Little Opens Drive Tonight :: Pepall Trial Opens Tomorrow

CAMPAIGN INITIATED BY HYMAN

Veteran Leader To Launch a Liberal Drive in City of London.

LITTLE WILL SPEAK

Brackin of Kent Will Be Present—Big Meeting Is Expected.

With a flood of inquiries rolling in, Liberals expect a large attendance at their meeting tonight in Hyman hall. The meeting is called for the workers from every subdivision in the constituency of London, but everyone is welcome to the meeting. Every section will be represented as Liberalism is united in this campaign behind E. S. Little.

Hon. C. S. Hyman will be a speaker at the meeting tonight and is expected to have an encouraging message. The candidate will also speak. R. L. Brackin, M.P., (Kent), is expected to be present. There will also be other speakers. The meeting really opens the campaign and is the curtain raiser to the big meeting on Friday night in the arena when the prime minister will speak.

Major W. H. Kippen, chairman of the Liberal organization, will express himself as delighted with the response being shown to the Liberal cause in London and stated that he thought the meeting tonight would rival in enthusiasm the splendid convention at which Mr. Little was chosen the candidate.

There will also be a Liberal meeting tonight at Manor Park school house in the interests of Dr. C. C. Ross, the Liberal candidate in East Middlesex. This is one of several meetings being held by Dr. Ross.

FERGUSON AND KREMER IN HURLING DUEL TODAY

Thousands Pack Forbes Field as Sixth Game Gets Under Way.

TENSION IS HIGH

Players On Both Teams Confident of Winning Crucial Contest.

Associated Press Despatch. Forbes Field, Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 13.—Any doubt that Ferguson and Kremer would be the batteries removed when they took their places in the warm-up pits, fuel was caught in the right-hander's shoes, while Jack Onslow warmed up Kremer.

Sam Rice, hero of a catch off Smith yesterday, was the first to catch a ball hit to him, the bleacher crowd "razed" him vociferously. The belief apparently was held that Rice had "pulled one" on his famous play of several days ago.

Associated Press Despatch. For the Pittsburgh Pirates, long dormant, have awakened and their bats have knocked the master of the moist ball, Stanley Coveleskie, in a last desperate effort. With the Pirates' hitters aroused there is trouble ahead for the men of Harris who, only 24 hours ago, appeared to be well on their way to a second world's baseball championship.

The long predicted recovery from a hitting slump that extended through four games of world's series play, came yesterday. Backed to the very edge of defeat, the Corsairs suddenly reversed their attack with the veteran Stuffy McInnis covering first base, and inch by inch they fought away from the precipice. Now the series stands three for Washington and two for Pittsburgh.

Stuffy's Great Battle.

McInnis, it might well be said, led them in their desperate effort, for the man who had played beside Collins, Barry and Baker knew no fear—no fear that the fight of the day of the Athletics, and he performed in a way to make the men about him gain a firm footing.

Stuffy, from all appearances, fought that last battle of Washington as an acknowledged general. To him, perhaps, McKechnie turned at the eleventh hour, and was rewarded, for McInnis, veteran of six world's series, was the coolest man on the field, exhorting his mates to greater labors, and above all, working heart and soul with the Pirates' only winning pitcher, Vic Aldridge, who scored his second success, six to three.

BUS LINE IS READY FOR RUN

Several Motors Are Being Sent From Toronto to London Tonight.

SECURE LICENSES

One Bus Commences Operation On South London Route Today.

London will see the thin edge of the bus wedge become a reality tomorrow when several buses of the Metropolitan Bus Company, Toronto, will arrive here for operation. Ald. L. H. Douglass has been in touch with President C. C. Kamm of the Toronto company, and the buses will start their trip to London tonight.

A. Cotter, who has been running a 20-passenger bus on the Hamilton to Toronto highway, has had insurance matters adjusted and will start running his bus on the London South beat late this afternoon.

Mr. Cotter called at the office of City Treasurer James Bell this morning and gave a satisfactory bond in case of accident. He departed for the police station for a license card and will be running in opposition to the street railway for late afternoon and evening traffic.

TWO CHALLENGED TO RESIGN BOARD

Pocock Hits Wenige and Burdick For Attacking L. and P. S. R.

Mayor G. A. Wenige and G. A. Burdick should call a halt to their "malicious attacks" on the London and Port Stanley railroad, according to Philip Pocock, dean of the public utilities commission, or else resign as members of the commission, and give place to men who are more in sympathy with the policy of the road.

"The time is ripe for Sir Adam Beck's wish that the commissioners be elected by a popular vote of the people," declared Mr. Pocock emphatically this morning. "In order that men may be chosen who will back up the system. The London and Port Stanley railroad belongs to the people and yet there has been a deliberate attempt to injure the people's property. Statements have been made concerning the road that are so at variance with the facts that they can't be credited without knowledge of the facts of the case. The mayor has been the prime mover in these attacks, but he has been closely followed by Mr. Burdick, both of whom gave an exhibition of chess-playing tactics at the meeting of the commission yesterday."

"The mayor has said that business last year was bad, and that this year would be worse," pursued Mr. Pocock, "the commission yesterday showed an increase in net earnings of $10,000 for August over the corresponding month last year. Moreover, the mayor has listed the commission's liabilities at something like half a million dollars. He has included in that figure, however, a line of credit of $50,000 extended by the council, but never used by the commission, and an authorization of $100,000 for debentures for the extension of the system, erection of car barns, etc., which work was never carried out, upon which the commission is making sinking fund payments, though the amount of the

POSTPONEMENT IS FOUND NECESSARY

Cold Weather and Lack of Instructors Hold Up Cadet Meet.

Cold weather and a lack of instructors have forced the postponement of the cadet shooting competition which was slated to take place at the Cove ranges on Friday, according to a statement given out this morning by Lieut.-Col. George H. Gillespie, cadet officer of military district No. 1.

The competitions will take place one week later. To date 23 teams have entered. This means that 300 marksmen and instructors will be in the city from various Western Ontario points for that day.

On account of the small arms school at present in operation in Ottawa, a sufficient number of instructors could not be present if the shoot were held this week.

For the next ten days local instructors will visit the different units and help give the cadets some extra training for the event, said Col. Gillespie.

BRITAIN NOT ILKELY TO RENEW RELATIONS

Baldwin Government Is in No Hurry to Deal With Soviet Russia.

Canadian Press Despatch. Ottawa, Oct. 13.—There are no early prospects of transactions between Soviet Russia and Great Britain being restored with the Baldwin government in power, declared Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson, former home secretary in the MacDonald labor government, in an interview here last night.

When it was suggested that such happenings might have distinct effects on Canada in the matter of wheat marketing, Mr. Henderson said that there were other considerations besides wheat, and if Russia was to regain her large production of wheat she would need agricultural implements, many of which Canada was able to supply.

TWO KILLED IN PARIS DURING MOB FIGHTING

Associated Press Despatch. Paris, Oct. 13.—Aside from Paris and its environs the general strike called by the Communists is said to be a failure as a protest against the warfare in Morocco, according to government officials. In Paris and the suburbs two men were killed and some thirty wounded during fighting yesterday between mobs and the police.

Numerous raids were made. Minister of the Interior Schumanek said this morning that the strike had proved a complete failure.

SEARCHING FOR SCHOONER.

Associated Press Despatch. Boston, Mass., Oct. 13.—A radio message received here today from the schooner Lark, reported that she had passed the Machias, Maine schooner Lucy and Edwin, in a sinking condition, 75 miles east-southeast of Highland Light. It is thought here that there was a mistake in the name, and that the schooner was the Lucy Evelyn.

Population At County Jail Shows Increase For Year; Cost of Living Goes Down

Number of Inmates Increased by 121 During 1924 and 1925.

10.73 CENTS A DAY

Governor Practices Rigid Economy, Cutting Cost Nearly Cent a Day.

During the year ending Sept. 30 there was 121 more prisoners confined in jail than there were in the previous year, according to the annual report made public today by Governor Byron Dawson.

A decrease in the cost of boarding the guests from 11.73 cents a day to 10.73 cents is the other feature of the report.

The total number of commitments during the year was 735; men numbered 660 and women 75. Five hundred and fifty-two men and 62 women are the figures for the previous year. Laborers led in the number of commitments, while the professions were unrepresented.

Charges of drunkenness and disorderliness led in the number of commitments. Here the men are ten times as bad as the women, 222 men being committed for this offence, compared with 22 women; 68 men and 7 women were confined on other O. T. A. charges.

Forty-two men and a lone woman were confined on theft charges. Vagrancy brought in 23 and 4.

In jail this morning there were 20 men and no women.

The decrease in the cost of living is due in large part to rigid economy on the part of jail officials, and to the more intensive cultivation of the ground around the jail.

"Our chief aim is to make our guests satisfied for the time that they are with us," said Governor Dawson this morning.

During the year there were no commitments for capital offences, nor were there any escapes.

M'GRATH COMES TO LONDON SOON

Head of Hydro To Visit City On the Sanatorium Mission.

Charles A. MacGrath, Toronto, chairman of the hydro-electric power commission of Ontario, successor to the late Sir Adam Beck, will visit London in the near future. Mr. MacGrath is expected to arrive here for his first visit to London, but now since Mr. MacGrath has been chosen chairman of the campaign for the $500,000 Beck memorial endowment fund for Queen Alexandra sanatorium, Byron, the plan is to have him come to the city under the latter auspices.

When a suitable date is arranged by the authorities of the sanatorium Mr. MacGrath will communicate with Mr. Pocock as planned, suggesting that date for the hydro chairman's visit here.

ALDERMEN TO DECIDE ON BRIDGE

Three Plans For New Ridout Street Structure Will Be Submitted.

WILL MEET TONIGHT

Concrete Covered, All Steel or Mixed Type Are Suggested.

Plans for a new Ridout street bridge will be submitted to No. 2 committee of the city council at a meeting to be held tonight. City Engineer Near, who has been working on the proposition for some time, has plans for three different types of bridge to lay before the committee. The first is a reinforced concrete structure, the second steel, covered with concrete, and the third type is straight steel, trusses and all.

"I am not making any recommendations," said the city engineer. "I am submitting plans for the three types of structure as requested and I am not prepared to give any opinion at the present time."

After No. 2 committee has passed on the plans, they will be turned over to the city council as a whole for discussion.

All the aldermen and the mayor agree that a new Ridout street bridge is the city's first necessity and a bylaw strongly urging the aldermen to vote for the new structure over the south branch of the Thames to replace the present wobbly bridge will be submitted to the citizens in December at the municipal elections.

PREMIER TO BRING WORD FROM WEST

With Much Interest Western Ontario Awaits Message of Friday.

The visit of Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, prime minister of Canada, to Western Ontario, is creating nearly as much interest as his first announcement of the campaign at Richmond Hill in his own riding of North York.

The prime minister will be just fresh from his tour of Western Canada from which reports state that Liberalism is at high tide and Conservatism at low ebb. The premier will in the near future be a messenger of Liberalism supported from the west for a united Canada which has been his aim and the aim of the Liberal party particularly in the time when policies of sectionalism are being advocated by the Conservatives.

The prime minister's visit will add greater strength to a cause which is already acknowledged as making great headway in this part of Ontario. It is now conceded that Liberals will make big gains in Western Ontario despite all the Conservative boasting of a solid Ontario. There have been hurried visits by Conservative organizers into Western Ontario in the last week in several ridings where the S. O. E. has been set up. There is also a call for more speakers. On the other hand Liberals are gaining more and more confidence as election day approaches.

For the first time in his political career, the premier is being given all the time he desires to set forth the policies of his government and party and there will be no interruption on his part by the practice of calling upon numerous gentlemen for a few remarks.

At Stratford, J. C. Elliott, Liberal candidate in West Middlesex, will be the other chief speaker besides the premier.

