Mrs. John Bennett, Boggy Creek, Man., writes: "My little girl had organic nervous trouble, could not sleep, had severe headaches and fainting spells. This went on for three years, and three doctors helped her very little. After reading of what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food had done for others, I got some for her. She is now so well that she is like a different child. She is fourteen years old and looks the picture of health."

CHAPTER IV.

"Then why didn't you say so at first?" demanded his lordship, impatiently. "Your manner was such as to declare you almost guilty."

Jessy breathed a sigh of relief at her lover's reply, and her emotion awakened a feeling of sympathy in Lord Ashcroft's breast.

"I know Gosman could not have done such a thing, my lord," said the forester's daughter, proudly, yet timidly; "he never did a wicked thing in his life."

Kepp recovered himself a little as the girl defended him, and lifted his head, but only to drop it lower upon his breast, and Jessy alone saw the grateful expression upon his face.

"Well, go whom did you lend the gun?" inquired the earl.

Kepp lowered his head still more, but made no reply.

Lord Ashcroft had become interested in the accused from seeing how Jessy clung to him, disbelieving the accusation, and he now said, kindly: "Will you not tell us the name of the man who borrowed your gun, Kepp? You are in no way to blame for having lent it to him, and you need not fear any violence at his hands."

"I—I cannot tell his name, my lord," faltered Kepp.

A low cry broke from Jessy's lips, and she caught her lover's arm, saying: "Don't you see they suspect you, dad? They think you wanted to kill his lordship. Tell them who you lent the gun to—tell them, Gosman."

"I can't!"

"Tell me, then—or you'll break my heart!" and poor Jessy's voice sounded pitifully.

"I can't."

Jessy gave a wild, incredulous look at her lover, and then sat down upon the step, covering her face with her apron, unmindful of the chill creeping to her very bones under that deadlier chill of suspicion aroused by her lover's words.

The under-forester, with downcast eyes and drooping form, flinching under the stern gaze of his accusers, might well have been thought guilty of an attempt at a terrible crime.

Lord Egremont addressed him in words that caused poor Jessy to writhe as under personal blows.

It certainly looked ominous for the under-forester at that moment, and he felt it.

"Carnol made us strong and healthy and gave us wonderful appetites," writes Miss Winifred Bartlett

"What answer do you get when you ask most people who are ill what their trouble is? Isn't the answer almost invariably, weakness, run down condition, losing weight, despondent, sleeplessness, nervousness, lack of energy, tired, listless, headaches? Carnol has proved, by the thousands of testimonials we have, to be a wonderful remedy for all these conditions. Read what Miss Winifred Bartlett says about Carnol, and what it did for her and her family when they were run down.—"One month last winter all of us, except father, were laid up with flu. Father was working at a factory and told his chum about our being run down with flu. His chum said that in 1921 his family was laid up with the same thing, so he went to the druggist and the druggist told him to give them Carnol. He said it was good for people who had been ill and were still very weak. This man told my father that it was the very best strengthener and body-builder his family had ever tried."

as if all his limbs were benumbed or the life frozen within him, shook himself as if to arouse his faculties, picked up the gun that had caused so much woe, and plunged into the depths of the forest.

CHAPTER V.

During the ride homeward from the forester's cottage, Lady Egremont remarked, addressing her guest:

"You see, dear Lady Lorean, how anxious we all are for Xina's happiness. She is the light of our household, and every one at Egremont loves her. Lyle regards her as a sister, although he is not a relative of hers. He is my nephew, and has been a year at Egremont. He can tell you of Alexina's goodness, without laying himself open to the charge of undue partiality."

"It is not necessary to praise the Lady Alexina," responded Lyle Indor. "That would be like gilding refined gold and painting the lily."

Both Lord and Lady Egremont bestowed approving glances upon their nephew for this compliment to their ward.

"She is certainly very beautiful," said the Lady Lorean, called upon to say something. "She has the dark beauty of the Egremonts. I remember her father. He was the finest-looking man I ever beheld. His daughter resembles him greatly. I pray that she may never experience anything of the doom of her race."

The remark was no sooner made than regretted.

Lady Egremont turned pale and trembled like a leaf, while her husband became livid with fear.

It was evident that the curse of Egremont weighed heavily on them both, and that his lordship had a secret terror of incurring the fate that had overtaken all the males of his race—the doom of a violent death.

Lady Lorean's unfortunate remark caused a feeling of gloom to overcome all who overheard it, and it had not subsided when they reached the dwelling. There the party separated, proceeding to their several apartments.

Lord Ashcroft had scarcely gained his own room, and seated himself before the sea-coal fire, when his sister entered.

Her brother arose as she came forward, politely placing the easy-chair for her use, and seated himself at a little distance, saying:

"What troubles you, Lorean? I noticed a shadow on your face during the latter part of our ride. Your assumed gaiety could not deceive me."

"I feared you would read my heart, as you have done, Lionel," returned the Lady Lorean, frankly. "My love for you has rendered me very sharp-sighted in regard to the Lady Alexina. To tell you the truth, brother, I am disappointed in her."

"Disappointed!" echoed his lordship. "Why, Lorean, do you not consider her beautiful?"

"I do not deny her beauty, but I think her manner too self-assured for so young a lady."

Lord Ashcroft smiled.

"My objection seems trivial, does it not?" said the Lady Lorean, smiling too. "But beauty is not all you require in your future wife, my dear Lionel."

"True, Lorean; but if the Lady Alexina will accept me as her husband, I shall have more than beauty in my wife. Did you not notice how generously she interceded for Gosman Kepp, and with what emotion she listened to poor Jessy Kay's pleadings?"

"I did," was the quite response. "Ah, Lionel, are you really so blind as your words indicate? The emotion of which you speak was a petty self-consciousness—a pride in feeling that the fate of that poor Kepp was in her hands."

"Lorean, you are unjust! You love for me has caused you to see imperfections in the Lady Alexina which do not really exist."

"She satisfies you, then, Lionel, fully and entirely?"

Lord Ashcroft hesitated, as if searching the depths of his own heart, then sighed and answered:

"She is not exactly as I pictured her. It would be strange if she were. But I believe her to be true-hearted, gentle, and intelligent, with a loving, trusting soul. If she have faults, which to me seems doubtful, she will conquer them when she learns to love. I shall endeavor to subdue mine."

Female Impersonators

Went Big, Until Spot Light Showed Defects.

Buenos Aires. (United News).—Whether female impersonators should be suppressed or encouraged is troubling the municipal council here. The city fathers are in favor of suppression.

Edmond De Bries is a man who chooses to portray women on the stage and Edmond modestly claims to be infinitely more chic and alluring than any Argentine actress and further insists that his lady wardrobe, complete from step-ins to beaded bag, is more valuable and of greater distinction than the possession of any stage woman.

De Bries and his gorgeous lingerie and outer clothing have made a tremendous hit on the Buenos Aires stage. So great has been his success that dozens of plagiarists of his art are trying to take advantage of the public taste for men in women's garments.

The theatrical world is echoed to the soprano thunders of two schools of female impersonators. De Bries insists that the municipal council is disgusted by "the inexpressible vulgarity and inane posturings of the minor female impersonators."

Plagiarists of De Bries contend that the public admires the lithesome grace of their performances and even though it be vulgar, to the elephantine antics and hoarse croakings of the "iron faced sergeant's guards" who threaten to break the boards in every vaudeville theatre in town when they come clumping in for the chorus numbers.

Even if the city council doesn't favor female impersonators it is predicted that the theatre spotlights will.

Revue shows are becoming increasingly popular here, and with the revenue came the custom of sending the girls onto the stage bare legged. Many female impersonators were acceptable to the public before bare legs became a stage fashion, but now when the unclothed extremities are brightly illuminated, the deception is too apparent to be attractive.

MRS. B. H. HART SICK FOR YEARS

Wants Women to Know How She Was Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Cornwall, Ont.—"I am now giving your medicine a fair trial and it surely is doing me good and I am going to keep on taking it. I used to feel so tired in the morning that I didn't want to get up, but that feeling is now gone and I feel more like working. For seven or eight years I have had headaches, tired feelings, pains in my back and across my body. I read letters in the newspapers saying what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done others. My husband says I quit too soon, but I am not going to stop taking the Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine until I am better and haven't an ache or a pain. Isn't that the right way? I have great faith in your medicines. They must be good when those who take them speak so highly of them. I am recommending them to my friends and I will gladly answer letters from women asking about them." Mrs. B. H. Hart, Box 1081, Cornwall, Ont.

Mrs. Hart is willing to answer letters from sick women asking about the Vegetable Compound.

Here's a Dealer Who Knew How

There was an old geezer and he had a little more spunk. He started up a business on a dollar eighty cents. The dollar for stock, and the eighty for an ad. Brought him three lovely dollars in a day, by dad!

Well, he bought more goods and a little more spunk. And he played that system with a smile on his face. The customers flocked to his two-by-four. And soon he had to hustle for a regular store.

Up on the square where the people pass He gobbled up a corner that was all plate glass. He fixed up the windows with the best that he had. And told them all about it in a half-page ad.

He soon had 'em coming and he never, never quit. And he wouldn't cut down on his ads one bit. And he's kept things humping in the town ever since. And everybody calls him the Merchant Prince.

Some say it's luck but that's all bunk— Why he was doing business when times were punk. People have to purchase and the geezer was wise— For he knew the way to get 'em was to advertise.—EX.

The Choice of Most Women

Pearline washing powder is selected by many women who know what a real good washing powder is. Pearline costs only ten cents a package and saves dollars in toll and labor. Years ago Pearline was the favourite—it is still the favourite with all its numerous users. Your grocer knows that Pearline is considered the best of all washing powders and this is why he will recommend it every time you ask his opinion. For cleaning pots, pans, kettles, etc., there is nothing like Pearline. For all washing or scrubbing a little Pearline added to the water makes the work much easier. Every woman should use Pearline. Ask your grocer for Pearline.—oct14,t.1f

B. C. Rose Nurseries

CHILLIWACK, B.C.—It would appear to be sending coals to Newcastle, but the first shipment of the fall season from the British Columbia nurseries at Sardis was 1,000 rose bushes for Portland, Ore. Another order recently placed at the same nurseries was from Lady Byng, for shipment to England, of apple trees. On a recent visit to this province, Lady Byng was so much interested in the quality and varieties of apples grown here that were not grown in England, and showed her desire to try out B.C. trees in her home across the seas by placing this order.

Salt Pork Slices With Apple.

(By an Old Maid.)

A meal of salt pork sliced, served steaming hot with apples, is simple, rustic fare for which I have a great liking.

