CHAPTER XXVII

The Fires of Jealousy.

Percy could not suppress a smile, but it was quite true, and her answering smile, although sad and bashful, was very fierce.

"You speak of your uncle," he said, "had you no father or mother living?"

She shook her head thoughtfully. "No, my mother died when I was so high, and she put her tiny hand toward the ground. They laughed at me when I said I remembered her, and said that the Great Spirit had shown me a likeness of her in my childish sleep. But I do remember her. She was very tall and beautiful. It was she who taught me and some of the other children to speak the few English words we knew."

Percy looked rather surprised. "She spoke English?" he said. Kyra nodded dreamily. "Yes, I think so—I am sure. Perhaps she learned it of my father."

"Was he a warrior?" asked Percy, deeply interested, and speaking scarcely above a whisper that he might not break the subtle charm of her soft, dreamy eyes.

Kyra shook her head. "I do not know. My father was always a mystery to me. I did not remember him; he must have died when I was quite young. Sometimes they would sing about him in the lodge, on a winter's night, and they chanted his praises as horseman and hunter, and a rich man. My mother never mentioned his name; but I knew that the furs and the gold ornaments that hung round our lodge were once his, and I half surmised that he was a great man. I had an idea, too, that he did not die in the forest, but that he had gone—gone somewhere mysteriously and suddenly! I used to dream of him as I lay in the thick grass of the prairie in the hot summer nights, and he always came as a great, big man, with a wild, savage face. That is all I know of my father; no one would tell me anything, not even the Indian fellow who married him to my mother. But they all were good to me, and loved me after their fashion, for I was the daughter of a chief, and the great-grandchild of Black Hawk. I was very happy until that awful day"

"Yes, I think so—I am sure. Perhaps she learned it of my father."

lithe arms strained like steel. "No; go away, please," she said. "Why should I?" said Percy, half eagerly. "You will hurt your feet if you drop on the ground. Come, let me catch you!" and he looked up pleadingly.

She looked down shyly, and her lovely face flushed a vivid scarlet; then, with drooping eyelids, she looked at her hold and dropped into his arms.

Percy held her for a moment, his heart on fire, then he set her down, and, as he did so, his lips touched her sweet black hair.

She drew away from him a little, and held out the pippin without raising her eyes.

"See, it is for you! Are you not grateful?"

He took it eagerly, and closed his fingers over her hand. She stood trembling, her color coming and going, her eyes veiled by their long lashes for a moment, and then raised suddenly with a startled air, for a voice—not Percy's, but Lillian Devigne's—said:

"My dear Kyra, you will be burned as black as a coal. Lord Percy, you, of course, set summer at defiance."

Percy dropped the hand and her apple, as if they had been changed to red-hot coals, and, before he turned, stooped to secure the apple.

"Good-morning!" he said, raising his hat and taking the cool, white hand held out to him, and scanning the exquisite face rather curiously.

"We did not hear you."

"How much had she seen? The face so beautifully rose and white was perfectly placid and smiling, and full of nothing but gentle welcome. Percy decided that she had seen nothing but the extension of the apple. How should he know that her heart was blazing with the raging fire of jealousy, and that her smile was only maintained by an effort almost superhuman? She had been watching them from the moment Percy had entered the garden.

"No? The grass is so thick. How long have you been here? And what have you done with Mr. Merivale?" she added, turning her eyes upon Kyra.

The sudden question produced the blush the questioner desired.

Percy's face overshadowed directly.

"You did not tell me Charlie had been here this morning," he said, trying to speak carelessly and falling as usual.

Kyra blushed still deeper, and Lillian, smiling like an angel, shook her finger at her lovingly.

"Naughty girl! Why, I left you two with your heads together like conspirators."

Percy's heart grew colder; he could not have removed his eyes from the downcast face if it had been to save his life.

With an effort Kyra looked up.

"Mr. Merivale only stayed a few minutes after you went in, Lillian," she said with an air of embarrassment. "He has gone—"

At this moment Charlie's voice, not quite so blithe as usual, was heard outside the little door in the wall.

"Ky! are you there?"

At this peculiar alteration of her name, and self-assured ring of the voice Percy started, and turned slightly away.

Kyra, blushing like a rose, detected in a tete-a-tete with this lover, ran to the gate and opened it.

"Oh, here you are!" said Charlie. "Confounded nuisance! I—hello, what you must be!"

"Yes," said Kyra. Then in an undertone. "Don't you see Charlie, Mary?"

"Yes," pouted Mary, whispering; "but look how sullen he is. Can I help Lord St. Clare staying at Boxley? Stupid boy!"

Certainly Charlie never looked so grave and churlish before; he was almost as grim as his cousin, the earl.

"And, now you are here, you must stay to luncheon," said Lillian Devigne. "Mamma has a bad headache. I'm sorry to say, so you must excuse her; but we will have the cloth spread under the trees, and take things al fresco," then she turned to Percy beseechingly. "You will stay and help me!"

He could not have refused even if he had wished.