Salem, Mass., Oct. 13.—Daniel Shaw, of Melrose, Mass., acting as mechanic for Vic Spooner in auto mobile races which marked the opening of the new Rockingham pari board track here yesterday, was fatally injured when the breaking of a steel knuckle caused Spooner's car to overturn. WHITE REPLIES TO DR. REASON

Present Member Declares
Every Effort Made To Secure Redistribution.

At a meeting of Conservative workers of wards one and two last night at the Conservative rooms in the interests of Frank White, candidate for the federal parliament, the rooms were well filled, and speeches were made by Mr. White and Dr. Cameron Wilson, president of the London Conservative association, Mrs. James M. Chalmers and Mrs. Fortner spoke for the Conservative women.

Dr. Wilson was quite confident that the Conservatives would win in London, and also in all the three Essex ridings. He said the party was counting on twenty seats in Quebec. Mr. White took occasion to reply to Dr. Clifford Reason's speech at the Liberal convention, in which he said that if Mr. White had been on the job London might have had two members instead of one in the new parliament. Mr. White said that by the unit of population London would have to have 72,000 people to have two members, but the official census showed the city to have 62,000.

"I was on the job," said Mr. White, "I went to H. T. A. Lowe, who was chairman of the redistribution committee, and later, when he resigned, to Hon. H. B. McGivern, who succeeded him." He brought his case before the Progressive members for Middlesex also, suggesting that the line be made at Adelaide street, adding that district to East Middlesex, and giving Westminster township to West Middlesex. He claimed that this redistribution would have given London roughly 42,000 voters, East Middlesex 32,000, and West Middlesex 30,000. "However, the Progressive members voted with the others, resulting in the present situation," he said. "I have opposed to me Liberal and Labor candidates, but the party he represents, as for the Labor candidate, I have worked all my life, and feel I am capable of representing Labor at Ottawa."

Mr. White said that the Progressives as a party would never lead Canada, and he felt that their influence was on the wane.

PAYS COURT COSTS FOR DAMAGING WALK

Frank Snell Declares Practice
Common Among Local Teamsters.

Frank Snell, a teamster, paid court costs of $7 this morning for failing to put proper planking on a sidewalk when he wished to drive a team over it. Mr. Snell, although admitting that one wheel of the wagon had gone off the planking and chipped off the sidewalk, was quite indignant that he should be haled to court.

"I wish you would serve all teamsters alike," he told the court. "I would go out and get twenty today who are doing the same as I did," he said.

"In that case it is your duty to report them. We are constantly getting complaints from the city engineer's department about this thing," said Magistrate Grayson, who informed the defendant that that was where the complaint against him originated.

MARKET WEIGH SCALES NOW BEING REPAIRED

A gap, around which boards have been placed, designates the spot where formerly the city weigh scales were. Upon inquiry, it is found that they are only temporarily out of use, being at present in use by Thine's shop having the bearings, which were rounded by continual strain, re-ground.

The scales were taken out last Saturday and removed to the machine shop, where they are being repaired. It is expected that they will be replaced and ready for use by Thursday. All weighing is now being done at the D. S. Perrin & Co's plant.

ALLEGED SPEEDER FAILS TO APPEAR IN COURT

The magistrate allowed two days grace, and if Tichbourne does not appear by then, a warrant will be issued.

BLAKE FOUGHT HIGH TARIFF SUPPORTED LAURIER IN 1911

Protection Route To Annexation,
Great Statesman
Declared.

GRANDSON WRITES

That Edward Blake was not only an opponent of the protection route, but that he was in 1911 a supporter of the policy of reciprocity advocated by Sir Wilfrid Laurier is revealed in a letter written by Mr. E. H. Blake, grandson of Edward Blake, to the Toronto Mail and Empire in reply to an editorial article which appeared in that paper last Friday.

Mr. Blake's letter follows:

Toronto, Oct. 9th, 1925.

The Editor, the Daily Mail and Empire.

Sir,—In your issue of Friday, October 9th, under the editorial heading, "But Blake Was a Great-Minded Canadian," you suggest that Edward Blake retired from political life in Canada because he had become a supporter of the protection route.

And you infer that he was a supporter of the policy of "freer trade," which is a complete misapprehension of the policy of "freer trade" that is being advanced in Durham by the Honorable Vincent Massey.

I support these suggestions and inferences by the following quotations from the letter addressed by Edward Blake to the West Durham Reform convention on February 6, 1891, in which, as you truly remark, he set forth "very clearly" the ground of his condemnation of the Liberal platform of that day—the platform of unrestricted reciprocity with the United States.

Attitude Misunderstood.

To anyone familiar with the full text of the West Durham letter, it is clear that your editorial writer has fallen into a most serious misapprehension of Edward Blake's attitude.

A comparison of the quotations in question with the letter itself suggests that this misapprehension is due to your reliance upon some incomplete and garbled reproduction of the letter.

Your first quotation, for example, which is printed as a continuous paragraph and indicates no omissions or alterations, is made up as follows:

The first two sentences are taken from paragraph 25 of the letter with a very vital omission: the third sentence is a subordinate clause from paragraph 26, which is not a part of the letter; while the concluding sentence is a subordinate clause from the first sentence of paragraph 16.

If you will take the trouble to compare the original sentence restored to their proper contexts, I think you will find that the misapprehension of the new combination is completely unjustified. The subsequent quotations, while only in their conclusion exhibiting the patching of the letter, in the first, have been removed bodily from the center of the letter; and, although prefaced by a sentence in the first quotation, which is a subordinate clause from the letter, the quotation is not a part of the letter, but a separate paragraph, which is a subordinate clause from the letter, and is not a part of the letter.

After opening paragraphs dealing with personal considerations created by the election, the argument of the letter is in the following sections in which the letter was printed runs as follows:

(1) A moderate revenue tariff, approximating to free trade with the world, and coupled with liberal provisions for reciprocal free trade with the States would be, in practice, the best policy for Canada.

(2) The Conservative policy has failed. Its real tendency has been towards "disintegration and anarchy," and it has led to a small population, an extravagant system of expenditure, and "an unjust and oppressive tariff," with lowered standards of public virtue, "debauched constituencies," and "corrupted and corrupting classes." (Section 8 and 9.)

(3) The revival in Great Britain of some and colonial agricultural protection is unlikely to provide a remedy, as Britain is not going to be so blind as to abandon her policy of free trade. (Sections 10 and 11.)

(4) There are indications, however, that the United States tariff will soon be readjusted on a basis more moderate than the present one, and may eventually approach what is known as a revenue tariff. Having regard to this expectation, and the fact that the United States is secured for a long term of years, would give us in practice "the great blessing of a measure of free trade with a country which we now enjoy," and though it "would strike hard some spinning and exotic industries wholly tariff born, tariff bred and tariff sustained," it would constitute a signal advantage to the general consuming public." (Sections 12 and 13.)

(5) Assuming consent on the part of the States that the financial remains the same, the financial difficulty, even with differential duties against the United Kingdom, the gaps in our revenue would be very great, and "of the financial problem presented by unrestricted reciprocity, I have seen no solution which would not leave us without a great deficit." (Section 14.)

(6) But a feasible plan involves more than differential duties against

Sinking Vessel Is Abandoned

Canadian Press Despatch.

Halifax, N. S., Oct. 13.—The schooner Emily of Parrsboro, N. S., from St. Pierre for Nassau, was abandoned in a sinking condition in latitude 43.43 north, 61.45 west, but when last seen was making southeast with foresail set, according to advices to the fisheries agency here from the steamer Caspa, which rescued the crew. The vessel was reported a menace to navigation.

The United Kingdom, it involves assimilation of the tariff of Canada and the United States, and unrestricted reciprocity becomes, in these, its redeeming features, difficult to distinguish from commercial union. (Sections 15 and 16.)

Permanence Essential.

(7) But permanence in this relation of commercial union is absolutely essential (this is the main part of your second quotation is to be found) and permanence is impossible. "I see no plan for combining the two elements of the treaty of the tariff, which does not involve the practical control of the latter by the States." (Section 17-18-19.)

(8) Moreover, the establishment of differential duties against the United Kingdom would seriously affect imperial relations, and the tendency in Canada would be towards not merely commercial but political union with the States. On their side the States might be inclined to use the treaty as a vantage ground for securing the unification of the continent, towards which their public opinion to some extent looks. (Sections 20 to 25.)

"Assuming that absolute free trade with the States, best described as commercial union, may and ought to come, I believe that it can and should come only as an incident, or at any rate, as a well understood precursor of political union, with which you do not even conceive yourselves to be dealing, how can I properly recommend you now to decide on commercial union?"

In conclusion, I am able to state that this summary, inadequate though it is, should still leave any person in doubt about Edward Blake's attitude towards the protection route. A doubt that would instantly be removed by reference to the letter itself, the evidence of members of the family and of associations still alive who were familiar with his views is clear and unescapable.

Edward Blake was not only a supporter of the protection route, but he was in 1911 a supporter of the policy of restricted reciprocity advocated by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and it is not a part of the letter, but a separate paragraph, which is a subordinate clause from the letter, and is not a part of the letter.

(Sections 20 to 25.)

"Assuming that absolute free trade with the States, best described as commercial union, may and ought to come, I believe that it can and should come only as an incident, or at any rate, as a well understood precursor of political union, with which you do not even conceive yourselves to be dealing, how can I properly recommend you now to decide on commercial union?"

In conclusion, I am able to state that this summary, inadequate though it is, should still leave any person in doubt about Edward Blake's attitude towards the protection route. A doubt that would instantly be removed by reference to the letter itself, the evidence of members of the family and of associations still alive who were familiar with his views is clear and unescapable.

Edward Blake was not only a supporter of the protection route, but he was in 1911 a supporter of the policy of restricted reciprocity advocated by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and it is not a part of the letter, but a separate paragraph, which is a subordinate clause from the letter, and is not a part of the letter.

After opening paragraphs dealing with personal considerations created by the election, the argument of the letter is in the following sections in which the letter was printed runs as follows:

(1) A moderate revenue tariff, approximating to free trade with the world, and coupled with liberal provisions for reciprocal free trade with the States would be, in practice, the best policy for Canada.

(2) The Conservative policy has failed. Its real tendency has been towards "disintegration and anarchy," and it has led to a small population, an extravagant system of expenditure, and "an unjust and oppressive tariff," with lowered standards of public virtue, "debauched constituencies," and "corrupted and corrupting classes." (Section 8 and 9.)

(3) The revival in Great Britain of some and colonial agricultural protection is unlikely to provide a remedy, as Britain is not going to be so blind as to abandon her policy of free trade. (Sections 10 and 11.)

(4) There are indications, however, that the United States tariff will soon be readjusted on a basis more moderate than the present one, and may eventually approach what is known as a revenue tariff. Having regard to this expectation, and the fact that the United States is secured for a long term of years, would give us in practice "the great blessing of a measure of free trade with a country which we now enjoy," and though it "would strike hard some spinning and exotic industries wholly tariff born, tariff bred and tariff sustained," it would constitute a signal advantage to the general consuming public." (Sections 12 and 13.)

(5) Assuming consent on the part of the States that the financial remains the same, the financial difficulty, even with differential duties against the United Kingdom, the gaps in our revenue would be very great, and "of the financial problem presented by unrestricted reciprocity, I have seen no solution which would not leave us without a great deficit." (Section 14.)

(6) But a feasible plan involves more than differential duties against the United Kingdom, it involves assimilation of the tariff of Canada and the United States, and unrestricted reciprocity becomes, in these, its redeeming features, difficult to distinguish from commercial union. (Sections 15 and 16.)

Permanence Essential.

(7) But permanence in this relation of commercial union is absolutely essential (this is the main part of your second quotation is to be found) and permanence is impossible. "I see no plan for combining the two elements of the treaty of the tariff, which does not involve the practical control of the latter by the States." (Section 17-18-19.)

