The Helmet of Navarre

BY BERTHA RUNKLE. GROSSET & DUNLAP Publishers: New York.

I had come unconsciously half-way up the street to him in the ardour of my interest; but now I was startled back to my duty by the sound of men running round the corner behind me. One glance was enough—two shouts, swords in hand, they were charging us. I ran before them, drawing blade as I went and shouting to M. Etienne. But even as I called an answering shout came from the alley; two men of the Spanish guards shot out of the darkness and at us.

M. Etienne, with his extraordinary quickness had got the late of his neck, and now, for want of a better use for it, flung it at the head of his nearest assailant, who received it full in the face, stopped, hesitated a moment, and ran back the way he had come. But three feet remained, with the whole Hotel de Lorraine behind them.

We put our backs to the wall and set to. The remaining Spaniard engaged M. Etienne, protected somewhat in the embrace of a doorway, held at bay with his good left arm a pair of attackers. These were in the dress of gentlemen, and wore masks as if their cheeks blushed (well they might) for the deeds of their hands.

A broad window in the Hotel de Lorraine was flung open; a man leaned far out with a torch. The bright glare in our faces bewildered our accustomed eyes; I could not see what I was about, and rammed my point against whom I had thought him—Francis de Brie.

M. Etienne was ready for the second gentleman, but neither he nor the soldier attacked. The torchbearer in the window, with a shout, waved his arm toward the square. A mob of armed men hurried itself around the corner, a pikeman with lowered point in the van.

"This was not combat; it was butchery," M. Etienne said with a little man, lifted his eyes for the first time from his assailant to the turret window. In the same instant I felt the door behind us give. Throwing my whole weight upon it, I seized M. Etienne and pulled him over the threshold. Some one inside slammed the door to, just as the Spaniard hurled himself against it.

XX.

"On guard, monsieur."

We found ourselves in a narrow paneled passage-way, lighted by a flickering oil-lamp pendant from a bracket. Confronting us was our prisoner—the old lady in black velvet, leaning back in chuckling triumph against the shot bolts.

She was very small and very old. Her figure was bent and shrunken, a pitiful little bag of bones in a rich dress; her hair was as white as her ruff; her skin was yellow and dry as parchment, furrowed with a thousand wrinkles; but her black eyes sparkled like a girl's.

madame grand'mere to shift for herself. No, no, my good friends; you may knock till you drop but you won't get in. The attacking party was indeed hammering energetically at the door, shouting to us to open, to deny them at our peril. The eyes of the old lady glittered with new delight at every rap.

"I fancy they will think twice before they batter down M. Ferol's door! M. Ferol! I fancy they are mystified at finding you sanctuaried in this house. Was it not my Lord Mayenne's jacks, Francois de Brie?"

"Yes; and Marc Latour."

"I thought I knew them," she cried in evident pride at her sharpness. "It was dark, and they were masked, and my eyes are old, but I knew them! And which of the ladies is it?"

He could do no less than answer his question.

"Ah, well," she said, with a little sigh of too one—but that is a long time ago! Then her eyes twinkled again; I trust she was not much given to sighing. "That is a long time ago," she repeated bravely, "and now they think I am too old to do aught but tell my beads and wait for death. But I like to have a hand in the game."

"I will come to take a hand with you any time, madame," M. Etienne assured her. "I like the way you play."

She broke into shrill, delighted laughter. "I'll warrant you do! And I don't mean to do the thing by halves. No, narrow, nail-studded door.

"Here I bid you farewell," quoth the little old lady. "You have only to walk on till you get to the end. At the steps, pull the rope once and wait. When she opens to you, say, 'For the Cause,' and I'll give you a crown with your finger in the air."

"Madame," M. Etienne cried, "I hope they may come when I shall make you suitable acknowledgments. My name—"

"I prefer not to know it," she interrupted, glancing up at him. "I will call you M. Ferol; that is enough. As for acknowledgments—oh! I am overpaid in the sport it has been."

"But, madame, when monsieur your son discovered—"

"Mon dieu! I am not afraid of my son or of any other woman's son!" she cried, with cackling laughter. And I warrant she was not.

"Yes," M. Etienne said, "I trust we shall meet you again when I shall have time to tell you what I think of you. He dropped on his knees before her, kissing her hands.