WONDERFUL TALE OF AN ACTRESS

Struggled with Sickness and Discomposure; How Relieved.

Dayville, Killingly, Conn.—"I shall be glad to have every woman know what I know now, after using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Although I am only 24 years old, I have suffered for the past eight years, for a doctor told me to give up the stage where I was playing with my husband."

I had bearing down pains, my health failed me, and I could not work on the stage, and wasn't able to tend my baby or even get around myself. I was always downhearted and discontented with the world, and only lived for the sake of my little girl. The doctor said to move to some quiet little town away from the noisy city, and I might be able to live and feel well, so I went to Dayville in November. At that time I was so sick I could not walk around, and my husband kept house and I stayed in bed. One day in January I read your advertisement in a newspaper, and I sent for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and started taking it. Within two weeks time I was a different woman, could get around, and felt so good that it was a pleasure to do my household work. I felt contented and happy, and now am the picture of health, and am tempted to return to the stage. We appreciate your health as the most precious thing on earth."—Mrs. H. L. KLEINERT, Box 85, Killingly, Conn.

Percy!" he broke off, catching sight of the other two: "I didn't know you were coming over this morning. Here I am again, Miss Devigne, like the proverbial bad penny. Left any peaches, Kyra? I'm as dry as a cob-nut—and I wish somebody would take this cob off my hands."

The boy took the cob round to the stables.

"Suppose I may stop to lunch, Miss Devigne?"

Lillian smiled, and Charlie, who was evidently out of spirits—"Because I am here," thought Percy—threw himself on the grass.

"Where have you been, Charlie?" asked Percy, looking down at the handsome boy with a smile that was mournful and almost envious.

"Oh, just for a spin," said Charlie, with a faint hesitation.

Then he looked up at Kyra, as if for permission.

"I ran over to Boxley with a note from Kyra to her friend, Miss Darlington, but she was not at home. They were all out. The servant said she had gone out riding with young St. Clair, who is stopping there, it seems. But I left your note, Ky," he added, with a certain significance, that did not escape Percy. ("She lets him run errands for her. Yes, yes; it is as it should be. I'll go!")

Then he pulled out his watch. "You'll stay to luncheon?" said Lillian, warmly.

"I think not," he hesitated, avoiding the pair of dark eyes suddenly uplifted to his.

"Yes, do," said Charlie. "You see I'm quite at home! Make him stay, Miss Devigne. Hello! who's this?" and a sudden flush mounted to his brow, which speedily made way for a decided frown, as Lady Mary, Lord St. Clare, and half a dozen other ladies and gentlemen visiting at Boxley came down the garden. Lady Mary uttered a cry of delight at sight of Kyra, and ran to her with schoolgirl effusion, leaving Lord St. Clare to do all the greetings and explanations.

"My dear," said Lady Mary, "I insisted on coming over to you, and they all declared they would come, too. What a charming place! Oh, how happy you must be!"

"Yes," said Kyra. Then in an undertone. "Don't you see Charlie, Mary?"

"Yes," pouted Mary, whispering; "but look how sullen he is. Can I help Lord St. Clare staying at Boxley? Stupid boy!"

Certainly Charlie never looked so grave and churlish before; he was almost as grim as his cousin, the earl.

"And, now you are here, you must stay to luncheon," said Lillian Devigne. "Mamma has a bad headache. I'm sorry to say, so you must excuse her; but we will have the cloth spread under the trees, and take things al fresco," then she turned to Percy beseechingly. "You will stay and help me!"

He could not have refused even if he had wished.

"Yes," said Kyra. Then in an undertone. "Don't you see Charlie, Mary?"

"Yes," pouted Mary, whispering; "but look how sullen he is. Can I help Lord St. Clare staying at Boxley? Stupid boy!"

Certainly Charlie never looked so grave and churlish before; he was almost as grim as his cousin, the earl.

BRITISH OFFICIAL. LONDON, July 9. To-day's official announcement follows: A heavy rain, which fell in the afternoon and evening of yesterday, impeded operations, and between the Ancre and the Somme the night was chiefly spent in improving the forward position gained in yesterday's fighting. In the neighbourhood of Gommecourt we bombarded the enemy's trenches with field guns and trench mortars. Near Neuville St. Vaast, in Northern France, southwest of Lens, and north of Rocourt the enemy showed some activity yesterday. In the last few days we have captured twenty guns, thirty-one machine guns, and a large number of automatic rifles

Thrilling Story of Opening of the Drive.

Night of Intense Shelling Before the Assault by Allied Troops—Flames of Fire Swept Hills—Tense Hours For British.

London, July 5.—Philip Gibbs, correspondent of the London Daily Chronicle with the British armies in the field, writing of the first day's attack on the German lines in the West says:

The full power of the British artillery was let loose at about 6 o'clock this morning. Nothing like it has ever been seen or heard upon the front before, and all preliminary bombardment, great as it was seemed insignificant to this. I do not know how many batteries are along this battle line or upon the section of the line which I could see, but the guns seemed crowded in vast numbers of every calibre, and the concentration of their fire was terrific in its intensity.

