Passenger trains for the most part moved along as though there was no trouble, the only exception being the train from Owen Sound and the one back to that place.

That from Owen Sound was about two hours late in arriving, but it carried a large number of passengers. Owing to a delay caused by Superintendent Bowker removing the con ductor for cause, the train for Owen Sound was delayed some time in the afternoon, but it finally got away, carrying quite a number of people.

ARBITRATION IS STILL

"It would seem that to each of the parties a reference to arbitration has appeared a fair and proper method of procedure for the adjustment of the differences between them, and the only inference it is possible to draw as to why one or other of the respective offers of arbitration has not been accepted is that each has been accompanied by a restriction not wholly acceptable to the other party."

-Hon. W. M. King. 'We are still willing to permit of a recognition of our former offer of arbitration, even although the time appears to have passed when arbitration should be considered.'

THE POLICE AT SEA IN ENOS MURDER CASE

No Clue as to Whereabouts on the Badly Wanted Jackson.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Chainam. July 22.-It is now four days since Jacoo Lnos was murdered, and the police appear to be no nearer the solution of the mystery than they were at the beginning. Just before closing time on Monday night a negro entered George Stevens' hardware store and bought ten

32-calibre revolver cartridges. The shells were for a rim-fire gun. It was a 32-calibre bullet that was found in Enos' brain. The man who made the purchase was about six feet tall, and answers somewhat to the description of Jackson. The clerk, who sold him the shells thought he was stranger in the city, and says he would know him again if he met him. He was accompanied to the store by an-

Revolver cartridges of 32 calibre were also bought by a negro in Cunningham's store Monday afternoon. There were centre-fire cartridges. It may have been the same man who made both purchases. Mrs. Beaver's story of the shooting has been corroborated by others, who claim to have heard the shot fired and seen men running. All the stories are to the effect that four men were together, and that three were seen run-

CORRESPONDENCE

The Late King's Coronation. To the Editor of The Advertiser:

In yesterday's issue of your valuable journal, under the heading of correspondence, appears a letter signed by one Thomas J. M. Dougherty, who is in error when he states that Archbishop Benson crowned our late King. It was the late Archbishop Frederick Temple who performed the ceremony on that occasion, he having been confirmed archbishop on the 22nd of December, 1896, in the place of the late Archbishop Benson. The coronation of King Edward VII. took place on the 8th August, 1902, over five years after the death of Archbishop DAVID SARE. Rose Villa, South London, July 21.

back toward the tegrace where Kurlmurt and Karl still talked. The sun shot colored shafts of every shade across the heavens as slowly we went back through the winding paths of the garden.

The roses filled the air with their fragrance, and a hush as seems to come when soft music is played filled the air. My mind was full of strange jumblings. I dreamed, awake as I was, a dream no sane man would think of in his waking moments. And yet so strange had matters turned I felt anything could happen. She was to be queen. On that plough handle I had set my grip, and a straight furrow must be driven, no matter if other things would suit the fancies of my dream the better. There was but one thing to be done.

As we neared the terrace she stopped, and plucking a deep red rose, pressed it to her lips. Then as she started on she stopped again, glanced toward the terrace where Kurlmurt and Karl stood talking, and slowly plucked two more, not as red as the first.

Then she turned to me. A smile was on her lips and yet there seemed a serious note beneath.

"The emblem of my champions," she said, smilling gally and she pleased. We went down the wide steps and We went down the wide steps and along the gravel path between rose bushes in full bloom. The fragrance of the flowers was in the air, while a cool soft breeze came from over the lake.

There was something holy in her speaking as she did. I had never even seen a likeness of her father, and yet I could picture a grey-halred man with a strong yet kind face standing there, as she did, looking out over the valley and smillin gsoftly at his thoughts.

His brow would have been deep and full, as was hers, his chin firm, and in his face, as in hers, would have been a look of perfect understanding and faith. Men would have followed him to death. As her father stood she stood, and he who would have followed him would follow her.

"America," she said slowly, as if again explaining that welcome at the inn, "was always a country of great interest to my father."

"I understand," I said.

"And America," she asked, turning to me eagerly, "tell me of it? Ah, there no such tasks would come to one. There I would never need to choose between my wishes and my country's need."

I understood what she meant, I thought. She did not seek to rule her country, and yet it was necessary that she should. She did not seek to rule her country, and yet it was necessary that she should. Her people demanded it. Her cousin had no right to the throne. That fact, coupled with the knowledge that he would be no more than a tool in the hands of the Duke of Zergald, made his coronation a calamity. What course, then, was there open to her? She stood, no more than a girl, torn between her natural desire to be free, to do as she would, and the keener demands of her position. osition.

She turned suddenly, a little catch in her voice; there almost seemed to be tears in her eyes.

"I cannot say so to them"—she pointed to the terrace where Kurlmurt and Karl waited our return. "They must not think I find it hard, for there is my father. Yet—oh, it is—so hard. I know what one and all will ask of me if I am crowned. I shall always have to stay here. Before I could go away quietly, but when I am their queen"—she smiled sadly—"I will be no more than a caged bird."

"But, perhaps—" I began suddenly, carried away by my sympathy and completely forgetting myself.

TIN WORKERS' STRIKE. Pittsburg, July 21.-The strike begun

over a year ago by the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, against the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company, is to be referred, it is said, to a vote of the mill workers, soon, to determine whether it shall be declared off. It is said the vote will be called for Sept. 1. The strike was declared because the company abolished its joint agreement with the association and entered into individual agreements with the men. This was held by the unions to be an "open shop" policy, at which they rebelled.

