Performance of The Soldiers From Canada Was Remarkable

As Long as Brave Deeds Retain Power to Fire Blood of Anglo-Saxons Stand Made by Canadians Will be Told by Fathers to Their Sons.

The following communication is from Sir Max Aitken, the Canadian recording officer now serving with the Canadian division in France, and its publication is authorized by the war office:

"The recent fighting in Flanders, in which the Canadians played so glorious a part, cannot, of course, be described with precision of military detail until the time has made possible the coordination of relevant diaries, and the piecing together in a narrative both lucid and exact of much, which, so near the event, is confused and blurred. But it is considered right that the mourning in Canada today for husbands, sons, or brothers who have given their lives for their Empire should have, with as little reserve as military consideration allow the rare and precious consolation which, in the agony of bereavement, the record of the valor of their dead must bring, and indeed the mourning in Canada will be very widely spread, for the battle which raged for so many days in the neighborhood of Ypres was bloody, even as men appraise battles, in this callous and life-engulfing war. But as long as brave deeds retain the power to fire the blood of Anglo-Saxons the stand made by the Canadians in those desperate days will be told by fathers to their sons, for in the military records of Canada this defence will shine as brightly as in the records of the British army the stubborn valor with which Sir James MacDonnell and the Guards beat back from Houpmont, the decision of Foy, and the army of Rellie.

"The Canadians have wrestled from the trenches, over the bodies of the dead and maimed, the right to stand side by side with the superb troops who, in the first battle of Ypres, broke and drove before them the flower of the Prussian Guards. Looked at from any point the performance would be remarkable. It is amazing to soldiers when the general and composition of the Canadian divisions are considered. It contained, no doubt, a sprinkling of South African veterans, but it consisted, in the main, of men who were admirable raw material, but who, at the outbreak of war, were neither disciplined nor trained, as men count discipline and training in these days of scientific warfare. It was, it is true, commanded by a distinguished English general.

"Its staff was supplemented, without being replaced by some brilliant British staff officers. But in its higher and regimental commands were to be found lawyers, college professors, business men, and real estate agents, ready with cool self-confidence to do battle against an organization in which the study of military science is the exclusive pursuit of laborious lives.

"With what devotion, with a valor how desperate, with resourcefulness how cool and how frightful, the amateur soldier of Canada confronted overwhelming odds, may perhaps be made clear, even by a narrative so incomplete as the present.

"The salient of Ypres has become familiar to all students of the campaign in Flanders. Like all salients it was, and was to be, a source of weakness to the forces holding it, but the reasons which have led to its retention are apparent and need not be explained.

"French Did Their Duty Well
"On April 22, the Canadian division held a line of roughly five thousand yards extending in a northwesterly direction from the Ypres-Roulers railway to the Ypres-Poelcapelle road, and connecting at its terminus with the French troops. The division consisted of three infantry brigades, in addition to the artillery brigades. Of the infantry brigades the first was in reserve, the second was on the right, and the third established contact with the Allies at the point indicated above.

"The day was a peaceful one, warm and sunny, and except that the previous day had witnessed a further bombardment of the stricken town of Ypres everything seemed quiet in front of the Canadian line. At five o'clock in the afternoon a plan, carefully prepared, was put into execution against our French allies on the left. Asphyxiating gas of great intensity was projected into their trenches, probably by means of force pumps and pipes laid out under the parapets. The fumes, aided by a favorable wind floated backwards poisoning and disabling over an extended area those who fell under their effect. The result was that the French were compelled to give ground for a considerable distance. The glory which the French army has won in this war would make it impertinent to labor on the compelling nature of the poisonous discharges under which the trenches were lost. The French did, as every one knew they would do, all that soldiers could do, and the Canadians, officers and men, look forward to many occasions in the future in which they will stand side by side with the brave armies of France.

"The immediate consequence of this enforced withdrawal was, of course, extremely grave. The Third Brigade of the Canadian division was without any left, or, in other words, its left was in the air. It became imperatively necessary greatly to extend the Canadian lines to the left rear. It was not, of course, practicable to move the first brigade from reserve at a moment's notice, and the line, extended from five to nine thousand yards, was not naturally the line that had been held by the Allies at five o'clock and a gap still existed on its left.

"The new line, of which our recent point of contact with the French formed the apex, ran quite roughly to the south and west. As shown above, it became necessary for Brigadier General Turner, commanding the Third Brigade, to throw back his left flank southward to protect his rear. In the course of the confusion which followed upon the readjustment of position, the enemy, who had advanced rapidly after his initial successes, took four British 4.7 guns in a small wood to the west of the village of St. Jules, two miles in the rear of the original French trenches.

"The story of the second battle of Ypres is the story of how the Canadian division, enormously outnumbered, for they had in front of them at least four divisions, supported by immensely heavy artillery, with a gap still existing, though reduced, in their lines, and with dispositions made hurriedly under the stimulus of critical danger, fought through the day and through the night, and then through another day and night; fought under their officers until, as happened to so many, these perished gloriously, and then fought from the impulsion of sheer valor because they came from fighting stock.

"The enemy, of course, was aware whether fully or not may perhaps be doubted, of the advantage his breach in the line had given him, and immediately began to push a formidable series of attacks upon the whole of the newly formed Canadian salient.

"If it is possible to distinguish when the attack was everywhere so fierce, it developed with particular intensity at this moment upon the apex of the newly formed line running in the direction of St. Julien. It has already been stated that four British guns were taken in a wood comparatively early in the evening of the 22nd. In the course of that night, and under the heaviest machine gun fire, this wood was assaulted by the Canadian Scottish, 16th Battalion, of the Third Brigade, and the Tenth Battalion of the Second Brigade, which was intercepted for this purpose on its way to a reserve trench. The battalions were respectively commanded by Lieut. Col. Leckie and Lieut. Col. Boyle, and after a most fierce struggle in the light of a misty moon they took the position at the point of the bayonet. At midnight the Second Battalion under Lieut. Col. Watson and the Toronto Regiment, Queen's Own, (Third Battalion), under Lieut. Col. Rennie, both of the First Brigade, brought up much needed reinforcements, and though not actually engaged in the assault, were in reserve.

"All through the following day and night, these battalions shared the fortunes and misfortunes of the Third Brigade.

When One Fell Another Took His Place.

"An officer who took part in the attack describes how the men about him fell under the fire of the machine guns, which, in his phrase, played upon them "like a water-pot." He added quite simply "I wrote my own life off." But the line never wavered. When one man fell another took his place, and, with a final shout, the survivors of the two battalions flung themselves into the wood. The German garrison was completely demoralized, and the impetuous advance of the Canadians did not cease until they reached the far side of the wood and entrenched themselves there in the positions so dearly gained. They had, however, the disappointment of finding that the guns had been blown up by the enemy, and later on in the same night, a most formidable concentration of artillery fire, sweeping the wood as a tropical storm sweeps the leaves from a forest, made it impossible for them to hold the position for which they had sacrificed so much.

"The fighting continued, without intermission all through the night, and to those who observed the indications that the attack was being pushed with ever-growing strength, it hardly seemed possible so difficult to defend, and so little the subject of deliberate choice, could maintain their resistance for any long period. At six a. m. on Friday it became apparent that the left was becoming more and more involved and a powerful German attempt to outflank it developed rapidly. The consequences if it had been broken or outflanked, need not be insisted upon. They were not merely local.

"It was therefore decided, formidable as the attempt undoubtedly was, to try and give relief by a counter-attack upon the first line of German trenches, now far, far advanced from those originally occupied by the French. This was carried out by (Continued on page 8.)

Half the Canadians Were Killed, Wounded or Captured

Canadians Fought with Bulldog Tenacity Worthy of Best Traditions of British Army, and Battle of Ypres Will Go Down as one of Bloodiest in History

Ottawa, May 3—That half of the twelve Canadian battalions that participated in the bloody battle of Langemarck have been wiped out is the fear of the military authorities at Ottawa.

There were a thousand to eleven hundred men in each battalion, and the total casualties in dead, wounded and missing, will total from five to six thousand men.

By the time the lists are all made up, the deaths will likely run from seven hundred to a thousand, the wounded will total over three thousand, and it is likely that the German claims of a thousand captured Canadians is true. The battle, of which the Canadians bore the brunt, was undoubtedly one of the bloodiest battles of history.

It was feared Saturday that the 13th and 14th Regiments of Montreal had been completely annihilated. The eye witness graphically told how these two regiments had been left to fight a rear-guard action at Saint Julien, covering the retreat of the 3rd Brigade. He intimated that all had been lost. The news has caused the greatest anxiety and efforts are being made to find out the fate of these two regiments. However, London dispatches assert that no other commanding officer in addition to the three reported, Col.

McHarg, Col. Boyle and Col. Burckhall, have been killed. This would mean that Colonel Loomis and Col. Meighen, of the 13th and 14th Regiments, are safe, and if they are safe undoubtedly many of their men are. It is thought now that the eye witness was referring to detachments of the two regiments.

The 40th Highlanders undoubtedly suffered heavily from capture. They are reported to have suffered from the German attacks by asphyxiating bombs, and it is believed the men were captured while stupefied. The three Canadian Highlander Battalions were particularly hard hit. They are the 14th Battalion, representing the 5th Royal Scots of Montreal, the 5th Battalion, recruited from the 48th Highlanders of Toronto, and 16th Battalion, made up of detachments from the 79th Cameron Highlanders of Winnipeg, and the Seaforth Highlanders of Victoria.

However, there is not a Canadian Battalion which has not suffered severely, and all the regiments have lost so heavily in both officers and men that they will have to be reorganized before being able to take the field again effectively.

It is not expected unless an emergency arises that the Canadian will again be in the trenches for three or four weeks.

Grit Antagonism Makes An Election Imperative

Hon. Robert Rogers, Speaking at Montreal, said Liberals Have Not Played Loyal Part in Assisting Government

Montreal, May 3—Addressing the Liberal-Conservative Association of Montreal today, Hon. Robert Rogers indicated unmistakably the early approach of a general election though no date was mentioned. Mr. Rogers violently criticized the action of the opposition during the past session, and particularly the opposition press, which, he said, had descended to the very lowest possible level.

"When I make this statement I frankly acknowledge I am thinking of the Montreal Herald, the Toronto Globe and the Winnipeg Free Press, all papers that have prospects in one form or another by the purchase and sale of influence with Liberal leaders, by the purchase and sale of Liberal principles, or by pure and unadulterated graft during the reign of the late administration."