For a time I could see nothing through the low lying mist and the heavy smoke clouds which mingled with the mist, and I stood like a blind man, only listening. It was a wonderful thing which came to my ears. Shells were rushing through the air as though all the trains in the world were driving at express speed through wilderness tunnels, in which they met each other with frightful collisions.

Some of these shells fired from batteries not far from where I stood, ripped the sky with a high tearing note. Other shells whistled with that strange, gobbling, sibilant cry which makes one turn cold. Through the mist and smoke there came sharp, loud, insistent knocks, as the separate batteries fired salvoes and great, clangorous strokes as of iron doors banged.

The mist was shifting and dissolving. The tall tower of Albert Cathedral appeared suddenly through the veil, and the sun shone a full few seconds on the golden Virgin and Babe which she held, head downward, above all this tumult, as a peace offering to men. The broken roofs of the town gleamed white, and two tall chimneys to the left stood black and sharp against the pale blue of the sky into which a dirty smoke drifted above the whiter clouds.

I could see now as well as hear. I could see British shells falling upon the German lines by Thiepval and La Boisselle, and further, by Mametz and southward over Fricourt. High explosives were tossing up great volumes of black smoke and the earth all along the ridges. Shrapnel was pouring upon these places and leaving curly, white clouds, which clung to the ground. Below there was the flash of many batteries, like the Morse code signals by stabs of flame. The Germans were being blasted by a hurricane of fire.

Airmen Join in the Attack.

Over my head came a flight of six aeroplanes led by a single monoplane, which steered steadily toward the Germans. The sky was deeply blue above them, and when the sun caught their wings they were as beautiful and delicate as butterflies and to drop explosives into masses of men behind the German lines. Further away a German plane was up and the anti-aircraft guns were searching for him with their shells, which dotted the sky with snowballs.

Every five minutes or so a single gun fired a round. It spoke with a voice I knew, the deep gruff voice of "Old Grandmother," one of the British 15-inchers, which carries a cathedral with one enormous burst. I could follow the journey of the shell by listening to its rush through space; seconds later there was a distant thud of its explosion.

The Charge of the Infantry.

At a minute after 7.30 o'clock there came through the rolling smokeclouds a rushing sound. It was the noise of rifle fire and machine guns. The men were out of their trenches and the attack had begun. The Germans were harrying the lines. The country chosen for the main attack to-day stretches from the Somme for some twenty miles northward. The French were to operate on the immediate right. It is a very different country from Flanders with its swamps and flats, and from the Loos battlefields with their dreary plain pimpled by slag heaps. It is a sweet and pleasant country with wooded hills and little valleys along the river beds of the Ancre and Somme, and fertile meadows, and stretches of woodland where the soldiers and guns may get good cover.

It was difficult ground in front of us. The Germans were strong in their defences. In the clumps of woodland beside the ruined villages they hid many machine guns and trench mortars, and each ruined house in each village was part of a fortified stronghold. Difficult to capture by direct assault, it was here, however, and with good hopes of success, that the Allies attacked to-day, working westward across the Ancre and northward up from the Somme.

At the end of this day's fighting it is still too soon to give a clear narrative of the battle behind the veil of smoke which hides the men. There were many different actions taking place, and messages that came back at the peril of the men's lives and by great gallantry of the signallers and runners give but a glimpse of the progress.

The Charge of the Infantry.

At a minute after 7.30 o'clock there came through the rolling smokeclouds a rushing sound. It was the noise of rifle fire and machine guns. The men were out of their trenches and the attack had begun. The Germans were harrying the lines. The country gross and the hard fighting. I have seen wounded who have come out of battle and prisoners brought down in batches, but even they can give only confused accounts of the fighting. At first it is certain there was not much difficulty in taking the first line of trenches along the greater part of the country attacked. The bombardment had done great damage, and had smashed down wire and flattened German parapets.

When the British left their assembly trenches and swept forward, cheering, they encountered no great resistance from the German soldiers who had been in hiding in their dug-outs under the storm of shells. Many of these dug-outs were blown in and filled with dead, but out of others, which had not been flung to pieces by high explosives, crept dazed and deafened men, who held their hands up and bowed their heads. Some of them in one part of the line came out of their shelters as soon as the guns lifted and met the British soldiers half way with signs of surrender. They were collected and sent back under guard, while the attacking columns passed on to the second and third line in the network of trenches.

Varying Success of the Attack.

But the fortunes of war vary in different places, as I know from the advance of troops, including the South Staffords, Manchester and Gordons. In crossing the first line of trench the South Staffords men had comparatively an easy time, with hardly any casualties, gathering up the Germans, who surrendered easily. The German artillery fire did not touch them seriously, and both they and the Manchester had very great luck. But the Gordons fared differently. These keen-fighting men rushed forward with great enthusiasm until they reached one end of the village of Mametz, and then quite suddenly they were faced by a rapid machine gun fire and storm of bombs. The Germans held the trench called Danzig Avenue and the ridge where Mametz stands and defended it with desperate courage. The Gordons flung themselves upon the position and had some difficulty in clearing it. At the end of the day Mametz remained in British hands.