(8) Moreover, the establishment of differential duties against the United Kingdom would seriously affect imperial relations, and the tendency in Canada would be towards not merely commercial but political union with the States. On their side the States might be inclined to use the treaty as a vantage ground for securing the unification of the continent, towards which their public opinion to some extent looks. (Sections 20 to 25.)

SUTHERLAND'S NAG WOBBLY AT KNEES

Progressive Attacks S. Oxford
Tory—Riding Swings
To Innes.

Special to The Advertiser
By Staff Correspondent.
Tillsonburg, Oct. 12.—Another week of political organizing came to an end on Saturday evening in the historic riding of South Oxford, and on Tuesday the speaking campaign starts with real vigor. Tuesday evening a huge Liberal rally is being held in the Mason arena, with Hon. George P. Graham as the principal speaker. Addresses will also be given by Mrs. Harry Carpenter of Hamilton, Hon. George R. Smith, manager of the Dalley Corporation, Hamilton, and the candidate, J. W. Innes.

Donald Sutherland, the Conservative candidate, is holding meetings in the rural centers, in an effort to swing the farmer vote to his support, but is meeting with very small audiences. The worm is turning, and there is a distinct swing to the Liberal candidate in every polling subdivision. For years Donald Sutherland has been recognized as one of the priests of high protection in Western Ontario, and his only hope for re-election lies with the voters of Ingersoll and Tillsonburg.

Has Town Support.
In the last election the Liberal candidate, M. G. Dean, actually polled a majority of seven in Tillsonburg, with 106 Progressive votes polled, who are all supporting Mr. Innes this election.

It certainly must cause great consternation in the Conservative ranks to know that the heads of some of the largest manufacturing concerns in Ingersoll and Tillsonburg have already signed the Liberal candidate's nomination papers.

The farmers in general have vote against the Conservative candidate for three elections, but in the last two contests have elected Donald Sutherland on a minority vote, and have decided emphatically to stand by J. W. Innes, Liberal candidate. On Thursday evening the chairman at the Conservative meeting in Mount Elgin invited opposition speakers, and nearly lost his breath when C. C. Hawkins, a well-known Progressive worker, accepted the invitation and challenged several statements of the Conservative candidate and defended the Liberal candidate.

Hypen Candidate.
Mr. Hawkins' speech part was as follows: "They (the Conservatives) made much of Mr. Innes on the Liberal-Progressive proposition and they ask what it is. They speak at length of his riding two horses. Mr. Sutherland here is a Liberal-Conservative, and they say nothing of that, and I cannot for the life of me see why there is not as much reason for Mr. Innes being a Liberal-Progressive as there is for Mr. Sutherland being a Liberal-Conservative."

"I am glad Mr. Innes can ride two horses, as Mr. Sutherland says, I am afraid Mr. Sutherland has but one, and it appears to be badly gone at the knees."

"Mr. Sutherland likes to twist us of the U. F. O. going into the Liberal fold. I was a U. F. O. myself and I would ask you where else would we go. He has called us wreckers and Bolsheviks."

This started the fireworks, and a very interesting situation arose as Mr. Sutherland had arisen to his feet, and facing Mr. Hawkins with the words: "That is absolutely false, sir, and you know it."

"I have read it in the papers myself," answered Mr. Hawkins.

"I say that I never called them such a thing, that statement was false and you know it," replied Mr. Sutherland.

"I have the word of the papers for it," replied Mr. Hawkins.

"Yes, and you also have read my denial of it in the press," said Mr. Sutherland.

"I never have," said Mr. Hawkins.

This is an indication that South Oxford is going to witness the hottest campaign in its history, and already rumors are flying from the Conservative clubrooms that in case their candidate is defeated another safe riding will be opened to place him at Ottawa.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1925.

The Premier and the War Years.

When Premier King was speaking at Winnipeg he was interrupted by a man who wanted to know what his war record was. The prime minister answered that he would gladly compare his record with that of the man who had asked the question, and told briefly of his age and family obligations. From another part of the hall came another question, reported by the Canadian Press as follows:

"What did Mr. Meighen do in the war?" shouted another heckler. "He took a portfolio," called a third.

The reply of Premier King to these references to Mr. Meighen was:

"I think Mr. Meighen did his full duty in the light in which he saw it."

The circumstances which Mr. King faced during the years of the war were such as few men have ever been called upon to meet. His father, John King, K.C., who had been a lecturer at Osgoode Hall, became totally blind in 1913, and was a helpless charge upon his son until his death on August 30, 1916. His sister, after a protracted illness, died during the early months of the war in 1915. His brother, Dr. Macdonnell King, became a sufferer from acute tuberculosis and was obliged to give up his practice. A wife and twin sons were dependent on him, and during the whole period of the war this trouble was added to the family cares of Mackenzie King. His brother's illness was the result of exposure and hardship during the South African war. In December of 1916, after the death of his father, Mr. King took his mother to live with him at his home in Ottawa, and, added to the grief from the death of sister and father and the calamity that had befallen his brother, his mother passed away on December 17, 1917.

The premier was caring for a blind father, an ailing sister, an invalid brother and family, and an aged mother. Had the man who asked the question at Winnipeg about his war record known of these events he probably would not have spoken, for it was a chapter of suffering that, even in the heat of political controversy one would hesitate to reopen.

In order to meet the obligations which circumstances had placed upon him Mr. King accepted a position in the Rockefeller Foundation, which is not a business institution but works entirely for the promotion of investigation to promote human welfare. When the war broke it was the first organization in United States to come to the relief of the Belgians in the matter of food and clothing. Its funds went to the relief of starving people in Poland, France, Serbia and Armenia. It gave millions for Red Cross work.

Mr. King did not take up his residence in United States, as has been charged. He made it a condition of his employment that he was to remain in Canada. The only time he went to United States was to make a study of conditions in areas where strikes threatened, many of them as a result of anti-alley propaganda which aimed at close up shops where munitions were being made for Britain and France. It is a matter of record that he was signally successful in this work.

Political opponents in 1920 brought up the charge that Mackenzie King had not done his full duty in the war period. In the house of commons during that year he made his answer, and it was of such a nature that it drew from the Ottawa Journal, a paper that is frankly opposed to Mr. King politically, a remarkable tribute. It described his speech as a fine example of restrained eloquence, and said:

"There was genuine passion and not a little contempt in his declaration that certain of the charges of his critics were 'as utter a slander and as undoubted a criminal libel as any statements could be'; his detailed description of the work he performed in maintaining co-operation of capital and labor, thereby greatly aiding the allied cause, made a good impression, and his frank explanation of family circumstances which limited the character of his war services was heard with sympathy."

It is because he faced his duty fairly and honorably, discharged well his obligations as son and brother, and at the same time made a signal contribution to the cause of the allies in a role for which he was admirably qualified, that he can refer so generously to Mr. Meighen's record during the years of the war. His answer in Winnipeg was an exhibition of political sportsmanship and fair dealing with an opponent such as Canada has a right to expect from her public men.

London and Its Music.

"The man who hath no music in his soul, And is not moved by concord of sweet sounds, Is fit for treason, stratagems and spoils."

London's school bill is about $1,000,000 per year, and the fact that it has increased to that figure is a topic on which has hung no small discussion. From figures compiled by Mr. Quantz, director of music in the schools, London spends from 25 to 50 per cent more than that a year on music. His figures take in sales of pianos, phonograph records, musical goods and music, musical instruction, church choirs and concerts, and his data was so carefully collected as to leave no doubt that when he placed the annual outlay between $1,250,000 and $1,500,000 he was approximately correct. These figures do not, of course, include the output of an establishment such as the Sherlock-Manning Company.

It is well that Mr. Quantz took the trouble to prepare these statistics, because they show in a very emphatic way the interest London has in music and the musical education of her children, and it also explains as nothing else could why London is the musical center of Western Ontario. London is a city of homes—good, wholesome homes—and music in these homes, its study by the children, and its enjoyment by the parents, is a clean, healthy symptom that we can gladly speak of to the rest of the province.

The Evidence Is Before Him.

Hugh C. McKillop, Conservative candidate in West Elgin, said in his nomination address at St. Thomas:

"When Mr. Meighen returns to power and starts the wheels of industry throughout this country and stops the coming into this country of millions of dollars' worth of produce from a foreign country and the sending out of millions of good Canadian dollars to enrich a foreign nation, I have not a doubt prosperity will again settle over this country and Canada will go on and take her place among the first nations of the world."

If Mr. McKillop will look squarely at facts he will find that it has not been necessary to await the return of Mr. Meighen to power to bring about the business betterment of which he speaks. Here are some of the things that have actually taken place in Canada during the last four years:

An unfavorable trade balance in 1921 under Mr. Meighen has been changed to a favorable trade balance of very large proportions. The figures were available for Mr. McKillop to use had he cared to tell the whole story. They are:

Fiscal Year.	Unfavorable Balance.	Favorable Balance.
1921	$29,700,000
1922		$ 6,100,000
1923		142,700,000
1924		165,300,000
1925		284,400,000

Later returns from the department place the figure at over $300,000,000 today, and it means that Canada is actually selling that amount in excess of what she is bringing in from the outside. That is the answer to Mr. McKillop's plea that this country is sending out its millions "to enrich a foreign nation." Canada is taking in from outside countries under the King government $300,000,000 more this year than she is spending with them.

Under the King government the adverse balance of trade between Canada and United States has been brought down each year. In 1921, when Mr. Meighen was in office, Canada bought from United States goods to the value of $15,958,196, and sold to United States $292,588,643, leaving us with an adverse balance of $223,359,553. Since then Canada has increased her sales to United States and at the same time decreased her purchases in that market until it is possible to make this comparison:

Adverse U. S. balance, 1921	$223,359,553
Adverse U. S. balance, 1925	$2,778,586

That is exactly what Mr. McKillop was talking about. His error was in stating that it was something that "was going to take place in the future. It has actually been accomplished, and Mr. McKillop has been in an excellent position at Ottawa to have seen it.

Official Conservative advertisements seek to discount these figures by saying they are made up of raw material being shipped out of this country; a drain on our natural resources. They stress the depletion of our pulpwood areas and say Conservative policy will stop this and cause more to be manufactured in Canada.

In 1921 Canada exported 1,615,467 cords of unmanufactured pulpwood. In 1924 Canada exported only 1,444,693 cords. The export of raw material was higher in 1921.

In 1921 Canada exported 13,376,836 cwt. of manufactured newsprint. By 1924 these exports had risen to 23,221,367 cwt. The export of the manufactured article was higher in 1924.

The 1,444,693 cords of pulpwood exported in 1924 represented only six per cent of the pulpwood cut in Canada. The rest was processed in this country, part as ground pulp and sulphite and the rest as paper, a finished product. To go a step farther and prove that the finished article was of far greater value than the semi-finished, the semi-finished ground pulp sold for $42,690,827, and the exports of finished paper were worth $96,677,782.

These figures of trade balances, unfavorable under Mr. Meighen and favorable under Mr. King, of more finished product and less raw material being exported, all point in the one direction—a steady but very definite trade revival. If Mr. McKillop refuses to see it and be encouraged by it, then it is his own fault. The country at large has noticed it and felt it, and is willing to acknowledge it as a real factor in Canadian development.

Hank Has Learned

No more he fights on politics, nor cusses at his neighbors then, so now he's listened to at times when reason in' with his fellow men.

I'm always pleased to meet with Hank and harken to his logic too, because he's even in his ways and wholesome in his reason too. Just now there's lots of men around who talk of politics at night, and if a man don't see with them they're ready for a village fight.

One chap I know he lives near me and when he touches politics, it's like as though he started out to leave great rocks and broken bricks. His eyes they start to bulge right out, he pumps fresh hate from out his lung, and words and cussin' fly about when he starts wiggin' of his tongue.

I always dodge that jay, I do. It takes him seven hours to cool, and come once more unto the spot where he can argue by rule.

Not so with Hank, he knows much more, and stores much logic in his brain, nor does he sound like summer storms that tell of comin' showers of rain. I asked of Hank how come that he could argue, reason and debate, and never get het up at all or chant his little hymn of hate.