I either fry or bake my country dinner to suit my own convenience. If the frying-pan is called into requisition I cook the meat first, then keep it hot till I have finished. If when this is lifted out, overmuch grease remains I pour a little off before I put in the fruit.

The apples need to be pared, cored, and sliced quite across "thick as a crown piece." Green acid fruit not only cooks very quickly, but is quite the nicest with the pork; sweet apples lack tang, and do not fulfil their mission to perfection. Sometimes, if any cold boiled potatoes remain, I slice these and fry too. Both are turned and made brown.

They are laid around the pork on the dish and parsley leaves are there to trim it. All country people eat heartily of this. They know a good thing when they meet it, and display their wisdom in a sensible, practical manner.

MacDonald's Son Heads Winners.

Retiring British Premier's Boy, With Oxford Team, Scores in Debate.

Chicago, Nov. 4.—(A.P.)—Malcolm J. MacDonald, son of the British Premier, last night led an Oxford University team to victory over a Chicago University trio in a debate on prohibition.

The debate on the question: "Resolved, that this house opposes the principle of prohibition," was decided by the English system of convincing the audience.

Before the debate began, 637 of the auditors registered a preference for prohibition, 340 against and 121 neutral. The visitors who took the affirmative side, succeeded by their arguments in bringing the number of those in favor of prohibition to 432, while opposed increased to 463, the remainder being neutral.

Others on the Oxford team with MacDonald were J. D. Woodruff and Household Notes.

A magazine makes an excellent lap-board when mending or patching. It is very pliable.
By sewing patch pockets on the bottoms of your kiddies' wash frocks, you have a piece that has washed the same shade if you need any for mending.
Hot milk, and washed, chopped figs are nice served with the morning dish of cereal.
Don't forget that honey is a most healthful sweet. Use it in cooking, and serve plain.
Whipped cream and chopped pistachio nuts makes a delightful garnish for ice cream.
Layer raisins, nuts and sweet elder make a delightfully appropriate dessert at this season.
Never serve very rich sweets at a child's party. Jelly sandwiches, cocca, and tiny sponge cakes are suitable.

Canned peaches, a little lemon and orange peel, grapes, and sugar, make a delicious marmalade.
A valuable fur scarf can be secured to your costume with tiny safety pins on the outer side.
Many people are fond of a few currants added to the dough for brown bread—and sweetened with honey.
It is very hard on rugs to shake them by the corners. Lay them flat on the grass, and beat and sweep on both sides.

ADRIATIC MEETS.
ROUGH WEATHER.
NEW YORK, Nov. 17.

The White Star Liner Adriatic reached port 12 hours overdue to-day with one life boat missing, three crushed, and a tale of cyclonic gales which swept one sailor overboard. The lost man was J. E. Nelson, of Liverpool, who was making his last voyage prior to joining the London Police force. He was lying near the ship's rail struggling with the lashings of a life boat that had broken loose. As the Adriatic surged upwards upon a huge wave, a 90 mile gust of gale caught her, she listed heavily and Nelson was swept into the sea. Several life buoys were thrown but the sailor was not seen again. Nearing the end of a heavy weather passage, the Adriatic last night ran afoul the sleet and snow storm sweeping up the Atlantic Coast. She was covered with ice as she docked to-day.

INSIDE HISTORY OF FORMER WAR LORD.
BERLIN, Nov. 17.

A story of how former Emperor William once threatened to commit suicide is revealed in a book written by Theodore Wolff, editor of the Tageblatt, dealing with Germany's policy during the Chancellorship of Von Buelow. Emperor William had, in 1915, induced Emperor Nicholas of Russia to sign a Treaty of Alliance, which pledged Germany to aid Russia in Europe but not in Asia. Von Buelow disapproved of the Treaty and tendered his resignation. Thereupon William wrote Von Buelow a pathetic letter in which he said the Chancellor's resignation gave him such a shock that he had collapsed and he feared he would have a serious nervous illness. In the letter the Kaiser reminded Von Buelow that to please him he had ridden in "Tangier" on a strange horse notwithstanding his crippled left arm and that the horse had nearly killed him. "I rode among the Spanish anarchists," said the letter, "because you wanted me to, and because your policy would benefit by it, and now, after I have done all this, you wish to leave me. If you now disavow your policy, I should be made to look ridiculous, which I cannot survive." Then comes a postscript saying, "The morning after the receipt of your resignation you will not find your Kaiser alive. Think of my poor wife and children." Von Buelow, according to Wolff, finally withdrew his resignation, and his reward, the writer declared, came three years later when the Kaiser dismissed him with the remark, "I have chased the scoundrel away."

Bartlett to Direct Hunt for Lost Sloop.

Warship Sailing on Quest for Craft Long Overdue.

Capt. Robert A. (Bob) Bartlett, renowned explorer and veteran of five polar expeditions, the most famous of which was Peary's dash to within 100 miles of the North Pole, will direct the search for the missing 40-foot sloop Lief Ericsson, 42 days overdue at Battle Harbor, Labrador. He will be on the bridge of the cruiser Trenton, which sails tomorrow.

The sloop, with William Washburn Nutting, author, as commander, Eric Todahly, marine painter, and Arthur Hildebrand, writer, among those on board, was last reported out of Julian-shaah, Greenland, Sept. 8.

The craft left Bergen, Norway, last July to follow the Viking trail over which Lief Ericsson is held to have reached America.

The Trenton received sailing orders Friday, but departure was delayed while Commodore Kattenhorn of the Cruising Club, New York, made frantic efforts to locate Capt. Bartlett.

Nutting, a skilled yachtsman, sailed the 45-foot ketch-rigged yacht Typhoon across the Atlantic and back in 1920.

While friends of those on board the Lief Ericsson show great concern over their safety, the wife of the sloop's commander, Mrs. Caroline Nutting, isn't a bit worried.

Mrs. Nutting is entirely confident that the craft will be located with all on board safe.

"Although I have been deluged with telegrams and telephone inquiries from friends, I refuse to worry," said Mrs. Nutting.

"My husband is an excellent seaman, and I'm sure the Lief Ericsson has either been disabled or is ice-bound."

"Why I even went as far as Norway with Mr. Nutting, intending to make the trip with him. But I let him persuade me at the last moment that the voyages would be too strenuous."

Mr. English Writes

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir--Saturday night I wrote a letter of protest against that clownish bit of doggerel which appeared in your columns under the title "A Diversion." I put the letter in an envelope and addressed it to you. I have it yet. I am now addressing another to you of a milder tone, but just as emphatic in protest. I consider from a literary point of view that nothing more crude could have been assembled. It therefore has no merit in that direction. It is devoid of wit unless the aimless remark of some half-demented creature who interrupted a flow of rhetoric that is too far beyond his comprehension to give him delight be considered wit. You were one to join in the guffaw raised? It does not point a moral. It, however, contains a lot of poorly concealed venom and there can be no doubt of its author's desire to heap ridicule on one whose sole desire is the improvement of public outlook and a wish to conserve the economic interest of his native land. My writing could give offense to no well mentally balanced person, and it surprises me, sir, that you, an ex-teacher, should give space to the ribaldry of a clown.

Personally I am not much concerned that such fellows think it worth while to assail me in so cowardly a way, but for the set back given to higher ideals, to intellectual interests in the refining influence of nature study, I grieve. Do you consider it worth while to put a spoke in the chariot wheels of ideal progress? I fear your attitude towards the work I have attempted must incline me to believe you give countenance to the ruthless work of the skulking creature who has not yet aspired to respect for even the crude culture of our day.

Yours truly,
ARTHUR ENGLISH.

"STAFFORD'S DRUG STORE NEWS" RESOURCEFULNESS

M. Coty, the head of many great perfume factories in France, experienced great difficulty in making his start toward success. When on a new chemical he discovered a new mixture of unusual merit, but he peddled the process in vain to all the leading perfume makers.

Turned away from his last chance, he instantly decided upon an unusual plan of action. Just as he was leaving, he dropped on the floor a small unstoppered bottle containing his entire stock of the precious liquid. A few days later he received a brief letter from the company. It said:

"We cannot longer refuse to help you. The mixture you found has made of this office a veritable paradise. Come and see us."

To this interesting incident M. Coty attributes his success. Those who look beneath the surface, will understand that the dropping of the bottle simply manifested an ability to think clearly, decide positively, and act immediately. In short, M. Coty possessed the qualifications for an executive.

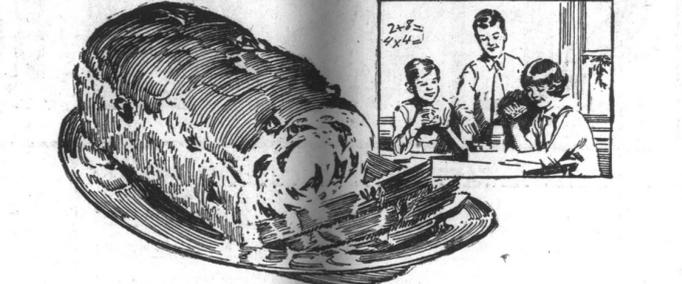

Why not make your home, office or any place you may be working be also a veritable paradise. It's very hard to do this without your enjoying good Health and Strength, and thousands of people are neglecting themselves every day by not being careful enough over their Body. If you require perfect Health and Strength you will find nothing better to restore it than Eric's Tablets.

The proof of this being the very best preparation on the market is that by the end of this year the sale will be over Ten Thousand Bottles.

remarks fell on deaf ears or were greeted with a polite cynicism that we had almost given up hope of the public realizing the danger. But the peril is now apparent; those who run may read; it is written so big over the present crisis, that the fact is, as Zinovieff boasts, that the past election was fought on the Communist issue. Washington Letter

(By Our Own Correspondent)

Nov. 14th, 1924.

Henry Cabot Lodge, for thirty-one years Massachusetts Senator and up to the time of his death Republican leader in the Upper House, died at Charleston Hospital here late Sunday night after battling heroically against the inevitable since receiving on Wednesday, the day following the election, the stroke from which he succumbed. His death, besides removing from United States Legislative circles one of the most outstanding public figures in many generations, brings about unforeseen changes in the legislative branch of the government machinery. In addition to being leader in the Senate for the Republican party, the deceased statesman was chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee and his passing is the signal for much speculation here as to who will be the ones chosen to fill the vacancies he has left.

As Senator for Massachusetts it is freely stated that Mr. Lodge's successor will be William M. Butler, chairman of the Republican national committee, and who it is said would have been senatorial nominee in Massachusetts this year but for the fact that the party depended on him to lead it to success at the polls. Butler would attain his seat in the Senate by appointment under the Massachusetts State law which authorizes the Governor of that state to appoint a successor to Senator Lodge who shall hold office until the next biennial election which does not take place till November, 1926.

