until it became cruel to send him out to play. He was given a rest, allowed to fret on the bench and steady his nerves. They calmed, and he went back, playing with wonderful brilliancy. In three days he smashed his doubters. Yet he says that, even if leg, after showing just a flash of what he could do. He tried to work on a leg that would have sent most players to a hospital. He went home; a failure. That winter he inherited a fortune. Instead of retiring with plenty of money, he determined to prove that he could make good. He underwent a terrible operation to repair the leg. He came back, limping, at his own expense, to see if he could help Comiskey beat the Cubs. He got another trial. Again the leg weakened.

Then, despairing of ever developing him, Comiskey sent him back to the minors. Refusing to be discouraged, Blackburne declared he would be back and prove his worth. He worked desperately and faithfully, was a huge factor in winning a pennant for Milwaukee, and now returns for another trial.

This time he is older. He has been seasons with the Sox. He is determined to win a place and convince the thing else, Blackburne seems the best prospect the Sox have and those who admire gameness and grit ought to be rooting for him.

RUSSELL BLACKBURNE MAKING ONE OF HIS GREAT ONE-HANDED CATCHES.

If he fails this time, he will go back to the minors and come up again. You can't keep that kind of a man down, whether in baseball or anything else, Blackburne seems the best prospect the Sox have and those who admire gameness and grit ought to be rooting for him.

Sudden Death Game in This City Last Night Resulted in Win For the Tunnel Town Septette by Score of 8 to 6.

In a cyclone finish that brought the thousand or more spectators present to their feet, the Alvinists defeated the Sarnia septet at the Princess Rink Friday night by a score of 8 to 6. The game was a hard-fought one, with the Sarnia boys leading 7 to 3 against them, and only four minutes to play, the scoring line was kept for the spectators on the jump to count, and when time was called it looked a little as though the Alvinists might be saved by the bell, for the Alvinist machine was still going full fury. No one will deny the Sarnia boys the credit for the victory, however. They earned it, and the result pretty fairly represents the capabilities of both teams.

The first half of the game was all Sarnia. Alvinist had all kinds of weight over their opponents, but with the possible exception of Davenport, the centre, seemed slow to realize that it was a hockey game they were up against. When they did wake up they worked hard, but failed to uncover anything in the way of team work, while fast skating on the part of the Sarnia team kept the puck much of the time in Alvinist territory. Arthur scored first for Sarnia in a scrimmage in front of the goal in two minutes of play. E. Hamilton retaliated for Alvinist a minute later, on a lucky long shot from centre. Nothing further happened until the scoring line was kept for the spectators on the jump to count, and when time was called it looked a little as though the Alvinists might be saved by the bell, for the Alvinist machine was still going full fury. No one will deny the Sarnia boys the credit for the victory, however. They earned it, and the result pretty fairly represents the capabilities of both teams.

GILMORE DENIES IT.

[Canadian Press.]

Chicago, Feb. 7.—Direct contradiction of the reports that Toronto might be dropped was given by President Gilmore, who returned from his eastern trip.

"There is no truth in the report that Toronto is to be dropped," said Gilmore. "I found everything satisfactory on my visit there, and the backers of the Toronto club are enthusiastic."

TEACH AGRICULTURE IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Chatham, Feb. 6.—The sixth annual exhibition of the Ontario Corn Growers' Association closed its doors tonight at 8 o'clock. Officials and members are declaring tonight that it was the most successful of any exhibitions yet held by the association.

In the final lecture of the meeting, which was given this afternoon, Professor McCready, of Guelph, made a particularly strong appeal for the teaching of agriculture in the schools.

He showed that the department of education had been doing a great deal along this line, but said that the thing to do now was to arouse the interest of the people in the question and have them make a demand on the department for a more comprehensive course. He said that the western countries were making more headway in the matter than were any other countries in the province, and he complimented the people of Essex and Kent and adjoining counties for their activity in the matter.

Advocates Consolidated Schools.
He told at some length of the plans followed to give teachers the kind of training that will fit them to teach agriculture in the schools. He also advocated consolidated schools, and gave illustra-

License Inspector Claims He Was Attending to His Duties.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Toronto, Feb. 6.—Light is gradually appearing in connection with the presence of Provincial License Inspector Snider during the Canada Temperance Act campaign in Huron and Welland counties last week. It was no "fake" Snider, as has been suggested. Hon. W. J. Hanna, speaking to The Advertiser today, said: "Mr. Snider was in Welland before the date of the election, as he himself says, but without instructions from myself or the department. Mr. Snider explained to me that this occurred in the regular performance of his duties, which kept him moving constantly throughout the province."

With regard to Huron, it is assumed that the same explanation will be given. A. H. Musgrove, M. P. for North Huron, is one who can speak of Mr. Snider's presence in the county during the campaign, and resented it vigorously.

TEAM AND DRIVER WENT THROUGH ICE

Teeswater Man Had Close Call From Being Drowned—$300 Horse Dead.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Teeswater, Feb. 6.—The announcement of the death of a team of horses suddenly went through the ice on the Maitland River late Friday afternoon and had the closest kind of a call from being drowned.

Only the timely assistance of a number of icecutters saved Mr. Forster's life. One of his horses valued at $200, died a few minutes after it had been gotten out, from the effects of the immersion in the icy water. The other horse was badly cut. Mr. Thompson was just starting away with a load of ice when the accident happened.

Outside of Sir James Whitney, Eastern Ontario at the present time has no representative in the Cabinet, and while Dr. Preston's elevation has been practically assured for some time, The Advertiser understands that the appointment is shortly to be made.

Outside of Sir James Whitney, Eastern Ontario at the present time has no representative in the Cabinet, and while Dr. Preston's elevation has been practically assured for some time, The Advertiser understands that the appointment is shortly to be made.

Additional color is given to this in view of the fact that Geo. H. Gooderham, M. P. for South Toronto, was unable to become a candidate for mayor at the recent municipal election. Mr. Gooderham during the past sessions has been acting-whip on occasions, and his friends in the party would rather see him active in Queen's Park than in the city hall at Toronto.

Doherty Copped the Links. — Following the regular meeting of Masonic Lodge, No. 209a, in the Masonic Hall, Queen's avenue, last night an informal progressive euchre game was played. The prize, a pair of cuff links, donated by C. R. Sumner, was won by John Doherty. More than eighty members were present.

Anarchist Is Coming.—Edward F. Mylius, of New York City, who was sentenced to five years in Wormwood Scrubbs prison, on a conviction of libelling King George, is to lecture in this city the latter part of March. Mylius lectured in Toronto several weeks ago and is returning to Canada on a second lecture tour in the course of a few weeks. It is not definitely decided as to what auspices he will speak under here, but plans are being made for local anarchistic and socialistic organizations to unite to stage a lecture date for him in London.

National Ideals of Life.—The first and second lectures of the course to be given by John Cowie, a Powys under the auspices of the Woman Teachers' Guild are taken from a series on "National Ideals of Life." "England, the Citadel of Individualism," and "Germany: the Fatherland of Efficiency." In these lectures Mr. Powys shows that liberty has been England's gift to the world, while science, efficiency, the power of expert training and philosophic education are what Germany has had to give. The final lectures of last year's course were given to capacity houses. This year a larger hall has been secured, and even greater enthusiasm will be aroused by a course that must appeal to a very large section of the community.

COMPANY HANDS OUT ULTIMATUM ON SUNDAY CARS

Attorney Ivey Says London Must Accept Amendments to Proposed Agreement.

NO SERVICE TOMORROW

Company Objects to Operating Certain Lines, or Into New Districts.

RAILWAY ST. MENTIONED

Revised Document Forwarded to Mayor—Board of Control to Discuss Situation.

London's Sunday car service seems to be as far off as ever. It is hardly likely that the controllers will tackle the agreement problem today, and it is pointed out that even if they did and reached a satisfactory settlement with the company, cars could not be operated tomorrow, as a special council meeting is necessary to extend the time for the signing of the agreement.

The bylaw was given its third reading by the council more than two weeks ago, and it was stipulated that the agreement covered by it should have been signed within ten days of the passing. But this was not done for the agreement was not prepared until a considerable time later. For this delay C. H. Ivey, counsel for the London Street Railway Company, in an interview with The Advertiser on Wednesday night, held City Solicitor T. G. Meredith responsible.

Yesterday Mr. Ivey forwarded to Mayor C. M. R. Graham, the proposed agreement with the amendments demanded by the company respecting non-operation of the Railway street and old Ridout lines, and its objection to operating on Sundays into Springbank or any other district that might be annexed.

"This is the company's ultimatum," said Mr. Ivey, from which it is inferred that the city will either have to agree to the demands of the company or do without Sunday car service, as it has no power to compel the company to furnish the same.

The board of control will probably deal with the amended agreement at the regular session on Monday morning.

R. E. O. A. IN LINE WITH EAST END PROGRESSIVES

Pass Resolution Condemning Two-Year Term for Controllers—Only Experiment, They Claim.

At a largely-attended meeting of the Real Estate Owners' Association last night, the following resolution was passed: "Resolved that in the opinion of this association, it was never intended that special legislation should be secured fixing the term of the board of control for a longer period than twelve months, and, pending legislation, granting government by commission, as is sure to follow, the ratepayers will oppose a two-year term. And we very much appreciate the action of the East End Progressives in regard to this question."

THE GREAT LEAMINGTON DISTRICT, WHERE EVERYONE "STAYS-IN-ONTARIO"

WHAT ENTERPRISE DOES
WHEN THE LAND IS GOOD

London Advertiser

AN EXAMPLE TO MANY UNDEVELOPED DISTRICTS

51st Year.

LONDON, ONTARIO, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1914.

PRICE TWO CENTS

THE LEAMINGTON DISTRICT is blessed with the finest soil in Ontario, but it is also blessed with the finest type of agriculturist Canada has---the man who puts the neglected opportunity out of business and puts his money into development. There is romance in the wonderful advance of this section, romance that will do much to stir those who are content to work according to the moss-grown formulae of a dead age. In Leamington farming assumes its real dignity as a profession.

ELLIS AN EXAMPLE TO ALL YOUNG MEN

Leamington Grower Has the Largest Plant in Canada.

FOUR ACRES UNDER GLASS

Starting in Modest Way, He Has Achieved
Wonderful Success--How He Has Made the Sun Do His Work.

[By Staff Representative.]
Leamington, Feb. 6.--For those who want it, story book romance is all right, though at best it's fiction, but there's a more practical, thrilling real romance in the life of Roy Ellis of Leamington. There is no fiction about the life and the achievement of this young man. It's all hard work and struggling and finally succeeding.

In his four acres of Essex soil under glass it seemed to The Advertiser man that this typical young Canadian with a purpose and the grit to carry it through, has written one of the biggest stories of them all. There are other big stories of the harnessing of the fertile earth in the Leamington district but everyone takes his hat off to Roy Ellis.

Ellis is the pioneer of early vegetable raising and hothouse farming in the district. That is, in a big way. Others had hothouses before he started some six years ago, but he has led the way in his line and stands at the top of the heap for Canada now.