Well Hank he told me years ago he used to let his temper run, and politics they meant to him the totin' of a sword and gun.

"But I found out," says Hank to me, "that folks would look at me and groan, and say that I was votin' mad and gears was strippin' in my dome. So I found out you can't get far by cussin' at the folks you see, nor cleavin' neighbors with an axe because for once you disagree."

"And I have found it's better, too, and easier on my fallin' health, to recognize some other guy may know more than I do myself."

To the Editor

Wants Book On Canada.

Londoner Surprised At Some of the Material Found on the Shelves of the Public Library.

Editor of The Advertiser:

Sir,—During recent visits to the public library I have attempted to get an up-to-date book on Canada, giving an account of our country's resources, transportation systems, manufactures, and so forth, but I have been very much surprised, on looking over the books on Canada, to find that such a book was not to be found.

A rather brief account of the subject is given in a book on the British Empire and several American books devote a few pages to it. These latter, however, are so full of U. S. that the Canadian part of the book is usually both pinched and twisted. Take, for instance, a book published this year, entitled North America. The author states that the power developed on the St. Lawrence should be exported to the valley of the Hudson, as conditions for manufacturing are much better there. He tells of the canal which has "to be" dug for the "new" hydro plant at Chippewa, and under a map showing the H. E. P. C. lines in Ontario, and lines in New York state, says that these are the lines of one "company."

With the exception of a short section on Mexico, Central America, and the West Indies, the remainder of the book is largely filled with praises of "God's country."

Why should books such as this, as well as numerous histories of the American revolution and dozen of books on the lives of American presidents (there are at least eighteen on one alone) fill the shelves of our library, while we go without good books on our own country?

Editorial Opinion

THE POSITION OF THE FARMER.
(From the Toronto Star)

THE farmers are compelled to look askance at any policy that increases the prices of what they buy. They must economize. They can't put up the prices of what they sell. They can't shift any tax or cost on anyone else. They find that the transportation cost on what they sell is deducted from the price they get, while the transportation cost on what they buy is added to the price they pay. They have argued and talked and adopted resolutions, but they find they can't get away from this position, and they know that higher protection means higher prices for what they buy, and means nothing else whatever, so far as they are concerned. The suggestion that those who want a higher tariff tax can make it the main election issue in politics, and that those who don't want it should not make it the issue in the country at large, is one that will not work.

Dominion's Claim To Polar Regions Unchallenged by Northern Expedition.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Quebec, Oct. 12.—The declaration during the last session of the house of commons of Hon. Charles R. S. Stewart, minister of the interior, that Canada claimed Arctic lands converging to the North Pole, and that explorers must apply to the Canadian government to work in the claimed territory, has been brought again to the fore with the arrival of the exploration ship Arctic and by rumors, uncounted on by members of the expedition, that the meeting of the Arctic with the Donald McMillan expedition in the far north had more than ordinary significance. It is pointed out by those discussing the question that the Arctic, instead of going to Canadian outposts first, after leaving Godhavn, on Disco Island, made straight for Etah, in Greenland, where the McMillan party was.

Members of the Canadian expedition are attributed with saying that while flying weather had been bad before the arrival of the Arctic at Etah, perfect conditions followed; but, nevertheless, air work was abandoned. Visits were exchanged, it is said, between the two expeditions, each entertaining the other. The United States expedition were shown pictures of Canadian explorations and occupations last year, and were presented with a copy of an official report of an expedition made several years ago; charts of the eastern Arctic were also shown.

The MacMillan party did not apply to the Canadian government for an exploration permit, so far as known, although it was intimated that such would be readily granted. Captain J. E. Bernier, commander of the Arctic, would only say concerning the United States expedition that it was not practicable to make explorations with aeroplanes such as they had.

"The only way is by dirigible," he said. "Let them go by whaler to Point Barrow, which would make a fine hopping-off ground, because the shore is always free of ice and temperature conditions are thoroughly known. The ice fields are too rough for aeroplane landings."

ALL TO TAKE PART IN CITY'S REUNION

Presence of Representatives of All Organizations Is Asked
For Thursday Meeting.

The mayor, City Treasurer James Bell and City Clerk S. S. Baker want representatives from every society and organization in London to attend the gathering at the city hall Thursday night at 8 o'clock to get plans into shape for London's big centennial celebration next year.

An effort has been made by the committee to get in touch with all London organizations they know of, but they feel sure that one or another society may have been overlooked.

"Just because we may have missed notifying some organization, doesn't mean that we don't think they are important, and don't want them there," declared the mayor. "We want everyone to be interested. That is the only way we have hope of having a successful homecoming for the boys and girls next year."

COMMUNISTS END 24-HOUR STRIKE

Paris Police Do Not Expect a Renewal of Yesterday's Rioting.

Associated Press Despatch.
Paris, Oct. 13.—The 24-hour general strike called by the Communists, ending officially at dawn today, but transport workers in the vicinity of Paris attempted to prolong the walk-out and met with some success among the drivers of auto buses and taxicabs. There was, however, a noticeable increase in the number of taxicabs on the streets, and the general public felt little inconvenience.

Most of the factory workers and building workers who were out yesterday returned to their tasks this morning, and the police felt little fear of a renewal of yesterday's rioting in which two persons were killed and some 30 wounded. The police maintained their vigilance, however, posting special forces at possible danger points.

PRACTICAL BANKING LECTURES PLANNED FOR SCHOOL PUPILS

Students Will Be Shown Various Phases of Money Handling.

ILLUSTRATED TALKS

Trafalgar public school pupils are to have the unique experience within the next few days of hearing practical lectures on banking. V. M. Bray, manager of the Hamilton road branch of the Bank of Commerce, is co-operating with Laurence D. McCamus, B.A., principal of Trafalgar school, in the new and novel scheme of educating the boys and girls of the seventh and eighth grades in banking procedure.

Mr. Bray will give illustrated talks on the simple methods of customer banking, dramatizing the practice, following this up by a concrete drill. A bank staff will then be formed of members of the class, manager, accountant, teller, ledger-keeper, and all customers, all of which will be called upon to go through the movements of depositing money, drawing it out, borrowing money, handling drafts and promissory notes, and in fact, everything connected with banking.

Principal McCamus feels that the practical training thus received, supplementing the saving habit inculcated by the penny bank system, will be of immense value and service to the boys and girls as they proceed to take their place in life.

CARDINAL'S BROTHER IS ROBBED OF $5,000

New York Burglars Take Jewels and Precious Royal Decorations.

Associated Press Despatch.
New York, Oct. 13.—Domingo Merry Del Val, a Spanish diplomatic agent and a brother of Cardinal Merry Del Val, has been robbed of priceless royal decorations and jewels valued at $5,000 by burglars in his New York apartment.

Senior Merry Del Val discovered the burglary on his return to the apartment after a week-end in the country. The apartment, on East 54th street, just off Fifth avenue, had been ransacked. Diamond-studded cuff links, watches and other small but valuable gems had been taken, as well as a gold jewel-encrusted decoration as commander of the Order of the British Empire and decoration as a member of the Order of Isabella the Catholic. Various diplomatic papers, including his passport as messenger for the Spanish king, were untouched. Jimmy marks in the woodwork showed the burglars to the apartment where they were forced.

PARKHILL PASTOR TO HOPE CHURCH TO TAKE CHARGE

Rev. Thomas Bingham Accepts
Post—Begins Next Month.

Rev. Thomas Bingham, Parkhill, has accepted the call extended to him by Hope Baptist church, Westminster township, and will enter upon his new duties there the beginning of next month.

Mr. Bingham, who was born in Stockport, England, came to Canada about 30 years ago, accompanied by his wife and family of seven children. Shortly afterwards he was appointed superintendent of the Baptist mission field embracing Bracebridge and Gravenhurst churches. Subsequently Mr. Bingham was pastor of congregations at Schomberg (First and Second King), Langton, Walsh and Pine Grove, Burk's Falls, Colorado (Mexico), Annapolis, Dutton and Parkhill. In all of his charges Mr. Bingham has given particularly valuable service and his ministry has been rich with fruitful success.

Four of Mr. Bingham's sons entered the ministry: Rev. Wm. J. Bingham, D.D., who prepared for medical missions in Guatemala and now labors in Mexico; Rev. H. H. Bingham, D.D., now of First Baptist church, Calgary, formerly of Talbot street church, London; Rev. C. C. Bingham, now of Memorial Baptist church, Edmonton, formerly of Eglinton street church, London; and Rev. Ernest J. Bingham, who after serving important churches in Canada, moved to Florida, where he died. On a number of occasions Mr. Bingham has been honored by the churches and his four sons conducted evangelistic campaigns in Canada and the United States with splendid results.

Baptist clergymen of the city who are personally acquainted with Mr. Bingham consider that Hope church is fortunate to have secured his services as pastor so shortly after having formed itself into a self-sustaining church.

Faith is Essential.

"There is not a single business that can prosper unless the men interested in it have faith in it, and if men on the commission do not believe in the London and Port Stanley Railway commission, they are best thing they can do is resign."

Should the mayor and Mr. Burdick stay on the commission if they believe the road is in the condition they say it is?

Completion of Walk Will Prove Boon to Motorists and Pedestrians Alike.

Motorists and pedestrians alike on Springbank drive will welcome the completion of a new cement sidewalk being erected on the south side of the drive as far as the first Cove, the city limits.

Automobile drivers state that bad nerves result from frequent trips along the edge of the road in the city limits, and with glaring headlights approaching from the opposite direction, it makes it dangerous for all concerned.

The city has also completed sidewalks along the Wharncliffe road leading to Lambeth and the city limits, and sidewalks on the north side of the road to residents of Manor and Highland parks.

Efforts will be made to impress upon Westminster township council the necessity of continuing the Springbank drive sidewalk as far as Hull's store at the far end of the brick yard hill.

The Y's Men's club of the Y. M. C. A. is co-operating with the Rotary club in the matter of taking care of unemployed boys.

FOUR HIGH SCHOOLS ARE COMPETING

SECONDARY SCHOOLS.

The postponed fourth annual track meet of the city collegiates and technical school commenced this afternoon at 1 o'clock, at Queen's park.

There are three shields being competed for by the students of the four schools, one each for the senior, intermediate and junior divisions. The total number of points scored by either boys or girls in any school will be the basis of that school's claim to the shield in any of the three divisions. A first in any event will count three points for the winner's school, a second place will count two, and a third one point.

Besides these trophies, which will go to the competing schools, six gold medals are offered by the board of education to the individual champions, three of the awards going to the boys and three to the girls.

There is keen competition among the schools for these honors and each institution is looking to its stars to do big things.

London South has been pinning its hopes on Allan Riddell, a Wossia champion of last year. This plucky student is going into today's events with a sprightly running broad jump and this may change the final scores for the day.

London tech. is out to win. This school is entering 45 athletes and is banking heavily on the abilities of Westman and Miller in the senior events, and Goldstein and Reynolds in the intermediate class.

Not content with a large number of entries, tech. paraded en masse, 900 strong, to the grounds, backing up with more and vocal support the 47 efforts of their competitors.

Driver Resents Toll Payment

London Motorist Grows Wrathful
On Sarnia Road.

Toll roads still exist in Western Ontario, although thousands of motorists travelling thousands of miles every year, especially the younger generation, know them only as history. One Londoner came across one near Sarnia the other day, according to Major Wood, secretary of the local chamber of commerce, and the driver in question appeared to resent it greatly.

The motorist called him on the telephone saying that he had been charged two cents to drive half a mile and wanted to know why. Major Wood at once got in touch with the chamber of commerce in Sarnia. The secretary there informed him that it was true. There is still a toll road in Ontario.