The mantle of the chairmanship of the foreign relations committee falls on the shoulders of Senator Borah of Idaho according to the rule of seniority prevailing in the Senate and it is generally agreed that in this important office the new incumbent will add considerably to his already wide reputation as a statesman and diplomatist. Next to Senator Lodge himself, perhaps Borah has been a prominent figure in international politics in recent years as any man in the United States Legislature. As chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, however, he is not calculated to contribute greatly to the peace and contentment of the Republican household. His views regarding foreign relations are known to be widely divergent from those of Secretary Hughes in many important essentials. Borah was one of the Republican "irreconcilables" who prevented the ratification of the Versailles treaty containing the League of Nations covenant while he has also, in the past, vigorously favored the recognition of Russia. If Hughes remains in the cabinet and Borah gets the chairmanship of the foreign relations committee, President Coolidge may at times find it difficult to decide which one to harken to on matters concerning foreign relations. For the leadership of the party in the Senate Senator Wadsworth of New York and Senator Curtis of Kansas are being discussed.

But one woman out of twelve who offered themselves as candidates for congressional honors in the recent election won her seat. Ordinarily, this would have been accepted as unmistakable evidence of general disapproval of female representation in the national legislature, but the suffragette forces in the United States are determined not to regard such a temporary setback as a final blow to their political hopes and aspirations. Already they have a logical reason to advance why so many of their representatives went down to defeat—they represented the Democratic and Progressive causes. Like LaFollet herself, the women have only just begun to fight for their "rightful" place in the halls of the nation's government.

Estimates prepared by the Budget Department for the running of the Federal Government during the fiscal year beginning July 1st next place the cost at three billion dollars which is half a billion less than that for the current fiscal year. This is exclusive of the running of the Post Office Department which it is expected will pay for its own administration.

When United States Consul Imbrie was murdered in Persia, the Persian Government agreed to pay to this country the sum of $110,000 to defray the expenses of sending a warship to bring back the body. In a note delivered to the Persian Government on Monday last, the State Department proposed that the $110,000 payment would be devoted to the establishment of a trust fund to be utilized for the education of Persian students at institutions of higher learning in the United States. The answer of the Persian Government to this generous proposal is being awaited before precise arrangements for the establishment of this fund can be made.

President Coolidge has recommended the expenditure of more than $1,000,000 on new Embassy and consulate premises in Tokio. This should go a long way towards cleansing the Nippon mind of the rancor which the United States stand on Japanese immigration has engendered. Washington authorities who have originated the Tokio project look upon it as an expression of confidence in the indestructibility of America's amieable relations with Japan. The important point is, will the Government of the Mikado so regard it?

An economic world survey designed to supplement the purposes of the Dawes plan and to stimulate production, revive industry and restore international trade has been announced here by President Willis H. Booth of the International Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Booth said: "If a constructive program can be outlined which will meet the approval of the business interests of all countries to which international trade is a matter of vital importance, the progress of reconstruction will be measurably hastened."

The modernizing of fifty steamers of the government's cargo fleet began this week with the granting by the Shipping Board of authority for the installation of internal combustion engines in these ships. This installation will cost in the vicinity of fifteen million dollars and will, it is said, give the American merchant marine the largest fleet of dieselized vessels under one control.

A case unique in American history came to court in the District of Columbia to-day in the application for an injunction filed by a citizen of New York, William H. Shearer, a naval expert, against the Secretary of the Navy seeking to prevent the destruction of the battleship Washington, which is now 85 per cent. completed, and according to official schedule, to-morrow to be used as a target and sunk by high explosives and gun fire from the Battleship Texas of the Chesapeake capes. The building of the Washington cost the taxpayers of the United States in the neighborhood of $35,000,000.

The plaintiff in the action for the injunction claims that the armament limitation which has never been properly ratified by the other nations and that it has not been faithfully executed by them, notably by Great Britain and Japan. The further claim is made that by the destruction of the Washington the United States would reduce its naval power below the point of relative strength as in theory prescribed by the treaty owing to the failure of other governments to comply faithfully with it. It is expected that the Court will grant a temporary injunction and set the case for hearing on its merits.

It begins to look as if the Roosevelt penchant for the Navy Department is really traceable to an hereditary streak. It is said that Theodore Douglas Robinson, nephew of the late President Roosevelt is of the post of Assistant Secretary of the Navy which was vacated by Theodore Roosevelt, Jr. to undertake his unsuccessful campaign in the recent election. The job was also held at one time by the late President Roosevelt.

The proportionate increase in divorces in the United States during 1923 was greater than that in marriages. The marriages in that year amounted to 1,223,825 while the divorces totalled 165,133 or an increase over the previous year of 11 per cent.

The outstanding feature of Washington's observance of the sixth anniversary of Armistice Day was a visit to Arlington Cemetery by President Coolidge who placed a wreath on the tomb of the unknown soldier. The President was accompanied by detachments of the three armed forces of which he is the commander-in-chief.

Representative John Philip Hill of Baltimore, in order to prove that the framers of the Volstead Act did not intend to include beverages made for home consumption when they prohibited the manufacture of intoxicants, made himself some wine and cider recently and got arrested. On Tuesday the court at Baltimore ruled that Representative Hill was not guilty of a breach of the Volstead Act although his manufacture contained more than the minimum of alcohol stipulated by the Act. While this interesting test was being made by the heroic and patriotic Congressman in Baltimore, eight persons were lying dead a few miles away in a Virginia town as a result of drinking home brew.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon had a conference with President Coolidge on Wednesday when it was agreed that no tax legislation would be sought when congress meets for the short session. Pressure is being brought to bear from some quarters for a special session to deal with tax amendment legislation but it is held that until the new congress meets any discussion on the matter would be futile.

Washington, the capital city of "Dry" United States has five thousand boot-leggers actively engaged in supplying drink to the thirsty. With a population of about four hundred and fifty thousand, this means that one out of every ninety people in Washington has a bootlegger. Of this number Assistant United States Attorney Hart, who has charge of Prohibition prosecutions, claims only two hundred and fifty have escaped the clutches of the law as first offenders.

America's two most powerful organized industrial groups—Labor and Agriculture are arrayed against each other in the child labor amendment fight, the most momentous issue that has come before the country since Prohibition and Woman Suffrage occupied the national political stage. At the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor to be held at El Paso, Texas, on Monday, Nov. 17, plans will be formulated for a final desperate attempt to influence the vote of the forty-three state legislatures which have yet to ratify or reject the amendment. It must be ratified by three fourths of the states or thirty-six altogether, in order to become law and as every farming state and a few others are opposed to it, there is little doubt of what the outcome will be.

Western Canada Swept by Icy Blast
TERRIFIC FROSTS IN PRAIRIE CITIES.

Mercury at Calgary Dropped to Four Below, With Winnipeg and Edmonton Showing Zero—Dominion Records for Cold Snaps Likely Shattered.

Mid-winter conditions prevail in Western Canada. An icy blast swept from the north over the prairie states last night, and at the peak of the cold snap Regina thermometers registered twenty-one below zero.

This figure is abnormal for mid-winter, and quite likely has not before been duplicated in the Dominion since official records have been kept. Calgary reports four below the cypher, with Winnipeg and Edmonton at zero.

From Toronto east and through the Maritime Provinces fair weather was recorded during the past twenty-four hours, with an average temperature of 45. The extraordinary fine period experienced in Cape Breton since the beginning of November continues, with no forecast of an immediate break by meteorological experts.

The minimum temperature recorded in Sydney on Thursday was 39, with a maximum of 57, the best in Canada, with the exception of Halifax which reports a maximum of 58.—Sydney Post, Nov. 14.

In literal sense, a revolutionary car! What other term could describe the Chrysler Six—a car that gives a high gear speed range of 2 to over 70 miles per hour—that weighs only 2705 pounds and yet can be driven in comfort 60 miles an hour on a cobbled street or a rutted road.

Never has there been a car within many hundreds of dollars of the Chrysler price, that could begin to do the things it does.

Never has there been a car that combined such startling performance with such economy of investment, maintenance and operation.

Political Dementia

Since the defeat of the Coaker team in the Bonavista by-election the Fishermen's Advocate appears to have become altogether unbalanced, and its torrent of abuse of all and sundry who have dared to think for themselves and refused to come to heel at the call of their former chieftain has increased in volume and turbidness week by week.

Whatever allowance may be made for this outburst against political opponents, nothing can justify the outrageous attacks which are being made upon private individuals. In the last issue but one it made use of a wild rumor to concoct a conspiracy in which it attempted to involve members of the Government.

The same article contained an unwarranted attack on a Minister of the Gospel. "Is it any wonder," says this enemy of free thought and independent action, "that the Methodist congregation of Bonavista is hourly confronting their pastor with the part he played on October 27th when the Boozing Law was endorsed by the Bonavista District?"

What an awakening this prohibition clergyman of Bonavista will receive as the next twelve months pass into time! It has been said that on former occasions Sir W. F. Coaker has not hesitated to make bitter attacks on clergy who have refused to come to heel at his bidding, but here it would seem that an attempt is made to undermine the esteem and respect in which a pastor is held by his flock. No doubt the parishioners will pay little heed to such utterances, at the same time it is an outrage that a gentleman should be made the object of attack by a politician whose passion is aroused because of a chastisement administered by the electorate.

It would show better taste if Sir William Coaker kept his grievance to himself. Kicking against the pricks is not likely to arouse public sympathy; these attempts to intimidate reveal only too clearly the real character of the man, and their only effect is to give the people of Bonavista cause to be thankful that they were saved the indignity of having to submit to the domineering of a bully. The issue of the Advocate published on Friday is a continuance in a more vitriolic form of attacks on private citizens and public officials. Some of the lurid remarks are in striking contrast to the scriptural expressions with which the pages are sprinkled, and the use made of the Creator's name in connection with the demands for vengeance does not savour of Christianity nor is it in keeping with one's ideas of the ordinary rules of propriety.

Come to the Lecture Room of St. Michael's Church to-morrow (Wednesday) night and enjoy a pleasant evening. Mr. Colley is repeating his lecture on "New York," which will be illustrated by lantern slides. There will also be a musical programme, and at the close "the cup that cheers." All this for only 40c.—nov18,24

TRAIN NOTES.—Sunday's west bound express arrived at Port aux Basques on time. The express went out at 1 p.m.