It was those fortified villages which gave the men the greatest trouble for the German troops defended them with real courage and worked their machine guns from hiding emplacements with skill and determination. Montauban, to the northeast of Mametz, was captured early in the day, and the British also gained a strong point at Serre until the Germans made a somewhat heavy counter-attack and succeeded in driving out some of the British troops.

Beaumont Hamel was not definitely in the hands of the attackers at the end of the day, but here again the British are fighting on both sides of it.

The woods and village of Thiepval, which I had watched under terrific shell fire in the preliminary bombardments, was one point of the first attack of the troops swept from one end of the village to the other and out beyond to a new objective.

They were too quick to get on, it seems, for a considerable number of the Germans remained in the dug-outs, and when the British soldiers went past, they came out of their hiding places and became fighting force again.

Further north the infantry attack of both sides of the Commeourt

TO-DAY'S Message

NOON.

A HARMLESS VISITOR.

LONDON, July 10.—A German aeroplane alighted on the English Coast to-day and driven off. It dropped no bombs.

STEADY BRITISH ADVANCE.

LONDON, July 10.—The hostile artillery was positive to-day in the neighbourhood of the Somme. The fighting is a mass of rifle fire, shrapnel, and shell holes. We again made steady advance an attempt to retrieve the losses of the past few days. The enemy this morning launched violent attacks against our positions near Trones Wood. In case of his previous frustration yesterday both attacks broke off before our guns. On the front there was nothing of importance.

RUSSIANS PRESSING ON.

LONDON, July 10.—A Reuter despatch from the front says the Russians are masters of a whole triangle comprising Ruzhich, Manevitch, and Kolki. The capture of enemy positions northwards and southwards at Sarney of the railway permitted the capture of the centre, resulting in the capture of the station at Manevitch. The infantry marched hard on the heels of the cavalry and are in firm possession of the positions astride the Pinsk-Kolki road. Thus the enemy's attempt to retreat to the right flank of the army which is true to the salient has completely failed. The continuation of the Russian advance in the region of the Ruzhich-Kolki road compels the Germans to further back from the Ruzhich-Kolki road. There is particular satisfaction over the capture of the west of Kolki, which has kept the arena of sanguinary fighting. It is stated that Austro-Germans amounting to five companies of men have been entrusted with the defence of the approaches to the Ruzhich-Kolki road. The Austrians have been greatly helped by German reinforcements from Lovel and Rafalovka.

THE DEUTSCHLAND.

BALTIMORE, Md., July 10.—The world's first submarine merchantman anchored here last night, eluding the enemy's watching for her. She carries a cargo of 750 tons of chemicals and dyestuffs, and men have been entrusted with the defence of the approaches to the Ruzhich-Kolki road. The Austrians have been greatly helped by German reinforcements from Lovel and Rafalovka.

ON THE BRITISH FRONT.

LONDON, July 10.—Fighting between the Allies and the Somme continued last night, though with less violence than the preceding two days. The British Office announced to-day that progress has been made in the sector near Ovillers in the direction of the front. A group of defences has been captured.

AT VERDUN.

PARIS, July 10.—On the Verdun front, the British carried on bombardment of the German positions, Fleury and Dammeville.

RUSSIAN PROGRESS.

PETROGRAD, July 10.—Important gains were made by the Russians in Southern Galicia, the railway town of Delatyn, and the captured. On the lower Sankar the Austrians and Germans retiring in great disorder.

MINISTERIAL APPOINTMENTS.

TO-DAY'S Messages.

NOON.

A HARMLESS VISITOR.
LONDON, To-day.
A German aeroplane appeared over the English Coast to-day, but was driven off. It dropped no bombs.

STADY BRITISH ADVANCE.

LONDON, To-day.
The hostile artillery was more active to-day in the neighborhood of Oylers, which from the incessant fighting is a mass of ruined trenches, debris, and shell holes full of mud. We again made steady advance. In an attempt to retrieve to some extent the losses of the past week, the enemy this morning launched two violent attacks against our new positions near Trones Wood. As in the case of his previous fruitless efforts, yesterday both attacks broke down before our guns. On the rest of the front there was nothing of importance.

RUSSIANS PRESSING UPON KOVEL.

LONDON, To-day.
A Reuter despatch from Petrograd says the Russians are masters of the whole triangle comprising Rafalowka, Manevitchi and Kolk. The capture of enemy positions northwards and southwards at Sarney on the Kovel railway permitted the cavalry to rush the centre, resulting in the occupation of the station at Manevitchi, half way between the Stry and Stokhod Rivers. The infantry marched hard on the heels of the cavalry and are now in firm possession of the Manevitchi positions astride the Pinsk Kolk high road. Thus the enemy's attempt to turn the right flank of the Russian army which is trust into the Lutsk salient has completely failed. The continuance of the Russian advance in the region of the railway west of Kolk compels the Germans to fall further back from the Stry to the Stokhod. There is particular satisfaction over the capture of Grudiazyn west of Kolk, which for days has been the arena of sanguinary fighting. It is stated that Austro-Germans amounting to five corps, or 200,000 men have been entrusted with the defence of the approaches to Kovel. The Austrians have been strengthened by German reinforcements between Kovel and Rafalowka.