PERIOD OF CALM DESCENDS ON MUNCEY RESERVE

A period of calm has descended on the Muncie Indian reserve, according to Constable Nelson of the mounted police. For the past few weeks, there have been few disturbances of any kind on the reserve. The plow leaks have been pretty well stopped, and this accounts for the absence of much disorderliness.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur Compound.

When her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use for only 75 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

Well-known druggists say everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.—Advt.

HEALTH BOARD HAS SURPLUS FOR YEAR ASSERTS CHAIRMAN

Official Reports Show City Unexpectedly Healthy For Autumn Season.

RETURNS MATTRESSES

The board of health will not only be within its estimates this year, but will have a surplus, Chairman Charles Mitchell announced last night at a board meeting. Reports by the various board officials were received and were most satisfactory, showing the city to be quite healthy for this time of the year.

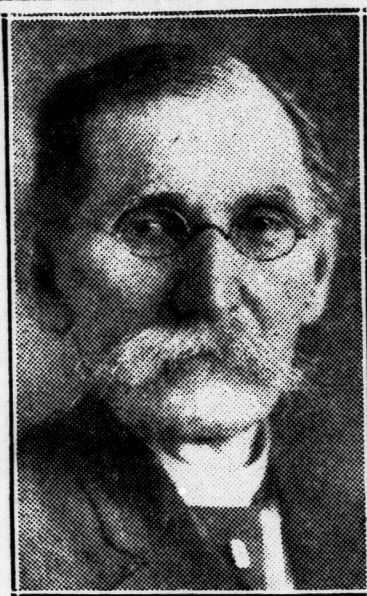

Sanitary Inspector R. H. Sanders stated that six bales of second-hand mattresses arriving in the city last week had been sent back to Montreal on his orders. He declared that the mattresses were not fit to have around, and that the man who was receiving them here had been making them over with equally filthy quilts as part filling and selling them.

"We don't want anything like that here," commented Chairman Mitchell, to which Ald. John Ashton agreed. Dr. W. S. Downham stated that he was in communication with the provincial authorities in the matter, and an effort will be made to stop the manufacture of this type of mattress in London.

Dr. Downham was appointed by the board to attend the American public health association meeting in St. Louis from Oct. 19 to 22.

Mr. Mitchell reported that a citizen had called him up, complaining about a powerful odor of sewer gas on the Wharfedale road near Euclid avenue. Ald. Ashton stated that this was a matter for the city engineer's department, and the complaint will be passed on to him by the officials today.

The report of Dr. Downham, M. O. H., showed that there were 51 new cases of whooping cough reported during September and ten of diphtheria. There were but two cases of mumps and one of scarlet fever.

CHARLES STRONG, oldest resident of Aylmer and veteran newspaperman, who died yesterday afternoon. Mr. Strong was 97 years of age, one of the most honored and best-known residents of the district.

M'GILLIVRAY RESIDENT DIES AT ADVANCED AGE

He is survived by his widow and three sons, Everard at home, Harold of Trout Creek, Ont., and Morris of East Williams, and four daughters, Mildred and Allen at home, Mrs. Norman Stoner of Arkona and Mrs. R. Hodgins of Lucan Crossing. The funeral will be held on Wednesday, Oct. 14, from his late residence to St. Mary's Church, Brimley. Interment will be made in St. Mary's cemetery. The A. F. and A. M. will officiate.

Success Greeted Concert of Women's Music Club

Miss Doris Doe, New York,
Captivates Large Audience at Central Collegiate.

PLEASING OFFERINGS

The Central collegiate, gallery and pit, was filled last night for the opening concert of the Women's Music Club. The program offered was one which could not help but please. Doris Doe of New York has a contralto voice which is rich and lovely, while Alberto Guerrero, concert pianist, of Toronto, is capable of arousing the soul of his audience as he plays.

Miss Doe had the opening number, an aria from Coquard's Plainte d'Arlene, which displayed the technical beauties of her voice and the artistry with which she sings. But the numbers which gained for her the greatest applause were those which formed the second and last group.

Zur, Ruh, Zur, Ruh, by Hugo Wolf, sung in German, seemed especially adapted to her voice. Here the deep and lovely contralto notes found perfect expression. In marked contrast came the sweet lullaby of Geni Sadoro, in which the delicacy of her singing was shown. In beautiful cadences, the monotonous swing of the sleep song fell restfully and exquisitely upon the ears of her listeners. The tear in her voice gave expression to the longing of the mother for the father who might not come home.

The final number of this group, Lenz, from Hildach, demanded an encore, and the artist graciously sang Two Little Maples.

Perhaps the greatest tribute came from her audience at the singing of

CLASSIC RESTRAINT IN PLAY AT GRAND

Bright Humor and Compelling
Pathos Mark A Fascinating Devil.

Sweeping in action, bright in humor, and compelling in its flashes of pathos, A Fascinating Devil, which opened at the Grand, last night for a three-day run, makes a strong bid for the modern drama honors of the current season here.

From the pen of Myron C. Fagan, and directed by himself, the clever vehicle of society life, with its dominant note of bold hazard, is developed to a tingling degree of presentation by the cast which appears in this city.

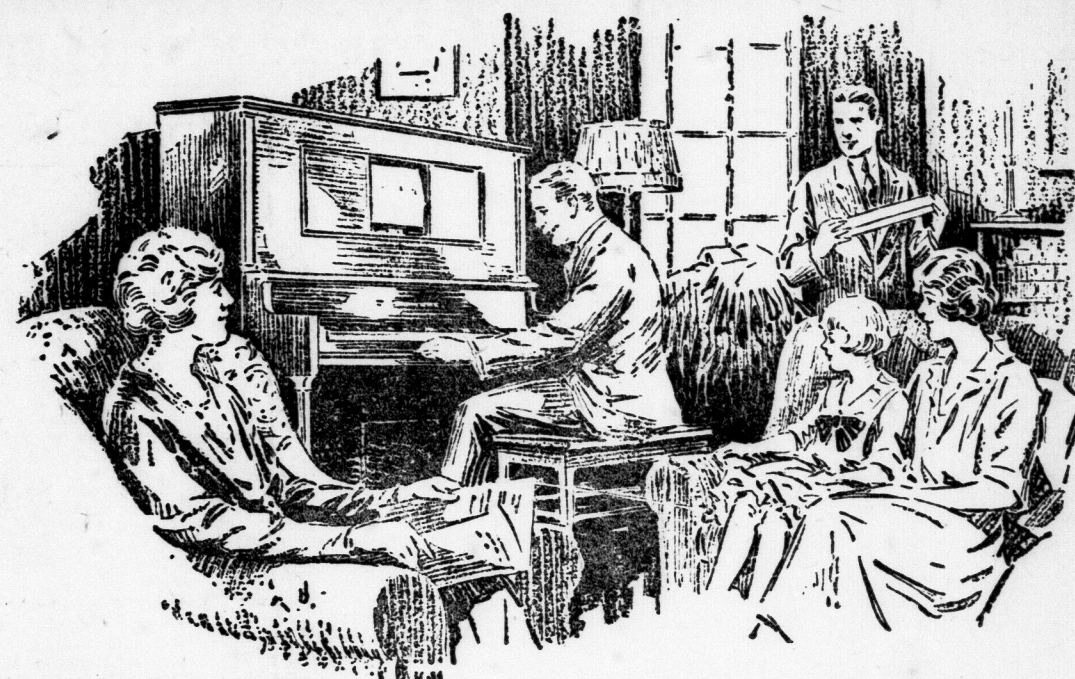

Heavy duty honors in A Fascinating Devil are equally divided between Frederick Burt, who portrays the renowned New York specialist, and Helen Ware, the wealthy matron who falls before the wiles of the dashing, unscrupulous Jay Brighton (Bernard Nedell).

Helen Ware, a well-known tragedienne, fills the demands of a role that calls for a strenuous admixture of emotions, with a striking facility that stands out in every scene. Mr. Burt's playing, with its perfect affectations of the attitude and mannerisms of an exacting specialist in medicine, is equally as noteworthy.

Stable fascination and well-carried restraint in the more highly-colored stages of the poison plot are two of the attributes of Mr. Nedell, which make him a "fascinating devil" of the choicest sort.

For mirth, Dickie Willis and Bobbie Lorimer, taken by Bruce Evans and Faith Gage, combine in a manner which fits in well with the intermittent periods of suspense. Harry Redding gives a clever portrayal of the role of Kenneth Montague, fellow-conspirator of Brighton in his scheming for millions. Especially effective was his doubling for the type of the fast-living, dance-hall professional, who prolongs the fire of pleasure with sprinkles of cocaine.

Florence Mason, William Williams and Albert Towell also carried their parts with a grace that added to the smoothness of the plot.

When Father Shows Them How It Should be Played

Never took a music lesson in his life—but he loves music. Feels it. Lives it.

So that's why he takes a player roll and makes others feel it, too.

If Daughter who is studying piano thinks she has not yet reached the stage when she can finger the Second Rhapsody she puts on that roll. "Fine," says Father, "but here towards the end, let those notes sparkle faster and louder."

"The crescendo," explains Daughter.

"Well whatever it is—this is what I mean."

—And he adds his own expression to the piano roll.

They all know his way is better—he feels what the composer meant him to feel.

Everybody in the home thus gets the full pleasure that the player piano is capable of providing. If it is a Mason & Risch then indeed the pleasure is complete. Not only is its player action perfect in control to permit of individual expression, but the piano itself is of the highest type that modern science has evolved. Its beauty of tone—every note perfect in itself, clear and pure—its unsurpassed musical qualities make it truly "The Piano with a Soul."

AT THE THEATRES

LOEW'S THEATRE

The Limited Mail.

Two excellent and wholly different bits of excellent entertainment are playing at Loew's Theatre for the first half of this week. One is "The Limited Mail," a melodramatic motion picture featuring Monte Blue, and the other is a charming dance act with Miller and Marks and Marjorie Hayes doing the footwork, while Traub's orchestra supplies the choicest modern dance numbers.

The railroad picture should have a wide appeal to boys of all ages. Giant mountain-type locomotives hauling heavy trains at six times as fast speed through the Rockies quickly grip the audience as the plot unfolds. Although the play is not without sentiment, the first thought has been given to producing a real railroad drama. The technical skill in photographing the stormy engines on the mountain grades and in the tunnels is worthy of high praise.

Miller and Marks, with Marjorie Hayes and Traub's orchestra, have a distinctly high-class offering. The dancers have a charm all their own. The musicians delighted the audience with popular melodies. They were generous with their encores.

Dura, Cross and Renee open the vaudeville bill with an acrobatic act. Alton and Cullen follow with some patter and a couple of songs. The boys are good dancers.

A Sengett comedy, called "Don't Tell Dad," and a Pathe news reel complete the card.

CAPITOL THEATRE.

Seven Days.

A picture sparkling with wit and satire is the Al and Charlie Christie comedy Seven Days, now showing at the Capitol theatre, starring Lillian Rich and Creighton Hale, and backed by an excellent cast. This picture is amusing and laughter-stirring. A wild party is given by the hero, a divorce. The party is in full swing when his maiden aunt, and only supply of cash, is announced. As the only way out of the dilemma, one of the guests takes the place of his former wife, who is supposed by the aunt to be still the object of his affections. To make matters still more complicated, his divorced wife appears on the scene. They are quarrelling, and officers stationed around the house, continued efforts to break out are made extremely comical. The Capitol comic creation, The Misses Sabor, and Pathe educational pictures complete a cast that is amusing and entertaining.

YOUNG PRESBYTERIANS ORGANIZE FOR WINTER

Representatives From All Continuing Churches in City
Meet at New St. James.

Every Presbyterian church in the city was represented at an enthusiastic rally of the young people of the Presbyterian missions on missionary night, the 11th inst., at the New St. James church last evening. Plans were laid for the coming year, and stress was laid on the fact that the societies were not merely to be social, but were to have a vital part in the spiritual work of the church.