Conditions North Best for Years

Mr. W. J. Budgen, of 'Knawling', who returned by yesterday's express from a business trip up north in the interests of his firm, reports business better than for the past four years, especially at Fogo, Twillingate and Little Bay Island. At the latter place on Friday and Saturday last the firm of Messrs. Jas. Strong, Ltd. had quite a large number of men and boys employed handling codfish. At one pier S.S. Stourholm was loading codfish in casks; at another pier the tern schooner Humourist was loading codfish in bulk for Malaga; at other piers local schooners were discharging the season's catch making a very lively scene. Besides this they had every available space covered with fish spread to the sun, and a number of men were packing herring. They expect to handle four thousand barrels this season. Mr. Wm. Strong is one of the busiest men in the country as he superintends all outside work, including shipbuilding. At the present time the preliminary work for a schooner of one hundred tons is underway, and she will be finished during the winter. Their premises are well lit by a Delco electric lighting plant. All along the coast is the hum of activity and everywhere with increased prosperity content has returned.

Magistrates Court

Four drunks arrested last night were discharged. A 22-year-old labourer taken in for safe-keeping was discharged. Three school boys, ages ranging from 13 to 14 years, appeared before the Juvenile Court this morning charged with the following offences: (1) Larceny of a coat, valued at $20.00, on Blackmarsh Road, valued at $30.00, on 13th November inst. (2) Larceny three buckets coal, valued at 80 cents, the property of Thos. Pottles, on November 15th. (3) Larceny of 1 pair laced boots, from schooner at Monroe and the value of the property of some unknown person. The boys who were second offenders having admitted their guilt were then sentenced to the penitentiary to receive three lashes of the birch.

Newfoundland Poultry Association

Secretary W. D. McCarter and Show Manager W. R. Butler are busy this week preparing for the Annual Poultry Show opening next Wednesday in the C. L. B. Armoury. Entries have to be completed by Saturday. The exhibition is under the distinguished patronage of His Excellency the Governor who will officially open the show Wednesday night at eight o'clock. The dogs and the committee have extended their work in order to encourage the breeding of Newfoundland dogs and prize ribbons will be given for straight haired dogs and the curly haired types. No other breed of dogs will be shown and many have already promised to enter their animals. The dogs will be shown Wednesday night, Thursday afternoon and Friday night. Another feature of this year's show will be the exhibition of silver and other foxes. Many folk have never seen live foxes and it is hoped to encourage more interest in the breeding of Newfoundland dogs and foxes and space has been allotted free to owners to show their animals this year. The Association has also been granted permission to hold their annual lotteries. Prizes this year are three model poultry houses and birds complete, which will be shown in the Armoury. The committee has arranged with Spencer Club to serve teas during the afternoon and night for the convenience of visitors. Judge J. P. Landry of the Canadian Government College will arrive by next Monday's express to make the awards.

NEW YORK IN THE GRIP OF AN ARCTIC GALE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17. New York shivered to-day, the coldest November 17 in the city in the records of the Weather Bureau. The sixty mile freezing blast that swept in from the Atlantic to put the thermometers at 18 degrees above zero at 7 o'clock this morning, brought death and destruction with it. Two persons, a man and woman died as a result of the storm. The first of the winter ships pounding furious seas and bucking headwinds fought their way into port several hours late and wearing the year's first coats of ice, and small craft were swept to sea with their half frozen crews ashore. Less havoc was wrought with trees and window panes.

MARKET LETTER.

It is a habit among business statisticians to measure the progress of trade by indexes of production. Conclusions as to business activity are based upon such statistical exhibits as pig iron production, the state of employment and the percentage of capacity at which mills and factories are running. As a matter of fact, such exhibits present only part of a picture of business conditions. They do measure the rate of production, but they take no account of consumption. And production and consumption do not always keep in step. In fact, they are quite hazy out of step at the present time. Bank clearings and freight car loadings are positive evidence of a high rate of general production. But statistics of production show it to be far below normal. A high rate of consumption and a low rate of production can result in an overabundance of goods. For nearly six months, the production of goods has been very much below normal while consumption and low cost of production have been well above normal. The excess demand has been met from accumulated stocks of goods from the period of activity earlier in the year. It would seem that productive activity would have to pick up with rapidity to avoid a shortage of goods late this year or early in 1925. And shortages of goods make for good business.

When a person needs an article and has the money to pay for it, he buys it. Two persons, a man and woman died as a result of the storm. The first of the winter ships pounding furious seas and bucking headwinds fought their way into port several hours late and wearing the year's first coats of ice, and small craft were swept to sea with their half frozen crews ashore. Less havoc was wrought with trees and window panes.

Supreme Court

(Before Mr. Justice Kent).
King vs. Leonard Gillespie Reid—Before a Special Jury.

After recess yesterday, Wm. Noel, Crown Lands Surveyor, was recalled and examined by Mr. Bradley. A copy of the plan submitted during the forenoon was exhibited to the jury and the location of the wheel marks to the jury pointed out by the witness. Twenty-four feet from the stumps the first wheel mark was located and ten feet further along both wheel marks were seen. From the westward the stumps could be seen a distance of about 400 feet. Witness could go west on the left side about 500 feet and still keep the bus in sight. On the right side the bus could be seen 500 feet from where it was parked. The stumps were about 10 inches apart.

Cross-examined by Mr. Howley, witness said he could not tell how far distant he could see the stumps in the night time. He said it is much more difficult to gauge distances in the night than in the day, even were it clear moonlight. Witness said it was about 180 feet from the front of the bus to where blood marks were seen on the road. When witness made plan of the position of bus the driver assured him that it was within six inches of the position it occupied on the night of the tragedy. Measurements of distances apart of objects in the court room as suggested in the forenoon were made by Mr. Noel.

George H. Parsons, examined by Mr. Hunt, said he attended the funeral of Donovan's. It concluded at 11.30. He first saw the bus in the second pole east of Donovan's. Witness stood near the entrance of the conveyance. Looking west he saw a car about 250 yards distant. He saw the lights but heard no horn. As the car came along he walked to the front of the bus but saw nobody there. The motor car was going very fast. He judged it passed at about 40 miles per hour. It was moonlight and he could see clearly. Witness saw car strike King. The deceased was slightly southeast of the bus, and near the centre of the road. About 20 or 30 feet from the front of the bus. He did not notice the car slow down when it hit King. He appeared to be hit by the part of the car between the left mudguard and the light. Between the spot where King was hit and where his body landed, about twenty feet intervened. When witness reached King he was dead. The witness saw the car in the bushes and hearing a cry for help went in that direction. Witness thought that King's body was not moved up to the time that the Inspector General had arrived. Capt. Whitty's body was located in the woods about 15 feet west of the upturned car.

Cross-examined by Mr. Howley, witness said he did not see King, Whitty or Lovett when he went to the front of the bus. It was the light of the car that enabled him to see King. Witness said that practically simultaneously with the hitting of King the motor car disappeared. Witness saw Leonard Reid after the accident. He was bleeding from the face, had no hat on and one of his shoes was gone. Witness saw no evidence of intoxication on him.

Re-examined by Mr. Hunt, witness could not give the distance from where King was hit to where the car left the road. He thought that King was about 20 or 30 feet from the bus when he was hit. He could not tell how far the upturned car was from the motor bus. Witness saw Leonard Reid after the accident but was not speaking to him.

Wm. B. Slaytor, Lieut. on H. M. S. Constance. Examined by Mr. Bradley, witness said he left his ship at 7 o'clock and went out to a house on Topsail Hill in Mr. Crosbie's car. There were 8 or 9 people from the city dining with the ship's company. Before dinner they smoked and had a cocktail. They did not get up from the table until near 11 p.m. They got into the motor cars and went away from town, then they turned back. Witness was sitting in the front seat with Leonard Reid and Cliff Peterson. In the rear seat there were five people. The car was stopped at the top of the hill (Topsail) as they could not get her into top gear. They did not succeed, and then proceeded only to stop again. A car passed while they were stopped. Reid fixed the car and they proceeded towards town. They did not stop long on the second occasion. Next they passed a car going in the same direction. Following they saw the tail light of a bus. They were then about 100 yards distant. Witness remembered his car had good headlights. After sighting the bus they slowed down, but nothing abnormal. He thought they were going at a safe speed. Witness has been a driver for the past twelve years. He gave it as his opinion that at that time the car was travelling about 30 miles per hour. Witness turned to talk to Lt. Burrows and then felt the car swerve. He turned to the front and saw a man near the left mudguard. The car still swerved to the right and then, until he regained consciousness he saw nothing. Witness did not know if the car had a speedometer or not. There was good visibility that night. Witness gave a list of some alcoholic drinks they had at the dinner. Mr. Reid had the same as witness except he was not sure if he (Reid) had any liqueur. Witness said he regained consciousness about 5 or 6 yards distant from the car. He ran towards the machine, at the same time shouting to some people on the road. He thought that Reid was pinned under the car, but he appeared from behind him. With assistance they lifted the car on one side and Burrows and Peterson crawled from under the car and removed the other side of the car and removed the hood of Duder, Harrison, Burrows and O'Callaghan. He only met Mr. Reid on the football field before that night. Crosbie was not a member of the team. The dinner lasted a long time, speeches were made. They had a cocktail, a glass of cherry and a whiskey and soda, whilst at dinner. In connection with the whiskey and soda Reid had a remarkably small drink, and the party were laughing at him for it. After this there was a port and a liqueur, but he was not sure that Reid had a liqueur. They then had another whiskey; he was passed the bottle; there was a small drink in it, and he split it with Reid. Drivers of cars are always nervous when driving with strange drivers, but he considered Reid a perfectly safe driver. The top gear is the one the car generally runs on. Reid got under the car and fixed the trouble, he was not long at it and after this everything was alright. In passing the car on the road coming out there was no difficulty. In his profession witness got training in visibility at sea, but not on the land. When he saw the bus first he did not know what it was. When he turned around to speak to the man behind him, he thought there was ample room to pass. Coming along that night, the car was hard down on the springs, and they were not getting the full benefit of the springs. Witness was not sure whether the car hit the mast on the side of the road, or not. The car gave a very noticeable swerve, but he would say the wheel went hard over. After the car turned over he called to Leonard Reid first, because he thought he would be pinned to the wheel as he was in the most dangerous position. After the accident there was a considerable amount of excitement. When the car slowed down, witness noticed it. The speed was not excessive in his opinion. In answer to Judge Kent, witness could not say whether or not the horn blew.

