Gold Dawn.

Day came like a dove
To the apple-trees and the wheat,
Her feathers were golden as love,
And silver her feet.
A song or a shower
Shook the sweet leaf-shadows apart,
And like the white moth on the flower
Clung the dream to my heart.
And I know not now
What the dawn made dear to me,
But the gold was the light on the bough,
And silver the air.

The Lamp of Poor Souls.

Your Own Little Town.

There are fancier towns than your own little town,
There are towns that are bigger than this;
And the people who live in the tinier towns
Don't know what excitement they miss.
There are things you can see in a wealthier town
That you can't in the town that is small;
And yet, up and down, there is no other town
Like your own little town after all.

Did You Know.

That the Italian front is longer than the French, British and Belgian fronts combined?

That some of the Italian positions can only be reached in baskets slung from wires?

That Italian Railway trains have been shelled by submarines?

That some of the most famous churches in Venice have been destroyed by Austrian airplanes, which have raided that city more than a hundred times?

That in six days the Italians mobilized and equipped and transported to the front an army of half a million men?

That the French have built a 50 centimeter gun which fires a shell weighing one and a half tons?

That the French have in commission 7,000 airplanes?

That fear producing shells are more effective and more generally used than exploding gas?

That in places the Austrian and Italian trenches are only six feet apart?

That on the western front men have been drowned in the mud?

That infant charges are now led by officers in airplanes?

That the British have organized a salvage corps to save everything on the battlefield; that even the rags are collected and sold?

That the traffic on the roads behind the British front is denser than the traffic on fifth avenue, New York, and that it is controlled by traffic policemen?

How He Lost His Friends.

He was always wounding their feelings, making sarcastic or lousy remarks at their expense.
He was cold and reserved in his manner—cranky, gloomy and peevish, spiteful.
He was suspicious of everybody.
He never threw the doors of his heart wide open to people, nor took them into his confidence.
He was always ready to receive assistance from them, but always too busy or too stingy to assist them in their time of need.
He regarded friendship as a luxury to be enjoyed instead of an opportunity for service.
He never learned that implicit, generous trust is the very foundation stone of friendship.
He never thought it worth while to spend time in keeping up his friendships.
He did not realize that friendship will not thrive on sentiment alone; that there must be service to nourish it.
He did not know the value of thoughtfulness in little things.
He borrowed money from them.
He was not loyal to them.
He never hesitated to sacrifice their reputation for his advantage.
He measured them by their ability to advance.—Success.

Little Worries in the Home.

THESE BRING THE WRINKLES AND PALLID FACES THAT MAKE WOMEN LOOK PRIMAVERALLY OLD.
Almost every woman at the head of a home meets daily many little worries in her household affairs. The care of her little ones, the work about the house all contribute to these worries. Most of them may be too small to notice an hour afterwards, but they constitute a constant strain that affects the blood and the nerves and makes women look prematurely old. The effect of these little worries may be noticed in sick or nervous headaches, fickle appetite, dizziness after slight exertion, and the coming of wrinkles which every woman dreads. To those which afflict Dr. Williams' Pink Pills offer a speedy cure, a restoration of color to the cheeks, brightness to the eyes, a hearty appetite and a sense of freedom from weariness. Among the many thousands of Canadian women who have found new health and strength through these pills is Mrs. G. Strasser, Acton West, Ont., who says:—I am the mother of three children and after each birth I became terribly run down. I had weak, thin blood, always felt tired, and unable to do my household work. After the birth of my third child I seemed to be worse and was very badly run down. I found the greatest benefit from the Pills and soon gained my old-time strength. Indeed after taking them I felt as well as in my girlhood, and could take pleasure in my work. I also used Baby's Own Tablets for my children's ailments.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all dealers in medicine, or you can procure them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

John, she asked, nestling up to him for it was the third anniversary of their marriage, "what was the happiest moment of your life?"

"Ah, dear," he replied, "I remember it well. I shall never forget it. It lived to be a hundred years old that moment would always stand out as plainly as it does tonight."

"She sighed and nestled a little closer, looking longingly up into his honest blue eyes. After a moment's silence she urged: "Yes, but, John, dear, you haven't told me what it was."

"Oh," he answered, "I thought you had guessed it. It was when you came to me in the autumn, if you remember, and told me that you had decided to trim up one of your old hats so as to make it do for the winter."

"Then the celebration of the third anniversary of their marriage became exceedingly uninteresting and formal."

"Our doubts are traitors,
And make us lose the good we oft might win
By fearing to attempt."

WOMAN AVOIDS OPERATION

Medicine Which Made Surgeon's Work Unnecessary.

Astoria, N. Y.—"For two years I was feeling ill and took all kinds of tonics. I was getting worse every day. I had chills, my head would ache, I was always tired. I could not walk straight because of the pain in my back and I had pains in my stomach. I went to a doctor and he said I must go under an operation, but I did not go. I read in the paper about Lydie E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and told my husband about it. I said 'I know nothing will help me but I will try this.' I found myself improving from the very first bottle, and in two weeks time I was able to sit down and eat a hearty breakfast with my husband, which had not done for two years. I am now in the best of health and I am not in the least bit out of the operation."—Mrs. JOHN A. KENNEDY, 502 Flushing Avenue, Astoria, N. Y.

