Wealth and Beauty at Stake!

CHAPTER XXVIII.

For Yolande, in an agony of grief and gladness commingled, has thrown herself down upon her knees by the couch, with her arms outstretched, and with her face hidden, is sobbing her heart out.

"Pray don't, my dear!" she is conscious at last that Lady Pentreath is saying, and she hears her clinking medicine glasses and bottles, and measuring out a dose of something that has a chemist's shop odor. "Pray do not give way, Yolande! Hysteria may supervene, and there is nothing more destructive to the nervous system! Ten drops of this, dear—Dr. Sutherland Smith's prescription."

"Oh, let me cry, let me cry! My heart has been sore so long!" Yolande pleads, wildly. "Oh, Dallas, Dallas, how could you leave me so cruelly if you cared for me at all? Oh, my darling, my darling, if I only knew where you were now! Oh, Dallas, I burned your letter; and now I don't care where you are!"

"My dear, this is very sad!" the countess says, pityingly, but in a very surprised voice. "I had no idea you had such very strong feelings. Poor girl! Drink this nice little dose of sedative medicine, my dear."

The glass of reddish-colored, sticky, aromatic, vile-tasting mixture is at her lips, and poor Yolande, helpless, drinks.

"That will make you feel so much better," the countess says, approvingly. "And, as for your husband's address, surely Lady Nora has it?"

"Oh, no! She knows nothing about him. We never mention his name," Yolande says, hopelessly. "Lady Nora never hears of him or from him, of course, or she would tell me."

Lady Pentreath sits quite silent for several minutes. Then at last, in an altered voice, says very gravely:

"Would you really wish to see your husband, to meet him, and to be reconciled to him?"

"If he cared," Yolande feters, her grey, aching eyes filling again with hot tears. "But you know there was some one else."

"If you mean my cousin, Joyce Murray," Lady Pentreath says, reluctantly, in a rather scandalized voice, "you must know, my dear, that that is a most shocking imputation to utter. There may have been some attachment between my cousin and Captain Glyne, but, of course, when Captain Glyne was married, that ended at once. They are excellent friends now, I am glad to say. They used not to be; but Joyce has become quite a woman of business since she came in to poor Lord Dunavon's bequest, and Lord Pentreath gives her the benefit of his advice about money matters, and so forth. He says Joyce may be quite a rich woman by and by. She is wonderfully shrewd and clear-headed, I believe, and there is another quick-suppressed sigh, which Yolande hears but does not heed just now, for her thoughts have rushed far away over leagues of land and sea to that far-away one, wherever in the wide world he may be.

What skies are above him?—In what country—what town—what street—what house—does he live? What people speak to him in the course of each day? Happy people! Perhaps he chats and laughs and enjoys their society; perhaps he dines with one and sups with another and walks or rides with others; while she—his wedded wife by the laws of church and state—is an utter stranger to one and all of the incidents of his daily life.

"Do you know whereabouts he is, Lady Pentreath?" she asks humbly and tremulously. "Did you hear from him at any time since he went to America? If you could give me an address—"

"Whose?" Lady Pentreath asks, blankly. "Oh, your husband! My dear, is it possible you don't know he came back from the States long ago— I think early last spring."

"Come back!" Yolande leaps up, with a face transfigured with joy and excitement. "Is he— is he in England? No—no, I am not going to be excited! Oh, Lady Pentreath, where is he?"

"He was in London when I heard," her ladyship answers reluctantly. "But, my dear Yolande, I was quite sure you knew all about his position, and all that."

"I knew nothing," Yolande responds, with a sobbing laugh, dashing away her tears surreptitiously. "Lady Pentreath should prescribe some other loathsome mixture to quiet the fever of hopes and fears which is burning in her bosom now, 'nothing, nothing! To think of his being in London for months and my not knowing! Where is he staying, Lady Pentreath? You will tell me, won't you?" she pleads, with a piteous effort at gaiety. "Do tell me where he is! He won't refuse to see me, will he, do you think if I call at his club, or hotel, or wherever he is staying?"

And Yolande smiles sarcastically, thinking how often in her schoolgirl and poorer days she has walked an equal distance on summer evenings on errands of business for her aunt alone. But she is obliged to wait now, while her heart aches with impatience, until Mrs. Brett can be found and can get ready; and then, with a kind, good-by and even a prim kiss from Lady Pentreath, she is permitted to take her leave.

Dempsey's Climb to the Top.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(A.P.)—Jack Dempsey, matched to fight Luis Angel Firpo for the world's heavyweight championship at the Polo Grounds September 14, came to the front more rapidly than any other ring champion—actually punching his way to a title in less than four years as a result of his boxing power developed in no-dodging bouts. After wading through all opposition, Dempsey's quick knock out over Fred Fulton, the giant Rochester, Minn., plasterer, virtually removed the last obstacle from his path for a championship match with Jess Willard. Dempsey met Fulton, then considered as a possible contender, and flattened him in the remarkably short time of 13 seconds. Dempsey's decisive victory over Willard in Toledo, July 4, 1919, for the championship stands out as one of the most severe beatings ever administered to a heavyweight titleholder. The very first punch that Dempsey sunk into Willard's huge frame, a savage right just under the heart, was the blow that started him to defeat. The former Kansas farmer, beaten down with vicious punches to the head, until both eyes were closed and his face swollen to the size of a toy balloon, survived three rounds before his seconds tossed in the sponge. Dempsey's ability to punch Willard into a submission so decisive, won him not only the admiration and respect of ring followers, but the experts' acclaim as one of the greatest hitters who ever held the heavyweight title. The champion carries a knockout smash in either hand; hits as hard with his right as he does with his left, and always seems to be ready, because of his peculiar swinging style, to whip over a terrific punch from any angle. Back of Dempsey's right is a tremendous power, but his left hook probably is an almost equally effective blow. It seldom travels more than a foot, but it carries the force of a falling skyscraper. Dempsey hooks the punch from the shoulder with a slight twist of his powerfully muscled forearm. He rarely swings a punch; always hooks them across. It is not uncommon to see the titleholder lead with his right in an attempt to get his opponent into position for a left hook.

The champion is master of every trick in the pugilistic bag. One of his favorites is to get his opponent off balance while coming out of a clinch, thus making him an easy target for a left hook. Dempsey accomplishes this trick by hooking his right gloved fist back to his foe's left elbow, and with a quick jerk, twisting him around and off his balance. Since Dempsey

"I should think not," Lady Pentreath replies, with emphasis. "You are not aware, then, of Captain Glyne's circumstances? No, I see you are not. Well, I must tell you then that, as he refused to permit Lord Pentreath to assist him—so his lordship tells me—most discourteously and positively, I understand—and having nothing but the money which he received from the sale of his commission, which was all swallowed up in paying of his debts—he was deeply in debt, I believe, unfortunate young man!—and not sharing in your fortune, you see, he was actually without the means of subsistence, and was obliged to do anything he could honestly to earn a living."

"Has he been in poverty—in want," Yolande asks, with pale lips and eyes dark with horror—"while I have been squandering money on rubbish and vanity? Heaven forgive me—I shall never forgive myself!"

"Oh, I don't fancy he was in actual want, you know!" the countess observes temperately, while Yolande writhes at every fresh sentence. "He could surely earn enough for the bare necessities of life," purgues Lady Pentreath—a young man of good education and address. He was employed somewhat in the same way in the States as he is here; so Isabelle—I mean, so I heard—

"Does she know?" Yolande exclaims, hot with passionate chagrin and mortification. "Mademoiselle knew about my husband's affairs all the time I was in ignorance of them! Did he write to her, then, Lady Pentreath?"