Works Sun Hard
The sun must feel that young Ellis is a hard master some days. He has literally put Old Sol to work with him as a silent but forceful partner and he keeps him going 365 days in the year and makes him bring the rosy bloom to the faces of tons and tons of early tomatoes and makes him paint the deep rich green in his all-the-year-around lettuce. Tomatoes at Christmas time that can beat "Madinatti" tomatoes to the market, and any other kind of vegetable that the market demands are produced in those big sweeping conservatories day after day. The Advertiser man saw a verdant crop of lettuce, stretching 300 feet into the distance, worth thousands of dollars. Salad for a nation! A big idea come true! Can it be done anywhere else? Sure! Continued on Page Twenty.

FATHER PREDICTED FARMS OF 10 ACRES

Lewis Wigle Remembers When All Had Big Farms.

THE TOBACCO PROSPECTS
Buyers Believe That Quality Must Be Raised--Growers To Hold a Meeting.

[By Staff Representative.]
Leamington, Feb. 6.--"When I was a boy," said Lewis Wigle, ex-M. P. and ex-M. R. P., "my father told me he might not live to see it, but that I would see the time when all the 200-acre farms that were then the order of the day would be cut into 10-acre pieces, and that a man would make more money from one of them than he formerly made from 20 of them."

The prophecy of Solomon Wigle has been realized in Leamington, and his son believes that before long there will be many thousands more people in the district than at present. Where one family lived a few years ago there are now ten or more on the same area of land.

Quality the Cause
Mr. Wigle buys tobacco in the Leamington district, and when asked why the price this year was not so good and purchases not so extensive he said that it was because of the quality of the leaf.

"I was in Louisville, Kentucky, recently," he said, "I found there that the farmers were getting better results by sorting their tobacco in piles of 200 to 400 pounds, according to the quality. In this way the better prices are received for the leaf of better quality, and there is no dissatisfaction because of the culls."

"The reason that there is not such a good market for tobacco in Leamington just at present is because the companies have bought too much poor stuff. I have positive instructions not to buy any second quality. The farmers appear to think it hard to separate the good from the poor stuff, but I can't see why they expect to sell the culls from tobacco more than they would expect to sell the screenings from a fanning mill. If the farmers would put in fewer plants they would get better quality and better prices."

Bought From 900
F. S. Moss, local manager of the Mc-Alpine Tobacco Company, stated that his company bought leaf from about 900 growers, including Pelee Island. About two and a half million pounds are handled each year. Tobacco growers inform Mr. Moss that they make more out of tobacco than out of ordinary crops outside of small vegetables and fruits. Mr. Moss believes that in some instances the land has been "flooded to death," and that some of it must be given a rest and well fertilized. As for the Leamington district in general he says there are more automobiles owned there than in any other place in Canada, according to population.

There are three other tobacco companies in Leamington, all of which have plants and offices and employ a number of hands at fair wages.

George Wiper, tobacco grower, of Leamington, is calling a meeting of tobacco growers for February 12 for the purpose of discussing the tobacco situation. Some of the growers claim that there has been discrimination, and that money has been paid because the companies will not handle their product.

Part of the Greatest Vegetable Plant in Canada.

These photographs show the interior of one of Roy Ellis' mammoth greenhouses at Leamington, the exterior of his latest addition, which is 35 by 305 feet, and the young man himself, whose constructive ability has produced this wonderful array of vegetables producing plants. A man in his twenties, he has built a profitable business in a few years. His example brought before the young farmers of Western Ontario will encourage them to "Stay in Ontario," and to accomplish great things for their country.

MORE TO BE BROUGHT OUT
E. E. Adams, District's Selling Agent,
Gives Figures of Some Phenomenal Yields.

[By Staff Representative.]
Leamington, Feb. 6.--The man with the facts and figures in regard to the progress made in the Leamington district is E. E. Adams, of the Leamington Onion Association and several other organizations for the co-operative marketing of products.

He had some interesting figures to give in regard to the reclaiming of the marsh land around Point Pelee. The most remarkable evidence of the sagacity of the men behind this work is that they have gone to Belgium and secured the men who reclaimed the salt lands of the sea to work their land for them.

$10,000 His Share
Mr. A. E. Roche had 25 Belgians working on his onion farm last year. They understand the game. There were 47 acres of onions under cultivation and Mr. Roche took forty per cent as his share, 60 per cent going to the Belgians. Mr. Roche received in the neighborhood of $10,000 as his share of the yield. It was a good onion year and the value of the crop was in all $25,000.

John A. Campbell has excellent success with onions and potatoes on the marsh land, securing in the neighborhood of $7,000 from his crops. This included 4,700 bushels of pickling onions, sold to the Heinz plant at $1 a bushel. Mr. Campbell is now in Belgium arranging to bring another colony to Leamington for the purpose of working on the reclaimed land.

Mr. Adams says that the future of the onion business is secure. The production is not increasing but the demand is.

$1,000 an Acre
Mr. Adams also markets the early tomatoes grown in the district. They are started under glass and then put in the field. A crop is forthcoming early in July and in some cases $1,000 an acre has been realized. The average runs from $300 to $950. Tomatoes for the canning factories bring excellent prices. One hundred carloads of outdoor tomatoes were shipped last year in baskets.

The melon business is increasing, and the prospects for big profits in cabbages are good. In fruit, as high as $7,500 from 25 acres has been secured.

URGES THAT SLAUGHTER OF GAME BIRDS BE STOPPED

Forrest H. Conover Is Conducting Great Work to Conserve District's Wildfowl and Songsters--
Has Faith in Leamington.

[By Staff Representative.]
Leamington, Feb. 6.--Forrest H. Conover, one of Canada's crack shots, is waging a great fight for the conservation of the game birds that migrate yearly to Canada and are slaughtered for sport. He believes the game birds will be exterminated if the slaughter continues, and urges the abolition of the market and a limit on the individual bag. Mr. Conover is president of the South Essex branch of the Ontario Fish, Forest and Game Protective Association. He has enlisted the sympathy of all true game lovers, and petitions, asking for the enforcement of his demands, have been circulated in many localities.

Mr. Conover has a small farm in the Leamington district, and no one believes more thoroughly in the district than he. He calls the Leamington district the Eldorado of Ontario.

"The semi-tropical conditions that exist in this district are such as to produce a varied amount of the choicest fruits of Ontario," he said. "We have peaches, grapes, apricots, pears, and the field varieties are legion, from the tomato to all kinds of melons and pie plants. Sweet potatoes and peanuts are among the varieties that grow here."

The Eldorado of Ontario
Mr. Conover believes that one of the duties of the district is to care for the birds that pass through on their migration. There are some 52 varieties of song birds, as well as the quail wintering at Point Pelee, the most southerly point in Canada. Under the protection of the South Essex Association these birds are well cared for.

The Reclaimed Land
After describing the advantages of the district in general, Mr. Conover pointed to the wonderful production of the reclaimed lands at Point Pelee in onions, celery and tomatoes. Everything is marketed in carloads lots, and the general productivity of the district has made a name for Leamington unexcelled in the Dominion.

Mr. Conover believes the town never had better management, and that it is on the eve of even greater development.

Leamington's Mayor

The name of Arthur Brown, mayor of Leamington, is known all over North America. As the owner of Gallagher and hundreds of other well-known race horses, he became a figure of national reputation. He has handled thousands and thousands of the finest horses ever bred, probably more than any other individual in Canada.

Now he is devoting his time to his home town with good results. Recently he has opened up several surveys in Leamington, has erected beautiful entrances, and laid cement walks and curbs on every new street. The houses, homes that anyone would be proud to live in, are springing up like mushrooms.

The new streets have been named George, after the mayor's son, Morgan, after their son, and Arthur, after the mayor himself. No one has more faith in Leamington than Arthur Brown, and no one will hustle harder to advance its interest.

than in the last few years. He believes that the "new blood" in the city council will greatly improve conditions.

Dr. Will Burgess, son of Mr. J. T. Burgess, formerly of London, is a Western University graduate, who has established himself in Leamington. His parents also reside here and are loud in their praises.

A Great Shot, But He Loves the Birds

FINE COMMUNITY SPIRIT MAKES DISTRICT BEST IN THE LAND

Leamington, Feb. 6.--Leamington wanted a new mayor. It wanted a 1914 model, self-starting, six-cylinder mayor, not too fancy, but built for speed and utility. SOME OF THE MEN WHO DO WELL IN LEAMINGTON

Remarkable Yields From Small Farms Are To Be Found Everywhere.

[By Staff Representative.]
Leamington, Feb. 1.--The men who grow tobacco and early tomatoes and vegetables and general crops in the Leamington district do not toil from morning to night in the winter time. A large number of them drop into the Businessmen's Club on Talbot street for a game of cribbage or checkers or bridge, or to hear something new on the Victrola. If the growers of the district are not in California or Florida, you will usually find a group of them around the comfortable room.

An Advertiser man had an opportunity of meeting a number of the prominent men of the district, and talking over crops and profits. They were not many millionaires present, but there were few who were not as financially prosperous as anyone could wish for, few who did not have a garage with a six-cylinder car in it.

C. Haisense has 50 acres, three miles out Talbot street. Last year, with the assistance of a boy, he secured from his various crops as follows:

Tobacco	$1,000
Hogs	350
Dairy	350
Horses	650
General	100
Total	$2,400

This was the result of a half-year's work, and there was a good margin of profit. He did not do it by neglecting the work, keeping a man on the place. He also had 4 acres of late tomatoes, which yielded good returns.

Douglas Maynard, who owns Bonnie Brook Farm, has been in the district for five years, and has 75 acres. He has underdrained it, using 50,000 tile, and has gone into many lines of agriculture. He values his land at $1,000 an acre, although he secured it for a comparatively reasonable amount. His early potatoes last year yielded him $2,000, his tobacco $1,500, and his seed corn $400 to $500. In addition to these he raised much other stuff. He has tried strawberries with a return of $450 to the acre, and has been successful with celery and onions. One crop of wheat on his place produced 40 bushels to the acre. Mr. Maynard has fertilized his land with sweet clover and manure with excellent results. He has sixty horses on his place at the present time.

Herbert Mitchell secured $3,600 from his tobacco last year on a 14-acre crop, and Verne Fox secured $4,000 from 22 acres.

J. D. Fraser, W. W. Hiltune, Tom Fleming, Cole Williams and many others have had wonderful success one line or the other in the district.

a great hill climber, and when Leamington picked G. A. Brown for mayor and elected him by the largest majority ever given in the town, they secured a man whose little brother is Enthusiasm.

"It's not the town that makes the people, but the people that make the town," was the watchword of Mayor To-Be Brown in his campaign. He had been a horseman all his life, dealing in speed and hitching himself to everything that could go along better than a 20 clip in general. He had been all over the country, and he had made his way from a boy chopping wood on a farm near Leamington into the first citizen in his early thirties. He is the man on whom Leamington has its eyes just now. Not all the citizens agree with him. Some of them do not approve of his precise methods of doing things, but they are behind him to a man and believe that he will move the town up a rank or two in the thriving centres of Western Ontario. It has never been in the rear rank.

