RELIABLE
To correct the constipated habit, remove sick-headache, relieve dyspepsia, to purify the blood, cure jaundice, liver complaint, and biliousness, Ayer's Pills are unequalled. They are an excellent after-dinner pill, assisting the process of digestion, and cleaning and strengthening the alimentary canal. When taken on the invasion of a cold or a fever, they effectually prevent further progress of the disease.
Being sugar-coated and purely vegetable, they are the best

Family
medicine, for old and young. Ayer's Pills are indispensable to soldiers, sailors, campers, miners, and travelers, and are everywhere recommended by the medical profession. Dr. J. W. Hayes, Falmes, W. V., writes: "Ayer's Pills are the most effectually and speedily acting of any I know of."
For more than twenty years I have used Ayer's Pills as a corrective for torpidity of the stomach, liver, and bowels, and in all cases of malarial attacks, and they have done perfect work. — E. J. Goodwin, Publisher, "Democrat," St. Landry, La.
I was master of a sailing vessel for many years, and never failed to provide

CHRISTMAS BURGLARS.
AN ACCOMPLISHED GENTLEMAN AND A LITTLE MINDSIGHT DIVERSION.
It was Christmas time.
Such a Christmas!—what is called by the present generation a seasonable Christmas.
After a hard frost, the snow had fallen, for two days. Seated in your arm chair over a blazing log fire on such a night it is pleasant to contemplate the contrast without and within, to listen to the whirring wind and feel that the drifting snow cannot reach you in your sanctum.
But the same prospect regarded from the windows of a snowed-up train on a North Wales line, within a few miles of one's destination, is certainly not calculated to make one's heart rejoice.
Such was the unfortunate position in which I was placed on a certain long-remembered Christmas Eve.
I, Nicholas Transon, of London, England, indolent bachelor, snowed up on a miserable one-horse-line, within measurable distance of a certain somebody, who, months before, had promised to link her fate with mine for weal or woe.
It was aggravating, and, as I started and fro like a caged animal, it was more than I could do to possess my soul in patience.
The cold was intense, and seemed to freeze the very blood in my veins.
A muffled up bundle, with a lantern, opened the carriage door, whom I recognized by his voice as the guard.
"Very sorry, sir," he said, "but it's all blip with the engine; she can't budge a foot."
"Then perhaps you will tell me what I am to do?" I inquired testily.
"You see them lights, sir, across the fields? Well, that's the Black Bull, a very good inn, sir, yes, sir, deray they can 'comodate yer with a hoss or some companys. Thanks kindly, sir; yes, yer language'll be all right." I lightened and surveyed the prospect.
Ugh! it was terribly cold.
The next station was the terminus, and there were but a few passengers congregated about the engine. It was useless to wait for them, I could not miss the way, and plunged at once into the darkness. Struggling against the cutting wind, blinded with snow, stumbling down a ditch and scrambling over eyes, and at last found myself shaking off the snow in the snug little bar of the Black Bull.
On enquiry, I found that a horse was available on condition that I found stabling for the night at Sandon Hall, the end of my journey.
As I passed the parlor, I was struck by hearing two voices conversing in an under-tone.
Strange, I thought, such refined English in such a place; no doubt they were snow-bound travellers.
My horse was a splendid animal and carried me safely to my journey's end in snail time. A right royal welcome.
A feast for a king, wait upon by my princess, the fairest and sweetest in all the land—to me.
Squire Sandon, my host, was a gentleman of the old school; hale and hearty, he was beloved by all, and nowhere could have been found a happier household than was his that Christmas Eve.
The festivities were at their height, old and young were glowing with such merriment as comes but once a year, when suddenly we were startled by a heavy knocking at the hall door.
Who could it be at this hour—that had happened! Speculation was rife.
Peering over my sweetheart's shoulder in the lobby, I could discern a tall young fellow, with the figure of a garde-manger, swarthy complexion and laughing eyes, and as he shook the snow from his cap, I could see that he was dressed like a gentleman of quality.
He craved shelter for the night; his horse had fallen lame, and he had still some distance to travel ere he reached his destination, Mount Taffin, a house well known to our host.
The stranger was made honestly welcome; even the veriest outcast could not have been refused shelter on such a night, let alone such an exceedingly accomplished gentleman as the stranger.
After partaking of some refreshment, Mr. Godfrey Bramleigh, such was the stranger's name, joined the party of merry-makers in the drawing room.
And capital company he proved.
A man of singularly engaging presence, he was very soon the ring-leader in every piece of nonsense or Christmas game; there was no pastime he was not master of; so indispensable and amusing was he, that we fell to wondering how on earth we could have done without him.
Yet, now and again, as I glanced at the man, that indescribable feeling came over me that I had seen or heard the man before, but where I could not determine, and tried to banish the thought as idle.
Why did I dislike the man? Because he was handsome? Because my sweetheart was delighted in his company?
Certainly his dancing was perfect.
Was it not just the least bit jealous?