"Certainly not!" her ladyship answers sharply. "I am surprised you should ask such a question, or harbor such a suspicion about Isabelle! You do not know her, I see, though she was your companion for eight or nine months. I knew her thoroughly in less than eight or nine weeks. A more ingenuous, honorable, straightforward young woman does not exist. I am quite sure; and one more averse to idle or unworthy flirtation, or less desirous of attracting the notice of the other sex, I never met!"

"But does mademoiselle know my husband's present address?" Yolande asks, in a tone of forced calmness. "If so, perhaps she would give it to me. I should be very grateful to her."

"My dear," Lady Pentreath says, irritably, "I can give you your husband's address. I have assured you so repeatedly. But I hope you are prepared to hear without a severe shock to your nerves that he is in a very lowly position, in the employment of a person who keeps an hotel, as—as a sort of head waiter."

"A head waiter!" Yolande repeats, with crimson cheeks. "Oh, dear—to think of Dallas being a waiter! It can't be true, Lady Pentreath; there must be some mistake. To begin with, he has had no experience in waiting. She can hardly get the words out, so an ludicrous image after another rises in her mind.

"He is in some mental capacity, that I know," the countess declares, sharply, "at the Baltimore Hotel—a sort of half-American, half-foreign place in the city—no, in Holborn. He is employed in the office for taking people's names, and showing them to their rooms, and all that."

"Oh, a clerk in the hotel office!" Yolande says, in a relieved tone. "That is a very different thing, Lady Pentreath. The Baltimore Hotel, Holborn? I suppose a cab will take me there in about a quarter of an hour!" she adds, excitedly, rising and flinging on her long black silk mantle. "I know you will pardon me for leaving you at once, Lady Pentreath! Every minute seems an age to me. Oh, dear, where is my hat?"

"Do you think, dear, I could possibly allow you to go in a cab, a common hired conveyance, unattended, by night, through the streets?" the countess asks, in shocked tones.

And Yolande smiles sarcastically, thinking how often in her schoolgirl and poorer days she has walked an equal distance on summer evenings on errands of business for her aunt alone. But she is obliged to wait now, while her heart aches with impatience, until Mrs. Brett can be found and can get ready; and then, with a kind, good-by and even a prim kiss from Lady Pentreath, she is permitted to take her leave.

Panama Canal Zone.

Tolls paid by ships passing through the Panama Canal reached the $2,000,000 mark for the first time in July, the total being $2,124,429. The waterway was used by 483 vessels. The fiscal year ended June 30 has been the greatest in the history of the canal, establishing it as a well-paying concern. Month after month new records were made in tolls. With the cost of operation at $7,500,000, as estimated by Colonel Jay J. Morrow, governor of the Panama Canal, a profit of about $10,000,000 is against only $3,789,538 in the present year. Receipts in excess of all expenses have paid 3 per cent on canal bonds.

An agricultural experiment station is being built by the Panama Canal at Summit, in the Canal Zone, in the improvement of agriculture both in the zone and the republics. Irrigation is increasing in the region around Gatun Lake. The supplying the home market the fruitvators in 1922 shipped nearly 6,000 worth to the United States.

Fire Prevention.

When a fire occurs in a building, the owner or occupant of the building is arrested and made to feel that he is not guilty of having caused the fire, no fruitful cause of fire is claimed. In short circuit and other phases of electricity, I have observed that many switches are in iron-clad boxes, and in many cases in the switch box, where one switch was enclosed and left closed. I believe no sparking of the switches would occur and no danger arise. Proper fuses should be provided. Filling fuse holders with anything but proper fuses should be prohibited. I observed a fuse box the other day with two one-cent fuses in place of fuse plugs. Another danger of fire, I believe, is the attaching of washing machines, portable washers, etc., indiscriminately to lamp circuits. This should be prohibited and insurance granted where the prohibition is carried on.—Montreal Star.

JUST OUT.

The dealer who is always out of things the patron needs is not the hustling sort of scoundrel who in his trade succeeds. I used to go to Hildad's store to buy my kielbasa kraut, and he would tell me evermore, "Ah, chee, we are just out! We have a shipment on the way, that should be here right quick; meanwhile we have some splendid hay, and stove-wood by the rick." I am not sitting stove-wood, I said, in high disdain; "and hay, while soothing to my cow, gives me a convex pain. I've patronized your store for years, until I have the blues; for when I ask for roasting ears you try to sell me shoes. I ask for codfish in a jar, and you are out of that; you offer me a can of tar, a mousetrap on the way, of which you proudly speak, but I would have my kraut to-day, and not some time next week." So now I trade with Snide & Snell, who make the business pay; they keep the goods and do not tell of shipments on the way.

BRITISH LABOR LEADER DISCUSSES SITUATION AT MONTREAL.

Montreal, Que., Aug. 28.—"There will be no restoration in Europe, no matter what British politicians may say to Canada and the United States, whether it be Lloyd George or Birkhead, no solution for the great army of the unemployed, until the broken fabric of Europe and international relationship has been restored, until the men who occupy the functions of statesmen look to the general well-being of their national and international units rather than to the progression of any personal aggrandizement."

This was a passage from a speech by Frank Hodges, one of the best known figures in British labor circles, who addressed a meeting here last night. Mr. Hodges is secretary of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain and is in Canada as fraternal delegate to the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, next month at Vancouver. "The old world has struck a rock; the hammers of the hulk are gradually breaking up," was his further comment.

CONSTANTINOPLE, August 29.—(Associated Press.)—The American High Commission here to-day denied the recent report from Athens that Turkish soldiers had fired upon a United States motor boat at Gallipoli, killing a man and wounding a woman.

The report referred to was contained in an Athens despatch last Saturday quoting a telegram received from the Island of Imbro. It was stated that the motor boat was flying the United States flag and, carrying ten refugees, had apparently left Maitos, on the Gallipoli peninsula, for Kavala, a Greek seaport, when the engine failed and the craft drifted toward the town of Gallipoli, where the shooting was said to have occurred.

Clean up Our City Inside and Out.

From time to time an agitation is started for a cleaning up of our streets, the beautifying of our surroundings and the purging of our filthy slums, and sometimes an effort of a sort is made. But it has never been systematic, never undertaken with the full co-operation of the citizens and consequently it has never been thorough. It is not that we do not realize the untidy condition of our city—the dilapidated looking ranges, unpainted houses, tumble down fences, and streets that resemble river beds; or the dangers which lie in the germ infested drains, the congestion in the back streets, and the overcrowded hovels which landlords call houses and are permitted to rent. The trouble is that we have lived so long amid such surroundings that we have become indifferent, until the whole matter has reached such dimensions that no City Council cares to tackle it during its term of office, and so it goes on from bad to worse. Nothing short of a pestilence would impress us with the necessity of a sweeping change and of the adoption of up-to-date sanitary methods. So far nothing but the mercy of God and regular downpours of rain have saved us from an outbreak such as visits from time to time cities in which conditions are similar in the Far East.

So much for the external sores of our city; but there is a matter even more serious than those which requires immediate treatment. We refer to the moral side of our city life. Day by day is unfolded in the Magistrate's Court a story which depicts in all its sordidness the immorality which is rampant. It must be remembered that for each case that comes within the notice of that Court there are many of which the general public never hear. Not without good reason did the presiding judge express his abhorrence of the evidence given in several cases on Saturday last when the docket was even fuller than usual of this type of offence. Those who have occasion to follow day by day the reports of the Magistrate's Court cannot but be impressed with the fact that the extent of the vice is widespread.

