News From All Over Canada.

A movement for reformed spelling in Toronto newspapers is on foot. It was begun by a circular letter calling attention to the irregularities in English spelling. It also points out that operators in printing plants, spent one-tenth of their time setting letters that are silent and useless.

Becoming mentally weakened from overstudy in spare hours, Wilbur D. Bourne, aged 19 years, employed in the M. C. E. shops, at St. Thomas, Ont., committed suicide the other day by shooting himself. In addition to the revolver a bottle of carbolic acid was found near the boy.

Called out of her bed by persons who said she was wanted at the bedside of a neighbor's sick child, Mrs. J. D. Casler, a widow of Woodstock, Ont., was knocked down by two men and criminally assaulted. The house was ransacked and some money stolen. Mrs. Casler lived alone. Charles O'Brien, the son of the well-to-do parents, was arrested in connection with the outrage. Mrs. Casler said she hit the hand of one of her assailants. O'Brien wore a headgear on his head which it was alleged he did not wear on the day previous to the assault.

Falling downstairs with a lighted lamp, Minnie Smith, aged 18 years, employed as a domestic at Stratford, Ont., was so badly burned that she died in the hospital.

A villy farmer was caught in Thorold, Ont., in a novel scheme to defraud an unsuspecting customer. Two men rode into town on a load of hay but when they appeared at the scales to have the hay weighed, the other man was a hole in the hay and covered himself. The chief of police learned of the trick and arrested the defrauder. Soon the driver appeared with his empty wagon weighing only a few pounds. The chief found him at a hotel and brought him back to find that the customer had been beaten out of 190 pounds.

The difficulties in the salmon fishing industry concerning the Ottawa river were practically settled at a meeting of the Department of Marine and Fisheries and Indian Department. Instead of using seines stretched across the river to catch the salmon, the Indians are to be taught how to fish with nets and will be allowed to catch the salmon all the year around. If possible they will be given a tract of land to cultivate so they can be self-supporting.

Goldwin Smith Sees Annexation

The Noted Publicist Discusses Problems of Importance.

Philadelphia, Nov. 17.—In an interview with a North American correspondent in his home at Toronto, Goldwin Smith, the noted publicist, discussed the problems of importance. He said, in the practice of good works. In the same spirit he stimulates them to new efforts in co-operation with the gifts of God, and calls their attention to the Olympic games which took place in Corinth and other cities of ancient Greece.

Among these games there was one in which a number of athletes entered the lists as contestants in a foot race. These competitors, as the apostle remarks, were subjected to very severe training several days before the race began. The successful competitor was crowned with laurels by the judges and was greeted with the plaudits of a multitude.

St. Paul with admirable tact takes occasion to remind his dear Corinthians that they also are candidates for a prize; that they also have a race to run; that the invisible angels and saints are the spectators of their degree of sanctity; that the invisible angels and saints are the spectators of their degree of sanctity; that the invisible angels and saints are the spectators of their degree of sanctity.

GOVERNMENT WITHOUT STATESMEN.

"And do you consider the form of government of the United States the best for Canada?"
"I cannot say I consider your present form of government the best for your country. You are trying to run a government without statesmen. Your president's cabinet is made up of pig-sticks at large, not men who are trained in the affairs they undertake to supervise. You have no trained statesmen."

"So soon as a man has served his few years as a leader in the Presidency you set him aside, and however weighty his influence, it is not made use of. You sit upon a man because he is a striking figure and fill him to leadership of a great political party."

"This gentle thrust at Mr. Bryan was accompanied by the remark that the speaker considered him a 'good lecturer.'
"There would seem to be no good reason why the government should not own the railroads so long as it owns the highways," said Mr. Smith "but have a care as to whom you are giving the right to do so. And have a care also as to how you attempt to carry out a policy that is not 'modern' with business that are not 'modern'ly made."

"Society is rebelling against trusts and combines. Use of political power to enforce a policy which is purely selfish is purely what we cannot expect to bear. Labor, if it is tempted to be unmeasured in its demands, will do well to bear in mind that formidable competition will be coming on the scene."
"In China there is a highly industrial population, reckoned at 400,000,000, to which these troubles are apparently unknown. The influence may not be directly felt, but it is likely to work round. Besides, capital has wings."

though we still claimed the sovereignty of the seas. In this respect things reached their worst, we are told, in the fourteenth century. Foreign merchants settled in London and London, Genoa, came from Venice. Antwerp and Florence, Lombardy. And so the period was a halcyon time for pirates, for lords of manors who had fashions, for fishermen and for wreckers.

"Brown's wooden leg has been 'paining' me of late," said Smith to his wife. "How can that be?" asked Mrs. Smith irritably.
"Mrs. Brown has been thrashing him with it," was the facetious explanation.

The Race for a Crown

Sermon (Abridged) by Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore.

So run that ye may obtain.—I Cor. ix, 24.
St. Paul praised the Corinthians for their faithful co-operation with the grace of God so that they were rich in faith and in the practice of good works. A Plea for Free Trade.

James J. Hill Wants Canadian Tariff Utterly Obliterated.

James J. Hill was the guest of honor at the banquet of the Chicago Merchants' club, the other night, and delivered an extended address upon "China's interest in reciprocity with Canada." Mr. Hill said:

"Today the entire country is suffering from lack of transportation facilities to move its business without unreasonable delay. The prevailing 'ship with the cable' is that the railways are short of cars, while the fact is that the storage is on the tracks and terminals to provide a greater opportunity for the movement of the cars."

Mr. Hill pointed figures showing that the trade with the people whom the United States will be able to reach by the construction of the Panama canal amounts to about $21,500,000 annually, while our trade with Canada is over $200,000,000 per annum.

CANADIAN RECIPROCIITY.