Perhaps. At length, somewhat to my relief, the party was tired out and visions of snug beds were exchanged.
"Good night, Nick my boy," said my gentle host, "you will have Mr. Bran-leigh for a next door neighbor tonight his capital company," and, added his wife, "a most accomplished gentleman." My rough journey had tired me out, and I was glad enough to get between the snowy sheets. Perhaps I was over-tired, as one does become at times, or it may have been the misapprehensions of the rich cake; whatever the cause might be, I could not sleep. Besides, my thoughts were active about the stranger. Who was he, where had I met him before?
And so, I tossed and groaned and wooded the golden sleep in vain.
It was no use I could not sleep.
I arose and looked out at the night, —a jet black sky, the snow had ceased.
To the right I could dimly discern the stables on the lawn; to the left, a summer house, where, of old I had told my love; for the rest, snow covered shrubbery, with a background of tall elms.
Suddenly I was startled by a flash of light from the shrubbery, then darkness blacker than before.
Very suspicious! There again the light, this time near the summer house, and I could dimly see a moving black form thrown out against the snow.
Straining my eyes, I thought there were two figures.
What did it mean? Could they be burglars? My temple throbbed at the thought.
Hark! What was the sound? It was from the stranger's room.
Again the sound!
A moment the truth flashed across my mind. The stranger—confederate!
Lurking! And in that flash of thought I remembered where I had heard the stranger's voice before. It was one of the voices I had overheard speaking in the parlor of the Black Bull.
All my suspicions were confirmed, and my face burned like fire.
Hastily I sought to a plan.
Hurry! Into a dressing gown and arming myself with a poker, I noiselessly unlocked my bedroom door and crept along the landing. The stranger's door was ajar!
He must have gone down stairs to admit his confederates. Not a moment was to be lost.
Glancing over the balustrade, I could perceive a dim light streaming from the dining room. The accomplices were already at work!
What should I do? Three to one, and if I raised an alarm the villains would doubtless make my escape.
Rapidly forming my plan, I stole back to the upper landing, where I knew two of the guests were sleeping in one room, strapping young fellows from the neighborhood.
I succeeded in awakening them without a sound and briefly informed them what was taking place. They were wide-awake at once.
We had no firearms, but on searching a cupboard, we found a bundle of stout golf sticks, from which the two young men armed themselves.
Assuming the leadership, I stationed my men. I was to stand in the shadow of the great hall clock—next the dining room door—my allies immediately behind.
When the first robber emerged from the room I was to drop him with the poker, while my two friends were to rush forward and secure the door of the help, and we should secure the whole gang—and what heroes we should be in the morning!
Like ghosts we took up our respective positions. The suspense was terrible.
We dared scarcely breathe—my heart was in my throat, and we trembled with excitement and cold.
Suddenly, I heard a sound in the chair—the light grew brighter—the time had come! A hand appeared standing a small lamp—an arm—a head—I recognized the stranger, and down came my poker with a crash that sickened me, a heavy groan—a thud, and we were in darkness.
As I struck the blow my helpers had rushed across the prostrate form and secured the door, luckily finding the key on the outside.
By this time lights had appeared upstairs and there was a babel of sceases, shouts, and exclamations, and mine host appeared, a candle in one hand and an enormous pistol in the other.
Seizing his pistol I rushed out on to the lawn to prevent the escape of the thieves through the window.
The room was in darkness, the windows were fast, evidently we had the villains safe enough.
Stationing the shivering butler on sentry duty in my place, with strict orders to shoot down the burglars should they attempt to escape by the windows, I returned to the hall.
The stranger was still unconscious, looking ghastly as he lay there in the dickering light.
Direct some one to bind his head and carry him to a sofa, I turned to the dining room. Ordering all the women upstairs, out of harm's way, I knocked eighteen centuries before. Investigation instituted on the spot proved that the fruit had been put in the jars in a highly heated state and that an aperture for the escape of steam had been left in the lid, which when it had served its purpose, was sealed over with wax.