There are some among us who deliberately shut their eyes to this side of our civic life, and claim that it does not exist to anything like the same extent as it does elsewhere. There are others who, when faced with the facts, hold up their hands in holy horror and repudiate any share in the responsibility of finding a remedy. There are a few who, realizing to the full the magnitude of the vice, have seriously and earnestly sought a solution of the problem and have taken practical measures to check the evil.

It is useless blinding ourselves to facts. Immorality has set its roots deep into the life of the community, and has become a menace. When the body politic is threatened with a disease or danger it behoves all right-minded citizens to demand that measures be taken to eradicate or remove it. Similar conditions have been found to exist in other cities; for example in Montreal, where for some time the authorities have been conducting a systematic campaign to stamp it out.

MEASURES TO COPE WITH THE EVIL.

Environment has a great effect upon moral development, and with introduction of better and more thorough methods to keep the city clean, by improving the housing conditions, and by extending the lighting system, a change of tone would soon be noticeable. The situation however demands that more direct measures must be taken, and as it is the youth of the city that are particularly concerned, the home and the schools can by wise counsel do much to assist in the crusade against this depravity. The authorities by a stringent enforcement of the regulations against loitering and soliciting in the streets, by imposing the maximum penalty in cases of criminal assault and similar offences, and by sentencing without the option of a fine those found guilty of keeping houses of ill-fame, will do much towards stamping out the iniquity.

Publicity is perhaps a greater deterrent to evil-doers than anything else, and the names of all those found guilty of the above offences should appear in the press reports. Those who have come from outside to carry on their nefarious practices here should be deported.

Undesirable as it is that space in a daily paper should be given to a subject of such a sordid nature, it is nevertheless a matter of public concern to which attention must be called, not alone by the press but by the pulpit as well, if the evil is to be checked.

The tug had recently been acquired by Messrs. A. S. Rendell & Co. was moored at the head of Monroe's wharf on Saturday night and when the crew left her, everything appeared all in order. Yesterday, one of the crew noticed that something was wrong, and investigating, found that the vessel was rapidly filling. Assistance being procured the "Hero" was hauled into the cove where she sank until her forward deck was awash. This forenoon Diver Squires went down and fastened the hatches in preparation for pumping out the water which will be done at low tide this afternoon.

Prayers were also offered for the protection of Bishop Mowll during these troublous times in Western China. Recent reports record the murder of two of the Church's missionaries in his Diocese by brigands. Dear Sir.—In Saturday's issue of your paper there is an item stating that the man Norman, charged with indecent assault, was an employee of the Council in control of the amusement apparatus at Banerman Park. I am directed to say that this statement is not correct and that the man Norman referred to is not an employee of the Council.

The Life of a Shot Gun.

What is the average life of a Shot Gun? Runaway Accident.

MR. T. VOISEY, CABMAN, INJURED.

As a result of his horse taking fright about six o'clock Saturday evening, Mr. Thomas Voisey, the well known cabman, suffered injuries to his face and head by being thrown from his driver's seat to the ground. Previous to the accident Mr. Voisey was delivering a passenger on Patrick Street. After the beast had been turned into Water Street on the return trip East, one of the breechings broke, and frightening the animal it started at a furious rate along that thoroughfare. The driver trying in vain to stop him. Upon turning into Queen Street the victoria collided with a long cart. Mr. Voisey was thrown heavily to the ground, receiving a bad cut in the head, and bruises to his face. The vehicle was badly damaged in the mix-up, while the horse, which was captured in Queen Street, escaped uninjured. Several passers-by who witnessed the accident, picked up Mr. Voisey, who was then in a half dazed condition. Upon being placed in a motor car he was driven to the hospital for treatment, while four stitches were required to close a wound in the head. He was later removed to his home, where he will be compelled to remain for some days before he is well enough to get around again.

At St. Thomas's.

At St. Thomas's church yesterday, at all services, special prayers were offered for the millions of sufferers in Japan, who have recently experienced a catastrophe without parallel in the history of the world, the smiling "Land of the Rising Sun" having been turned into a realm of darkness and death. The congregations were privileged to hear two eloquent and inspiring sermons. In the morning the Rev. Canon Bolt dealt specially with the hundred years' work of the Colonial and Continental Church Society, in connection with which the centenary collection will be taken up in the Parish next Sunday. The preacher at the evening service was Rev. P. Gwynne Lighthorn, B.A. of Montreal, formerly assistant editor of the "Canadian Churchman," and during the War a Captain of Artillery. Prayers were also offered for the protection of Bishop Mowll during these troublous times in Western China. Recent reports record the murder of two of the Church's missionaries in his Diocese by brigands. In his journey to Faing Bishop Mowll and his party were in danger, as the following note from the Bishop's Journal will relate:

"This mountain pass is a great haunt of brigands and I was told afterwards that one of them, heavily armed, was watching us all the time. Fortunately we were not molested and I was unconcerned of it. Constantly it seemed one could almost hear the rustle of angels' wings as heaven's legions were before and behind and on either side as we travelled."

Magistrate's Court.
A laborer employed discharging S. S. Silvia was arrested and arraigned before the Magistrate's Court Saturday afternoon, charged with the theft of a quantity of tobacco from the ship's cargo. Mr. W. J. Higgins, who appeared for the accused, made arrangements for the postponement of the hearing until this morning, but as the defence was still unable to proceed a second postponement of the case was granted. The accused man was remanded and allowed bail on his own behalf until called upon.
Two ordinary drunks arrested over Saturday night were liberated.
A drunk was arrested charged with breaking a pane of glass in the shop window of J. Got, valued at 50 cents. He was ordered to pay costs.
A drunk charged with indecent exposure on the public street, was convicted and fined $2.00 or 7 days.
A 25-year-old laborer taken in for safe-keeping, was allowed to go.
A widow was up for selling her beer over the 2 per cent. proof. Mr. D. J. Davies, who analysed samples from No. 1 and 2 kegs as obtained by the police, found that they each contained alcohol by volume 2.1 per cent. and 2.4 per cent. which would be a trivial amount overproof. The court suspended sentence in this case, and warned the accused to either quit selling or keep the home brew below the standard.
An assault case between two laborers was settled out of court.
A 35-year-old ship's carpenter, James Street, stood before the bar charged with the larceny of $15.00, the property of a 12-year-old school-boy named Joseph Saunders, 295 Pleasant Street on Saturday last. Mr. W. J. Higgins, K.C., represented the accused and entered a plea of "not guilty." The boy, who was present in court with his mother, was called into the witness box and after taking the oath, which he knew was to tell the truth and nothing but the truth, told how he had been robbed of $15.00 in broad daylight, after he had left the office of Franklin Co. Water Street, on his way home. Saunders stated that he had been sent on an errand by his mother to purchase a 1/4 ton of coal at the office of Franklin & Co., and was given a cheque for $20.00 to make payment. After he had completed the order a girl in the office gave him his change, which amounted to $16.20, made up of a ten dollar bill, one five and $1.20 in silver. The boy placed the bills in the right pocket of his trousers and the silver in his left, and was proceeding home. He crossed Water Street, and was going up Springdale Street, when he was halted by a man from behind near D. Felley's store, who told him that he had received the wrong change. The boy seemingly thinking that such was the case, withdrew his right hand from his pocket and drew out $15.00 in bills, which he very obligingly gave to the man. The man with the coin walked very rapidly down Springdale into Water Street out of the boy's sight, while he remained on the spot for a few minutes expecting his friend to return. Saunders, who is a very bright boy for his age, fearing that his assistant might have decamped with the money, went back to Franklin's office and told the counter clerk that a man had taken his money, stating that he had received the wrong change. The official at the office was at a loss to understand the lad's story, and told him to run home and tell his mother to have his assistant arrested. The lad forthwith proceeded home and told his mother of the loss. The accused apparently thought that the lad would not recognize him, but on returning to Water Street with his mother, young Saunders quickly spotted the thief, and acquainting Const. Wells, who was doing duty near Steer Bros. Wells went along with the boy and his mother and handed the culprit. The policeman formally charged him, with stealing $15.00 from the boy, which he denied. He was then arrested and taken to the Police Station.
Const. Wells, who gave evidence, stated that the prisoner placed his hands in both pockets after he had been placed under arrest, and when he had been ordered to remove them, he removed the left hand clenched. The officer grasped the closed hand and held it until the man was conveyed to the lockup, when the closed hand was opened and found to contain $15.00 in bills, one ten, and one five, Saunders identified the bills as his, one of which had a green back while he also identified the accused in the bar by saying "That's the same man." Mr. Higgins, K.C. called the accused himself to the bar. The man denied all knowledge of having anything to do with the robbery, or ever seeing the boy. When the constable came

