ALL ABOARD FOR "HAPPY DAYS" ON THE OLD ST. JOHN

Annual Cruise of R. K. Y. C. Starts From Millidgeville This Afternoon.

This afternoon at 3 o'clock the squadron of the R. K. Y. C. will leave Millidgeville for the eleventh annual cruise on the St. John River and it is predicted that the trip will be a memorable one in the club's history. Since the opening of spring the owners of sailing craft have spared neither time nor labor in their indefatigable efforts to put their "beauties" on excellent trim for racing purposes, and when the signal for starting "one gun" from the flagship is given, and the large number of craft skim over the rippling water the different colored yachts with floating flags will present a spectacle indeed pleasing to the eye. The yachtsmen themselves will be garbed in the customary costume for such occasions, their white duck trousers, outing shirts and white canvas shoes adding greatly to their appearance, but more especially to their comfort.

THE TIMES NEW REPORTER

JOY FOR JAMESIEY. Our esteemed fellow citizen Mr. Jamesiey is in a more cheerful mood than for some time past. He thinks he sees on the horizon signs of an approaching controversy on dogmatic theology.

CHANCE TO DO BUSINESS. ENQUIRER, BOSTON--St. John only has three ferry boats. As it would take a year or two to build one, there is no immediate prospect of a larger number, as they have to be made to order. However, you will be quite safe in arranging to lay your plans before the aldermen. They may be compelled at any time to place an order for a new boat or two, and if your model will break down every time anybody touches it your chances of getting the contract would be considered good.

A NARROW ESCAPE. SAN DIEGO, Cal., July 13--(Special)--Another Jap was captured at Fort Reecans today. On being searched he was found to have concealed in his pockets and drink to Jamesiey, who regards himself as a final authority on all such matters. He set only insists upon his own right to interpret, explain, justify and harmonize, but flatly refuses to admit that any other man has any such right or privilege. They must all think as Jamesiey thinks. They must take their cue from him. It is fortunate for any community to have such an authority as Jamesiey believes himself to be.

A leading bank manager is daily in expectation of receiving a medal for distinguished bravery. He saw a horse start down King street without a driver and with reckless courage rushed out and stopped the animal. AN ATTEMPT TO BRIBE MONCTON'S MAGISTRATE

Attorney General Robinson Comes Into Possession of $50 --- The Curious Story Told About It.

MONCTON, July 13--(Special)--Hon. C. W. Robinson in his capacity as acting attorney general has come into possession of fifty dollars back of which hangs an interesting tale. The money was placed in Attorney General Robinson's hands by Jas. Kay police magistrate of Moncton together with a statement of facts that savors very strongly of an attempt to bribe the magistrate. Although the affair has been kept a dead secret, yet within the past few days some of the facts leaked out and are being discussed by citizens.

Hon. Mr. Robinson was seen and asked as to the truth of the somewhat sensational rumors afloat. He admitted that the stipendiary magistrate had placed a sum of money in his hands together with a statement as to how it came into his possession and that he was not prepared to say very much about it. Mr. Robinson said it was intimated to him where the money came from.

The magistrate informed him that the money had been found in his house one morning having been evidently left there by some one who had been in the night previous.

The magistrate informed him that he advertised the money and a party called for it claiming that he had lost it. The magistrate was not altogether satisfied that the party had lost the money and did not hand it over to the party claiming it. The magistrate was not altogether satisfied that the party had lost the money and did not hand it over to the party claiming it.

The party who called for the money in answer to the police magistrate's advertisement had been in to see Kay the night before the money was found, and what makes the circumstances all the more suspicious is the close relationship that exists between the man who called for the money and the party who was to appear before the stipendiary magistrate on the charge of violating the Scott Act.

It is stated that the fifty dollars, which Police Magistrate Kay found in his house under most suspicious circumstances, was left there just after a Scott Act violator had been sentenced to thirty days in jail, and on the night previous to the day of the trial of another saloon keeper for alleged violation of the Canada Temperance Act.