THE DEUTSCHLAND.

BALTIMORE, M.D., To-day.
The world's first submarine merchantman anchored before Baltimore to-night, eluding the enemy cruisers watching for her. She carries a mail and a cargo of 750 tons of costly chemicals and dyestuffs, and a message from the Emperor to Wilson. She carries home a cargo of nickel and crude rubber, sorely needed by the German army. The Deutschland carries mounted in the conning tower two small guns of about 3-inch calibre. No torpedo tubes are visible. She is capable of submerging in less than two minutes. On the surface she has a speed of from 2 to 3 knots an hour more than an average merchant steamer. She was fifteen days out from Bremerhaven to Baltimore and could have docked to-night, but arrangements had been made for receiving her with formal ceremonies to-morrow. Her captain was ordered to wait in the lower harbor. Regarding his vessel, as a merchantman and subject to no unusual restrictions, the skipper, whose name is said to be Capt. Kalrig, went up the Chesapeake without waiting to notify the local customs and quarantine authorities of his presence.

ON THE BRITISH FRONT.

LONDON, To-day.
Fighting between the Acre and the Somme continued last night, although with less violence than during the preceding two days. The War Office announced to-day that further progress has been made by the British near Oylers than in the other sector. A group of defended buildings has been captured.

AT VERDUN.

PARIS, To-day.
On the Verdun front, the Germans carried on bombardment of the Chateauvert, Fleury and Damloup sectors.

RUSSIAN PROGRESS.

PETROGRAD, To-day.
Important gains were made by the Russians in Southern Galicia. The railway town of Delatyn has been captured. On the lower Stokhod River the Austrians and Germans are retiring in great disorder.

MINISTERIAL APPOINTMENTS.

LONDON, To-day.
Following the appointment last week of David Lloyd-George as Secretary for War the official announcement was made to-day of several other changes in the Government. Edwin Samwell Montague, Financial Secretary to the Treasury, takes Lloyd George's place. Thos. McKinnon Wood, Sec. of State for Scotland, becomes Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster and Financial Secretary of the Treasury. Harold J. Tennant, Parliamentary Under Secretary for War, is made Secretary of State for Scotland. In view of the very large responsibilities of the Treasury during the war, the announcement continues, Premier Asquith has invited McKinnon Wood to return to his former post of Financial Secretary. Asquith has invited Lord Curzon to become a permanent member of the War Committee.

GERMAN REPORT.

BERLIN, To-day.
The French and British are continuing in the Somme front. The Germans lost ground at Hardecourt, but repelled other assaults.

GERMAN LOSSES.

LONDON, To-day.
German casualties from the beginning of the war to the end of June, computed from the official German list, is given at 3,013,637 in an official statement.

KOVEL DEFINITELY THREATENED.

LONDON, To-day.
The eastern front continues to overshadow the western from a spectacular view point. The Russian forces going from success to success. Not only General Letchitsky in the south where his army has now occupied the railroad junction of Delatyn west of Kolomea, thus cutting off General Von Bothner from his supply base, but General Brusiloff in the north is making surprising advances on both sides of the Kovel railway towards the Stokod River. To-night's Russian communication reports that the enemy forces in this region are retiring in great disorder, and adds the Russians have occupied Huleviche, which is about 24 miles east of Kovel, while apparently the Russians are already across the Stokhod River. German possession of Baranovitchi and Kovel is absolutely essential if she is to retain her hold over the invaded parts of Poland and Lithuania, but it is considered likely that it is only a matter of a few days before the Russians will be in possession of Kovel, which would compel Von Linsingen's retirement from the Lutsk salient. German unofficial despatches reflect anxiety over the Russian advance being greater than even the Anglo-French offensive, which German military critics contend will not interfere with the operations against Verdun. Major Morant and other German critics express surprise at the extent and persistence of the Russian offensive and their endless resources of ammunition. It is reported from Rome that in the recent Council of Germans and Austrians, Marshal Von Hindenburg said it would be impossible to attempt a new offensive on a large scale without reinforcements of at least a quarter of a million men. Berlin admits loss of Hardecourt. The Roumanian Government, according to Berne, declined an invitation from the German-Austrian Governments to participate in a conference with the Danube Powers.

NOT THE ONLY ONE.

BALTIMORE, Md., To-day.
A definite announcement that the German submarine merchantman Deutschland is the first of a fleet of such craft built to ply regularly in trans-Atlantic trade was made here to-day by Capt. Koonig, master of the super-submarine. "This is not the only one that is coming," said the Captain. "Just wait; there will be more here soon, and we are going back for another cargo. We are going to have a regular line."