"Yes, yes, of course you are grateful," she said, somewhat bored apparently by his demonstration. "Naturally one does not like to die at your age. I wish you a pleasant journey, M. Ferol, and you too, my dear-lad boy. Give me back my lantern and fare you well."

"You will let us see you safe in your hall."

"I will do nothing of the sort! I am not so conceited, thank you, that I cannot get up my own stairs. No, no; no more allantries, but get on your way! Big game with you! I must be back when my daughter-in-law comes home."

Crowing her elin laugh, she pulled the door open and hurriedly snatched us through. "Good-by—you are fine boys!" and she slammed the door upon us. We were in absolute darkness. As we took our first breath of the fresh, cool air, we heard both snap into place.

"It may relieve you, but I cannot cure you," the trouble to be permanently cured may be treated through the blood. Good news! M. Etienne's Pink Pills actually make new, rich red blood—that's why they cure when other medicines fail. Thousands owe good health—some life itself—to this medicine.

Among them is Roy Davidson, who resides near Brockville, Ont. Mr. Maclean says: "My nephew, Roy, had weak kidneys. About a year ago he took the measles, and this left him in a bad state. His kidneys were so weak that they were incapable of performing their functions. He suffered from backache, weakness and restlessness. For a time he had to leave school. Our family doctor was unable to help him. In fact he told me that Roy might never get better; that the disease would probably grow worse. I then procured a supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had already used the Pills myself with great benefit and felt confident they would cure Roy. He began taking them, and continued their use until he had taken a half dozen boxes, which fully cured him. He is now stronger and better than he ever was and neither study nor work about the farm seem to fatigue him. I believe Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved him from a life of misery."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do just one thing—but they do that thoroughly. They actually make new, rich red blood, which feeds and strengthens every nerve and organ in the body. That is why this medicine cures such common ailments as anemia, general weakness, headaches and backaches, indigestion, palpitation of the heart, rheumatism, neuralgia, and the ailments which make the lives of so many women and young girls miserable. Don't take anything else; which the dealer may say is "just as good." If you can't get the genuine Pills from your dealer send to The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and get them by mail at 25 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50.

"When I saw that crew rush at you I said I would save you!"

my Spaniard's hit, snapping my blade. The sudden impact sent him stumbling back a pace, and M. Etienne, who, with the quick eye of the born fencer, saw everything, cried to me, "Here!"

I darted back into the doorway beside him. His two assailants finding that they gained nothing by their joint attack, but rather hampered each other, one dropped back to watch his companion, the cleverer swordsman. This was decidedly a man of talent, but he was shorter in the arm than my master and had the disadvantage of standing on the ground, whereas M. Etienne rose up one step. He could not force home any of his shrewdly-planned thrusts; nor could he drive M. Etienne out of his coil to where in the open the two could make short work of him. The rapier clashed and parted and twisted about each other and flew apart again; and then before I could see who was touched the attacker fell on his knees with M. Etienne's sword in his breast.

M. Etienne wrenched the blade out; the wounded man sank backward, his mask-fencing breaking. He was the one

"I did not mean to let my nightingale's throat be hit," she cried in a shrill voice quavering like a young child's. "I have listened to your singing many a night, monsieur; I was glad tonight to find the nightingale back again. When I saw that crew rush at you, I said I would save you if only you would put your back to my door. Monsieur, you are a young man of intelligence."

"I am a young man of amazing good fortune, madame," M. Etienne replied, with his handsomest bow, sheathing his wet blade. "I owe you a debt of gratitude which is ill repaid in the base coin of bringing trouble to this house."

"Not at all—not at all!" she protested with animation. "No one is likely to molest this house. It is the dwelling of M. Ferol."

"Of the Sixteen?"

"Of the Sixteen," she nodded, her shrewd face aglow with mischief. "In truth if my son were within you were likely to find harborage here. But, as it is, he and his wife are supping with his Grace of Lyons, and the servants are one and all gone to use, leaving

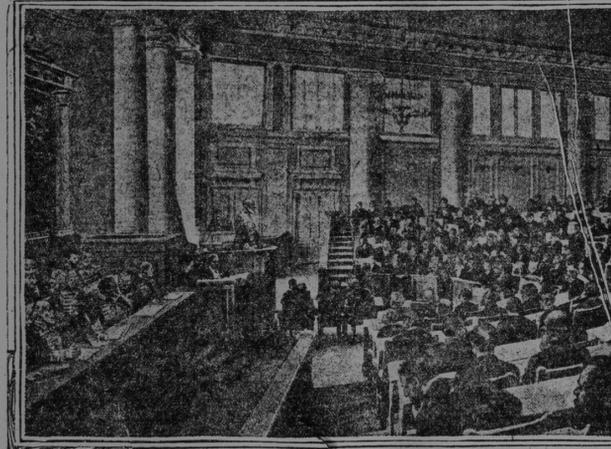

I shall save you, hide and hair. Be so kind, my lad, as to lift the lantern from the hook."