THE EVENING TIMES.

The St. John Evening Times is published at 21 and 23 Canterbury street, every evening (Sunday excepted) by the St. John Times Printing and Publishing Co., Ltd. A company incorporated under the Joint Stock Companies Act.

HALIFAX AND ST. JOHN It ought to be an eye-opener for St. John to see in a St. John paper a long display advertisement of a summer carnival to be held in Halifax early in August, on the occasion of the visit of the governor general.

Rumors are afloat regarding the state of affairs in Albert county with respect to the administration of justice, which for the good name of the county, it may be hoped are baseless.

On another page the Times quotes from the Charlottetown Guardian a fine appreciation of Sir Charles Tupper as a national builder. The tribute is the more valuable because the editor of the Guardian was politically opposed to Sir Charles when the latter was an active participant in the direction of Canadian affairs.

It is true that St. John is making progress. There is no doubt whatever that there has been a substantial increase in population during the last ten years. Some pessimistic persons, who have not yet forgotten the great fire and the decline in shipbuilding are occasionally heard to utter a lament over the lost glories of St. John, but the wide-awake citizen knows that there has been progress and general improvement, and increase in population.

NICE STATE OF AFFAIRS The statements made by Contractor Clarke at the meeting of the board of works last evening reveal an extraordinary condition of affairs with regard to the new wharf.

SIR WILFRID'S RETURN Sir Wilfrid Laurier is en route to Canada. His coming is awaited with greater interest than the return of any Canadian statesman from the mother country in many years.

DISARMAMENT Put up the sword! The voice of Christ once more. Speaks, in the pauses of the anxious rear. O'er fields of care by his stickles rasped And left dry ashes; over trenches rasped With names dead; or ever criss starting slow Under a rain of fire; through wards of woe Down which a glowing Glasgow runs.

ANDY'S DREAM

By MAUD WALKER.

"Come, Andy, look lively there! It's half-past five. No sleeping after that time in the morning." And Andy, sleeping soundly in his little bed in the low, unplastered room, half roused himself at sound of Uncle Dan's rough voice.

Then a heavy step on the floor and a grumbling and panting as a heavy form lowered itself down a ladder, which was the only means of entrance to the attic room where Andy slept, pronounced Andy's uncle's exit.

Andy forced open his eyes still heavy with sleep. Then he dragged himself from his pillow and proceeded to dress. After a few minutes he went down the ladder—which his clumsy uncle, with his two hundred pounds had found so difficult to descend—and sought the wash-tub in the back yard. He washed his self, combed his hair before a piece of broken mirror that hung in the kitchen porch, and then proceeded to the cow lot to milk three cows before breakfast.

He found the milk pail on a table by the well. As he drew the warm milk into the shining tin pail he began wondering for the hundredth time how long, oh, how long! it would be before his father should come for him and take him away from a life of drudgery. Over a year before this story opens Andy's father—a poor man—had determined to improve his fortunes by going to the gold fields of the far west.

He reached the farm and told the good housewife there his errand. But before she took time to prepare him for his homeward journey she gave him a slice of bread and jelly, and a glass of milk, declaring: "Why, Andy, child, you look as thin as tissue paper and a bit between."

A Story of Five Little Bears

Five little bears in the mountains; One heard a lion roar! It frightened him till he quickly died; And then there were but four.

Four little bears in the mountains; One fell from a great high tree! He broke his neck as soon as he struck; And then there were but three.

Three little bears in the mountains; One fell some thin ice through; But beneath the water was very deep! And so there were but two.

Two little bears in the mountains; They thought to have some fun; One got too near to a precipice! And then there was but one.

One little bear in the mountains; He was so lonely night and day; That at last he emigrated; To a country far away.

MAUD WALKER.

Andy smiled sweetly, for a dream full of happiness was in his brain. He dreamed that his father had returned for him and that they were driving away in quest of gold. He dreamed that he—Andy—had on a nice new suit of clothes that fitted him like the clothes of the town boys.