Tanke ingeniously caught the idea at once, and the next year canning factories were erected all over the United States.

HOW TO PROPOSE.
A party of ladies and gentlemen were laughing over the supposed awkwardness attending a declaration of love, when a gentleman remarked that if ever he offered himself he would do it in a collected and business like manner.
"For instance," he continued addressing a lady presiding at Miss Smith's, I have been two years looking for a wife. I am in receipt of 4000 a year, which is on the increase. Of all the ladies of my acquaintance, I admire you the most.
I love you, and would gladly make you my wife. Will you marry me?"
"You flatter me by your preference," said humbly replied Miss Smith, to the surprise of all present. "I refer you to my father."
The guests were astounded.
The couple were married shortly after.

FATHER—MOTHER.
In a seeming dictation as to your reference of Prohibition, now being passed in the country, when we say we have no other course to pursue, to work for, encourage and support the movement. The message of a prohibitory law, is of the deepest interest to the Country, and of a still greater interest to the jewels of your homes. Perhaps these lines will be read by a father who has suffered from the effects of the liquor habit himself, or who is now a slave to strong drink, or who is perhaps indifferent on the question. Father, which of you solemnly and seriously, to your ancestors the following question?
"You have some boys growing up, and they give you every promise of comfort and joy as they advance in years—or perhaps the little fellow is now toddling around home, in all the purity and innocence of childhood's early years. The boy growing up is now exposed to the temptation of the liquor saloon, and in a few years the little innocent prattler would be. Once entering the saloon, they are in the way of acquiring the habit of drink, and they enter the path of the drunkard. Father, which of you boys do you want to fall a victim to the dancing liquor habit? Your first-born, in whom you and your wife have centered so many hopes—or the little innocent toddler who now affords so much joy and happiness by his cute and winsome ways?—or the lad bright and promising, who is just beginning to be useful about home—mother's joy—papa's pride—as his first help is given them? Mother, which one of those boys, who have such a warm place in your loving heart, and whose every word and happiness is now and always will be your dearest concern? Which one are you ready to sacrifice to the demon, strong drink? Which one of those boys do you want to see hilitious over his cup, or reeling along the road, or in the streets, uttering the meaningless jargon of the drunkard, or filling the streets with his blasphemous and obscene language, and making that night hideous with the vile blasphemies and indecencies of the inebriate? Which one father—mother?

The liquor saloons can only exist as new material is furnished them from the boys of the land. Is your boy to be one to furnish new material to sustain these infernal? The liquor saloon is in the land, a licensed institution to prostrate our province, and degrade our young men? As long as they are licensed by the Province, (of which Province each father within the bonds is a citizen and a voter) and by such license is sanctioned and protected, the dangers above presented will arise and whose boy is going to become the victim of the liquor saloon, sanctioned and protected by the votes of the fathers in the Province. Somebody's boy will be entrapped. Will it be yours?

These dangers threatening your boy had upon every father to not now, while the opportunity is afforded, and to set on the side of prevention, for in no other way you secure safety for your loved one. Neglect the opportunity, and the responsibility of a drunker son may be laid at your door.