I did as she bade me and we followed her down the passage like sparrows. She was so entirely equal to the situation that we made no protest and asked no questions. At the end of the hall she passed, opening neither the door on the right nor the door on the left, but, passing her hand up one of the panels of the wainscot, suddenly she flung it wide.

"You are not so small as I," she chuckled. "I think you can make shift to get through. You, monsieur lantern-bearer, go first."

I doubled myself up and scrambled through. The old lady, gathering her petticoats daintily, followed me without difficulty, but M. Etienne was put to some trouble to hove his tall head low enough. We stood at the top of a flight of stone steps descending into blackness. The old lady unhesitatingly tripped down before us.

At the foot of the stairs was a vaulted stone passageway, slippery with lichen, the dampness hanging in beads on the wall. Turning two corners, we brought up at a

ACADIA COLLEGE CLOSING

Wolville, June 5.—Class day at Acadia College is becoming one of the most interesting features of commencement week and the hall was crowded this morning to enjoy this festive occasion. The president, Harry B. Harvey, of Bridgetown, gave the opening address, and welcome the visitors. The secretary, Miss Alice Dowdell, Halifax, called the roll and the names of former members of the class were responded to by humorous remarks and apt quotations.

The class history was given by P. S. Kinlay, of New Bedford, and was a most apt and humorous production abounding in wit.

The class prophecy, made by Walter P. Copp, of Shelville, was a peep into the future.

The valedictory by Frederick A. Porter of Fredericton, gave a touch of sadness to the occasion as he referred to the friendships formed during the course and the time soon to be answered as each student goes out into the world to fight the battle of life.

The closing exercises of Acadia seminary took place this evening, when the assembly hall was crowded with the friends and patrons of the school. Principal DeWolf presented the diplomas and prizes won by the outgoing class which numbered twenty-six.

The total registration for the year is 216, of whom 102 have been in residence and 100 in course leading to graduation, the largest in the history of the school.

The following received diplomas on completion of their collegiate course:

NATURAL HISTORY SOCIETY

The monthly meeting of the Natural History Society of N. B. was held in the society's rooms, market building, last evening, Dr. Geo. F. Mathew in the chair. Dr. Leavitt Hutchinson, Robert Jardine and H. V. McKinnon were elected ordinary members and Miss Alice D. Esley, Mrs. H. V. McKinnon, Mrs. Burditt and Miss Burditt associate members.

A beautiful specimen of eriolite was presented by Capt. R. C. Cole and the library was enriched by numerous publications from scientific societies.

Dr. J. H. Seawall read an interesting and instructive paper on preventive medicine.

A paper on the physiographic character of the report of Hon. John V. Ellis, the society's delegate to the Royal Society, was made by Dr. W. L. Ellis and showed that the N. H. S. of N. B. was doing its share of original work.

Invitations were extended to the society to hold field-days at the residence of W. F. Burditt, Crouville, at the summer residence of Dr. George F. Mathew, at Clifton, that of Dr. Geo. U. WEAK KIDNEYS.

Restored to Strength by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Bad blood is the cause of weak kidneys. The impurities of the blood are not removed until they are unable to perform their work of separating the waste matter from the blood—their kidneys are numerous. The dull, sunken eyes, the coated tongue, the backache, weak shakiness, saltiness, all show what is wrong. This disease must not be neglected. Every day delayed in finding a cure is a day nearer "Bright's disease"—that trouble is incurable. Do not waste time and money on a medicine which acts only on the kidneys. It may relieve, but it cannot cure you.

The trouble to be permanently cured may be treated through the blood. Good news! M. Etienne's Pink Pills actually make new, rich red blood—that's why they cure when other medicines fail. Thousands owe good health—some life itself—to this medicine.