FINE WORK!

BERLIN, To-day.
According to a statement given out to-day by the Overseas News Agency, German warships between July 4 and 6 sank 8 trawlers near the English coast.

An Inspiring Sermon.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—Kindly allow me a brief space in your esteemed columns for a few remarks concerning the beautiful address delivered by Mr. Jones of the Seamen's Institute to the congregation of Wesley Church last night. Those who were present will not soon forget the very touching words spoken and the very earnest manner in which they were given forth. His text was taken from Rev. chap. 2, verse 8, and as the speaker laid emphasis on the fact that God takes knowledge of us and remembers the little things His children do for Him in their feeble but faithful way, many were encouraged to go on to do nobler things in His service. His explanations too, were very clear. Many have been the remarks that have been made concerning this Christian gentleman and his work and some of them not too kind, but if many of us who criticize others would endeavor to do half as much good as those do whom we find fault with, and lay our hands on our mouths before we speak unkindly of others, this old world would be much better than it is to-day.

2.00 P.M.

A MILE FROM PERONNE.

PARIS, To-day.
The French advanced three lines south of the Somme on Sunday for a mile and a half, capturing the German third positions along a length of three and one-half miles. They are now within a mile of Peronne. French critics believe that the capture of Peronne now is a question almost of hours.

FRENCH STAND BEHIND GOVT.

PARIS, To-day.
The Senate at the last of its sessions adopted last evening by a vote of 201 to 6 a resolution of confidence in the Government. Similar action was taken by the Chamber of Deputies a few weeks ago.

FRENCH MAKE NEW ATTACK.

PARIS, To-day.
A new attack was launched in the Champagne by the French last night. The War Office announced the capture of trenches over a front of five hundred metres on the Somme front. The French took a line of German positions in the neighborhood of Barleux. In this section 950 Germans were captured yesterday and last night.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, To-day.
The Germans made attacks at five points simultaneously in the Vosges, but all their assaults were checked completely by the fire of the French machine guns. A French attack in Champagne was made at a point west of Mesnil. The French troops charged three times on the Somme front, North

Mr. Jones' sermon was an inspiration to all both old and young, and the touching story of the brave young British soldier who guided the army in one of the Egyptian campaigns made a profound impression upon the older members of the congregation. The question of the dying hero to his General "Did I lead them, straight?" was very applicable in this sad time when so many of our brave boys are being led by their gallant officers, such as Capt. Eric Ayre and others, who to-night are sleeping their last long sleep far away from us, but will never be forgotten.

What the Doctor Asked

One of the questions the examining physician for life insurance is apt to ask the applicant whose heart is skipping beats or is fluttery is—
 "Do you use tea or coffee?"
 The reason tea and coffee are suspected is because the physician knows that the drug, caffeine, in tea and coffee disturbs the nervous system, races the heart, and is responsible besides for conditions which often become serious.
 It's a good thing to stop when one reaches the danger zone. It is better still, to safeguard health and avoid trouble by quitting both tea and coffee and using the famous pure-food drink—

POSTUM

This delightful beverage is made of finest wheat, roasted with a little wholesome molasses, and while it has a delightful snappy taste, it contains only the nourishing goodness of the grain—no drug—no harmful ingredient whatever.
 There are two forms of Postum. The original Postum Cereal must be boiled. Instant Postum—a soluble powder—is made in the cup with hot water—instantly! Both forms are equal in flavor, and cost about the same per cup.
 Thousands of people have found the way to renewed health by a change from tea or coffee to Postum. There are no tea or coffee "questions" in Postum.

House Broken Into Loot Secured

During the absence of the occupants the residence of a well known business man on Military Road was entered on Saturday last. Access to the place, it is alleged, was made through a window at the rear of the house and through the same aperture the marauder made his escape. On returning to the house the occupants found things in a topsy turvy state and an investigation was made to ascertain what was missing. There was ample evidence to show that the miscreant had paid a visit to the wine room and made "love" to a plentiful supply, as it was also reported to the inmates later that a man was seen leaving the house "gloriously" apparently drunk. The police are now on the trail of the house-breaker.

Your Boys and Girls.

A woman who has never done any embroidery in her life will often begin to do the fancy stitches when she has the opportunity to make dainty clothes for her own child. The hand-embroidered garments look so tempting in the shops that she feels it her duty to duplicate them for her own offspring. The exorbitant prices asked for the hand-embroidered articles make it quite impossible for her to buy them. So she sets to, fully determined to copy the styles.
 It is not a bit too early for the ambitious mother to start a summer wardrobe for her little one. In fact, it is a splendid time to begin, for when the hot days are here ambition seems to take wings and leave.
 Every child needs a pique coat for the warm days. On a coat of this material a mother can embroider dainty floral designs, stamping them on the collar, cuffs and down the front. The design can be done in solid creuset or cross stitches. The latter is really very effective and takes little time. If the coat is made entirely by hand, make French seams, and join the collar to the neck with a bias strip of lawn or linen. A scalloped finish to the bottom of the coat would be a little more effective and much more decorative than an ordinary hem.

