The Earl's Son;

TWO HEARTS UNITED

CHAPTER XIX.

The liquor set his blood moving—he had felt cold ever since he had heard Oatway's story—and he rose with a flushed face and a kind of fever in his veins. He felt a desire to meet the man again, at once, to grapple with him, set his keen wits against the fellow's dull ones. Why had he made the appointment for to-morrow instead of to-night? Why had he left the ruffian time to babble in his drink? Would it not be possible to see him to-night?

He went upstairs to his room after a while, his mind still full of his desire to end his suspense, to meet Oatway and come to terms with him at once. Gibbon was in the adjoining room and heard his master pacing up and down; then suddenly the sound of the restless footsteps ceased, and Gibbon, peeping through the key-hole, saw Talbot put on an overcoat, turn up the collar, and, with a cap drawn well over his face, go to the door and lock out.

It was a time when all the servants were usually in their own part of the huge house, and Talbot seeing the way clear went down quietly and let himself out by the door of the back hall.

Gibbon waited a few minutes, then, slipping downstairs, caught up his own coat and hat, and, like his master, turning up the collar and drawing down the cap, followed stealthily. Talbot went through the shrubbery, pausing a moment or two to listen. Gibbon pausing also; then, skirting the lawn, walked quickly along the fence that divided the park from the road, presently passed into the road through the small gate, and, after stopping to light a cigar, sauntered along it, as if he were taking an after dinner stroll.

The night had grown rather cloudy, and the moon was obscured at times. Suddenly Gibbon caught the smell of rank tobacco coming from the wood on the left. His master had evidently also noticed it, for he stopped, and with a cautious glance round him he vaulted the fence and entered the wood.

Gibbon, stealthily slipping from tree to tree, followed; his light-gray eyes blinking like a ferret's, his lips hanging loosely like a blood-hound's.

CHAPTER XX.

Talbot stealthily approached the direction of the rank, smouldering tobacco, but in a roundabout way, so that he described something like a semicircle, keeping well behind the trees and slipping cautiously through the undergrowth.

As he did so, his foot struck against some object which gave out a metallic sound, and, thinking he had dropped his match-box, he stooped and felt amongst the bracken. To his surprise his hand came in contact with a knife. He picked it up and felt it over. It was open and the blade was sharp and pointed at the end. He had read of a bowie-knife, and it occurred to him that this was one. He closed the blade slowly and noiselessly and slipped the knife into the outer pocket of his dress-overcoat, then he crept on. Presently a rift in the clouds revealed the figure of the man Oatway.

He had slipped from the felled tree and was lying with his head and arm on the trunk. He was in a heavy and drunken sleep, and was breathing stertorously; close beside him lay the pipe with the tobacco that had fallen from it still smouldering in the bracken. Instinctively Talbot set his foot upon it and extinguished the vile-smelling embers.

Then he stood with his hands in his pockets and looked down at the sleeping man. What an irony of fate that he, Talbot Denby, the next Earl of Lynborough, should be in the hands of this wretch, this ruffianly sot; that a word from those brutal lips should be sufficient to ruin a life of usefulness and honour! For that was the way Mr. Talbot Denby put it to himself.

The man was in so deep, so drunk on a sleep that Talbot was almost tempted to stir him with his foot, as one is tempted to stir a sleeping reptile, and, indeed, he did draw nearer and raise his foot. Then suddenly an idea flashed across his mind. The man was sleeping so heavily—might it not be possible to take the papers from him without disturbing him?

But the thought of touching the man with his hand was so repugnant to Talbot that he put the idea from him; but it came back to him after a moment. Without the papers the fellow would be, if not harmless, at a disadvantage in making terms. No doubt he would attach the usual undue importance to them. It looked so easy to abstract them that the temptation grew, as Talbot looked down at him, and became irresistible. Noiselessly he moved slowly, inch by inch nearer, and kneeling down, stretched out his hand towards the rough fustian pocket; but as he touched it Oatway snored and moved his head. Talbot's hand flew back, but he held it ready, and, as the man did not awake, he approached the coat again and gently drew it back, discovering the pocket.

He could see the edge of the pocket book, and the sight of it increased his eagerness. With strained nerves and trembling fingers he delicately opened the mouth of the pocket, took hold of the edge of the book and was drawing it out slowly and cautiously when Oatway opened his blood-shot eyes.

For a moment he did not clearly see the figure kneeling in front of him, but the light happened to become better and Oatway saw who it was, saw the white hand at his pocket, and knowing instinctively what it meant, sprang to his feet with an oath and threw himself upon Talbot, who, not having had time to rise, went down.

"You thief!" cried Oatway, hoarsely, with a torrent of oaths. "You'd steal the papers, would you? You'd creep on a man when he's a-takin' his rest, his honest sleep, and rob him! I'll teach you!"

He dealt Talbot two or three heavy blows and attempted to hold him down with his knee. The blows maddened Talbot, and, swearing almost as vilely as the man, he wriggled from under the knee and managed to get to his feet. For a second or so the two men stood glaring at each other; then Oatway went for Talbot again. But Talbot was prepared for the attack.

He had never distinguished himself very greatly at the 'varsity sports, but there are some things which one learns at public schools and colleges which lie dormant, so to speak, until they are called for. One may forget one's Latin and Greek, but the boxing and wrestling remain. Talbot struck out with his left and caught his opponent on the jaw, and Oatway staggered and seemed about to go down; but the trunk of a tree saved him, and, pulling himself together, he made for Talbot with the rush of a bull. Talbot's arm shot out again, but Oatway dodged the blow and, throwing his arms round Talbot, tried to bring him to the ground; but Talbot had got his feet well apart and was able not only to hold his ground, but to get a good grip.

They swayed this way and that, firmly locked, their faces so close that Talbot, with a sickening sense of loathing, could feel on his cheek the man's horrible breath, see his blood-shot eyes glaring into his own.

It was a terrible struggle, one that looked as if it were for life or death; and Gibbon, from his place behind a tree, watched it with a sinister enjoyment. He expected every moment to see his master go under; but, strangely enough, Talbot seemed able to hold his own; and Gibbon's enjoyment was beginning to be marred by disappointment, when Oatway managed to thrust his leg between Talbot's, and Gibbon drew a long breath as Talbot went down and Oatway

Dangerous Throat Trouble Prevented By Nerviline

IT ENDS MISERY OF COLDS QUICKLY.

Don't wait till night. Get after your cold now,—this very minute, before it grows dangerous you should apply old-time "Nerviline."

Rub your chest and throat, rub them thoroughly with Nerviline. Relief will be immediate. Nerviline will save you from lying awake to-night, coughing, choking and suffering from congestion in the chest and acute pain in the throat.

Nerviline will break up that dull neuralgic headache—will kill the cold and chill at its very beginning—will save you from perhaps a serious illness.

To take away hoarseness, to break up a grippy cold, to cure a sore throat or bad cold in the chest you can use nothing so speedy and effective as Nerviline. For forty years it has been the most largely used family remedy in the Dominion. Time has proved its merit, so can you by keeping handy on the shelf the large 50c. family size bottle; small trial size 25c., sold by any dealer anywhere.

losing his balance, fell on top of him. Gibbon seated himself at the foot of the tree and, peering round, watched and waited for the denouement with a satisfaction no longer alloyed.

Talbot, half stunned by the fall and the weight of his assailant's body, lay quite still for a time, and Oatway, presumably with the idea of making his victory doubly sure, struck the prostrate man a cruel blow on the head. The blow seemed to have an effect contrary to that which Oatway had intended, for it roused Talbot's blood. He wriggled one side of himself free, his hand slid in a stealthy fashion to his pocket and fumbled there, and a moment afterwards Oatway sprang upwards with a sharp, guttural cry, clapped one hand to his side, and, beating the air with the other, fell forward on his face as if he had been stabbed!

In his amazement it this sudden change in the performance which he had been enjoying so hugely, Gibbon rose and took a step forward; then he changed his mind and, sinking down at full length, lay quite still, his head raised just sufficiently above the bracken to permit him to see the conclusion of the drama.

As Oatway fell Talbot got to his feet and stood staring, the knife-red now—still grasped in his hand. For a while he stood panting heavily, his eyes fixed straight before him, as if he were still only half conscious of what had occurred; then his eyes fell to the motionless figure at his feet, his white face went livid, and his mouth worked convulsively. He looked from the knife to the still form with its hands clutching the bracken, its hideous face, all drawn and distorted, faintly showing, and back again to the knife. He could scarcely realize it. Had he really stabbed the wretch? He had felt for the knife, opened it, dealt the blow mechanically. He must have hurt the man, perhaps seriously. A nuisance!

There would be a fuss now! The brute deserved it, of course; but the consequences! He must get him up, bring him to, help him home.

He went to Oatway and strode him with his foot. "Get up!" he said, hoarsely. "Don't lie there—shamming. Get up! You brought it on yourself—you struck me, you fool!"

The man did not move, and Talbot, with a mixture of irritation and disgust, bent down and turned him over. In doing so he saw a deep, wet stain on the side of the figure. He shrank back and glanced at his hands—they were wet—red. He bent lower, looked hard at the face—how white it was, how still and—'and calm!—then thrust his hand inside the waistcoat. Dear Sirs:

In acknowledging receipt of cheque in payment of my endorsement policy now maturing, I wish to thank you for the prompt way in which you have put my claim through. I did not have to wait a single day for my money as the papers were all in order beforehand.