Every one dreads the surgeon's knife and the operating table. Sometimes nothing will do; but many times doctors say they are necessary when they are not. Letter after letter comes to the Pinkham Laboratory, telling how operations were advised and were not performed, or if performed, did no good, but Lydie E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was used and good health followed.

If you want advice write to Lydie E. Pinkham, 100 Main Street, Lowell, Mass. (confidential). Lydie E. Pinkham, Lowell, Mass.

And That's a Shipwreck.

"The homeward bound troop transport, Ballarat, carrying a large number of the Australian Imperial force was torpedoed by a e my submarine and sunk on April 25th, about 35 miles from the nearest land," says the Admiralty.
"Owing to the magnificent discipline and steadiness displayed by the troops, which were in keeping with the day from the troops who were on the Ballarat."
"It was one long scream from beginning to end," I was told, and listening to the men one could well imagine that even if the death toll had been on the same scale as with the Birkenhead the gallant Argenta would have persisted with their fight to the end. What can be said of men, who, faced with the near prospect of death, with their vessel sinking under them, proceeded to put their up to us, among themselves? She fetched up, 91!"

"The story was told me by a young Sydney trooper named Frank Spillane. It was while we were still waiting to be rescued," he said, "one of the men shouted out, 'Well, what's it matter anyhow? The old ship don't belong to us!' There was a shout of laughter, and then Gunner Brun called out, 'But here's a chance if I own her. Come on, boys, let's see the old Ballarat!' We were all shrieking with laughter, but Brun acted as a success."

"After hearing the engineer's first report, the Commander gave the order to abandon the ship," says the London Times. "Nine boats were lowered in perfect order. While the men were embarking in the boats they continued to show the most cheerful spirits."

"One of the officers told his company, 'You may smoke on this parade, boys. Many of them lit cigarettes. Others carried their battalions—a squirrel, several dogs, puppies and parrots. When the soldiers were embarked in the boats they sang, 'Australia will be there!'"

"On shore the colonel assembled the men and addressed them. Australia, he said, would be proud of their soldierly bearing, for it was without blemish. He stated later that it brought tears to the eyes to see the men as they stood on the Ballarat in the last parade, their straight lines of eager, cheery faces, and the quiet steadiness of the officers. Nowhere was there the slightest sign of haste or panic."

"The submarine was never seen; she takes a very small part in this affair, but the British Navy was there and took a very great part; prompt assistance up to time and no loss, and those men who exhausted their vocabulary on the question of boat drill are nearly dumb. 'I've heard about the Navy,' said a man, 'but—well, there it was.'"

"And, by the way, the man who was bringing a little white dog to his son has brought the little white dog to his son. And that's a shipwreck."

In November of 1915 a mother in Digby, says the Courier, received a box of holly from her son 'somewhere in Belgium.' She planted a few berries in a pot of earth with a rose bush and watched patiently for weeks, hoping they would come up, but no sign of the holly. About ten days ago two little plants made their appearance with dark glossy green leaves. Having forgotten all about the holly needs, she decided they must be orange plants. This week the second lot shows itself to be the holly from Belgium, planted eighteen months ago. Money could not buy these little plants and the owner only hopes as they have had such a struggle to germinate, and become free, so their native soil may be freed from a murderous pest in 1917, washed as it has been and still is with some of the best blood of Nova Scotian heroes.

Bee Keeping—Preparing For 1918.

(Experimental Farms Note.)
While a maximum production of honey is of pressing importance in this war-torn year, yet increasing the bees for next season must not be neglected.
Roughly speaking, the bees that are in the hive at the commencement of the season will be the bees that will be in the hive at the commencement of the next year. Unless there is to be another important home-flow, this brood is very valuable for forming nuclei, because these, started early with a laying queen, or ripe queen cell, will build up into strong colonies before the winter, increasing in this way with brood from strong colonies during the honey-flow is the basic principle upon which an apiary can be quickly built up while at the same time an almost full honey-crop is secured.

In newly formed nuclei containing brood in all stages there is always more or less desolation of bees and consequent death of the young brood and sometimes chilling and death of the older brood even when the nuclei are skilfully made by an experienced apiarist. Further, queens may not be immediately obtainable, or they may be lost in introduction. Robbing of the newly-formed nuclei has also to be guarded against, but during the height of the honey-flow only carefulness will cause this; towards the end, however, the danger of robbing grows so great that it is difficult to maintain nuclei of bees, and nuclei even when strong. Desertion may be checked by stopping the entrance with grass; the bees will make their way out when the grass dries and shrinks in about two days, but care must be taken to avoid overcrowding the confined bees, which would lead to stinging, especially in hot weather. A good way to overcome the loss of young brood is to place the brood over a queen excluder a week before its removal from the parent hive. This may be done in the ordinary manner of selecting a congenial nucleus chamber as a means to discourage swarming, a frame or two of empty comb or of tondal being placed in the brood chamber when the brood is raised.

All of these risks may be greatly minimized as follows:
Have all the queens wings clipped (this is not essential), and when a colony of a strain that is desired to propagate swarms, move the parent hive on the old stand, the queen having been picked off the ground and placed in the empty hive. The swarm will return to the new hive at the old stand. The field bees now join the swarm, and the super should be transferred from the parent hive to the swarm which will produce the crop of honey. The colony, now depleted of bees but rich in brood, is divided a week later into three to six nuclei, each nucleus consisting of two or three frames containing brood and cells containing queens soon to emerge with the adhering bees.