Concerning reciprocity with Canada, Mr. Hill said:
"The plea for more liberal trade relations is not only for the benefit of individual selfishness. The conclusive argument for reciprocity with Canada always has been and must be the experience of the present American states. Had it not been prohibited by the constitution, such state of the Union would have levelled a duty on all commerce crossing its boundaries. Yet all acknowledge that that one great factor in the development of the United States has been the commercial trade between the states has favored all of them. Whatever commercial policy endorses the greatest benefit on the whole thing will best advance the various parts and this city will receive and confer inestimable benefits under a more liberal trade competition. Canada will in any event and under any system be opened up and highly developed."

PLEA FOR FREE TRADE.

"The manufacturing interests of both an alarm, but there is no danger here. We have as much reason to dread Canadian competition as Pennsylvania has to fear protection against North Dakota. Canada would be in any event and under any system be opened up and highly developed."

COLD TEA FOR TYPHOID FEVER.

Important News of the World.

Piety no Criterion of Diplomatic Success.

Rome, Nov. 16.—The plan of Pius X. to appoint to diplomatic positions in the Church prelates of piety and sanctity of life, regardless of their diplomatic training, has proved a failure, as many of the troubles which have fallen upon the Church of late are directly traceable to the diplomatic inexperience of some of the Papal representatives abroad.

Because of this the Pope has now decided that a competitive examination for fitness to the diplomatic career of the Church be held next month, in order to discover some hidden diplomatic talent among the many prelates of the Curia and utilize it on behalf of the Church.

Formerly most of the Church diplomats obtained their experience at a special school established in the Roman Academy of Noble Ecclesiastics, which was recently abolished by order of the Pope.

Berezovsky Freed by French Government.

Paris, Nov. 15.—Berezovsky, who on June 6, 1897, fired two shots at the Russian Czar, Alexander II, while the Russian sovereign was driving in the Bois de Boulogne in the company of the late Emperor Napoleon III, and who was sentenced to imprisonment for life because of his crime, has just been pardoned by the French government.

He has spent most of his time in New Caledonia, where he had obtained from the officials a concession which provided him with a residence and a piece of land for cultivation. It is said that Berezovsky is now insane and that he will have to be sent to an asylum. He is sixty-nine years of age and, although he has expressed a desire to return to Russia, his native country, it is thought that his request cannot be granted.

Sister of King Edward Who is a Busy Woman.

London, Nov. 10.—Princess Christian the eldest living sister of King Edward, has so active a life that she finds two judgments inadequate to her responsibilities, and therefore has appointed another in addition to Mrs. Dick Grayham and Miss Emily Losh. The Princess's choice has fallen upon Mrs. Cunningham-Bruce, who has constantly been about with her, and recently accompanied her abroad. Mrs. Cunningham-Bruce, before her marriage, was Miss Cecil Clifton; she has been a widow for some years, her husband, Captain Cunningham-Bruce, of the Black Watch, eldest son of Lord Thurlow, having been killed at Magersfontein.

Princess Christian is very active in good works, especially practical charities and in her social duties are very numerous. Ten years ago, at her own request, she was appointed a patroness of the New York School of Applied Design. This institution has been for some time one of the best to better the condition of mankind.

Man Triumphs Over Headgear in Theatre.

Paris, Nov. 10.—Suffering man at the Paris theatres who languishes behind the enormous edifices of gentle woman, pulled out at the sides and pinned on top to obscure the view, has discovered a way to both end his woes and be revenged on the tormentor. The introduction of the wreath of velvet and ribbon in lieu of a bonnet by the League of Little Hats, far from ending the scourge of monstrous headgear, has permitted a sight of the actors at long range. This is a long cane with a visor at one extremity which fits over the eyes and a lens at the other, which by a clever arrangement of reflectors in the interior gives a magnified vision of the people on the stage. This arrangement can accommodate itself to the smallest space between heads and has proved very satisfactory.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES COLDS, ETC.

Calling the Moose!

Bangor, Me., Nov. 19.—All through northern Maine and Canada, hunters and guides are now busy in the woods calling the moose and thus endeavoring to lure it to its doom. The protection accorded to the animal in recent years has increased its numbers, and the signs of moose in the woods are more plentiful now than at any time in the last ten years, although in Maine the animals have gone deep into the woods, so that a hunter must go far to get a good specimen. The season began in New Brunswick and eastern Quebec on September 15, in western Quebec on October 1, and in Maine on Oct. 15. Maine allows only six weeks for moose hunting, or until December 1, and only bulls having at least two horns are eligible for capture. Few fine specimens have yet been brought in the hunters go far into the woods for the big bulls not returning, usually, until near the end of the season. The moose is killed by the hunter's condition, and so the veteran hunters are never in a hurry to get the one animal allowed by law.

The beautiful dark coloring so much admired in the heads and skins of the moose becomes more attenuated with the advance of the winter season. This fact, so well known to old moose hunters, is the more remarkable, as almost every woodland neighbor of the moose is provided with a natural disguise in winter in the shape of a perceptible whitening of its hair or fur, which renders it comparatively indistinguishable from the surrounding snow. The caribou turns white in winter, while the weasel, the ermine and the hare become the color of snow. But the moose is the monarch of the forest, and needs no disguise. He fears no beast of prey that inhabits these northern regions. While the glossy black of winter in the color of the bull moose is highly prized in the trophies of the chase, it is unsafe for the hunter to leave in the season for them the maximum of the best heads have lost their horns. These are sometimes shed in November, and sometimes, though most frequently in the case of the smaller specimens, retained till January. The shed horns are usually the first to shed their antlers. Some of the enormous horns shed by veteran bulls are occasionally picked up by hunters and others, and often are mounted by expert taxidermists with good effect upon heads from which other sets had been cast.

The life history of the moose is interesting. When the snow has left the ground entirely bare late in April or early in May, the moose migrate from their winter haunts and approach the marshes, ponds and rivers, where they search for their summer food, consisting of the various aquatic plants which flourish there. Their favorite diet is the water lily, on which they browse as soon as it makes its appearance on the surface of the water, and frequently keeping the head for a minute and more at a time over the water. When they cannot obtain the water lily they feed upon the rushes.