I am pleased, too, with the way my investment has turned out. Besides having my insurance protection for $1,000, I have got all my money back and $400 besides. The Canada Life has my best good wishes for its continued success.

Yours truly,

Divorced Life

By Helen Hessing Fuesste

One Woman's Way

"I am going to make a confidante of you, if you don't mind," said Marian to Miss Barker, in obedience to a sudden impulse, as they left the bench on the campus and strolled on through the sunlit streets.

"Do," urged Miss Barker. "If there's anything on earth I can do to help you please say the word."

"I came to New York to find work," began Marian bluntly. "Aside from a bit of trifling theatrical experience back home, I have absolutely no wage-earning record to point to. I've found the city's stage managers' offices literally clogged with applicants for work. I've hunted and hunted, but without success or encouragement. Can you suggest anything?" she wound up, half regretful that she had poured the secret of her trouble into the listener's ear.

"Let me see," said the other thoughtfully. "One friend of mine here has opened a shoppers' bureau, at which she seems to be making a good deal of money. She has a staff of assistants who assist strangers in the city to do their shopping. It is interesting and full of opportunity. I'll go and see her, if you like, and find out if she needs another assistant. Better still, let's jump on a subway and run down to see her together. Her name is Martha Rush, and she has a suite of offices in the Metropolitan Building. What do you say?"

Marian accepted with eagerness, a few minutes later the two were being hurried through the subway tube toward Madison Square. Amazed at the originality of Miss Rush's shoppers' bureau, Marian felt more keenly conscious than ever of her own lack of that originality which in New York City its possessor may convert into money.

"They were whirled by elevator to one of the lofty suites of offices in the famous business block, and found Miss Rush seated at a large flat-topped desk firing dictation rapidly at her stenographer. She was a woman brimming with nervous energy, one of those feminine business dynamoes which fairly click and sparkle. Marian, on being presented to her, felt at once that she stood in the presence of a superior being, of an alert and efficient participant in the big city's affairs.

"Sorry," she said, with apparently genuine regret, when she had listened to Miss Barker's statement. "The trouble with this business of ours is that we require young women who then maybe I can try you out. You seem to have the right personality for a job like this."

More than ever, as she left the office of Miss Rush with Miss Barker, was Marian impressed with the difficulty of becoming a cog in New York's business machinery. Her unfitness for successful job hunting galled and depressed her.

"Two years ago," broke in Miss Barker, "Miss Rush divorced her husband in Cincinnati and came to New York. She had never had a job in her life. Hasn't she accomplished wonders? I think she's admirable."

Dear Sir,—My object in writing is to show the readers of your paper, what Mr. Edwin A. Grosz, Editor and Publisher of the "Boston Post" has done for the "Sealers Fund." These words have a mournful sound. In these days newspapers have a great influence among all classes; so the Editor of the Post proved himself a live wire on this occasion, notwithstanding his charitable and ministering spirit, his pocket book and paper were accessible.

Please bear in mind, Mr. Christian Editors, that civilization will never be solved by stirring up animosity; incalculable harm is done by such contempt. The people of these days will not stand for such balderdash; what the cruel kings and queens of old had done in their days of vengeance, and how rebellious the people were. This kind of reading is no longer tolerated among Christian people. It is about time to forget and

The Dust Problem

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—I noticed in the report of the proceedings at a recent meeting of the City Commissioners a reference to the periodic question of the dust nuisance.

This is a greater problem than it might appear to most of us, much more than a public nuisance and inconvenience during the dry days of the summer, as it commences with the foundation of road construction and takes in the question of the life of the road. It commands the attention of the Engineer, the chemist, the physician and the civic politician, and is complicated by the fact that we are both the producers and the consumers of this undesirable article.

The conditions of our every day life are changing; the traffic on our streets is much greater than formerly; the age of the automobile is on us, and the effect of the new self-driven vehicle is such as to shorten the life of our streets and increase the nuisance by making more dust.

We must therefore provide for this new set of conditions which we bring about, but how? Oiling of streets commenced about twenty years ago in California, but lack of knowledge of the chemistry of these oils by engineers and of the suitability or non-suitability of many of these oils led to dire failure and to the prejudicing of public opinion.

Then tars as a paint or covering for the old macadam roads came into use in England and France, and afterwards in Germany and the United States, but it was soon found that in tars as in oils, there were great differences in their suitability owing to their composition, for the purposes of road treatment, and the problems involved are being handled by engineers and chemists who make special study of this subject.

In the construction of our city streets we are limited to say four or five classes of material. These are, stone in blocks or in cobbles, asphalt, wood blocks and concrete. In seeking to suppress the dust nuisance, it might be well for us to consider whether, in the long run, it would not be cheaper to have our streets re-constructed, or covered with such a material as to do away altogether with its source, for we must know that the production of dust means the destruction of our streets, and the money involved in the removing of the dust and mud and replacing it in the upkeep of the road by new material is a considerable annual tax on the civic funds.

Falling the re-construction of our streets, the end desired may be sought by permeating or penetrating the roads with bituminous or other liquid or some liquid substance. If we had Grand Falls near the city we might make use of the waste liquors from the sulphite plant, which can be treated and made into a very fair road-binder.

As a palliative we might suggest the use of calcium chloride, which is a very efficient dust layer and could be applied from the watering car or sown like salt in the street.

This substance has the power of keeping wet and remain on the street until washed away by the rains, when a new application would require to be made. It is very efficient, harmless and far ahead of the present method of wetting our streets with the pure article from Twenty Mile Pond.

Yours very truly,
W. F. CANNING.

Striking Naval Display at Spithead.

London, July 11.—All the British fleets and flotillas in home waters which nowadays means practically the whole of the British navy, has been ordered to be at Spithead on July 17, to spend a week-end and pass in review before the Admiral of the fleet, King George V.

The mobilization, which is in the nature of a test, is this year taking the place of the usual manoeuvres, which the present Admiralty Board has decided can't teach the officers nothing that they do not know already, besides being a very heavy expense. The ships and auxiliaries, which will number some 400 craft, the largest fleet ever assembled, will include every class of vessel from the big 'dreadnought' battleships to the smallest submarines, aeroplanes and hydroplanes.

The spot is an ideal one for the assembling of a great fleet, the one stretch of water in the world that seems to have been designed by nature as the frame for great naval pageants. It gives the public, as well as the officers and men, an opportunity of seeing the great fleet the upkeep of which costs the British taxpayer so much, gathered together as though ready for actual warfare, for every ship will be so manned and outfitted that she could go into immediate battle. The reserves will be called out and the cadets from Osborne and Dartmouth Colleges will be embarked, as they would in wartime, and after the King has concluded his visit, they will go for a short cruise with the entire fleet.

Great Temperance Worker.

The death of the Rev. Very Rev. Michael J. Clarke, late Parish Priest of Torbay, St. John's, Nfld., which occurred at St. Michael's, Haddon Road, Clontarf, removes from our midst a most hospitable and cultured Priest. It is just three years ago since Father Clarke retired from the arch-diocese of St. John's, after some forty years' active service on that mission. He was ordained in 1871, by the late Bishop Power, whose brilliant pupil he had been at Clonliffe. During the first two years of his priesthood, he served God's work nobly and well in Fortune Bay; and in 1873, was appointed curate of Torbay. Here he devotedly performed his duties, and on being promoted to the position of Parish Priest, his redoubled efforts obtained for him a deservedly high reputation, of which any clergyman might well be proud. He organized and satisfactorily accomplished, many works of restoration and reformation; and the Church and Convent, the Presbytery and the Schools, stand to-day as an everlasting testimony to his zeal and ability. A matter which is worthy of special mention in connection with the career of Father Clarke, is the great interest he evinced in the total abstinence movement. Most energetically, and with untiring zeal, he strove in this capacity, for the moral and social welfare of the people under his care. The anniversary of the Society's foundation in his parish was All Saints' Day, and as each year went by, that day was always a gala occasion in Torbay. It was then that the popular Father Clarke was justifiably proud of the part he had taken in that great cause. Personally, he was also a most hospitable man. He was a man of wide reading and liberal culture, and his library was a most extensive one. His death will be keenly regretted by the hosts of friends in St. John's, as well as in Ireland.

The funeral will take place this morning, at eleven o'clock, to Glasnevin Cemetery, after Office and High Mass, at the Church of St. John the Baptist, Clontarf.

VISIT OF DUKE OF CONNAUGHT

Hearty Reception Accorded Distinguished Visitor—Address of Welcome and Reply—Other Notable Functions.

Yesterday morning the official landing of H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught took place in the presence of thousands of people.

At 9.30 His Excellency Governor Davidson went on board H. M. S. Essex and along with Captain Watson of the warship accompanied His Royal Highness to the shore at 10 o'clock. The ship then fired 21 guns. At the King's Wharf the Duke received a right royal and enthusiastic reception from the multitude of patriotic people assembled in that neighbourhood. A guard of honour consisting of 40 police lined the pier and at the moment of landing H. R. H. was greeted with vociferous cheers following the rendition of the National Anthem by the Methodist Guards band.