But all things dear come to a close all too soon. And a by-buzing about Andy's ear roused him from his previous dream to the hard reality of his real existence. He quickly arose and said aloud:

"Goodness, Aunt Rachel will thrash me good for staying away so long."

The farmer's wife, sitting dressed and hatted in the adjoining room, heard Andy's words and came into the sitting-room. "No, I shan't explain to your aunt how you come to stay," she said. "But if you're rested well better go now. It's getting a bit along into the middle of the day."

Andy declared himself very much rested and went to the buggy with the good woman, whom he knew to be his sympathetic friend. As they rode over the country road Andy told her of his dream, sighing and saying: "Oh, how I wish I could dream would come true some day."

"Maybe it will, Andy, child," said the good woman, "if you're a good boy and a good friend to the little orphan beside her."

nothing for the child himself, only coveting the work she could get out of him. After depositing Andy at his own doorway the good neighbor woman departed for town, nodding a "howdy-do" to Andy's aunt who came to the doorway in time to see Andy alight from the buggy. As Andy entered the house, his aunt, frowning, asked: "Why did Mrs. Jones come over to here with the buggy? Did you tell her, you couldn't walk home, eh?"

"She was going to town," explained Andy, "and said I might rest awhile at her house and she'd bring me round home. I never asked her at all. But I was so tired she said I couldn't walk so far without rest."

"Oh, she did, did she?" sneered Andy's aunt. "Well, do you see that you're fifteen minutes behind the time I set for you to be at home? And don't you remember that I told you that if you didn't get back in time I'd have to punish you? Now, I don't intend to tell a falsehood. And neither do I intend for you to become disobedient, either. You may just as well understand right now that so long as you are a burden in this house you'll have to do as you're told to do or take the consequences. I'm mistress here, you little beggar. So you go and pretend to the neighbors that you're ill-rested, do you?"

"Oh, no aunt, I never!" exclaimed the aunt. "And since I've got to punish you I might as well do it now so I'll have time to get over it before churning time. You know how it always affects me to whip a great, big ungrateful boy like you, don't you?"

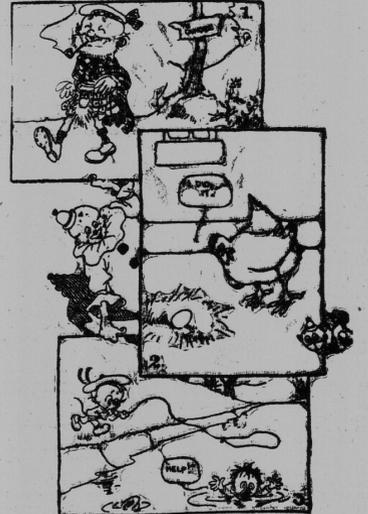

But before she finished the sentence a form shadowed the doorway, causing Andy and his aunt to look around quickly. With a leap of joy Andy was in his father's arms, weeping as though his little heart would break. The father had entered the yard unnoticed by either the irate woman or the frightened child, and stood a moment at the side door before entering. On recovering from the shock and anger he turned to his sister-in-law, saying: "Madam, in the future I shall cease to call you a relative or friend. I've heard your angry threats to my little and unoffending son and have seen your ugly soul. I've come back from my adventures a rich man and my son shall no longer be the little beggar you call him. And, if at any time you wish to see me, you must do as you're told to do or take the consequences. I'm mistress here, you little beggar. So you go and pretend to the neighbors that you're ill-rested, do you?"

Beheaded Word Puzzle

Picture No. 1 represents the color of the Scotchman's kilt. No. 2 represents something that the hen has just done. No. 3 represents what the boy in the water wishes. Can you guess them? (Answer to last week's puzzle: Scold, cold, old.)