About this time, or a little later, the females go apart, seeking the most impenetrable thickets of hard-wood on the water, and there bring forth their young. Animals two years old never produce more than one at a birth. Those of three years old and upward almost always produce two, and occasionally, though rarely, there are three little ones at a birth. As the season advances the moose frequent water more and more, often remaining in it for hours at a time in the heat of midsummer, not only to enjoy its cooling effect, but also to escape the plague of flies, from which they are great sufferers. There are huge insects that burrow deep into the flesh of the moose to lay their eggs.

A heavy thunderstorm seems to afford the name of enjoyment to the moose. They swim back and forth during its continuance, apparently in a high state of delight. When the female during her visits to the water hides her young with great care, to protect them from the ferocity of the old males, who are unappreciative parents and would destroy them. The mother generally seeks a clump of large bushes, or a spruce thicket, which, from its density, prevents the male from reaching them.

The horns of the bull begin to sprout in April, and grow rapidly. Generally by September they have lost their mossy covering, or, in other words, are out of velvet. At this period the males are frequently fat, and generally fierce and savage, ready to attack man or anything else that stands in their way. In the course of a few weeks they grow thin and poor because of their continual roaming and their many combats, and the fact that at this time they also refuse food. At this period the loud bellow of the male is frequently heard and distinguished by the hunter at a distance of two or three miles, in the stillness of the night. The bulls make another noise, which, from the nature of its sound, the hunters call chopping. It is produced by forcibly lashing together and separating the jaws in a peculiar manner. This as the name implies, resembles the sound of an axe used at a great distance.

The call of a cow, which the hunter imitates usually through a horn, or trumpet made of birch bark, is a series of grunts or croans, winding up with a prolonged, dismal, and rather unearthly roar, which in calm weather can be heard distinctly two or three miles away. One peculiarity of the moose is that he goes to the point where the call proceeds, even after a considerable time has elapsed, and without a repetition of the sound to guide him. Thus, after calling unsuccessfully of an evening, hunters have known a moose to come straight to the place on the following morning from a distance of nearly two miles.

From late September till the early part of November is the season for calling the moose. The full of the moon is the best time for the bulls seeked come up to the call before sunset, and if the night be dark the hunter often fails to see the game that has come to his call sufficiently well to be able to take aim. Most of the success in hunting moose by the call is had in the half hour between sundown and dark. Later than that, even with good moonlight, one cannot make sure of his shot. A still better time is to call from a canoe, paddled up to and conveyed in a little island or point on a lake or river. Sitting in a spot like this for the greater part of a night is sometimes a severe tax upon the patience of the hunter who must call from his calls at intervals of a quarter of an hour or so, and get no response but the more dismal wailing of a dismal call, repeated here and there through the woods.

On the other hand, there is nothing more exciting than to hear a moose slowly approaching through the woods. One is sometimes kept on the tip-toe of expectation for half an hour or even longer. The stillness of the sunset is so profound that the slightest movement is distinctly audible. The sportsman hardly dares to breathe; and when at last the animal comes out on the lake or opening within range, it is a great moment. He has not delayed his coming till it is too late to see him. Sometimes the moose answer to the call much more readily than at other times. A young bull has been brought up by the sound of beating the birch bark of a tree to make a horn. He heard the noise and came up, doubtless taking it for the noise sometimes made by a moose in tearing bark from a tree with his horns.

The most successful callers of moose are Indians; and it is an education to hear their low, half-suppressed call, which is sometimes needed to bring a wary old bull within range. These low calls are uttered in a great number of passing uncertain whether to come or go, close to the caller, yet not within shot, require the greatest skill. A false note and all is lost. The old hunters are particularly careful to give up their night and day, and sometimes to the death. Instances are on record in which rival lovers, lured from different directions by the call of a row moose or the hunter's counterfeits, have charged so violently upon each other that their horns have become interlocked and they have died without getting free.

they last, are full of cares and anxieties. The more precious the crown, the more heavily it presses on the brow of him that wears it. "Unweary lies the head that wears a crown." The cares even of a Pope are poorly compensated by the splendor of a tiara. Pope Adrian IV., the only English pontiff that sat in the chair of Peter, opened his heart one day to a friend, and said to him: "In my cell I have tasted happiness, but in my ascent to greatness, at every step I have been harassed by additional cares. Observers might deem the tiara a shining crown, but I find it a burning one."

And I myself can testify, for I was an eye-witness of the scene which I describe—I can bear witness that Cardinal Sarto, patriarch of Venice (now deceased) with the burden of the papacy, with tears in his eyes, made a most earnest and pathetic appeal to his colleagues, to be relieved from a yoke too heavy for him to bear.

On the other hand, the joys of the saint's station, as it were, are without any alloy of bitterness or solicitude: "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, nor mourning, nor any weeping, nor sorrow, shall be any more, for the former things are passed away."

But you will say to me: "It is impossible for me to attain that sanctity which you commend." The temptations incident to my business or professional affairs, and my domestic vexations, are an insuperable bar to that purity of soul and tranquility of heart which are essential to union with God. I should have to retire from active life in order to escape my daily delinquencies. I am a merchant, for instance, I am tempted to overestimate the value of my goods. If I don't exaggerate their price I am in danger of losing my customers, or of being overreached by an enterprising rival in the trade. I am a lawyer. I am tempted to encourage my client's suit, though I regard the case as a hopeless one. I am a contractor, and the competition has been so close that I feel inclined to use inferior materials in the construction of the building. Or, I am in the service of others, and for lack of what I consider a just compensation for my labor, I am tempted to appropriate to my own use the funds of my employers, for there is a member of my family so disagreeable a temper that I am habitually irritated and provoked to resentment.

In answer to these several excuses, I can say that there is no trade or profession or honest vocation which is essentially at variance or incompatible with the integrity of Christian life. For "God wishes all men to be saved, and to come to the knowledge of the truth." And we know that there is no salvation without sanctification.