Claude Hall, sworn, and examined by Mr. Hunt. Witness lives in town and is in insurance business. On the night of Sept. 15th witness was on Topsail Road, coming home, about 11.30. He was in Mr. Peddiggrew's car. They had gone as far as Seal Cove. Coming out they saw Mr. Reid's car which was stopped and witness's car stopped to offer assistance; he did not know what was said but it was sufficient for them to go on. The same car passed them about midway between Octagon Pond and Donovan's. They knew it was the same car, from the number on it. They looked up the register list. They sometimes did this. Mr. Peddiggrew's car was going about 18 miles an hour. Witness could not be an authority on the speed of a car. Asked how fast Mr. Reid's car was going when it passed (Mr. Howley objects). Witness does not know how far it is from Octagon Pond to Donovan's; he did not know how long they were going from the Octagon to where Reid's car passed, he would not be able to say how fast it was going. Witness would say it was going about as fast again as their car was going. Witness's car continued on until they got to Donovan's where they were halted by Capt. Long. They saw a man lying in the road, dead. It was Lieut. King. The bus was on the road east of Donovan's gate, about near the second pole. Leonard Reid's car was in the ditch, further east, on the other side of the road; it was turned over. Witness saw the five other bodies, they were off the road. Whitty's body was about fifteen feet off the road. Witness was the first to handle Whitty's body. (Points on plan where body was found).

Cross-examined by Mr. Emerson. It would be extremely difficult to judge the speed of Reid's car when it passed. Mr. Peddiggrew pretty regularly went at the same speed as our that night. They took out the registered numbers of cars when Reid's passed. Up to the time they arrived there had been apparently no effort made to do anything with the bodies. Their car was the last to come out from Donovan's that night. He didn't hear the bus driver being instructed to go for a doctor, and can't say if he did go. When witness arrived at the scene there was much excitement, the most was apparent in the occupants of the Reid car. There were not many G. W. V. A. people around.

Harry Peddiggrew, sworn, examined by Mr. Hunt. Witness remembered being on the Topsail Road on the night of Sept. 15th. They left Upper Quillies for town at 10.30. On the top of Topsail Hill there was a car stopped and they stopped and offered assistance. Later the car passed witness, who was going about 18 miles an hour. Witness could not say how fast their car would be going. It would be less than five minutes after, they reached Donovan's when they were stopped and told there was a man dead and it was Lieut. King. After this witness went to the car which was upturned and helped to raise it. The body of Harrison was hauled out and witness began artificial respiration on it. Coming towards their own car after this, witness in company with Mr. Hall, saw an object off the road, and going to it Mr. Hall said it was Whitty's body. The body was found about five yards east of the stump. Hall was the first to step in to the body. Witness saw the stump that night. Before the bus was removed witness, with Jack McGrath and Patrick Grace, marked the place where King's body was found.

Edward Carey, sworn, examined by Mr. Bradley. Witness is a chauffeur. On the night of Sept. 15th he went to Topsail; he took out Mr. Charles Taylor, who lives about a mile this side of Topsail. Whilst stopped at Mr. Taylor's house, two cars passed, first Mr. Crosbie's and after Mr. Reid's. About a mile after leaving Mr. Taylor's house, coming to town, witness passed Mr. Reid's car, parked on the right side of the road. Witness stopped his car because there were five men on the road in front of Mr. Reid's car. As far as he could see there were eight men with the car on the road, which was Mr. Reid's. Two of them came over to witness's car and began to put out his lights. Mr. Duder came to witness and excused the men; Mr. Reid did the same. Mr. Reid asked witness where he could get water. The five men witness saw on the road were cherry, witness would say they were under the influence of liquor. Mr. Reid did not appear to be in the same condition.

Cross-examined by Mr. Howley. Witness would class five men drunk and Mr. Reid sober. Malcolm F. Chambers, sworn, examined by Mr. Bradley. On the evening of Sept. 15th, witness was in to Donovan's at a farewell party to Murphy. Mr. Marshall's bus brought them in. The bus stayed in all the time and the diner was on. When the bus left the yard it went to the road around the left corner, and parked well on the left. After waiting around a little while witness got in the bus. The seats in the bus run in three different ways. The tall light was on the car, two lights in the body of the bus and the head lights were on, dimmed. When witness got in the bus there were two men in it. Before he got in the bus he saw King, Whitty and Lovatt on the road, also Doody. Whilst witness was in the bus he heard a car pass the door. There was quite a commotion. There was the sound of the exhaust and a rush of wind, he could feel it in the bus. After this he heard Doody call out that King was killed. The night was a fine one and clear, but at this particular time the witness was not sure if the moon was shining. Just before witness got in the bus, King was about the centre of the road, Whitty was on his right and Lovatt on Whitty's right. All three men were going towards town. Just prior to hearing the rush of the car witness heard no horn or saw no lights. After getting out of the bus witness went directly to the body he saw in the road. Witness saw the Inspector General that night. The body of King had not been removed when he arrived. Witness saw Reid's car off the road, it lay at right angles to the road. After helping to get some men from under the car witness went to try and find Whitty. Witness was there when one of Whitty's check books was picked up, somewhere near the two stumps that were on the side of the road, the check book was somewhere to the south of the stumps. When he heard the rush he knew it was a car or bus.

Neil Patrick, sworn, examined by Mr. Hunt. On the night of Sept. 15th, witness went to a dinner party at Donovan's; they came out somewhere about midnight. They went in to Donovan's in the bus, which was in the yard when the dinner was over. When witness came down from the house the bus was parked on the side of the road and he got in; there were several in the bus at the time. Before getting in the bus witness saw King, Whitty, Lovatt and Doody on the road. After getting in the bus there was a car passed along; then suddenly there was a silence, and he got out and saw King's body. The last time witness saw the men on the road was about two or three minutes before the car came, they were on the right side of the bus, at the time. When they came out of Donovan's there was no cheating, everything was quiet. Witness knew nothing of the motor car until it was in the ditch.

Cross-examined by Mr. Howley. Witness could not remember the names of all who were in the bus when he got in, but there were Grouchy, Grace, Woodman and McGrath. The bus was about thirty or forty yards on the town side of Donovan's gate. Whitty and King were on the right of the door of the bus; as to their movements after, witness did not know.

Horatio Grouchy, sworn, examined by Mr. Bradley. Witness is a chauffeur for Marshall's garage, he drives a bus. On the night of Sept. 15th he went to Donovan's with a party of 14 G. W. V. A. men; whilst the dinner was on the bus was in the yard. The bus is 23 feet long by 80 inches wide. After dinner witness brought the bus to the road, where his party got on board. At the time there were tall lights, parking lights and lights in the bus. After bringing the bus to the road witness stayed in it. He saw three men on the road to the right and ahead. Witness did not remember seeing them move, they appeared to be getting a smoke. Shortly after witness heard a rush and afterwards he saw what caused the rush. He saw a man hit, and he saw the man pitch and fall about ahead of the radiator of the bus. Witness could not say how far the man went before he pitched. Witness then jumped from his seat, and ran to where the car was, he never looked at the dead man. Witness at this time did not know what had happened to Whitty or Lovett he saw no lights of the car or heard a horn.

The car was bottom up in the ditch at right angles to the road. Witness has been on the scene since with his bus. He was sent for by the Inspector General, who asked him to put his bus in the same position as it was on the night of the accident. The impression of the three was on the grass and he thought they were pretty near the correct position. The bus went up in the yard and ran down the same as on the night of the accident. There are windows all around in the bus.

Cross-examined by Mr. Emerson. Witness has been driving a car for twelve years, and did much driving at night. It is difficult to judge distance at night. From the time witness saw the car until it went over the bank he could not judge the speed it was going. When they went out next day the place appeared somewhat different than it had been in the night. After coming out of Donovan's yard they would have to take a big sweep. The next day, when he went out he knew the number of poles that were there. Before the accident he saw Whitty and King standing near the bus. King was nearest the centre of the road; when he was hit, witness did not know who it was. He had no idea as to how fast the car was going. Shortly after hitting King it went over the road.

At this point the Court adjourned until ten o'clock this morning.

TO-DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.
 Midshipman Mellor, sworn, examined by Mr. Hunt, said he went to Hollands' at Topsail on the evening of the 15th inst. He went out in Mr. Leonard Reid's car. At the dinner all the guests partook of refreshments. When the car left Hollands' the party went west; then they turned to come towards town. Witness sat on the floor of the car. He could not see anything. The first thing he noticed was the car turning to the right and slowing down. The difference of the speed was enough to make him sit up and take notice. He saw the bus, it was then ahead of the car; but fairly close. After passing the bus he saw the men quite close. He could not form any opinion as to the speed of the car. It was going at the usual speed for the type of make. It did not seem to be going excessively. "Not at all excessive for safe driving. Somewhere around 80 miles per hour."

The three men appeared to be near the bonnet of the bus at the time the car reached the bus. Two of the men appeared to clear out of the way but the car struck the one on the left. Just before he was hit the car was swerved to the right and he appeared from the resulting jar to be hit by the mudguard. As the man went over the car continued on down and swerved over the bank. The front wheels stopped and the car appeared to swing round. Witness visited the scene on the following Wednesday. He saw the wheel marks where the machine left the road. Witness was knocked partly clear of the car. The car's lights were burning coming out the road. He thought Reid blew his horn as he would have noticed if he did not.

Cross-examined by Mr. Emerson. Donovan's in the bus, which was in the bank at the point where it hit King. The driver of Mr. Reid was not that of one under the influence of liquor. Witness saw Reid after the accident and he appeared dishevelled. Witness thought the speed when they passed the bus was quite reasonable. The back of the car swung towards St. John's when it went over the bank. It was pivoted more or less on the front wheels.

Ernest P. Woodman, sworn, examined by Mr. Hunt. Witness was a member of the G. W. V. A. party at Donovan's. The bus was parked in the yard until after dinner and then it was moved down to the left side of the road. Witness was not sure if there were lights on when he got into the bus. He sat on the back seat and was probably the first in. Those who came in were quiet. He heard no horn and the only warning of the car coming was the rushing sound. He saw nothing but heard a shout that somebody was killed. He got out and saw the body of King lying in front of the bus. Life was extinct. Witness saw a motor in a ditch on the right hand side of the road.

Cross-examined by Mr. Howley. Witness said he saw nobody on the road as he came down to enter the bus. He thought Neil Patrick came in the bus after him. Witness said it would be correct to say that Neil

Patrick was in the bus two or three minutes before Reid's car passed.

Leo O'Dea, sworn, examined by Mr. Bradley. Witness said he was at the G. W. V. A. party at Donovan's. After the dinner he went out in the yard. The bus was there but was moved to the left side of the road. Witness was not sure if there were lights on when he got into the bus. He sat on the back seat and was probably the first in. Those who came in were quiet. He heard no horn and the only warning of the car coming was the rushing sound. He saw nothing but heard a shout that somebody was killed. He got out and saw the body of King lying in front of the bus. Life was extinct. Witness saw a motor in a ditch on the right hand side of the road.

Cross-examined by Mr. Howley. Witness said he was standing by the road when Reid's car passed. He heard no noise.

Patrick was in the bus two or three minutes before Reid's car passed.