Fault of the Liberals
He blamed the opposition and the press, with the aid of the irresponsible majority in the Upper Chamber, for preventing the Government from carrying out its Imperial policy two years ago. In view of this action the Government had decided, he said, to appeal to the people last September, but their plans were changed by the outbreak of the war last August.

If the opposition had played a loyal part, said Mr. Rogers, "and assisted the Government in the emergency, these would have been no talk about an election at the present time, but the Liberals had opposed the Government's war policy vigorously and had made strenuous opposition to the Government's proposals to raise money for war purposes through the tariff.

Try to Tie Government's Hands
"This war," he said "could not be carried to a successful conclusion without money and without means. The opposition declared by their voices and by their votes that they must not have this money, and moved a vote of confidence in the Government for asking for it."

He also charged the irresponsible Liberal majority on the Senate with tying the Government's hands, and said it was unfair to the Government and to the Empire to permit this condition to continue.

"To those who hold it would not be patriotic to hold an election during the war," Mr. Rogers said, "let me ask such an individual this question: Which would be the most patriotic, to dissolve this Parliament and have full and complete control, which any Government must have if they are going to render full service those dependent upon them, that should and must be expected in the government of our country in the great crisis of this so-called hour, or remain as we are, handicapped and crippled and interfered with at every turn, tarrying and disputing with an opposition that has not only refused their support, but has declared by their voice and by their vote a want of confidence in our proposals for the providing of the necessary means that up to the present have been estimated as necessary for the carrying on of our part in this great conflict, and in view of our recent deplorable and heavy losses it is evident that renewed and greater efforts have yet to be made."

Liberals Against Soldiers' Vote
He has strongly criticized the Liberal attitude toward the soldiers' voting bill, and intimated this opposition was due to the knowledge that 99 per cent of the soldiers would vote for Sir Robert Borden's policy of closer British connection.

In addition to the press, Mr. Rogers severely attacked a few clerical, unnamed, who are simple minded enough to venture to re-echo from their pulpits some of the misrepresentations being published from day to day in the Grit press of the country. And he assailed Prof. Bland personally as a "well known professional hypocrite, who has ever been ready to endorse, approve and applaud every crooked act that has ever been known to have been committed by any Liberal."

Two German Torpedo Boats Sunk by British Destroyers

The British Torpedo Boat Destroyer Recruit Was Also Sunk by German Submarine

London, May 2—The British Admiralty stated this evening that two German torpedo boats had been sunk in the North Sea. The British torpedo boat destroyer Recruit also was sunk.

The text of the Admiralty statement follows: "A series of small affairs took place in the neighborhood of the Galloper and North Hinder Lightships on Saturday.

"During the forenoon H. M. destroyer Recruit was sunk by a submarine, four officers and twenty-one men being saved by the trawler Daisy.

"At three p. m. the trawler Colombia was attacked by two German torpedo boats who approached her from the westward and commenced an action without hoisting their colors. The Colombia was sunk by a torpedo, only one deckhand being saved by other trawlers.

"A division of British destroyers, comprising the Laforey, Leonidas, Lawford and Lark, chased the two German vessels and after a brief running fight for about one hour, sank them both.

"The British destroyers sustained no casualties.

"Two German officers and forty-seven men were rescued from the sea and made prisoners of war."

"The destroyer Recruit was on patrol duty Saturday morning, when the submarine sank her. According to details received here, she was struck amidships by the torpedo and began to sink. The wounded vessel signalled for assistance and her call was answered by the trawler Daisy and thirty men out of her complement of sixty-five were saved.

It is stated that a torpedo was fired at the Daisy, which was forced to leave one of her rescue boats behind, and that the submarine chased this boat and fired her gun at it, wounding four men.

British torpedo boat destroyers, sighting in the distance two German torpedo boats which had sunk the trawler Colombia, and apparently were supporting a submarine, engaged the Germans at long range in the vicinity of the North Hinder Light. The Germans endeavored to run away, but the British boats pressed them hard and shortly afterwards sank them. The British boats rescued some of the crews of the Germans and landed them today.

NEGOTIATIONS BETWEEN ITALY AND GERMANY ARE OFF

Rome, May 4—Direct information from the German embassy confirms the report that negotiations are off between Italy and Germany. Excitement in the city is growing.

WESTERN GALICIA DEFEAT OF RUSSIANS DENIED

Petrograd, May 4—Austro-Germany claims of a great victory in Western Galicia were denied by the Russian War Office today. It was said that the recent offensive undertaken by the Teutonic allies at the Dunajec

River had resulted in some gain for them necessitating a regrouping of the Russian forces, but that the latter had subsequently regained practically all the lost ground.

CANADIAN OFFICER KILLED AT DARDANELLES

London, May 4—It is officially announced that Lieut. Colonel Herbert Carrington Smith, Second Hampshire, was killed during the landing of the Mediterranean expeditionary force in Turkey. He was a Kingston graduate and second son of the late Herbert Carrington Smith, of Quebec.

ENTERTAINMENT AT BATHURST

"Let Me Explain" Was a Decided Success—Dance Held After Concert

The local concert troupe, who made such a decided hit here last week in "Let Me Explain," accepted the invitation of the good people of Bathurst, and journeyed to that town on Monday where that evening they gave their entertainment to a crowded house of exceedingly enthusiastic people.

In all about eighty went from here, and on arriving proceeded to the Robertson House where supper was had. As there was no time just then to make a visit over this thriving town, the members of the company went right to the opera house where Manager Cole made the preliminary arrangements for the opening. With the company went the Misses Cool and Powell, the Scottish dancers of Moncton, dancing their sword dance with great success.

As our readers are now familiar with the program as carried out by these talented people, a repetition is unnecessary. Their performance was highly received by the Bathurst people, several of the song hits being encored as many as five times.

After the concert, a dance was given, which was thoroughly enjoyed by about two hundred people. The young people of the town furnished lunch which was much enjoyed, especially by the members of the company, after their efforts of the evening. Mr. P. Legere, on whose invitation this entertainment was given, and who is also the genial proprietor of Bathurst's most up-to-date show house, engaged the orchestra which supplied most enjoyable music for dancing.

The company and those who escorted them to Bathurst returned Tuesday morning thoroughly well pleased with their trip and the hospitality accorded them by the people of Bathurst, and especially Mr. Legere, who did all in his power to make their visit an enjoyable one.

Mrs. Chas. Sargeant being unable to accompany them, her place at the piano was very acceptably filled by Mrs. H. B. McDonald, of Chatham.

The proceeds of the concert amounted to about $180.00. A feature of the program was the singing of La Marseillaise by Mr. Jackson, which received a very hearty applause.

An invitation has been extended the company from the people of Chatham, which will probably be accepted.

Week's War News

CANADIAN CASUALTIES MAY REACH 5000 MARK
Ottawa, April 29—Canada saved the day at the battle of Flanders, but it took a terrible toll of officers and men. The casualty list is growing to tremendous proportions, and officials of the Militia Department fear that by the time the roll is all called there may be four to five thousand men, dead, wounded and missing. Already over a third of the officers of the Canadian Army Division are on the honor list, and the end is not yet. The total officers on the casualty list is now 163.

GERMANS KILL WOUNDED IN CANADIAN AMBULANCE
London, April 30—The correspondent of the London Daily Mail declares emphatically that he has never seen and never intends to send unproven stories of German cruelty, but he says the following is absolutely proved:
"A Canadian ambulance was deliberately sought out and followed by a battery until all were killed." "Almost for the first time," he adds, "I found in our men that feeling of bitter rancor which makes even shattered men crawl back from the hospital into battle."

GERMANS ANNIHILATED BY BELGIAN ARTILLERY
Havre, April 30—The virtual annihilation of 4,000 Germans, who crossed the Yperlee over a bridge near Ste. Enstrate is described by the newspaper Vingtieme Siecle. The Belgian heavy artillery destroyed the bridge, while the field artillery showered them with shrapnel. Many tied handkerchiefs to their bayonets and raised them in sign of surrender, but immediately their own quick fire, the newspaper says, opened fire and mowed them down pitilessly. Many survivors were made prisoners by the Belgians.

MANY CANADIANS DIED FROM GERMAN POISON
The Canadian division is now having a well earned rest, but are not out of shell fire. Hundreds of Dominion soldiers are still coming down to the hospitals, but after this long time it is a really cheerful sight, for many who were thought to have been killed are drifting in.
It is reported here that at least six Canadians have died in hospital as the result of asphyxiating gases alone, without a single trace of wounds on them. In the streets are about a score of slightly wounded officers, and everywhere they are greeted and their hand shaken by veteran imperial officers. The British army is giving a full meed of praise to the Dominion troops.

Banish Pimples And Eruptions
In the Spring Most People Need a Tonic Medicine
One of the surest signs that the blood is out of order is the pimples, unsightly eruptions and eczema that come frequently with the change from winter to spring. These prove that the long indoor life of winter has had its effect upon the blood, and that a tonic medicine is needed to put it right. Indeed there are few people who do not need a tonic at this season. Bad blood does not merely show itself in disfiguring eruptions. To this same condition is due attacks of rheumatism and lumbago; the sharp stabbing pains of sciatica and neuralgia; poor appetite and a desire to avoid exertion. You cannot cure these troubles by the use of purgative medicines—you need a tonic, and a tonic only, and among all medicines there is none can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for their tonic, life-giving, nerve-restoring powers. Every dose of this medicine makes new, rich blood which drives out impurities, stimulates every organ and brings a feeling of new health and energy to weak, tired, ailing men, women and children. If you are out of sorts give this medicine a trial and see how quickly it will restore the appetite, revive drooping spirits, and fill your veins with new, health-giving blood.
You can get these Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

EARNING THE PRICE OF PEACE

Our Fight is Not Against Flesh and Blood, But Against the Unseen Powers of Evil

Canada is beginning to earn the price she must pay for her right to a place in the council of the nations that, at the end, will fix the terms of the world's peace. It is the price of blood.
Geography alone would not give that right—merely a place for Canada on the red map of the British Dominions. Politics alone would not do it—neither the political theory of Canada's federation in a British Empire nor the political partnership of free nations in a British Alliance with one constitutional Sovereign. Nothing would or could confer on Canada any real right to a say in the terms of the world's peace without a share in the horrors of the world's war. Blood alone gives that consecration—blood and tears.