THE PLAYGROUNDS

Some citizens are asking how much money is required for supervised playgrounds, and how it will be spent, and how many playgrounds there will be. It is impossible to give a complete answer at the outset to these questions.

A FUTURE PLAYGROUND

It has been suggested to the Times by several citizens that the place for a public playground is the property at the entrance to Rockwood Park, which was purchased by Mr. Joseph Allison for that special purpose.

The editor of this paper went over the grounds at the entrance to the park on Monday evening. There is an area of quite a number of acres, ridged up in the usual manner of marsh land yielding a crop of hay. There are shallow ditches between the ridges and in these at present water lies. The stream which makes the very picturesque waterfall at the entrance to the park also winds through a corner of the property. It would be necessary to divert the course of the stream, which would be very easily done, so that it could run along the roadside. It would also be necessary to open up the shallow ditches and under-drain the whole area. The drains could then be covered, the ridges levelled into the trenches, and a magnificent stretch of level ground provided, with a road on two sides and the wooded margin of the park on a third. Here on the edge of the park could be erected a gymnasium with shower baths, and in front would be ample grounds for base-ball, foot-ball, cricket, and every sort of game the young people would care to play. Of course there would be proper supervision, to keep good order on the grounds, but that would not be at all a difficult matter.

If these grounds were put in proper shape, as Mr. Allison desired should be done when he purchased the property, the city would have a great free playground such as every other city in Canada might envy. The city council might very properly consider this matter, and there can be no doubt at all that the citizens would heartily support the scheme. If there should be a scarcity of civic funds, there are many ways of providing what is necessary. It would be a capital beginning if the council would employ a competent man to look over the property and give an estimate of the probable cost of the work necessary to fit up the playground, even if at the outset the gymnasium feature were omitted. The property lies there, awaiting the transforming hand of skill to make it of incalculable value to the young people of the city.

IN RUSSIA

Touching the possibility of a revolution in Russia, the New York Commercial makes some observations that are a good deal nearer the mark than much that is written on that subject. We quote:—"The reader of the daily dispatches from St. Petersburg must have been impressed by the persistent comparison of events there with those of the French Revolution. It is not untimely, therefore, to say right here that such comparisons are absolutely idle talk. It is so easy for the foreign correspondent, brought up on an historical diet of French Revolution, to strain all the facts that can possibly be made to bear it into significant 'parallels' toward an upheaval recalling France's most tragic era. But in doing this superficial work the correspondents overlook entirely that a French revolution, even in spirit, is not a bare possibility in Russia. The differences between the Gaul and the Slav are basic. The absence in the French people of the Slav's patient temperament that bears a burden yet a little longer rather than throw it off in a way to impede a progress, is racially characteristic. The Slav's lack of the touch-and-go, chip-on-the-shoulder temperament of the Gaul who first stirs with his passions and then regrets with his calmer reason, makes of motives and occasions which would incite to violence in Paris merely material for serious consideration in St. Petersburg. This is not taken account of in the current news dispatches from the Russian capital, it seems to us. Should Russia ever be embroiled in revolutionary disaster—and we are not predicting it—there will be evolved a different type of uprising from any seen among Gallic peoples, especially a century ago."

The Philadelphia Press believes that a movement from the city back to the soil is inevitable, and that present conditions will not endure. It says: "The great centres of population will always draw young men and young women of unsettled purpose, full of ambition, inexperienced in the world, and eager for change and excitement. At the same time the call of the soil will attract additional thousands every year from the crowded avenues and the brick and mortar lives back to the hush of the country and the companionship of nature. And the time will come when these forces will counterbalance. The immense growth of rural trolley lines and of suburban communities indicates that this and suburban life is only one step from the farm."

The following is an extract from the Memorial Day address of Gov. Hanly, of Indiana:—"The wealth and aggregated capital are essential to the prosperity of the people and the development of the country. I wage no war against these. But I do wage war against the thief that grows by theft and speculation, against the abuse of wealth, against the corrupt practice of incorporated capital and the undue and unholy influences it exercises in the administration of government."

The police have discovered nearly twelve hundred dogs in the city. To state the exact number of those still awaiting discovery would perhaps require more than four figures.

The board of trade moves in the right direction when it takes up the question of the proper and continuous equipment of this port to meet the demands of a growing winter traffic.