Never question him, I think I owe you anything for his accommodations—why I'll settle the bill. But, if, on the other hand, I find that you have wronged my motherless little Andy—well, beware. As for my brother, I shall expect to see him in town, where he will find me at the best hotel. I've engaged apartments there for Andy and myself till my plans for the future are developed. As for you, madam, adieu."

And before Andy's aunt, overcome with confusion, could think of a way to pacify her rich brother-in-law he was gone, leaving little Andy to a nice carriage that stood near the gate.

As father and son rode along over the dusty road, Andy, his heart full of happiness, said: "Father, I dreamed you'd come home to me, and that you'd come very rich, too."

"Yes, my dearest little man, your father struck it all right. And now you will never eat the bitter bread of dependence any more. Your dream has come true, you see."

Never suffer your children to require services from others which they can perform themselves. A strict observance of this rule will be of incalculable advantage to them through every period of life.

BIG BUG'S WISDOM By William Wallace, Jr.

There had been a great rain, lasting a day and night; one of those rains that come down gently, but persistently, making rivers of streamlets and lakes of tiny ponds. The sun came out after the clouds had cleared away, and smiled on every thing so genial that Nature's heart throbbled with life and growth.

In the garden the vegetables nodded and smiled a "good-morning" to one another. In the barnyard the chickens clucked out their good spirits, old turkey gobblers strutting about like a veritable monarch. In the pasture the cows ran about in happy frolic, kicking up their heels till the damp earth flew about them in clouds. Even the older animals—horses and cows—frisked about a bit to show their good feeling with things in general. Indeed, there is nothing finer than a good summer rain to cool the earth, wash away dust, feed the vegetation and purify the atmosphere when it is followed by brilliant sunshine with a stiff breeze.

And so though a band of little bugs that had hidden beneath a bunch of the potato foliage to shelter themselves from the recent rain. But now that the sun was out the little bugs peeped from their leafy house and one of them said:

"Gee, buggies, it's as fine a June day as I ever saw! Come, stir out of this dark place and get into the open. Pshaw! how stiff my legs are after staying still so long." And the speaker, a fine fat fellow, crept out from the clump of growing green into the glare of sunlight.

"Well, I must have a bite of breakfast before I wander forth," declared another bug, beginning to climb out of the soft, green, potato stalks whose roots were growing a cluster of fine potatoes. "I'll take a bit of leaf—the softest one I can find—before I'm off to any pastime." And he fell at once to eating with a relish one of the many tender green leaves through whose agency the potatoes under-the ground were fed with sun and moisture. "I'm with you, but presently, make Then the idea of breakfast determined all to eat before playing. But the big bug, who seemed to be the leader of the crowd followed himself outside the shadow of the potato foliage, stretching his legs one by one, and then another, he felt so cramped from their long idleness.

And while he sat there sunning himself and taking a few physical culture exercises the big bug heard a sound which frightened him a bit. But he was not a coward and kept his ground till something more than a sound should become evident.

But before he got further with the story it must be told that the present place of habitation was a new one for this crowd of bugs. They had been great travelers, coming over the hills and the valley by stages. With the arrival of the first warm spring days they had come from somewhere (the place has not been located) into the garden lands of a beautiful farming region. There they had found food and fresh dew in plenty to nourish them as they traveled still further on. In fact, they could not rest until they had reached the place that stood forth that sweet, peculiar odor which only their acute sense of smell could detect. It was the potato odor that attracted them. And so they had traveled the long and weary way, finding the delicious spot they were in quest of just before the heavy rain began to fall.

And now let us return to the big bug and the sound he heard which frightened him. There he sat, quieting his legs and straining his ears. And the sound did not diminish, but became louder and louder. This is what he heard:

"Ah, Sally, look at the tomato vines! Haven't they grown powerful tall since the rain?"

"Ugh, I should say so. But—look at the beetle! And look at the potatoes! Oh, well, I soon have all the potatoes we can eat. Let's go into the patch and look at 'em. I saw mama dig underneath the potato vines the other day and get out a paw full of nice potatoes for us to eat and still not kill the vines."