It is well that Canadians look the stern facts full in the face. It would be hateful were we to blind our eyes that we could not see, or drug our souls with the dull narcotics of a false philosophy of life, or excite our imaginations with the mad incantations of the jingo glory of war. Such things might become children or cowards or fools, but not men in a world of men. Let us go on into the worst of it as becomes the sons of the heroes of old, neither over-depressed nor over-exultant, but as sober-minded men to whom has come a duty and a risk in the cause of the world's freedom and the world's peace. In that mood, and constrained by that motive life, even in these days of dread, may become for us at once very solemn and very great.

Let us never lose sight of the one supreme end of it all, the end that hallows and ennobles all the unspoken means. That end is not the killing of so many Germans, a score, a hundred, a thousand. That is not the end for which you give your sons, your fathers, your husbands, your lovers. Those Germans also are the sons, the husbands, the fathers, the lovers, of people like ourselves, with hopes like ours that vanish, and souls like ours that pray, and hearts like ours that break. No, as God liveth, the one God of Canadians and of Germans alike, it is not to kill and destroy other men, who in the great human family are their brothers, the best of Canada's breed go out to war. No, it is not for that. I cannot be for that. We are not barbarians, or pagans, or unhuman bonists of prey.

Our fight is not against flesh and blood, but against the unseen powers of evil, against the principalities of injustice and oppression, against the spiritual enemies—the only real enemies of men—incarcinate for this vast struggle in the best of Germany's blood.
And the tragedy of it all is that those who today incarnate the devil-spirit of Napoleonism, and against whom we must fight, are of the very same blood and breed as were those who, a hundred years ago were the allies of our forefathers in their fight against Napoleonism at Waterloo. It is against that devil-principle of autocracy, against that devil-spirit of despotism, against that devil-system of world-domination, our fathers fought in their day and we must fight in ours. It was driven out of the French nation then, and today the French people are our allies. Now it will be driven out of the German nation, and tomorrow the German people will be the allies of Britain and of France against tomorrow's survivors of world despotism.

And Canada will have earned the right to sit in the council to consider the world's peace when Canadians have been perfected through suffering for the sin of the world's lust for war. If the virus of Napoleonism comes into our national blood we are undone. But if, chastened in spirit, ennobled in ideal, redeemed in motive, Canadians conquer in themselves the Will-to-Power that once cursed Britain, that once cursed France, and that now curses Germany, Canada, as the one nation in all America that has paid the price of blood, will have the title to speak, not for herself alone, but for a hemisphere, and to say the war shall cease on such terms of justice and freedom and international right that law, not force, shall rule the world, and Will-to-Power shall be transformed into Will-to-Serve.
It is not merely a battle of men—this struggle into which Canada has gone with such high resolves; it is a conflict of ideas. It is not an incident; it is a campaign. It is not on narrow national lines; it is on the world scale. It is a challenge to courage, to heroism, to faith. The citizen and nation alike shall endure as seeing the invisible.—Toronto Globe.

Mrs. Pankhurst Tells Woman's Duties in War
Leader in Movement for Equal Suffrage Urges National Unity in Present Conflict.

Speaking at a public meeting in Glasgow, Scotland, on "Wages and War: What is our duty to the Nation," Mrs. Pankhurst urged the national duty of unity in face of the common foe.

The militant women, Mrs. Pankhurst said, who had faced more in pursuit of the democratic ideal than any man in the country, had the right to speak in every national crisis, especially when, as in the present crisis, their very well-being as a nation was at stake. They wished to show that if Germany counted on the militancy of the women of this country to help them, they had counted without their host. It was not the function of the union to open soup kitchens or workrooms, admirable as these were, their special duty was to make those who rule the country do their duty, and they felt they must continue that work in a way adapted to the needs of the nation. They had always held that with regard to distress arising out of unemployment and dislocation of national business, it was the duty of the government to deal with these matters, and they felt their mission to make them realize their responsibilities, but they did not rush into open criticism, feeling that criticism and proposals had best be offered quietly. There should be no opposition on the part of men to women helping in the industrial and business work of the nation just now.

There would be no labor disputes between employers and employees if each recognized what the real situation was.
Women who had shown they could give up everything for the right, had earned the right to speak to their brothers on a matter like that. The women saw victory for the franchise cause within their grasp, yet because of the national peril they sacrificed it for the time being. This was a war between two ideals, and if England, lost it would mean the crushing out of the women's movement, as they knew it, for generations. Let them all join together in brotherly love and affection, and see that terrible business through to a happy conclusion.
When asked why she blamed trades unions for advocating that women doing men's work should receive the same wages, Mrs. Pankhurst replied that what she objected to was trades unionists refusing to allow women to be trained or employed, even when they did demand men's wages. Speaking to a meeting of students she said "To the men present I say, try to understand what is going on in the minds and hearts of women more than you have hitherto done. Try to realize that the women's movement is not one of rivalry with men. It is a movement to co-operate with men in making the country better and nobler than men would ever be able to make it without the assistance of women."

"By George, I never saw anything like the effects of that new treatment, Tonoline Tablets, for building up of weight and lost nerve force. It acted more like a miracle than a medicine," said a well-known gentleman yesterday in speaking of the revolution that had taken place in his condition. "I began to think that there was nothing on earth that could make me fat. I tried tonics, digestives, heavy eating, diets, milk, beer and almost everything else you could think of, but without result."
Any man or woman who is thin can recover normal weight by the best new treatment Tonoline Tablets. "I have been thin for years and began to think it was natural for me to be that way. Finally I read about the remarkable processes brought about by use of Tonoline Tablets, decided to try myself. Well, when I look at myself in the mirror now, I think it is somebody else. I have put on just forty pounds during the last forty days, and never felt stronger or more 'nervy' in my life."
Tonoline Tablets are a powerful inducer to nutrition, increases cell-growth, food, increases the number of blood-corpuscles and as a necessary result builds up muscles, and solid healthy flesh, and rounds out the figure.
For women who can never appear stylish in anything they wear because of their thinness this remarkable treatment may prove a revelation. It is a beauty maker as well as a form builder and nerve strengthener. Tonoline Tabs cost $1 for a 50 days' treatment, at druggists, or mailed by American Proprietary Co., Boston, Mass.

Something Original—that's the Cry of Every Buyer of Printing

If every print shop could or would work character into their product there wouldn't be such common place printing.
We'll be glad of an opportunity to prove to you that when your printing is placed with us, there will be character to it.
Our new type faces will do that alone, but there will be more than up-to-date type faces. There will be care taken in the arrangement of the type—good ink will be used—the proper paper for the work will be selected, and printed in the largest and most modern country printing office in the Maritime Provinces.

Target Tips and Hunting Helps by Alfred P. Lane

A New Questions and Answers Department of Interest to Shooters

Readers are reminded that this column is open to questions which should be sent to me in care of the Sporting Editor...

F. A. H., Mt. Sterling, Ill.

Can you tell me where I can get the 1 oz. ball to shoot in a 12 gauge shotgun?

Ans. Any of the ammunition companies load regularly the one ounce ball in their 12 gauge shells for use in 12 gauge shotguns.

1. Which would you advise me to shoot in my double barrel 16 gauge shotgun, black powder or smokeless?

Ans. Black powder and smokeless powder, when properly loaded, give practically the same ballistic results. It is therefore a question of personal preference governed by expense, etc.

2. How much stronger does smokeless shoot than black powder?

Ans. Three drams of bulk smokeless powder gives the same result as three drams of black powder.

3. Will black powder kill at the same distance that smokeless will?

Ans. Yes. 4. Which is the best to shoot in the back powder shells, 3/4 oz. shot and 2 1/2 drams of powder or 1 oz. shot and 3 drams of powder?

Ans. For all around use I should prefer the lighter load.

H. H. L., Co. Bluffs, Ia. Why doesn't the Maxim Silencer work on Automatic pistols? We were going to equip an indoor range with these for target practice, but were told the silencers would work only on single target pistols. Please gratify our curiosity.

Ans. The Maxim Silencer will not operate on automatic pistols for two reasons—in the first place it is impossible to fasten it on properly, and in the second place, these pistols operate on the blow-back principle, i. e., there is nothing holding the breech block closed except the weight of the breech block.

1. Is the use of a lead solvent for ret of a .22 calibre rifle too difficult for a rank amateur?

Ans. Slight cases of leading or even bad cases of leading, if not complicated by rust can usually be cured by a vigorous application of a brass bristle brush soaked in nitro solvent oil.

2. Can a gunsmith remove the rifling from an old .22 calibre rifle so that shot cartridges may be used? What would be the approximate expenditure?

Ans. He should be able to do this work at moderate cost.

3. What, in your opinion, is the best combination of target sights for a .22 calibre rifle?

Ans. This question is rather too general to be answered definitely. I should say a rear peep sight and a bead or aperture front sight.

A. B. C., Quincy, Ill. 1. Which would you advise me to shoot in my double barrel 16 gauge shotgun, black powder or smokeless?

ROBERT BORDEN

If Canada were an ally of Great Britain rather than an integral part of the British empire its politics and its policies would command on every side, more nearly than they do now, a measure of attention commensurate with their importance.

THE FARMERS AND THE RED CROSS SOCIETY

We publish today a second appeal on behalf of the Red Cross Society, by Dr. James W. Robertson.

Dr. Robertson is still best known to the farmers of Canada as Professor Robertson. He began his official public service at the Ontario Agricultural College nearly thirty years ago.

Other public services of continuing and growing value were inaugurated, while Professor Robertson was Commissioner of Agriculture. Among them were the Live Stock Branch, the Cold Storage Service, the Seed Grain Competition, Trial Shipments of Fruit to the United Kingdom, and Extensions of Markets.

In these and many other ways, Dr. Robertson has given the farmers of Canada the best that was in him. He says he is their debtor, for many opportunities, for much kindness, and for warm appreciations.

Take notice that there will be sold at Public Auction in front of the store of George Stables in the Town of Newcastle on THURSDAY the twenty second day of July next at twelve o'clock noon.

A Red Cross Appeal To The Farmers

Our country, with its Allies, is waging a great war for justice, for the protection of small nations in the enjoyment of their rights, for continued and growing freedom, and for the maintenance of its pledged word of honour.

The Red Cross Society exists to succor the sick and wounded in war. The need of Red Cross Service is great and growing greater as the war goes on.

giving for Red Cross work, is mercifully light and easy, even when all have given to the extent of really feeling it.

The soldiers and sailors pay the price exacted by the desolation struggle from week to week. What they paid in blood and did in sacrifice a month ago was not enough for them.