ANOTHER GREAT FILM at the Nickel.

..."IN THE NAME OF THE LAW" HAS EXCELLENT SCENE. The dramatic robbery of a bank...
...the fast work of the police in rounding up the...

Forty-Four Years in the Service of the Public—The Evening Telegram.

Ireland's Eye Notes.

The time has come around again when the teacher's vacation is ended, and most of them are settling down to another year's work in their various schools. We wish them a year of happiness and pleasure.

Miss Effie Kelly, who has been spending her summer vacation with her mother, was a passenger by S.S. Malakoff on Friday going to Clarenville where she will go to Arnold's Cove by rail to resume her work. We wish her a prosperous year.

We understand that the schools at Ireland's Eye and Ivanhoe were reopened to-day by L. Hodder and Miss V. Cooper respectively. L. Hodder, who has been teaching for several years is going to try his luck home. We wish him good luck and a year of success.

The fishery this year so far has been one of the worst for some time, and if something does not turn up people are going to face the depths of poverty again. We are hoping that something will be done to find the people a way of getting a livelihood. Although the shore fishery in most places has been a failure, we are glad to hear that most of our Labrador schooners have done well, and as far as we know they are gradually making their way home.

Capt. Charles Kelly and Capt. Jas. Loder of the E. J. Fry and A. W. S. Loder have been fishing at St. John's. When the trapping season was over they returned home and landed about 200 qts. of fish each. After taking a second outfit they have gone to St. John's again and we learn they are doing well with the fish. This is Capt. Kelly's first year in taking charge and he has good luck. Well down Kelly.

Capt. Valentine Kelly, who had remained home for the trap season, did not do so well. He has fitted out his schooner, the "Gertie" and is likewise fishing with hook and line at St. John's and has done well.

Mrs. Randell, wife of the late Capt. John Randell of Port Rexton, has been spending the summer with her daughter, Mrs. W. G. Hodder. Mrs. Randell is 75 years old and is still quite smart. She is able to knit and sew and on suitable Sundays gets to church twice. I am sure her many friends wish her many years of good health and happiness.

Most of our men have gone to various places to seek a livelihood, and we understand they are doing well. Others are to follow in due time and we wish them God-speed.

Omar Khayyam.

This wretched summer's drawing to an end. O make the most of what we yet may spend. The Columbus Ladies' Outing Wednesday next, at Smithville. Come yourself and bring a friend. sept10.11

Big Week-Opening Show at the Crescent.

HEAR THE JUVENILE TRIO IN NEW PROGRAM.

The bill at the Crescent Theatre for the week-opening is one of unusual attractiveness. In short it is a feast of drama, comedy and music. Mr. Pat Harrington, the popular versatile performer will be heard in new and catchy selections. His dancing is also a very snappy feature and he puts it over with perfect ease. "Pat" is a performer that does not overdo his act. In the usual vaudeville act of this sort there is often a tendency to overact, but not so with Pat Harrington.

The musical part of the program is in the masterful hands of Jack Cronan at the bells and effects and Al Pittman the brilliant boy pianist. The photoplay to-day is Louis Mercanton's masterpiece, entitled, "Possession." This film abounds in thrills and action and is interesting from beginning to end.

Shipping.

S.S. Kition arrived from Sydney at 1 p.m. yesterday with coal cargo to A. E. Hickman Co. Ltd.

S.S. Igarnu sailed at midnight Saturday for Alicante and Naples taking 1,311 qts. codfish.

Schr. Copperfield arrived at Caranville Saturday to load laths for the Horwood Lumber Company for New York.

Star Movie To-Night.

HEAR MR. TESORI TO-NIGHT.

Marion Davies in the Picture "Beauty's Worth" Directed by Cosmopolitan Productions

The popular Star has, for its attraction to-night another of those shows that cannot fail to please the most ardent movie critic. As will be seen from the ad. Mr. Tesori will be heard in two classy numbers, Macaula and Mandlay. This gentleman who opened his engagement on Friday past needs no bouquets from us, as he in his opening numbers showed himself to be all that was claimed for him, not one of the large audience but were loud in their praise of his ability. He is possessed of a rich clear distinct tenor voice that has a softness and richness that makes him in a class to himself and there is no doubt but during his engagement he will win a reputation and name for himself that will be far beyond the most sanguinary hopes of the management of this theatre.

In the picture part of the program, beautiful Marion Davies will be seen in a big Cosmopolitan production in seven parts entitled "Beauty's Worth" whilst Harold Lloyd in his comedy "Take a Chance" will sure cure the blues. The management wishes to further announce that they have booked another such sensation as "Manslaughter" entitled "The Have and Hold," a production that actually went to the biggest business in New York City, during last fall. Full particulars of it will be given in the "Telegram" at a later date.

Express Passengers.

The following passengers crossed over to Port-aux-Basques by S. S. Kyle, and are now on the incoming express:—B. Benton, K. Dunn, A. C. Smith, D. Haller, A. Desroves, Mrs. P. Blackler, Jas. A. HOW TO HAVE A SOFT, VELVETY SKIN. Use Pompeian Night Cream as directed below and then note how your skin becomes soft and velvety. This Cold Cream will prove one of the most valuable toilet accessories you have ever used. Its continued and frequent use will prove most beneficial to dry skin.

Direction for Use. Just try this simple treatment every night before retiring. First, coat your face thickly with Pompeian Night Cream, patting it gently into the pores. Then, with a soft cloth remove the surplus cream which will bring with it all the day's dust and grit. Next wring out a cloth or towel in warm water and lay it on the face. Pat it gently, do not rub. Now, rinse the face with cool—not cold—water. Dry, without rubbing. Then again apply Pompeian Night Cream and leave it on the skin to "soak-it-up" you through the night. Enquirer is Solicitous of P. M. D. Fund.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—As the writer was today asked, quite seriously, if the Permanent Marine Disaster Fund had been wound up, he would suggest your enlightening the public (if you have the information) on the following questions which are of interest to anyone interested in the fund and its object:—

1. Have not all collections taken at services, concerts, etc., on the Red Cross Line boats always, up to just recently, been contributed to the Permanent Marine Disaster Fund at the request of Commandant Hurd of the Salvation Army, does he think a Maternity Hospital to take care of (a) well-to-do persons who are in a position to pay for private rooms and private treatment and (b) individuals who have been unfortunate, a more deserving object than a fund to take care of widows and orphans of Newfoundland fishermen the country's leading industry?

