HEARTY VOTE OF CONFIDENCE

Shareholders Gave It to the New Board on Their Election Saturday.

New Directors Propose now to Take Hold and Operate the Factory.

The Binder Twine Company concluded their meeting Saturday afternoon about half-past four o'clock. One noticeable feature of the meeting was that everything was done in perfect order and harmony.

After the new Board of Directors were elected they retired to elect their officers. In the interval John Pigott was elected to the chair and called upon a few of the shareholders for short speeches. When the Directors returned Mr. Pigott retired from the chair, and in doing so, complimented Mr. Leverton, the newly elected President of the Company, on the new era which has dawned upon the company.

Mr. Leverton replied, thanking the shareholders for the confidence they had placed in him and hoping that the future would not reveal anything which would make the shareholders sorry that they had reelected him President of the company.

"The former secretary-treasurer," said he, "has made the statement that the factory was running—under difficulties—for one month and during that time they made $1,000. This factory, I think, has been an example of a good thing spoiled by bad management, and I am of the opinion that this neglect and bad management has in many cases been willful and deliberate."

Mr. Leverton closed amid loud applause from the audience.

A by-law was then read by Secretary-Treasurer Ross and passed by the meeting, authorizing the newly-elected directors to borrow money for the management of the factory.

Another by-law was read appointing J. J. Ross as managing director of the company at a salary of $1,500 a year.

Mr. Vester, of Blenheim, objected to such a large salary and thought $1,200 would be an ample remuneration for Mr. Ross's services as manager of the company. He made a motion that Mr. Ross's salary be $1,200, but it was afterwards withdrawn and the by-law fixing the salary at $1,500 was carried by the meeting.

As this closed the business of the meeting Mr. Rankin arose and said: "There have been two suits pending on the company. One was lost on a moment's notice and the other was lost on no notice at all."

"One was that of McGarvin vs. the Company. In this case Wilson, Kerr & Pike appeared as solicitors for both the plaintiff and the defendants. When this motion came up the judge stated that he had never heard of such a case before—one lawyer appearing for both sides—laughter.

"Then, too, they served a writ on Mr. Ross, recognizing him, therefore, as managing director of the company, for recovery. This one came up last Monday, and was enlarged until last Saturday. I got it postponed until last Wednesday and again postponed until next Monday, so that it would come up for trial after this meeting. The first case was a very queer one, for if McGarvin won, the company would pay, and if the company won, the company would pay—laughter.

We have been trying to keep the shareholders out and they have been trying to get him in before this meeting. — Applause.

"If they persist in the case I have asked for a motion to be read before the trial, asking them to strike out the company's name as plaintiffs and put in the names of the individual members of the board, so that the defendants can put in a counter claim against them for all moneys mispent, and they will have to pay the individual members of the company for the expense they have put them to in coming to useless meetings.—Applause and cheers. The whole business, from the 11th of January down, has been a mass of riddle, and it is a question if they will go to trial."

A vote of confidence in the newly elected directors was then passed, after which the meeting adjourned.

THE QUEEN CITY OF TORONTO NOW UNDER MILITARY RULE

Serious Sunday Rioting the Result of Attempt to Operate the Street Cars—Volleys of Stones Hurlled at Cars Until Attempt to Run Them Was Abandoned.

Several Persons Injured—Howling Mob Surrounds Building Where Non-Union Men Are Lodged.

700 Men of the City Regiments and a Like Number of Cavalry in Niagara Camp Called Out.

Toronto, Sunday, June 22.—The city will be under military rule to-morrow and things wear a very ugly look indeed. The street car employees' strike, which began Saturday morning, took a serious turn early this morning when the company attempted to start out cars from the barns on King street east and on Yorkville avenue. The King street barns are in rather a rough section, and a mob of several thousand persons gathered, many of whom, as subsequent events proved, came, well provided with stones.

At 7.42 the first car was run out of the barn. It was manned by T. Whitehead as motorman, an old employee, and Wm. Ferrier as conductor. Thirty-five policemen guarded the car, but it had only gone a few steps when a volley of bricks was fired at it, and within a minute not a pane of glass remained in the car. Whitehead had been hit several times, but stuck to his car, and after crossing the Don the two men got under cover, and ran to the end of the line, where they abandoned the car and were chased into the woods by the mob.

The second car that went out had the windows smashed in a moment also, and the men were later dragged from the cars and beaten.

