A PROVISIONAL PEACE.

Paris, Jan. 11. - Vice-Admiral Doubassoff, the Russian member of the North Sea commission, is quoted by the Echo de Paris as having stated in an interview that he had submitted to Emperor Nicholas a programme for a reorganization of the navy, which is absolutely indispensable for success in the war against Japan. Twenty months will be necessary for its execution, Admiral Doubassoff thought the prospect for Vice-Admiral Rojestvensky's squadron was hopeless. He unhesitatingly declared that he considered a provisional peace would shortly be probable. Japan retaining Port Arthur and the territories which she has occupied. Russia, meanwhile, the admiral said, would prepare an vincible fleet for a future effort.

Panama, Jan. 11.—Earl Fitzwilliam and party, on the Old Castle Line steamship Veronique, which the earl had bought and refitted for the purpose, sailed from Panama recently for Cocos Island, on a hunt for treasure, long supposed to be buried there and often searched for. It appears that after blowing out the side of a hill on the island the earl and his companions descended into the hole that had been made, whereupon the hill caved in, injuring seven members of the crew of the Veronique, three of them badly, though not fatally. The latter are now in the hospital here. The rest of the crew are aboard the Veronique in the

The earl himself is all right. He sailed for England from Colon last Friday. He met with no success in his treasure hunt, which has evidently been abandoned.

However, having started out to try to convince the people that Mr. Ross is a scoundrel. his opponents are sticking at nothing. They are employing all the resources of invention and invective. The Mail and Empire calls him "a danger to the youth of Ontario," "a purchaser of crime," "a degrader and corrupter of the Province." Our local contemporary is running the Mail a close second. It roots among the musty records of an election trial in 1882 to show that Mr. Ross "nearly" escaped being disqualified, because a voter looked to him for payment of the price of a railway ticket sent to an absentee elector. Mr. Ross denied having made such a foolish promise and the judge leaned entirely in his favor. He is accused of procuring the appointment of Mr. J. B. Jackson to an office under the Dominion Government whereas Sir Richard Cartwright took the full responsibility of that appointment upon himself. There is nothing too picayune or too unprincipled to which his enemies will not stoop in pursuance of a deliberate policy of slander and defamation. The three or four election irregularities of which the Liberal party is accused, were mild in comparison with the frauds which were perpetrated in this Province, and Dominion Opposition? in other parts of the Dominion, year after year, in the interests of a Conservative Government, without a word best to set his party household in order | legal hours. and to banish corrupt influences, even to the extent of impairing the legitimate organization of the party, in ly every good measure the Governorder that there might not be a loop- ment has brought down in 20 years, responsible for the misconduct of some power to frame measures. agents of the Liberal party with more zeal than scruples, but he has resolved that even necessary party machinery shall be abandoned rather than run the risk of having some rascals attach themselves to it. He accepted the grant of self-government to the colonies because he saw it to be inevitable, but he would have imposed conditions which might have put an intolerable strain on the bonds of sympathy and kinship which unite the mother country and the self-governing colonies as nothing else could. He said in 1872: "But self-government, in my opinion, when it was conceded, ought to have been conceded as part of a great policy of imperial consolidation. ought to have been accompanied with an imperial tariff, by securities for the people of England for the enjoytheir trustee, and by a military code which should have precisely defined the means and the responsibilities by which the colonies should be defended, and by which, if necessary, this country should call for aid from the colonies themselves. It ought, further, to have been accompanied by some representative council in the metropolis which would have brought the relations with the home Government.'

Lord Minto, our late Governor-General, occasionally said a good thing, as, for instance, when he declared that Canada was no longer a plantation but a nation. Beaconsfield had the plantation idea of the colonies. He would have reserved their unappropriated lands exclusively for the purposes of the mother country. Formed to Give Municipal Freedom Now Agitating for an Assembly.

London, Jan. 7 .- With the plea that the people of Russia shall share in the government of that unhappy land, as proposed by representatives of the Provincial Zemstvos, the outside world will have all sympathy. Moral support of this kind is not likely to be of much help to the down-trodden peas-antry. If Russian popular opinion is Best girl skater-Miss Gladys Pinch. utterly powerless before such a re-Best comic costume-Miss Gladys actionary as M. Pobyedonostseff, procurator of the Holy Russian Synod, one need not expect the views of foreffort at reform in Russia's internal affairs hopeless. There are signs that before long some measure of selfgovernment will be forced from the reluctant hands of Emperor Nicholas. It has long been a delusion that the Czar is himself a reformer, in the power of a body of advisers who persuade him against the dictates of his placed with English and continental many years Miss Marsh has been an own heart. The only monarch by the peasants desiring a voice in the country's affairs was placed before his majesty shortly after his accession to the throne. The young Emperor not only refused to grant the request, but announced publicly that it was his determination to jealously preserve the autocracy of Russia. Such concessions as were granted by the imperial ukase of last year have not yet borne fruit. One must either assume that Nicholas desired them to be non-operative, or that his officials are deliberately ignoring his express commands. The latter is the favorite view of romancers about Nihilists and Siberia, but the facts indicate that what has happened has been by famous breach of faith with Finland shows the ease with which the im-

His majesty decreed that immediately ushered in. As a result. we see the same sort of nominal religious liberty as existed before the present Czar was born, The Jews are still outlaws, the victims of the Orthodox Church, whenever that august body cares to clamor for their heads. Other important nominal concessions of 1903 were certain rights of local selfgovernment and exemption from forced abor. Theoretically, the peasantry have rights of local self-government up to a point considerably beyond what they practically enjoy. During the of Alexander III, political development was not only retarded, but turned back, largely as a consequence of the assassination of his father. Many people, he said, were accustomed was primarily a Christian institution it should devote itself to Gospel work, not to attempts to gain 'legislation. they said, were not made morally better by legislation. The speaker thought that there was much truth in this. He hoped that none present were foolish enough to believe that what they had to hope for on election day was the betterment of the people. Only the Holy Spirit of God could regenerate and save, through the work of Christ. The value of law was the same as that of the ten commandments: to place a check on the increase of evil until Christ should come into the hearts. A prohibitory temperance law would lessen opportunities for evil, would "keep the hands of the young free from evil" until their hearts could be reached by practical

Mrs. Thornley emphasized the fact that the present was the time for prayer, considering the approaching possibility of temperance legislation. The speaker said that she was gathering statistics with regard to the evil that was done by London's 41 saloons. Rev. Dr. Chown then spoke. He said, in opening, that he was glad to

However, the speaker said that he himself intended to vote in the coming election just as if there were no great political parties. He would take only the individual candidates themselves into consideration. He hoped that by electing a sufficient number of representatives pledged to temperance, the party caucuses would be influenced. It was the opposition of sixteen members in a Liberal caucus which had defeated a bill to abolish the bars, which had been proposed by Premier Ross. The hope, therefore, lay in getting enough temperance candidates into the party caucus. The speaker was not going to vote at all unless for a candidate pledged to the aboliton of the bar and drinking at clubs.

Rev. James Livingstone, of the Well-