This method has the great advantage that it not only controls and satisfies the troublesome swarming instinct but it helps to secure the desired ends by natural means. The honey gatherers are segregated into a strong force, and the brood, being mostly capped, is not likely to get chilled; the bees desert neither it nor the queen-cells readily, and all trouble in raising and introducing queens is avoided. The bees in the newly formed nuclei are the post-swarming stage when their instinct is to spread themselves over and incubate as much brood as possible, and especially the queen-cells.

The beginner should be warned not to divide the parent colony into too many weak nuclei, but this fault may be rectified in the autumn by uniting. The ideal conditions for building up nuclei are a slow honey-flow throughout August and early September. Fortunately these are supplied in most Canadian localities by golden-rod, aster and buckwheat.

With many people constipation becomes a habit. And it is a dangerous habit which is certain sooner or later to cause serious disease.

"Daily movement of the bowels" is the first and most important rule of health. When the liver becomes torpid the flow of bile into the intestines is stopped and the bowels become constipated. But you can readily overcome this condition by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. There is no treatment obtainable which so promptly awakens the activity of the liver and bowels and thereby corrects derangements of the digestive system.

Mrs. Herbert Doherty of Beaver Brook, Albert Co., N.S., writes: "I can truthfully say that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are a great medicine for constipation. I have suffered from constipation ever since I can remember, but got to using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and was benefited that I began to study this remedy. I found that the indigestion resulted from a bad case of inactive liver, and as soon as I got the liver working right, I didn't have any stomach trouble or indigestion. I highly and would advise anyone suffering from indigestion or constipation to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. My husband has done him more good than any medicine he ever used. You can be sure to use this letter."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills positively relieve and cure torpid action, headache and kidney disease. Put it to the test. One pill a dose. 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmunds, White & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

He was a young subaltern. One evening the Sister had just finished making him comfortable for the night and before going off duty asked: "Is there anything I can do for you before I leave?"

Dear little Two Stars replied: "Well, yes! I should like very much to be kissed good-night."

Sister rustled to the door. "Just wait till I call the orderly," she said, "he does all the rough work here."

Returning to camp from leave to London, Gunner M— stepped into a first class coach instead of the regulation third. His company was a hangily old woman, who a Gressed him as follows:

"Young man, are you aware that this is a first-class carriage?"

"Yes, mum, but I'm a Canadian," was the gunner's reply.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., JUNE 29, 1917

Editorial Brevities.

The province that made conscription necessary is the province that is trying to make conscription impossible.

The Food Controller.

Probably not another man in Canada is better fitted for the Food Controllership of Canada than Hon. W. J. Hanna, the former Provincial Secretary for Ontario. He was an able administrator and large-visioned reformer. In the office to which the government has now called him he has an opportunity to earn very much greater fame by doing the public far more important service. The large powers conferred upon him as Food Controller enable him to do telling work for his country in its time of need.

There is no military duty which must be more rigorously performed than the duty of husbanding the food resources and ruthlessly eliminating the parasites that are heaping up riches from inordinate food trade profits. The food speculator and the food cornerer must be stamped out, and the man who now has the power to stamp them out is the Food Controller.

There is a formidable grievance to be at once grappled with. Mr. Hanna has a big job on his hands. The best fortune we can wish him is that he prove big enough man for the job.

The Canadian people who have such great sacrifices for their country and their empire in this war time must not be left to the mercy of men who are making big profits out of the food supply.

The People's Forum.

To the Editor of THE ACADIAN.

The reputation of a business man is an asset of value. The late J. P. Morgan stated in his evidence on insurance, before a committee of the United States Senate, that he had loaned a million dollars with no other security than the man's character. The reputation of a town made by the reputation of its citizens is also an able asset. They give it its reputation. If many of them are spoken of as shabby in their dealings, shabby in their methods, quick to grasp at any unfair advantage, litigious, greedy or grasping, that town will naturally be avoided as if infected by a contagious disease. "No good can come out of Nazareth" has been a term of reproach for eighteen hundred years.

The prosperity of a place naturally depends upon its good name—which every good citizen will do his part to maintain.

Criticism of even an enemy are often valuable. The writer has heard of three things this week that reflect on this town.

A retired business man of Halifax came here a few weeks ago to purchase a lot on which to erect a home for himself, proposing to settle here. He returned to Halifax having changed his mind. He said Halifax was a cheaper place to do business in.

Another traveller from Halifax said the Transfer Company there carried his traps two miles to the railway station and charged him 50 cents. A truckman here carried them two blocks from the railway station and charged him $1.00.

Fuel, always an important item in living expenses, has been mounting up in cost of late and threatening to become still more of a burden on the householder this winter. It is the business of every good citizen to take every legitimate step possible to keep down the price and to prevent greedy dealers charging illegitimate profits.

An alleged contest among the dealers in wood to put up the price is one that will do the town no good. When private greed undertakes to fill its pockets to the public detriment it must be regarded as an evil and a nuisance.

It is very much the habit of all tourist towns to regard summer visitors much in the light of new milch cows—sent there to be milked. Once realizing that they are good for raiding purposes only, they are not apt to return and they are apt to advise their sisters, their cousins and their aunts to avoid the place.