Three other cars were sent out, and in every case the windows were smashed and the men driven from their cars, all except James Quigley, one of the motormen, who was struck by a large rock and had his head gashed. Several stitches were put in his wound, and he was removed to his home.

Mr. W. H. Moir, barrister, who is confidential secretary to Mr. Wm. McKenzie, was on the platform of one of the first cars run out. He was struck on the face by a stone, but had the wound dressed and kept at work during the day. Two of the crowd were rather badly hurt by flying missiles, and four were arrested for stone throwing.

The names of those arrested are Wm. Brown, 45 Munroe street; Ben Finkle, 465 Queen street east; Joseph Christie, 114 Duke street; and Thos. Cook, 608 King street east.

Similar scenes took place at the Yorkville avenue barns, some five cars that issued being smashed.

The police reserves were all sent to the scene of the disturbances, but the officials of the company, after holding a consultation, decided that it would be putting the lives of the men in peril needlessly to run cars without better protection, and announced that the attempt would be abandoned until Monday morning.

The non-union men and old employees who had decided to stand by the company were accompanied with coats at the various barns, but late in the afternoon it was found that this was weakening the company's position, and they were concentrated at the Yorkville barn early in the evening. The men were moved in police wagons, followed by a howling mob of strike sympathizers, who jeered and threw stones. The mob in the evening gathered thousands strong, and only the throwing of large police reinforcement around the barn prevented it from being wrecked.

Meanwhile the company had made a demand for more protection. At 10 o'clock Mayor Howland, Judge MacBougall, Magistrate Kingsford, the Crown Attorney, Deputy Chief Stewart and Col. Buchan held a consultation. At 4 o'clock a formal requisition was served upon Col. Buchan as district officer commanding, for a force of military.

At 4.30 Col. Buchan issued orders calling out cavalry now in camp at Niagara, and 700 of the men of the city regiments. The cavalry requisitioned were 250 men of the First Hussars, London; 250 of the 2nd Dragoons, Niagara; 150 of the Body Guard and 50 of the Toronto Mounted Rifles. The force was instructed to entrain at the Commons on three specials as soon as it could be assembled, and proceed to Toronto. It is expected to arrive some time before 6 a.m., and will detain at the cattle market yards and proceed to points designated by Col. Buchan, the intention being to protect the company in the operation of the belt line service. The infantry called out for duty consists of 300 men of the Queen's Own Rifles, 200 men of the Royal Grenadiers, and 200 men of the 48th Highlanders. Each will be under command of a major, and the men will parade at 6.45 in the armories.

Supt. Jones remarked Saturday that few people were aware of the fact that glass could be cut with sissors if the glass were held under water. The water prevented vibration of the glass and thus made it impossible for the glass to break.

The effect of the water on steel springs was also remarkable. A high tempered spring such as used in gun locks will last for years in the air, but under water the spring would snap to pieces. It is for this reason that low tempered springs of poor quality are used in muskrat traps.

Lawrence Badgley, an inmate of the House of Refuge, appealed to County Clerk Fleming Saturday for sympathy. Lawrence said he couldn't get along at the House of Refuge with some of the other inmates and he had left a good home for good. One man took matches from his pocket and another went into his room. These actions annoyed Badgley, who is a poor unfortunate cripple, and he left. Lawrence said he didn't want to have any trouble and wanted to be good because "if there was a heaven, he wanted to see it."

Despite the disagreeable weather, the moonlight excursion down the river under the auspices of the Park street Methodist church Epworth League Friday evening was run as advertised. Only a small crowd took in the trip and many who would have gone were deterred by the rain which fell in just about the time the boat was leaving the dock. Messrs. Westman, Will Shillington, Miller and others who had the excursion in charge, say that when all returns are in that the League will not be much behind expenses, but they expect to lose a little.

The city lacrosse club will not practice to-night, but will hold a full turnout to-morrow night. Every member should be present. Jos. Tilt has on exhibition in his window a picture of the late Queen Victoria and her husband, the late Prince Albert. This picture is enclosed in a frame made from wood taken from an old chancel built in 1312 in Staple Longford, Wiltshire, England. Col. Sam Holmes says that parties are trespassing on the grounds of the Joy Club and that they had better be careful. There has also been some illegal seine fishing on the Joy Club fishing grounds and the Colonel intends to send out Detective McGregor to investigate this. An effort will be made to secure conviction for illegal fishing and also for trespass.