SEDDON THE SOCIALIST

Premier Seddon, undoubtedly the most advanced Socialist in public office in the British Empire, has become exercised over the serious increase in the cost of living in New Zealand, and states that he hopes his government will adopt further measures in the direction of Socialism in order to remedy the evil. Mr. Seddon asserts that the fish combine only permits a certain quantity of fish to be placed on the market, the surplus being thrown back into the sea in order to keep up prices. Because of this fish combine, blue cod caught in New Zealand waters is actually sold cheaper in Australia than in Wellington. Similarly, the people of London, Cardiff, Liverpool and Manchester can get New Zealand lamb, mutton and beef superior to that retailed in the colony at less than the retail price charged in any New Zealand town. "We will shortly fix the price of coal to the consumer by means of the State mines," Premier Seddon announces. "We are about to fix the rent payable by the worker by means of the 'Workers' Dwellings Act, and we have fixed the fire and accident insurance premiums by means of state insurance offices. The success of previous experiments impels me to the conclusion that the simplest, most economical, and surest way of dealing with the rings is to open fish markets and meat markets, and fix the maximum rates payable by the consumers."

Survival of the Unfittest

(New York Sun) A gentleman, hurrying down town, stopped for a paper. "Can't let you have one," said the boy. "Why not? I heard you crying them." "Yes, but that was down the other block where I holler them." "What does that matter? Come, I'm in a hurry. No holler." "Couldn't sell you a paper on this block, mister, 'cause it belongs to Limpy. He'll be up to the furthest end just now. You'll meet him." "Who is Limpy? And why does he have this block?" "Cause us other kids said we'd let him have it. You see, it's a good run cause of the office all along the street. That time he can't get round lively like the rest of us, so we saved the first one thought selling on his beat should be thrashed. See?" "Yes, I see. You have a sort of brotherhood between yourselves?" "Well, we're going to look out for a little while what's lane, an' how. There comes Limpy now." The gentleman bought two papers of him and went on his way downtown, wondering how many men in business would refuse to sell their wares in order to give a weak, halting brother a chance in the field.

PATENT LEATHER

IF IT WERE SPORTY

No man would choose the wicked way if it were sporty to be good; No man would cheat or steal or slay if it were sporty to be good; The gambler's cards unseed would lie, The drunkard, with his head held high, Would proudly pass the dramshop by if it were sporty to be good. We'd all be leading upright lives if it were sporty to be good; Rude men would cease to beat their wives if it were sporty to be good; We'd have no stately men in blue To guard us, or endeavor to, But we would all the lawyers do if it were sporty to be good. -Chicago Record-Herald.

IN LIGHTER VEIN

A FRIEND, INDEED! "Pretty woman you bowed to." "Yes, rather." "Friend of yours?" "Lord, no! Why, that's my wife!" SERVED IT ON HER, ANYWAY. Mistress (indignant) - What is it you wish to say to me, Bridget? I am too ill to sit up. Domestic - Well, mum, ye can take notice without sittin' up. I lave ye mist Saturday, mum.

ANOTHER CHARGE.

Magistrate - Ah! they caught you drunk again, eh? Hobo - No, your honor. Impermatin' an officer dis time. I guess dey caught me asleep in a doorway. INDEFINITE. "Darling, yours shall be a sunny lot in life." "Now, look here, George; are you talking of your behavior, or of where we are going to build the suburbs?" NO PLEASURE IN IT.

Mrs. Chase - Oh! I don't like to go to that store. It's so unsatisfactory to do our shopping there. Mrs. Shoppin - Why, they have everything there. Mrs. Chase - That's just it. No matter what you ask for, they can suit you right off. POOR PROSPECTS.

"Do you hope to raise much on your land this year, farmer?" "Well," replied Farmer Korskob, reflectively, "I was kind o' countin' on a mortgage, but even that looks doubtful now."

BUSINESS-LIKE TRANCE.

"Did that clairvoyant go into a trance when she told your fortune?" "Yes. Then she went into my pocket-book."

PREMATURE.

"Have you yet selected the theme for your graduation essay?" "Goodness gracious, no, indeed! Why, I haven't yet decided on whether my costume will be cut princess style or gored skirt and blouse effect."

STARTING THE MACHINERY.

"Pop, is there going to be a revolution in Russia?" "I am afraid so, my son. The government there seems determined to see how the wheels go round."

BOTH OPTICS CLOSED.