The big bug listened. Then he began to think to himself what his conversation with the other two bugs was. He knew that danger was near. He crept back beneath the vines just as he saw two children coming down a little furrow that lay between two large rows of potato hills. They were advancing in this direction, but to him these two little folk appeared to be almost deafened him. As fast as he could he went up the potato vine to a spot near the leaves where the members of his company were breakfasting.

"Comrades in pleasure and woe," he said, "great danger is coming our way. Hide in the dirt or under the leaves till it passes by. Then we must say farewell to this fine field near us on our journey again. I can feel it in my bones that it will not do for us to remain here."

But scarcely had the big bug ceased speaking when the two little folks who had caused him such terror came along the furrow, playing idly in the moist dirt by making prints of their feet in it.

"Oh, Tom!" cried the little girl to the little boy, "I see a bug on the potato vines! Oh, just look at it! U! Let's run." And the little Miss fairly flew out of the potato patch. Not so with Tom. Being a boy, bugs and worms hold little terror for him. Instead of running he went directly to the very vine where the bugs were and began looking for them. His quick blue eyes soon detected the shining striped red coats of the round little man-legged fellows as they tried to get out of his sight. "Ah," said Tom, looking at them. "So you're eating up our potatoes, are you? Well, I'll just go tell mama, and she'll see some one to work killing you she will."

Then for the first time in his life the big bug found his voice of such power that he could speak to the giant that threatened him. Coming into plain view he turned his shining little specks of eyes on Tom and said: "My father has worked and worked to get this nice patch of potatoes, and now we cannot let you and your wife and children and kindfolk come and strip the stalks of the leaves. Of course, we don't like to—to harm a hair on your heads, but we can't let you eat up our vegetables."

"Well, since you have explained to me that your father has prepared this nice field for you I'll have my comrades accompany me further into the world. We have no fixed place of abode, and must be driven about before winds and weather. But this I promise you, Great Monster, we'll take ourselves off without delay if you'll not harm us."

"Sure, go right on," said Tom gaily. "You're a nice sort of old bug, anyway."

QUEENS OF ENGLAND

Adelaide, queen consort of William IV, king of Great Britain and Ireland, was the eldest daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Meiningen, a state in Germany. Adelaide was born in the year 1792. She was truly pious, being so devout in her religious observances that she rarely took part in any of the simple and innocent forms of amusement so prevalent at that time in court circles. Indeed, it was this exemplary character which might be said to have won for her a king for a husband, for Queen Charlotte of England, hearing of Adelaide's virtues, recommended her as a fitting companion for her third son, William, then Duke of Clarence.

At Charlotte's suggestion negotiations for a marriage between her son and Adelaide were entered into. The match was speedily made, and the marriage took place in July, 1818.

Although Adelaide and William were the parents of several children, they all died in infancy. In 1830 George IV, died, and having no children, to succeed him, the crown reverted to his surviving brother, next in line, William.

During William and Adelaide's reign the court of England assumed a pure and elevating atmosphere, proving a model for the young, something which cannot be said of it at any former period. In the year 1837 William IV died, and as queen dowager Adelaide survived him twelve years. She was present at the illegitimate children, taking them under her own supervision and doing all for them that she could have done had they been her own offspring. During her life no word of calumny ever stained her name, and no act of selfishness can be laid at her door. Other queens there were who left their names more indelibly printed on the pages of history, but none were there more noble and true; none were better as women, wife, queen and friend.

NOT HER AFFAIR.

The following conversation took place between a railroad traveler and the train conductor: "I shall have to ask you for a ticket for that boy, ma'am," said the conductor, holding his hand out for the ticket. "I reckon not," answered the woman, not budging. "Indeed you must pay for him," insisted the conductor. "He's too large to be traveling free. He occupies an entire seat and you must pay for it."