Leo O'Dea, sworn, examined by Mr. Bradley. Witness said he was at the G. W. V. A. party at Donovan's. After the dinner he went out in the yard. The bus was there but was moved to the left side of the road. Witness was not sure if there were lights on when he got into the bus. He sat on the back seat and was probably the first in. Those who came in were quiet. He heard no horn and the only warning of the car coming was the rushing sound. He saw nothing but heard a shout that somebody was killed. He got out and saw the body of King lying in front of the bus. Life was extinct. Witness saw a motor in a ditch on the right hand side of the road.

Cross-examined by Mr. Howley. Witness said he was standing by the road when Reid's car passed. He heard no noise.

Re-examined by Mr. Bradley. Witness said he was standing at the side of the bus when he reckoned the distance at which King's body lay.

Mr. Howley by permission re-cross-examined witness re the distance that King's body lay, and a comparison was made by objects in the Court room.

John Murphy, sworn, examined by Mr. Hunt. Witness said he went out to the dinner given him by the G. W. V. A., in Marshall's bus. The dinner was over at 11.30. He came out from the hotel at a quarter to twelve. The bus was then on the road. Witness spoke to some of the gathering in the yard and then went back where he remained until the news came of King being killed. He went down the road and remembered seeing the bus with its headlight in line with the second telegraph pole from the gate. (Witness explained from the stand and on coming out from the plan the position of the bus). He saw the headlights and those inside but did not notice the tall lights. He then went on and saw the body of King lying between 60 and 70 feet in front of the bus. On the right side of the road he saw the car in the ditch. It was about 90 or 100 feet ahead of the bus. It was overturned with the engine part nearest the road. Witness assisted in uprighting the machine and taking out the bodies. He recognized Clinton Duder. After which he went to look for Capt. Whitty. Then he saw a man in the woods with a lantern and going there he saw the body. It was lying about 50 or 70 yards on the Topsail side of the upturned car. Somebody was performing artificial respiration. The Inspector General and Supt. O'Neil then came on the scene, after which witness picked up a cheque book. (Cheque book exhibited and recognized as belonging to Capt. Whitty. Witness picked it up on the gully side of the stump on the side of the road. (Position of stump and place where cheque book was picked up pointed out on plan). There were mud marks on the book as it was found in the wheel track of the motor car. The track was quite plain made so by the assistance of a flashlight. The track was going towards witness could not tell how far it was apparent on either side of the stump. Cross-examined by Mr. Howley. Witness said he made an examination of the car tracks about 40 minutes after the accident. There were distinct marks of the car on both sides of the stump. Shown cheque book witness recognized a cheque drawn by G. J. Whitty in favor of Mrs. Hughes. It was dated Sept. 15, 1924, but the amount was not filled in. Re-examined by Mr. Hunt witness said Capt. Whitty organized the dinner.

Patrick Grace, sworn, examined by Mr. Howley. Witness was at Donovan's on the night of the 15th inst. The party arrived about 9 o'clock and the dinner ended about 20 minutes to twelve. When the witness went outside the bus was in the yard. He went into the hotel and on coming out again he saw the bus down on the left hand side of the road. There were four or five people in the bus when he arrived. He did not particularly remember any one on the road

To be Healthy— Watch your Kidneys

The kidneys play a vitally important part in your bodily health. They are the filters of your body—the purifiers of the blood stream.

If the kidneys are clogged with impurities, the blood becomes poisoned and, in turn, poisons the whole system.

Unless the trouble is checked, serious kidney and bladder derangements, often requiring the surgeon's knife, may result.

Avoid kidney trouble! Take Gin Pills. They will cleanse the kidneys, restore them to normal action, and bring you back to good health. Gin Pills rarely fail. Get a box to-day.

PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES

Nov. 1st.—Up very betimes, being called by Povey who comes with a message from our office and orders us to take a journey to the north where there are some matters to engage our attention. This a matter of the greatest annoyance to me being that there are divers entertainments in the city next se'night that I would go to, yet must do my duty by the office. But Lord, what a time of the year to send a man on such a trip and am like to catch my death of cold if I do not drown before I return. Going abroad, I meet Squibbs who tells me a strange tale of certain ladies of this city who do daily go for a walk in the early morning and is, methinks, that they may decrease their weight. Indeed, there do seem to be a great desire among women nowadays for a slimmer figure, and my wife torques many articles of food that she likes well, fearing that they do have a tendency to make her stout. But Lord, 'twould take more than the fear of increasing in weight that would make me forego foodstuffs that I have a great liking for. This night to the Strollers Halloween Dance in the new offices of the Tobacco Company, where a merry party assembled and have the pleasant evening possible. The floor a splendid one for dancing and everywhere the greatest jollity. So home and to bed, wearing a new bed suit with stripes of purple and green, mighty pretty.

Nov. 2nd.—Up very betimes, and Povey calling for me shortly after noon, we by motor coach to the Railway Station and leave by the express for Notre Dame Junction. A pleasant crowd there, among them Mr. Macfarlane, Mr. Legingham, Mr. Byrne and Mr. King, so we to the smoking compartment and there pass the day in interesting discourse. Anon we are joined by Mr. Bradley and Mr. Russell, the Minister of Works, with whom I did have discourse concerning divers matters of public import. So the time passes and at 9 of the clock Povey and I turn in for a little sleep, and indeed, 'twas little we did get with the train rolling on the tracks like a ship in a great sea. Anon, rising, and find it is 2 of the morning so I to get my baggage together and to wait in the smoking compartment until we reach Notre Dame, which we do at 2 of the clock. So to get aboard the train for Lewisporte but is filled with men come from the Humber and no room anywhere save on the brakes where I do stay till we arrive at Lewisporte. Poor Povey half asleep all the time, and groaning most miserably. Indeed he is the poorest traveller that ever I did make a journey with albeit high time he should be used to it. So to the hotel and to turn in for a few hours sleep.

Nov. 3rd.—Up very betimes and by motor boat to Exploits, the weather fine, and late in the season as it is not yet too late to appreciate the beauties of the scenery about me. Indeed, the long arm of Lewisporte Harbor and the myriad islands covered with trees that are tinted with the russet of autumn, are the prettiest sights that ever I have seen. But Lord, coming to Northern Harbor, I find it a yet prettier place such as I never thought could exist and am in need to spend all my next summer there, if I may get away that long from my wife. Mr. Manuel joining us there, we to Exploits and coming there, he takes Povey and me to his home where he would have us stay while we are in Exploits. Anon Povey and I to walk about the place, and are much amused by the actions of a girl whose hat blowing off, and Povey running after her to give it back, she takes to her heels and runs, and is, methinks, that Povey's face is more than she can stand, not being used to it as I am.

Nov. 4th.—Lay long, but rising at noon, to have our breakfast and go abroad, where Povey, seeing a motor boat, would have me go for a run up the harbor with him. This I am foolish enough to do, but Lord, the engine stopping when we are halfway out, Povey knows not what to do with it, and we are compelled to fly distress signals and seek a tow back to Exploits. So, I shall trust myself to him no longer being a worse doer than I did take him for, and yet was before such a fool that I did believe there could be no worse one.

Nov. 5th.—Slept the most of the day, being a high wind and cold, and I in no mind to go abroad.

Nov. 6th.—Called early, since Mr. Mannel and Mr. Osmond take us this day to Bridgeport. The weather grown mighty cold and a thick fall of snow, but we also, and to leave Exploits. But Lord, no sooner are we outside the harbour than it becomes so thick that we can see no land anywhere, and being without a compass are forced to find our way as best we may. Poor Povey becoming very seasick, we stow him away in the tent on the boat, where he begs us piteously to take him out and drown him. And, indeed, were it not for the fact that he sometimes lends me money I would have done it for I am growing tired of him as a travelling companion. After much sailing about in the sleet, and our faces raw by the exposure, we come to an island which we find on enquiry is Sampson's Island. There a lone fisherman that lives on that side of the island, takes us to his home, where we have an excellent meal and dry our clothes before his fire. So borrowing a compass, we again leave port and try to make our destination I am now in the greatest possible discomfort, having sat in a pool of water, and the seat of my breeches soaked through so that I may sit down only with the greatest difficulty. Povey, however, is in much worse case and lies in the bottom of the boat praying that he may die. However, after another two hours, we again reach land, but this time find ourselves on Cottle's Island, and there find that our compass is 2 points out and has been misdirecting us. Anon after more sailing about, which time we are nigh blinded with sleet, we come to Bridgeport and Paul Small takes us to his shop where we dry ourselves about his fire. Anon, being somewhat dried, we walk to Moreton's Harbour, through the snow, and my feet soaked through. But what maddens me most is Povey, he complaining all the time of the cold, and makes me sorry I did not drown him on the way over. Anon, coming to Moreton's Hr., we separate, Povey and I going to our Inn and change our clothes. Anon, going by invitation to Fred Osmond's home, we make merry there all the evening. His little son play the pianoforte for us and do amaze us mightily by their skill. Anon home and to bed feeling mighty tired.

Nov. 7th.—Up betimes and abroad, the walking very sloppy so I wear my long rubber boots, which being worn cause me to slip a great deal. So to get through our business and then by boat to Tizzard's Harbour, where we are mighty well entertained by Mr. Boyd. I do learn this day by despatches out of St. John's how there do be a great strike there of longshoremen and truckmen and nothing moving about the street, which is a sad condition of affairs at a time when the country is once more getting on its feet. This night to dine with Mr. Boyd off some fine tirs which are sea birds skin to the ptarmigan and the most delicious eating, so much so that I ate more than ever I did in my life before. So to play at cards awhile and then to bed.

Wedding Bells

FIELD—DOWDEN. A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Thomas's Church, on November 12th, by Rev. J. B. Elliott, when Mr. Donald Dowden led to the altar Miss Mabel Field, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. Field, Torbay Road. The bride, who was prettily attired in a fawn costume with hat to match and fox fur, was given away by her brother, W. V. Field, and was attended by her sister, Miss Laura Field, who was attired in a blue costume with hat to match and fox fur. The groom was ably supported by Mr. W. Cook. After the ceremony the wedding party motored around Quidi Vidi Lake to the home of the bride's parents, where the wedding supper was held, after which the bride and groom left for their future home, Logy Bay Road. The bride was the recipient of many valuable and useful presents, testifying to the esteem in which she was held. We wish Mr. and Mrs. Dowden many years of happiness.

CRIME BOOKS.