2. What was the reason (or idea) of these collections being diverted to the Salvation Army Maternity Hospital Fund?

3. Who was responsible for these collections being diverted from the Permanent Marine Disaster Fund to the Maternity Hospital?

4. If these collections were diverted to the Maternity Hospital Fund at the request of Commandant Hurd of the Salvation Army, does he think a Maternity Hospital to take care of (a) well-to-do persons who are in a position to pay for private rooms and private treatment and (b) individuals who have been unfortunate, a more deserving object than a fund to take care of widows and orphans of Newfoundland fishermen the country's leading industry?

5. If Commandant Hurd thinks so, does anybody else?

6. What attitude have the agents of the Red Cross Line, Harvey & Co. Ltd. and Bowring Brothers Ltd. of St. John's and Bowring & Co. of New York, adopted in the matter of these collections being diverted from the Permanent Marine Disasters Fund to the Maternity Hospital?

A little light thrown on these matters in connection with the P.M.D. Fund will do no harm at all. In the writer's opinion, if the Salvation Army still wish to continue to receive the sympathy of the public in any philanthropic work they may do, they should immediately return any money they have diverted from the Permanent Marine Disaster Fund.

Yours truly, "ENQUIRER."

Death of Mrs. James Croke.

On Tuesday last there passed away to her eternal reward a very estimable lady in the person of Lillie, the beloved wife of Mr. James Croke, Newfoundland Government Railway Inspector, after a short illness borne with perfect Christian resignation, during which she had been fortified by all the rites of Holy Mother Church. Her last hours were made happy and peaceful by the constant care and devoted attention of a fond husband and loving children, though all that medical skill could do was brought into requisition the best efforts of physicians and nurses failed, the "Plat" had gone forth, the call to God's bright land had been given and peacefully and gently another "Valiant Woman" went to receive the crown eternal. Mrs. Croke who was the daughter of the late Mr. James Malone was born in St. John's fifty-eight years ago. After her marriage she lived for several years in St. John's. In 1910, Mr. Croke returned with her family to St. John's and has lived on Allan's Square up to the present time. Always quiet and unassuming, gentle and charitable, the deceased lady had many friends, but it was in her home that she found most happiness, for her husband and children she loved and laboured, they alone, knowing her best, could thoroughly appreciate the rare qualities of mind and heart which were hers and which made the home a veritable paradise on earth. Now the great heart is still, the once busy brain is at rest and sadness and grief hang over the home and its inmates for the dearest and the best is gone. Gone, but love and affection survive the tomb, somewhere today in God's Kingdom, here dear soul in peace and her spirit keeps guard o'er her devoted ones protecting them from harm and evil and pain. Mourning the loss of a devoted wife and mother are the grief stricken husband, Mr. James Croke and four daughters, Sister Mary Loretta of the Presbyterian Convent, St. Ann's, Placentia. Mourning the loss of a devoted wife and mother are the grief stricken husband, Mr. James Croke and four daughters, Sister Mary Loretta of the Presbyterian Convent, St. Ann's, Placentia. In 1910, Mr. Croke returned with her family to St. John's and has lived on Allan's Square up to the present time. Always quiet and unassuming, gentle and charitable, the deceased lady had many friends, but it was in her home that she found most happiness, for her husband and children she loved and laboured, they alone, knowing her best, could thoroughly appreciate the rare qualities of mind and heart which were hers and which made the home a veritable paradise on earth. Now the great heart is still, the once busy brain is at rest and sadness and grief hang over the home and its inmates for the dearest and the best is gone. Gone, but love and affection survive the tomb, somewhere today in God's Kingdom, here dear soul in peace and her spirit keeps guard o'er her devoted ones protecting them from harm and evil and pain. ARUNDEL CASTLE PAGEANT.
London, Sept. 7.—The Pageant at Arundel Castle proved at once the most historic and effective of the many similar productions this year. It was not only that the audience was the largest and most representative—people came from all over the country—but the setting with the background of the Castle, embosomed in giant trees is more beautiful than anything the art of the designer could effect. Only the old keep is left of the original pile, but the "restored parts" of the great building have mellowed with time and the trees are so old that they carry with them the atmosphere of bygone centuries.

Get It Done.

There's a task that awaits you, a task which is yours: To neglect it were surely pure madness. Dereliction of duty most truly ensures a harvest of sorrow and sadness. Then heed not the voice that will bid you delay. And tell you to wait till to-morrow: The task that you ought to be doing to-day— Get it done, if no trouble you'd borrow.

AMERICANS VS. BRITISHERS IN SPORT.

The defeat of our Women Lawn Tennis champions in the States has started a controversy as to why we are losing our old sports supremacy. The sports writer in the Daily Graphic insists that we are still as "sporting" as we always have been, and that our defeat in lawn tennis and cricket lies in the specialization adopted by America and to an extent Australia. A lawn tennis champion in the States eats and thinks and sleeps lawn tennis. It is his whole topic of conversation and his intellectual horizon has the same limit. Outside tennis he is uninterested in any form of sport. He plays to win—and to win alone. Meanwhile the Britisher, it is argued, has a general all-round interest, and that while a Yankee confines himself to one department the British will strike a very decent average all round, being able to hold his own in tennis, cricket and football—not to mention swimming. Climatic influences also have to be taken into account, and just as Mrs. Mallory in the comparatively heavy air of Wimbledon was below her form, so Miss McKane in the dry atmosphere of New York is off her stroke.

Weather in Novels.

IT CANNOT BE LEFT OUT.

You can write a short story without ever mentioning the matter of weather, but if you embark upon a novel, weather is a subject which you cannot well avoid. All writers of Shockers or of Action Stories of any sort are largely dependent for their effects upon atmospheric conditions. Read Rider Haggard, for instance. In every one of his books you find descriptions of weather, and that story which many people consider the best of all his novels, "Jesse," the biggest scene of all is that of the great thunderstorm in which Jesse and John are being driven to their death in the flooded river by the villain Frank Multer.

Noted Germans in Mexico.

FOR STUDY OF SOLAR ECLIPSE.
MEXICO CITY.—A party of German scientists, headed by Prof. H. Liden-dorf, director of the Potsdam Observatory and brother of the field marshal, were the first of the foreign savants to arrive in Mexico to observe the solar eclipse on September 10. After being welcomed by representatives of the government and inspecting the national observatory at Tacahy, the party left for Yerbahia, Durango, where they will install their instruments. In the party is Prof. R. Schorr, director of the Hamburg Observatory, who, at the outbreak of the world war, was with Professor Liden-dorf in the Crimea on the same mission that finds them in Mexico. They were forced to abandon all their instruments, according to Schorr, and flee to Germany to avoid internment. Several months ago the professor travelled to Odessa and managed to retrieve the outfit, which is now being sent to Yerbahia for use in observing the coming eclipse.

The Suez Canal.