Harmon Westland, president of the central executive, presided, and outlined the suggested program for the societies. One night each month will be devoted to one social, one literary and one missionary night, respectively. Famous Biblical characters will be studied on literary nights, and the missionary history of the Presbyterian missions on missionary night. One literary night, besides debates and public-speaking, the history of the church will be studied. One night each month will be a social evening.

Every society will act on this suggested program. Rev. F. F. O'Neil spoke to the meeting on a number of things that were of a general nature about young people's work. There were also a number of Presbyterian ministers present. Rev. J. Hosie, of St. George's church; Rev. McCree, of Hamilton Road church; and Carlyle Webster, of Knollwood Park, were among those present.

SUIT OVER LUXURY TAX HEARD IN COUNTY COURT

Frank McLachlin Suing Philip
Pocock For Tax On Sedan.

Adjournment was made yesterday in the case of Frank McLachlin versus Philip Pocock. The plaintiff is suing for $505 which represents the amount of luxury tax on a Packard sedan purchased by the defendant in 1922.

The agreement to purchase was made in April, 1922. Shortly after this the Fielding budget imposed a luxury tax on cars. The car was delivered in September. The plaintiff claims that it was understood that the defendant was to pay any tax imposed subsequent to the agreement, but defendant denies this. All evidence was taken yesterday in the case. Counsel were ordered to cite their authorities in the judge's chambers at 10:30 o'clock this morning.

You can have clean, pretty teeth and gums like coral if you will start today. This is accomplished by combating a vicious film that covers teeth. A stubborn, hard to remove film that old type dentifrices do not fight successfully.

Run your tongue across your teeth and you can feel this film. Under it are the clear, attractive teeth you envy in others. Combat it, and your teeth become many shades whiter—more gleaming. This offers you a 10-day test free. Mail the coupon.

The enemy of teeth and gums
Film is the great enemy of teeth and gums; a chief cause, according to world's dental authorities, of most tooth and gum troubles. It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. Germs by the millions breed in it. They, with tartar, are the common cause of pyorrhea. It holds food in contact with teeth, inviting the acid that causes decay.

You can't have prettier, whiter teeth; you can't have firm, pretty gums unless you combat that film.

Ask your druggist or mail the coupon for Pepsodent. Don't expect the same results from old time dentifrices. Begin beautifying your teeth today.

LESS HOLIDAY WORK FOR RURAL CARRIERS

Country Mailmen To Work As Usual On Christmas Day.

Commencing on Thanksgiving Day, rural mail deliveries throughout Canada are to be discontinued on holidays, with two exceptions, according to an advice received from Ottawa. The number of mail carriers that will be affected is 3,500. Of these, 800 are serving in this district. In future the rural carriers will not make their rounds on New Year's Day, Good Friday, Dominion Day, Victoria Day, Labor Day and Thanksgiving Day.

Civic holidays have not been included as such holidays do not all fall on the same day. Owing to the holiday rush at Christmas, the carriers will be on duty.

HEALTH DISTRICTS ARE SUGGESTED

Dr. Bell Asks Hospital Aids To Help Fight Tuberculosis.

The Ontario Hospital Aids convention, recently concluded in Galt, was characterized by interesting sessions, according to Mrs. F. J. Greenaway of this city, who has just returned from the convention. Mrs. Greenaway is convener of the Victoria Hospital Women's Auxiliary, and acted as convener of the press committee during the convention.

A number of interesting speakers featured on the program, giving valuable suggestions for work in both rural and urban communities. One of the most interesting suggestions made came from Dr. Bell of the provincial health department, Toronto.

Dr. Bell believed that it would be a good thing to divide the province into sanatorium areas, making each one responsible for educating and instructing the people as to proper methods of dealing with persons who have symptoms of tubercular trouble. There were nine sanatoriums in Ontario attempting to cope with the disease, he said. The great problem was how to deal with those people who had been exposed to the disease but were not down with it. Those were the ones they must get after.

Dr. Bell also referred to the value of outposts hospitals. He pointed out that many hardships attended those who looked after such hospitals, and that an effort should be made to make things as comfortable and congenial as possible for them. They must not be allowed to become discouraged and give up their very necessary work.

Miss Grace Fairley of London was another interesting speaker of the convention, telling of her experiences while attending the world conference of hospital workers at Helsinki, Finland. She was impressed with the fact that hospitals the world over were practically similar. In pointing out what the hospital aids of Ontario might do, Miss Fairley suggested propaganda along the line of educating the people in the care of the sick and the training of nurses of the future get a proper training.

Mrs. F. J. Greenaway, Mrs. A. T. Edwards and Miss Grace Fairley represented the Victoria Hospital Women's Auxiliary at the convention, while Mrs. Arthur Smith represented the Children's Hospital committee. Mrs. A. D. Gundry of Galt automatically becomes the president of the Ontario Hospital Aids association for the coming year, with Mrs. R. M. Henderson, also of Galt, as secretary.

CENOTAPH COMMITTEE.

The meeting of the cenotaph committee, which was scheduled for tonight in the city hall, has been cancelled. The special committee met yesterday to discuss different plans for the memorial and suitable locations. Nothing definite, however, has been decided as yet. A meeting of the cenotaph committee will be held, however, on October 27, according to an announcement made yesterday by Mrs. George MacDonald, the convener.

Don't Squeeze Blackheads—Dissolve Them.

Squeezing and pinching out blackheads make the pores large and cause irritation. Blackheads are caused by accumulations of dust and dirt and only one safe and easy way and one that never fails to get rid of them is a simple way, too—that is to dissolve them. Just get from any drug store about two ounces of peroxide powder, sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly for a few seconds—wash off, and you'll be surprised to see that every blackhead has disappeared, and the skin will be left soft and the pores in their natural condition.—Advt.

SPINDRIFT

An Adventure of the Great Lakes

By HAROLD TITUS

INSTALLMENT 9.

On one of these August evenings Goodheart had stayed out longer than usual and was smoking alone on the dock.

He heard the thrumming of Janet's guitar as she drifted in her skiff, heard her clear voice lifted in a song. Later he saw her rowing ashore, her white little craft gleaming in the light of a lagoon moon which turned the wriggling water of the lake into a pool of molten bronze.

After a time he walked up the dock slowly, finishing his pipe on a way, curiously content with his lot. Janet had come ashore a half hour before Goodheart arose. She had driven her skiff hard into the sand and then, before she could rise to step out, felt it drawn forward.

"Oh, Val!" she cried, glancing over her shoulder. "You frightened me!" "Good! Glad I can stir you some way."

The girl's laugh, as she stepped out, was one of combined remembrance and embarrassment. She picked up her guitar and faced the east.

"The old moon's a wonder tonight, isn't he?" "I don't know."

Haines shook his head. "I can't look at the moon or anything else when you're around."

"Are we going to have that over again?" "I expect we are," muttered the man, as he began moving beside her into the shadow of the cedars.

They walked in silence to the big gray house, and when Janet reached the screen door, she said briefly: "Don't."

"Why not? Won't you come in?" "Not tonight—I want to talk to you."

"Can I talk better out here, maybe you'll enjoy it more, having the moon to look at."

She put down her guitar and faced him. "Val Haines, I shan't talk to you at all if you're going to sulk. I'd like the sick and the training of nurses of the future get a proper training."

"Mrs. F. J. Greenaway, Mrs. A. T. Edwards and Miss Grace Fairley represented the Victoria Hospital Women's Auxiliary at the convention, while Mrs. Arthur Smith represented the Children's Hospital committee."

"If you don't, I'll stay here. I'll finish the season for the United. Janet: I'll have my own rig by spring. I'll build a better house than there is on the peninsula. If you'll come to live in it with me."

His posture was tense, but the girl, her clasped hands propping her chin, looked away from him almost indifferently.

"There's no use, Val." She rose. "I can't sit here and let you make me uncomfortable. I don't want to live in your house."

He was on his feet, too, breathing sharply. "Why not? You'll have to answer me that. There was a time when you seemed glad to have me make love to you. That was not so long ago. When did I change and what changed you?"

The girl looked down into his face speculatively as she stood on the top step, as if debating with herself just how to reply. Then she said: "Perhaps it's a good thing that you've asked me such plain questions. I don't want this to go on and maybe I'll tell you why I'll clear things up between us."

"I did used to like you, Val. A lot better than I do now. You were different from the other men I knew. I admit. But all the time I felt that there was something in you that none of them, perhaps, but I used to tell myself that such a thing couldn't be or else it would come out, and I'd never seen it. I just felt it."

And then—three years ago—want it?—you got restless. You went away and when you came back you were a changed person. I remember now. It was after you went with my father after the Wanderer, after you came back from Marquette."

"Marquette?" The word burst from the man as though the idea excited him. "Why, what's Marquette got to do with any change in me?"

The girl looked at him narrowly, for he seemed to be trying to control himself and succeeding only after an effort.

"I don't know that Marquette had anything to do with it. You asked me when you changed and I'm trying to tell you."

"First, you decided to quit the fishing; then you came back and took for the North Star. It was your first run, the first I've ever run, and you went about it, not as the sort of young man I'd like, but as an old and hardened driver."

"Men've got to be driven. How'd you—"

"I understand that argument. But that driving, the way you did it, convinced me that there was a part of you, Val, that is almost—well, cruel. That's why I can't let you make love to me. That's the change that's taken place in you."

"Cruel?" he repeated. "You think I'm that? You're wrong, Janet. I've lived no easy life. I've grown up in the lake. I've had to fight the lake ever since I was a little kid. It won't let you be soft and easy, the lake, but if I had something to balance it maybe I'd be the sort you'd like better. It's you I've needed, Janet, to help me be the sort of man you'd like."

His voice became gentle with that, and his evidently profound emotion.

Peter Rabbit decides to pay a call on all his friends before winter

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

When Flitter the Bat had a Peter Rabbit good-bye and started for the Sunny South, it set Peter to thinking. Peter does think once in a while. "I won't see Flitter again until next spring, yet somewhere he'll be flying about every evening all winter long as he had flown about here all summer long," muttered he. "It gives me a queer feeling to know that an old friend is somewhere alive and happy, yet I cannot see him. This whole business of getting ready for winter is funny anyway. Some get ready one way and some get ready another way, and others like myself don't get ready at all. Personally, I can't see any sense in doing a lot of work when you really don't know what kind of weather you are going to have. I suppose everybody has a fellow who's feeling the same way. It would be kind of fun just to go around and find out how all the people I know are getting ready for winter. This is a great weather for travelling. I believe I'll do it."

This was the beginning of Peter's idea, and he soon got so interested in it that he could think of nothing else. He could hardly take time to eat properly, and when Peter neglects his stomach he is very much interested indeed. He was beautiful weather. He knew October is a very beautiful month. It was just cool enough to make Peter feel good. He couldn't have sat still if he had wanted to. He had to be hopping about and waiting. "Let me see," said Peter. "Flitter the Bat has gone, so there is no use thinking about him. A lot of my feathered friends have gone, so there is no use thinking about them. I've seen Buster Bear and I know what he's doing. He's thinking of his stomach all the time. It's kind of thing to think of once in a while, but I shouldn't want to think of it all the time. But that's Buster's way of getting ready for winter. Johnny Chuck is just like him, and Bobby Coon is much better. All those fellows can think of just now is stuffing themselves until it looks as if their coats must split. The Squirrel cousins think more of work than they do of eating. Still, I suppose they are really thinking of eating, only not all at once. I think I'll visit them first and find out. If I can, just what they do to get ready for winter and how they do it. Perhaps I might learn something. I'll begin with Striped Chipmunk."

So Peter started at once for a place where he knew that Striped Chipmunk was sure to be found. Striped Chipmunk was there. When Peter came in sight of the place he saw Striped Chipmunk running for the affected the girl. His face was in shadow and she could not see the craft in his eyes.

"That flatters me, Val," she said, slowly. "But I've—"

Quickly he put his hands on her shoulders. "Don't say the other!" he pleaded. "Don't say it again, Janet. I love you. I want to work for you to do things for you, and I can, Janet—I can make you happy."