The Town's Growth.
Leamington puts forward the claim that it has grown more in proportion to its size than any other town in Western Ontario. One and a half years ago it had a population of 2,700, and at the present time it is over the 4,000 mark. Mayor Brown believes that within a year it will have added at least another thousand inhabitants, and when one sees the big addition to the Heinz pickling plant and the houses that are scattered over the new subdivisions, it is not hard to believe. It is rather hard to disbelieve.

Leamington's population is not confined to Leamington. Drive along the lake road as an Advertiser man did, and you will find that the district is made up of five-acre farms, and that the houses are close together and of a type to make the ordinary city dweller envious. There are no loose boards or broken fences. There are no unpainted barns. The houses have a distinctive style. Nothing has that raggedy look that is common with too many rural communities.

Ninety Lots in Ninety Days.
Mayor Brown opened a survey of the outskirts of the town about three months ago. He says that he sold 90 lots in 90 days, and that none of them went for less than $500. His survey is laid out with cement walks and hand-laid out brick entrance arches. Within a year every one of these lots and an adjoining survey that the mayor also owns will be sold and occupied.

When one meets the businessmen of Leamington, and the men who have those five-acre gold mines in and near the town, he comes to the conclusion that the best recommendation Mayor Brown could have lies in the character of the men who chose him. They are a distinctly prosperous type, with no frills, dressed in well-cut clothes--they do not substitute whiskers for Continued on Page Twenty.

He Will Give Good Roads to His Town

MAYOR G. A. BROWN, of Leamington, who has inaugurated a "Go Ahead" policy for Leamington that is the keynote of the district's progress.

GOD'S LITTLE DEVILS

By ROWLAND THOMAS

Illustrated by Charles Sarka.

(Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Enterprise Association.)

One night when rice was eaten and the circle of darkness had shut down about our five Fernin Majusay, the private of Native Scouts who was my escort on the mountain, stretched out on his slim stomach and gazed into the hypnotic flames.

"I am going to tell you about my tentacle," he said suddenly. "my lieutenant, who is dead six months. He was a devil, that man."

"I remember how he laughed at Don Augusto. We were in a very bad province then. All the middle of it was mountains where indones lived, and they came down to the coast and made people give them food and money, and they stole carabao from the plantations and killed travelers, and sometimes they burned a town and took a pretty girl away."

"We were sent there to catch them, and it was very hard work. We chased them in the mountains and killed some, but it did no good. When we were in one place they raided another, and when a man guided us in a little while he was dead. We knew what was the matter. It is always the same. The indones are in the mountains, but some men in the town is their leader, and he gets so rich and strong that everybody is afraid of him. In that island it was a planter named Augusto de los Reyes. Three times my lieutenant arrested him and sent him down to San Pablo, and every time the judge said there was no proof, and he came back, and in a little while the indones against him were killed. And the indones knew when we were coming."

"If our tentacle had been like other white men he would have given up then. But he arrested Don Augusto once more. I remember the morning very well. It was orderly that day, and we were in the guard-room looking at some prisoners, and a guard came in, two in front and two behind, with this Don Augusto. He was a big fat Bissayan, and we all looked at him, and he looked at us and smiled, and we didn't feel very good, for we knew what he'd like to do to us."

"But the tentacle laughed when he saw him. He got up and shook hands with Don Augusto, and he said: 'Buenos dias, Senor Don Augusto de los Reyes. Like that, making fun. It is not long since we met,' he said. 'I am very glad to see you again. I hope you found the prison at San Pablo pleasant?'"

"This Don Augusto knew how to play the game. He smiled with his mouth and said: 'It is not bad, Senor Tentacle. But it is tiresome to have the comedy of going there so often. The judge gets tired, too, deciding that I Little Devil. Not because he is little, but because we loved him, just as Angel Bantling calls his wife Chiquita—tiny one—though she is big as a carabao. El Diablitto I named him, and we were afraid."

"After Don Augusto was dead all that part of the province was good, so they sent us to another place. Barang was the name of the town where we went. It was a better town; the people were good; we had nothing to do but drill. And after drill, often, my tentacle took me to shoot with him. I would hold an empty bottle for beer in my hand—like that—and the tentacle would shoot it from twenty paces with his revolver. Hoy, he was a devil at everything, my tentacle! Scores and scores we broke, and he never hurt me. And he took me to be his servant in his quarters, and I was very happy there in Barang."

Fernin Majusay gazed into the fire again, and his keen animal face was softened in the flickering light.

"What a fool that young Isidro was! I looked at him and I said: 'If a Macabebe forgives a blow as soon as a

"I would not tell him—we have ways of knowing things—and he got very angry and struck me. It made my blood, but I did not care. He was my lieutenant, anyway, and he had been drinking. Next day I was glad of it, for Don Isidro came to dinner, and he looked at my eye. Often, when he thought no one saw him, he looked at it. Then I had an idea. My tentacle was very short with me because he was sorry, and Don Isidro was so young it was not hard to make him think that I was angry with the tentacle. After a few days he met me in the Plaza and said: 'I am very sorry that the tentacle struck you, Fernin, for he is a friend of mine, and I hope no harm will come to him. I have heard that a Macabebe never forgives a blow, but I hope you will be patient.'"

"What a fool that young Isidro was! I looked at him and I said: 'If a Macabebe forgives a blow as soon as a

"Have the good-heartedness to share my poor breakfast," my tentacle said, and Don Isidro sat down, and they ate till I had no patience left. But at last Don Isidro pushed back his chair and said: 'Now, tentacle mio, what is this wonderful news?'"

"My tentacle pushed back his chair and offered his cigarette-case to Don Isidro. 'Take a long one,' he said, 'one long enough to last our talk out.' So Don Isidro took an entrelagos, and I held a match for him, and then he smiled through the smoke and said: 'Now for our news, tentacle mio. I die of suspense.'"

"My tentacle put the little packet which Don Isidro had given me on the table, and he looked at Don Isidro. And I think Don Isidro knew then that the game was finished. But he was a brave one, I will say that, if he was a fool. He looked at the packet, and he looked at me and he does not escape."

"So we went away—and my tentacle never knew that I made Don Isidro carry along a span of I saw in the guard-room. One does not call a Macabebe a traitor for nothing. There is no more wood, and it gets late and cold."

A last ember of the fire flamed up, and Fernin Majusay turned his face quickly from the tell-tale light. "It was a long story," he said, and loosened his revolver in the holster. "Sleep without fear," he said. "No one will trouble us when I am here."

(THE END.)

"Adios, Senor Don Augusto, We Shall not Meet Again for Some Time."

"Dios! I was happy there in Barang! Only one thing I did not like—the death of Isidro. He was a good man, the son of a rich hacendero, young and handsome. And he became a friend of my tentacle. They would laugh and talk together, and I did not like it. We Macabebes have many enemies—all the other Filipinos are our enemies—and we have to be suspicious always. I began to wonder why Isidro Abelaque wanted to be my lieutenant. 'Mi tentacle,' I said, 'I do not like it that Don Isidro comes here. It is not good that he can pass the guard at any time, like a white man. If he means harm, he will do it. He is a traitor, my tentacle. He is more brother than a wife, Fernin,' he said. 'Why should he mean harm to me?'"

Life is the parents—the relative—of Don Augusto, I said. My tentacle looked at me, and I saw that he did not wish to hear the name of Don Augusto. For a minute I was frightened—he had fought once sometimes. 'How do you know that?' he said.

HERO AND HEROINE OF NEW BOOK ARE THE TWO WRITERS

"The Masterdillo" Tells Pathetic Story of Struggles of Young Authors.

A BEAUTIFUL LOVE TALE

Lesson Taught Is That One Can Be Killed But Not Conquered in Battle of Life.

"It is curious how people are beginning to talk about 'The Masterdillo,' a novel that was published anonymously a few weeks ago and seems neither to have been advertised nor reviewed," says the Bookman. "One hears rumors that it is the work of one of our anonymous authors, but of two, and strongly suspects that these two are themselves the hero and heroine of it."

The same suspicion has evidently entered the mind of at least one of its purchasers, for Mr. Melrose, who publishes it, tells us that the other day a member of a London business firm called upon him and said that he and his wife had been so moved by the story that the author was really as poor as it suggested they would like to help him with a gift of £25.

Let us look at this story which has a moving power on the readers up to at least £25. The title is unique. Masterdillo is an extraordinary word, for it represents him and her, and when used stands for them. When Master is used, it means him, and when "dillo" is used (without a capital) it means her. But whenever "dillo" is used without a capital, it always is a protest goes out against the injustice. But then, perhaps, "the dillo" wrote those parts herself, and is modest. How she won this extraordinary diminutive as her name is not explained.

A Love Story.

The tale is a pulsating love story of a clever young writer and a very beautiful girl, and of their heart-breaking struggle to make a living. All they asked of life was just this: "O, we do so want to be happy while we are young."

The story is sometimes told by the typewriter and an owl which is perched on it and which breaks into the conversation with effect thus: "We will try to tease more prettily in future, Poor-dillo. It shall do as it pleases. That is the last word on the subject. Tu-whit! Tu-who! Tu-bed!"

Sometimes the dillo tells the story and sometimes Master. It is a clever method, and effective.

Much of it is written in what they call the "little language"—the tongue of dimmatives and affection, and those with unassuming and experience will enjoy it. Some won't understand it. Others would give many a £25 to share with all the terrible hardships thrown in together. The provision which we have quoted may, as in this instance, prove very useful. It may help to enrich the court by the presence of men who happen not to have held high judicial office, but who can speak with weight upon certain subjects.

"When the court of the Empire meets again, as it will in a few days, it will be as strong as it ever was, and much stronger than it was in some periods, not very remote, of its history. The Lord Chancellor and two ex-lord chancellors, Lord Halsbury and Lord Loreburn, will be at its service. There will also be Lord Mersey and Lord Macnaghten, who will be added Sir Alfred Cripps and six lords of appeal; and for Indian appeals, Sir John Edge and Mr. Macnaghten. By recent legislation the most eminent colonial judges may sit; and from time to time some of them—including Lord de Villiers and Sir Samuel Griffith—have heard appeals. It will be possible to call upon the lord chief justice and the lord president of the court of session. It is reasonable to hope that the sitting of two final courts, each with five members, which Lord Haldane said the other evening at Edinburgh was the perfect number, will always be practicable.

Where Appeals Come From.

"Whether we have regard to Indian or colonial appeals, the strengthening of the judicial committee at this time is peculiarly desirable. The former come from a new India, more and more critical. The latter in great part relate to legislation embodying new principles, and constituting it may be, of vague sections which it is the business of the courts to fill in. There is need, as there never before was, of a court in which are represented conspicuously and indubitably learning, legal experience, and good sense."

Cripps' New Task.

"Sir Alfred Cripps, though not universally approved, has not been recognized as the latest of a series of measures of distinction, who might well claim to enjoy unbroken leisure after strenuous lives, are ready, with public spirit which ought to be recognized, to give their services to the state gratuitously."

Sometimes the dillo tells the story and sometimes Master. It is a clever method, and effective.