We possess a very attractive town. The educational institutions give it a character and tone; the scenery, the splendid drives and walks, the abundance of foliage lining the streets, the neat residences, all make it not only a summer home but a desirable residential place. It is for our citizens to be on the alert, to advertise its attractions that families with means may be induced to live here.

Our Ottawa Letter.

Ottawa, June 23rd—All of this week has been devoted to the debate on compulsory military service and it has been full of events of startling significance. During the two weeks that negotiations were going on between the Prime Minister and Sir Wilfrid Laurier there was a lot of guessing. It is known that several of Sir Wilfrid's followers were favorable to a co-partnership, but the Quebec wing was bitterly opposed to it, and the Pugsley-Oliver-McDonald crowd were just as hostile. None of these was ever mentioned as a possibility in a coalition government, and that accounts for the over-enthusiasm for opposition to it.

After the coalition overtures were declared off discussion in the Liberal ranks came to the surface. They had a party caucus and could not agree. A committee was appointed to try and frame up an amendment that would hold the crowd together. But that proved to be impossible, because the Quebec men would make no compromise—they are opposed to compulsory service and opposed to the continuance of Canada in the war—that is the rock bottom fact, while on the other hand the strong men of Ontario and the west are in favor of compulsory service.

There was therefore a split that could not be bridged, and Laurier had to make a choice. He decided to stick to the Quebec wing and the hide-bounds who will follow him on a motion for referendum. In a sense he is to be pitied. His position is trying. The once great leader is no longer a leader of a party. He is only the leader of a faction.

His speech on the second reading was an apology and an appeal. "Hear me, hear me, for my cause," was his plaintive cry. He tried to argue that his Militia Act of 1904 "did not authorize the government to send troops out of Canada for the defence of Canada," but the fallaciousness of his contention faded away in the presence of the law. As Sir George Foster pointed out the words of the law are plain and the meaning is clear. Sir Wilfrid admitted that Quebec had made a poor response in enlistments. He tried to excuse the default by blaming the government; but he did not offer to go into Quebec and get the men required. He held out no hope in that regard.

The official figures show that out of a population of 1,605,339 French Canadians in Quebec, only 6,979 have gone overseas. The total enlistments from Quebec province are 29,000. Of these 6,979 are French, the remainder English speaking. There are 400,000 French Canadians outside of Quebec, and these have sent more men to the front than have the 1,605,339 of Quebec.

The French Canadians outside of Quebec have responded well. These startling figures staggered Sir Wilfrid, and his speech was a great disappointment, especially when he concluded by asking that the great and pressing duty of sending reinforcements to our brave sons at the front be shelved while we fight out a referendum at home.

Sir George Foster replied to Sir Wilfrid Laurier in a brilliant oration. But the stroke that fell heaviest on the old Liberal leader was delivered by one of his biggest men who sits immediately behind him, Hugh Guthrie, believed to be the ablest man in the Liberal ranks, delivered it in a powerful speech on Tuesday. He demolished Sir Wilfrid's specious arguments about the Militia Act, described a referendum as un-British, and declared that he is in favor of coalition of extension of parliament and of the Borden compulsory service Bill. He will vote against Laurier's amendment and for the Borden Bill. His great speech made a profound impression.

On Wednesday Mr. Barrette, of Berthier, threw a bombshell at Laurier by moving the six months hold as an amendment to the amendment. This means that Sir Wilfrid must get out from behind his referendum and vote squarely for or against the principle of compulsory service. He is much worried over this, as his Quebec friends are demanding a square avowal from him, and he is trying to hedge on referendum.

The next crack came on Thursday when the Chief Liberal Whip, F. F. Pardee, who is the closest man to Laurier, made a strong speech and took the same ground as Hugh Guthrie. He broke, and will vote against the Laurier referendum and for the Borden Bill.

The same evening a Western Liberal, George McCrae, of Saskatoon, followed the lead of Guthrie and Pardee and declared against Laurier's referendum and for compulsory service. Before Mr. McCrae spoke Thursday night L. J. Gauthier, of St. Hyacinthe, caused a sensation. He spoke strongly for the Laurier policy, and closed with a memorable threat that his electors would fight the matter out. The House understood his extreme language in this fight there will be pain and suffering. We may have to go to the direct consequences to mean that the law would be opposed by force. In other words that he and his electors would rebel.

On Friday Sir Wilfrid was given another stunning blow by his first lieutenant, George P. Graham, the man who sits beside him in the House, at the same desk. Mr. Graham, it is true, prepared the way for his revolt by making a violent attack on the government; but when the wind had subsided he announced that he, too, would vote against his leader's referendum amendment and in favor of Sir Robert Borden's Compulsory Service Bill.

Added to Mr. Graham on Friday were two other Liberals, W. A. Buchanan, of Medicine Hat, and E. W. Nesbitt, of Oxford, who announced their intention to vote against the Bill.

Comment at this stage is unnecessary. Sir Wilfrid's adherence to the Quebec malcontents is causing his party to crumble to pieces. His best men are leaving him; and he sits in his place a picture of despair. There are more to follow; and the signs of times are that his days as the leader of a united party are quickly running out.

The debate will likely continue all of next week. Meanwhile the government are dealing with great and important public matters. A fuel controller has been named. A grain board has been appointed, and a food controller is also appointed. These are all given the greatest of powers to deal with the vital questions of coal and other fuel, wheat and food, the prices thereof, and transportation of them. These public officials will all co-operate with the United States authorities to make action common to both countries. G. A. J.