"I can't help that," snapped the woman. "See here, madam. I've no time to argue the matter. If you don't produce a ticket for the boy or pay his fare I'll have to put him off the train." And the conductor glared in a determined way at the woman. "Put him off, then," said the woman. "He's nothing to me. I never saw him before today."

TEETER-TOTTER

Teeter-totter in the air; Up you go so high, Then you come to earth again With the merry cry— "Teeter-totter! Bread and water! Also cake and pie. Teeter-totter! Bread and water; Go we to the sky!" T. T.

"But how do you come to own all these vines?" asked the big bug. "We are born here to the world to live, and can't starve without it is in sight."

"Well, you'll have to look for it elsewhere," declared Tom. "My father plowed and planted this garden and it's ours. So there's no use arguing the question with you. Do you mean to be long? Or shall I take a clod and smash you?"

"Suppose, Great Monster, that another as much more powerful than you, as you are more powerful than me, should come and drive you out with a threat to smash you if you refused to go. Would you call that just?" And the big bug looked very seriously at Tom as he waited for an answer.

"Well, I hadn't thought of it that way," admitted Tom. "But friend bug, as you did nothing to make those potatoes grow you should understand that you have no right to eat them up. My father has worked and worked to get this nice patch of potatoes, and now we cannot let you and your wife and children and kindfolk come and strip the stalks of the leaves. Of course, we don't like to—to harm a hair on your heads, but we can't let you eat up our vegetables."

TRADE TALKS. THE TELEGRAPH OPERATOR

The telegraph operator continues to offer splendid opportunities to the bright young men of America. Conditions may not be so good as when Andrew Carnegie began as messenger boy and later was placed in a small telegraph station in a steel town outside of Pittsburgh. Carnegie did not limit his mind to the telegraph keys, however, for every message he sent out from that booming foundry town was calling him into his own.

INVESTING YOUR SAVINGS.

Never was the philosophy of the stock market better expressed by a great person than by the head of the great Rothschild family—son of a German cobbler who eyed the destinies of kingdoms—who said of his secret of success in stocks: "I buy them when they're cheap (cheap) and I sell 'em when they're dear."

ARTISTIC COTTAGE OF ENGLISH GOTHIC TYPE.

MEN SUCCESSFUL BUT NOT GREAT.

There is so much competition for public notice in the crop of millionaires that unless one gets into the courts his name never becomes a household word out of the sphere which he dominates. Therefore the name Simon S. Guggenheim is little known except in the state of Colorado and among men who are interested in copper mining. He is one of the seven Guggenheim brothers, all fabulously wealthy.

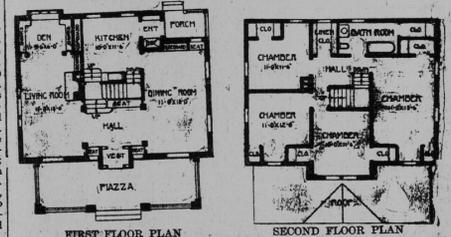

United in business, so as to form a veritable trust. Consequently they are the greatest family of money makers the world has ever produced, not excepting Rockefeller and Carnegie. In fifteen years they have built up a fortune estimated conservatively at $400,000,000.

AN ENGLISH GOTHIC COTTAGE

Designed by

CHAS. S. SEDGWICK, Architect, Minneapolis, Minn.

Here is an artistic design in the early English Gothic. The design is a new one and has been much admired by all that have seen it. The interior has a very pleasant arrangement, the symmetry being carried out on the inside as well as the outside of the house. This is quite unusual, but appeals to many people.

SUMMER EVENING GOWNS.

By DOROTHY DALE

Evening gowns designed for warm weather wear are, this season, charmingly simple in design and trimming, although very fine and beautiful materials are used. These sheer stuffs can, however, be bought in delightful patterns for a very moderate sum, and can be very effective without the necessity of using a great deal of expensive trimming, if cleverly planned.