Yesterday afternoon Court Pride of Dover, A. O. F., held their annual church parade services in the A. O. F. Hall, Bear Line. The brethren assembled at Grace church, where they were put into line by P. C. B. Mutt, Bork, Court Royal, C. O. F. Mitchell's Bay, Court Hope and Court Unity, of this city, and Court Northwood were represented in the parade, which was a large one. Rev. F. C. Clark preached the sermon, which was an able discourse on the brotherhood of man, and welcomed the order on behalf of the church of which he was pastor. The choir rendered some good music, and the ladies served an excellent lunch to the visiting brethren after the church service, which was highly appreciated by the visitors.

First in 1888—Foremost ever since.
To have been "first" merely proves antiquity. To have remained first proves merit.

Yesterday afternoon Court Pride of Dover, A. O. F., held their annual church parade services in the A. O. F. Hall, Bear Line. The brethren assembled at Grace church, where they were put into line by P. C. B. Mutt, Bork, Court Royal, C. O. F. Mitchell's Bay, Court Hope and Court Unity, of this city, and Court Northwood were represented in the parade, which was a large one. Rev. F. C. Clark preached the sermon, which was an able discourse on the brotherhood of man, and welcomed the order on behalf of the church of which he was pastor. The choir rendered some good music, and the ladies served an excellent lunch to the visiting brethren after the church service, which was highly appreciated by the visitors.

ROLFF'S HOUSE

BY G. H. BENEDICT.

"If I ever have an opportunity to sell it, and desire to do so, I shall consider your offer, Mr. Bruyn," replied the lawyer, with an emphasis on the "I."

"And if you don't," continued Mr.
Bruyn, "why, I hope we shall be good neighbors. More than that I can't say now."

"It is not necessary to say more, my dear sir," pursued Mr. Saybrook.
"What more could I desire than to see your good neighbor? As events now shape, perhaps my ambition is not impossible of accomplishment. Ah, Mr.
Bruyn, if my anxiety and efforts for Ralph could be thus rewarded, how happy I should be. No one can tell the interest I have taken in that boy, if I say it myself, he is a young man of rather uncommon parts, and of an intelligence and business turn quite remarkable for his years. I have taken great pains in his bringing up, my dear sir, and I venture to believe that he does me no discredit."

"No doubt of it," replied the farmer. "I have a good opinion of the lad myself. He's steady, and that's the main thing."

"Steady, Mr. Bruyn—why, sir, I feel that his character is founded on a rock, as it were, and cannot be moved. I have never known him to commit an improper or immoral act, or to manifest a single extravagant or wild trait."

The old farmer did not dissent from this eulogium; and, in fact, it was true enough in its way. Ralph had enough of worldly shrewdness to have a keen regard for his reputation, and, as character went in the retired community, he was a most exemplary young man, but one of a kind who was much more respected and liked by his elders than by those of his own age.

Farmer Bruyn soon took his departure, and the lawyer remained cogitating over the interview, and its probable effects till Ralph came in.

The young man saw at once, by his father's gratified smile, that some favorable event had happened, and bent on him an enquiring glance.

"Old Bruyn has been here," said the father. "He bit on the bait I dropped in the proper quarter regarding my little transactions with Claude."

"Ah!—Claude informed you, of course. Very good, indeed—it saves the trouble of explanation. I presume he may as well proceed at once to the old cellar. It is my plan to transact all business as speedily as possible; and,
as this is a holiday, and I have a great deal to do, I shall have to have a special glass and pipe with me at four o'clock. I will adhere to my plan on this occasion."

"Curse your plan!" muttered old Carl under his breath; and then he said aloud, "I'll get a light," and at once started off to procure it, leaving the lawyer standing in the cold, gloomy, old hall.

"Bant courtesy," he said to himself, as he gazed after the old man with a peculiar glitter in his eyes; "but it's all the same to me, Mr. Crum; I fancy I shall be able to get even with you
one of these days."

Old Carl presently returned, with a candle in a tin lantern, and beckoning to the lawyer, led the way to the stair case, and down into the basement.
They traversed the dark passage that led to the cellar stairs, and old Carl descended them and unlocked the door, and held the lantern that the lawyer might safely descend.

In a moment they both stood in the old gloomy cellar, and the old man led the way with his lantern to the vault.
"This is the vault?" queried the lawyer.

"Yes," curtly responded the old man.
"Anthony Saybrook examined the door carefully. There was no sign of the signal of the breaking of the prohibition against the door being opened."