United States Food Administrator.

Herbert Hoover, the United States food administrator, declares that with proper regulation the price of flour should not have been over $9.00 a barrel, and that $50,000,000 a month is being taken by middle men and speculators who ought to be eliminated. In Belgium Mr. Hoover backed up talk with splendid work, and he is beginning his bigger task at home with great energy.

Mr. Hanna, the Canadian Food Controller, and Mr. Hoover have been in conference at Washington, and something real is going to happen.

The Twentieth Century is Woman's Century

Woman is coming into her own. On every side she is showing those abilities which were long kept down. It is to her that men are now looking to solve many of the greatest problems that the world has ever faced.

She is now to be found in the two great professions, law and medicine. Lawyers and doctors of the old school held up their hands in horror and rolled their eyes to Heaven at the thought of women breaking into their sacred professions. But they have been recognized as fogies of a musty, bygone age, and woman with her broom has swept away the cobwebs.

Bright, eager ambitious and keenly competent young women are daily taking up the study of law and medicine.

Are they making a success of it? Well, rather. They invariably lead the men in the examinations or come very close to it. And in the actual practice of their professions they have been not a bit less successful.

In all lines of business they have been rapidly forging to the front. Hundreds of inspiring stories could be told of women who put such enthusiasm and such excellent ideas into their work that they have put businesses on their feet where men have failed. Some of the most successful real estate brokers in the larger cities of the Dominion are women. The Banks have swung into line and all over the country young women, bright, clever, well dressed, ambitious and very competent young women, are taking a big hand in handling the finances of the nation. Truly, an astounding development.

She took a giant stride with the coming of the war. You know the old idea that woman was a poor, weak sort of creature, all right to look after washing dishes, but that was her limit. And coupled with that idea of lack of business ability was the theory that she should keep well in the rear in a time of war while the men, big, strong, fearless men—poor!—would see that all was well.

That has all been changed now. Isn't it wonderful? Woman is taking her full share in this fight and she is going to have a big say about the starting of any more such outbreaks. She is to be found in the munition factory by the tens of thousands making shells, making them all day long, and making them better than a large percentage of the men.

She is to be found on the farms taking her place between the handles of the plough, cultivating the fields, harvesting, aiding in providing food for those at the front.

Millions of women are keeping up a constant stream of supplies to the men in the trenches, conducting a business of supplying goods that stagger the imagination, and conducting it well.

And now that the Russian troops lag and will not fight, who is it that is going to show the way? A battalion of women has volunteered to go into the trenches and take up the rifles laid down by the men. Oh the women of this century are a miracle!

It is with a great deal of confidence, then, that an appeal is made to them now. We Nova Scotians have so persevered in our policy of buying our goods outside the province that our commerce and business houses have received a serious blow. The idea of buying away because it seems cheapest is all wrong. The cheapest way is to buy at home for then the money is kept here and you get another chance at it; if it goes away, you never see it again.

Women of Nova Scotia, buy at home.

This is the great "BUY AT HOME" Campaign.

BUY-AT-HOME.

Death of J. W. Bigelow.

The death of one of Wolfville's oldest and best known citizens occurred on Thursday evening, June 27th, when, after an illness of about six months, Mr. J. W. Bigelow passed away. The deceased was 84 years of age and had long been a resident of our town. He was a man of fine business ability and early in life amassed considerable property. He has been much interested in fruit-growing and filled the position of president of the N. S. Fruit Growers' Association. He was the second mayor of Wolfville and was always interested in civic affairs. He is survived by a widow and two daughters, Mrs. D. G. Whidden, of Wolfville, and Mrs. E. C. Whidden, of Antigonish. The funeral, which took place on Sunday afternoon, was largely attended.

STOLEN IDENTITY.

There have been all sorts of thefts, but one of the queerest is that which the heroine of the Butterfly picture, 'The Phantom's Secret,' performs.

'Jeanne de Beaulieu,' daughter of a French aristocrat, who proves on his death bed to be a noted criminal called 'The Phantom,' she is forced to carry her father's accomplice in order to keep his secret.

She takes advantage of the death of her friend in a railway accident, to steal the girl's name and present herself at the house of her friend's godmother, as the one they are expecting. Her theft of identity passes unchallenged, until a former acquaintance appears. Who is this former acquaintance? See this for yourself Monday and Tuesday.

Ever since Adam and Eve descended into the Garden of Eden there has been handed down to subsequent generations the saying that 'those who dance must pay the piper' or words to that effect. This thought has been made the subject of photography.

Having divorced his first wife, and married a far more beautiful and talented woman, Ralph Hadley finds that he is not willing to abide by his own decision. He returns his affection to the woman he had divorced and brings untold suffering to the wife who has been faithful and long enduring. Finally when matters have reached a tragic point, the fickle husband and the woman he had divorced suddenly realize their 'duty,' and matters are compromised. This is a digest of the plot to be unfolded in gripping photodrama, under the title of 'The Piper's Price,' at the Opera House Wednesday and Thursday, 4th and 5th.

Pte. Paul Davidson Home.

Pte. Paul Davidson, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. O. Davidson, who was seriously wounded at the Somme on September 4th last, and has since been in hospital in England, arrived at Halifax on Friday last. He reached home on Monday evening and was given a royal welcome by the citizens who turned out in force to meet the train. The Boy Scouts, under the direction of Scout Master Brown, paraded and made a splendid showing.