When John the Baptist was preaching on the banks of Jordan, among those that went to hear him were soldiers and tax collectors. Now there is no class of persons who are more exposed to the temptation of deeds of violence and injustice than military men and collectors of tribute. Did John command them to renounce their calling? Did he say to them: Give up your business, get ye to a monastery? Become hermits with me in the desert? By no means. He simply exhorted them to live within their lines of duty, and to abstain from injustice and oppression.

To pursue this subject a little further, two elements are essential and sufficient for a life of righteousness—the grace of God and the corresponding use of our own free will with his grace.

God's grace will never be wanting to us. To every one he says what he declared to Paul: "My grace is sufficient for thee." And each one of us can say with the same Apostle, "I can do all things in Him that comforteth me." God bestows his grace on each of us according to our respective needs and conditions: "There are diversities of graces," says St. Paul, "but the same spirit, the same diversities of ministers, but the same Lord; there are diversities of operations, but one God who worketh all in all." The same God that gives us grace to perform my ministerial functions gives you grace to fulfill your avocations of life. The same God that sanctifies my prayer sanctifies your labor. Labor is prayer when it is consecrated to God.

In the vocabulary of a Christian there should be no such word as impossibility when it is a question of personal righteousness. If holiness of life were beyond your reach, vain would be your hope, and vain would be my preaching. You would be wasting your time in coming to church and hearing the Word of God. God never commands impossibilities. He knows full well what you are capable of accomplishing. Now, God commands each one of you to be holy: "Ye are holy," he says, "for I, the Lord your God, am holy." This is the will of God, your sanctification. He commands you to aim even at perfection, "Be ye perfect even as your heavenly Father is perfect."

I will even add that sanctity is not only practical, but it is also a cult when we consider the grace and help at our disposal. "Take upon you the yoke of the Lord," says the Lord, "for my yoke is easy and my burden is light." Sweet is the yoke which Christ puts on us, and light is the burden which he bears with us. "This is the love of God," says St. John, "that we keep his commandments, and his commandments are not heavy." I may apply to the subject of your sanctification what Moore said of the Deaconess: "This commandment

But the word is very high unto thee, in thy mouth and in thy heart that thou mayest do it."

Have you not the assurance of God's help in the combat? And if God is with you who can be against you? When the servant of Eliseus beset an army with chariots and horses sent by the King of Syria to capture his master, he was filled with despair; but the man of God said to his servant: "Fear not, for there are more with us than with them. And the Lord opened the eyes of the servant, and he beheld a heavenly host surrounding the Prophet of the Lord. Fear not, brethren, though dragons contend against you, the angels of God are fighting more powerfully for you. You have the same help that was given to the saints in their earthly campaigns, and they had to pass through the ordeal of temptations which now assail you.

THE DEATH PENALTY.

France has abolished the death penalty. The great European republic has taken another advanced step, and this step is a long one, reaching as it does from the guillotine to imprisonment for life, in less than 100 years. Few countries have so revolutionized its penal laws.

Yet what is more noteworthy, perhaps, than the mere abolishment of the death penalty, is the precaution taken against pardons to those who may be sentenced to imprisonment for life. This country has experienced considerable trouble because of petitions for pardons and in the United States at the present time the governor and council of Maine have before them a petition for the pardon of one, Gilman, who murdered the mother of his affianced wife because she objected to their marriage. He has been in prison forty-two years, and even in asking pardon he admits that he committed the crime, although under provocation. Such petitions supply the only real objection to imprisonment for life.

Yet even this objection is not wholly disadvantageous, because when a man is sentenced to life imprisonment there is opportunity to correct errors in his trial and conviction. Imprisonment for life affords the state a chance to modify punishment, even to pardon, in case mitigating circumstances may be subsequently disclosed, or wrong done a comparatively innocent person. But precautions, against too great leniency should always be provided, and France appears to have provided them.

BECLUDED CHICAGO.

Funny thing happened out in Chicago election day. Republicans who wanted to catch the negro vote nominated a black man for judge without the least expectation that he would be elected. Republicans cut him right and left, according to pre-arranged plan, but the negro got in by a comfortable margin. Now they are frantically trying to get him to resign. They declare that it was all a mistake, and that it wouldn't be right to have a negro judge the delinquencies of the whites. This is a rather peculiar plan, since for years and years white judges have been sacking negroes at every opportunity, and the judge elect refuses to recognize it as any sort of argument. Moreover, he says there are not enough politicians in Chicago to drive him out of office. He will take his seat and the politicians can behave themselves in his district or take their medicine. It is to laugh.

Some scientific chaps says if there were but one potato left in the world a careful man could take it and in ten years have enough seed to supply the world. Suffering Ireland! Wouldn't a potato taste good at the end of that ten years?

A woman in one of the back counties of Indiana pitched into her husband and licked him because he wouldn't vote. More power to her elbow! The citizen who won't vote ought to be licked by a woman.

"Election," says a Western paper, "comes altogether too frequently." Puzzle, guess the paper's politics.

Panama has gone crazy over baseball. That settles the canal. The boys won't have time to dig it.

Words-Kind and Otherwise.

During the past year we have had many words of appreciation, and below we take the liberty of reproducing a few:

"If it was not for the heading we would not know that The Monitor was the same paper as the Monitor of last year. There is something in it now."—B. H. L.

"The Monitor is more like a city daily than any paper outside of Halifax."—B. L. E.

The editor of an esteemed contemporary says: "When I open The Monitor I am struck by its city-like appearance."

Another editor writes:—"You are getting out a daisy paper—a credit to Nova Scotia journalism."

"You have certainly improved the Monitor. I can read it right through now and find very little if any news that I have seen before."—M. J. D.

An Annapolis county divine says: "The Monitor is a good paper. On Wednesdays, when it arrives, I drop all others, even the Halifax papers, to read it."

Here's our one knock:—"I am much disappointed in the Monitor this year. Neither typographically or otherwise, has it been up to the standard."