Egyptian Mail: The comment was made a year ago, in reference to the Suez Canal report for 1921, that in view of the very satisfactory tonnage figures for the year, and of the improvement in receipts during the first five months of 1922, the outlook for the year that is past was a very favorable one. This has proved to be the case. The tonnage of vessels passing through the Canal last year was 20,743,245 tons, as compared with 18,118,999 tons in 1921 and 17,574,057 tons in 1920. Further, it constitutes a record, being an increase of 468,125 tons as compared with 1912, the best year hitherto. This increase is a notable fact in view of the state of trade generally, and the depression prevailing in the shipping industry. It appears to indicate an important growth in international business of a very welcome kind, which is a good augury for the future.

Blackmore's great frost.

Many of the Victorian novelists were accurate observers of weather conditions and portrayed them perfectly. Blackmore's description of the great frost in "Lorna Doone" rises at once to the mind; also Black's of the terrific gale which ended the unhappy life of Macheed of Dare. Beant dwell rather on the pleasant side of things, and if you

Hampton Court Palace May Be Filmed.

I am told there is a strong desire in the district of Hampton Court to arrange a pageant at the Palace. The authorities have already been approached, but the project has not received much sympathy. It is felt that it would be too great a risk to jeopardize the wonderful tapestries, valuable paintings and old furniture for the sake of a spectacle. The same objection, however, could not be urged against a film which might present the interior of the Palace and its treasures, etc. I don't suggest that these should form a background for a story but that the Palace, inside and out, should be screened so that all over the world this typical and magnificent example of Tudor architecture could be known and appreciated. The particular government department responsible for the release of films dealing with the career of politicians might with advantage consider the idea. As it is, the only record we have of our most historic buildings is that of the picture postcard.

G.K.'s "MAGIC" TO BE REVIVED.

It is probable that Canada will shortly have a chance to see G. K. Chesterton's "Magic" which, produced just before the War, has only now being revived in this country, owing to complications in regard to the copyright. The difficulty has now been adjusted and the play, to be staged both in London and Liverpool, will go to the States and the Dominions. The play was originally written by G.K. at the request of a young friend who was convinced that it could get hold of a Chesterton drama. It would help him in his theatrical career. G. K. made him a present of the play which subsequently passed into other hands. There is almost as much interest in London as to its revival at the Everyman Theatre as if it were a new play.

LONDON'S HISTORIC CHURCHES MAY BE DEMOLISHED.

At present there is a danger that many of our most beautiful churches in London may be destroyed. The argument is that in the city there are many churches which are destitute of congregations. On an average a few old women and a small boy, driven up to Sunday service, the verger only being present on week-days. This means that the vicar has to endure an unendured idleness while more congested districts are badly in need of extra assistance. The latter argument is a good one, for the redistribution of "livings," but I cannot see that it is necessary to demolish buildings of architectural beauty and historic value. It is impossible to fill the churches with worshippers they could surely be turned into libraries or houses for the accommodation of church workers. Generally speaking, an empty church suggests a sleepy

Hoover Eager to Meet all Title Contestants.

DELUTH, Minn., Sept. 7.—(A.P.)—Although the definite date and number of challengers for the Philadelphia gold challenge cup race here in September are yet undecided, Walter M. Hoover, holder of the cup which is emblematic to the world's single sculling title, is taking no chances on his condition. The champion, engaged in one of his strenuous training programs, is featuring long rows to return him to the form which he hopes to display in his defence of the trophy. A fifteen mile row twice a day is the usual course for the champion. Hoover is hopeful that Edward Maguire, new national champion, will challenge in time to qualify for the coming race. Maguire, a Buffalo policeman, who acquired his sculling title at the recent national regatta at Baltimore, was quoted by Duluth Boat Club rowing officials as saying that he probably would challenge Hoover if he could get another leave of absence. In addition to Hilton Delyea, former Canadian champion, and Maguire, Hoover hopes such scullers as Granville Gude, Washington, D.C.; and W. E. Garrett Gilmore, Philadelphia, Canadian champion, will challenge. The champion insists that all aspirants for his title be given an opportunity to enter the coming event.

Soap Will Exterminate Leprosy, Says Scientist.

Chicago, Sept. 7. (A.P.)—Soap is the greatest enemy of leprosy and if economic conditions could be changed so that everyone could afford to be clean, and education create in them the desire and knowledge of hygiene, leprosy would soon cease to be a great scourge and become one of the rare diseases, Dr. Arthur W. Stillians, professor of dermatology at Northwestern University, announced in an article just published. The author arrives at the conclusion that to eradicate leprosy in this country the first object of the attack must be on the popular fear of the disease. "It seems the greatest difficulty in the isolation of lepers in the United States is finding them, their fear of being branded as lepers being so great that those who suspect the nature of their disease will hide, at any sacrifice, rather than come into the open," says Dr. Stillians. "As for the victims of the malady, occupational therapy is of benefit, it has been found. Kindness and encouragement put hope into their hearts and their condition improves as a consequence. Because leprosy in its early stages is not recognizable in port of entry examinations of immigrants, the problem of its control is a problem for the whole world." He concludes by saying: "Could the nations cease wasting wealth and energy in wars against one another and present a united front against the common enemies of the human race, leprosy would certainly be conquered."

George Wursel was a poor scholar. Consequently he had an uncomfortable feeling that over his deal in market produce at so much per pound he had been "done." Mrs. Wursel agreed forcibly. So, turning up an old ready-reckoner, they worked out the deficit, and the next day descended furiously upon the dealer. The dealer looked keenly at the angry couple. "Get away," he said, "that's last year's ready-reckoner." Mr. and Mrs. Wursel beat a crestfallen retreat.

ANYTIME IS NO TIME.

"You can do that any time the next three days," my visitor urged me when I started to do a little household task, "come and play with me now."

And so did the three days. And found me with the task still undone.

Isn't it always so? Anytime is no time.

A False Sense of urgency

Too much time is as bad as too little time because it fills one with a false sense of security.

The truth of the saying: "If you want a thing done get a busy man to do it, the others have no time," is based on this idiosyncrasy.

The busy man knows he must do the thing quickly if it is to be done at all, and he makes the time and gets it done.

I once knew two married sisters one of whom lived a few miles away from the old homestead where their father and mother lived alone, while the other lived hundreds of miles away.

The one who lived near had an idea that she could see the old folks any time and so she was always letting other things keep her away. The other one knew she could only see her father and mother while she was visiting them or staying in the city nearby and so she spent almost all her time with them on these visits.

The result was that the one who had plenty of time to spend with her family really spent much less in the course of the year than the one who felt she had so little time that she must give all she could to them.

The Stranger Sees More Than We.

We all know that it is the stranger within our gates who sees the sights that we, living here all our lives, have felt we could see at any time and therefore have never gotten around to seeing.

"It is a thing can be done at any time," says an English essayist, "then there is the thing that never gets done."

And then he goes on to relate the incident of the Pope and three American visitors to Rome whom he received in his audience. He asked them all in turn how long they were to be in Rome.

The first said: "Six months, your Holiness."

"You will be able, to see something of Rome in that time," was the Pope's response.

The second said he was to be in Rome three months.

And the Pope said: "You will see a great deal of Rome in three months."

But the third could only stay three weeks.

And the Pope said: "You'll see all there is to see in Rome in three weeks."

One-Fifth of Presbyterian Churches HAVE NO RECTORS

ST. LOUIS—(A.P.)—More than one-fifth of the 824 United Presbyterian churches in the United States are without rectors, according to statistics compiled at the Xenia Theological Seminary here.

While there are 948 ministers of the denomination in this country, 191 churches are without rectors because of the large number of clergymen needed for school and home mission activities, and work of the denomination boards and agencies, it was explained.