Farmers, individually as well as through their Institutes, Clubs, and Cheese and Butter Factories, are in a position to help very greatly.

Farmers are generous in sentiment and generous in giving when their hearts and heads point the way. This is a case when they do so point clearly, persuasively and urgently.

I appeal to farmers to send me sums from $1 to $50, during the first week in May. Every $50 provides one additional hospital bed with the giver's name over it.

Report of the Hotel Physician in a Leading New York Hospital on the Cure of Brain Fatigue and Nervous Exhaustion

"A few years ago we considered that we were doing well if we cured 10 per cent of the cases of Brain Fatigue and Nervous Prostration brought to us, but since the introduction of Rezistol into our hospital we cure more than 90 per cent of all the cases in its various forms brought to us.

Rezistol is a powerful tonic nourishing food medicine, composed of valuable tonic stimulants obtained from vegetable drugs. Rezistol contains no narcotics or other dangerous drugs which merely deaden pain temporarily but give no permanent relief or cure the cause of disease.

Rezistol is a powerful body builder and blood maker; it is the best remedy known to the medical profession to enrich thin, watery blood and supply new rich blood to the whole body.

It will be found a most valuable remedy in cases of over stimulation in which the excessive use of liquor causes depression, dullness of the faculties or intoxication; it counteracts the depressing effects and restores the system to its normal condition.

THE LIBERAL PARTY AND AN ELECTION

Thoughtful readers of the daily press cannot very well help feeling disgusted at the arrant hypocrisy of the Liberal party and their newspaper organs on the subject of a Dominion election. On the one hand they declare that to call on an election just now while the thoughts of the people are centred on the war, is nothing short of criminal and immoral, as it would rouse party strife at the time of all others when there should be no such thing; while on the other hand, they have not ceased for months past to stir up factional feelings and foment political issues at every available opportunity. The very fault they try to fasten on their opponents is the one that they have been most guilty of themselves.

"The session of parliament just ended is one this generation will always look back upon with regret and shame. When it began, the public was under the impression that it would be consecrated to the one great national business at this time, the participation of Canada in the war which the British Empire is fighting on behalf of all that is high and holy in our civilization."

These are certainly pretty high sounding sentiments and do credit to those who live up to them. But what has been the record of the Liberal party in this respect. Hardly had the last session of Parliament opened, before Mr. Pugsley charged that the Government had defrauded the country in the purchase of the two submarines from Chile, although he admitted that he was speaking simply from "reports which he had heard." Then again he charged that the ammunition which was being bought for Great Britain was being paid for at such an exorbitant rate that somebody must be getting a rake off. Then there was the boot contracts, the horse purchases, the binoculars and other purchases by the war office, in every instance the Liberal party charged that dishonesty was rampant. When the additional taxes were proposed to meet the extraordinary conditions which the war has caused, and the big drop in the trade returns which necessitated that other means should be devised to keep up the revenue, the Liberal opposition opposed them to the last, making a party matter of the entire question. For the last six months the whole Liberal press has kept up a vigorous and relentless criticism of the Government's conduct of the war, and has made it the basis of almost daily attacks on the good faith of Premier Borden and his colleagues, as virulent and reckless as if an election campaign were actually in progress.

When the Government resents this attitude on the part of the Liberal party, proposes to ask the people of Canada to say whether or not they approve of the Government's conduct of affairs, these same Liberal journals profess to be scandalized, when they have never ceased either night or day in their efforts to shake public confidence in the Borden administration. Could blatant hypocrisy be grossly in evidence? The truth is that the Liberal party realizes that an appeal to the country will leave them practically unrepresented at Ottawa, hence these hysterical outbursts of pretended remorse that the country's attention should be distracted from the war. The remorse they feel is from an entirely different cause, the knowledge that an indignant electorate will put them down and out for years to come.

MR. STEWART'S "MATTER OF INTEREST"

It runs in our mind that somewhere the Wise Man was once said to have remarked that there were three things that were too wonderful for him, in fact that there were four that he could not satisfactorily figure out. Had Mr. J. L. Stewart been his contemporary, and got to discussing matters of finance with the exponent of wisdom, it is dollars to dough-nuts that it would have been five and not four things that the latter would have had to give up as a bad job.

Mr. Stewart now tells us that "The security that yields the lowest rate of interest to the buyer is the one the investing public considers the safest and best."

Further he says, "It is very juvenile to say that 'when the province borrows money, the first requirement is to see that it gets in loans exactly 'the amount it accepts liability 'for.'"

Let us see how Mr. Stewart's principles are going to work out in practice. The town of Chatham has just obtained power to borrow $20,000 upon an issue of bonds to improve its water supply. Mr. Stewart as Chairman of the Finance Committee of the Town Council will naturally have some say in the issuance of these bonds. Will he contend that if these bonds are issued at 2 1/2 per cent. the investing public will think them any safer than if they were issued at 5 per cent? If there is anything in what he says that the lower rate of interest the more safe the investor regards the security as being, it would seem that is what should happen, and we feel sure that the people of Chatham will be only too delighted if Mr. Stewart's ideas can be carried out.

Then again, he says it is childish to say that a borrower should see that he gets the full amount of the loans he undertakes to repay. Will Mr. Stewart say that Chatham should be satisfied to take less than $20,000 for the bonds the town is going to issue? Would he be satisfied to issue those bonds at 95 per cent. and the town net only $19,000 for the $20,000 it needs for its waterworks and undertakes to repay at maturity? If so, he is a pretty dangerous man to be at the head of the town's finances, and it is little wonder that the Council needs to run to the Bank every month for accommodation.

A prominent bank official of western Canada, who is taking a keen interest in the utilization of vacant lots for the growing of garden crops, says: "It seems to me that the 'daylight saving scheme' would be one of the greatest factors in helping on the kitchen garden movement. It would give everyone from Halifax to Vancouver an hour's more time to work in the garden in daylight than they would otherwise have and it would be a great thing for the health of the nation to have an extra hour for outdoor recreation, and last, but by no means least, there would be a wonderful saving of light, electricity, gas and oil. The one hour extra daylight would mean that by the time darkness came it would be pretty nearly bedtime, going by ordinary rules."

Stewart Weldon Says Lighter Socks are Better For the Boys

The following letter was written by Stewart Weldon, who is serving in France, to his mother, and will be of interest to his friends in Newcastle:

1st Can. Div. Supply Col. M. T. On Active Service, France. April 15, 1915

My dear Mother,
Your most welcome letter was received today, but in replying, I do not know of anything interesting or new to tell you, so you'll understand that away from civilization, news is hard to find.

Last time I wrote we were all enjoying good health. There is very little sickness among our boys, and the rations are all we can desire, so we really have nothing to complain of. But what we want is to see the end of this slaughter—for it is not war—it is nothing short of murder, and we are hoping against hope that by next Fall it will be at an end.

I see you are doing your little bit in knitting, and while I much appreciate the heavy socks during the cold weather, may I suggest that, now that summer is coming, you start on a finer wool. Even the boys in the trenches would no doubt prefer lighter socks, and they would be just as serviceable.

Yes, you can (if you can get them) please send me a couple of pairs of heel cushions to fit in my shoes. They have a leather top, and inflated rubber underneath, and they will add a great deal to my comfort in walking, as the arch of the foot that was cut seems to be breaking down.

I could not begin to express on paper the scenes of wretchedness and starvation we witness every day on our trips. At our meal times there are about a hundred children hanging around, waiting to pick up any scraps of bread that may be thrown away. It is simply awful, and when you think that one man is responsible for all this misery and suffering, you wonder to yourself why it is permitted.

In conclusion, please remember me to all my friends. I hope you are quite well.

Write me when you can, Good-night Mother.

I go to sleep with the music of the cannon.

Your loving son,
STEWART.

LETTER OF CONDOLENCE

Dear Brother Baldwin,
Your Brothers of Northumberland Lodge No. 17, A. F. & A. M., by whom you are held in the most affectionate esteem desire to assure you of their profound sympathy in the very heavy bereavement which you have sustained by the death of your beloved wife. We realize that by her removal a great loss has fallen on the community and she will be greatly missed because of her many works of Faith and Love. But yours is the greatest loss, and it is in the Sacred Circle of the home that she will be missed most of all.

We trust that in this sad hour, you may be sustained by that faith in the Supreme Architect of the Universe which can look above the darkness of death and the grave, to a brighter home which Christ has prepared for them that love him, and into which your dear one has entered.

May this blessed assurance bring comfort to your heart. Will you kindly convey to the members of your family our sympathy with them in their sad bereavement.

Children's Concert
At Douglstown

Children of St. Samuel's R. C. Church Gave Excellent Concert Monday Night

The children of St. Samuel's R. C. church, Douglstown, gave a most excellent concert in the Temperance Hall there Monday night. Every seat was occupied, and about $70 was realized. The program consisting of choruses, dances, dialogues, songs and tableaux, reflected great credit upon all concerned. The acting in "My Sister's Husband" was especially good, as were the recitations by Marguerite Craig and Geo. Young, the songs, and the performances by the little ones. The tableaux were very well acted. A great deal of candy and cake was auctioned off by Edward Wood, during intervals in the program. The program was as follows:

Chorus—Oh, Canada—By 30 children.

Highland Fling—Little Winifred DeWolfe.

Songs and dances by the "Dumpling Brothers," Comedy Acrobats—Arthur Wood, Arthur Young, Geo. Driscoll and Roger Nolan. Encored.

Song—My Tipperary Rose—Geo. Driscoll and Arthur Young, Encored.

Songs and dances by "The Top-notch Dancers"—Emmet Hagarty, Jack Craig, Vincent DeWolfe, Gordon Sullivan, Kathleen Young, Mary Sullivan, Barbara Craig and Mamie Boudreau.

Dialogue—"My Sister's Husband"—Joseph Vautour (Prof. Theorem, much interested in snakes and toads, etc.); Annie DeWolfe, (Bertha—the professor's private student who marries him); Marguerite Fitzgerald (Loretta, Bertha's sister, who wants to marry the Prof. but afterwards rejoices that she missed him); Annie Driscoll, (Aunt Mary, slightly deaf); Geo. Young, (Jimmy, also private student of the prof.); and Edward DeWolfe, (the professor's servant, who has to leave when the Prof. takes his whiskey to preserve beetles in.) Act I.

Recitation—"The Esquimaux Bearer"—Marguerite Craig.

My Sister's Husband—Act II. Recitations by "Willie and Susie Hepper, Monologists"—Geo. Young and Marguerite Craig.