Mothers, sisters, daughters, you are more deeply interested in the issue than any other. You are the noble, self-sufficient from the curse of strong drink, who loved ones are the victims of the liquor habit. Before long the expression of the people on the question of the prohibition of the liquor traffic in this country will be given at the ballot box.
Your influence is a power—use it for prohibition. Pray for prohibition—work for prohibition—urge your friends to love ones to vote for prohibition—and thus lay a victory for God, for home, for native land.—Temperance Journal.

My poor comfort was that I had acted for the best—and succeeded in making a complete ass of myself. Mine was to be a Merry Christmas. Well, the end was, Mr.
Bramleigh, after he had been told all the circumstances of the unfortunate night, feebly forgave me. My sweetheart, too, was too proud of my prowess and courage to upbraid me, and insisted upon regarding me as a splendid hero.
After all it turned out a right Merry Christmas.
Mr. Bramleigh joined the party at night looking pale but full of good nature, and his health was heartily toasted, to which he responded in a neat little speech, including a graceful compliment to his captor; concluding as he turned with a smile and a low to my affianced, with the assurance, that in her future state, in which he wished her much happiness and prosperity, burglars need give her no concern with such a doughty champion as myself.

That most accomplished 'burglar' was my 'best man' a few weeks later.

WE GET THE IDEA FROM POMPEII.
Few people are aware that we are indebted to the people of old Pompeii, who were all smothered in the first century of the Christian era, for one of the most important industries of our time—the canning business. Years ago when the first excavations were made in that buried city, an American came upon several jars of figs. When they were opened they were found to be as fresh and palatable as when they were put up

sickness of any kind to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—the greatest of modern medicines.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are not a patent medicine in the sense that term is usually understood, but a scientific preparation.

The Pills are manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont., and elsewhere.

WORLD'S FAIR NOTES.

The American flag now floats from the Administration building at Jackson Park to signify that the World's Fair buildings and grounds are in the possession of the United States government.

The writer of a leading eastern paper writes:—Will you kindly send us the information necessary for the entry of goods and other matters connected with exhibitors at the coming Exposition?

Since July 15, many applications for space have been received, and they are still coming in, and doubtless will continue to do so until the Fair opens.

Several miners who were just alive when found, died on their way to the surface or shortly after being taken to the car.

Manager Hutchison, of the Rumfurlong mine, went down into the pit with one of the last rescue parties.

assert that they make deliveries of all coal, on the pit head, where they support a check weighman to check the locking of the officials.

The most approved method of artificial ice making and cold storage will be exhibited at the World's Fair.

The section from one of the big California redwood trees, which the government will exhibit in its building at the World's Fair, has arrived at the Fair grounds.

PHILADELPHIA, December 16.—Nelson F. Evans, convicted of misappropriating the funds of the Spring Garden National bank of which he was director, was today sentenced to pay a fine of $300 and serve five years in the penitentiary.

At Malaga Mines, Queens Co., N. S., Thursday, Joe Francis and two others, Wambolt and Simpson, were sent to drill a hole in the mine, and had placed the dynamite in the hole.

Diary, December 12.—A fatal shooting accident occurred at Bear River on Saturday afternoon.

Explosion at Wigan ENGLAND. UPWARDS OF FIFTY LIVES LOST.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—A fearful explosion occurred today at the Ramfurlong Colliery, Wigan.

The men went to their work as usual this morning. They had not been at work long when a terrible explosion shook the earth for a great distance and a cloud of smoke shot up through the shaft into the air.

A great multitude of people rushed toward the mine and the greatest excitement prevailed. It was soon ascertained that a large number had perished, and the wailing and weeping of women and children made an indescribable scene.

Steps were taken to ascertain the full extent of the disaster and a crowd of volunteers promptly offered to explore the pit. Not less than 50 lives have been lost.

Noon.—Twenty miners have just been brought up by the rescuers. The rescued men were in an exhausted condition when brought to the top.

In the main roads the bodies lie in two and three as the men fell. Large sections of roof galleries have collapsed.

Several miners who were just alive when found, died on their way to the surface or shortly after being taken to the car.

Manager Hutchison, of the Rumfurlong mine, went down into the pit with one of the last rescue parties.

There is no ground for the published report that visitors to the Fair are to be made the victims of exorbitant charges.