The wondrous fascination of crime is manifest in books that swamp the nation—their printers have a rest. Time was when novels grey were looked upon as trash; the story of crime would feel the lash. The authors who were handing out yarns of people killed possessed no decent standing in any writers' guild. But we have progressed further than that. I had my duds, I guess, and tales of bloody murder come recking from the press. And not by outcast blighters are all these stories writ, but grave and stately writers drip blood and make a hit. They seem to strike their true gait in these ferocious times; from chronicles of Newgate they dig forgotten crimes. They interview the warden of every gloomy pen, and poor old Lizzie Borden is featured once again; the hangman has his inning, at last he's wearing bells, and with a smile that's winning his grisly tale he tells. With bones in mildewed baskets our authors come, in crowds; they're rifling ancient caskets and pawing mildewed shrouds. To make the sad world gay, and grab unpleasant gain they resurrect the slayer and disinter the slain. The old historic killers come grinning from the tomb, and we are swamped with thrillers that deal in blood and doom. And it is sad that writers who might be penning tracts must hand us tales of fighters and gore in catarracts.

Just Folks.

By EDGAR GUEST.

THE COMING YOUTH.

Time was I flung across the field a ball with certain aim and true. But now a youngster aims to rise. The thrill of sport which once I knew; And I could run with flying feet And fling myself to reach the base Spurred by the zest for victory sweet. But now a youngster has my place.

Time was in leather I have dressed And called the signal: "twelve, six, nine!" And held the ball against my breast Endeavoring to break the line; I, too, have shared the battle's thrill And tasted of the stirring chase. But now my years are soft and still And there's a youngster in my place.

Ay, there's a youngster in my place! The field is his, the grand stand mine. I could not keep the rapid pace. Nor longer hold the battle line: Little I dreamed, in days of old, That somewhere was a babe new born I should make way for and behold Wearing the uniform I'd worn.

My place! How feebly do we cling To glory and the strength we boast! Always there lies the shadowing Of one who soon shall take our post; Behind us he is pressing on Although we never see his face. That eager, younger, stronger one Destined some day to take our place.

London Letter

By PANTON HOUSE, for the Canadian (House Press).
LONDON.—Visitors from Overseas who happened to be in the neighbourhood of the House of Parliament at the right moment on October 13 were able to witness no less than two of the little pageants which London is always producing, as though for their special benefit. Each had its origin in custom centuries old.

To the 65 Million who have bought
Ingersoll Watches

QUALITY and big value are not the only reasons that Ingersoll sales have increased each year until the total sales have reached the stupendous figure of 65,000,000.

Another big reason is that you users of Ingersolls have never hesitated to say a good word for them. You have told your friends, you have told us—and we want you to know that we appreciate it.

One was the arrival of Sir Alfred Bower, the Lord Mayor-elect, with his train of Sheriffs, Aldermen and Corporation officials, to receive from the Lord Chancellor his Majesty's formal approval of the City's choice. The famous golden coach, which is one of the glories of the Lord Mayor's Show, does not appear on these minor occasions; but the ordinary City carriages, with gorgeous gold-laced, silk-stocked footmen holding on behind, and scarcely less gorgeous personages inside in fur and scarlet, make an impressive sight. This visit of ceremony concludes "after compliments," as they say in the East) with the circulation of the "loving cup," twined with flowers, after the fashion which Canadians who partook of the City's hospitality this summer will remember.

On the same day (the one on which the Michaelmas sitting of the Law Courts begins) his Majesty's judges and counsel attend service at Westminster Abbey, and afterwards proceed on foot across the road to the House of Lords, where they take "breakfast" (really lunch) with the Lord Chancellor. This is the one day in the year when the general public has a chance of seeing an assortment of judges in their various robes of scarlet and ermine, black and gold, or purple, black and white,—except, of course in the event of some great reception like those which took place during the visit of the Canadian Bar.

LONDON'S FAVORITE RESORT.

Of the London places of interest which keep an account of their visitors, the Zoo is an easy first. During the holiday months of August and September this year, the Gardens were inspected by no less than 783,788 persons—an increase of 215,959 compared with the corresponding two months of 1923. The great new aquarium, opened for the first time this spring, is already one of its most popular features. In six months' residence some of the fish have become uncannily tame. Conger-eels—great thirty-pound brutes capable of "taking cargo" when hauled into a small boat—not only thrust their heads out of the water and feed from the keeper's fingers, but positively allow themselves to be poked up, Crawfish, bigger than lobsters, climb half out of their tanks and gently grip the hand that offers food, and carp will suck the human finger. (The golden carp captured recently and brought to the Zoo after twelve years' freedom in the Thames, of which we wrote a few weeks ago, has unfortunately died.) A hawk-bill turtle, who could nip off half a hand with a single bite if he felt that way inclined, allows a friend to shake his flipper.

When H.M.S. Hood came home with the Special Service Squadron, she brought with her two Canadian beavers to join the little colony already in the Gardens. Teddie of Toronto has made yet another conquest, for Floss (the lady of the newcomers) has deserted her mate in his favour. Somebody—we hope it was not a reader of this column—with the very best intentions, nearly made an end of "Old Bill," the walrus not long ago by presenting him with a pound of biscuits. Biscuits, it seems, are poison to the Walrus tribe, and drastic measures, including half a pint of castor oil, had to be taken. The engaging creature is now himself again, and doing well on a daily 40 pounds of fresh cod, with seal-blubber specially imported from the arctic regions. He is now too heavy to shift for weighing, and the only way in which a record of his growth can be kept is by measuring him at intervals around the waist.

GETTING READY FOR CHRISTMAS.

London, which makes the finest toys in the world, is getting ahead with the supply of rocking-horses for Christmas presents. A single factory turns out in a year 150,000 horses on rockers or wheels, of which 98 per cent. are dapple-grey and the odd two per cent. brown or cream. During Queen Victoria's reign a certain number of cream-colored rocking-horses were wanted, her cream-colored ponies being famous, but now the painting of dapple-greys is a trade in itself. The chief "rocking-horse spotter" in this firm can "dapple a small grey" in seven minutes, and he does nothing else.

A Restless Inventor

"Sir Percy Scott's claim to fame is that he was one of a small group of men who had made the British Navy a first-rate instrument. A sign when it was needed in 1914," says the Manchester Guardian. "It was not all that it should have been, but Sir Percy Scott had done more than his share to make it as good as it was. "Conservatism of mind is the curse of a navy or of an army. The frame of mind which opposed such an idea as that of the tank, instead of leaping at it in an eager spirit of hope and inquiry, deserves to lose, and, if it were not overruled by keener intelligence, would actually lose any war. "He had the inventive bent in mechanical things, and he turned it to such good use in gunnery that his devices gave a lead to the whole world; when he could no longer improve naval guns he took to improving lawn-mowers or anything else improvable that came his way. He was of the school of Lord Fisher, restless, innovating, full of resource."

Joffre's Sleeping Time

Lord Bertie, in his diary, which the Morning Post is publishing, wrote on December 25, 1914:—"It is related here of a recent visit of Poincare to the Front that Joffre, being bored, said: 'I am accustomed to rest and, if possible, to sleep from 1.30 to 3 p.m.—so I pray thee excuse me.' Poincare looked much astonished at this want of respect, and was about to remonstrate when he was cut short by Joffre's observation that as he had no political ambitions he did not care whether people thought his conduct odd or not."

Besco Gets
One Big Order;
After Another.

Announcement that 1300 tons of wire nails will be rolled at the British Empire Steel Corporation's plant was made by the general manager of Besco steel properties to the Record recently.

The nail tonnage is the result of business secured by the Bescoes sales agent, Roy MacKean, formerly of this city, on a recent business trip through the Canadian Northwest. Buyers in the Canadian west were so impressed with the quality of the samples shown by Mr. MacKean that he was able to book business for 1300 tons of wire nails.

This amount is in stock at the steel company's mill here, and will be shipped to the buyers at once. In the meantime the steel plant has started two open hearth furnaces preparatory to rolling the 1300 tons of nails to replenish the stock piles.

General manager Kelly also informed the Record that Besco had submitted a figure for a 13,000 ton rail order, to the New Zealand Government. "We have made the price exceptionally low in an effort to get this business," said Mr. Kelly. "Of course, we must meet the competition of Belgium, Britain, France and Germany in this tender, but we are hopeful of getting this order."—Sydney Record.

Murderer Hight To Change Plea

Unfrosted Minister Switches from Insanity to Not Guilty.

Mount Vernon, Illinois, Oct. 30.—(United News).—Lawrence M. Hight, one-time minister of a Methodist church at Ina, Ill., who pleaded insanity several weeks ago, when arraigned on an indictment charging him with poisoning his wife and with complicity in poisoning the husband of a woman with whom he was in love, has decided to plead not guilty. Hight's decision was reached late on Wednesday following a report of alienists who pronounced him mentally sound.

The plea was made after his attorneys had lost their motions for a change of venue for the unfrosted minister and for a continuance—in his sanity trial, which was to have started Wednesday.

Judge Kern dismissed the jury Friday, when the motion for a separate trial for the two confessed prisoners will be argued. Mrs. Elsie Sweetin, who confessed to poisoning her husband at the instigation of Hight so that they might marry, has requested that she be tried alone. Judge Kern suggested November 17 as the date for the trial, but final decision will not be made until the option for separate trials has been decided.

when he got in the bus but there were three or four on the road when he came down. Witness with others ran from the bus towards King's body. In other words it lay so far ahead that one would involuntarily run to get there quickly. Two or three men went around King's body. It was lying across the road. The feet were facing towards town. Witness picked up a card case, (card case put in evidence) but did not remember what he did with it until passing it over to Inspector General Hutchings. After finding that King was dead witness went back to Donovan's and subsequently to the Reid car. The first one he saw was Paterson then Reid. The latter was on the town side of the car. With other survivors of some of his own party they went to the car. Witness thought it must have been a half hour after the accident that the Inspector General arrived. King's body had not been disturbed, except the head, up to that time. Witness was one of the first to meet the Inspector General. Capt. Whitty's body was found in the woods about 50 or 60 feet from the upturned car and may possibly have been 10 feet distant. The body was in a crouch. Cross-examined by Mr. Howley. Witness said it was not until a lull in the excitement occurred that the body of Capt. Whitty was found. There had intervened an examination of King's body, and the getting out of the bodies from under the Reid car.

Harold Brown examined by Mr. Bradley. Witness who is a telegrapher was a member of the G.W.V. A dinner party. They proceeded there in a bus, driven by Mr. Grouchy. The dinner lasted until somewhere about 11 p.m. After dinner the party sat around and had a few songs. They decided to leave at a quarter to twelve. The bus was on the left side of the road and about two car length east of the gate. The left wheels were quite near the gate. Witness was in the kitchen at Donovan's when he was first told of the accident. When he came down he noticed that the tail light was on and also the roof lights inside. He thought the head lights were also on. He saw the body of King about the same length ahead of the bus, with the bus lights shining on it. The body lay in line with the road, head towards Topsail. When witness reached him he found King was dead. He then went to the Reid car which was upturned off the road. With some help they removed the bodies.