Death of Mrs. Margaret Henderson, of William Street, Was Purely Accidental, Says Jury.

INOUEST HELDLAST NIGHT

Evidence Went to Show That Engineer Had Sounded the Whistle Repeatedly, But Woman Did Not Heed Warning.

"That deceased, Margaret Henderson, came to her death in the city of London, County of Middlesex, on the evening of July 16, 1910, by being struck by a north bound Pere Marquette train. We believe that death was purely accidental, and exonerate the train crew from all blame."

The above was the verdict of the jury empanelled by Coroner Mac-Laren to investigate the death of Margaret Henderson, colored, the aged woman who was killed by a Pere Marquette train last Saturday night. The following composed Hubert Thorne (foreman), Jos. Paisley, A. E. Hall, Wm. Phillips, Chris. Ward, Wm. Smith, Cecil Mann, Chas Bushnell, Ed. Walker, C. R. David, Arthur Gibson, E. Lortie, John Taylor and Henry Merritt.

Mrs. Lydia Oldridge. 90 Maitland street, was the first witness. She told of seeing the Pere Marquette train coming into London about 8:15 last Saturday evening. The whistling of the train caused her to come out of her house into the back yard where she saw Mrs. Henderson on the south side of Ottaway avenue coming west toward the track. When near the track she crossed to the north side and paused for a moment right by the Some young men shouted warning but she did not heed it and stepping on the track was struck by the west about 25 feet. The witness was positive that the train whistled efore reaching the bridge, and almos ontinuously until the accident. Mrs. Oldridge stated that the train was ravelling at a very fast rate of speed, much faster than usual. She estimated its speed at 30 miles an hour. The train did net stop until the last coach was just south of Hill street.

Pearl Oldridge, daughter of the last witness, was next called, and told of seeing the train strike the deceased. She was standing at the corner of Ottaway avenue, near the tracks. Her evidence corroborated that of her

The train whistled four or five times. The witness estimated the speed of the train at something under 25 miles

Engineer Testifies. James Flowers, the driver of the engine which struck the deceased, swore that his train was going about en miles an hour at the time of the accident. The engineer slackens up to go over the bridge, and has to be prepared to stop for a semaphore at Ottaway avenue if it is against the train. The semaphore was up on the night of the fatality, and the witness slackened speed to stop, but it went down as the train came along. The witness saw the deceased when about half a block away. She stepped close up to the track and appeared to look toward the engine. Seeing her so close the witness sounded the alarm whistle. He did not see her struck. George Upper, fireman on the train question, swore that he did not see Mrs. Henderson struck, but saw her roll in the ditch after she was struck He corroborated the engine driver's evidence. Walter Cromwell, colored, whom the deceased lived, testified that her hearing was fairly good, while her eyesight was good. She was a little deaf to ordinary conversation, but anything a few tones higher she could hear quite plainly.

Level Crossings.

The jury retired about 10 o'clock, and was only a few minutes in arriving at the decision. As the railway commission has the matter of level crossings under consideration it was not thought necessary to say anything about this in the verdict.

We have been busy staking out roads, pulling down fences and barns, painting houses, and making everything ready for you to inspect the park and see for yourself how pleasant a spot it is. Come out and spend a cool afternoon with us. The Wellington street south car line takes you to within 300 yards of the property

An Office on the Property

We have opened an office on the property where Mr. D. H. Porter, our agent, will meet you and show you the park, explaining everything to you. The phone number is 2483.

City Conveniences

The city has already grown past Springwood Park; thus the park has city conveniences, with healthful, pure, fresh air—ci+y location at suburban prices—city possibilities without city objections.

It Has To Come

London has a population today of 50,000. The person lives who will see it two or three times its present size, with a population of from 100,000 to 200,000 and an area four or five times its present area. Where will the city limits extend to at that time? What price will be asked for land at present on the city limits?

What Will Happen

This is Canada's century. As Canada grows so must the chief distributing point for Western Ontario grow proportionately. London is the hub of Western Ontario-the Geographical centre, the Railroad centre, the Financial centre. Money invested in London Real Estate at present prices will multiply many times.

Choose Your Investment

Two hundred dollars placed in the bank earns you 3%. Some rainy day it is drawn to meet an unexpected expense and is gone. Two hundred dollars invested in stocks in some cases pays you a dividend, and more often does not. The stock may go up a few points, but if it goes down you are invariably "wiped out."

Two hundred dollars invested in First-Class Real Estate in London would buy you only from 10 to 20 feet of land, which would be useless to you.

Two hundred dollars invested in Real Estate in "Springwood Park" will secure for you one of the first-class lots, varying on frontage from 30 feet to 260 feet, and upon two of which are situated solid brick residences. Any one of these lots will be worth while owning. Most of them are worth more than $200; none less.

Let us mail you our booklet, which explains this more fully to you. Come out and see the park, and satisfy last night, Chairman Tancock brought up the matter of putting down curbs and gutters in the north end. In view of the fact, however, that the improvements to the street railway in that district have not been settled upon, it was decided that it would be unwise to go ahead and spend several thousand dollars putting down cement and then have to tear it up again if the rails are moved. It was decided to have a report from Engineer Wright on motion of Ald. Saunders, were rebefore anything is done.