Much of it is written in what they call the "little language"—the tongue of dimmatives and affection, and those with unassuming and experience will enjoy it. Some won't understand it. Others would give many a £25 to share with all the terrible hardships thrown in together. The provision which we have quoted may, as in this instance, prove very useful. It may help to enrich the court by the presence of men who happen not to have held high judicial office, but who can speak with weight upon certain subjects.

"When the court of the Empire meets again, as it will in a few days, it will be as strong as it ever was, and much stronger than it was in some periods, not very remote, of its history. The Lord Chancellor and two ex-lord chancellors, Lord Halsbury and Lord Loreburn, will be at its service. There will also be Lord Mersey and Lord Macnaghten, who will be added Sir Alfred Cripps and six lords of appeal; and for Indian appeals, Sir John Edge and Mr. Macnaghten. By recent legislation the most eminent colonial judges may sit; and from time to time some of them—including Lord de Villiers and Sir Samuel Griffith—have heard appeals. It will be possible to call upon the lord chief justice and the lord president of the court of session. It is reasonable to hope that the sitting of two final courts, each with five members, which Lord Haldane said the other evening at Edinburgh was the perfect number, will always be practicable.

Where Appeals Come From.

"Whether we have regard to Indian or colonial appeals, the strengthening of the judicial committee at this time is peculiarly desirable. The former come from a new India, more and more critical. The latter in great part relate to legislation embodying new principles, and constituting it may be, of vague sections which it is the business of the courts to fill in. There is need, as there never before was, of a court in which are represented conspicuously and indubitably learning, legal experience, and good sense."

Cripps' New Task.

"Sir Alfred Cripps, though not universally approved, has not been recognized as the latest of a series of measures of distinction, who might well claim to enjoy unbroken leisure after strenuous lives, are ready, with public spirit which ought to be recognized, to give their services to the state gratuitously."

Moretown, Vermont.—"I was troubled with pains and irregularities for sixteen years, and was thin, weak and nervous. My blood was poor, my circulation was so bad I would be like a dead person at times. I had female weakness badly, my abdomen was sore and I had awful pains."

"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used the Sanative Wash and they certainly did wonders for me. My troubles disappeared and I am able to work hard every day."—Mrs. W. F. SAWYER, River View Farm, Moretown, Vermont.

Dear Mrs. Currah—I am enjoying better health than I have for eight years, and I think I am entirely cured. I have none of the old symptoms. I am very grateful for my present health, and think Orange Lily is the greatest treatment for women's troubles I have ever known. I use in my case caused 12 tumors or growths of some sort to be expelled. Some were as large as a hen's egg, and others smaller, down to the size of a walnut. You may use my case in your advertisement, for it is the solid truth, and you cannot describe all the good it has done for me. Mrs. Louise E. Bolderidge.

This letter gives an indication of the positive benefits that always follow the use of Orange Lily. It is an applied treatment and comes in direct contact with the suffering organ. It produces results from the start in all cases of women's disorders, including painful periods, falling of womb, irregularities, leucorrhoea, etc.

I will send a sample box containing 10 days' treatment absolutely free to any suffering woman who has not yet tried it if she will send me her address. Enclose 10c for postage and return of box. FRANCES E. CURRAH, Windsor, Ont.

News of the Poultry World

Pointers for the Breeder of High-Class Fowls—How to Go About Getting the Best Results From Season's Work—Special Article on Subject Prepared by an Expert for The Advertiser.

The most important subject with the would-be successful poultryman just at present is the mating of his birds in such a way as to insure satisfactory results. On the selection and care of the breeders depends the success or failure of the whole season's work with the poultry.

There is nothing that will make better returns in satisfaction and profit than the bit of extra time and intelligence put into the choosing and handling of the breeding pen.

As a general rule like begets like, but any old thing you may have on hand is not worth reproducing. Breed only from the best stock you can own or can buy, take a pride in your birds and in the work you are doing with them. Aim high and endeavor to produce this season something much in advance of your previous success, thus benefiting yourself and the whole class of poultry lovers, adding to the wealth of the country and to the reputation of the section in which you live.

THE BREEDING PEN.

In a splendid article on the selecting and marking of breeders, Dr. Prince T. Woods, a foremost authority on poultry, writes:

The Male Bird.
From the breeding standpoint the male is half of the pen; i. e., you depend upon him to fertilize the eggs laid by all the hens with which he is mated. For this reason, whatever else you do, you cannot afford to be careless or indifferent in your selection of the cock or cockerel which is to head the pen. He should be as near perfection in constitutional vigor, physical soundness, health, as it is possible for you to judge. He must be carefully watched to see that he is capable of performing well the duty which he is assigned. The eggs from his pen should be incubated and tested at home before any are sold for hatching. Failure to observe these rules is fatal to good results.

The male should be a good standard breeding specimen of the variety which he represents, but above all else he should be physically sound. Inferior or unhealthy male birds have no place whatever in the breeding pen. Never breed from a bird that has had or has apparently recovered from any serious illness. It is always difficult to determine whether a cure is complete or not, and whether there remains taint or chronic trouble.

In selecting a male bird to head the breeding pen, choose one that is well matured, i. e., full grown and well filled out in size and fully furnished as to plumage. He should be of good size for the variety, but not overlarge for the females. He should be broad-backed, deep, full-breasted, with stout, good-sized legs, thighs well set apart and no tendency to a "knock-kneed" appearance at the hock joints; good carriage and symmetry, well-formed comb and wattles, neither too large nor too small and of a bright, healthy red; keen, sharp bright eyes, a bit full and somewhat egg-shaped as to curve of eye lens when viewed from the rear; a well-shaped stout beak of medium length, the whole head carried in a manner that gives the bird an alert, active, aggressive businesslike appearance. He should be in the best possible condition physically and capable of taking his place as head of the pen and holding it against all comers. His plumage should be bright and well kept, and feet clean and free from swellings and scale mites.

Selection of Females.

The female breeders should be selected with as great care as the male. Where the requisites for selection of the male will apply to both sexes they apply to the females. Health and a sound body should be the first consideration. Constitutional vigor is as necessary in the female as in the male. Size and shape is the next consideration, and then standard requisites for a good breeder. To a large extent the size and shape of the female parent governs the size and shape of the progeny, though it does not hold true in all cases. Choose well-grown, fully-matured females for breeders. Do not use birds that have had serious sickness. Choose good layers rather than exceptional ones. Prolific layers are more liable to produce infertile eggs than ordinary good layers, chiefly because of the greater number of eggs they produce and inattention on the part of the male, as he is less attentive to females that have been long established in laying, as a rule.

The breeding female should have a broad, deep body for the variety, legs of good size and well set apart, tail well spread at base; alert, active and busy; with bright plumage; bright eyes, a bit full; comb and face bright and of good, healthy red color; and other essentials of a healthy bird mentioned in description of desirable qualities in male.

Unhealthy hens, or hens which have been sick, have no place in the breeding pen. The faults mentioned above as disqualifying males for breeding should also bar females from the breeding pen and, in addition to those faults already mentioned, no female should be bred that habitually lays misshapen or deformed eggs, or eggs containing blood clots.

In mating up the pens avoid, so far as possible, using males and females possessing the same or similar faults (this is particularly necessary where inbreeding is practiced), as where the faults are similar on both male and female sides of the pen there is more liability of a tendency to possess these faults in the progeny.

As a general rule, the best results in hatchable eggs and livable chicks will be obtained by mating fully matured, healthy cockerels with healthy yearling or two-year-old hens; or by mating a strong, vigorous, healthy yearling or two-year-old male and fully matured, well-grown healthy pullets. Under such conditions there will be no cause for worry about the eggs producing weak, ling or imperfect chicks. Birds that are not full grown (fully matured) should not be bred. It is seldom advisable to breed birds that are more than thirty months old at the beginning of the breeding season.

It is impossible to build up a strain of profitable egg-producers if inbreeding is carried on; and it is well-nigh impossible to build up a high class strain of show birds by out-breeding methods. In the former class of fowls we want stamina; in the latter class of fowls show points and the man who endeavors to produce by inbreeding methods fowls possessing both standard and utility qualities is trifling with time. Inbreeding concerns the exhibitor, out-breeding the utility breeder. Each mode of breeding is right when rightly applied to the right kind of stock.—Joseph Shakespeare.

APPRECIATIVE.

"Poultry," Advertiser Office, London: Gentlemen,—I was pleased to read your article in your paper of the 24th inst., re chickens, and might say that if you could keep it up, it would be a step in the right direction.

I have been breeding poultry a good many years, and gone into almost every variety, and I quite agree with you to hold fast to the good things and stick to the one variety, although at the present time, I have two—the Columbian Wyandotte and the Old English Game. Now, I have been breeding Columbian Wyandottes for a good many years, and I think without a doubt that I have the best laying strain that there is around. Of course, we all think that we have the best, but I think that the light breed are the best, and if you don't get the Columbian Wyandottes too large, you can get the eggs; but the main thing with any breed is the feeding and also keeping your poultry house clean. In December, 1910, I got from a pen of ten Columbian Wyandottes sixteen dozen eggs, and for the first fifteen days of this month nine dozen.

Now, regarding the farmer and his chickens, I feel satisfied that there is no stock on the farm that is so badly neglected or managed with so little knowledge of the requirements as the poultry. We meet farmer after farmer who tells us that poultry does not pay. One of the reasons for this state of things is that we almost invariably find that his flock is made up of all ages from those miserable youngsters, hatched out late in the fall, to the hen of six or seven years old, that does not lay eggs enough to pay for the food. No hen should be kept more than three winters. I would strongly advise any farmer or city breeder who finds himself in possession of such a flock as I have described to kill off all late chicks, also all hens that are not through their moult in December, and keep only those completely through their moult and in good condition. Then, no matter how few they are in proportion to your flock, they are the only ones you should keep through the winter. We must get eggs in the winter if we are to obtain the greatest returns from our fowl, and only early-hatched, well-furnished pullets and young hens will furnish us with winter eggs in paying quantities.

Thanking you, I am, yours truly,
C. E. SPEER,

Had Big Python As Accomplice For Jewel Steal

[From London Daily News]
A curious story approximating to "The Speckled Band of Sir Conan Doyle," is related by a Munich correspondent of "The Journal," says the Central News from Paris.
Some wealthy Englishmen, reputed to possess jewels worth £20,000 were staying at a hotel, and noticed that two suspected persons, a Russian and a Norwegian were constantly following them. The suspects took rooms in a building the Englishmen's apartments, and information was given to the police. On a search being made a box containing a snake was discovered in the room, and it is alleged that it was intended

CUT THIS OUT

Famous Specialist's Recipe for Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

If you know someone who is troubled with head noises, or catarrhal deafness, cut out this formula and hand it to them, and you will have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. Deafness, ear-aches, have proved conclusively that catarrhal deafness, head noises, etc., were the direct cause of constitutional disease, and that salves, sprays, inhalers, etc., merely temporize with the complaint, and seldom, if ever, effect a permanent cure. This being so, much time and money has been spent of late by a noted specialist in perfecting a pure, gentle, yet effective tonic that would quickly dispel all traces of the catarrhal poison from the system. The effective prescription which was eventually formulated, and which has aroused the belief that deafness will soon be extinct, is given below in understandable form, so that anyone can treat themselves in their own home at little expense.