Song Hits—"The Suffragettes and Suffering Gents"—Jennie Vautour, Florence Brown, Annie DeWolfe, Minnie Young, Katie Pittman, Annie Driscoll, Clara Brown, Florence DeWolfe, Albert Dignan, Geo. and Arthur Young, Edward DeWolfe, Andrew Lee, Patrick Lloyd, Fiddle Vautour and Geo. Driscoll.

Song—"The best old flag on Earth"—Marguerite Craig and Florence DeWolfe.

Flag Wand and Military Drill—By 16 girls.

Tableaux—(1) Meditation; (2) Expectancy; (3) Triumph; (4) Peace, during which "Farewell Mother," "The Maple Leaf Forever," and "Rule Britannia" were sung.

God Save the King.
The flag and military drill under "Capt." Marguerite Craig, was splendidly performed.

The children were trained by Miss Flossie Doyle and Celia Pittman. The accompanist was Miss Nan Quinn, of Newcastle.

RICHIBUCTO NEWS

Personal and Local Happenings at the Shiretown of Kent County

May 1—A large number of herring nets were either lost or destroyed on Thursday night. The heavy northerly wind which sprang up about ten o'clock, caused a return of the river ice, which for lack of favorable wind had not got out in the straits. The herring nets out owned by R. O'Leary, A. & R. Loggie and W. E. Forbes were practically all lost or destroyed. A few were lost from the same cause on Tuesday night. It looks as if there would be scarcity of bait this season.

Russel Long, of the 26th battalion, is spending a week's furlough with his mother, Mrs. John Long.

Miss Joanna Flanagan, who was seriously ill, is now very much improved.

Miss Margaret Murray is visiting friends in St. John.

Miss Charlotte Irwin, after spending the winter with her mother and sister, returned on Tuesday to Truro, where she will be employed in the office of the Truro News. On Monday evening, a very enjoyable party was held in her honor by Division No. 42, Sons of Temperance, of which she is a valued member.

David I. Muir returned some little time ago from a very pleasant trip as far as the western coast.

Miss Jean O. Jardine, of Jardineville, visited friends in town on Tuesday.

The body of George Jardine, who died on Friday at his home in Moncton, was brought to Rexton on Monday for burial in St. Andrew's cemetery. A number of relatives and friends from Richibucto attended the funeral. Services at the grave were conducted by Rev. Archibald Lee, pastor of St. Andrew's church.

REXTON ITEMS

Of Interest to Readers From Our Regular Correspondent.

May 3—The heavy easterly wind of Thursday drove the ice into the harbor as far as Richibucto and carried away an immense quantity of herring nets and rigging which will be a serious loss to the fishermen. Burns' mill will begin the season's operations in a few days' time. The Swedish Canadian Lumber Co.'s mill will not operate here this season, their Richibucto mill will go instead. Some of the schooners are ready to sail, but owing to the presence of so much ice in the straits have to postpone their going. The dancing class held an enjoyable party in the public hall Friday night. A public social dance will be given by the class on Friday night of this week. The members of The Red Cross Society are confining their work for the present, to the making of socks for the soldiers and will not meet again until Thursday May 12, when it is expected a large quantity of socks will be brought in. James A. Scott of Jardineville has gone to Bathurst to enter a machine shop, to learn a trade. James Clark has returned from Maine where he spent the winter. Dr. Girvan returned home Saturday from St. John where he was called on account of the illness of his mother, who is now recovering. The roads through the country are in a bad condition since the rainy weather and no farming has as yet been done.

SAVED BABY'S LIFE

Mrs. Jos. Desreisers, St. Alphonse, Que., writes: "I cannot say too much in favor of Baby's Own Tablets, as they saved my little one's life. Before giving him the Tablets he was greatly troubled with worms and was like a skeleton and cried day and night. The Tablets soon expelled the worms and now baby is the picture of health." Baby's Own Tablets also break up colds and simple fevers, cure constipation and indigestion and make the teething period painless. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MOST VIOLENT ATTACKS ON DARDANELLES FORTS

Mitylene, April 29—The bombardment of the Dardanelles fortifications is proceeding with the utmost violence not only at stated periods during the day, but the Allied warships are taking advantage of the moonlight to operate during part of the night. The weather is reported perfect and the sea calm.

Smaller Craft of Both Navies Cruising About

Main German Fleet Again Reported Cruising Outside of Heligoland in North Sea

London, May 3—The sinking of the British destroyer Recruit in the North Sea, off the Holland coast, followed by the sinking of two German torpedo boats Saturday, is expected to be followed by more engagements of this character soon. Both navies now have their "Mosquito Fleets" out from their bases in full strength. The Germans were compelled to keep all of their small craft in harbor bases during the winter, because of the rough weather, and only the British destroyers of the class built especially for the rough waters of the North Sea has been cruising up to this time. But the weather is now ideal for cruising, and both belligerents have all their small vessels on scout duty, while it is again reported that the main German fleet has been sighted cruising off Heligoland. There has been a sufficient realignment of the British battle fleet during the last ten days and officials at the Admiralty say that the possibilities of real fighting are constantly improving. It is not expected that the two great fleets will clash, but there is bound to be more or less fighting between the rival squadrons of destroyers. Armed trawlers and light cruisers of the Arethusa type are reported in the North Sea near the Belgian coast, where a flotilla of 30-knot German light cruisers has been reported. These may clash at any time. The majority of the officers and crew of the destroyer Recruit were saved, as were most of the German crews of the two torpedo boats sunk. The commander of one of the German craft is reported to have shot himself when taken prisoner.

Performance of Soldiers Remarkable

The Ontario First and Fourth Battalions, of the First Brigade, under Brig-General Morcer, acting in combination with a British brigade. It is safe to say that the youngest private in the rank, as he set his teeth for the advance, knew the task in front of him, and the youngest subaltern knew all that rested upon its success. "It did not seem that any human being could live in the shower of shot and shell which began to play upon the advancing troops. They suffered terrible casualties. For a short time every other man seemed to fall, but the attack was pressed even closer and closer. The Fourth Canadian Battalion at one moment came under a particularly withering fire. For a moment, not more, it wavered. Its most gallant commanding officer, Lieut. Col. Birchall, carrying after an old fashion, a light cane, coolly and cheerfully rallied his men, and at the very moment when his example had infected them, fell dead at the head of his battalion. "With a hoarse cry of anger they sprang forward (for indeed they loved him) as if to avenge his death. The astonishing attack which followed, pushed home in the face of direct frontal fire made in broad daylight, by battalions whose names should live forever in the memories of soldiers, was carried to the first line of German trenches. After a hand-to-hand struggle the last German who resisted was bayoneted, and the trench was won. "Looked Death Calmly in the Face" "The measure of this success may be taken, when it is pointed out that this trench represented in the German advance the apex in the breach which the enemy had made in the original line of the Allies, and that it was two and a half miles south of that line. This charge, made by men who looked death indifferently in the face, for no man who took part in it could think that he was likely to live, saved the Canadian left. But it did more, up to the point where the assailants conquered or died. It secured and maintained, during the most critical moment of all, the integrity of the Allied line. For the trench was not only taken, it was thereafter held against all comers, and in the teeth of every conceivable projectile, until the night of Sunday, the 25th, when all that remained of the war-broken but victorious battalions was relieved by fresh troops.

Sydney, N. S., was visited by a $120,000 fire on Friday. It swept the business portion of the city.

Hon. Mr. Morrissy Defends His Dept.

His Slanderers Too Cowardly to Come Out in the Open

Replying to the Pinder charges in the Assembly chamber, on Thursday, Hon. Mr. Morrissy said that the hon. gentlemen seemed to be needlessly alarmed at the provision of this bill. It had been stated in the House that he alone appointed the supervisors from his own friends. He did nothing of the kind. The supervisors were appointed on the nomination of the members of the counties in which they were employed. With regard to what had been said about the Secretary of the Board, he wished to say that the official carried on the work of the department in a perfectly proper manner, and if the secretary could not patch up the quarrels of the members of York it was no fault of his (Morrissy), and they must patch them up for themselves. He did not want any charges made against officials of his department in places where these officials couldn't answer for themselves. A commissioner had been appointed to investigate any charges or complaints that any member of the House or other person had to make either against himself or any of his officials, and if anyone had anything to say let them come forward in an open and honest manner and say it, and not sneaking in every hole and corner in the county whispering little bits of gossip that they were scared might be overheard. No man could find a single cent of funds of the Public Works Department misapplied. He was there to defend himself and his department, and if any member had anything to say with regard either to him or his department, or any of his officials that he did not like to come and say before the Commission, let him say it before some other independent person, and then he would get all that is coming to him that the law would allow. These men who were going about the country slandering him and his officials were a mean and contemptible crowd who had not the courage to come out in the open and say what they had to say like honest men would. If they had any complaints to make let them come and lay their charges. An hon. member opposite the other day had got up in his place in the House and insinuated that he (Morrissy) got a rake-off on the purchase of the furniture. He didn't say so in so many words, but he wanted to infer that. He (Morrissy) wanted the House to know that he had never had to steal one five cent piece in his life. He had been able to get along hitherto by making his money honestly. He did not take money from the province, which he was not entitled to, and he did not intend to allow anyone else to do so if he could prevent it. Stories were going around that he had been getting a rake-off on the bridge repairing and repainting. Let the man who said he was doing this come forward and tell the Commission so, and then he would know how to meet them, but they were too cowardly to come to the door which was now open to them.

DEPOSING AN ANCIENT IDOL

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little stomach, liver and bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

PATRIOTISM AND PRODUCTION

The vacant Lot and Garden Plot Offer Opportunities for Increasing Output.

While the Departments of Agriculture of the Dominion and the various provinces are endeavoring to interest the farmers of Canada; in plans to secure increased production of farm crops and live stock, the residents of cities and towns also have a duty to perform. In every urban community there are vacant spaces which, usually, purpose, but that the soil may be made to yield the produce it is capable of, some means should be found to bring together the owner of the land and those who would cultivate it. There are patriotic organizations in existence in almost every place of any size, which might undertake this work. It is patriotic work in every sense of the term, and it would be of great help in relieving want. Our Arbor Day—May 7th.

Arbor Day is Clean-up Day.

Duplicate last year's clean-up day, but go it one better on Friday next.

Some cleaning up has been going on along Pleasant street, greatly improving the appearance of this much travelled thoroughfare.