Henry B. Fuller, the author of "The Chevalier of Fenwick Farm," has recently written very little, but in the Christmas Scribner he returns to his best manner with a story of Americans travelling in Italy, entitled "Adolorata's Intervention." The delicate and charming humor of Mr. Fuller are shown at their best.

Six men have been killed so far in Maine since the opening of the present hunting season by careless hunters.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor of the Monitor.

Sir,—The present condition of the roads throughout the county, and especially in the towns and villages, remind us that some steps should be taken by our council to prevent so much of the same kind occurring in the future. If people would stop to count the cost, say nothing of the inconvenience of bad roads, all would agree that it is too expensive for a busy season with scarcity of help. When a man and team can only deliver half as much, or travel one half as far over poor roads, as over good ones, it is easy to see that the poor road is taxing us double for transportation, or in other words, it is costing us double as much as it should to travel or convey our products to shipping centers. Farmers who are shipping now can easily count the cost.

There are many ways of remedying this tremendous expenditure of time and energy, and most every one will have a way of his own, and for the sake of hearing from others, I send this to invoke discussion.

It would seem to me the best plan to follow along the line of "The Ontario Good Roads Association," or as they are doing in many parts of the United States, Massachusetts, in particular, and begin doing permanent buying of power road making machinery, or that part of it that could not be rented in the county, a stone crusher and roller. There are several stationary engines from which power could be started in one of the towns, and through the towns along the road in repair, until they got the main thoroughfare macadamized.

This would be a great boon, not only to the people of the towns, but to the farmers and hucksters who had heavy loads for a long distance over bad roads to find the last mile in the town the worst of the haul, as all the roads of the country pour all their traffic into it. When the centres were done, the money that now goes to help keep them up could be given to the outlying districts.

I hope others will take this matter up at once and let the question be thoroughly discussed, and then see what is best to advise our councilors along that line.

Thanking you for space, I am yours
PEDESTRIAN.

To the Editor of the Monitor.

A recent writer to the Monitor referred to the non-enforcement of the truant law in the town. It cannot be denied that too large a number of children do not attend school who should be made to do so. There are, however, difficulties in the way. Most, and perhaps all, of these children would belong to the primary and advanced primary departments. But, these departments are now full to repletion. It would be vain to expect any teacher to attend properly to more than fifty children, even if there were room for more.

Will the citizens, of the town authorize the school board to fit up the vacant room in the school building and engage an additional teacher to meet the pressing need? This seems to be the only way out of the difficulty.

And what about the curfew law? It is understood that the councilors authorize the policeman to enforce this law. And yet, children of a tender age are seen wandering about the streets at all hours of the night learning and practicing lessons which are not for their good. Who is to blame for this?

Yours truly,
C. J.

"Prince" John van Buren, who was received in England in the "thirties" with great distinction because of his father's position as President, left some interesting letters which have just come to light, describing English and French society as he was permitted to see it. These will appear in the Christmas Scribner.

PARAGRAPHS WITH POINTS.

The New York burglar whose loot consisted of gas fixtures is naturally glad that he will get off with a light sentence.

The Kentucky man who has been asked for twelve years must be in a serious condition when Kentucky ex-prosopers have no effect on him.

The Chicago woman who knocked her husband down with an alarm clock probably found that the clock was not so slow at a time like that.

The London waiters have started a movement to put a stop to the practice of tipping. This fear of dying rich must be spreading rapidly.

New York girls are reported to be indulging in "chocolate jugs." Now they will begin to understand the meaning of "that dark brown taste."

One Oklahoma editor refers to an esteemed contemporary as a "red-headed wind bag." If he was not red-headed before, this will make him so.

Paris newspapers are not permitted to print the details of divorce proceedings. That city is not particularly anxious to know just how wicked it is.

Clara wants a "thorough understanding" with the United States. It will help some if Cuba will understand once for all that she is expected to behave.

The New York woman who threw a burglar down and sat on him may be a heroine all right, but somehow one cannot help wondering whether her husband is enjoying life.

LOCAL AND SPECIAL

Printer's Ink is a great salesman. Try it. Latest advices from England tell of another slump in the apple market. Max Higgott brought in a fine specimen of garden primrose yesterday. The two schooners Packet and Dorothy were in port the first part of the week. The Baptist sewing circle will be held Thursday afternoon from 2 to 5 at the home of Mrs. (Capt.) Salter. The tides of Friday, Saturday and Sunday were very high, overflowing the wharves and marshes all along the river. M. W. Graves & Co., have finished up their season's manufacture of cider. They have made over 200,000 gallons this year. The schooner Effort, Captain Apt, arrived yesterday from Boston with a cargo of fertilizer from the Bowker Fertilizer Company, consigned to Hugh Fowler. Miss Sadie Vincent, of Onslow, who last month obtained the Empire Business College Stenographic diploma, has taken a position in the office of the News Publishing Co., Truro. A package of printed visiting cards makes a neat Christmas gift and just now is a good time to get them. Only 25 cents for fifty and almost a dozen varieties of type to select from. Baptist services on Sunday next at Bridgetown, morning and evening, and at Granville Centre in the afternoon at 3 o'clock. Pastor Warren will preach a special temperance sermon in the afternoon and evening. The ladies of the "Parsonage Aid" purpose giving a tea and very social evening all for 25 cents at the Methodist parsonage on next Tuesday evening, Nov. 27th. Tea will be served from six to eight o'clock. All are cordially invited. The Bridgetown Quadrille Club has been reorganized for the season with about twenty-five gentlemen members registered. They have only had one meeting so far but another takes place on Monday night in Bagges Black, and after that every fortnight. Non-dancers among the members can pass a pleasant evening at what if they feel so inclined. The Y. M. C. A. debate last night, although not very largely attended, was the best of the season. In the absence of O. T. Daniels, who was called away, William Burns opened the debate contending that Government ownership of all Great Industries would be beneficial to the People. E. A. Hinks responding, followed by Beve, McDonald, Underwood, Warren and Messrs. Ostrom, Caldwell and McDonald. Vote 4 to 3 in favor of the affirmative. District Meeting. The Annapolis County District meeting will be held at West Paradise on Monday evening and all day Tuesday. Rev. H. Carter, of Clementsport will preach on Monday evening. On Tuesday three papers will be read as follows: 1-What is the Greatest Question in Theological Discussion Today.-Rev. A. T. Dickman, Middleton. 2-The Greatest Need in Practical Church Work at the Present Time.-Rev. C. H. Haverstock, Nictaux. 3-How Can We Better the Spiritual Life of our People.-Rev. B. H. Smith, Medvern Square. Rev. C. H. Martell will preach on Tuesday evening. A large attendance is asked for and it is hoped to have all the churches represented. Y. M. C. A. Notes A basket ball league of four teams was organized on Monday evening. A schedule of games will be arranged later. The second of the series of monthly socials will be held Thursday evening of this week. Each member has the privilege of inviting a friend either lady or gentleman. The physical classes are well attended. The Boys' Bible class on Saturday morning is a strong feature of the work. The Sunday even. Application will be received for the English class. PERSONAL MENTION