Chairman Gosling then read the city's address of welcome after which the following were presented to the Duke:—The City Commissioners, the Premier, Executive members, clergymen and consuls representing foreign nations.

ADDRESS.

St. John's, Nfld.,
July 9th, 1914.

To Field Marshal His Royal Highness The Duke of Connaught and Strathearn, Governor General of Canada, K. G., Etc., Etc., Etc.

May It Please Your Highness:—

On behalf of the citizens of St. John's, we, the Municipal Board, extend to Your Royal Highness a heartfelt welcome to our City and tender you an expression of high appreciation of the honour you have conferred upon its inhabitants by your visit to this, the oldest town in the British Empire Beyond the Seas, and the capital of Britain's most Ancient Colony.

The community of Newfoundland is perhaps unique in the fact that it has been created, it may be said, altogether by settlers from the United Kingdom. As a consequence loyalty to our King, reverence for our Royal House, love of law and order are traditions which lie deep in the hearts of our people and only await the presence of a member of the Royal Family to fan them into enthusiastic manifestation. How this was shown when our late loved King Edward the Seventh, of glorious memory, your Royal Highness's revered brother, visited St. John's in 1860, as Prince of Wales, is a matter of history; how it was shown when our present King, George Fifth to whom be long life and a happy reign, came to us in 1901 will be a matter of happy remembrance.

We beg of Your Royal Highness to convey to His Majesty an assurance of the unalterable devotion and love of His people in St. John's and Newfoundland generally, and their ardent hope that under His high and noble influence the Great Empire of which we form but a small part may be linked closer and still closer together in the bonds of a common loyalty to the Throne and in the splendid ambition of working out a common destiny.

In conclusion the Municipal Board trust that your Royal Highness's short stay in the Colony may be immensely pleasurable, and that you will have a safe return to Canada, to continue for a space the high office which you have done so much to dignify and popularize.

Signed:—

REPLY TO ADDRESS.

St. John's.
Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen:—
The nature of my reception during my voyage round the coast of Newfoundland has already shown me the deep loyalty of your people and their genuine attachment and devotion to the Throne and to the Empire.

Your welcome to me to-day and the terms of your eloquent address have shown me, in a most convincing fashion, that these sentiments are deeply rooted in St. John's, your capital city. I thank you from my heart for your welcome and you may rest assured that, when I return to the old country, I will not fail to tell our Sovereign that he has so many loyal subjects than the people of Newfoundland and that their affection has a permanent note in it, since his visit to St. John's some thirteen years ago.

Ladies and Gentlemen, I can assure you that I have greatly enjoyed my visit to your island and am sincerely sorry that it is now drawing to a close. I have been struck by the wildness and beauty of your scenery; I have been impressed by the number and size of your splendid harbours, but above all I carry away the conviction that Newfoundland, old as her history, is a land of great future possibilities. I am glad to hear that these possibilities are now being increasingly developed, as, with the growth of your industries, the prosperity and comfort of your people will become more and more independent of circumstances.

While hesitating to touch on so tragic a subject, I venture to express the deep sympathy that I felt at the news of the sealing disaster, which is fresh in all our memories.

If there were no other sentiment common to British subjects we should still be united by our common association with what we have come to regard as our special element, namely the sea. Consequently when the news of your disaster, with its mingled tragedy and heroism, became known, the sympathy with you all through the Empire was most genuine. I can only trust that it will be many a long year before your sturdy fishermen are visited by any such calamity.

INSPECTION OF BRIGADES.

Following the ceremony at the Institute, the procession wended its way by way of Water Street, McBride's Hill, Church Hill, Queen's Road, Rawlins' Cross and Military Road to St. George's Field, where an inspection of the Brigades took place. The brigades present were the C.L.B., Lieut. Colonel Rendell; C.C.C., Lt.-Col. Conroy; Highlanders, Lt.-Col. Paterson; King Edward Brigade, Hr. Grace, Lt.-Col. James; Frontiersmen, Lt.-Col. Holloway, and King George Brigade, Carboner, Major Duff. Each battalion was inspected by H.R.H. who was accompanied by Governor Davidson, the Captain of the Essex, Rt. Hon. Sir E. P. Morris, Lt.-Col. Rendell and Aides-de-Camp. The brigades formed up in quarter columns and afterwards marched past in four deep to the music of their own bands. Next the officers of the different brigades were presented to His Royal Highness by the Lieut. Colonels, including Major Hutchings, Lieut. Ayre and Captain Mews, of the Methodist Guards. H.R.H. addressed the brigades, congratulated them on their appearance and also on the admirable way they went through the manoeuvres. He expressed surprise at the large gathering of young soldiers on parade, and expressed the hope that they would prove worthy sons of the Empire. His Royal Highness and suite then made their way to Government House via Military Road and King's Bridge Road and through the Eastern Gate. His Royal Highness had luncheon with the Governor.

OPENING OF BOWRING PARK.

Thousands of people wended their way yesterday afternoon to Bowring Park by train, vehicle, motor car and by walking. The Park was clothed in the fresh foliage of early summer and was a delight to the visitors. On a stand erected in the Park the Duke of Connaught and his suite the Governor and Lady Davidson, representatives of the donors Hon. Edgar Bowring, Mr. John Munn, Mr. Eric Bowring, the Premier, Sir Edward Morris and a number of invited guests too their place.

THE PREMIER'S ADDRESS.

Your Royal Highness, Your Excellency, My Lord, Ladies and Gentlemen:—
We are assembled here to-day for the purpose of participating in the ceremony of opening and dedicating the beautiful Park by which we are surrounded, to the use of the public of St. John's and their friends who may visit it from time to time. Nature has done a great deal for it in the assembling of river and stream, hill and dale, forest and vista, but under the magic wand of the donors, and the artists working under them, it has been transformed into an abode of rare beauty.

We are privileged to-day in having the ceremony of the opening of the Park, the bestowing of the name by which it will be known hereafter, and the dedication of it to the public, performed by His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught. His Royal Highness comes to us to-day, not alone as a great pro-consul of Empire, the Governor General of our great, friendly neighbour and sister, the Dominion of Canada, that but recently in the disaster which cast a gloom over the whole land, showed in a tangible manner its sympathy with our people, but he comes to us as the uncle of the Sovereign of the British Empire, the greatest Empire the world has ever seen, an Empire which knows no sunset, an Empire of which it is our proudest boast to be the oldest and most loyal portion. He comes to us as the son of the great Queen Victoria, who for over sixty years ruled over Newfoundland, and under whose beneficent and glorious reign responsible government was granted to us, and many of the restrictions and burdens under which we laboured through foreign treaties removed. He comes as a brother of our late King Edward, who contributing to the cordial relations with France and other European powers, rendered it possible for British statesmen to remove from the shoulders of Newfoundland the burdensome exactions and restrictions of French treaties. He comes to us in his personal capacity as a general of the British Army, a great Englishman, one who has worked in the interests of the Imperial cause, and the Empire, and for these, and for many other reasons, it will forever add interest to the work in which we are engaged to-day, that his name should be so closely associated with it, and we one and all tender him a right royal welcome here to-day.

The beautiful Park which will be presently dedicated to you as you are aware, the gift of Messrs. Bowring Brothers to the people of St. John's and their friends who visit St. John's from time to time. It is given by them to mark the centenary of one hundred years successful business and trade in Newfoundland. There are many of the older people here to-day who could better testify than I, to their record amongst us, and indeed there must be thousands all over the country who can bear out the statement, that in all the relations of the firm with the public during that long period they have maintained a high standard of integrity and liberality in all their dealings. Further, they have shown a commendable spirit of enterprise—a sporting spirit, if you like—in investing large portions of their profits and capital in the risks attendant on the prosecution and development of the fisheries of Newfoundland and its resources. And, looking around after one hundred years' triumphant career, for some fitting form of commemorating the event, some way by which the milestone they have passed, the red letter day in their career might be perpetuated. I know of no better means they could have selected than the gift to those amongst whom they have worked and lived, of this beautiful Park.

On behalf of the people of St. John's and those who in the years to come will visit the Park, and on behalf of all, I thank His Royal Highness for the pleasure he has given us all in coming here to perform this ceremony; and I thank Messrs. Bowring Brothers for their generous gift to the people, and particularly do I thank Hon. Edgar Bowring for the adoption of the idea of this Park, and also his associate directors, Messrs. John S. Munn and Eric Bowring, who have so ably assisted him in working out his plans, and I feel that all will join with me in expressing the hope that when another century rolls by the name of "Bowring" will be still a household word in Newfoundland, and its trade will have continued to expand and flourish, and on that occasion some other educating and ennobling work may be dedicated to the public in commemoration of their 200th anniversary, by a worthy act of our present Royal House.

I now beg to request His Royal Highness to graciously open and dedicate the Park, and I beg to present to His Royal Highness the representative of the donors, the Hon. E. R. Bowring.