Newcastle's annual clean-up day will be held on Friday next, May 7th. Friday is Arbor Day, and Mayor Stohart has proclaimed it a public holiday. The stores will be closed and teams and men will be supplied for the hauling away of all rubbish after it has been raked up. Every citizen is asked to clean his premises up and have the rubbish ready for the teamsters when they call.

A suggestion has been made to the Advocate that the County Council be approached in the matter of presenting to the town school that piece of property above the court house building and opposite the jail, to be used by the school children as a flower garden. This piece of land standing idle if fenced, could be made a most beautiful spot, and its close proximity to the school makes it an ideal spot for the above use. Schools all over the province are arranging these gardens, and there seems to be no reason why our town school cannot be in keeping with other towns. We believe that if the Principal and teachers would take this matter up, secure the support of the Town Council, if necessary, they would have no trouble at all, and a very great interest would thus be created among the scholars in the planting of flowers and keeping the beds in a clean, tidy and attractive order.

TORTURED BY CONSTIPATION

"Fruit-a-tives" Cured Paralyzed Bowels and Digestion

ST. BONIFACE DE SHAWINIGAN, QUE. Feb. 3rd, 1914.

"It is a pleasure to me to inform you that after suffering from Chronic Constipation for 2 1/2 years, I have been cured by 'Fruit-a-tives'. While I was a student at Berthier College, I became so ill I was forced to leave the college. Severe pains across the intestines continually tortured me and it came to a point when I could not stoop down at all, and my Digestion became paralyzed. Some one advised me to take 'Fruit-a-tives' and at once I felt a great improvement. After I had taken four or five boxes, I realized that I was completely cured and what made me glad, also, was that they were acting gently, causing no pain whatever to the bowels. All those who suffer with Chronic Constipation should follow my example and take 'Fruit-a-tives' for they are the medicine that cures."

MAGLOIRE PAQUIN "Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try It! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine. Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots fallish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

ON PRINTING

FINE PRINTING IS AN ART

Do you know good printing? Do you like good printing? Do you know that it always pays to have the BETTER kind?

Perhaps you have been used to the one class of printing and know no other.

If this is so, it is time for you to have a look around and investigate and see what's what.

Do you know you do not have to go any farther away than Newcastle to obtain the BETTER class of printing.

Perhaps you have not given it a thought, but a great deal depends on the stock used in order to get a BETTER job. Investigate this.

Last, but not the least, do you know that The Advocate Job Department turns out only this BETTER class of work. If you will read on a little further, we will tell you how and why.

1st—We cater to that class of people who use only the best stock, and who know what BETTER printing is.

2nd—In order to give these customers the class of work they want, we have to keep in stock only the best grades of material. We do not handle cheap lines.

3rd—In order, again, to be able to turn out that BETTER class of printing, we employ only experienced and competent printers, who keep abreast of the times and watch the styles.

4th—What is as important as the above is equipment. If The Advocate Job Department was not fitted out as it is, with the most modern machinery and the very latest in type faces, it could not handle the fast growing trade, that has developed in the past year, of turning out that BETTER class of printing. Only the best inks are used, because this is necessary when high grade stock is used.

Now, Mr. Business Man, if you will read the above over carefully, see how your supply stands, then get in touch with this office, we feel sure you will become a customer. Give up that old-fashioned notion that first class printing comes only from the large city printing offices. As a matter of fact, the reverse is the case, and prices are invariably lower.

REMEMBER THAT WE DO ALL KINDS OF PRINTING

For commercial use, we have superior grades of Letter, Note and Bill Head Stock, at prices and quality to suit any business and any purse. Our prices range from $2.50 to $4.00 per thousand for Letter Heads, and from $2.50 to $3.25 per thousand for Envelopes. Our Envelopes are the same material as our papers, and therefore match. We are always pleased to submit samples of stock, and prices, on application.

More Business IS WHAT WE WANT

You want the work—we want to do it for you. We have just the grade of paper you want, so why not let us get together in a co-operative way and make a strong pull for increased business—more business than usual.

"Yes. This morning I came to the theater to get a letter I left in my dressing-room and ran into a policeman who was looking for Alice Volk. I asked him what he wanted. They found a letter addressed to her on a man who was killed last night near the bridge. I've been with the officer since 10 o'clock."
"Is there anything I can do?"
"No. I've looked after everything. But I want your advice on one point. What do you think of two weeks—ill he is buried?"
"It's the best plan. I supposed he had fallen pretty low."
"Low?" Merry shrugged his shoulders. "I did not know such dives existed as the place where I found him. He had been lying there soaked to the point of insensibility for two weeks. He was so horrible a sight for the eyes of any woman."
"What an end!" exclaimed Oswald. "The man once stood on a pinnacle that many an actor would give half a lifetime to win. He had—"
The Englishman and Merry both looked up quickly. Wentworth had dropped an armful of books noisily on his desk. He opened the door which led to the inner office, passed through, then slammed it sharply behind him.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The Yellow Envelope.
More than one "summer show" had begun to blazon an alluring sight over the door of a Broadway theater before "The House of Esterbrook" closed its season. The fame of the play had gone abroad through the country, and night after night, long after the residence part of New York showed a labyrinth of boarded fronts, every seat in the Gotham was sold before the curtain went up.
The house was packed to the roof on the night the play closed. It was the middle of June and the city had grown uncomfortably hot. Wentworth had spent a restless day. He awoke to him as if the air were filled with anticipation. He overheard the Press discuss their plans for the summer in a Maine camp. Julie Volk had approached him, half shy, half eager, to tell of a shore cottage where they were to stay with Dorcas until the season opened. The telegram came and went, everyone in the theater had plans except himself. He felt forsaken and isolated amid the excitement of a closing night. He had no ties—not a human being cared whether he came or went. There was a house—he held the title deeds for it, he paid taxes and hired servants to care for it—but it was not a home. Only a year ago the three of them had gone holidaying, as care-free as children. Ages had passed since last summer.
He wandered about the theater in aimless, unseen fashion. The world seemed to have grown intolerable. He hated the gay laughter in the audience, the rustling of fans, and the buzz of voices between the acts. The orchestra had chosen airs that jarred upon his inmost nerves. He stood watching the throng when suddenly he wondered how he should meet tomorrow and every tomorrow of a long, lonely, inactive summer.
Before the curtain fell on the last act he strolled through the darkened house and opened a narrow door behind the lower boxes. He slipped on a wooden step led to a stage. A man stood inside with his fingers moving over the buttons, which flooded the stage with light or shadow. Wentworth pushed past him and walked swiftly behind the drops until he reached a corner which was comparatively deserted. He stood inside a wing, watching the company take their curtain calls. Last of all came Merry, alone. The insistent applause impounded a speech. Wentworth smiled grimly. Andrew's one terror was a speech. He saw the actor glance about him appealingly, then his eyes signaled to the man who controlled the curtain. It began to descend with quiet deliberation. Merry paused for a moment, then he came back.
"Ladies and gentlemen," he began, "I had hoped—"
While Wentworth stood listening he wondered why the descent of the curtain did not stop. He turned and whispered a command to the stagehand who stood beside him. The man's face was deathly white, he looked paralyzed with terror. In a second Enoch realized that something in the machinery had lost its grip. The house had grown still, while Merry stood smiling and talking in his nonchalant fashion. A young man with a gleaming expanse of shirt front rose from a lower box and set his foot upon the railing, preparing to climb over to the stage. A woman stood beside him clasping her hands and staring at Merry with horror-stricken eyes. Her face grew as white as the lace robe she wore. Then she shrieked, a long, shivering cry of terror. Enoch sprang toward the footlights with one swift leap, holding his arm over his head as if to ward off the heavy curtain, which was still descending. He seized Merry with a desperate grip and tossed the actor far back on the stage, then he fell with the ponderous curtain across his inert body. His closed eyes were facing the glare of the footlights.
Dorcas and Merry, in a swift motor, reached the Waverly Place home before the ambulance, and a famous surgeon came close at their heels. When the operation was over they laid Wentworth upon his own bed. The surgeon stood looking down on the unconscious face. Blood was wetting slowly from the wound on his forehead and made a wide stain upon the snowy bandage. The man turned to look at Dorcas: her make-up lay in smudges upon her face and she wore the blue cotton gown which belonged to "Cordelia" in the last act; her fingers clenched each other, while she turned an imploring gaze to the quiet face of the surgeon.

"I do not know—yet," he whispered, answering the question in her eyes: "It is too soon to tell. He lived through it, and it is one of those operations when the patient does not always live."
Somebody led her away. In a dazed fashion she knew that Alice Volk bathed her face and braided her hair into two long strands and changed her stage gown for a soft kimono. Then Merry took her hand and she followed him to the library. She lay down upon a couch feeling as if every nerve in her body had an ear and it was listening. The house was perfectly still. Once in her mind she used that phrase, "Still as death." Afterwards she fell into a shivering fit; the tears came, and she sobbed so fiercely that the agony seemed to tear at her throat.
From a shadowy corner near the freize Merry rose and crept across the room. He dropped on his knees beside her and soothed her without a word, as one broods over an unhappy child. The warm grip in which he held her hand between his own gave her courage and hope. She rose to her feet and he led her to the window where she sat down and looked out into the dark, quiet square. Out of her memory rose the thought of an early morning—it was only a year ago—when she had seen Andrew Merry for the first time, stretched listlessly on the park bench, with a gray, thin fog occasionally blotting him from her sight. It was here, too, she had sat watching children scuffle through wind-blown leaves, while she heard her brother read the manuscript of "The House of Esterbrook." Merry sat silent at her side until the nurse entered the room.
"Miss Wentworth," she said, "Dr. Mowbray says, your brother has been conscious for a few minutes. He cannot speak, but he wants something. Will you come?"
They followed the woman swiftly. Enoch's eyes sought hers with piteous pleading which was almost agony. She felt his hand. His gaze traveled to Merry and the agony seemed to change to peace.
"You saved his life, Enoch," she whispered.
Andrew laid his fingers gently upon the nerveless hand which rested out on the sheet. The eyes of the two met, in those of one was a mute prayer for forgiveness, in the other's shone gratitude and the old affection grown steadfast.
Enoch's lips moved. He was trying to speak. Dorcas laid her ear close to his mouth.
"He wants his keys," she said quickly.
The nurse left the bedside and returned with a bunch of small keys strung upon a steel ring. Dorcas laid them in her brother's hand. It was pitifully inert! She lifted them and ran them through her fingers, one by one, as a Catholic tells her beads in a rosary. Her gaze was fixed upon his eager eyes. When she touched a shining brass key a gleam of relief shone in the man's beseeching eyes. She rose to her feet.
"I will go at once, Enoch, and find it. I shall know what you want whatever it is, and will bring it to you."
The doctor followed Merry and Dorcas to the door. "Don't come back unless I send for you. The exertion has been too much for him."
"This is the key to a small drawer in Enoch's desk," explained the girl. "I can probably guess what he wants. I ought to show it to him. If his mind is set on something he may sleep quietly when he knows I have found it."
"I will call you if he does not sleep," said the doctor.
Merry walked to the window and stared vaguely into the darkness. A little clock on the mantel struck three.
"She has looked over his shoulder at Dorcas. He could hear the crackle of stiff paper—she unfolded a few long, narrow sheets which were tied in a thin bundle.

