The following narrative is not inappropriate to the times in which we live:

Five years ago, a centleman in the United States (as gentlemen frequently do in that and other countries) get up a railroad speculation, for which it was thought necessary that there should be a Government subvention. The affair was duly submitted to Congress, and an engineer of high character, who was without a wit, was appointed, on the part of the Government, to report on scheme. This scientific man visited the the country, returned, and was one day sitting in his hotel with a friend lying out the sofa, when one of the railway prometers entered and addressed the engineer. Accordingly, after ascort in a low whisper. "Speak out," said the engineer. Accordingly, after ascort taining that the other party present was a friend, he said in a loud voice; "Mr. Smith, if you will fix that report to an tius, we will give your $30,000 of the stock," "Mr. Jones," was the reply, "when you want to bribe an honest man—an honest man, mind you—come right down with your spodulies d—nyour stock!"