Hon. Edgar Bowring, on stepping forward, received an ovation from the vast concourse. He said:—
Your Royal Highness, Your Excellency, My Lord, and Ladies and Gentlemen:—

It is with very deep feelings of pleasure and gratification that we also welcome here to-day His Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught who has been good enough to come here and open this little Park of ours during his very short visit to us. I would wish to thank him very much indeed for having come here, and to say how very much we appreciate the high honour he has conferred upon us. The visit of His Royal Highness to Newfoundland is a most important thing, for it shows us, in this most Ancient and Loyal Colony, small though it be, that he has taken the trouble to come all the way from Canada to pay a visit to this island and go around our shores. That we appreciate this to the fullest extent I need hardly say. The pleasant duty devolving upon me to-day is to present this Park (which we have been at work upon during the past two years), to the Commissioners of the City, to be held in trust by them for the benefit of our City and the Colony generally, and I may say that I do so with extreme pleasure, living as I have been practically all my life amongst you, having been born here and my father and mother before me. It might be interesting to state just at this moment that out of our directorate of twelve members, eight were born in St. John's, and although many of them have had to leave here many years ago, yet they maintain and keep up a keen interest in the Colony. When this memorial centennial gift was first brought forward, I found that every one of my co-directors were just as anxious as I was myself, that this Park should be given to the City. The Park, I think, promises to fill an urgent public need, for we find that even now, with insufficient communication with the town, there are one to two thousand people coming here each fine Sunday and holiday, and I have no doubt that later on, when we get better communication, and when the Park is completed, the number of visitors will be very largely increased. As you know, the Park is by no means complete yet, and it is our duty to finish it, and we intend to go ahead with it as speedily as possible, and when completed finally hand it to the City Commission to look after, but until it is finished we will do what is necessary, and put it in as good order as we possibly can, in the hope that in the future it may be of great benefit to the whole town as a recreation ground and beautiful place to visit. Whilst we will hand this over when complete to the care of the City Commissioners, I would like to say that we are at all times only too willing to co-operate with the Commissioners towards its successful development and maintenance and we shall always take an interest in this project, but for successful operation we must have the public with us, and in this connection cannot do better than commend you to the signs we have placed in different parts of the Park, viz., CITIZENS PROTECT YOUR PROPERTY. It is up to you to do this, for in spite of all we may do, in spite of all the Commissioners may do, we must have the help and support of the public.

Your Royal Highness, I would like to ask you to officially declare this Park open to the public, and hand over the title deeds to the Chairman of the Commission for him to hold in trust for the benefit of our citizens and the public generally.

THE PARK DECLARED OPEN.

His Royal Highness was then graciously pleased to make the formal presentation, which he did in the following words:—
"Ladies and Gentlemen,—
"It is now my pleasing duty to declare this park open, and may it ever be a source of pleasure and enjoyment to the citizens of St. John's and to Newfoundland in general."
Then, speaking to Chairman Gosling, of the Municipal Board, he added:
"In handing these papers (the title deeds of the Park) over to you, it is a great pleasure to me to be associated with so splendid a gift as the one of Bowring Park."

CHAIRMAN GOSLING'S ADDRESS.

Mr. Gosling, in accepting the gift on behalf of the citizens, said:—

Your Royal Highness, Your Excellency, My Lord, Ladies and Gentlemen:

It falls to my office, on behalf of the Citizens of St. John's, to receive at the hands of Your Royal Highness the title deeds of this beautiful Park—the gift of the firm of Bowring Bros., Ltd., to the city. It was the wish of the generous donors to commemorate in some way the centenary of their firm, and they elected to do so by presenting this delightful Park to the people of St. John's.

The record of Messrs. Bowring Bros. has been an honourable one. For over one hundred years they have been associated with the chief business interests of the country and their name has been a synonym for open, honest and fair dealing. Their firm has prospered, and has now branches in many parts of the world, but they have not forgotten that it was in St. John's that the foundations of their business were laid, and it is here that they have chosen to place their memorial. It has occurred to me that perhaps this might have been, that "garden" to which the merchants of St. John's conducted Sir Humphrey Gilbert when he landed upon these shores in 1583. But when he reached the spot he found it was not a cultivated garden. As the narrator of the voyage thus quaintly expresses it:—"But nothing appeared more than nature it a life without arte, who confusedly had brought forth roses abundantly wild but odiferous and to sense very comfortable."

For and on behalf of the present Municipal Board, I can promise that during their short regime, so far as the duty may involve them, they will be pleased to co-operate with the donors in the completion of the Park, and I feel sure that the care of this beautiful Park will be one of the most congenial tasks of our successors in office.

It is my pleasing duty, on behalf of the people of St. John's, to acknowledge the receipt of this magnificent gift, and to tender to Messrs. Bowring Bros. the sincere and heartfelt thanks of the community.

I also beg to tender to Your Royal Highness our appreciation of the honour you have conferred upon us by declaring this Park to be open for our use and enjoyment.

His Royal Highness was then presented by Mr. Bowring with a silver spade, on which was the following inscription:—

Presented to
His Royal Highness
THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT, K.G.
on the occasion of the opening by him of
BOWRING PARK,
St. John's, Newfoundland,
July 15th, 1914.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, the Royal Party and guests proceeded to another part of the grounds, where His Royal Highness planted a Lime or Linden tree to commemorate the occasion. Mr. Cochius, the Landscape Artist, to whose genius and personal direction is due the admirable blending of Nature and Art into its rare scenic beauty, placed the tree in the earth, holding it whilst the Duke threw three shovelfuls around the roots, and until the planting was completed.

Thereafter the Duke and guests were invited to partake of refreshments, which were served at an adjoining tent. His Royal Highness, accompanied by His Excellency and Lady Davidson, then left the grounds, and proceeded to the site of the Reid Sanatorium, where the foundation stone was to be laid.

LAYING OF FOUNDATION STONE OF NEW SANATORIUM.

The next important event which will remain historic was the formal laying of the foundation stone of the Tuberculosis Sanatorium, which is the munificent gift of W. D. Reid, Esq., President of the Reid Newfoundland Company. At the site of the new hospital a large concourse of people assembled to witness the ceremony. His Royal Highness and party were received by a guard of honor of sixteen members from the Newfoundland Highlanders of which Mr. Reid is an esteemed friend and supporter. The site of the Sanatorium is an ideal one, mainly because it has its attractions like Bowring Park. The foundation stone contained a box of silver coins, paper currency of the Colony and latest editions of newspapers. Mr. Reid was presented by His Excellency the Governor to His Royal Highness, and at the request of the generous donor, laid formally the foundation stone of the new hospital for the treatment of Consumption. A miniature silver trowel was presented by Mr. Reid to the distinguished visitor after which His Excellency Sir Walter Davidson, spoke happily and eloquently on the two memorable functions that had taken place, emphasizing the generosity of the Reids and Bowring who were found ever willing and anxious to promote and advance any project that would be advantageous for our people. He contrasted the Park with the Hospital, the former for the pleasure of the people, the latter for the suffering humanity who are afflicted with the dread disease—Consumption. His Excellency intimated his conviction in believing that the day was not far distant when we would be able to cope with the White Plague. The first speech that he made in Canada, His Royal Highness drew attention to the necessity of fighting the disease at the outset and he was most pleased to know that the movement was being forwarded in consequence of this Royal visit. Canada demonstrated her generosity towards Newfoundland by her contribution at the time of the sealing disaster to aid those who were bereft of their bread winners and he thanked His Royal Highness who is the Governor General of Canada for the generosity of the Dominion. In conclusion His Excellency, on behalf of the people, who were proud of seeing such an illustrious member of the Royal Family amongst us, thanked the Duke for accomplishing at the opening of the Park and the laying of the foundation stone of the new Sanatorium.

MR. FURLONG'S ADDRESS.

Your Royal Highness, Your Excellency, My Lord, Ladies and Gentlemen:

On behalf of the Reid Mtd. Co., and of Mr. W. D. Reid, I desire to thank Your Royal Highness for laying the corner stone of this Hospital. I trust that the foundation of the work of making provision for those who may be afflicted with the disease, having been begun under such auspicious auspices for its continued success may remain favourable, and that the expressed gratitude of those who sufferings may be alleviated within the walls of this Sanatorium, will be the finest and most lasting memorial of Your Royal Highness's visit to our Colony. We recognize and appreciate the generosity of Your Royal Highness in giving to us a portion of the time and labour devoted to the Government of your great country, and while we endeavor to honor you, it is very gratifying that Your Royal Highness is willing to give to us service. We have traditions of the visit of William IV and memories of those of Edward VII and his Present Majesty, and it is a matter of grateful acknowledgment on the part of this Company that Your Royal Highness should approve of and inaugurate this benevolent and philanthropic work of the President and his brothers, and Your Royal Highness may be assured that this event will remain in our memories until it, too, becomes a tradition and is one of those vasty important, apparently unimportant, little things which will draw closer, if possible, the tie which binds Newfoundlanders to the Throne and the Royal Family.

H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught followed in an impressive and eloquent speech, telling of how much pleasure it gave him to know that since the commencement of a vigorous campaign against consumption in Canada there has been a remarkable decrease and that doctors were hopeful of eventually stamping it out entirely. At the close His Royal Highness said:—"I thank you one and all for the kind manner in which I have been received this afternoon and on the streets of St. John's. It has been a great pleasure to me."

Enthusiastic cheers were then given for the Duke by the multitude of people present.

DINNER AT GOVERNMENT HOUSE.