"I have found Enoch's will and a number of business papers. Here are his bankbooks and the contract with Oswald for the play. There are bonds and things of that sort—things I do not understand. I imagine, the girl's voice broke into a sob, "it must be the will he wants."
"Probably, it is, dear," said Andrew gently. She laid the papers on the desk and, lifted a yellow envelope. There was no writing upon it; it was unsealed. She took out a slip of paper and stood motionless while she read it. Then her fingers moved in a groping way to turn on a blaze of electricity under the green globe above the desk.
"The room is so dark," she murmured.
She dropped the paper upon the blotter in front of her and leaned upon the desk with her face between her hands.
"Andrew," cried Dorcas with a stifled moan, "come here!"
He crossed the room and stood looking at her with a girl's staid air.
"See," she whispered, "see what I have found! Tell me what it is?" Her fingers pointed to the bond. She stretched out her hand as if scarping for protection and help. The man clasped it between his own, then she raised her eyes to his.
"Was it this, Andrew, this that lay behind everything—that made you give up your play and—" Merry's lip parted, but he did not speak. Dorcas glanced at the date. She withdrew her hands from his and put her fingers across her eyes as if trying desperately to remember something.
"Why," she cried suddenly, "the date was May 29, last year; that was two days after came home from the convent! Her forehead knitted into a puzzled frown. "It must have been that night—that morning—when Enoch had a stag party, and I came in, after you had all gone. It was the first time I saw you. I have told you about it—when you sat there, waiting for a bus."
"Yes," he whispered.
"Then afterwards," she raised her head with a quick gesture, "we went to Juniper Point. There you told me about your play—and you went away to write it!"
She paused, waiting for Merry to answer. She did not raise her eyes. Her head was bent as if she took the shame of her brother upon her own shoulders.
"Yes," the man spoke in a slow whisper.
"Then you came back, with the play finished, and read it to Enoch, and he—"
"Oh!" she shrank away from him with a shuddering cry. "Oh, how could you let him do such a thing! It was so cruel, so inconceivably cruel, so shameful, and so unjust! It was such a mistake! Why did you let my brother do such a thing?"
"I don't know," Merry spoke abruptly.
"Tell me why you let him do it," persisted the girl.
"I don't believe I can explain—to you. There was a hopeless tone in the man's voice. "For a while it seemed to me like a poker debt. Women cannot understand a poker debt."
"No, I cannot understand," confessed Dorcas. Then she went on hurriedly: "Was that your only reason?"
"No, I felt that was at first. Then—it seemed foolish. One day I determined for a minute to set myself free, to get the play back, and to make you understand. It was the night—that night—when you took me home—when you found me in the—when you gave me new courage and a fresh outlook on life—when you made a man of me."
Dorcas rose and stood facing him with her eyes searching him. "Why didn't you do it?" she asked.
"Because," said Merry unsteadily, "do you remember you—no I—asked you—when I had a detour as low as I had if he had anything left that would pull him to his feet. You said, 'Yes, so long as he has honor, there is no end of a chance for him.'"
"Oh!" cried Dorcas aghast. "Oh, to think that I should have put that in your way!"
"Put what in my way? Dearest, that night I came around the corner—I had been wandering in the desert. Suddenly I found sunshine, I found love and hope, I found you. That night—when you went away—I began to understand that it was the most wonderful chance God ever put in a man's way."
An instant later his arms were about her and she felt his kiss upon her cheek.
"Don't," cried Dorcas. "Don't!" She freed herself from his clasp and held him away from her. "Can't you understand, don't you see, Andrew, after what Enoch did to you, that I cannot be your wife?"
"You cannot—be—my—"
He stared at her in bewildered dismay.
"Yes, that is what I mean," she whispered tremulously. "Don't you understand? How could I marry you with the thought of this horrible wrong constantly between us? I could never forget it. Remember it was Enoch, my brother—don't you understand?—my brother—when did this! How could you go on loving me! Heave!"
"Remember—it was your brother who saved my life," said Merry passionately. "How could I go on loving you, dearest? How could I stop loving you? I could go through hell for you, and yet I confess I would rather be with you than heaven. He flushed and his face grew grave. "You are mine—all mine—and I am yours, so wholly and truly yours that I have grown to think of this world as merely one spot—one little spot—where we can make a home and I can have you beside me—for the rest of my life."

CHAPTER XXV.
In the Daylight.
Wentworth's chamber was dim as twilight when Merry entered. The outer world lay white and breathless under a dazzling sun, and the sudden change to a darkened sickroom for a moment made Andrew grope vaguely on the threshold. As his eyes became accustomed to the dusk he saw a white-gowned nurse standing beside the bed. Under the sheet lay the motionless outline of the man's long body, the head wound with snowy bandages. Merry's hands gripped together convulsively. The nails cut into his palms and an ache which hurt against his heart. Wentworth's chamber held memories for him; he thought of nights when he had lain helpless upon that same bed and Enoch had taken care of him in a lumbering fashion. During those days he had seen the rugged face grow wan from want of sleep; still for him a smile always lit the stern features.
Suddenly, as the last remnant of an old scab sloughs off, every fragment of hatred, of resentment at injustice, of pain and rebellion which for ten months had been warping his nature and clouding his life, flew away from Merry's heart. The love, the implicit confidence, even the boyish dependence upon the older man, came flooding back into his soul like a high tide. All that had stood between him and Wentworth seemed unimportant compared with the vital fact that they were—
When the nurse beckoned he stole noiselessly across the floor. She pointed to a chair by the bedside. "He has dozed off," she explained in a low whisper. "He asked for you just before he went to sleep. I told him you were coming. Sit here so that he can see you when he wakes up."
Merry dropped into the chair. He began to see perfectly through the gloom. Wentworth's grim, gaunt face had startled him for a minute. The eyelids were closed, with depths of shadow below them. The man's dominating nose stood out like a silhouette against the white pillow. The mustache had been shaved away and lines, thought of it this morning—I'm afraid to go home in the dark—mean't that what he said? I felt lonely—and I know."

Dropped on His Knees Beside the Bed.

"Listen, Enoch," Merry spoke with a tone of passionate conviction. "Look here, old man, you're not going home in the dark, are you? You've got thirty or forty years before that homegoing!"
He turned imperatively to the nurse. "Push back the curtains, won't you? Push them away back. There's a glorious sun shining—let it in."
The woman understood. She ran up a certain and flung back the shutters. The room grew suddenly white and radiant.
"There!" cried Merry. "Talk of going home in the dark? See how the sun is shining! Go home in the dark, the idea!"
The pathetic eagerness flashed into the eyes of the man on the bed. The glare of the sunshine showed clearly the wanness and ghastly shadows in the bandaged face.
"She says," the actor pointed over his shoulder at the white-gowned nurse, "she says you are out on the highroad—coming back to stay with us—indeed, you understand."
"She knows," Merry said, and looked into the woman's face with ardent pleading in his eyes.
She smiled and nodded. She was the embodiment of health and vigor. Her stalwart body and her wholesome rosy face were pleasant for sick eyes to look upon. "Yes, you've come back," she said enthusiastically. "When the doctor left an hour ago he said we had pulled you safely around the corner. Now all the job I have cut out for me is to see you are kept quiet and patient and happy."
"Yes, happy—that's the biggest part of the prescription," repeated Merry with a laugh.
The sick man looked up. The confession in his eyes was pathetic. "It seems ages since I was happy, Boy."
"Well, you're not going to be allowed to think, even to think of past things. You've got to be here and get well. It is our business—a part of your cut out for Dorcas and me—to keep you happy. See?"
"I see," whispered Enoch. The flicker of a smile stole into his face. It brought peace and a pale, eager hopefulness, as if a thought of restitution and atonement was dawning in the man's soul. The nurse lowered the curtain and blotted out the radiance which flooded the room.
"The doctor has ordered quiet," she whispered, "and sleep—as much sleep as possible."
Merry rose and laid his hand on Wentworth's forehead. "You hear her orders, old man? He laughed gaily. "It's no use running full tilt against the nursing profession. Each one of them thinks she knows it all! But I'm not going to say 'Good-by.' I mean to hang here from dawn till dusk and dark and drop in every time I can sneak past her or the doctor!"
CHAPTER XXVI.
A Moral Lesson.
Occasionally during Enoch's convalescence Dorcas found him listening to common noises about the house with a feverish anxiety which was half-terror.
"I don't know what he wants," said the nurse one day. "I wish I could find out. The doctor orders me not to bring up any subject that might disturb him. There's something on his mind something that harasses him. Yesterday I stood on the stairs speaking to Mrs. Volk and I left him asleep. When I went back he was leaning on his elbow and his eyes were fixed on the door as if he dreaded seeing some one come in. He asked who the woman was I had been talking to. His temperature had gone up. I wish I knew what he is worrying about."
"I think I understand," said Dorcas.
She returned to the sickroom carrying a bit of needlework. An eager smile came into her brother's eyes when she opened the door. He lay propped up with pillows. She sat down beside his bed. "Shall I read?" she asked.
"No; go on with your sewing. I like to see your hands fly with that bright silk between your fingers. Men like an idea that women are one-sided creatures. They are mistaken. You sew beautifully, and yet, while you stitch, I think of your 'Cordelia.'"
It was the first time since his accident that Wentworth had mentioned the theater or business of any sort. Dorcas began to trace out the pattern she was embroidering with the point of her needle. Her fingers trembled. She spoke without looking up.
"You haven't cared to hear about business, Enoch. There are some things you may want to know, since you are strong again. Mr. Oswald called for England a fortnight ago. He hated to go, leaving you before the critical point was passed, but the Strand Theater offered open time for August and it had to be attended to. He is rehearsing an English company now for 'The House.'"
"Didn't he want you for it?" asked Wentworth.
"Yes; but I should not have gone even if you had been well. He has given 'Cordelia' to Miss Embury, an English girl. He says she will play it beautifully. We are to open here on the twentieth of October. The whole company has been re-engaged. Mr. Oswald said he did not believe you would care to make any change. There is only one new member—Helen Capron will play 'Mrs. Esterbrook.' Miss Pigot went to London three weeks ago."
Dorcas did not raise her eyes while she spoke. The silk thread had knotted and she sat disengaging it with her needle.
"As soon as you are able to travel we are going to take you away somewhere. The city is hot."
Enoch stared out at the window.
"Who is 'we'?" he questioned.
A wave of scarlet crept across the girl's face.
"Andrew Merry has offered to help care for you until you are quite strong again," she answered without raising her eyes.
"That still were gray shadows in his face and wan hollows and wrinkles about his mouth. His hair was whitened at the temples. Physically the man had changed, but a new tranquility had begun to smooth away lines of worry and care in the colorless face.