British Women Ready to Fight for Sex Equality.

London, Aug. 30.—That women have been deliberately hoaxed by men law-makers is the deepening suspicion of feminist leaders in England. So strong is the feeling that a deputation representing the principal organizations of women throughout the country is to wait upon the Home Secretary to urge amendment of the Sex Disqualification Removal Act.

In the opening sentence of the act it is laid down that a person shall not be disqualified by sex or marriage from the exercise of any public function. It is now clear, say the feminists, that whenever it is challenged the act fails to secure sex equality. Its chief effort has been to enable women to sit on juries which, rightly or wrongly is regarded by most English people as a penalty rather than a privilege of equal citizenship. Further, women have been admitted as lawyers, but this is because the legal societies have accepted the spirit of the act and have not chosen to challenge its letter. Apart from these points the act, according to its women critics, has cooked in some vital particulars to give women equal opportunity in the Civil Service, and it does not safeguard the position of women public servants, as exemplified in the differentiation between men and women police when the plea of economy being necessary, most of the latter were dismissed. It does not secure women public servants from dismissal on account of marriage. It does not secure admission for women to the universities on equal terms with men, and it does not permit women, otherwise qualified, to sit in the House of Lords.

Exchequer Will Decide Widow's Damage Claim.

Charlottetown, P.E.I., Aug. 29.—One of the most interesting cases to come before the exchequer court is being tried before Judge L. A. Audette, of Ottawa, here.

This is a case of the widow of the late Frank Howard Hiale vs. The King, claiming damages to the amount of $25,000 for death of her husband, which occurred in March 1921. Hiale was employed in the C. N. R. machine shops in this city and while at work a chain holding the tender of a locomotive parted, the tender pinning deceased underneath. Death resulted from injuries sustained.

Hello Girls Supply Weather Forecast.

LONDON—(A.P.)—Eity the London telephone girls! They are supposed to be able to tell people what the weather will be like. In this, their newest duty, perhaps they will receive a sigh or two of sympathy from the operators of switchboards in America who for so many years bore the suffering of having subscribers ring up to ask "What time is it, please? My clock has stopped."

Not long ago the Post Office, which owns all the telephones in Great Britain, arranged with the Air Ministry to supply each exchange with daily forecasts of the weather in its vicinity. The first month this information was available to subscribers 10,172 persons called up to find out if it was going to rain. Of course it usually was, the way of a British weather being a wet one. In London most of the inquiries were made on Fridays and Saturdays. This was taken to mean that the only time people really care about climate over here is when they are set for an outing. The rest of the time they cannot be bothered, let the fox fall where they may.

Besides it is cheaper not to care. The Post Office is not giving away tips on the weather for the mere fun of it. Those who get information from Central must pay two-pence, the cost of a regular city call.

Hardly anyone troubles to ring up and find out the time. Maybe minutes do not mean so much in this easy-going land as in the supposedly "snappy" United States.

Nursery Notes.

In bathing infants and young children the water should be neither hot nor cold. Constant hot baths are weakening, and cold baths are quite unfit for young children, as they are not vigorous enough to get the necessary re-acton.

Mail-carts with a straight-backed seat and a footboard are only suitable for youngsters of from three to four years old; for babies they are positively injurious.

The diet for children must be plain and nourishing, and sufficiently varied. The result of having the same fare day in day out is often loss of appetite and diminished nutrition.

Teach the little ones from the first to be tidy. To fold up garments neatly at night is not beyond the powers of a three-years-old, and at four the art of keeping a drawer in order may easily be instilled.

The simplest way to end a corn is Blue-jay. Stops the pain instantly. Then the corn loosens and comes out. Made in clear liquid and in thin plasters. The action is the same.

The Women's Column.

Toronto, Sept. 7.—A country kitchen in cross-section—has drawn many women to the Women's Building at the Canadian National Exhibition this year. Mrs. H. M. Aitken, of Beeton, Ont., is in charge. She knows all about poultry, being sole manager of a 20 acre poultry farm, but she has cooked enough good things for her family to be famed as a housekeeper. Her kitchen at the Fair was not a "model" one, but it had many features from which a model kitchen could be made.

The walls were painted deep ivory; there were flowers in the windows, curtained by unbleached factory cotton, bordered with cushions of the blue. Perhaps many will say "where is the time for a rest?" but there would be easing of tired feet and smoothing out of wrinkles if every country kitchen had just such a couch. To have her children near, Mrs. Aitken fitted up "a children's corner," hanging low on the wall. Delicious looking samples of canning and preserving line the cupboard shelves. The oil stove was there, and near it a small churn which turns out five pounds of butter after twenty minutes turning. Then a humble, covered garbage can, which Mrs. Aitken declared "is getting to be quite popular with country women, thank goodness."

DRINK MILK AND GAIN WEIGHT.

Montreal, Sept. 7.—"Drink milk and gain weight," is a slogan which is rapidly growing in popularity among Montreal's younger generation. Some time ago the principals of three of the city schools became so impressed with the merits of milk as a food for boys and girls that they had a milk lunch served daily to a large number of the children. This in turn impressed the Protestant School Commissioners, to the extent that they have sent a letter to all principals recommending the establishment of midmorning milk lunches as a regular feature of the school routine.

THE SECRETARY'S POWERS.

The case of Alexander Campbell, who was sentenced to the murder of the Britton, reintroduces the public interest in the prerogative of a single State official, at his behest, the whole machinery of the law may be overruled and a decision overruling the Courts undertaken. It is the safety-valve of the legal system, introduced to prevent that last dread penalty shall not be enacted where exists any doubt or consideration, humane or in the English legal system, that in the Scottish, there is a prisoner, convicted by a jury, to appeal; but that against the prisoner the last resort of the direct to the Home Secretary. In this case this final appeal tri-

It is customary for the Home Secretary, in cases of appeal to him, to call in his legal advisers of the Crown, whose judicial experience and judgment is utilized to guide the official mind. In the case of Mason, the Crown's legal advisers, together with Sir Archibald Bodkin and Sir Richard Muir, both of whom were concerned in the prosecution of Mason, were summoned to assist the Home Secretary.

Sir Archibald Bodkin was known as a most humane prosecuting counsel. In the Starchfield murder case, where the father was charged with killing in a railway train his own little fat-haired boy, a street news-vendor, Sir Archibald performed an act almost unknown in big murder trials. After having led his own evidence against Starchfield, Sir Archibald turned to the judge and asked that the case be stopped. He declared there were discrepancies in the testimony of his witnesses as to the clothes worn by Starchfield when he was supposed to kill his son; and he would not go to the jury on such discrepancies. In this the judge concurred, and Starchfield walked out of the dock. And here, in the Mason case, Sir Archibald's humane consideration exerted itself on behalf of the Scottish prisoner—the man who said he was innocent and would die as a Scotsman. Sir Richard Muir, who opposed Mason at the trial, it is to be remembered, is a Greenock man, a fellow-Scot. He it was who convicted Crippen. But Sir Richard also is a very humane counsel.

Harking back to another great appeal case, that of Oscar Slater, of 14 years ago, here the Scottish Secretary (who fulfils the same function in the case of crimes committed in Scotland as the Home Secretary does for England), called in Lord Haldane, the famous Scottish legal luminary, to advise him; and although everything is a secret that passed between them, it is generally supposed that Lord Haldane advised there were doubts enough to warrant a reprieve—a decision that received the approval of Sir Marshall Hall and many other great legal luminaries. On that point, by the way, the great English law authority, Sir Herbert Stephen, declared that the case against Starchfield, which Sir Archibald Bodkin stopped, was stronger than against Oscar Slater. That shows how great legal minds study the evidence and weigh everything up from a judicial standpoint.