WAYS AND MEANS OF CLEVER HOUSEWIVES

By BEATRICE CAREY

To clean white canvas gloves make a lather of castile soap and warm water, in which has been put one tablespoonful of ammonia. Dip the gloves in it, and when the water is tepid put the gloves in it. Let them soak for a quarter of an hour, then press them in your hands; do not wring them. Rinse in fresh, cold water with a little ammonia added. Press the gloves in a towel, and dry them in the open air, after blowing to puff them out.

An attractive window for a summer cottage.

THE CARE OF LAMPS.

A very pretty effect is gained by using lamps alone as illumination in a summer home or city house furnished for the summer, and electricity being entirely dispensed with. A point in favor of the lamp is that the chair may be drawn up close to it, and the book catches the direct rays, while the light from the gas loses some of its strength on account of the greater space which it must traverse.

LEARNING NEW TRADES

Do not let lack of experience keep you from undertaking new work in new fields—that is if you are sure of your native ability and have lots of initiative and adaptability. In other words cultivate to suit the world calls "nerve" or "front."

Of late years the game has become harder—the "receiver" usually taking down the matter directly on a typewriter. To make the "sender" the most nervous racking part—keep pace a phonetic system has been evolved. For instance, "g. z." means "great excitement" and "t. a. p." means "this afternoon." A bright boy can become fairly proficient in six months of study as a side issue.

The small mind always condemns things, it does not understand. Funny, isn't it? The "doer" money is the harder it is to "get next" to it.

LETTER FROM MRS. SEARS. Editor Times: Sir—Let me express my personal thanks and appreciation for the very generous patronage our citizens gave to the second performance of Caprice, and so very materially increased our funds to enable us to carry on more satisfactorily our work for the children's playground. St. John is always to the front when reasonable demands are made. I feel sure those who attended that splendid performance enjoyed a delightful evening and were proud and proud of the ability of our home talent, which can favorably compare with any abroad. In closing let me especially thank Mr. Bird and the company and all who assisted for their kindness and generosity in giving their services in response to our plea for a worthy object. Though the first I only hope it will not be the last we shall see of this company in their new venture. Yours very truly, M. KATE H. SEARS, Westfield Beach.

A LITTLE HEART TO HEART TALK. In every dirty alley and on every street in the city children are playing, because they have no other playground.

Out beyond the Marsh Bridge are the Victoria grounds, a level stretch of greenward, surrounded by a high fence. There the children could play all day long, in pure air and on the green grass.

The Every Day club tendered these grounds for a public playground during the summer holidays. The only exception being on occasional Saturdays afternoon when there might be a ball game or athletic sports. The only reason the grounds are not in use for the children is the fact that there is no money to pay a supervisor. The Every Day club is desirous to raise enough money by sports and entertainments to provide for this themselves, and its patronage and instead of a surplus they have a deficit on grounds account. This does not worry them, but it is not creditable to St. John that these grounds are not accepted and used as a playground. Much more money is spent every evening in the city than is needed to maintain a private club for a thousand children happy play all summer long.

PRIVATE O'BRIEN'S TROUBLES. Private James H. O'Brien, who was left behind his regiment at Camp Sussex and trapped to St. John, brought up at the central police station where he told the story of his exploits.

O'Brien has been connected with the Royal Canadian Regiment at Fredericton, and has been heard to tell of his experiences with Col. Lynch, who led the Irish Brigade under Boer colors in the South African war. In 1903 Col. Lynch was sentenced to life imprisonment but, a few days ago, on the eve of his departure for Ireland, King Edward granted him a free pardon. O'Brien has been drifting about in the world and ended at Fredericton. In Camp Sussex he is said to have been drinking and was asleep when his regiment pulled out for Petawawa. He tramped to St. John and on Thursday night was a protectionist at the central police station. On the following morning he gave himself up to Lieut.-Col. White, D. O. C., and was again sent back to a cell. Lieut.-Col. White wired Col. Wadmore, Halifax, the headquarters of the regiment, and Col. Chinn, now at Petawawa, has been communicated with.