On the arrival of the train Private Davidson was placed in Mayor Hales' car which was profusely trimmed with flags of the Allied Nations and an address was presented to him by Rev. G. W. Miller, on behalf of the town. Three hearty cheers were given for the returned soldier, who looks exceedingly well considering the hardship he has undergone. After meeting a number of friends a procession was formed headed by the Boy Scouts, and Private Davidson was driven to his home by Mayor Hales.

He quietly placed his paper to one side and looked thoughtfully out of the window. He carefully considered all the new suggestions brought to him in an article which he had just read and then burst out with the exclamation:

'Mary, I am convinced that the sending of money out of this town to buy goods is all wrong—the principle is all wrong. I want a pair of boots and I am going to buy them right here in our town. We owe it to the town.'

And that very night, he bought down town the first pair of shoes he had purchased there in years. He is an enthusiastic now over the new 'BUY-AT-HOME' campaign, says it is the greatest thing ever.

That is a true story told by one merchant who knew. It is another example of the splendid effect the 'BUY-AT-HOME' campaign is having.

Black River.

Miss Gladys Redden and Miss Grace Shaw, of Wolfville, spent Sunday at the former's home here.

The concert which was held on Friday evening (for church purposes) was a successful affair. A pleasing feature was the chorus by the tiny girls.

Pte. Reuben Atwell, who has been for some time with the Special Service at Wellington Barracks, Halifax, spent a few days at his home recently.

The annual school meeting was held on Monday evening, June 25th, Otto Porter being appointed trustee.

Miss Lenna Atwell, who has been attending the Normal College at Truro, returned home on Monday last.

Frank Reid was thrown from his horse and his arm trampled on recently, but was not seriously injured.

A new bridge is being erected at Mr. Levy's mill.

The crops are looking very promising after last Sunday's heavy rain.

The death occurred at Black River, June 23rd, of Marston Atwell, aged 69 years. Deceased had been an invalid for several years and for nearly two years had been confined to his bed. He was an intense sufferer but found great consolation in the hope of the life beyond. He leaves an aged mother, two sisters and five brothers to mourn their loss.

The funeral services were conducted by E. A. Robertson, pastor of the Black River Baptist church, and were largely attended.

STRICKEN IN THE STREET

Completely Restored to Health By "Fruit-a-lives"

822 St. Valer St., MONTREAL.
"In 1912, I was taken suddenly ill with Acute Stomach Trouble and dropped in the street. I was treated by several physicians for nearly two years, and my weight dropped from 225 pounds to 160 pounds. Then several of my friends advised me to try "Fruit-a-lives". I began to improve almost with the first dose, and by using them, I recovered from the distressing Stomach Trouble—and all pain and Constipation were cured. Now I weigh 208 pounds. I cannot praise "Fruit-a-lives" enough". H. WHITMAN.

Do Everything Well.

He who means to do well in one thing must have the habit of doing well.

A young student whom we knew was very ambitious to gain a certain rank in his class which would entitle him to a scholarship. A well-known professor was interested in the lad's success. He instructed him in a part of his studies, and found him a very bright student; so he thought it possible for him to gain his purpose, though it meant perfect marks for him in everything for a whole year. "Nobody gets perfect marks for everything," the boy objected. "That is nothing to the point," said the teacher. "You are perfect in my recitations, do as well in others. But I notice that you write poorly. Now begin there. Whenever you form a word, either with the pen or tongue, do it plainly, so that there will be no mistake. This will help you to think clearly and to speak accurately. Let your whole mind be given to the least thing you do while you are about it. Form the habit of excellence." The student went resolutely to work, and before the year was far on its way was the leader of his classes. He gained his scholarship and more in that he acquired character that has since made him a shining success.

Profane Language.

It is related by Dr. Scudder that on his return from his mission in India, after a long absence, he was standing on the deck of a steamer with his son, a youth, when he heard a gentleman using loud and profane language. "See, friend," said the doctor, accosting the swearer, "this boy, my son, was born and brought up in a heathen country, and a land of pagan idolatry; but in all his life he never heard a man blaspheme his Master until now." The man colored, blurted out an apology, and looked not a little ashamed of himself.

Alcohol and Cold.

It used to be confidently believed that a moderate dose of alcohol warmed the person who took it and in proof of this fact that it was oxidized—burned—in the body, and so must give rise to useful heat and energy, was advanced. But it has been proved beyond question that the dilation of the blood vessels of the skin which immediately follows the ingestion of alcohol, and which exposes much blood to the cooling effect of the external air, more than counter-balance any heat derived from alcohol. Actual experiment shows that alcohol does not warm the body. But the advocate of alcohol points triumphantly to the fact that he feels the comforting warmth produced by a glass of whiskey, and adduces the experience of our men in the cold, wet trenches. Science admits the "feeling," but denies the "reality." The flux of blood to the skin gives a feeling of warmth to the individual, but it is by substituting valuable heat from the internal organs where it is of vital importance.

Vegetables Necessary to Health.

Sixty-two per cent of the patent medicines sold are patent laxatives. If people regulate their diet properly and include more green stuffs they will not need laxatives. Seventy-five per cent of the people do not eat enough vegetables to keep them well. Some doctors estimate that sixty per cent of the deaths are due to indigestion, constipation, and effects which follow.