The Secretary's Powers.

Apart from any actual petition for reprieve lodged in his hands, the State Secretary may grant this act of clemency upon other grounds. That was the case, for example, of James Bone, the Glenhuck miner, who was sentenced to death in Glasgow High Court by Lord Ardwall for the murder of his wife. Some doubts were expressed at the time regarding the sanity of Bone, whose behaviour in the dock was altogether unique—pleading guilty for one thing. The feeling that he was a half-crazy creature so much influenced the Court that the legal gentleman who was acting as Advocate Deputy, asked all the witnesses "this question—'Did you think he was wise—you know what I mean by that? good, plain, Scotch word 'wise'?"

After his condemnation and removal to Ayr prison, medical examination was made of him again, and latterly the Scottish Secretary intervened and ordered a reprieve. To indicate the condition of Bone's mind further, when the Ayr officials visited him in his cell and told him he was reprieved, Bone looked up amazed and asked, "What do you mean by that—I want to be whaur my wife is!"

Perhaps the biggest rumpus that was ever kicked up over the decline of the Scottish Secretary to move in a petition for reprieve occurred in the West of Scotland just fifty years ago. Two For-Glasgow poachers, of whom Mullins was one, had been condemned to death for the shooting of a gamekeeper who had come upon them while they were out on poaching bent. It had been suggested in the evidence that the gamekeeper had acted too aggressively and induced the poachers to shoot. A vigorous attempt was made all over the West of Scotland to save them from the gallows. However, despite a widely-signed petition, the Scottish Secretary declined to respond, and the two poachers were executed in Duke Street Prison, Glasgow.

That agitation in favor of Mullins and his associate recalled, in the fervor of the movement, the hue-and-cry some months ago to save Mrs. Thompson from the gallows. Here also, there being two persons concerned, the State Secretary could not very well allow one off without making matters a great deal worse; while both obviously could not get off for a murder so coldly prepared and executed.

reprieve was uttered concerned the death of Fraser and Rollins, the two Queen's Park murderers. The public mind never veered in its detestation of the pair of sulking ruffians; and not a drop of ink was spilled in writing to the Scottish Secretary over their fate. When the jury retired for consideration of their verdict, and the prisoners were momentarily taken downstairs to the cells, big Fraser, the Australian, remarked quite unaffectedly, "I am afraid there's only one way out of this, and that's at the end of the rope!"

MILKMAID MILK IS THE BEST MILK MADE

Just Folks.

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

THE BROTHERHOOD OF CARE.

I saw a troubled man to-day,
A stranger's face which plainly told
Some anxious care had come his way
It looked so raw and old.

He smiled not when the jest went round
And shared not in the cheer,
But kept his eyes upon the ground
Like one who does not hear.

A wild canary's silver throat
Poured music from a tree—
The bird which owns the sweetest note
He never turned to see.

Oh, I myself have sat that way,
Half fast by grief or care;
I, too, have lived my troubled day
In darkness and despair.

I have been blinded to delight
And deemed to be the best,
And stared awake to nurse at night
The sorrow in my breast.

And though he would not know my name,
Or guess that I was there,
I brooded with him just the same
And made for him a prayer.

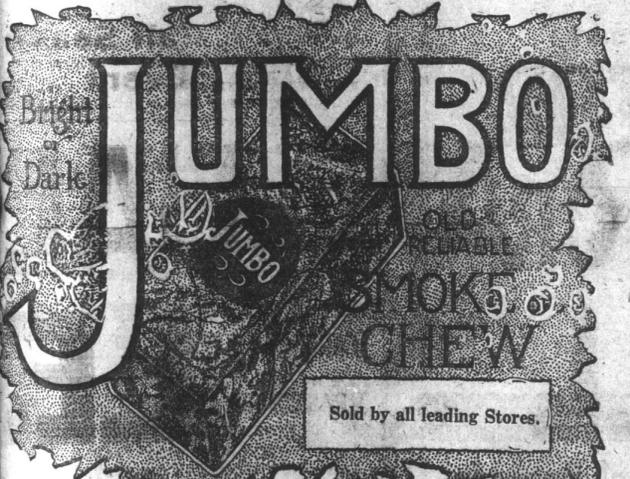

God help him to be strong, said I,
God help him to be true;
In this, his hour of doubt, he sigh
And bring him safely through.

Five Bits of Education.

(Halifax Chronicle.)

Dr. Murray Butler, President of the University of Columbia, in an address in the London vacation course for teachers, gave an interesting estimate of real values in education as they appear in an eminent American teacher. In America, he said, there was a growing question as to whether the great educational system was achieving results adequate to its cost, and that question must be dealt with in a frank and open fashion. The point to be met was why it was that with all the expenditure on educational development there seemed to be a gap between educational ideals and the results in the public opinion of the world.

The distinction must be realized between attending school and college and "getting education." It would never do to accept the advice of the famous

The Whiteinch Case.

Where there are two persons, and a request for reprieve is asked for one, the Secretary of State seldom intervenes. The setting up of an anomaly or partiality in favour of one person is what the law tries always to avoid. It is the worst of all judgment to save one and execute another. However, such a step was actually undertaken in connection with the death sentences passed upon William Harkness and Mrs. Harkness for the murder in Whiteinch in October, 1921, of the little message girl, Lizzie Benjamin. Here, without any statement in evidence emerging to warrant such a recommendation, the jury added a rider to their verdict that they extend to Mrs. Harkness a plea for mercy—which the Secretary for Scotland accepted and interposed with a reprieve.

The interference of the jury in this way irrevocably sent Harkness to the gallows—as the Secretary could not do by the act of clemency—and yet those who were in the closest contact in prison with Harkness were agreed that he was the less guilty of the two. Indeed, the highest possible authority on that point indicated to the writer, while he was handling the pack of cards with which Harkness had played "Patience" in the condemned cell, that he was satisfied Harkness did not kill the girl. The fault of his death really lay with the jury's rider; as no doubt, in mercy to the woman, they thought they were doing a very humane act. But they forgot that Harkness could not, as a man, go into the box and say anything against his wife. So, even where a jury wishes to show its humanity, we see here the grave danger of going beyond the evidence.

Perhaps the one case in Scotland for the past generation where not a word of regret or a solitary cry for Sarcasm.

A very stout man mounted the scales and dropped a penny in the slot.

After a furious clanking and rattling the pointer finally came to rest not far from the twenty-stone mark.

There was an unseen witness to the ceremony, and as the big man contemplated the result, the voice of a small boy piped from behind him: "Say, mister, how many times did it go round?"

hymn, "We don't know where we are going, come along." The old standard by which education was tested was growth in information. Something was wanted to take the place of the quantitative standard for testing education.

President Butler suggested five tests by which a truly educated man can be distinguished.

1. Correctness and precision in the use of the mother tongue.
2. Refined and gentle manners. Good manners were an effective measure of sound morals.
3. Sound standards of appreciation of beauty, and worth and character based upon these standards.
4. The power and habit of reflection.
5. Efficiency of power to do, in the sense of disciplined and organized will.

All these tests are valuable, but Number 4 deserves special emphasis, for Dr. Butler means thereby, we take it, that "the power and habit of reflection," that is the power to think, is an essential end of education.