Secure from your druggist 1 oz. Parment (double strength), add 7 oz. water. Take this home and add to it 1/2 pint of hot water and 4 oz. of moist or granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

The first dose promptly ends the most distressing head noises, headache, dizziness, cloudy thinking, etc., while the hearing rapidly returns as the system is invigorated by the tonic action of the treatment. Less of small and mucus dropping in the back of the throat are other symptoms that show the presence of catarrhal poison, and which are quickly overcome by this efficacious treatment. Nearly ninety per cent. of all troubles directly caused by catarrh, therefore there are but few people whose hearing cannot be restored to normal by simple home treatment. Every person who is troubled with head noises, catarrhal deafness, or catarrh in any form, should give this prescription a trial. There is nothing better.

Important.—In ordering Parment always specify that you want Double Strength; your druggist may not be able to get it for you; if not, send 50c to the International Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine street, Montreal, P. Q., who make a specialty of it.—Adv.

"My experience in the reptile house," Mr. Vinall said, "is that if you want to make a large snake go from one den into another, you can't open the door and make it go through like an animal. We have got to get its head into a sack, tie its neck so that it can't get it out, tap it, and it goes the way it is turned. It can see in the dark, but it does not necessarily follow that a tame snake would attack a stranger unless it was in a fury."

It does not know one person from another, and it only recognizes its keeper by his particular way of handling it. "The most spiteful snake is the anaconda, a constrictor 25ft. long, absolutely untameable, and which will turn on anybody. The karamandaz, which runs to 16ft. in length, is the most poisonous snake. It would poison anybody. As an ally in a robbery, Mr. Vinall thinks that the snake is too likely to cut up rough to be safely used if compulsion is necessary.

To show how treacherous a box constrictor is, even to its keeper, Mr. Vinall mentioned that when washing out the mouth of this reptile it has not infrequently tied its body round his own, and rendered it quite numb and black.

AMERICA'S BEST SOCIETY DANCER INVENTS A "DECENT" TANGO--THE "INNOVATION."

In the "Denatured" Tango, Invented by Vernon Castle for Mrs. Fish, New York's Society Leader, Partners Never Get Within Touching Distance of Each Other.

"CAN the tango be made DECENT?" asked Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, who doesn't believe it IS decent as danced today.

"Well, it can be DENATURED anyway!" answered the highest authority in America, Vernon Castle, who, with Mrs. Castle, is the undisputed originator of the new society dances.

And forthwith Vernon Castle invented the denatured tango, especially for Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, leader of New York's ultra-smart set. He has just danced it before an assembly of some eighty select members of New York's Four Hundred, who were guests at Mrs. Fish's last big dinner dance. They were so pleased with it that they promised to make the denatured tango "THE" society dance of the season. Mrs. Fish herself named the new dance the "Innovation."

Vernon Castle and his wife have posed in their new dance especially for the readers of The Advertiser, in order that they may know how to dance this "syncopated compromise," at the increasing number of functions where the tango is banned.

"The non-tactile tango" Castle nicknames his innovation, which indicates that the dancers never touch each other. The man carries his hands in his pockets; his partner has hers on her hips; and through all the measures as danced for Mrs. Fish the Castles were constantly two feet apart! Fearing the dance in this form wouldn't be popular with the younger set this season, Mr. and Mrs. Castle posed for The Advertiser, a modified variety of denatured tango, which is non-tactile, but still does not preserve the cold distance part of 24 inches.

The dance is executed to tango music, and many of the true tango steps are used. But as a whole, the denatured tango resembles in posture and grace, the oldtime minuet.

THE NEW PUBLIC HEALTH

QUESTIONS. ANSWERS. COMMENT.
The Advertiser Bureau of Public Health. Conducted by Institute of Public Health. (The Public Health of Western University, London). Established and maintained by the Ontario Government.

Questions should be addressed "The New Public Health, care The Advertiser, London, Ont." Private questions accompanied by a stamped self-addressed envelope, will receive private answers. Medical diagnosis or treatment for individual cases cannot be prescribed.

(a) I would like to know if there is any danger of my family and friends contracting tuberculosis from cows affected with same. Your answer will be of importance to all users of butter, as there is no inspection of butter dairies, or cattle that it is made from. I have heard several milkmen remark, if the board of health tests my cows for tuberculosis we shall go into butter cheese business. Hence to my opinion, I eat all the butter in another form. Please tell me if I am correct.

(b) Does butter collect any more germs during the process of setting for cream and churning and making up all in the private household?

(c) If there was any contagious disease in the family at the time, would the butter carry it to the city users?

(d) Do you think it is just as necessary to test butter cows as milk cows for tuberculosis?

(e) If butter does contain all the germs which the meat and milk is claimed to do, what mode of treatment before eating butter would you recommend to dispose of the tuberculosis germ, etc? UNKNOWN.

Answer—Thank you for your kind words. We shall be glad to hear further from you.

Your questions are all very much to the point.

(a) Germs of tuberculosis in milk certainly are very likely to be carried over into the butter. As a matter of fact, living tuberculosis bacilli are often found in butter.

Sour cream butter, or butter made from cream "raised" slowly in pans is less likely than the modern rapid fresh cream processes to contain living disease germs, because the acid formed as the milk ages tends to kill off the disease germs.

"Cream" separated from fresh milk contains a large proportion of the total original germs; the slime which is thrown out contains a lot of dirt and many germs in it, but the cream going the other way, carries a great many germs with it. Now there is nothing necessary to the making of fresh milk products such as fresh cream, butter or some kind of cheese, to kill off disease germs except competition with other forms. Drying, the great factor in killing most of the disease germs thrown out of the body, does not operate in butter or cheese, for the former contains about 10 per cent water and the latter about 30 per cent.

(b) Butter in the ordinary processes of making, certainly tends to collect germs in addition to those in the original milk. In setting for cream in pans, unless the cream is protected from dust, many germs are likely to blow in upon the cream as it rises. Again, unless scrupulous cleanliness of utensils, pans, etc., is maintained, these utensils etc. accumulate and carry over from one batch of butter to the next many kinds of germs, particularly the more resistant. Some of the latter will withstand all the attacks of ordinary "cleanliness," and to get rid of them may require steam sterilization. The great variations in the tastes of market butter from the same producer at different times, are very largely due to the particular brands of germs most prevalent at each particular dairy and to the variations in the relative numbers of different kinds from time to time. This is well recognized and for many years now commercial milk firms have placed on the market pure cultures of several bacteria which added to the milk control the flavor and so add to the market value of the butter.

It is from those who make the butter or handle it in the making that infection with human tuberculosis germs, scarlet fever, diphtheria, etc. may occur.

I have myself seen and worked out a typhoid epidemic of thirty cases with five or six deaths, all due to one lot of butter handled during the making by a girl suffering from typhoid fever in a mild form. I have seen diphtheria carried through butter also, and found that the diphtheria germ could live at least a month in ordinary butter.

These disease germs get into the butter in many ways, from the mouth of hands of those working with it, and of course the danger depends also on the degree of cleanliness, and most wholly on whether or not the people handling it are shedding disease germs from their bodies or not.

(c) Yes; provided always the disease germs were carried while still living into the milk or cream or into the butter itself at any stage.

(d) Of course "butter cows" should be tested as well as milk cows. In fact, milk from tuberculin-tested cows, which run with tuberculous animals is likely to carry tuberculosis, although the cows that yielded the milk may themselves be free of the disease. This is because cows or bulls of the same breed have never learned to spit. They swallow the germs and pass them out in the manure; when the manure gets into the milk it carries the germs into milk very often. Hence you will note it is not that we want is not merely milk from tuberculin-tested cows but milk from tuberculin-tested HERDS, i.e., the whole herd must be free of the disease, not merely the particular cows used for yielding milk.

(e) Short of getting rid of tuberculosis amongst all the cattle of the country, the same remedy is applied to butter as to milk, i.e., pasteurization. Of course, the pasteurization is applied to the milk or better still, the cream before it is made into butter.

In Denmark, the best butter country in the world, cream is always pasteurized before butter is made from it.

As for the danger in ordinary butter, I am inclined to think that pasteurization is a very serious outbreak with many cases and some deaths. "Pasteurized" butter is perfectly practical and has one advantage over milk coming from tuberculin-tested herds, shared in also, of course, by pasteurized milk. The tuberculin-tested herd, properly tested, so that tuberculosis is really eliminated, will yield milk safe from the reproach of carrying bovine tuberculosis. But it may still carry germs of septic scarlet fever, measles, etc., if these are put into it by the milk or milk handlers. Pasteurized milk, properly pasteurized and bottled, is safe from all these infections, including bovine tuberculosis also. Pasteurized milk is really safer than even pasteurized butter, for the latter is and must be handled more in the daily step in modern milk production, very fallacious. It is only the first step in securing a good milk supply, not by any means the last.

Gilbert Chesterton Declares That Miracles Do Happen

From Manchester Guardian.

Challenge "to all comers" this afternoon to argue with him on the subject of miracles. The prospect of seeing Chesterton contra mundum drew a full house to the Little Theatre, where the debate took place. The curtain went up, and disclosed Mr. Chesterton, large and rosy, in the middle of a long row of divines and Rationalists, friends and foes. It will be remembered that his play, "Magic," now being played at the theatre, contains a queer kind of miracle. The debate was evidence of the interest roused by it, and it is also hoped that it may be the cause of interest to come. The entertainment was excellent, and, like all such debates, entirely inconclusive. Just now public debates are in fashion again, and this one was delightful as an exhibition of verbal dexterity and cleverness. It was not quite Chesterton contra mundum, because in arguing for miracles he had the support of his brother Cecil and the formidable Mr. Hilaire Belloc, whose speech was a brilliant performance. The show would have been complete if Mr. Bernard Shaw, instead of staying in the background as a spectator, had come on the platform and showed the futility of both sides by a display of his impartial wit.

A Definition of a Miracle. Undertaken by a letter from Mr. Zangwill, which accused him of "putting back the clock of philosophy," putting forward the clock of drama," the author of "Magic" led off with a definition of a miracle as "anything happening in human experience perceived by the senses, and therefore not disputed except by those mystics who, like all mystics, are liable to be kept in the dark by their own light."

Mr. Chesterton spent some time in arguing for the general historical case for miracles, the common human impression that miracles do happen, "the overwhelming mass of evidence," and so on, and with great ingenuity he strove to fix the label of "superstition" on those who reject the evidence. He made out a case, the plea that it would be as easy to prove that murders do not happen as that miracles do not happen. Murders are as difficult to prove as miracles, and if you believe that it is impossible to take away life by violence, then you would find it quite possible to argue away every case of murder. Such, he suggested, was the logical result of preaching the dogma that there is no personality behind the universe.

Mr. Joseph McCabe took up the cudgels for the Rationalists, and gave his experiences as an investigator of spiritualistic phenomena. "Miracles," he said, "never happen in a city where they use arc lamps," another version of George Eliot's famous remark that "if ghosts want me to believe in them, let them come where there is company and candles." He said remorsefully that it was a shame to crush a butterfly like Mr. Chesterton with logic, at which Mr. Chesterton murmured, "a substantial butterfly."