Alden Walker is visiting friends in Lynn, Mass. Captain Longmire is reported as improving in health. Owen Currell arrived home from the Northwest last Wednesday. O. T. Daniels left yesterday for Halifax and will return tomorrow. Mrs. S. Demian and grand-daughter Helen, leave today for their home in Lynn. Miss B. S. Ruffes leaves for Boston today to visit her sister, Mrs. J. W. Freeman. W. S. Benson and Mrs. Benson, of Kentville, are here spending a part of their vacation. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Foster have arrived home from a visit of several weeks in Lynn. Wm. Coleman, of Halifax, was the guest of his sister, Mrs. H. H. Wade a few days last week. The Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia speaks at the Canadian Club, Boston, next Monday evening. E. L. Coleman, of Dartmouth, who has been the guest of her son-in-law, H. H. Wade, has returned home. Mrs. M. K. Piper was in town yesterday. She leaves today for Dover, N. H., where she has been called by the serious illness of her mother. Mrs. Stephen Porter and little son Ronald, returned to their home at West Somerville, Mass., last Wednesday accompanied by her sister Miss Annie Jefferson. Rev. I. Deight Little, pastor of the Baptist church at Summerville, Hants Co., has accepted a call to Epzaburg, and will begin his work in that town the first of the year. W. A. Chesley has returned home from the American markets where he has been purchasing Christmas and other stock. He opens up the Masonic store on Saturday with a fine bill of fancy goods. Mrs. Edward Marshall, of Bridgetown, and Mrs. Byron Chesley, of Clarence, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Stephen E. Thorne, of Lower Granville, for the next few days, returned home on Monday. James B. Connolly, the writer of sea stories, was the guest of the President on the "Mayflower" during the recent Naval Review at Oyster Bay. He will contribute to the Christmas Scriber a vivid account of that wonderful spectacle, with some glimpses of the point of view of "the man behind the gun." HYMENEAL. NELSON-BAUCKMAN. Last Wednesday evening, Nov. 14th, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Bauckman, Bridgetown, in the presence of a number of friends and invited guests, Frank Nelson and Miss Flora May Bauckman were united in marriage. Rev. W. H. Langille tying the nuptial knot. The room in which the ceremony was performed, was tastefully decorated with greenery and Chinese lanterns and produced a pretty effect. The bride, becomingly attired in white was escorted to the room and given away by her father. After the ceremony the happy couple received the usual expressions of good will and congratulations from those present, and then with the guests sat down to a well laden table, where a sumptuous supper was enjoyed. Numerous useful and pretty gifts testified to the esteem in which the couple pair were held. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson will make their home in Bridgetown. The Late Rev. L. M. Wilkins. On Sunday morning, in St. James church, preaching from the text "It is appointed unto all men once to die," the rector, Rev. E. Underwood, made special reference to the pathetic incident recorded in our columns last week, viz., the tragic death of Rev. L. M. Wilkins, at Utica, N. Y., whether he had gone to meet his newly married daughter on her bridal tour, and which took place shortly after the meeting. Mr. Underwood recalled the fact that Mr. Wilkins had formerly been a rector of the parish of Bridgetown and that it was during his rectorship that the present St. James church was built and the church added to St. Mary's church, Belleville. The pathos of the sudden occurrence came with double force to him, he said, because a few weeks ago, having heard that Mr. and Mrs. Wilkins purposed visiting Nova Scotia he had written and invited them to include Bridgetown in their itinerary and thus bring their friends here the opportunity of a re-union. To him, he said, it was a sad and pathetic incident, and he felt that before his death in which he was able to visit them "their trip to Nova Scotia would necessarily be postponed. One letter did not reach him until (as far as he could judge) within a few hours of Mr. Wilkins' death. He knew their hearts went out in deep sympathy to the peculiarly sad bereavement and he was taking it upon himself to convey this to them. He also took this opportunity of giving publicly what otherwise he should have given privately—a message contained in the letter referred to—"Most of our friends in Bridgetown," Mr. Wilkins had written, "have passed away. Please give our very kind regards to those who remain."

BRITAIN'S WAR FORCE TO BE KEPT UP.

London, Nov. 21.—The banquet for the inauguration of Sir William Trevelyan, the new lord mayor, in the Guild hall, the first under a Liberal Ministry since 1894, when Lord Rosebery was Premier, was deprived of its customary interest owing to the absence of Premier Campbell-Bannerman and Foreign Secretary Sir Edward Grey. Any weighty utterance regarding the country's policy was thus excluded. The Premier's place was filled by the Marquis of Ripon, first privy seal. A feature of the evening was the remarkable oration given to Baron Komura, the new Japanese ambassador to Great Britain. Responding to the toast, "The Imperial Services," War Secretary Haldane said that he and the first lord of the admiralty, Lord Tweedmouth, realized it was a solemn duty on their part not to diminish the country's fighting force by one whit. It was the duty of a Christian people, the speaker continued, to set an example by reducing the expenditures for armaments, but unless they had a response from other nations this was impossible. The speaker hoped the time would come when nations would look back upon these days as a period of barbarism and wonder why they had spent millions in this manner. But until that time arrived it was in the interest of peace itself that no nation let down its strength, and it was the duty of Great Britain to maintain its fighting efficiency.