This was all that the lawyer got out of him. But his curiosity was increased by the sight of the vault and its massive structure. He examined it closely. He noted how nicely the door fitted, and wondered as to its thickness. He scanned keenly the massive masonry that surrounded it, and mentally concluded that no such solid structure could have been built for a trifling purpose. Why had old Marmus up in his mind, and set him to trying to weave a theory to explain it. He concluded that it must have been intended for the deposit of some precious treasure. Public gossip may be more than half right about it, he thought.

A smile fitted across his face as he called to mind the superstitious report that no one could enter it or handle its contents except he sold himself to the devil. "Suppose I should be the one to outwit the devil," he exclaimed mentally, and again the smile fitted across his face.

"Rather a queer piece of masonry, this," he said in an inquiring tone, turning to old Carl, after having finished his inspection of the vault.

"I don't know," responded the old man; "it is according to how you look at it."

"Well, how do you look at it, if I may be so bold as to enquire?" responded the lawyer, in an inquisitive tone.

"As a very simple matter, without a bit of mystery about it," was the reply. "In their better days, the family had many valuable articles, and it was very natural that a great house like this should have a private strong place, where valuable papers or articles could be kept safe from prying eyes and fire."

"So, so—very keen, very sagacious, Mr. Crum," replied the lawyer, who saw at once that old Carl was not disposed to encourage him in any curiosity about the vault. "And now, if it is just as agreeable to you, I should like to be left alone here a few moments, that I may carry out certain instructions of your young master."

Mr. Saybrook had taken a fancy that he would like to closely examine the old cellar, and hence his request to be left alone.

But old Carl had no notion of indulging him in his curiosity.
"I would afford you little pleasure, methinks, to be left alone here in the dark," he answered. "I cannot leave you the lantern, as I am growing old, and it is not safe for me to be wandering around in the dark passages above without a light."

"I will light you up the stairs and through the passage, if that is all," answered the lawyer, "and then return and fulfill my duty."

Seeing that any attempt to evade the request would prove useless, the old man replied, somewhat bluntly:
"It is not in accordance with my instructions to leave you alone here."

"Instructions from whom?" demanded the lawyer, sharply.

"That question concerns me and not you," responded the old man, with a suspicion of warmth in his tone. "But to save words, I will say that my instructions were to accompany you down the stairs, and to see that you do not forget to lock the door after you have been out."

is to judge thereof, and give the mysterious sign that is to unlock the doors of the vault, provided young prodigal reforms within five years? Faith, I shouldn't wonder. Either would be shrewd and trustworthy enough; and, really, the plan wouldn't be so bad for keeping the money safe. Can it be a little experience of the world. But I'll wager the old lady never counted on the possibility of any new proprietor coming into possession of loiter House before the secret of the vault was revealed. Suppose there is a fortune lying in there snugly locked up it makes Rolff House the greater prize.
Yes, yes—it is a prize worth having;
and I must and will have it, unless the devil himself fights against me."

New Year day at last arrived; and, immediately after a hearty dinner, Anthony Saybrook proceeded to the old mansion, to examine the great rusty knocker of the heavy oak door, sent a loud alarm through the vacant halls and rooms, that echoed and re-echoed as if giving warning that a dangerous shenmy was at hand.

Old Carl answered the summons.
"Good day, Mr. Crum," said the lawyer, with a pleasant smile.

"Good day," answered the old man.
"Come in. I knew the object of your visit."

"Ah!—Claude informed you, of course. Very good, indeed—it saves the trouble of explanation. I presume he
may as well proceed at once to the old
cellar. It is my plan to transact all business as speedily as possible; and,
as this is a holiday, and I have a great deal to do, I shall have to have a special glass and pipe with me at four
occasion."

"Curse your plan!" muttered old Carl under his breath; and then he said
aloud, "I'll get a light," and at once
started off to procure it, leaving the
lawyer standing in the cold, gloomy,
old hall.

"Bant courtesy," he said to himself,
as he gazed after the old man with a peculiar glitter in his eyes; "but it's
all the same to me, Mr. Crum; I fancy
one of these days."

Old Carl presently returned, with a candle in a tin lantern, and beckoning
to the lawyer, led the way to the stair case, and down into the basement.
They traversed the dark passage that
led to the cellar stairs, and old Carl
descended them and unlocked the door,
and held the lantern that the lawyer
might safely descend.