ST. JOHN BOYS WILL NOT GO TO THE Y.M.C.A. CAMP. From a Y. M. C. A. official it has been learned that none of the boys connected with the local branch have, up to the present, signified their intention of being present at this year's maritime camp, to be held at Big Cove, Sutherland River, N. S.

THE COBALT STRIKE. OTTAWA, July 13.—(Special)—A telegram from Cobalt received by the labor department from F. W. Ackland, secretary of the department, states that negotiations are now proceeding between the mine owners and the men in a few of the larger mines looking to a speedy adjustment of the strike. In the other mines, however, there is no prospect of any settlement and the miners are leaving the district in large numbers.

WHERE CAPRICE MONEY WENT. A. C. L. Tapley Makes a Statement in Connection With the Production.

As there has been some comment over the division of the receipts for the two performances of Caprice, Mr. A. C. L. Tapley, who managed the business end of both productions, sent the following communication to the St. John Globe this morning in answer to a letter, signed Experience, which appeared in last evening's issue of that paper:

Having managed the "business end" of Caprice for both performances, I take pleasure in submitting the following: The division of receipts, as arranged by Mr. Bird and Mr. A. D. Skinner, (on behalf of the school for deaf) before Mr. Bird left for Halifax with the Kirk Brown Co., was as follows: The gross receipts to receive 35 per cent of the gross receipts, and the balance to be divided equally between the school and Mr. Bird after expenses for advertising, stage props and rent of rehearsing hall were paid. For your information I publish the following: Performance of July 6th. Opera House share . . . $136.60 Posters, cards, and handbills . . . $7.50 Stage props, trees, etc. . . . $8.80 Rent of rehearsing hall . . . $10.00 School's share . . . $108.78 T. H. Bird's share . . . $108.78 Total receipts . . . $330.55

Performance of July 10th. This shows Mr. Bird received $292.11 for four weeks' work. And, as you sign yourself Experience, you probably know that it is not an uncommon salary for a Caprice conductor to receive $50 per week. Furthermore, Mr. Bird supplied the majority of the property, including wigs, make-up, etc., and was under heavy expense while here, also he had to pay for transportation from Halifax to here, and then to New York, where he goes to join the company. Transportation would have been paid by the company had he returned with them.

The hope that some leading men of the denomination will take up some of the most vital topics discussed in the book, and through the press, give them the consideration they demand. Thanking you for the space granted for this communication, I acknowledge myself to be ONE INTERESTED. St. John, July 12, 07.

MR. WARING'S BOOK. To The Editor of the Evening Times:—Sir,—From today's Telegraph I have read of the action taken by the Baptist Association against Rev. Mr. Waring's book, and later in the day I read what the Evening Times called attention to, viz., that "Rev. Dr. Falconer and other noted scholars praise Mr. Waring's book. Also, in the same issue, I read your editorial on the book. I am convinced that you know all the facts you would have written differently. It is true that leading men have written in praise of the book. It is beautifully written, contains a great deal that is interesting and instructive, and gives evidence of much research and learning. Indeed, in many respects, it is a very attractive book. For these reasons leading men have referred to it in terms of praise; but they knew, at the same time, that it contains things that are contrary to Bible teaching, say nothing of Baptist doctrines, but they found it to be a delicate matter to call attention to these serious faults, that make the book objectionable. Even the Maritime Baptists, as well as some of the ministers, through that organ, referred to it without expressing themselves decidedly.

I have carefully read the book, and from it learn that its author attaches no proprietary importance to the blood of Christ, and that he widely departs from the New Testament in his views of the Sonship of Christ. The hope that some leading men of the denomination will take up some of the most vital topics discussed in the book, and through the press, give them the consideration they demand. Thanking you for the space granted for this communication, I acknowledge myself to be ONE INTERESTED. St. John, July 12, 07.