MARLBOROUGH HAS QUIT LONDON CLUBS

London, Nov. 21.—The Duke of Marlborough has not been inside any of his London clubs since the day that the newspapers gave details of his separation from the Duchess. A few days ago he was staying at the Colony Hotel, where he saw no visitors. He is described by his friends as being very morose and irritable. It is now known that tremendous efforts were made by the Duke and his friends to prevent publicity, and it was pointed out that the couple could easily live in separate houses without the general public being any the wiser. It is rumored that the Duchess will depart for her estate in Paris and London. The Duke has definitely decided to close Blenheim Palace and will reside at Wordsworth House, a small property near Bloomsbury.

PRIEST BECOMES LAWYER.

Paris, Nov. 21.—Crowds gathered in the First Chamber of the Paris courts to witness the swearing in of the Abbé Lebon as a lawyer. His bishop has signified his intention of denying him the right to celebrate mass if he persists in carrying out his plan of practicing law.

HEIR TO SERVIAN CROWN IS INSANE

Venna, Nov. 21.—A despatch to Die Zeit from Belgrade states that George the crown prince, has been declared insane. There is said to be consternation at court over the matter. The Prince will be sent to a foreign sanatorium. He manifested his insanity by beating his servants and officers in attendance and calling them "Servian dogs." He has contracted large debts. The despatch to Die Zeit says his brother Alexander will be declared heir to the throne.

Tale of a Coat

The claustrum or evening coat, has become essential. There was, in fact, a time when every idleness of a fashionable society would find the claustrum a useful thing. The cutaway front of the purpose, instances, was originally cut out for the wearer when on horseback so that he would not be inconvenienced. The back would not be fastened, but the buttons at the waist, which were fastened in the tails of the coat, were fastened in the waist, with their tails at the end. The sleeves, which were cut in the style of the days, were always turned back, so that the arms were made with cuffs, which were buttoned. The collar, with its wide wings, was a novel feature of the claustrum, and was fastened in the neck, so that it would turn up conveniently in case of any weather. The dress coat, in a word, is a masterpiece of utility, and is essential, but now of no use on earth.

The claustrum was turned upside down, leaving the neck to the bottom, but the English village official was not to be lightly turned from duty. "No use you bid there, Sir," he said, severely. "I must have your name and address."

Iris, fully dressed, was out in a moment. "They have come!" she whispered. "Yes," was the cheery answer, for Jenks' face to face with danger was a very different man from Jenks' face with the infectious attacks of Cupid. "Up the ladder! Be lively! They will not be here for half an hour if they kick up such a row at the first difficulty. Still, we will take no risks. Cast down those spare lines when you reach the top and haul away when I say 'Ready'." You will find everything to hand up there.

He held the bottom of the ladder to steady it for the girl's climb. Soon her ropes fell like a message from a star: "All right! Please join me soon!"

The coiled up ropes dropped along the face of the rock. Chances, pick, hatchet, hammer, crowbars and other useful odds and ends were swung away into the darkness, for the moon as yet had not illumined the crag. The sailor darted into Belle Vue castle and kicked their leafy beds about the floor. Then he swung all the rifles, now five in number, into the shoulders and mounted the rope ladder, which, with the spare coils, he drew up and coiled with careful method.

CHAPTER XI.

The sailor knew so accurately the position of his reliable sentinel that he could follow each step of the imaginary conduct on the side of the island. The first outbreak of of denudity firing died away amidst the night of the isle, every feathered. That the Dyaks had gathered again on the beach after the killing of the scarcer was with bullets or slashing them with their heavy razors.

A hasty count was probably held, and notwithstanding their fear of the silent company in the hollow, an advance was ultimately made. Along the beach, within a few yards of the water, the shuffling of feet and the clatter of another fierce outbreak of impetuosity. This was enough. Not a man would move a step nearer that abode of the dead. The next commotion arose on the ridge near the North camp. "At this rate of progress," said Jenks to the girl, "they will not reach our house until daylight."

"I almost wish they were here!" was the quiet reply. "I find this waiting and listening to be trying to the nerves."

They were lying on a number of ragged garments hastily spread on the ledge and peering intently into the moonlit area of Prospect park. The great rock itself was shrouded in some shadows. Even if they stood up none could see them from the ground, so dense was the darkness enveloping them.

He turned slightly and took her hand. It was cool and moist. It no more trembled than his own.

"The Dyaks are far more scared than you," he murmured, with a laugh. "Cruel and courageous as they are, they dare not face a spook."

"Then what a pity it is we cannot conjure up a ghost for their benefit. All the spirits I have ever read about were ridiculous. Why cannot one be useful occasionally?"

The question set him thinking. Unknown to the girl the materials for a dramatic apparition were hidden amid the bushes near the well. He culled his brains to remember the stage effects of juvenile days, but these needed limelight, blue flames, mirrors, phobos.

The absurdity of hoping to devise a ghost in a remote island, a larger reef of the thousands in the China sea, tickled him.

"Why, what is it?" asked Iris.

He repeated his list of missing stage properties. They had nothing to do but wait, and a little in the very crux of the matter, of existence usually discuss trivial things.

"I don't know anything about phobos," said the girl, "but you can

What Do They Cure?

The above question is often asked concerning Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Favorite Prescription." The answer is that "Golden Medical Discovery" is a most potent alternative or blood-purifier, and tonic of invigorator and acts especially favorably in a curative way upon all the mucous lining surfaces, as of the nasal passages, throat, bronchial tubes, stomach, bowels and bladder, expelling a large per cent. of catarrhal cases whether the disease affects the lining of the nose, throat, stomach, bowels (as indigestion, dyspepsia, colic, constipation, etc.), bladder, uterus or other pelvic organs. Even in the chronic or advanced stages of these ailments it is often successful in effecting a cure.