Cross-examined by Mr. Howley, witness said he saw Leonard Reid after the accident and as far as he could judge he was sober. He did not see Wm. John Long examined by Mr. Hunt. Witness was at the dinner party at Donovan's. Witness first knew of the accident when someone came in to the hotel and said a man was killed. He ran down and noticed the bus. It was standing near the second telegraph pole with tail lights on. He saw King's body lying about 30 feet in front of the bus. Witness then went across the road and met Cliff Patterson whom he took to Donovan's hotel. The latter went back to the Reid car which was lying in a swamp, head towards Donovan's. The car was further towards town than King's body. It was off the edge of the road about 5 feet. At first after the accident there was much excitement. Witness saw the members of the Reid party. Mr. Reid appeared excited.

Cross-examined by Mr. Emerson, witness said Mr. Reid appeared somewhat excited but showed no signs of intoxication whatever. Inspector General Hutchings examined by Mr. Hunt. Witness said he received a message at twenty minutes past twelve on the morning of the accident saying that there was an accident out at Donovan's and that two men had been killed. He proceeded there in his car with the superintendent and a couple of constables. He arrived on the scene at 12.40. First on the scene he saw the bus near Powers house, coming toward town. Mr. Grace jumped out of the bus and directed the Inspector General to where the body of Clinton Duder and Burrows lay. There was a crowd around and he asked what happened. Lt. Steator came up and said he could tell. Steator shouted to Reid, who came on the scene. He was questioned by the I. G. and said he was coming out the road and saw the tail light of a car. He hauled out and saw in front some men, and in trying to escape he went over the bank. He thought that Reid had some liquor in. The witness went and viewed the body of O'Callaghan. Next he saw Harrison, then Whitty's and following this he was shown the body of Lt. King. The latter was lying on the north side of the road with the feet inclined towards the center. Witness made a cross on a fence to mark the location where the body lay. (Plans previously put in evidence were explained to the jury by the witness.) The distance from stump to where King's body was found was 55 feet. From a blood mark to a point opposite the stump was 50 feet. The spot where Whitty's body was found was 66 feet from the stump and twelve feet from a motor car track on the south side of the road, and 19 feet from a tree that had been barked by the car. The stumps were on the gutter side of the road and twelve feet from them there was a road leading towards the station. The car had been up-present when witness saw it. He was picked up by Mr. Murphy. It was picked up in a car track about 12 inches distant from the stump. Witness came back to police station at about 2 a.m. and visited the scene in the morning at 6.30. An examination of the ground was made. Two motor tracks were seen running from the stumps towards Topsail. Distance about 107 feet. From stumps towards town for a distance of 24 feet there was not a sign of a track. For the next 24 feet or so a track showed until it disappeared over the embankment. The marks west of the stump appeared to get thicker as it approached the stump. The track found near the east side of the stump was made by the right wheel of the car. Witness examined the opposite side of the road and saw the marks of the bus wheels. The impression of the inside wheels were three feet in from the edge of the grass. They were from Donovan's gate to the second pole and further. From the first to the second pole there was a distance of 77 feet. Witness saw some blood

Supreme Grand Lodge S.U.F. in Session

The Annual Session of the Supreme Grand Lodge of the Society of United Fishermen opened last evening in the S. U. F. Hall, Water Street. All the officers with the exception of the Deputy Grand Master, Comp. Dr. Anderson, of Heart's Content, were at their posts. Everyone regretted the absence of the genial doctor, who had arranged to attend but was unfortunately detained at the last moment. During the past few days delegates have been arriving and yesterday's express brought Companions A. Dean and H. Dean, representing Maple Leaf Lodge, Whitney Pier; Companions L. R. Hollett and C. R. Gardiner, representing Grand Lodge, North Sydney, and Companion J. Stratton from Mitchell Lodge, Sydney Mines. We extend to these delegates a hearty welcome and trust their stay in the city will be pleasant—so pleasant that they will want to return again next year. These brethren from across the Gulf are keenly interested in the Order and are very desirous of its progress during the past few days. Of the many societies we have in this country we understand that the S.U.F. is the only one of its kind that has its origin in Newfoundland; therefore it is natural to expect all Newfoundlanders who are eligible should get busy and join its ranks. Communications are coming in from various Canadian towns seeking information with a view of securing a branch of this society. Wake up, brethren of the S. U. F. and show "that good can come out of Nazareth."

LARGE AUDIENCES DELIGHTED AT THE MAJESTIC LAST NIGHT.

The Majestic Theatre scored another big hit last night, in the presentation of Baroness Orzy's wonderful novel "I Will Repay." The story is millions of readers already know, has many gripping situations, and those who saw it were fascinated by the excellence of the production. Apart from the real story itself, the plot was excellent. The comedy "Hurricane" though somewhat hurried, was very amusing. To-night the same bill will be repeated, and every reader of this column will be well repaid by seeing "I Will Repay."

Another announcement worthy of special mention is the arrival of Emmett O'Mara, known as "The Invincible," the celebrated Irish Baritone, whom the San Francisco Post quotes as an Irish-American of the Chauncey Olcott type. Mr. O'Mara is accompanied by his wife Joan Palowa, a Contralto, who is also his accompanist. They are due to arrive by the Silvia, and Mr. T. H. O'Neill, who returned from Boston by the last express, saw these two artists work to a capacity house in Keith's Theatre in Boston, and was so impressed with their work that he made arrangements for them to continue their circuit right to St. John's. To-morrow we hope to give more particulars of these talented artists, who will open their engagement on the night of the arrival of the Silvia. The admission to-night is 20c.

"LUXURA" Orange Pekoe Tea

What Makes It So Different?

For it is different. There is a very distinct and delicate flavor and fragrance that is peculiar to "Luxura," you don't get it in other teas. Also, you seem to get every bit of good out of every spoonful and the last cup in the pot is just as good as the first.

It's easily explained. The great care in growing, in drying and blending, in testing, packing and getting ready for the market. There's no loophole for anything but the very best tea to pass through.

This is what makes "Luxura" what it is to-day, one of the very finest teas in the world.

IS THERE ANYTHING BETTER?

I sing to-day the song of health and a sense of being equal to the day's work.

Oh, the joy of feeling well and able to do your work!

Is there any other joy in the world to compare to it?

Other joys are the cream puffs and the bomb glances of existence compared to the solid meat and bread of the joy of work to do and the capacity and the health to do it.

For the past few days I have been in that condition known as "just able to drag around." I have gotten along by being just as little as I could, but that little has been a tremendous effort. And everywhere about me I have seen work to be done and I simply couldn't do it. I hadn't the strength.

The House Was Crashing Me.

To make either mind or body function was torture. It seemed as if the house was sitting on my shoulders crushing me to earth. I wonder if there is a house mother in the world who hasn't had that feeling.

Then this morning—a crisp, happy morning—I woke feeling myself some more. Oh, the joy of it! Oh, the difference to me.

"Poor Mary," someone said to me the other day about a mutual friend.

"She certainly does have a hard row to hoe."

"In what way?" I asked.

"Why you know how hard she has to work. Those three babies and no help to speak of."

One of the Happiest People I Know.

"Does she seem unhappy over it when you go to see her?"

"No, I don't know that she does. But she's always working like a dog. She's awfully plucky, poor Mary."

"Plucky, no doubt," said I. "But poor, nothing. She's one of the happiest people I know."

She is. Why shouldn't she be? She loves her babies and her husband and has a pleasant home. She has a lot of work to do and the capacity to do it. She is deft, competent, abounding in health. She has a faculty of turning off work, as my mother used to put it.

We'd Be in a Hurry to Die.

I think I quoted you the other day that thought about Heaven that I came across in my reading. "Never to be old, or tired, or sick, the negatives of Heaven, what must its affirmatives be?" Well, I don't know if we shall need many affirmatives if we have those splendid negatives.

"We shall work for an age at a sitting and never get tired at all," is Kipling's way of putting it.

Who could not truly think death "the greatest adventure in life" if he felt sure that were true?

more alluring than in her love scenes with Mr. Novarro.

To those persons who enjoy a little more than just plain hokum, and want to see real thrills, set in the actual locale of the story, "The Arab" is sure to be one of the most entertaining pictures of the year. It has stars, stars, director and background—nothing could be nicer, and nothing like it.

New 'Vapor' Way is Best for All Cold Troubles

An Application of Vaporizing Ointment Immediately Reaches Congested Air Passages.

Mr. Robert Hand of No. 69 Gower Street, St. John's, after using Vicks' 'Vapo-Rub' in the home, gladly recommends it to his friends.

Mr. Hand writes: "There is a large family of us and I must tell you we have never found anything to equal Vicks'. We will never be without it."

When Vicks' is applied over throat and chest for colds, its action is twofold: Absorbed through the skin like a liniment and, at the same time, inhaled as a vapor.

Vicks' contains Menthol, Camphor, Eucalyptus, Thyme and other of the best time-tested remedies for inflammations, whether of the air passages—croup, catarrh, bronchitis, etc.—or surface inflammations, such as burns, bites, cuts, stings, etc.

Vicks' is a standby in millions of homes. Over 17 million jars are used annually in Canada and the States.

Personal.

Capt. A. E. Dean and son Howard, Sydney, N.S., arrived yesterday's express to attend the Grand Lodge session of the S.U.F.

"Lillies" a Story of Rare Beauty and Strength

CORINNE GRIFFITH AND CONWAY TEARLE ARE SPLENDID IN CO-STARRING PARTS.

There came to the Star Theatre yesterday a picture that we urge all our readers to see, because in our estimation it has not been excelled as an emotion-stirring photodrama, and because it contains the finest cast that we have ever beheld in a single production.

The offering is "Lillies of the Field" a First National picture co-starring Corinne Griffith and Conway Tearle, supported by Sylvia Breamer, Myrtle Stedman, Alma Bennett, Crawford Kent, Charles Murray, Phyllis Haver, Cissy Fitzgerald, Edith Ransom and Charles Gerrard. All of those names are familiar to you, and we believe you will agree with us that they represent a cast of unusual excellence.

"Lillies of the Field" was adapted from the stage success by William Hurlbert, and was directed by John Francis Dillon, who made "Flaming Youth."

If we have ever seen a screen story with such a gripping quality we cannot recall it. "Lillies of the Field" is the life story of a beautiful young wife who, patiently bearing mistreatment at the hands of her husband, is deserted by him and robbed of her child. Unable to find them, she resigns herself to her fate and tries to untangle the snarled skein of life. A great love comes into her life, just as she is being sucked into the whirlpool of forgetful saeety, and through this love and happiness she has lost is restored to her.

There is a humanness about this picture which will endear it to all those who see it.
