The Cornwall Manufacturing Company

The Cornwall Manufacturing Company nave pleasure in intimating the complete restoration of their works at Cornwall which are now in full operation, producing large quantities of White and Grey Blankets, and Heavy Medium Class Tweeds.

They regret, however, having again to call attention of the public to the continuance of the disreputable practice of importing English Blankets and selling them as Canadian. These Blankets are made largely of Shoddy and Cotton Waste, with a small percentage of pure Wool, and though sightly in appearance, closely imitating the Cornwall Blankets, and ticketed "Canadian Manufacture," have neither warm nor wear, but can Blankets, and ticketed "Canadian Mannfecture," have noitaer warm nor wear, but can be sold at a lower price than the Cornwall Blankets (which are made of Pure Wool) can be produced for.

The public are cautioned against this at tempted deception, and respectfully informed that the name of the CORNWALL MAN-UFACTURING COMPANY is printed on he ticket of every Blanket made by them.

Irish patriotism has many a charge to bring against England, which can be but too well substantiated. England cannot complain if Irishmen have a long memory. There are, however, features in the long tragical story which, if they do not palliate, at least explain and make intelligible much that we could wish undone —features which naturally enough the —features which naturally enough the Irish overlook, yet which should be borne in mind, if an impartial judgment is to be formed on the controversy. I was in mind, if an impartial judgment is to be formed on the controversy. I was aware how great an influence America possesses in Ireland. The judgment of America has more weight in Ireland than twenty batteries of English cannon; and sthat judgment ought to be pronounced after hearing only the counsel for the plaintiff. I said hastily, I think I will go over and give some lectures on the other side. I spoke without serious intention; but the idea having once presented itself gathered form and fixity. I am not an I Irishman. I do not own on aere of land in Ireland, but circumstances during the last thirty years have thrown me much among the Irish people. They are a people who either attract strongly, or repel strongly. I myself had always felt myself specially drawn toward them. When at college, I used to spend my vacations wandering in the Irish mountains. I have lived in peasants' cabins for months together. I was once laid up with a severe illness in the wilds of Mayo, and the poor creatures treated me with a tenderness which I shall never forget. Their history attracted me. Their condition personally interested me. I knew I reland afterwards, in 1848, in the Smith O'Brien insurrection. Since that time I have been an Irish tenant. Indeed, I may say I am an eviced tenant. I have been turned out of my holding, and can sympathize with the special wrong of the country, as I was very unwilling to go. But my landlord simply wanted to live in his own house and attend to his duties. If all evictions were as innocent as mine, there would be little to complain of, and when I go back I hope to find some other place in the same county which will suit me as well.

When I was writing my History of England, I was led to look closely into the conduct of the English Government toward Ireland in earlier times. When I read what very few persons have read—the secret correspondence between the English and Irish Administrations during all that period. I felt, in short, that he supposed I should tell the truth; there was nothing so un when he put his face close to the opposite side of the timber, and the auger coming through pierced his eye-ball. It is probable that the poor child will lose the sight of the eye.

Gentlemen, it is now 360 years since an Englishman was sent over from London to examine and report upon the causes of Irish discontent. It was a time the cause of Irish discontent. It was a time the cause of Irish discontent. The result was universal misery, and the conclusion was that the case was hopeless. "Our fathers," this writer said, "could find no tremedy." They had more wit and wisdom than we. How, then, can we find it? Wise men say that "the herb that will heal the wound did never grow." Nearly 400 years have passed away; we are still seeking for that herb and cannot find it. I know not if it grows anywhere, but I yet believe that though no growth of the old hemisphere, it may be discovered in the new. It is that plant which I have come in search of. I believe it to be American opinion.

Ourselves at our wit's end, if America will counsel England what to do that she has left undone, what wrong she can yet redress that Ireland may justly complain of, England, I am certain, will listen respectfully, cordially, gratefully.

If, on the other hand, a time is ever to come when political agitation is to end in Ireland—when Celt and Saxon, Protestant and Catholic, are to live side by side in peace and quietness, it will be when America tells the Irish that they have no longer a grievance which legislation can redress, and that they must depend for their future prosperity on their own industry.