His Excellency the Governor entertained His Royal Highness at dinner last night. Among the guests were the Bishop of Newfoundland, Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Bond, Rt. Hon. Sir Edward Morris, Hon. R. J. Squires, Hon. J. R. Bennett, Hon. S. D. Blandford, Hon. M. P. Cahin, Hon. J. Crosbie, Hon. R. K. Bishop, Hon. M. P. Gibbs, Hon. C. H. Emerson, Mr. Woodford, Mr. Piccott, Mr. Kent, Mr. Clift, Speaker Goodson, Mr. Gosling, Mr. Ellis, Mr. W. D. Reid, Hon. E. R. Bowring, the Captain of the Calypso.

THE DUKE AS GRAND MASTER VISITS MASONIC TEMPLE.

Last night at 10 o'clock His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught as the Most Worshipful Grand Master of the English Masons visited the Masonic Temple. The exterior of the Temple was one blaze of white and coloured lights, marking the outlines of the features of the building and relieved by Masonic designs and a Dical Crown. The interior, hall, corridors and stairway were decorated tastefully with bunting and foliage, and reflected credit on Brothers Evans and Baggis, who had charge of the decorations.

At 8:30 the Lodge Room was open, Director of Ceremonies, Past Master Barker being in charge, assisted by the Grand Stewards.

At 9:30 W. Bro. Dr. Brehm, W. M. of St. John's Lodge, No. 579, opened the Lodge. Deputy District Grand Master Stott, accompanied by the officers and members of the District Grand Lodge, entered the Lodge Room. Bro. Arthur Mews acting as organist. A District Grand Lodge was opened by Bro. Stott, after which the R. W. D. G. M. Duder and officers of the District Grand Lodge, under the Scotch Constitution were received. By instruction of the D. G. M. Clift a deputy withdrew in order to introduce the Most Worshipful Grand Master.

At 10 o'clock His Royal Highness arrived, and as they stepped from the automobile, the Connaught Coat of Arms were flashed from the front of the Temple. A guard of honor, consisting of a detachment of the Church Lads Brigade lined the approach to the Temple.

As the Grand Master was conducted to the Throne, a verse of the National Anthem was sung. After the Grand Honors had been given, D.G.S. Edgar read the Address of Welcome.

The Director of Ceremonies then placed it in a beautiful casket, and delivered it to D.G.M. Clift, who asked the Grand Master to accept it.

ADDRESS OF WELCOME FROM THE ENGLISH BROTHERS.

To Field Marshal His Royal Highness Arthur William Patrick Albert, Duke of Connaught and Strathearn, K.G., etc., etc., etc., Most Worshipful Grand Master of the Freemasons of England.

Most Worshipful Grand Master:—
On more than one occasion it has been the joy and privilege of this most ancient of the British Dominions overseas to welcome members of your Royal and illustrious line, but never hitherto has the Grand Master of our beloved Order honored Newfoundland with his gracious presence.

As Free and Accepted Masons, and, therefore, as loyal citizens, we extend to your Royal Highness a cordial and Masonic welcome. We rejoice in the opportunity afforded by your visit to express our fervent admiration for one whose personal merits and unexcelled service have endeared him to Britons the wide world over.

The presence of your Royal Highness in our midst marks the dawning of a new epoch in the long and honourable history of Freemasonry in our Island home. Succeeding generations have looked to the East, and guided by well-skilled Masters, have wrought the great and beneficent designs of the Grand Geometrician. At times the workmanship may have been faulty, and the ashlar have remained rough and rugged, but the glorious tenets of our Order have been upheld. Your visit to us will be an inspiration and an incentive to the cultivation of those Masonic virtues so pre-eminently exemplified throughout your career.

That the Most High may continue to abundantly bless and prosper our Order under your wise and gracious guidance, and that you, Most Worshipful Grand Master, may long be spared in health and vigor to rule the myriads of Craftsmen enrolled on the registers of the United Lodge of England, in the fervent prayer of every member of the Ancient Fraternity in Newfoundland.

We pray, moreover, that you may be enabled for many years to come, in health and happiness, to add increasing lustre to the long and honourable record of devoted service to the Fatherland and Empire, for which your Royal Highness is so justly and universally distinguished.

Signed on behalf of the Free and Accepted Masons of Newfoundland, under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of England.

J. A. CLIFT,
District Grand Master.
J. ALEX. ROBINSON,
District Grand Registrar.
W. J. EDGAR,
District Grand Secretary.

Dated at the Masonic Temple,
St. John's, Nfld., July 15th, 1914.

In presenting the Address and Casket the District Grand Master spoke of the pride and pleasure which the Fraternity felt, and their profound sense of the great honor thus conferred on them. He also expressed the thanks of the District Grand Lodge, and of Freemasons generally, for the generous donation by the Board of Benevolence towards the Sealing Disasters Fund.

H. R. H. the Grand Master was graciously pleased to accept the Address, and replied as follows:—

H. R. H. THE GRAND MASTERS' REPLY.

Most Worshipful District Grand Master and Brethren of Newfoundland:—

It affords me the greatest satisfaction to visit your Masonic Temple, and I have listened with great pleasure to the words of the loyal address which have been so well read by your District Grand Secretary. I assure you I shall ever value the very handsome and appropriate casket which encloses it. It will ever find a valued place in my house. As Grand Master it affords me a special satisfaction to be able to assure you of the warm greeting of the brethren in England, and I shall not fail at my next attendance at Grand Lodge to assure them again how much you appreciate the evidence of their devotion to you in Newfoundland, in the contribution they sent to help these poor men, and the widows and children of those who suffered during the terrible sealing disasters of last March.

The large number of brethren here this evening proves to me the loyalty and affection that you have desired to show you the head of your order.

I call on the Grand Architect of the Universe to bless all your undertakings, and may Peace and Charity ever be with you.

ADDRESS OF WELCOME FROM SCOTTISH BROTHERS.

D. G. S. Cowan then read an Address of Welcome from the Scottish Brethren, which was passed to D. G. M. Duder, who, in a well worded and loyal speech, requested its acceptance by the M. W. Grand Master.

To Field Marshal, His Royal Highness Arthur William Patrick Albert, Duke of Connaught and Strathearn, K.G., etc., etc., etc., Most Worshipful Grand Master of the Freemasons of England.

Most Worshipful Grand Master:—
On behalf of the Brethren of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons resident in Newfoundland, holding under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, we join with our Brethren of the English Jurisdiction in extending a welcome to your Royal Highness.

Electrical Display.

The illuminations throughout the city were the finest seen here since the visit of His Majesty King George as Duke of Cornwall and York, 13 years ago.

The Masonic Temple presented a magnificent sight, the architectural beauty of the building being well defined in bulbs of various colours. The front of the building was beautifully decorated with the Connaught Arms and Masonic emblems, while the south side of the Temple bore a script motto very clearly outlined in white lights; and containing the words "Welcome to our Grand Master." The side of the building is one that favors its general appearance, and last night the beauty of this imposing spectacle was admired from practically every part of the city.

The illuminations at the Railway Station gave the place a fairyland appearance, the beautiful trees in front of the building casting soft shadows in that vicinity. The effulgence of the myriads of bulbs, so artistically arranged, shone forth for many yards and their brilliance was reflected on the buildings on the opposite side of Water Street for many blocks east. The building was very effectively outlined, and the mottoes were rich in design, and the whole presented a sight that attracted thousands of citizens and held them spell bound in admiration of the beautiful scene.

The Colonial Building was richly ornamented with bulbs portraying the Crown and Royal Coat of Arms, and presented a beautiful sight. The splendid harmony of the different colors was an outstanding feature of these illuminations. The motto containing the words "Newfoundland extends a Loyal and Hearty Welcome to H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught," conveyed in a pleasing manner the oldest Colony's expression of welcome to the distinguished visitor.

The Government House was also beautifully decorated and illuminated and presented an attractive appearance.

The Knights of Columbus Hall was finely illuminated, the front being outlined with lights while the mottoes "K. of C." and "Welcome" shone with particular brilliance.

The L.O.A. Hall was also attractively decorated, the contour being marked with lights, while the emblems and motto of "Welcome" were beautifully defined.

The B.I.S., T.A. & B. Star of the Sea, Mechanics and British Halls were attractively and appropriately illuminated and were much admired by the thousands of citizens who visited them during the night.

Private dwellings all over the city were also decorated and the whole showed an outburst of genuine patriotism for which the city has been particularly noted.

The illuminations of the French cruiser Friant were very much admired and appreciated. This splendid ship was beautifully outlined from stem to stern and presented a truly picturesque sight, the shadows on the still waters of the harbor adding effectiveness to the picture.

The searchlight of H.M.S. Essex also contributed much to the illuminations, and as the powerful rays of the ship's light spread over the sky, citizens from many points of vantage, drank in the beauty of the scene.

The small boy also contributed his quota to the evening's display, and from many places roman candles and miniature rockets ascended. The whole was one of the finest demonstrations seen in the city for many years, and we venture to say that the electrical display could compare favorably with that of far more pretentious cities.

The Eastern Trust Company has installed safety deposit boxes in its vault in the Pitts Building, Water Street. These boxes can be hired at a moderate rent by the year.

Persons making a will in which they appoint the Eastern Trust Company executor may deposit their wills in the vault of the Company without charge.