THE FUEL SITUATION

Present Difficulties Attributed to a Number of Causes—An Important Statement

The following statement is sent out by Mr. A. D. MacTier, General Manager of the C. P. R. It is realized in most quarters, some more than others, that this country is face to face with a coal shortage of very alarming proportions, and that by next winter, if conditions upon which fuel may be obtained do not alter in the meantime, a great many industrial concerns and householders will be unable to supply themselves with sufficient coal to carry them through the severe weather.

The present and prospective difficulties in the way of bringing coal into Eastern Canada may be attributed to a number of causes, principal among which are dearth of mining labor and shortage of coal carrying equipment at the mining territories at the present time, is that, even with the labor shortage, mine operators are able to turn out coal at a greater rate than they can obtain cars to carry it away. It therefore, naturally follows, that more coal is brought into Canada if the supply is increased.

Importance—By William L. Reid, M.D., President of the Royal Faculty of Physicians and Surgeons, Glasgow.

The Canadians at the Front

The tendency in Europe at the outbreak of the war was to look upon a Canadian soldier as a mediaeval knight who would ride upon a prancing charger, call for a sword and say in a loud voice: "Show me the enemy." He would then charge bravely, but probably unsuccessfully. A British baronet who commands an Imperial regiment at the front recently admitted that this view of the Canadians has long since disappeared. Addressing a Canadian he said: "You have dug yourself in, you have learned modern warfare and taught it as well, if not better, than any other troops at the front." The units from the Dominion have shown a commendable adaptation to changing conditions. They are handy in all sorts of capacities and although they have long since proved themselves as hard working, well-disciplined and efficient a fighting force as any in France.

A young Englishman who spent some years in the Imperial army, writes from an English hospital as follows: "Canada's achievement in the war is stupendous. At the front we talk of the Canadians as we talk of the Guards—troops who are called upon for the toughest jobs. I am going to say that I think the Canadians are finer than the best troops ever seen before, but I know them to be equal to the best. It is to be hoped that the history of the Canadian army in France will be written by a competent writer, and adequately financed, so that it may have opportunity for thorough research and painstaking compilation." The man who says this in praise of Canada and the Canadians belongs to a military family of considerable repute. He knows the Dominion as well as the Old Country when he says that Canada's achievement in the war is 'simply stupendous' he is telling the obvious truth.

Children Must Be Safeguarded.

The children must be safeguarded, for if they are not, the future of the nation and of the world is in jeopardy. It is often with the lungs so weakened that they become chronic sufferers from bronchitis or constipation. Being composed of simple ingredients of undoubted value, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is admirably suited as a treatment for children. It is pleasant to the taste. So much so that children delight to take it on this account, as well as because of the quick relief it affords them.

FOUND A REAL HERO

He Was Only a Tramp but Proved Himself to Be a Genuine Man.

By SARAH ESTELLE BALCOM.
"I'm up a stump, Dacre, and that's the truth of it. I'm tired, at sea, marooned. My publishers have ordered a tramp series. I've read you the first chapter, and you say it won't do."
"That's right—won't do at all," assented Alvin Dacre, poet, critic and magazine editor. "You don't get the right touch, you see. You make the tramp all beer and dirt—no human interest. Get back to your old formula—the simple village. Look here, there's a big chance on Japan. Put in a year there and write something worth while."
"I'd do it only for little Paul," said Philip North, and his big blue voice became gentle as that of a woman's. "He couldn't stand a trip like that."
"Little Paul, the crippled brother, was the tender spot in the heart of Philip North. Even Alvin Dacre had seen something in the wonderful love between those two that made his own barren heart ache at times."
"Well," he said, "if you're bound to immortalize the tramp, do it right. That's all. Cultivate the genius. Study him. I've an idea. Come with me."
Dacre was arctic and wild, and North never questioned his leadership. The former proceeded to the cheap lodging house district of the city and piloted the way up the stairs of one of its cheapest structures. He applied to a man at a desk. The latter called an assistant, and a minute later the two friends were halted in front of a room with a wire netting over the top.

On a wretched cot lay a big, good-natured looking fellow, unmistakably a tramp. He was only half dressed, and he stared with bearded eyes at his unexpected visitors.
"Remember me, don't you, Frowey?" inquired Dacre.
"Why, sure," assented the tramp after a long stare. "You're the gent that paid me to stand for a photograph and put me in the paper."
"That's right, Frowey. Well, I've got you a longer and a better job."
"What doing?" challenged Frowey, suspiciously.
"My friend of mine is writing a book on tramps. He wants you to hang around his place for a week or two. Just act natural, and let him study your act in the paper."
A queer smile crossed the tramp's face. He blinked grimly. Then he said:
"Sorry, governor, but it can't be done."
"Why not?"
"Well, I'm in pawn. You see, my best partner, Slim Larry, was taken in yesterday on a ten dollar fine."
"You needn't worry about that," said Dacre. "Mr. North will start you with a new suit of clothes—and a bath."
"It looks good," remarked Frowey. "But I couldn't rest easy with Larry in trouble. Tell you, gent, and Frowey grew eloquent. "I've had partners, but none like him. He's been failed lately, and it's the country air or the burly ground for him. He's got a poor relative on a farm, and we'd arranged to get him where he'd be safe and comfortable, when the police took him in. When I got him out, gent, I'm open for a proposition."
"Give us the details about your friend, Frowey," directed Dacre, and we'll fix that end of the case."
"You will?" questioned the tramp eagerly. "Then I'm your man."
It was a transition of splendor for Frowey from the slum district to the apartment of the steps of the city. Little Paul took a great fancy to Frowey. The tramp was full of fascinating stories of the wanderlust, and the poor little fellow valued his reminiscences of "bitting the road" because he himself was shut out physically from such peregrinations.