 The Pattern is cut in six sizes: 22, 24, 26, 28, 30 and 32 inches waist measure. The waist pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 24, 26, 28, 30, 32 and 34 inches bust measure. The entire dress requires 7 1/2 yards of 44-inch material for a medium size. The skirt measures about 3 1/2 yards at the foot.

Ladies' Dress, With Sleeves in Either of Two Lengths, and with Eight Gore Skirt.

It has simple but pleasing lines and may be made with the sleeves in wrist or elbow length. The gored skirt flares gracefully at the foot, and makes this style especially suited to materials of narrow width. The Pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. It requires 8 yards of 36 inch material for a 36 inch size, which measures about 3 1/2 yards at lower edge of the skirt.

Two Yards.

"What an untidy looking veranda!" said the Author Man's wife. "It certainly looks as if there were children there," said Molly, the little sister of the photographer lady.

"And it looks as if they had a very happy time," said the Lady, who always knows something with a tender smile.

The veranda in question was lavishly littered with scraps of rose-colored crepe paper, and odds and ends of the paraphernalia of goodness knows what wonderful game.

It was lunch time, and the children had evidently deserted their playground at the sound of the dinner-bell. Hideous or Beautiful According to the View Point.

The result was a veranda made hideous, or beautiful, by their play—according as you saw it.

My mind went back to my own childhood, and to two yards, one, our own, and the other that where one of my playmates lived.

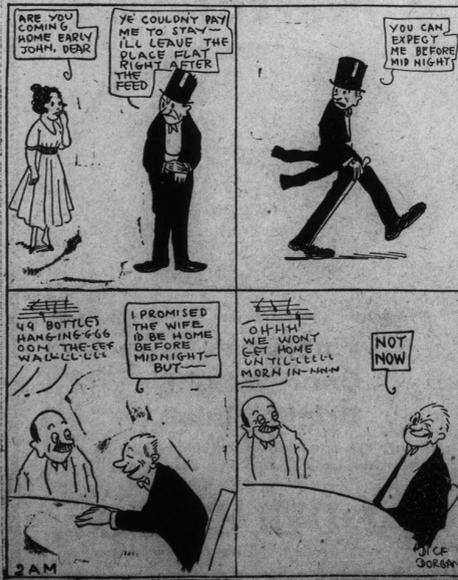

Or perhaps I should say, where she existed. She lived in our yard and so did half the children in the neighbourhood. It was a long, narrow strip of land, rich in such attractions as a hen-yard, a long banking which we could coast down in winter and roll down in summer, an ungainly shed attached to the back of the house (I remember how the elders rejoiced, and we of the younger generation grieved, when it was removed and a prosaic, respectable back door took its place), and a small orchard of those trees whose unique climbableness would make them beloved even if they didn't bear the most characteristic of the new-world fruits. The other little girl's yard was one of the show spots of the neighbourhood from a grown-up point of view. It had velvet lawns and handsome shrubs and the finest flower-beds in town. But the lawns were so nice that you couldn't have a croquet set on them; and the shrubs were so symmetrical that she mustn't even cut a switch to play horse with off them; and she must be careful never to step on the neatly-trimmed edges of the paths and flower-beds; and though she was sometimes given big bunches of flowers to carry to teacher, she was seldom allowed to pick a flower herself. We children went there sometimes but we never felt welcome.

So She Came Over to Our House. And so she came over to our house and played in our yard. Homes should be places to live in, and not only for grown-up folks to live in, but for children, too. You cannot keep a house or a yard spick and span if children are happy in it. You can train them not to be vandals, and to do a reasonable amount of picking-up, but even then, things will have some ragged edges. Which would you rather have, mothers and fathers, a spick and span house and yard, or happy children who are proud to invite the others to "come and play in our yard"?

Nearly all sandwiches are the better if a leaf of lettuce is added to them.

Germany's "Pathetic" Truthfulness

(New York "Tribune.")

The mendacious manner in which the recent battle in the North Sea was dealt with by the official chroniclers of Berlin has made so painful an impression on the friends of Germany in this country that the editor of "The Fatherland" may be excused for his elaborate effort to explain it. He is forced in so desperate a case to use desperate means, and what he undertakes to demonstrate is that the official admission of the original lie "merely reveals the almost pathetic truthfulness of the Germans." To begin with he explains that the lie "was literally true," because the "Lutnow" did not sink at once, and he guesses that the original report may have been given out while she was still afloat. "No explanation," he says, "was needed," and the explanation ultimately given was in fact wrong. The official explanation was that the loss had been concealed "for military reasons," but Mr. Viereck knows better. "Germany did not deny the loss of the 'Lutnow' for military reasons," he insists; "she merely for military reasons concealed her damaged condition." It is a pity that in order to account for one lie he is obliged to discover another, but it was the only way.