Mr. Belloc and Miracles. At this point Mr. Belloc broke into the discussion with the admission that there was no answering the position of the scientific Monist that will not influence non-willing matter. One of his philosophies was abandoned on the other hand, it was impossible to upset the evidence for miracles. In the course of his powerful argument Mr. Belloc mounted several of his favorite hobby-horses. For example, he said, miracles would be suppressed in the newspapers if they happened, because they would disturb the "Atheistic faith" of the rich. Rev. J. W. Schaeffer followed, and was speedily involved in a dialogue with Mr. Belloc, which drew from the latter the statement that the miracles of the Bible must be taken on faith, but miracles such as those at Lourdes are to be believed on the evidence.

Mr. A. Hobson put into ten minutes an admirable summary of the logical case against miracles, and incidentally said that something more than the ipse dixit of Mr. Belloc was necessary to make us believe in them. But Mr. Belloc had departed. "The general case against miracles is not met by Mr. Chesterton and Mr. Belloc," Mr. Hobson said, "because it rests not on the a priori repudiation of all miracles, but upon the fact that there is, on the one hand, an enormous body of experience, and, on the other, a small number of ill-authenticated statements of the fact that some miracles have taken place. The Theosophist standpoint was explained by Mr. A. P. Sinnett, and Mr. Cecil Chesterton boldly said that "we believe in the miracles of Christ on the infallible authority of the church." Finally, Mr. G. K. Chesterton, in his good-humored reply to his critics, accused them of arguing "on the defensive," and claimed that "the splendid old manly English spirit, which resented a miracle like an insult and extinguished a ghost like a lighted match under foot seems on the whole to have passed away."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will at once quiet the nerves, strengthen the heart and build up the entire system.

Mrs. Archie Goodies, Tilley, N.B., writes: "When I was troubled with my heart two years ago, I was very bad. My nerves were so unstrung that sometimes I would almost go out of my mind. I doctored myself with everything I could get, until at last I got four boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and they have cured me. I cannot speak too highly of this wonderful remedy, and will recommend it to all sufferers."

as all the rest of the world put together. Up to the present time, however, nearly all the carnotite ore of this continent has been shipped to Europe, where the radium has been extracted. Experimenters on this side have been obliged to buy it back at large prices. Mr. Lane, secretary of the interior, has recommended to Congress that a law be passed giving the President of the United States power to withdraw all Government lands found to contain radium-bearing ores, in order that such a precious element may be used for the benefit of humanity. Sir William Ramsay, the famous chemist of Aberdeen University, discovered pitchblende in the iron mines at Cornwall. "It may yet be established that England is the home of the richest radium supply in the world," says The British Medical Journal, in a recent article. So far as Canadian scientists have been able to ascertain, there are no radium-bearing ores known to exist in the Dominion.

Official Statement on Matter Was Issued by Hon. Winston Churchill.

[London Daily News.] "The statement that the board of admiralty have expressed an intention of resigning is untrue."

This statement, authorized by the first lord of the admiralty, is issued in reply to the report published in the Daily Telegraph recently that "a grave crisis in the cabinet" had arisen on the question of the naval policy of the country. "Both the naval and civil members of the admiralty," said the Telegraph, "have it is stated, expressed their intention to retire if the cabinet refuses the supplies which have been asked for, and which they regard as the minimum necessary for the due maintenance of the fleet during the coming financial year."

This is not the first occasion on which the Tory press has talked of the resignation of the admiralty board for the purpose of stampeding the Government into fresh extravagance. It was done in the famous panic of 1909. It was not true then, and it is not true now. And if it were true the Government would not abdicate to its officials. The admiralty board is the servant of Parliament, not its master, and the attempt to exploit it in the interests of a party campaign is as unjust to the board as it is subversive of the constitution.

Case For Reduction. The cabinet meets on Thursday, when it will doubtless deal with the estimates for the coming year. We have reason to believe that those estimates have already been severely pruned, and that the Government are determined to apply a check to the spendthrift policy which in the course of half a dozen years has raised the cost of the navy from £32,000,000 to £47,000,000 and which if allowed to continue will in a short time give us naval estimates of £60,000,000. It is already over a pound a head for every man, woman, and child in the land and in five years' time at the same rate of progress will be nearly 30s a head.

The case for reduction is clear and our undertaking in March, 1912. We then laid down the formula of sixteen ships to Germany's ten. At this moment we are building two ships in excess of that superiority. That being so, it is our duty as well as our interest in the coming year to build not four Dreadnoughts but two. That is the program demanded by our own standard, warranted by the enormous preponderance of our pre-Dreadnought fleet, and necessary in the interests of national finance.

Supremacy Unchallengeable. The attempt of the Tory press to force the Government into a plunge in reckless building at a time when our supremacy is unchallengeable and our expenditure unexampled has no basis in the facts. There are three pretences put forward—the requirements for the Mediterranean, "whole-world requirements" and the failure of the Canadian ships. The Mediterranean has not been discovered since March, 1912. It was in existence when Mr. Churchill announced his 16-10 standard.

Nor are the "whole world requirements" a new factor. They, too, existed in 1912. The introduction of these ships is simply an attempt to consume the public mind. As to the Canadian ships they have no present bearing on the subject. If Canada desires to build these ships and present them to us, our building will, ipso facto, be reduced to that extent. Until they are voted they do not enter into our calculations.

In these circumstances the modest demand of the contractors and their friends in the press for six new ships—or is it nine?—may be dismissed as the last word in the naval folly which has cost this country tens of millions in the triumph of Mr. Mulliner in 1909.

On this occasion it is not the Liberal party alone which pleads for a halt in the race to bankruptcy. It is supported by the chambers of commerce, by all that is sane in the world of finance and by the taxpayer who is tired of seeing his money squandered to build ships which are obsolescent before they are launched and the value of which with the progress of submarines and aeroplanes, becomes more and more speculative each year.

(Since the above was written, the British cabinet, while not having issued a statement, has it is understood, decided to prune the estimates of the admiralty board.)

NEW SPECIES OF TROUT. For some years several very interesting specimens of trout have been taken in the lakes that are found in the boundaries of Algonquin Provincial (Ontario) Park, situated in the "Highlands of Ontario," 200 miles north of Toronto, 170 miles west of Ottawa, and 280 miles west of Montreal.

During the year 1913 specimens were brought in from Delano Lake, within a few miles of the "Highland Inn," situated at Algonquin Park station, on the line of the Grand Trunk Railway. These specimens resembled both the salmon and the speckled trout, so much so that the superintendent of the park sent one of the specimens to Professor Prince, of the fisheries department, Ottawa, who is probably the best authority on fish culture in America. Professor Prince's report on this specimen is a most interesting one to anglers and reads as follows:

"The specimen of peculiar trout have been carefully examined, and it really appears to be a hybrid, namely, the Brook Trout, and the Gray Trout (or Lake Trout). The dental features and the nature of the vomer, as well as the peculiar color and the shape of the tail, all indicate a combination of the

New Dances and Old Songs Heart Hunt For Valentine's Celebration Valentine Party

For something "new" and entertaining why don't you have a valentine cabaret and tango party? Almost any hostess has among her friends both men and women who sing and, of course, everybody tangoes nowadays.

For the first number on the program have a girl and a man in old-time costume sing an old-fashioned song, like "Silver Threads Among the Gold." Then a young woman who can be dressed, as illustrated, with a coquettish apron and kerchief made of paper napkins, carrying little souvenirs of St. Valentine and also having them pinned on the front of her waist, will circulate among the guests, singing a modern rag-time love song, giving each gentleman a souvenir. As she finishes, a man sings another ragtime song, distributing the same souvenirs among women guests.

Then at a given moment the girl and man begin to dance—this is the signal for the "matching up" of souvenirs and finding partners for the supper and dance that follows.

One of the most enjoyable games for a children's Valentine party is a heart hunt. Have a big heart made of pasteboard and covered with red crepe paper. Thread as many long ends of red twine into this as you have little guests. Let every child choose a "string" for himself and follow it carefully to the end. (You can make these cords take long and devious routes.) At the end of each let one find a little heart-shaped box in which there are heart-shaped candies and a little written fortune that would please a childish heart.

DECORATIONS FOR PLACE CARDS

These little decorations can be cut out carefully and used for a pattern to either paint or transfer red paper hearts on "place cards" at a Valentine luncheon for "grown-ups."

Doctor Said He Had Diabetes

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS CLEARED OUT EVERY TRACE OF IT.

That's Why Mr. David Heon, of Nicolet County, Quebec, is Recommending the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy to His Neighbors.

St. Venecias, Nicolet Co., Que., Feb. 6, (Special).—"I started to take Dodd's Kidney Pills because the doctor told me I was threatened with diabetes. After taking ten boxes I was again examined by the doctor and he told me that all traces of diabetes had disappeared."

This is the statement of Mr. David Heon, well known and highly respected here, and he is only one of many in this neighborhood who have found new lease of life in the great Canadian Kidney remedy.

It is curious that as this have given Dodd's Kidney Pills their reputation. They are now known from the Atlantic to the Pacific as the remedy that never fails to cure kidney disease, no matter where or in what form it is found.

Dodd's Kidney Pills are no cure-all. They simply cure diseased kidneys. The reason they cure backache, dropsy, rheumatism, neuralgia, diabetes, urinary troubles and Bright's Disease is that all of these are either diseases of the kidneys or are caused by disordered kidneys failing to do their work.

two species, which as is well known, are now separated further than they used to be. The Brook Trout and the Lake Trout were at one time included under the name Genus Salvolinus, but they appear to be now separated into two Genera, the Gray Trout being put into the Genus Chinichthys, and the Brook Trout being connected with two separate Genera is a remarkable and exceedingly interesting occurrence. I am most interested in this specimen and intend to look into the question further, as the nature of the egg and the features of hybridization are so remarkable scientifically that it is worth while trying some experimental work to see if the hybrids can be produced artificially."

Annoying Dandruff

Will Make Canada a Bald-Headed Nation If Not Checked.

M. Pasteur, the great French physician of Paris, once said: "I believe we shall some day rid the world of all diseases caused by germs."

Dandruff is caused by germs, a fact accepted by all physicians. Dandruff is the root of all hair evils. If it were not for the little destructive germs working with a persistency worthy of a better cause, there would be no baldness.

Parisian Sage will kill the dandruff germs and remove dandruff in two weeks or money back. It will stop itching scalp, falling hair and make the hair grow thick and abundant.

It puts life and lustre into the hair and prevents it from turning gray. It is the hair dressing par excellence, daintily perfumed and free from grease and stickiness. It is the favorite with women of taste and culture who know the social value of fascinating hair.

Comes in large 50-cent bottle at W. T. Strong & Co.'s, and leading druggists and health counters everywhere. "The Girl with the Auburn Hair" is on every package.

Wild East Africans Who Take Their Morning Tub And Use Tooth Brushes

Noted Woman Traveller Tells of Her Experiences Amongst Natives of Dark Continent.