FOUND A REAL HERO

He Was Only a Tramp but Proved Himself to Be a Genuine Man.

of his friend one evening at their club. The literary man shrugged his shoulders indifferently. "Your plan is a failure, Dacre," he said. "I haven't so far traced any of the undersurface heroism you predicted as the occasional characteristic of the occasional tramp. Frowey is prosaic and humdrum. His sole ambition in life is to shirk work. He will tell wonderful stories of the tricks of the trade performed by Slim Larry—nothing better than riding on the bumpers or raiding a farmer's kitchen, though."
"Well, there's his hero worship. His friendship for little Paul is something pathetic."
"Yes, that is true," acknowledged North, the old tender gleam coming into his fine eyes. "What's that?" he almost shouted, as a bell man hurried to his side and repeated into his ear a telephone message just received. "Dacre, my home is on fire!"
The apartment house where North lived was about six squares from the club. In a wild fever of suspense and excitement the two men ran all the way across Canada from North's lips as they turned a corner. They came in sight of the building. It was a mass of flames.

Dacre and a policeman dragged him back and held him by main force. "One man just rushed in there," said the officer. "He'll never come out alive."
As a burst of flame singled and drove them back, Dacre set up a great shout.
"Look, North, look!" he cried.
Three stories up, hanging from the sill of a window of the North apartment, was a man. The flames seemed to scorch his head and his clothing was on fire. It was Frowey, and in one arm he bore a huddled form wrapped up in a drapery.
"Catch him!" rang out in anguished but imperative tones from the tramp, and just then four firemen ran up with the safety net.
Uninjured, unharmed, little Paul was sitting on the net just as Frowey fell into it, a helpless mass. "You brave fellow!" almost wept Philip North, as clapping the hand of the tramp he accompanied him to the hospital.

"You saved Slim Larry—I didn't forget," murmured the loyal Frowey, and fainted away with a pain.
Frowey recovered from his burns and was sent to the farm to join his partner, a pensioner of North's life. The tramp book was published and was a success. Its author sent a copy to Frowey.
"Say," said the latter the next time North and little Paul visited the farm, "that tramp hero in your book does some big things, Mr. North."
"Nothing to equal what you did for little Paul," declared North gratefully. "You risked your life to save him. Do you think we can ever forget?"
Frowey placed a loving hand on the little golden head.
"To think of it!" he said, huskily—"the city cut out, and Larry and me happy and honest and comfortable here. Say, the story book can't beat it. Every time I think of it I feel as if this battered old heart of mine was all clean again."

CURIOUS TRADE OF AFRICA

Hippopotamus ivory Once Much in Demand, Now the Hide is of Much Value.
One of the curiosities of African trade, now far more uncommonly seen than formerly, is the ivory of the hippopotamus. These teeth are much harder than those of the elephant, and for a long time were used for the manufacture of false teeth, which were highly prized from that material. Old Le Vaillant remarks, in his African Travels, now more than a hundred years old: "It is surprising that Europeans, especially Frenchmen, should make an article of commerce out of the teeth of the hippopotamus, for with the help of science they are made to replace our own, and we may see them flashing delightfully in the mouth of a pretty woman." Science has found a better substitute for teeth, and the trade in hippopotamus teeth has fallen off. The making of sjamboks, or whips, from the hide of the hippopotamus, and the making of the Boer war an enterprising genius sold many strips of the thick hide, at a shilling apiece, to a train load of Chinese recruits, by calling them "billions"—that is, un-dried beef. The teeth of the walrus more nearly resemble elephant ivory, and are in good demand in Japan for small carvings; and ivory from Siberia has long been used in China—Harper's Weekly.

Honor Accorded to Bulldog.

Many when he was in Constantinople, Herr von Kiderlen Wachtler, says the Hamburger Nachrichten, sent out most of my clothes to get enough to have a man see the older man. It didn't work, and I reckon I wouldn't look very inviting anywhere hanging around in these togs."
"You needn't worry about that," said Dacre. "Mr. North will start you with a new suit of clothes—and a bath."
"It looks good," remarked Frowey. "But I couldn't rest easy with Larry in trouble. Tell you, gent, and Frowey grew eloquent. "I've had partners, but none like him. The White Lead Behind a Paint Determines its Quality

ONLY a very real quality in a White Lead can give successful results in paint-mixing. A worthless compound masquerading as White Lead cannot impart to paint those essential qualities without which it never gives permanent satisfaction. To avoid risk of failure in mixing your paint, make it a point to use only paint in which the White Lead used is

Brandram's Genuine B.B. White Lead

It is absolutely pure, whiter than others; of great covering capacity and long life. Working under the brush with ease and freedom, it produces a tough, elastic film that does not crack or peel. Its real cost is less than that of seemingly cheaper white leads—because it produces a beautiful protective paint that lasts for many years. White Paint of unknown ingredients never looks well and rarely lasts two years.