However, his well meant effort to establish the pathetic truthfulness of German officialdom will not do. He forgets the "Elbing," he forgets the "Rostock," he forgets the quite definite official statement of June 1 that "the German High Sea Fleet returned to our ports in the course of the day." Two days later, after some men had been landed from the "Elbing" at Ymuiden and it was no longer possible to conceal the truth about her, it was reluctantly admitted—in a statement beginning "In order to prevent the spreading of fantastic reports"—that her name must be added to the list of losses. It took the pathetically truth-loving Germans a full week to make up their minds about the "Lutnow." Then at last the enemy's claim was admitted—"in order," it was again explained, "to frustrate English legends." For the same singular reason it was admitted that the "Rostock" had also been sunk. Only the German admission came four days later than the British Admiralty's announcement.

Mr. Viereck is justified in regarding the official German habit of breaking bad news as "almost pathetic." But it is not clear that truthfulness is one of the strong points of this entertaining series of confessions.

INDEPENDENCE

By GEORGE FITCH

Author of "At Good Old Sitwash"

Independence is a peculiar reinforcement in the backbone which makes a man want to do things by himself, even if he has to push a tyrant in the face to accomplish it. Being independent is usually exciting and seldom profitable. Independence and trouble are old college chums. They come to a man arm in arm, and as he shakes hands with Independence, Trouble climbs right onto his back and takes up permanent quarters there. Many years ago the American colonists decided to become independent. This made England very angry, and she declared that if she found any independence in an American colonist, she would shoot it out of him and very likely damage him permanently at the same time. Then the American colonists held a great meeting in Philadelphia and issued a proclamation which invited England to come over and shoot away until she got tired. It took England five years to get tired and many a patriot had his independence shot away, but not before his liver and pancreas had gone first. The Declaration of Independence is still celebrated each year in this country. Some people claim this is all foolishness, because there is no more independence. They claim that the entire country has been capitalized in six per cent. cumulative stock by various gentlemen residing within easy distance of Wall Street.

This is not true, however. The American citizen is still so independent that he will walk ten miles to hit a trust with a brick. The trouble is, the trust usually buys the brick from him before he throws it.

There is plenty of independence in this country, but most of it has been bought up. The meat trust has so much independence that it once told the government to go to grass.

Independence is a very precious thing and brings a high market price nowadays. Even the bravest tyrant would hardly dare to stop an American and take his independence away from him. He would also be very foolish to attempt it when it can be done so much easier by giving said citizen a small office or a big rebate.

KEEP MINARD'S LINIMENT IN THE HOUSE.

A Famous Victory.

It was a summer evening, Old Bushman's beer was done, And he, before the sandy shore Was sitting in the sun, Instructing—for the hundredth time— His grandson Fritz von Hoggensheim.

"'Twas where the German Ocean rears Its crests of snowy foam, We met and beat the British Fleet, And then retreated home. We bolted like the deuce," said he, "After that famous victory."

"When things were looking very blue A shoreward course we shaped; We lost about a score of ships, But all the rest escaped, And, in unconquerable pride, Made for a port in which to hide."

"A world of human pity filled Our noble Admiral's mind, And he broke the action off And left the foe behind. We always act like that," said he, "After a famous victory."

"In our communique we made No indiscreet remark, For we slip cautiously resolved To keep our losses dark; A course invariably applied By people on the winning side—

"And after that the beaten foe Blockaded all our ports, And ran us short of meat and bread, And goods of various sorts, Such cruel things must always be After a famous victory."

"But why did we allow them to?" The artless Fritz inquired. "Because they had so strong a fleet They did as they desired. Such cruel things must always be While brutal Britain rules the sea."

"But Grandpapa," said little Fritz, "If we had really won, Why did not Prussia rule the sea, As Britain once had done?" "Oh, shut your silly mouth!" said he, "It was a famous victory."

Spring Suitings!

Have just opened our new Spring Suitings. We were fortunate in securing a splendid range of English Worsteds and Irish and Scotch Tweeds.

Notwithstanding the scarcity of the woollens and the drawbacks in freights, we are able to show as good a selection as before the war. The latest in cut, the best in make. Write for samples and self-measuring cards.

Twenty-five Years of Proof

"I built a house 25 years ago and the same shingles are on today. Results another five years ago, and in each case Cabot's Creosote Stain is good shape. Candidly, I'm afraid to build without using it."

EDWIN F. GARMAN, Bellefonte, Pa.
 Cabot's Creosote Stains saved him the expense of re-shingling and re-staining. They preserve the wood and hasten its beauty. You protect yourself from tawdry, fading colors and rotting shingles by being sure that Cabot's are used.

Ever-las-tic Ready Roofing

IT COSTS A LITTLE MORE BUT WEARS MUCH LONGER. Each roll of Everlastic is complete with nails, tins and cement for jointing. DON'T WASTE YOUR TIME AND MONEY ON SHODDY ROOFING.

EVERLASTIC is not a rubber roofing. Rubber rots, but EVERLASTIC LASTS.