She did not draw away at once. She permitted his hands to rest on her shoulders as he stood, on the step below her, looking up into her face.

They did not hear the scuff of feet coming around the corner of the house. Val Haines' ears blood was roaring and Janet was absorbed by the debate that went swiftly on in her heart, a debate centering about the measure of honesty in this plea.

"I love you," he said again, voice higher, and then turned his face sharply.

John Goodheart stood there beside them. He had checked himself abruptly at those words and his eyes held on the two.

For just an instant the three retained their pose and then Haines slowly withdrew his hands from the girl's body with a breathless ejaculation of irritation.

"It was embarrassing for John, annoying for Val Haines, but Janet's face, revealed in the moonlight, showed good evening, John," she said.

That broke down the first barrier of constraint and Goodheart moved past them.

"I'm sorry," he muttered, thickly, as he went into the house.

They heard his footsteps ascending the stairs and then, as he drew closer to the girl, putting his arms about her, the impulse in him over-riding the outward gentleness that he had demonstrated moments ago.

"I will! I'll make you listen! I'll drive these fool whims out of your head or—"

"Val, let me—!" I'm warning you, now. Let me go!"

She showed with her palms against his arms and tried to break his clasp. His breath was hot on her cheek, a cheek chilled by bright snow, for the man who held her was no longer a petitioner, but a conqueror, a destroyer, unreasonable, and without honor or mercy.

"I'll have you!" he snarled. "I'll have you!"

"Father!"

His hand clapped over his mouth as he caught the idea excited him. "Why, what's Marquette got to do with any change in me?"

The girl looked at him narrowly, for he seemed to be trying to control himself and succeeding only after an effort.

"I don't know that Marquette had anything to do with it. You asked me when you changed and I'm trying to tell you."

the other, head thrust a bit forward. "Get out!" he said, sharply.

"To hell wi—"

The word was cut short by the stinging crack of an open hand across his mouth.

"Get out, now, or—"

Haines struck. John dodged and rushed. He pinned the man's arms to his sides with his own. He lifted him clear of the ground even as Haines had lifted Janet and, running swiftly, heedless of the writhings and the kicks of the man he held, he reached the gate, stepped through, and went Haines reeling into the road.

Val did not fall. He kept his balance, but when he faced about he was in the situation that he wondered at as he followed him, if he were fearful of the threat Haines had made.

A trifle like that could not upset John Goodheart. He had put Haines out of his mind when he flung him out of the cap's doorway, but there was something else, another element in the situation that he could not be rid of so easily.

He lay face down on his bed, breathing slowly, his heart in turmoil that one trifling incident of coming on a man making love to a woman had shattered the tacit peace that had been his. It brought home to his consciousness a realization of the world's untried liberty that he might claim until he could remember why he was no killer. He was free to work; he might remain free to work for the rest of his life. He might go about the world, living almost anywhere, working as he chose, but the normal life of a normal man was denied him.

At any hour an injudicious move, a stray word, might betray his standing in society; at any moment the law might stretch its hand for him. He could have no home, he could make honest love to no woman. He was not John Goodheart, a fisherman; he was Carl Garrison, a murderer, in the eyes of the world!

He lay flat there for hours, suffering agonies. Until then Janet Goodheart had been only an adjunct in his life. She had cooked for him and her father; they had eaten at the same table; they had talked to each other casually and naturally enough. True their relationship had been that of mere acquaintances, but tonight he was aware that even though he should desire her with an impulse that, ungratified, would make life unendurable, he must hold it chained in his heart.

After hours he dropped into troubled slumber and dreamed that Janet came to him and with that fine frankness which was a characteristic took his hand and held it in both hers and asked him why he did not make love to her as Val Haines did. He awoke in a cold sweat and was glad that dawn was seeping across the lake.

At breakfast he was self-conscious and had even less to say than usual, but his eyes persisted in following Janet as she came and went between kitchen and dining-room, and about her he detected a charm of which he had never been aware before and, with its recognition, his sense of security, his determination to think and reason and try to remember just why he was not a killer drained from him.

"I'll get you for this!" Haines said, slowly.

"Fair enough. So long as you stay away from Miss Janet that'll be all right."

He turned and walked back up the path in long strides. The girl was waiting for him and came forward. "I'm so thankful, and I'm so sorry that—"

He cut her short with a gesture. "That's all right," he said, in an odd tone. "I was glad to do it—only too glad."

He did not stop. He went on into the house and the girl thought that he reeled a bit as he mounted the porch steps. He seemed to be in a hurry to get indoors and she wondered as she followed him, if he were fearful of the threat Haines had made.

MISERABLE AND ALWAYS IN PAIN

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Dependable Help to Mothers

Port Greville, N. S.—"I took your medicine for a terrible pain in my side and for weakness and headaches. I seemed to float all over, too, and my feet and hands were the worst. I am the mother of four children and I am nursing my baby—the first one of four I could nurse. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before the baby's birth, so you can see how much it helped me. I cannot praise it too highly for what it has done for me. I took all kinds of medicine, but the Vegetable Compound is the only one that has helped me for any length of time. I recommend it to any one with troubles like mine and you may use my letter for a testimonial."—Mrs. ROBERT McCULLY, Port Greville, Nova Scotia.

Before and after childbirth the mother will find Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a blessing.

Many, many letters are received giving the same sort of experience as is given in this letter. Not only is the mother benefited, but these good results pass on to the child.

No harmful drugs are used in the preparation of this medicine—just roots and herbs—and it can be taken in safety by the nursing mother.

98 out of every 100 women reported benefit from its use in a recent canvass among women users of this medicine.

Woodstock, Oct. 12.—Developments at the inquest in Drumbo this afternoon on the body of Thomas Henry Carr of Paris, whose remains were found in a creek near Richmond last Friday, tended strongly to the possibility that the man had been murdered and his body thrown into the stream.

A post-mortem had been conducted by Dr. Mitchell of Drumbo, and, according to the statements made by him, no water was found in the lungs, and the throat of the dead man was marked by several bruises.

The inquest was adjourned after hearing very little evidence, at the request of Detective - Inspector Stringer of Toronto, who, with High Constable Hill, is making a thorough investigation. Much mystery has developed around what appeared at first to be a case of suicide. The intention of the authorities is to determine the exact cause of death, owing to the discovery that death took place before the body entered the water. For this purpose the brain and lungs of the dead man have been sent to Toronto for examination by pathological experts. The indication that death occurred before Carr entered the stream was proven by the findings of Dr. Mitchell, who was assisted by Dr. C. M. McKay of Woodstock.

Sought Farm Work.
According to Mrs. Annie McKay of Paris, with whom Carr had boarded for the past five years, he left home on the morning of Sept. 29 at 5:30, saying he was going to work for a farmer named O'Neill, about two miles from Paris. Mr. O'Neill, however, states that he never reached there. His boarding mistress, thinking him to be at McNeill's, did not make any inquiry about him until she read of the body being found.

The fact that he had been a man of a peculiar mentality and had been in poor health and a depressed condition of mind for some time, led his relatives in Paris and Brant county and the officials in Paris to believe that he was a suicide, and it was only today, after the post-mortem examination report had been made to the coroner, that suspicion of foul play arose.

A peculiar circumstance of the case is that when the body was found, it was stated at the inquest, one of the trouser pockets was turned inside out, and Carr's hat was found stuffed down inside the top of his trousers. His money and watch were also missing, but these were later found. It was reported, in his room at the boarding-house, although the coroner remarked that there was something strange about this report.

Suspect Foul Play.
In addressing the jury, Dr. Andrew MacKay, the coroner, said that the whole case was a mystery. "It looks to me," he said, "very much as if there might be something wrong somewhere. It seems remarkable that a man well fixed, and, it seems, not in bad circumstances, should be found here 12 miles from his home in Paris without a cent or his watch. These have been reported to have been recovered in Paris, but it is only a rumor, and there is a mystery about it. There is no history of his coming here, and how the body came to be in the water is another mystery. Carr was an unmarried man, and although he did not have much ready money, he owned a considerable amount of property in Paris. He worked as a gardener at several of the residences in the town, and did odd jobs from time to time.

"Two years ago he got into a depressed condition, and had been unsettled in mind ever since. At that time he was to have been married to a Paris widow, but shortly before the date set for the wedding she broke off the match, and was subsequently married to another man. This, it was stated by those who knew Carr, had a very unsettling effect upon him. Carr has four brothers, Saul Carr of Paris, W. E. and John W. Carr of South Dumfries and James Carr of Bright, and one sister, Mrs. James Bear. He was born in the township of Brantford, but had lived in Paris."

DR. SINCLAIR HOLDS RALLY IN N. OXFORD

Hon. Nelson Parliament Speaks at Plattsville Liberal Meeting.

Special to The Advertiser.
Plattsville, Oct. 12.—Dr. D. J. Sinclair, member for North Oxford in the last Canadian parliament, and Liberal candidate again in the present campaign, held a splendid meeting in the town hall here tonight.

The Hon. Nelson Parliament, chief Ontario organizer of the Liberal party and former Speaker in the provincial house, gave a stirring address, and speeches were given by majority over all. The Conservatives, he said, would be quite surprised at the number of seats that would be taken by the Liberals. Mr. Parliament, who is a clear, forcible speaker, made a deep impression on the audience.

Campaign Warm Up.
The Liberal campaign in North Oxford is now well under way with meetings arranged for some part of the riding for every week night until election day. Dr. D. J. Sinclair, the candidate, is receiving great encouragement, and his election is already conceded, except among the most partisan Conservatives. Tonight, an enthusiastic meeting was held at Plattsville. Tomorrow night a big meeting will be held in Woodstock, with Right Hon. George P. Graham, minister of railways, Hon. G. R. Smith, former minister of education in Alberta, F. T. Condon, ex-M.P. for the Yukon, and Dr. Sinclair as the speakers. On October 14, meetings will be held at and Harrington, the speakers being Archie Hyslop, ex-M.L.A., Brussels, H. H. Horsey, Prince Edward county, and the candidate. On October 15, a joint meeting with the Liberals of South Oxford will be held at Thamesford, at which Dr. Sinclair and J. W. Innes, Liberal candidate in the south riding, will be the speakers.

W. G. Raymond, member of the last parliament for Brantford, will speak at Drumbo and Princeton on October 16.

Other meetings will be held as follows, with prominent speakers: October 19, Embro and Lakeside; October 20, Perry's schoolhouse; October 21, Innerkip; October 22, Hickson; October 23, Woodstock; October 26, Bright; October 27, Richmond.

UNFAIR ATTACK ON INNES NAILED IN SOUTH OXFORD

Special to The Advertiser
By Staff Correspondent.
Tillsonburg, Oct. 12.—The Liberal organization in South Oxford has nailed another canard being circulated by Donald Sutherland and his lieutenants for the purpose of placing J. W. Innes, Liberal candidate, in the wrong light before the public. At a meeting a few weeks ago, at Woodstock, the county council went into the committee of a whole to discuss the county equalization rate and the work of a commission appointed to investigate and make a report. The result of this is being whispered around and a raise in assessment in Derham county is being saddled on Mr. Innes.

Determined to get at the truth of the matter, the minutes of the meeting were investigated at Woodstock with saddening results to the Derham officials in the council, who have made a great ado about the proposed increase in assessment. Twenty-one members were present at the meeting, twenty of whom voted for the equalization, and only one against, Reeve Johnston of South Norwich.

A Liberal rally is being held in the council chamber this Wednesday evening with the candidate, C. C. Hawkins and M. L. Haley as the principal speakers.

VOTE CONSERVATIVE

FOR HIGHER TARIFF AND FOR LOWER TAXATION

Liberal-Conservative Victory Committee, 330 Bay St., Toronto 2

Dr. Sinclair, by Wilfred Cockbourn, Blenheim township farmer, and A. P. MacNeill of Woodstock.