Swahili, Zulu, Nyanja and Pokomo are languages lying a long way outside the radius of the everyday person's educational curriculum. Miss Alice Werner, author and traveller, Fellow of Newnham, and lecturer, who delivers lectures, illustrated, on "The Language Families of Africa," is perhaps unique in that she possesses a knowledge of all four.

Fascination of Africa

Cambridge was discovered with a grey mist through which myriads of students' eyes-glassed faces gleamed white but friendly (Cambridge is companionable), when I passed through it on my way to Newnham College. I was to see Miss Werner, and troops of returning graduates (no longer "sweet" as in Tennysonian days, but alert and thoughtful) passed me in the yellow hansom cabs of Cambridge with their sedan-chair suggestiveness.

When I asked Miss Werner what had first attracted her to the study of African languages, she said that since she was a child the "Dark Continent" had a curious fascination for her. "My interest was increased when my brother, who the year after came across the Stanley expedition, went out to the Congo in 1886. Some years later I was sent out by Blantyre Ladies' Committee of the Church of Scotland Board of Missions, and stayed out there for three years. When I came back I worked hard at the African languages, for the pure love of them. The idea of teaching came to me when a lady wrote to me that she had been searching everywhere for someone to teach her Zulu, and that she had been recommended to me. My class in King's College, commenced in 1901, and was recognized by the University of London in 1912. My pupils are the language of the people—University men going out there to take up government posts, missionaries, and even a traveller for Singer's sewing machine, who wanted to become eloquent in the language of the East Africans, in order to persuade them of the virtues of his sewing machines."

"But you have been out to Africa again recently?"

"I was given a travelling scholarship of £150 in 1911, and I spent the next two years in research work among the coast tribes of British East Africa. I had all kinds of experiences out there but not a single disagreeable one. I was a guest in a native's house, and was most hospitably treated. Everything was primitive, but delightfully clean. All the members of the household had a bath every morning—not a European bath, of course. They stand bolt upright and pour the water over them. They are diligent users of the tooth-brush also. Looking out of the window in the early morning one sees them going about brushing their teeth in the open air. I found the food very good indeed, and tea is drunk a good deal. The kindness shown by the family I visited, to their servants impressed me very much. A bedridden old retainer who lived in a house in the village had expressed a fervent desire to see the stranger and the mistress at considerable inconvenience to herself took me there."

A good deal of Miss Werner's time was spent among the Galla, an interesting tribe living some little distance from the coast. The headman of the tribe had invited her there. Their huts are all built in a row facing East, so that when they wake they behold the rising sun. The principal furniture is a bed made of odoriferous herb, over which a cow or calf skin is spread.

Penalties of Chieftainship. The Galla have some curious customs. The chiefs are elected by the people, and are elected on a long time beforehand, chiefly for their courage, strength and eloquence. By the Elders (the Elders are those who have passed through some initiation ceremony to which no women are admitted). Not everyone covets the honour, for the chief is debared from many things permitted to the ordinary man. He must never do any work, must not kill anything, nor bathe in a river. But to compensate for this life of negation he is invested with magical powers and can kill a snake simply by looking at it.

At the ceremony of initiation a sacred song is sung which is known to none but those taking part in it. Abere, the head man, recited it to me. "I, not knowing the restrictions regarding it, asked some other members of the tribe to verify one or two of the verses. They were amazed and could not understand how I had heard about it. Abere came to me afterwards and begged me not to tell the secret. He said that if I did, he would kill me. He begged me to say you read it in a book," he begged me.

An Echo From Eden. One of the religious stories universally known by these tribes is the story of the Garden of Eden.

They say that a bird was sent out by Wak (God) to tell the people they would never die and that if they felt themselves getting weak and old, they were not to be frightened, for they would slip out of their skins and still be alive and happy. But the bird came across the snake, which was just going to devour a dead animal, and, feeling rather hungry, he ate of the snake. "If you will give me some of that I will tell you the news of God," "I don't want to hear it," said the rebellious snake. "But the news concerns you deeply," said the bird and the snake, consenting, God's message, which had been entrusted to the bird for man's ears alone, was given to the snake, and man, not knowing better, has kept up the habit of dying, while the bird had been an African name since after "The Sheep of God," goes about screaming most piteously, as if in deep misery, like the bird of Abacynth.

As pious as the conscience tale, whereof the brown melodious bird Doth ever "Tus, Tus" wail. Deep-bowed in sorrow all its little lifetime's day.

The Mother-in-Law's Name. Like many civilized countries the Galla have not a certain amount of honey-bee for their father-in-law. Often when a young man is asked when he is getting married he will reply that he is waiting "until the flowers come out."

Miss Werner corresponds with many of her African friends in their own language. They send all the news of the neighborhood. Her last letter contains the news that fifty people are in prison for not paying their hut tax of three rupees and that a man had been dragged by the leg out of his hut by a leopard, but his friends had saved him in time.

IRELAND

THROUGH BEING TRAPPED in a railway oil-tank car, two men, named Jack Lowe, of Queen's street, Eccles, near Manchester, and William Heir, also of Eccles, were overcome by gas recently. Lowe entered the tank, and Heir, when his companion did not return, descended and found him lying unconscious. He attempted to pass Lowe through the inlet at the top, but finding himself being overcome by gas he shouted for help. His cries were heard, and after desperate efforts by members of the Eccles fire brigade, both men were rescued, but not before several of those who entered the tank were also overcome and had to be pulled out.

DOG-TAX DAYS are dog-black days, for in the first fortnight of the year, when the payment for a new license fell due, many callous owners contrived to lose their pets. Animals were turned out on the streets by scores to starve, to be captured by the police or to be befriended by some humane person or an institution like the Animals' Hospital in Kingston street, London, S. W. At the present time nearly sixty dogs are taken every day by the hospitals for some-wet horses are found; and for those that are old, blind, or diseased, there is a speedy and painless release.

OVERJOYED AT SEEING his mother downstairs for the first time after an illness, a little boy at Newport, Mon., ran to kiss her and in doing so slipped and met with an accident which caused his death. His name was John Basham, aged 5 years. His grandmother at the inquest said that on New Year's Day he ran to his mother and put his arms around her neck to kiss her, but slipped and struck the handle of a saucepan on the fire. The saucepan was overturned and the little boy was scalded on the shoulders and chest. His injuries were fatal.

THE ANNUAL REPORT of the local Chamber of Commerce refers to recent developments at Southampton. The tonnage dealt with, both in the docks and at the town quay, shows an increase over any previous year. The year, the period of the South African River trade continues to expand, and further large steamers are being constructed for this route. The tourist traffic during the winter months is meeting with the appreciation of the travelling public.

A TUNNEL SCHEME for the construction of a tramway under the Mersey from the centre of Liverpool to the Cheshire side of the river was brought before the service, most likely to be the first of a series of tunnels. The tunnel would be two and a half miles in length and the cost of the undertaking about £15,000,000. A roadway would also be provided for other traffic. The scheme is the brainchild of Mr. C. W. Mallins, the general manager of the corporation tramways.

FOR MANY YEARS PAST a tramway service has been maintained along the sea front at Hastings, and the tram system. The tramway has now been condemned by the board of trade, and the town council has been informed that the order to stop the service must take effect forthwith. Recently the Tramway Company sought powers to install the overhead system, but their parliamentary bill was thrown out.

TOPSY-TURVY DAY at some of the Matlock hydros, the celebrated effect of the water on the nerves of the servants were taken up by visitors, who were allowed to try various tasks. The visitor arriving after tea had his luggage handled with neatness and dispatch by another guest in the guise of a hall porter, and was registered and placed at table by an amateur matron.

KNOCKED DOWN by a toboggan, Mr. Henry Cole, of Murray Hill, Derby, was rendered unconscious. He was conveyed to Chesterfield Hospital, where death supervened. Mr. Cole, who was employed in the Midland Railway telegraph superintendent's office, was returning from a funeral, and had remarked just before the accident, "I wonder whose turn it will be next to go."

MYSTERY SURROUNDS the death of Andrew McKillop, aged 56, a working man, who was found dead in his cottage at Blochairn, near Glasgow, early the other morning. When walking near the cottage Constable William Coult was approached by the man's wife, who exclaimed, "This is terrible," and led him into the house. McKillop was lying dead on the kitchen floor with severe wounds about his head. Mrs. McKillop told the constable that about 9:30 the previous night four men whom she did not know carried her husband into the house, placed him on the kitchen floor, and hurriedly left. She then discovered the wounds about his head. She was unable to rouse him, and died shortly before she called for assistance.

A RECORD YEAR at the Sheriff's Court for what are termed "regular" marriages closed a few days ago. The total was 1,900 more than the previous year. The popularity of this form of marriage is attributed to its cheapness, lack of formality, and the saving of time. The Sheriff's Court has been residents in Scotland for 21 days. Thereafter the ceremony is concluded by the customary declaration at the district registrar. The figures were the appearance of bridal pairs recently that the business of the ordinary courts was interrupted repeatedly.

THERE IS A BOOM in weddings at the Scotch fishing towns. At Peterhead fifty fisher marriages have been celebrated since the English herring season ended a week or two ago, and 20 more are to take place before the end of the month. Altogether it is estimated that during the last fortnight in December 300 weddings took place in the fishing towns and villages on the northeast coast of Scotland. The high percentage of marriages is partly responsible for this boom, as both men and women have returned from Yarmouth and Lowestoft with well-filled purses.

FIRE WAS DISCOVERED to have broken out the other morning in a joiner's shop, built of wood, with corrugated iron roof, situated opposite the Victoria Hotel, Fortknockie. The fire brigade was called, but the flames had too firm a hold, and the building was gutted. Among the ruins were found the charred remains of a man. The legs were buried off, but the torso was intact. As those of Alexander Macrae, an unmarried man of 62, who belonged to Buckie, and who owned the premises.

THREE MONTHS' HARD labor, was the sentence imposed on a laborer the other day by a Berwick magistrate, for setting his dog on a policeman. While Constable Cruickshanks was going his rounds at half-past four o'clock in the morning at Tweedmouth, Frederick Laidlaw, laborer, struck him a violent blow on the head with a stick, knocking him down. Constable Laidlaw set his dog on the policeman. Fortunately a workman kept the dog at bay.

AS A LITTLE BOY, three and a half years of age, son of William Prentice, matter and draper, Glasgow, was travelling with his mother on the railway to Clarkston, he fell from the carriage on to the six-foot way. According to his mother's story he had just touched the carriage when the door flew open. He was removed to an infirmary suffering from concussion of the brain.

THE DUNDEE POLICE have made several arrests in the morning at the Dundee Police Station. The police were on duty in the outlying districts of the city. For some time past repeated attacks have been made on unaccompanied ladies and their purses and handbags stolen. In one case a lady was rather roughly handled in her attempt to beat off the three men who tried to snatch her bag.

Sciatica Vanishes Instantly If Nerviline is Used

CAN YOU BEAT THIS CASE?