A pro re nata meeting of the Presby tery of Guelph, in connection with the Canada Presbyterian Church, was held in Canada Presbyterian Church, was held in this town on Thursday, to consider the call addressed to the Rev. J. K. Smith, Knox Church, Galt, by the coagregation of Fort Massey, Halifax, N. S. There was a very good attendance of ministers and elders. The call, signed by ninetywas tabled, and reasons for the transla-tion read. The Rev. Dr. Topp and Dr. Clarke, M.D., of Paris, appeared to pro-secute the call, 'herequest of the con-gregation and Presbytery of Halifax. Mr.Rutherford was heard from the session, and Mr. James Kay from the congrega between Mr. Smith and the people of that church. They stated that the congregation was prepared to do anything reasonable to retain Mr. Smith's services, but felt themselves precluded by Mr. Smith's expressed determination to accept the cell, basing it on the ground of Mrs. Smith's health. Mr. Smith was then called on to express his mind in regard to the call, after which the Presbytery proceeded to delibérate, when on motion of Mr. Smellie, seconded by Mr. Ball, the Presbytery agreed to Mr. Smith's translation, expressed their regret that he had felt it to be his duty to accept the call, and prayed that every prosperity might attend him in his new field of labour. Mr. Smellie was appointed to preach Knox church vacant as soon as the Clerk had received notice of Mr. Smith's induction at Halifax.

The question naturally arises, for Mr. Whitelaw and family have no possible doubt as to their indentity, being so excoincident with the description given the Mercurx, where did these parties passed the intervening time between the first Tharsday in October and the following one? and where did they pass the period from Thursday morning till Friday morning? and what has become of then since? Who was the elderly woman, that questioned Mr. Whitelaw's daughter? These are some of the queries that readily arise from a persual of the foregoing, and it now remains for the proper authorities to endeavor to obtain definite and satisfactory replies.

teorge crossed the the park as if treadupon air. What extreme emotion, it contrasts of feeling had he endured night? His soul had been shaken had never been shaken before, and he was exalted to the seventh heaven elight and joy.

Illas might be his. That was the urous prospect which had opened up m—and opened, too, out of the denstarkness. It was a prospect which he not dared to contemplate before, for gh he loved Lilias with all the upth of his nature, and had also read the assurance of her affection, he not dreamed it possible that she over one earth could never wed, ower on earth could prevent their ts from twining round each other; iderations of prudence or safety, or of them from yielding to the impulsive wor of affection; but they were im-ther worldy influence, could them from yielding to the impuls we faffection; but they were it to resist the external oppositive union, and George had never be ne enough to expect it; will now; but now the expectation in the gulf of distance seem passable—the power of opposition to be invincible—thevision had Ldias and himself which made him oblivious of all outward things.

His astonishment had not 'yet ceased at the discovery—the revelation rather—that Harry Markham was the brother of Lilias. Such a realisation was delighful as it had been 'undreamed of, and of itself younded food for very happy thoughts. What slight of explanation did the fact also throw on the conduct of Lilias—the manner in which she received him at first—the case, the frankness, the kindness, with which she met him. This conduct had not, indeed, struck him as odd or unfeminine—gratitude and pleasure preventing him from seeing it in that light; but now he could see that it did not spring alone from natural goodness of her nature. It was due rather to her intimate knowledge of his own character and history, and to the deep friendship subsisting between him and her brother. She really met him that first day in the library as one whom she had already knew very thoroughly—one whom she could trust to the utmost—one whose noble culaities had all been made known to her.

acquaintance with a youth of the site sex.
Inder the influence of the delicious glats with which his mind was overring, George walked on, unheedful of direction he took, and it was not till one fence stopped his further progress the became conscious of the fact that had gone far out of his way. He was ar the edge of the ravine, but at constable distance above Matthew Greig'se ottage, and at a point where he reely remembered of having ever been, smiled to himself when he understood position, and, turning round, atruck to a broken and long disqued path the hinder would lead him by the wof the slope to one of the better ten footpaths which winded down the ine, and by which he would altimately the hind temporary abode.

It had proceeded some distance along a tangled and grass-grown path, and again become absorbed in his heaven.