In a moment they both stood in the
old gloomy cellar, and the old man led
the way with his lantern to the vault.
"This is the vault?" queried the
lawyer.

"Yes," curtly responded the old man.
"Anthony Saybrook examined the door carefully. There was no sign of the signal of the breaking of the prohibition against the door being opened."

This was all that the lawyer got
out of him. But his curiosity
was increased by the sight of the vault
and its massive structure. He examined it closely. He noted how nicely the
door fitted, and wondered as to its
thickness. He scanned keenly the massive masonry that surrounded it, and
mentally concluded that no such solid
structure could have been built for a trifling purpose. Why had old Marmus
up in his mind, and set him to trying
to weave a theory to explain it. He concluded that it must have been intended for the deposit of some precious treasure. Public gossip may be more than half right about it, he thought.

A smile fitted across his face as he
called to mind the superstitious report
that no one could enter it or handle its
contents except he sold himself to the devil. "Suppose I should be the one to outwit the devil," he exclaimed mentally, and again the smile fitted across
his face.

"Rather a queer piece of masonry,
this," he said in an inquiring tone,
turning to old Carl, after having finished his inspection of the vault.

"I don't know," responded the old man; "it is according to how you look at it."

"Well, how do you look at it, if I may be so bold as to enquire?" responded
the lawyer, in an inquisitive tone.

"As a very simple matter, without a bit of mystery about it," was the reply. "In their better days, the family
had many valuable articles, and it was very natural that a great house like
this should have a private strong place,
where valuable papers or articles could
be kept safe from prying eyes and fire."

"So, so—very keen, very sagacious, Mr. Crum," replied the lawyer, who saw at once that old Carl was not disposed to encourage him in any curiosity about the vault. "And now, if it
ments, that I may carry out certain instructions of your young master."

Mr. Saybrook had taken a fancy that he would like to closely examine the
old cellar, and hence his request to be left alone.

But old Carl had no notion of indulging him in his curiosity.
"I would afford you little pleasure,
methinks, to be left alone here in the
dark," he answered. "I cannot leave
you the lantern, as I am growing old,
and it is not safe for me to be wandering around in the dark passages above
without a light."

"I will light you up the stairs and
through the passage, if that is all," answered the lawyer, "and then return
and fulfill my duty."

Seeing that any attempt to evade the
request would prove useless, the old man replied, somewhat bluntly:
"It is not in accordance with my instructions to leave you alone here."

"Instructions from whom?" demanded the lawyer, sharply.

"That question concerns me and not
you," responded the old man, with a suspicion of warmth in his tone. "But
to save words, I will say that my in-
the stairs, and to see that you do not forget to lock the door after you have been out."

"So, so—very keen, very sagacious, Mr. Crum," replied the lawyer, who saw at once that old Carl was not disposed to encourage him in any curiosity about the vault. "And now, if it

ALL READY FOR CORONATION

His Majesty's Health Fully Restored—Welcome to the Colonials.

Canadians Protest Against the Proposal to Use Them Merely as Police at Procession.

London, June 21.—It is announced today that his Majesty has completely recovered his health and has now arranged for the court to return to London Monday. His nerves were rather upset by the unfortunate illness at Alderhot, and every precaution is being taken to prevent a recurrence of such a sudden indisposition. In the meantime preparations for the coronation are in progress. It is already difficult for pedestrians to traverse the main thoroughfares, such as the Strand, Piccadilly and Whitehall during the greater part of the day, and they are almost impassable at night, owing to the crowds of visitors, with which store clerks, costers and London's marvellous floating population generally mingle nightly, as they wander through the streets, gazing at the decorations, which are now taking on a finished aspect.

THE COLONIAL EXECUTIVES, all of whom have arrived here except Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Premier of Canada, are features of attention. The sentries guarding their hotel, and their gorgeous royal carriages and footmen greatly accentuate popular interest. Every afternoon crowds gather outside the Hotel Cecil, gaze at these brilliant equipages and seem to enjoy the sight just as much as if they knew one premier from another. From the colonial contingents, however, angry protests are now being registered. It appears that the war office arranged that all troops specially sent to the coronation shall, with the exception of the cavalry, be utilized to line the route of the procession, instead of actually participating in it. As the major parts of the visiting contingents consist of infantry the arrangement has created bitter disappointment. One of the officers of the Canadian contingent said to a press representative:—