An impression has gone abroad that the Company charges a fee upon the making of a will which the Company is appointed executor. This is an error. The Company charges no fee until after the death of a testator and the Company has undertaken the execution of the trusts under the will. It then charges the same fee as is allowed to ordinary executors.

Special to Evening Telegram.

LONDON, July 15.
 The Lords yesterday finally passed and sent down to the Commons the Amending Bill. Lord Morley, who was among the final speakers, declared that the amendments had so changed the character of the bill, that the Lords might almost as well have rejected it, but the Marquis of Crewe, also speaking for the Government, struck the more optimistic note of hopefulness that ultimate settlement might be reached. Earl Beauchamp on the Government's behalf, announced its willingness to give facilities for a conference if there was a general desire for one. Lord Lansdowne made a guarded response, but his attitude was not unfriendly, and late last night a surprise was sprung by the announcement that Bonar Law had summoned Carson to London, supposedly in connection with such negotiations. The steamer was specially delayed for the Unionist leader. He left Belfast to-day earlier than intended, abandoning two important engagements. Although nothing definite is known it is believed that a conference of party leaders is being arranged.

LONDON, July 14.
 The House of Lords to-day passed the third reading of the Amending Bill. The Marquis of Crewe indirectly promised the attainment of an agreement in regard to elimination of the time limit for exclusion. He said, however, that the excluded area had been so greatly enlarged by the Unionists, as to make it a critical question. They had not explained how they proposed to meet objections to exclusion by the Nationalists in the excluded area. He concluded by asking for the exercise of patience and forbearance, firmly hoping for a successful solution. The Marquis of Lansdowne reiterated that nothing short of the Unionist amendments could avert the imminent peril that was threatening. He said this was his explanation of his demand for the total exclusion of Ulster; and complains that the Government had given the Unionists no assistance whatever in the task of averting civil war. At the suggestion of the Marquis of Crewe, the bill was read for the third time without a vote being taken.

LONDON, July 14.
 The Daily News says "The great Orange demonstration near Belfast and minor parades in Ulster passed off yesterday without trouble or unpleasantness. All was quiet everywhere. This happy result was due to the wonderful restraint exhibited by Nationalists, who bore insults in silence, not responding to provocation." Sir Edward Carson in a characteristic speech made bitter references to the Government. There was also reference to men in the Army who had refused to obey the Government, and a declaration that the same thing would happen again if any attempt were made to employ the forces of the crown.

MEXICO CITY, July 15.
 At 10 p.m. yesterday, the family of President Huerta, other relatives and close friends left the capital for Vera Cruz, on a special train. Running ahead were two military trains carrying 800 men and following came another with 500 troops. The family of General Blanquet, Minister of War, also left on the special. It is believed that Huerta, Blanquet and other high officials will leave the capital to-day.

PARIS, July 14.
 Half a million Parisians, celebrating the Fall of the Bastille, were thrilled to-day, at the re-opening, by the President of the Republic's annual review of the Paris Garrison, when twenty military aeroplanes rose at the far end of Longchamps race course, in perfect alignment of fours and swished at full speed past the Presidential stand.

MINARD'S LINIMENT. CURE FOR GARGET IN COWS.

A New Folder on the Partial Payment Plan

A little folder which we have just received from our printers explains the convenient operation of our Partial Payment Plan so effectively that it is decidedly worth sending for.

It is entitled, "How to Invest WHILE You Save," and will take but two minutes of anybody's time to read through. But to many—perhaps YOU—it will prove of undoubted value in pointing out a way by which GOOD securities can be bought on easy terms.

There is no charge for the folder—nor obligation incurred by asking for it. Send us the names of some friends that we may send them copies as well.

The Victory of Virtue.

A TWO-REEL FEATURE AT THE CRESCENT.

The holiday programme at the Crescent Picture Palace delighted large audiences yesterday afternoon and evening. The big feature "The Victory of Virtue" played by high class French artists, proved to be a drama that appealed to every patron, a splendid two-reel story abounding in many interesting and welcome situations. Miss Arkady, the soloist, was never heard to better advantage, and on every occasion responded to the encores called for. "Suspense", a one-reel that stirred the interest of the audience featuring Louis Webber and the famous Rex Company. "The Frontier Twins Start Something," was the comedy and it certainly was a good one. The entire programme was a classy one and lovers of motion pictures should make a special effort to see it to-night when it will again be the attraction. To-morrow the week-end change; be prepared for something different and classy.

 Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.
 Gentlemen,—Last August my horse was badly cut in eleven places by a barbed wire fence. Three of the cuts, (small ones) healed soon, but the others became foul and rotten, and though I tried many kinds of medicine they had no beneficial result. At last a doctor advised me to use MINARD'S LINIMENT and in four weeks time every sore was healed and the hair has grown over each one in fine condition. The Liniment is certainly wonderful in its working.

TIRED.

Also, I am weary of swatting, the effort seems useless and stale; for weeks I've been painfully trotting around after flies, on their trail. I've doped them with acid carbolio, I've slugged them and caught them with trap; and still on my forehead they frolic, when I lay me down for a nap. I hate the pestiferous friskers, which tickle my scalp with their toes; they're building their nests in my whiskers they're picnicking now on my nose. They give me all kinds of diseases, by carrying germs to and fro. I pause here for seventeen sneezes—I've got the pneumonia, I know. I'm strong for those able physicians, who tell us, "Keep swatting, you guys, if you would improve the conditions, and drive from your country the flies!" And yet, I am weary of swatting, I've thrown all weapons away; I'm weary of tirelessly potting the germ-bearers, day after day. Because, in the midst of my labors, I glanced from my ancestral hall and saw that my indolent neighbors were doing no swatting at all. Unless we all labor, united, to chase every fly out of view, the gruff is a perpetual whine, a sheer waste of muscle and thau.

Bankers Arrive.

The Marjorie N. Inkpen, Capt. E. Inkpen, of Burn arrived in port yesterday for supplies, after taking which she will proceed to Labrador. Capt. Inkpen has 800 quintals of codfish on board which makes a total of 2,300 quintals to-date.

The Susan E. Inkpen, Capt. L. Inkpen, of the same port put in here also for supplies. Captain Len. has 700 quintals on board. After obtaining salt and supplies both vessels will proceed to the Straits to finish the voyage.

Band Concert.

Last evening Mr. J. L. Slattery, Secretary of the Municipal Council, received a communication from Commanding Officer Tweedie informing him that the band of H. M. S. Egmont will give a concert in Banerman Park this evening from 7.30 to 9.30 p.m.

Cacouna Here Again.

The S. S. Cacouna arrived from Montreal via intermediate ports. She brought a full cargo including a deck load of cattle, but no passengers. Owing to the amount of freight accumulated at Montreal the Black Diamond Line will put an additional ship on the route next month.

On Expecting Gratitude.

By RUTH CAMERON.

A young wife was complaining to me the other day because her husband so seldom expressed his gratitude for her sacrifices in his behalf, and her efforts to please him. "I feel as if it were all in vain," she said. "I desire to be paid in praise and gratitude for all the good things that we do, and the feeling that our effort is otherwise lost, is an almost universal weakness. We are willing to give ourselves generously, but we expect a due return in recognition and appreciation, and we are all subject to moods of revolt when we find (as we invariably must) that we do not get it. Let me tell you, Reader Friend, what would be a good specific against such a mood. To take down the biographies from our bookshelves, look over the lives of some of the men who have given great and beautiful things to humanity, and see how little reward and recognition they received. I will tell you some of the things you will find.

Rembrandt, one of the world's greatest artists, after a life of bitter struggles, died in abject poverty. The other day one of Franz Hal's pictures sold for $500,000, yet Franz Hal himself died in a poor house. Millet after a vain struggle for recognition and appreciation was obliged to part with his Angelus for $365. He himself realized that it was a great work and bitterly resented the insult of such a price. Some years later the picture was brought to this country and exhibited all over the United States at twenty-five cents a head. It's owner made a fortune out of it. Later it was sold in this country for $100,000 and still later bought back by France for $150,000; yet Millet would have died of starvation if the kind hearted Corot had not helped him.

Milton sold Paradise Lost which is usually considered the greatest epic poem in the English language for five pounds. Eli Whitney invented the cotton gin which increased the efficiency of a cotton cleaner five thousand times, and brought in millions of dollars annually to the South. Yet he made almost nothing from his invention.

Elias Howe, the inventor of the sewing machine was somewhat more fortunate as he finally received enormous royalties, but his struggle for his rights had broken his health and he died from the effects of his privations while yet a young man.

This is how society has rewarded some of the men who have done the most for her. Does it not make you rather ashamed of your own demands for recognition and praise for all your little efforts.

Does it not make you willing to try to think less of being praised and more of deserving it, less of receiving and more of giving, less of being loved and more of loving.

Ruth Cameron

LONDON GOSSIP.

LONDON, July 1st, 1914.

PRINCE OF WALES AT OXFORD.