Mr. MacNeill spoke briefly, denying malicious reports concerning the character of the candidate. Mr. Cockbourn spoke as a former Progressive, who has supported the Progressive cause in the election of 1921. He saw much good in Liberal policies, and believed that farmers would benefit most by voting for King.

Dr. Sinclair reviewed his service in parliament, spoke of the improving conditions of the C. N. R., and explained the expenditures of the government.

Recounts Policies.
The Hon. Nelson Parliament gave an outstanding speech, in which he told of prosperous conditions under Sir Wilfrid Laurier, of the improvement of the Canadian export trade then, and of the similarity of the present day to the time when Sir Wilfrid came into office.

Mr. Parliament predicted the return of the King government with a good majority over all. The Conservatives, he said, would be quite surprised at the number of seats that would be taken by the Liberals. Mr. Parliament, who is a clear, forcible speaker, made a deep impression on the audience.

MAN FRACTURES KNEECAPS IN ELEVATOR SHAFT AT FIRE

Fire Breaks Out in Basement of White Auto Supply Company.

$5,000 DAMAGE

Fire of unknown origin, discovered early last evening in the basement of the White Auto Supply Company on the Market Lane, caused damage estimated at $5,000. Leo Daley, Hamilton man, residing at 118 York street, is in the St. Joseph's Hospital suffering from two broken kneecaps. Daley was investigating the fire in the lane at the rear of Chivas & Co. and walked through the door which leads into the elevator shaft, falling to the cellar floor, a distance of eight feet. Dr. F. L. Burdon attended the patient at the scene of the accident, and the victim was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital in the police ambulance. He was reported as resting easy by hospital authorities late last night.

The fire was first noticed by Miss R. Martin of Chivas's confectionery store. Miss Martin was going to descend into the basement of the store, when, as she opened the cellar door, a great volume of smoke poured out.

An alarm was sent in by C. Barry at 7:05 p.m. The department made a quick run, arriving on the scene a short time after the alarm was given. The firemen were greatly hindered by the lack of light in the basement of the stores, and also the dense smoke. The smoke spread throughout the whole building, causing most of the damage.

The fire originated in the cellar, where a large stock of rubber tires were stored by the White Auto Co. who were the heaviest losers. Their entire stock was carried out into the street by members of the firm, and most of it was destroyed by smoke and water. The Dominion Printers had a large stock of paper on hand. Their loss was considerable. Other damage by smoke was reported by the Channery Wallpaper Company and the Dominion Seed Company.

JUDGE ROSE DISMISSES APPLICATION OF PEPALL

Newton Rowell, Recently Returned From Australia, Appears For Plaintiff.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Toronto, Oct. 12.—Justice Rose today dismissed the application made on behalf of Andrew Pepall to have the charges against him in the court of general sessions instead of at the assizes.

His lordship said he could not see why a judge sitting in chambers had any jurisdiction to order the crown attorney as to where certain cases should be tried. Besides, he said, the Pepall case was nowhere yet, as it had come before neither the assizes nor the sessions. Pepall is charged with having conspired with Peter Smith, then provincial treasurer of Ontario, to defraud the government.

N. W. Rowell, K.C., who only recently returned from a trip to Australasia, appeared for Pepall.

DUNLOP DEMANDS A SPEEDY TRIAL

Surrenders Himself Into Custody and Enters Plea of Not Guilty.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, Oct. 12.—W. W. Dunlop, former chief inspector of prisons and charities for Ontario, charged with theft, through his counsel, R. H. Greer, K.C., sprang a surprise when he surrendered himself into custody this afternoon and entered a plea of not guilty to the charge, electing trial in the county judge's criminal court before Judge Denton. He renewed bail again of $40,000, which was supplied by the same bondsmen.

Accused exercised his prerogative in surrendering into custody and demanding a speedy trial without a jury, as no indictment had been returned to have him tried at the assizes or sessions.

FUSILIERS' BANDMASTER PRESENTED WITH WATCH

Capt. A. W. Slatter Receives
Token of the Bandmen's Appreciation.

Last night at a local restaurant, Capt. A. W. Slatter, bandmaster of the Canadian Fusiliers, was presented with a gold watch and chain by the members of the band.

The presentation was made by F. H. Dawson, who read an address expressing the deep appreciation of the organization for the splendid services and leadership of Captain Slatter.

Captain Slatter thanked the members of the band for this symbol of their regard for him, given on the twentieth anniversary of his taking over the leadership of the Canadian Fusiliers band.

The address presented to Capt. Slatter read: "Dear Capt. Slatter.—We have met tonight to celebrate the completion of your 20 years' service with the Canadian Fusiliers' band.

"And as we remember your kindness and disposition, your readiness at all times to assist those who are not as fully endowed with musical talent as you are, and also the interest you have always manifested in the welfare of those composing the band, we are constrained to express to you our heartfelt appreciation and thanks.

"We have been encouraged by your example and without doubt have been inspired with an ambition towards greater attainment, and to this must be attributed the progress the band has made while under your direction.

"To tangibly, though feebly, express our regards for you and our gratitude to you, we beg your acceptance of this gold watch and chain. May it not only indicate the flight of time, but also bring to your remembrance the pleasant and profitable hours we, as a band, have enjoyed together.

"We trust that you and your good wife may long be spared to enjoy all the good things that may be in store for you in the days that are to be.

"On behalf of the members of the Canadian Fusiliers' Band, Robert Heard, S. Rogers, A. W. Wilkes, Gilbert Say, Fred Young, W. C. Traher, Fred Dawson."

GRAHAM DEFENDS RAILWAYS IN SARNIA CAMPAIGN SPEECH SUPPORTING W. T. GOODISON

West Lambton Independent
Liberal Accorded Notable Reception.

THEATRE FILLED

Minister of Railway Accounts
Expanding Trade Under Liberal Government.

Special to The Advertiser

Sarnia, Oct. 12.—With only one lapse, and that in the last federal election, the riding of West Lambton has returned a Liberal for nearly thirty years, but it has not in that span accorded a reception comparable to that given tonight to the Independent Liberal candidate, W. T. Goodison.

The Temple Theatre was packed to its capacity, and it was necessary to hold a large overflow meeting in the city hall. It seemed that the whole city and many from the rural parts were anxious to hear Mr. Goodison make his debut, and to hear the Hon. Geo. P. Graham and Senator Pardee take up the national questions of the campaign. When the latter speaker said there was not a riding in the country with such an ideal candidate for city and country, the audience in the Temple theatre rose and cheered wildly.

It seemed like a victory already won. Mr. Goodison, himself a manufacturer of agricultural implements, said he needed no high tariff to protect his business from competition, and he was sure the farmers of the riding also wanted none of Meighen's high protection to boost the cost of the things they used. The candidate said although he ran as an Independent Liberal, it was not because he was at variance in any way with the Liberal leader. He was proud to associate himself with Mr. MacKenzie King and his government for the legislature, brought in to reduce the burden of taxation during term of office.

Supports Liberalism.

"I am a firm believer in Liberal policies, and I don't believe that MacKenzie King or anyone else is infallible, and it is for that reason that I reserve the right to vote according to my judgment," Mr. Goodison said, and he thanked the progressives for the home they accorded him in asking him to be their standard-bearer, and if elected, he would do all he could to advance the interests of both city and rural dwellers. On the subject of the tariff Mr. Goodison made perhaps the most convincing statement made on a local platform, when he declared that in one year his own business, which was one of those fallaciously given as dependent for its life on a high tariff, it had the best year during the present government's regime in its history, over forty years, and business was constantly increasing.

Hon. Geo. P. Graham said Vincent Massey was one reply to Mr. Meighen's story of the ruin that was in store unless the tariff was raised, and Mr. Goodison was another. Hon. Mr. Graham gave a stirring address, in which he defended the railways he administered, and laid most of their difficulties at the door of Conservative legislation which brought them into existence. He said that no man who knew the railway situation in Canada should have attempted to place difficulties in the way of those who were administering them, as Mr. Meighen had done. Sir Henry Thornton, whom the Conservative leader decried, had shown himself the most efficient railway man on the American continent.

He had increased operating surplus from two to twenty millions in his first year. The C. N. P. deficiency was that of many subsidiary companies taken into amalgamation, and the debt on debentures. Mr. Graham declared after bearing a many burden, Canada was without doubt on the brink of prosperity. It was at this moment of the dawning of the sun that Mr. Meighen elected to say the country was going to the bad, and to spread his gloomy talk of ruin. It was unpatriotic, to say the least, that the leader of a party should use talk of depression and ruin, as a key to the door of power.

Protection Only Cry.

Mr. Meighen's only remedy for everything was a higher tariff. The Liberal policy on the tariff was to lower the duty on materials used in the basic industries of the country, mining, fishing, agriculture and manufacturing. Prosperity for Canada as a whole could but follow in the wake of prosperity for these industries. Mr. Meighen said the country was bad, and the government was bad. Yet the world, looking for a leader for the league of nations, had selected Senator Dandurand, a member of that government. "It is a case of the world against one man, and that man is Hon. Arthur Meighen," Mr. Graham declared, and the audience enjoyed a hearty laugh at the reply.

Even in his one and only policy, a tariff with which to reconstruct the country, Mr. Meighen had started at the top, and like all things foundationless, the structure crumbled.

"We must have a tariff, even the Progressives admit that," Mr. Graham proceeded, "but when we decided the time was at hand to start reconstruction after the post war period, we removed the sales tax from all material used in the development of the country's natural resources.

"Now our trade is developing, and the people feel that we are on the threshold of an era like that of 1896," he said. To the Progressives, or

USE SULPHUR IF SKIN BREAKS OUT

Just the moment you apply Menthol Sulphur to an itching, burning or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation, made into a pleasant cold cream, gives such a quick relief, even to fiery eczema, that nothing has ever been found to take its place. Because of its germ-destroying properties, it quickly subdues the itching, cools the irritation and heals the eczema right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or roughness. You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a jar of Rowles' Metho-Sulphur at any drug store.—Advt.

OLDEST RESIDENT OF AYLMER DIES

Charles Strong, 97 Years Old, Passes After Active and Honored Life.

Special to The Advertiser.
Aylmer, Oct. 12.—Death on Monday afternoon claimed Charles Strong, Aylmer's oldest citizen, who was in his 97th year. He had been confined to his bed for the past four weeks, and gradually grew weaker until the end. He made his home with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ayres, Talbot street, who gave him every care and fondly ministered to his needs. He has been a resident of Aylmer since 1868, and was honored and respected by many friends. He spent last winter with his son in California, returning to Aylmer alone early last summer. During his younger days he was a great traveller and successful salesman, and several times covered practically the whole of the North American continent for R. H. Page & Co. of Chicago.

Charles Strong was born on Jan. 25, 1829, on a farm near Colborne, Ontario, where he remained until 21 years of age, learning the carpenter trade. When he was 22 he settled at Sparta, Ontario, where he was employed in the firm of Hiram Kipp and Ezra Orr making chairs and wooden plows. This shop was destroyed by fire, and the company moved to Aylmer, and Mr. Strong came with them in March, 1868. While residing in Sparta he was married to Miss Margaret Mills, by whom he had one daughter, Mrs. Frank Heffer of South Malahide. Mrs. Strong died in 1860, and in 1862 he married Miss Frances Eakins, daughter of the late John Eakins of Sparta, by whom there is one son, James P. Strong, now residing at Carleton Place. When Charles Strong came to Aylmer it was but a small cross-road village, small when compared with Sparta. Dr. G. F. Clarke is the only physician now residing in Aylmer who was here when Mr. Strong first made his home here. For some years Mr. Strong was associated with the late Mr. E. Aldrich on the Aylmer Enterprise newspaper, now the Aylmer Express, finally purchasing the paper, which he conducted for a time with success.

The funeral will be held from his late residence on Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock, with interment in the Aylmer cemetery.