Towne - When I saw him this morning he was looking for fight. Browne - Oh! but that was this morning. Towne - Well, isn't he looking for it now? Browne - I don't think so, because he couldn't see it if he did. He found it this morning.

ONE WOMAN'S WAY.

Husband - Why do you encourage that Mrs. Tattles to keep calling us often? Is it because you enjoy hearing the neighbors talked about? Wife - Oh, no, but when she is here I know she isn't somewhere else talking about me.

CONVERTED.

(From the Chicago Record-Herald.) "What because of that neighbor of yours who used to get so mad whenever anybody advocated public ownership of anything?" "I thought he was going to assault me one evening when I met him at your house and expressed the opinion that it might not be a bad thing if the government owned the railroad." He told me I was rather a traitor to my country and intimated that I ought to be in the penitentiary of the lunatic asylum. I never saw anyone who seemed to be quite so earnest as he was in demanding protection of the vested interests."

YIELD NOT TO TEMPTATION

Because Olivier Sauvage, an employe of Cote des Neiges Cemetery, Montreal, yielded to "undue temptation" and higgled and kissed Mrs. Fabien Gagnon, of 47 Brinville street, Montreal, he is now being sued for $500 by the lady's husband. It seems that Sauvage went to Gagnon's house when the master was absent to collect fees for the care of a cemetery lot and that he took advantage of the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Shadbolt, Miss Shadbolt and Mr. Heald, of St. John, were in Toronto for the Shadbolt-Atkinson wedding yesterday. Arthur Kinsastrick left last evening for Montreal on a week's business trip. Holden Merritt returned to Woodstock last evening.

CAPTAIN CHARGES STEWARD WITH STEALING FROM SHIP

Another Phase of the Etolia Trouble Aired in Police Court Today - Chief Steward Accused of Pilfering from the Stores and Selling Goods to Sailors.

Charles Wasselwyck, the chief steward of the Etolia, who with Harry Mills, the cook, was accused yesterday morning of assaulting William Henry Ward, the second officer, on the steamer on Monday night, was yesterday afternoon fined $20 on two months in the Mills was given the same punishment. This morning Wasselwyck was brought into court and Captain Jones stated that he had collected all of the steward's belongings and had them in readiness for him to take them away. The steward said that he would like to have a chance to do better but the captain replied that he was not to be trusted. Captain Jones told the court that Wasselwyck had charge of the ship's stores and he has been suspicious of late as to his honesty. Yesterday afternoon he found $35 in the steward's trunk and he did not know how he could have that amount for he had been working only three months and since that time he had sent home $11 to his family in England, having drawn his salary. The Captain exhibited two receipts, which showed that the steward had received money from a certain sailor for tobacco and the cap-

LATE LOCALS

There were no arrests yesterday.

Charles Rogers has been reported by the police for indulging in profanity on the streets.

Steamer Calvin Austin landed 100 passengers from Bealon yesterday afternoon. She sailed this morning on her return trip and took away a large consignment of fresh salmon.

Mrs. Joseph Craig, an elderly woman, stated in the police court yesterday afternoon that she had been married to her present husband for twenty years, and that now he was keeping eight women and neglecting her. The police were instructed to investigate the case.

A resident of St. Patrick St. told Judge Ritchie yesterday afternoon that "Doc Merrick would not leave his house when ordered to do so." As it is a time-worn case, with many complications, the judge told him to do his best to get Merrick out, if he did not desire his company.

Two Russian sailors got into a scarp in the West End House yesterday and one hit the other over the head with a chair. As a result of the blow Dr. Berryman had to put several stitches in the injured Russian's head. The police were called but when they arrived their man had escaped. The Russians had been imbibing too freely.

The Frederickian Gleaner says: "Next week the St. John's will probably be brought here by the Tartars for a couple of games. These games will undoubtedly be interesting and should attract good crowds. No definite announcement can be made at present as to when the games will be played, but, after the Tartars go to St. John, it is only fair to assume that Manager Dunham will come here when asked to bring his fastest team along with him."

SHE ENJOYED HER SMOKE

Train Hands Wondered at Unusual Spectacle of Woman Puffing Pipe.

According to one of the passengers on the incoming Boston train this morning, it might be a good thing if the railway companies in this section inaugurated a ladies' smoking car, since to the recently introduced in England. In the second class smoking car of the Boston train this morning was a middle aged woman who was puffing away at a big meerschaum pipe with evident enjoyment. To an inquiry as to how long she had been a smoker, she replied, "About twenty-two years."