The Prince of Wales this week completed two years at Oxford. An undergraduate correspondent sends some notes on the subject. Viewed impartially the Prince's career has been neither better nor worse than that of the average titled undergraduate. He has embarked on many of the "manly sports" of youth, and excelled in none. Perhaps the best comment on his good spirit and lack of "side" was the fact that he played consistently at Association Football with the Magdalen College second eleven. For a long time he was the despair of his equerry, Mr. Cadogan, who is an enthusiastic horseman but is a concession to popular opinion, expressed and unexpressed, he has acquired some skill in the saddle, and with it some of the standing which falls only to hunting men at Oxford. That the Prince should take an equal footing with all in undergraduate life was, of course, an innovation attended, as one might expect, by advantages and drawbacks. The curious interest with which he was pestered in his early weeks soon wore off, but the natural desire to be intimately associated with a prince so easy of access was harder to kill. Magdalen second last season proved far more attractive to many men than the college senior team. Little or no concession has been made to his royalty. I saw him the other day waiting at the door of one of the leading doctors in Oxford. On the other hand, he has had a freedom and ease which he will never again enjoy; he has mixed unostentatiously with people of all ranks; he has endured bravely and well the discomforts of camp life as a private; and he has been treated with a quiet well-remembered respect by every member of the University.

Does it not make you willing to try to think less of being praised and more of deserving it, less of receiving and more of giving, less of being loved and more of loving.

THE AUSTRIAN ASSASSINATIONS.

The assassination of the Archduke Ferdinand and his wife, has moved London deeply. Once again has the essence of tragedy been squeezed with relentless fingers into the aged Emperor's cup. The draught was already bitter enough. Londoners knew the Archduke. He was here as recently as last November accompanied by the Duchess, and those who saw the couple were much and favorably impressed. The new heir to the Throne has also been seen on London streets. He is the Archduke Karl Francis Joseph, a nephew of the murdered Prince, and he attended the Coronation of King George. With his very distinctive uniform he was an outstanding figure in the great procession. Reports speak well of his disposition and attainments, but he may not be envied his heritage. No one can say whether the Archduke Francis Ferdinand had he lived would have made a great ruler or not. He was equally capable of doing big things or making big blunders. A diplomat once described him in a phrase as a man with a strong will, but not a strong head. To diplomats, as indeed to his own countrymen, he was an enigma; at one time veering towards Russia, at another pressing for war with Russia; at one time the confident and disciple of the Kaiser, at another distrustful of him. He was swayed by a few strong prejudices. Like most Royal personages, he was a militarist, and therefore bellicose. He was a fervent Catholic. His wife imbued him with her Czech prejudices. His religion and his wife's Slavism made him constantly hostile to Italy. In 1911, without informing Count Aehrenthal, he started great fortification works along the Italian frontier. Italian feeling was inflamed, and Count Aehrenthal appealed to the Emperor, who stopped this provocation. Two years earlier, during the Bosnian crisis, the Archduke worked strenuously for a war with Serbia, though that would have meant war with Russia, and he knew it. During the prolonged Balkan crisis his influence was by no means steady or consistent, but it was rather for war than peace. He hated the Hungarians and made no attempt to disguise that hatred. The following story illustrates one phase of his very strong feeling with regard to religious observance: One day during last year's manoeuvres he summoned Count Hertzendorf, the Chief of the General Staff, and rebuked him. "I was at mass this morning and did not see you there. Explain yourself!" The Chief of the General Staff replied that whether he went to mass or not was entirely his own affair. Henceforth the two were at daggers drawn.

KING PETER'S ABDICATION.

The Serbian King Peter's abdication was not a surprise. He had been alling for some length of time, and has had several strokes during the last year or two. Prince Alexander, who succeeds him, is, of course, his second son, and seems a rather colorless personage. Prince George, his eldest brother, is an insane epileptic, and when his vagaries culminated in kicking one of his servants to death it was realized that his position as Heir Apparent was impossible, and he was forced to renounce the succession. In a more civilized country he would have been brought before the courts, or at least put under restraint. King Peter during all his reign has been a butt for the satirists of Western Europe. He came from poverty in a Paris slum to the Throne of Serbia, and his complete ignorance of how to handle his hat and carry his sword on public occasions, and so on was made a matter for laughter

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its Office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office, its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is modern and dependably equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKE CO." whose sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessity this equipment can surely be of use to you. Mr. Percle Johnson represents this world known firm in Newfoundland—4917.

and mockery. The murder of King Alexander and Queen Draga horrified Europe, and though, if it had been an ordinary political assassination that horror would not have affected the recognition of King Peter at all events for very long, the circumstances of the murder were so horribly brutal—the chase, for example, of those unhappy creatures from room to room of their palace, the disgusting mutilation of their bodies, and the throwing of their bodies into the courtyard—that the reluctance of the Powers to regard Serbia as a civilized country or its new King as a member of the great Germanic nations called "the trade union of Monarchs" is not difficult to understand.

HOW ABOUT THE CROWN OF HUNGARY?

The children of the murdered Archduke are, by the law of the Hapsburg house, prevented from ascending the throne of Austria. No such law binds the succession in Hungary, and though the Emperor required of the Archduke the renunciation of his children's right to the Hungarian throne, and this renunciation was afterwards embodied in the form of a statute by the Hungarian Diet, it remains a statute merely, which it is open to Hungary and the Diet, if they so wish, to repeal. Should such a repeal take place there would then be two claimants to the Hungarian throne, the new heir presumptive and the eldest son of the Archduke. Nothing of the kind is likely to take place, but it is a possibility to be borne in mind, and it illustrates one of the difficulties of the joint monarchy.

BRITISH MILITARY CUSTOM REVIVED.

I gather that our military authorities intend to revert in fact though not in name to the old system under which the military secretary held what were called levees—in other words granted personal interviews to officers desirous of representing their aspirations, claims, or grievances in regard to promotions, appointments, and military connections generally.

When the Military Secretary to the Commander-in-Chief disappeared along with his superior, and there remained only a military secretary to the Secretary of State for War, these so-called "levees" were abolished, greatly to the regret of the regimental Officers of the army, who much appreciated the privilege of being able to get into personal touch with an officer upon whom the regulation of their prospects often largely depended. Not only that, but personal interviews between officers serving outside Whitehall and any member of the Headquarters Staff were sternly discouraged. For years the rule—not perhaps very strictly observed—has been that no officer serving in the United Kingdom on full pay is to ask for an interview with anyone in the War Office unless he has the permission of his general, and an intimation to this effect is to be found in all the office-waiting-rooms. This exaggerated seclusion on the part of the headquarters staff is naturally not popular, and has intensified the feeling against the Army Council as an institution quite out of touch with the life of the army at large. The authorities have evidently realised that the thing has been overdone, and it is understood that henceforth there is to be a free intercourse between the outside military world and at any rate the military secretary, although the term levee—such functions being reserved for the Sovereign and his representatives—will not be revived in the case of this official.

THE OLD OLD GAME.

Recently I came across a new "lay" which is being worked by a couple of sharpers in London at this season, possibly as a variation of the well-known "confidence trick." Acquaintance with me was claimed in the Strand by an elderly individual dressed to look like a farmer on holiday. After the customary opening about the weather, he informed me that he was from Western Canada, and then by easy stages imparted the information that gold had been discovered on his land there. With a view to emphasising the truth of his statement, he produced a little box containing what I suppose were brass filings and said that was a sample of the untold wealth which was within his grasp. Like Mr. Micawber, the one thing he did not possess was the capital necessary to back up his enterprise, and I was offered a share in the "mine" on terms which, though dirt cheap, were to be strictly cash on the nail. I warned my confiding acquaintance to watch that he did not mention his gold mine to anyone connected with Scotland Yard, and on seeing that the game was up he court-cously bade me good-day and passed along in the direction of Charing Cross, being joined at once by a confederate who had obviously been awaiting the result of our conversation.

Try Again.

You have, it may be, used ointments, pastes, lotions for Eczema till you begin to get tired of trying things. Well, but you should remember that science is advancing all the time, and that what was not possible yesterday can be accomplished to-day.

If you neglect to try Zylex—the newest and best thing that science has yet to offer for the relief and cure of Eczema and other annoying and disfiguring skin diseases—you are missing a great opportunity. It may be that it will cure you. It has cured some very bad cases. Price 50c. a box. Zylex Soap 25c. a cake.

It is possible to wash feather pillows in this way: Open one corner of the ticking cover and pour boiling water in. This will make the feathers a pulpy wet mass, which can be handled easily. Take them out and wash in soap and water thoroughly; rinse several times; put back into the ticking cover and hang in the sun and air until entirely dry.

Crusts in the Nose. Frequent Sneezing, You Have Catarrh-A Disgusting Disease

Relief in Five Minutes—Certain Cure Follows if "Catarrhazone" is Used.

Don't stay stuffed up with a sore nose, eyes running and breath bad. Use Catarrhazone! Take one breath through the inhaler—just one single breath and see how it clears out the nose, how it makes you breathe free and easy. Relief from Catarrhazone is quick and effective—you don't have to wait all day to get it either. No other treatment is like Catarrhazone or is able to drive catarrh so completely out of the system. You don't take anything internally in using Catarrhazone—you don't run the chance of spoiling digestion or lessening appetite with a bad tasting medicine. Just breathe in that soothing piney vapour, so rich in healing, so full of power to cure every type of throat trouble, hoarseness, pain over the eyes, bronchitis and Catarrh. Germs that may be lurking in the mouth, nose or throat, Catarrhazone will destroy them. In this way it prevents many an ill. "I am never without Catarrhazone Inhaler," writes E. J. Jameson, of Huntington. "Use it for a minute and it stops a cold at its beginning. If the cold has a start, or if its catarrh or a bad throat, you can easily cure it with Catarrhazone." If suffering from throat droppings, running eyes, active nasal discharge, choked condition in the nostrils—remember Catarrhazone will quickly cure you. Get the large $1.00 outfit. It does the trick cure. Small size 50c.; a sample size 25c. at all dealers everywhere.