"Favorite Prescription" is adapted for the cure of all cases of disease—both acute and chronic, and is especially adapted for the treatment of all cases of indigestion, nervousness, general debility, and all cases of weakness, and is especially adapted for the treatment of all cases of indigestion, nervousness, general debility, and all cases of weakness.

Both medicines are non-alcoholic, non-secret, and contain no harmful medicinal forest plants. They are both sold by druggists and chemists. You can't afford to accept as a substitute for one of these medicines of known composition any secret nostrum.

Dr. Pierce's Little's small, sugar-coated pills are taken as candy, regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels.

"It was not exactly a pleasant operation, but the only laws of necessity are those which must be broken." She understood that he did not wish her to question him further. Perhaps curiosity, now that he was safe, might have venged his heart, but he led to another demand for enlightenment, but at that instant the sound of an angry voice and the crunching of coral away to the left drove all else from her mind.

"They are coming by way of the beach, after all," whispered Jenks. He was mistaken in a sense. Another outbreak of intermittent firing among the trees on the north side of the ridge showed that some at least of the Dyaks were advancing by their former route. The appearance of the Dyak chief on the flat belt of shingle, with his right arm slung across his breast, accompanied by not more than half a dozen followers, showed that a few hardy spirits had dared to pass the walled-in death, with all its nameless terrors.

They advanced cautiously enough, as though dreading a surprise, but he carried a bright parang in his left

They advanced cautiously, but the others were armed with guns, their swords being thrust through belts. Creeping forward on tiptoes, though their distant companions were making a tremendous row, they looked at a murderous gang as they peered through the open spaces, now brilliantly illuminated by the moon.

Jenks had a sudden intuition that the pirates might abandon their quest for loot. Creeping forward on tiptoes, though their distant companions were making a tremendous row, they looked at a murderous gang as they peered through the open spaces, now brilliantly illuminated by the moon.

They were mostly bareheaded rascals, wearing Maingy hats, loose jackets and breeches, and were armed with spears, bows and arrows. One man differed essentially from the others. He was habited in the conventional attire of an Indian Mahomedan, and his skin was brown, while the swartly Dyaks were yellow beneath the dirt. Jenks thought from the manner in which his turban was tied that he must be a Punjabi Mussulman—very likely an escaped convict from the Andamans.

The most careful scrutiny did not reveal any arms of precision. They all carried muzzle loaders, either antiquated flintlocks or guns sufficiently modern to be fitted with nipples for percussion caps.

Each Dyak, of course, sported a parang and dagger-like creese, a few bore spears, and about a dozen shouldered a long straight piece of bamboo. The nature of this implement the sailor could not determine at the moment.

In the neighborhood of the fire an animated discussion took place. Though it was easy to see that the chief was all paramount, his fellow tribesmen exercised a democratic right of free speech and outspoken opinion.

Flashing eyes and expressive hands were turned toward the cave and hut. Once when the debate grew warm the chief snatched up a burning branch and held it over the blackened embers of the fire extinguished by Jenks. He seemed to draw some definite conclusion from an examination of the charcoal, and the argument thereafter proceeded with less emphasis. Whatever it was that he said evidently carried conviction.

Iris, nestling close to the sailor, whispered: "Do you know what he has found out?"

"I can only guess that he can tell by the appearance of the burned wood how long it is since it was extinguished. Clearly they agree with him."

"Then they know we are still here?" "Either here or gone within a few days." (To be continued.)

So They Laugh.

The laughter of the different nations is said to vary greatly. The Italian laugh is loud and musical; the German laugh is a deliberate fashion. The French are spasmodic and uncertain; the upper-class English regard it as always genuine, the lower-class English, explosive, and Scottish of all classes, hearty, and the Irish rollicking. The Chinese laugh is not so expressive as the European. It is usually a titter rather than a genuine outbreak of merriment. — Bristol Times.

Jack (indignantly)—Of course I do, Youngster. Well, what would you say the yolk of an egg is white, or the yolk of an egg is white?

Jack—The yolk of an egg is white, Youngster.

Youngster—Because I should say it is yellow.

Cooks and Bakes perfectly at the same time

There is not another range built in which the heat may be regulated so that you can bake in the oven and cook on the top at the same time without spoiling one or the other.

But you can do both equally well at the same time on the Pandora, because its heat is not wasted and is at all times under the simplest, most positive control.

If you do the cooking of your household you can appreciate exactly what this means.

Origin of "Had Him a Lemon."

The origin of the use of the word lemon as it is now appearing in various slang expressions, to denote something the reverse of good or desirable, as explained by a theatrical man who was in town last week, seems to be further back in point of time than is generally supposed. Back in the nineties, according to this theory, Fred Bryant was a performer on the coast in Tony Pastor's show in New York, and had as a rival another performer named Aroo, who appeared in the same bill. There was some jealousy between the two musicians and much striving for first place in the affections of the patrons. One night Bryant was doing his utmost with his instrument, it sounded all right, and there was much applause, but the stage manager, who knew it wasn't right, asked what was the matter. From the wings Bryant pointed out a man in the audience who, he said, had "had him a lemon." He meant the man had sneaked a lemon, after attending his attention, in such a way as to cause him to further back in point of time than is generally supposed. Morgan's Money Man

the Swis' Scientist

Basle, Switzerland, Nov. 10.—J. Pierpont Morgan's amazing offer induced some Swiss scientists to part with an antique treasure they had unearthed at Brugg, an antiquated little town about forty miles from here, on the road to Zurich, which once was a Roman and Hibernic stronghold. It is a silver verger-fanny box, dating from the first century of the Christian era, decorated with figures of Mars and Mercury and bearing on the handle a representation of Mercurator, a soldier of the Thirty-first Legion which was commanded by Julius. The scientists had to part with the box, but they gladly needed money to continue their excavations.