Some of the passengers and trainmen took almost as much enjoyment out of it as she did evidently from the way they watched her.

THE OPERA HOUSE TOMORROW NIGHT

Miss Roselle Knott, who is starting this season in Beverly Shipman & Co's grand production of "When Knighthood was in Flower," has probably received as many laudatory comments as any living actress. More especially as "Mary Tudor" in her present play has her work been favorably criticized. The following expression from one of the best critics of the day, and a severe one, seems to best set forth the opinion of theatre-goers in general: "The play 'When Knighthood was in Flower' affords many theatrical opportunities, and Miss Knott avails herself of them. Her embodiment of Mary Tudor crystallizes into one engaging personality the attributes of authority, impetuosity, intrepidity, force of will, gleeful courage alternating with tenderness, and ardent passion tempered with both sweetness and mirth. She presents a woman who loves, who smites, who is enemies and petrie, has the courage of her love. It seems probable that her impersonation shows her personal ideal of womanhood and is but little, if any, removed from a revelation of her actual self. It certainly is an interesting and winning usage of feminine virgity, fidelity, loyalty, romantic ardor and feminine charm."

AFTER LOCAL BALL PLAYERS

Woods, Malcolm and Norris Receive Good Offer to Join New Aberdeen Team.

Baseball is evidently booming in the mining towns in Nova Scotia. This morning Josh Woods received a telegram from New Aberdeen, N. S., which guaranteed Josh Woods, George Malcolm and Jack Norris $15 per week if they would go to play ball there. The offer will be considered this evening.

Josh Woods is a valuable man, having made a record here in major baseball at the bat, but especially in the left garden. George Malcolm is the old time pitcher, who shot over many a winning game for the Alerts. Jack Norris is the mazy little catcher, who was at the receiving end when Billy Case and Dan McEachern twirled for the Clippers.

A PUGNACIOUS GANDER

There is a Bird on Chesley Street That Can Trim any Vagrant Dog in Town.

In the "wild and woolly west" stories are told of eagles descending to terra firma and attacking children, but seldom is it told that there are birds in this city that are equally as dangerous.

Such, however, is the case for a young lady while walking along Chesley street in the morning. She was attacked by a large gander. The young lady, who resides in north end had just passed a yard, when she heard a hissing sound behind her, which caused a cold chill to dart through her like an electric shock. She turned to see her enemy and in less time than it takes to say "Jack Robinson" Mr. Gander had lighted upon her back and was flapping his huge wings as if making a desperate attempt to crow.

The young lady did not faint, but she came "pretty nigh" to it, and had it not been for the appearance of a strong-armed man, who turned the gander's neck as if it were a hand organ, Miss M. Citizens living near Chesley street state that the gander should be muzzled and should also wear leather boots. They would have been badly frightened.

FABIO ROMANI

The attraction announced for the York Theatre Thursday night will be that reigning romantic success, "Fabio Romani," which is a cleverly arranged dramatization of Marie Corelli's novel of remarkable, creative fancy and wide discussion, "The Vendetta." It is seldom, if ever, that an adaptation for stage presentation exceeds in popularity and general favor that of the novel itself. However, that is the case with "Fabio Romani," which is now entering on its sixth year of the most solid success known to theatrical history. The story, which is a most impressive one, deals with the unfaithfulness of a wife, and her open preference for a favored suitor, to such an extent that she considers the husband an obstacle to her joy of living and causes him to be entombed alive and suffer a living death. It is under those circumstances the wronged husband avenges his anguish and registers a terrible vow of vengeance, which is directly followed by the volcanic eruption of Mt. Vesuvius, thus miraculously releasing the husband from his long entombment and the death of the false wife and her paramour then follows.

The play, which is in five acts, is provided with a complete scenic investiture and the costuming is correct and in accordance with the period of the play which was during the seventeenth century at picturesque Naples. Seats now on sale.

THE IRISH PAWN BROKERS

The Irish Pawnbrokers attracted a fairly large audience to the Opera House last evening. As on Monday evening the work of Miss Duckman, the girl with the chair, and Miss Violet Henson, the clever little soubrette was received with much applause. They are both clever entertainers and do much to brighten an otherwise ordinary show.