Visit of Duke of Connaught.

Higness to the oldest overseas possession of Britain. We desire, through you, to give expression to our unwavering loyalty and allegiance to the Crown. As Freemasons we feel honoured by a visit from one occupying as you do the most exalted position in Freemasonry in the world.

We regard your presence as an opportunity to place on record, that, although under another jurisdiction, we are working in complete concord and amity with the Brethren holding under your authority, and believe our united efforts are keeping the Order in Newfoundland in the prominent position that it occupies in all portions of the globe.

Signed on behalf of the Free and Accepted Masons of Newfoundland under the Jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Scotland:

CHAS. R. DUDER,
District Grand Master,
H. E. COWAN,
District Grand Secretary.

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS REPLES.

H.R.H. the Grand Master, said in reply:—
Most Worshipful District Grand Master and Brethren of the District Grand Lodge of Scotland: It has given me especial pleasure to be welcomed here by the Scottish brethren, and I thank you for the loyal expressions contained in your address.

I am well aware of the fraternal feeling that exists between the Scottish Brethren and those under the British Constitution, and I am very sensible of the manner in which they have shown it on this occasion. In many different portions of the British Empire have the Scottish Masons come forward and joined their English brethren in a warm welcome to myself.

I call down the blessings of the Almighty on your labours, and hope that Freemasonry may ever flourish amongst you.

District Grand Master CHIT then asked permission to introduce several brethren to H. R. H., and permission being accorded, the following members of the two District Grand Lodges were presented:

centre panel on either side are Connaught Arms, and on the front the other two panels bear the Grand Master's emblems. On the two back panels are views of the Masonic Temple and of St. John's Harbor, whilst on the ends are the Coat of Arms of Newfoundland, and the Arms of the Grand Lodge of England. The floral decorations are of fern leaves. The inscription is:

Presented to
H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, K.G.,
Most Worshipful Grand Master,
by the Freemasons of Newfoundland
under English Jurisdiction, 1914.

The address which was placed with it, after the presentation, was handsomely illuminated, the scroll work being done in England, and the wording artistically executed by Bro. Arthur Meads, of the St. John's Lodge. At the head are the Connaught arms, with the Royal motto, "Honi soit qui mal y pense." On the left are illustrations of the Connaught Hall at Botwood and the handsome Masonic Temple in this city. On the right are the arms of the Grand Lodge of England, with the motto, characteristic of the Order: "Andi, Vide, Tace." The whole is embellished with wreaths of roses entwined with fern leaves.

Obituary.

E. VON STEIN.

A prominent and popular citizen passed away at the General Hospital yesterday, in the person of Mr. Robert Von Stein. Deceased was a native of Stettin, Germany, and was for many years chief mechanical engineer of the Nfld. Railway and afterwards took charge of the watering arrangements of the Reid-Nfld. Co. He was a most enthusiastic sportsman, both with rod and gun, and offered his assistance in his big hearted way to sportsmen both in following it up. His cheery voice will long be remembered in the great winter game of curling which he used to enjoy to the full. He came to Newfoundland as chief engineer of the S.S. Kite and was also chief engineer of the S.S. "Bear" in the Greeley Relief Expedition. For some time he has been suffering from a disease which could only end fatally, and when told as he insisted, of the disease which had him within its fatal grasp, he received the news in his characteristic manly fashion. He is survived by six sons and one daughter, to whom we extend sincere sympathy.

CHAS. HAGEN.

On Saturday last at St. Pierre, Master Charles Hagen, son of Thomas Hagen, of St. Pierre, was called to the Great Beyond. The deceased had only attained his fifteenth year, and had been ailing for some months past, having contracted a cold last Christmas, which finally developed into pulmonary tuberculosis. Charlie was a bright young lad, and to his many relatives and friends the Telegram extends sincere sympathy.

STELLA MARIS SINKS.

The s.s. Stella Maris sank by the side of the dock pier at 8 o'clock this morning. The ship was being coaled for the northern service and as the bunkers were unrimmed, the ship had a heavy list. The port holes were left open by mistake, and when the ship gave a sudden lurch she rapidly filled with water and sank to bottom. She is now in an upright position, with the water up to the tunnel.

Household Notes

Never allow fried food to become chilled before serving.
No housewife should overlook the food value of cheese.

Pastry should not be put into ice box as it makes it soggy.

Soften hard water for toilet use by putting a pinch of borax in it.
Cereals with fruit make very economical and nourishing desserts.

If a glass jar will not open set it down in an inch or two of hot water.
A coat of pure linseed oil will lengthen the life of willow furniture.
Lace should never be ironed at all, but manipulated between the fingers.
If the dahlia stalks are cut back now you will have much better blooms later.

When cooking beef in a fireless cooker do not put salt on it until it is done.

As summer comes on it will save a great deal of time to have all the desserts of fruit.

If the fruits are canned as soon as they are picked there will be less loss by fermentation.

It will save time if you have a good-sized kitchen salt shaker filled with salt and pepper.

If one would be a good and economical marketer, consider the following rules: Do not purchase perishable material out of season. Always use each fruit in its season. It is then at its best and costs least. Use butter and eggs sparingly when they are high in price. Never buy fresh strawberries in midwinter; they are tasteless, expensive and add little to the dietary. Serve choice fruits in their natural state. Use less perfect fruits for cooking. Suit the dessert to the season of the year.

The Cactus.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Sivash."

The cactus is the principal beast of prey of the southwestern United States. All through the lower ends of Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California it lies in wait to catch the unwary stranger and to tear him limb from trousers.

The cactus is a large fluent plant which grows where nothing else wants to grow and does it with extravagant success. Where the alfalfa plant and the camel would perish from drought, the cactus grows to a dizzy height and prospers exceedingly. It is a sort of natural pin factory. Men speak with pride of the plant which will turn out a thousand papers of pins an hour, but when a thousand square miles of sand go into the cactus business it can produce a billion stickers in two weeks without an effort.

The cactus wears its pins or spines on broad flat leaves or long stalks.

They are sharp and are more durable than most of the things they come in contact with. Vast tracts of lands are covered with these sharp spines, each one imbedded in a firm foundation and the man or beast who attempts to wade through this country without a sheet iron costume usually expires pined in a very short time. Once the cactus was regarded only with dislike by the citizen and was eradicated with an axe wherever possible. Of late years, however, it has been found that like a good many other supposedly useless things the cactus has virtues. When it is chopped down and roasted in the fire, its spines, which are extremely indigestible, are burned away and it becomes a delicious and nourishing stock food. Now that man has been able to find some use for the cactus he may in time be able to utilize the ward heifer, the street corner masher and other supposedly hopeless nuisances.

Of late years, Burbank has been educating the cactus to grow without spines. However, a cactus to grow without spines is no cactus at all any more than a snake without rattles is a rattlesnake, or a lady without a press agent, is an actress. Some new name should be found for the spineless cactus.

Cable News.

MEXICO CITY, To-day.
At 7:30 last evening, Francisco Carbajal, took oath as Provisional President of Mexico, before the assembled deputies and senators. The new executive, escorted by Presidential guards went immediately to the Palace and were cheered by the people.

WASHINGTON, To-day.
The news of Huerta's resignation was hailed by official Washington as the first practical step towards a quick solution of the Mexican problem. Constitutionalists, diplomats and officials of the United States Government did not conceal their satisfaction over the fact that at least Huerta had voluntarily eliminated himself from the situation.

COLUMBUS, New Mexico, To-day.
The annihilation to-day of the Constitutionalist garrison at Palomas, Chihuahua, by Federal regulars broke the peace of Northern Mexico and revived reports of a counter revolution. Three hundred guerrillas under General Roque Gomez, attacked the little border town in view of the troops of the United States army patrol. Every man of the village and garrison were killed, it is reported.

LONDON, To-day.
It required half a dozen policemen for the removal from Marlborough Street Police Court of two kicking, clawing, screaming militant suffragettes, who earlier in the day had attempted to horsewhip the Secretary of State for Scotland. Only for the timely intervention of his butler, it is very probable the Secretary would have been soundly thrashed. A militant lashed him across the chest but before she could deliver a second cut, a butler seized her, threw her sprawling to the ground, leaving him free to tackle the second woman, who was shouting, "Let me get at the Scotch pig." When the police arrived they bundled both women to the police station. In court the women gave the names of Jeanette Wallace and Bertha Watson. They were fined twenty shillings. They refused to pay and were sent to jail for fourteen days.

CASH'S Tobacco Store.

In connection with our well known tobacco business we have recently installed an up-to-date Soda Fountain, and during the summer will dispense Arctic Soda Water; our syrups are the pure juice of the fruits and make a delicious drink.
Try a 5 cent glass and cool off.