"If we had known that we were merely intended to be used as police I do not think we would have cared to come over. We have sent our best men at our own expense, yet our part in the imperial parade will be only a handful of cavalry, quite unrepresentative of Canada, and quite unfair to the distinguished men, who will be seen by only a handful of people, and who will have to perform duties for which they were not sent over. The Governor-General of Canada, the Earl of Minto, the High Commissioner of Canada, Lord Strathcona, and Col. Pellatt, in command of the Canadians, are doing their utmost to induce the War Office to allow the colonial troops to take part in the procession as units, regardless of the arm of the service to which they may belong. Alexandra Park, where the colonials are encamped, is now a perfect morass, thanks to the recent heavy rains. The accommodations for the troops are utterly inadequate, and many of the officers, refusing to stay in the tents, have taken rooms near by. The troops, who naturally brought their shoiest uniforms, are now going about in raincoats and heavy top boots, and much of their equipment is ruined. Even such ordinary camp arrangements as plank walks were neglected by the British staff officers in charge of the preparations. As one of the colonials said:—"If we had been told to prepare for a campaign, it would have been all right, but we came here for a procession, in which we are not to take part, and are dumped into a bog." Besides the complaints of the colonials, several of the leading dailies are vehemently protesting against the special coronation contingents, hurriedly sent by Lord Kitchener from South Africa, at the Government's request, being detailed to guard the route instead of marching through the streets. With all these protests the War Office may perhaps relent and allow the colonial and the war contingent to take part in the coronation procession.

WELCOME TO THE COLONIAL TROOPS.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Premier Ross of Ontario were unfortunate in not arriving in time for the chief function to-day which was the welcome of the colonial troops at Alexandra Palace. The ceremony and the display is hardly required in order to convince any one that the Empire is world-wide and that London has become a picturesque capital. Hampton Court and Alexandra Palace are the quarters of the Indians and colonial troops, and all races are on exhibition. The tall Sikhs in khaki jackets, and heads puggared with crimson cloth; the brown Ghoorkas, with swaggering strides, the stealthy Pathans, in Oriental uniforms; the copper-faced guards from the Straits Settlements; the cool black negroes from West Africa and Rhodesia; the wideawake volunteers from Canada and the brawny soldiers from Australia, New Zealand and South Africa are united in an unparalleled imperial spectacle for staid and sober London. Piccadilly, Park Lane, Pall Mall and Whitehall are clogged with traffic hour after hour, but enlivened with the ceaseless play of masquerade faces and costumes. The most remarkable decoration in town is the Canadian arch, midway of Whitehall, which has now reached the decorative stage. It has been boldly and artistically designed, and has a business and commercial side as an attractive advertisement of the agricultural resources of the Dominion. All the streets along the line of the royal progress are already thronging with bonneters and bunting. It is the fantastic medley of many colors with out the hoped for proof that artistic results have been accomplished in street decoration.

London, June 22.—Various wild rumors current in London to-night concerning the health of King Edward were referred to Sir Francis Knollys, private secretary to the King. To these queries Sir Francis has telegraphed the following reply from Windsor Castle:—"There is not one word of truth in these reports."

Miss Polly Clark leaves to-day for Calgary, where she intends spending the summer with relatives.

Mrs. Robert McGregor leaves to-day to spend a couple of months with her daughter, Mrs. Townsend, of Edmonton.

Mrs. Ribble of Dresden is the guest of her sister, Miss Annie Samson.

GREAT TEA DRINKERS.

The Maritime Province people use about six pounds of tea per head, or say about thirty pounds per year to an average family. They are also said to be good judges of tea, and this must be a strong recommendation for Red Rose, which is the principal Tea used.

Ready Made That Rivals Custom Made

There are two or three signs that betray the usual ready-made suit wherever you find it. We've studied how to eliminate these signs.

One is the pocket. Most manufacturers will not take the time to do fine work on ready-made pockets. They think it doesn't pay, but we find that these beautifully finished pockets pay very well indeed. People are learning to know T. & D. work by the pockets. Compare the corner of our coat and vest pockets with those of other makes and you will see for yourself.

The edge of the garment is another sign. Well tailored edges are fine, thin, stitched with perfect evenness. Our ready-made edges are well tailored.

Still another important point is the inner linings—coat interlinings and the stay bands of trousers. These unseen things decide whether the garment shall retain its fit or turn baggy and shapeless. We can show you exactly what interlinings are used in any garment from our factory. Rather you saw them than not; they're very creditable.