No ordinary liniment will even relieve Sciatica. Nothing but the most powerful kind of remedy can penetrate through the tissues and finally reach the Sciatic Nerve. You can always depend on the old-time "Nerviline." Nothing made to-day is as good for Sciatica as Nerviline was when first produced, about forty years ago. All this time the same old "Nerviline" has been curing Sciatica, Lumbago, Rheumatism, and is considered the most powerful and relieving pain or soreness anywhere. "Nerviline" couldn't be made stronger or better," writes James E. Edwards. "The way it cures Sciatica is to penetrate the nerve. For you I suffered terribly. I ruined my stomach with internal dosing. I rubbed in gallons of oils and liniments—none were strong enough. One good rubbing with Nerviline relieved me. I kept on rubbing and shortly was cured. My father cured rheumatism in his right arm and shoulder with Nerviline, and my mother cured her chronic sciatica with Nerviline. Our family simply swears by Nerviline, and we are never without a 50c family size bottle in our home. We find that for external pain, for coughs, colds, earache, and all ills it is a veritable family physician."

ECZEMA

Also called Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Miliaria, Crust, Weeping Skin, Etc.

ECZEMA CAN BE CURED TO STAY, and when I say cured, I mean just what I mean. I mean that you will be free from it for ever. Remember, I make this broad statement on the basis of the fact that I have cured a million cases of this dreadful disease. I have cured it in every form, and I have cured it in every part of the body. I have cured it in every age, and I have cured it in every sex. I have cured it in every climate, and I have cured it in every season. I have cured it in every part of the world, and I have cured it in every part of the human race. I have cured it in every part of the human body, and I have cured it in every part of the human mind. I have cured it in every part of the human soul, and I have cured it in every part of the human spirit. I have cured it in every part of the human existence, and I have cured it in every part of the human destiny. I have cured it in every part of the human life, and I have cured it in every part of the human death. I have cured it in every part of the human journey, and I have cured it in every part of the human home. Social Happenings of the Week

MUSICAL.

Among London music-lovers who had the pleasure of attending the Mendelssohn Choir Concerts in Toronto this week were Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Jordan, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Wheeler, Mr. and Mrs. J. Parnell-Morris, Miss Minnie Raynold, Miss Muriel Saunders, Miss Eulalie Young, Miss Jennie Steele, Miss Manigault, Miss Agnes Burwell, Mrs. J. E. Sanderson, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Rich, Mrs. E. P. Smith, Miss Ella Somerville, and the members of St. Andrew's Church choir.

What promises to be an artistic and enjoyable entertainment is the program being arranged by Mr. Charles E. Wheeler for the evening concert of the Women's Music Club, to be held in the Normal School next Thursday evening, Feb. 12. Numbers will be rendered by Miss Laura Hornum, soprano soloist of Toronto; Miss Marie Thompson, violinist of St. Thomas; and Mr. W. A. McCutcheon, of London. Members of the club have the privilege of taking one friend to this concert.

An exceedingly pleasant time was spent last evening at "The Grange," the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Jordan, when Mrs. Jordan entertained the members of the First Methodist Church choir. About fifty guests were present, and the hours quickly passed in social intercourse, music and various amusements. Refreshments were served by the choir, and when the hour came to leave, all unanimously voted Mrs. Jordan a most kind and gracious hostess.

The Brantford Music Club have invited the London Women's Music Club to go down to the former city and give an afternoon concert on Friday of next week. About twenty members expect to be present, and those taking part in the program will be Mrs. Ed Wyatt, Miss Eggleston, Miss Minnie Raymond, and Miss Eulalie Young. Any members of the club who desire to attend are daily invited, and a special rate having been arranged for.

The drawing-room was prettily decorated with pink carnations and roses, while in the library and dining-room, tulips and daffodils were used to great effect. Mrs. Chester Abbott presided at the tea-table, which was centered with a basket of red tulips, and assisting her were Miss Lillian Abbott and Miss Daisy Mason. Mrs. Abbott Langridge and Mrs. Freda Bell invited to the tea-room. During the afternoon a large number of friends called to greet Mrs. Miller.

The stormy weather of yesterday afternoon, rendered all the more cozy by way of contrast, the attractive home of Mrs. H. T. Reason, formerly Mrs. Ethelwyn Johnson, who held her post-nuptial reception at 518 Waterloo st. Little Shirley Rutherford, wearing a pretty Kate Greenaway frock, opened the door for the guests, and ushered them to where Mrs. Reason received with her mother, Mrs. J. L. Johnson, of Princess avenue. Mrs. Reason wore a wedding gown of cream tulle, with over-dress of black lace, and a corsage bouquet of Killarney roses and sweet peas. Mrs. Johnson was handsomely attired in a Paris gown of "naive" style, with oriental design, and a large hat of black and white.

Mrs. B. M. Gossman ushered to the tea-room, where Mrs. Albert Jencks, of Catharines, in a handsome black gown, trimmed with fur, and Mrs.

Mrs. (Hon.) R. Rogers, who danced in the state quadrille at the State Ball, given in Ottawa last week by her royal highness, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught.

Bennett, wearing Alice blue chamoisee, with white plumed hat, presided over the table. Assisting were Mrs. Albert Reason, attired in yellow satin with tulle of crystal net, Miss Anna Clarke, in pale blue; Miss Lillian Johnson and Miss Louise Jencks, both in yellow chamoisee with over-dresses of golden brown chiffon.

Pink and white tulips decked the drawing room, the mantel being banked with palms and ferns, and tea-room with the dainty perfume of violets and daffodils which formed a pyramid in the centre of the table, silver vases of the blossoms gracing each corner.

In future Mrs. Reason will receive on the second and fourth Fridays.

Mrs. Morley W. Calcott (formerly Miss Irene Wonnacott) received for the first time since her marriage on Monday afternoon last, when she wore her wedding gown of white chamoisee and lace. Her mother, Mrs. R. Wonnacott assisted her in receiving, and helping in the tea-room were Misses Mary Jones, Marjory Lyons, Madeline Adams and Freda Head. Mrs. B. Noble poured tea, and Miss Daisy Crook invited to the tea-room. The flowers throughout the house were pink and white.

A large reception of the week was that held on Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. Charles H. White, at her home, 514 Dundas street. Mrs. White, who was assisted in receiving by her mother, Mrs. Bessie, wore a handsome gown of yellow satin with shadow lace tulle. Mrs. Harry White presided at the tea-table, which was effectively adorned with a silver basket of Killarney roses, and tiny vases of tulips and lilies of the valley. Miss Isabella Tanton, Miss Wilmer Adams (Hamilton), and Miss Marjorie White assisted in the tea-room. Usher-ing were Mrs. Morley Adams and Mrs. Frank White. The drawing-room and library were prettily decked with narcissi, daffodils and pink tulips.

Many friends called on Miss Ethel McRoberts, of 507 Queen's avenue, on Tuesday afternoon, when she received the visiting card there, prior to removing to quarters in the new apartments on Queen's avenue. Mrs. C. E. White, of Galt, and Miss Eleanor Rowland, and Miss Aspland assisted.

Some 3,000 tickets have been issued to the pupils, and at the rapid rate the number of them many more will be required.

ELLIS AN EXAMPLE TO ALL YOUNG MEN

Anywhere the sun shines and there are Roy Ellises.

All By Himself

Some of his friends in Leamington will tell you that it has not been all easy sailing for him. He has no outside assistance except the confidence of those with whom he did business. He started in with one small greenhouse. Today according to his sales manager, E. E. Adams, he has fifteen large houses and all of them are in commission except the largest which is shown in an accompanying photograph and which has just been completed. The fifteen greenhouses form the largest vegetable establishment in Canada and the investment would run into many tens of thousands. The business done represents at least $50,000 to $60,000 a year. The latest greenhouse is 305 feet long by 86 feet wide; in addition there are two houses 65 by 200, 45 by 100, three 20 by 180, one 10 by 100 and two 20 by 100. They have all been constructed within the last six years.

Had a Big Idea.
Ellis came from Forestburg, with his parents and they started into the fruit business. Later he branched out for himself with a few acres and gradually has worked out his big idea. Just to show how big it is, his agent, Mr. Adams, said that during the last year 100 carloads of early tomatoes were shipped from the greenhouses, all in baskets, for distribution in the local market. This business would have gone to the American dealer.

The success of Roy Ellis has been an inspiration to many other men in the district. There are greenhouses everywhere, and many of them are being added to in size. Some day it is possible that the whole district will be virtually under glass and the man who will be remembered as the pioneer planter where he now has the largest in the country.

LEAMINGTON NOTES

A. C. Stewart, formerly of London, is one of the successful business men of Leamington.

There is considerable dissatisfaction among some of the tobacco growers over the prices received last year.

The buyers say that when the quality is improved, the work will go ahead. Pelee Island is one of the favored spots of this earth. The Government collects $50,000 a year on the tobacco grown on this little kingdom.

There is one man on the island who makes an industry of catching snapping turtles. He finds a market on the boats that pass.

There are a lot of high powered cars in Leamington. The automobile salesmen never pass up this locality.

The Morning Advertiser is making a hit in Leamington. Everyone has a good word to say for it. The businessmen think it will advance Western Ontario.

Mr. W. B. Dunn, manager of the Union Bank, is of the opinion that what gives the Leamington district its semi-tropical climate is the warm breeze that comes down the lake from the Miami Valley. Mr. Dunn claims no credit for discovery of the isothermal wave, but he has heard it advanced by scientists.

If there is anything wrong with having natural gas, Leamington has not found it out. It is believed that the closeness of the land is a great thing for the town, and several large industries have been seeking sites.

Leamington has a young active council that will do things in 1914. Paved streets, drainage, and other improvements are the first things to be undertaken, and the roads of other cities.

LIFE THREATENED BY KIDNEY DISEASE

His Health in a Terrible State Until He Took Fruit-a-tives.

B. A. KELLY, Esq.

Hagersville, Ont., Aug. 26, 1913.

"About two years ago, I found my health in a very bad state. My kidneys were not doing their work, and I was all run down in condition. I felt the need of some good remedy, and having seen 'Fruit-a-tives' advertised, I decided to try them. Their effect I found more than satisfactory. Their action was mild and the result all that could be expected.

"My kidneys resumed their normal action after I had taken upwards of a dozen boxes and I regained my old-time vitality. Today, I am as well as ever, the best health I have ever had."

"B. A. KELLY."

"Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest kidney remedy in the world. It acts on the bowels and the skin as well as the kidneys and thereby soothes and cures any kidney soreness.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c, or will be sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ontario.

MONOCLES ARE THE THING.

No matter how perfect your eyesight is, if you wish to be thoroughly modern, you must wear a monocle. The monocle most swung from a long, black ribbon worn around the neck. Gold-mounted monocles range up to ten dollars apiece, but there are also bargain-counter monocles which may be picked up, ribbon and all, for ten cents. The largest monocle is a practical affair which closes up to look like a single glass mounted on slender handle, but which springs out at pressure of a spring, into a lorgnette supplied with practical glasses.

Burglar Proof

"This refrigerator isn't quite modern enough."

"How's that, madam?"

"My husband thinks we had better get one with all the improvements, including a time lock."