"And begin life over again?" he asked.
"Yes," said the girl gently.
A pathetic eagerness came into his face, then it grew still with the gravity of a man who had almost touched hands with death. Into the wrinkles about his mouth crept the old dogged determination, tempered by a humility which Dorcas had never seen before. She flung her work aside, dropped on her knees, and drew her brother's face close against her own.
"Dorcy," he said after a long silence, "when Andrew comes I want to see him alone."
"He is downstairs now," she answered.
"Send him up, won't you—and do you mind if he comes alone? Afterwards I want you."
The girl hesitated. "Of course. But do you think you are strong enough to visit much?"
"I spoke to the doctor this morning and he said talking would not hurt unless I got excited. Andrew isn't an exciting fellow."
"You're looking uncommonly well for a sick man," said Merry when he entered the room a few moments later. "So do you, Boy!" Enoch's eyes crinkled with a smile. "You look happy—tremendously happy."
"Of course, I am tremendously happy. Why shouldn't I be tremendously happy? I never saw a more glorious day; I have you back, well and strong, the same staunch old friend you always were; I've signed a contract for next season in figures which would have given me dizzy spells five years ago, and—"
"And—"
A pathetic eagerness came into Enoch's face.
"Why, bless my soul, isn't that enough to set the average human on transcendental stilts?"
"Andrew, you're half angel!" cried Wentworth. There was a quaver in his voice.
"Half angel, you ridiculous old muddle head!" Merry smiled in his engaging way. "There's no surplus of angel fiber in any man—angels are feminine." The comedian's eyes became grave for a moment. "Still, I might have been gadding about on wings today if it hadn't been for you. Your courage—"
"Courage!" Wentworth started as if he had been struck. "Andrew, never use that word about me again! It wasn't courage that made me snatch you from death. Oftentimes men who in cold blood are utter cowards leap forward and rescue some one from death. That isn't courage!" He paused, as if a word had escaped him. "It is blind, instinctive impulse—the natural impulse you find even in a savage."
"You're too weak yet to argue," Merry's voice was conclusive. "Only one thing is certain," he turned his thumb toward the floor; "I am here instead of—there."
"Andrew," the sick man's face flushed, "take these." He pulled a bunch of small keys, threaded upon a steel ring, from under his pillow. "Won't you unlock the little drawer at the left of my desk and bring it to me?"
"Don't go in for any sort of work now, Enoch. Your duty at present is to lie there and get well."
"I want that drawer, now."
Merry stared at him for a moment, then he obeyed, and returned to the room with the drawer in his hand. "Do you think," the actor paused again and asked anxiously, "do you think that you are strong enough yet to attend to business?"
"This isn't business," Enoch's face grew preternatural. "I'm strong enough for this. I'm not a praying man, An-

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest Land Regulations

Any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-agency for district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.
Duties: Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him or by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.
In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3 per acre.
Duties: Must reside upon the homestead or pre-emption six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and cultivate fifty acres extra.
A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may enter for a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3 per acre. Duties. Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.
W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

THE WEEK IN NEWCASTLE

Had Snow-form
Newcastle was visited on Saturday night by a heavy fall of snow, which later turned to rain and kept up for the best part of Sunday.

Su"sex Officer Miss'ng
Lieut. R. F. Steeves, of Sussex, N. B., who went from Vancouver with the 7th Battalion, is reported missing after the Gagnan drive at Ypres.

W. F. & H. M. S. Meeting
The regular monthly meeting of W. F. & H. M. Society of St. James' church, will be held at the home of Mrs. Fitzmaurice, Pleasant St. Thursday, May 6th, at 3 o'clock.

Chatham Soldier Wounded
Col. McCulley, of Chatham, has received word that his son, Caleb, was wounded in France at the Ypres battle. He was attached to the 14th Battalion while in France.

Touraine Closed up
The Hotel Touraine, Chatham, closed its doors to the public Saturday afternoon. Failure of lessee and owner coming to terms was the cause.

Change of Time
The twenty-four hour day system, which has been in vogue on the I. C. R. for a number of years, went out of date on Saturday last. It is believed by railway men that the change is a move in the right direction.

St. Peter's Church, Millerton
On Sunday evening the Ven. Archdeacon Forsyth will hold service in St. Peter's Church, Derby, in the absence of the Rev. H. T. Montgomery, who is attending the clergy school and Encaenia of King's College, Windsor, at which he will receive a Master of Arts degree.

Election of Officers
Redbank Band of Hope has elected following officers for ensuing quarter: Pres., Russel McCurdy; Vice-Pres., Jessie Harris; Secy., Gladys White; Treas., Marguerite Johnston; Guide, Jarvis McCurdy; Conductor, Helen McCurdy; Sent., Marguerite Harris; Patron, A. V. Johnston.

Brother was Wounded
Gunner Ainsley Hicks, of Jollicure, who was wounded by a fragment of a shell while fighting recently in France, was the first man recruited in Moncton to receive wounds in action. He enlisted there with Major Anderson's battery. After spending a short time in the hospital Gunner Hicks was able to return to the firing line. He is a brother of Harold Hicks of the A. J. Bell Co. here.

Will Build New Church
St. Luke's Presbyterian congregation, Bathurst, intend re-building their church, made necessary by the destruction of the old one some time ago. They have decided on the purchase of a piece of property next to the court house, Rev. Walter McN. Matthews, the pastor, is a Chatham boy.

Kings College Closing
The Rev. W. J. Bate of this town and Rev. H. T. Montgomery, left yesterday morning for King's College, Nova Scotia, where they will attend the Encaenia and also the annual Clergy School for the Anglican Clergy in the Maritime Province. The only service at St. Andrew's church next Sunday will be at seven in the evening.

Youthful Patriotism
A most pleasing concert was given Saturday afternoon, by the Misses Lilian Rundle, Dot Maltby, Margery Kennedy and Elizabeth Nicholson, to a number of their juvenile friends. Several novelties were introduced for which prizes were given and each person in the audience received a bag of candy. The sum of $1.25 was realized and presented to the Red Cross Society. This was deservedly a successful effort as the price of admission was only one cent.

Private Joseph Li"ord, of Fredericton, who was fighting with the 12th Battalion, is reported dangerously wounded in the leg by shrapnel. He has been admitted to No. 1 General Hospital.

Basket-Ball Game
A basket-ball game will be played in the Temperance Hall on Friday evening, May 7th, between the 73rd Garrison soldiers and the Merchants. This game promises to be a fast one. Watch for the dodgers.

Notice to Contributors
Contributors to our columns will kindly endeavor to send in their items for publication as early in the week as possible, as it is impossible to give space to items sent in on Wednesday morning.

"Quo Vadis"
On this page will be found the advt. of the Happy Hour, advertising the coming of that extraordinary eight reel picture "Quo Vadis." It is impossible for us to give any better description than will be found in the ad, and we ask our readers to read it. Manager Richards was lucky in being able to bring this great picture to Newcastle, as only the larger cities have been able to bill it. This will be its first appearance in a town the size of Newcastle. Read the advt. and keep the date in mind.

The Radio Dance
Delightful Affair
The Radio Military dance in the Town Hall on Thursday evening last, proved a most enjoyable affair. The hall was very tastefully decorated in a general scheme of green and white.

Was Enjoyed by About Two Hundred People - Large Number From Chatham
There were about two hundred in attendance, about thirty-five of whom came from Chatham and other points. The music, furnished by McEachren's orchestra of Chatham, was thoroughly enjoyed. The dance committee wish to express their thanks and appreciation to the Lounsbury Co. for the loan of furniture, to the J. D. Creaghan Co. for the loan of flags and curtains, and the Stothart Mercantile Co. for the loan of some electrical fixings.

HAPPY HOUR | COMING!
ONE NIGHT ONLY
ENGAGEMENT EXTRAORDINARY!
"In a broken voice Peter exclaimed: 'Quo Vadis, Dominie?' (Whither goest Thou, O Lord?) Christ answered: 'Shouldst thou abandon My people I will go to Rome to be crucified again.'"
Starts Sharp 8.00 TUESDAY MAY 18th. Essential To Keep Date Well In Mind
The World's Unquestioned Film Masterpiece!
Picturing the powerful and reverent novel by Henry Sienkiewicz.
"QUO VADIS"
Eight reels of surprising pictorial, dramatic and spectacular merit.
PAST PROGRAMME ACHIEVEMENTS in film productions will surely be eclipsed by "Quo Vadis," the most stupendous work of its kind ever attempted, excepting "Cabiria," now showing in big centres. It is a glorious series of living photographs consuming two and a half hours in the showing and depicting life in the ancient city of Rome when despotic Nero was at the height of his cruelty and folly. It is also the period in history when the Apostle Paul labored in Rome and delights thrown upon Holy Writ by this historical novel—reverent and respectful at all times—are deeply impressive. There are eight reels in the production. A description of them really belittles language. We see the orgies of the nobility, the grandeur and debauchery of Nero's court; the tragic life of the Christian maiden Lygia, whose faithful slave Ursus—a giant in stature and strength—plays such an important role in the arena scenes. Paul and Peter, Apostles of Christ, are impersonated with vivid truth, the burning of Rome is a marvel of stagecraft and dramatic climax, while the piteous scenes in the arena where Christians are thrown to the wild beasts it is impossible to describe. You may call "Quo Vadis" entertainment if you like, but we look upon it as a powerful lesson—a sermon—on a crucial period in the history of the Christian church.
