

MORTIRO ABE WAS ASSASSINATED BY YOUNG STUDENTS

The Famous Jap Politician Was Mistaken for Dr. Sun Yat Sen.

ATTACKED ON STREET Great Excitement in Japan Over Pending Trouble With Chinese.

[Canadian Press.] Tokio, Sept. 6.—Mortiro Abe, director of the political bureau of the Japanese foreign office, died today the victim of unknown assassins. His assassins, who are believed to have been students, lay in wait for him in front of his house on Thursday evening, while he was at the railway station to meet H. H. Blair, minister to China, who had just been recalled from Peking. Upon his return, Director Abe was attacked by two young men who ran out of an alley toward him. One of them seized him by the shoulders while the other plunged a short sword into his abdomen twice. The assassins escaped in the darkness without their identity being known.

Died Suddenly. It was not thought at first that the director's wounds would prove fatal, for they were promptly dressed after some passersby had carried him to his home and called the surgeons. He became suddenly worse during the night, however, and died this morning.

Excitement is intense here following the reports of the massacre of Japanese and the insult to the Japanese flag at Nanking and there is much irresponsible clamor for drastic action against China. The sensational press has been attacking the foreign office on both the California and Chinese policies.

Killed Wrong One.

Another theory is that Director Abe was mistaken by his assailants for Dr. Sun Yat Sen, the Chinese revolutionary leader, whom he greatly resembled. It was reported early in August, shortly after Dr. Sun Yat Sen's flight from China, and shortly after a band of 100 assassins had been sent by the Chinese Government to Japan to kill Dr. Sun Yat Sen, General Huang-Sing and other Chinese revolutionary fugitives, and it is considered possible that some of these assassins may have committed an error and killed Director Abe.

Others Planned. According to the Tai Hei Yo news agency, the conspirators intended to attempt the lives of the premier, Count Gombei Yamamoto, and the minister of foreign affairs, Baron Nobuaki Makino, but owing to encountering difficulties in the accomplishment of their design substituted Director Abe.

MR. BECK REFUSES TO DISCUSS CLAIM OF ROBERT LYONS

Engineer Says Case Will Go Further if No Settlement Is Made.

SPENT HIS OWN MONEY Argues That His Work Has Effected Saving of $400,000 to City.

Conciliation, compromise and settlement are in the air so far as the claim of Robert A. Lyons, engineer of the London Electric Company, against Hon. Adam Beck, for work and engineering on the original artesian well scheme, is concerned. Mr. Lyons, whose claim was presented to the water commission on Thursday, has been informed that a conference is wanted by Mr. Beck—hence the rumors of the compromise.

Hon. Mr. Beck refused to discuss the proposition.

"I have nothing to say on the matter for publication," was the statement he made to The Advertiser this morning.

In his claim, which Chairman Pockock, of the water commission, claims has nothing to do with that body because no agreement was ever made by the commission with Mr. Lyons, the engineer points out the fact that his work saved London $400,000, and that he has received no remuneration at the hands of the city for that saving.

"JAMES RAY" TOOK $20,000 BY FAKE LETTERS TO BANKS

Ingersoll, Woodstock and Brantford Managers All Paid Over Money—Police Are Hot on Trail of Smoothest Swindler Who Ever Worked District.

As a result of reports that are coming in from various parts of this district, the police believe that James Ray is carrying around with him in cool cash the big end of $20,000.

Ray will live in police records as one of the most daring swindlers who has ever operated in Western Ontario.

Since Tuesday he has visited at least six banks in the vicinity of London, and one in Lindsay.

PROFITABLE VISITS. On each visit by the simple process of producing a letter purporting to come from a bank manager in Saskatoon, he secured from $2,500 to $3,500.

The very simplicity of Ray's method of operating disarmed suspicion until some hours after he had left town.

Has a Good Start. Now, with at least 30 hours' start, the police at the request of the "victimized" banks, are using every resource at their command to capture Ray.

Another Victim? [Special to The Advertiser.] Ingersoll, Sept. 6.—It is generally understood here that the Imperial Bank is a loser to the extent of $2,300 through the operations of a smooth individual answering the description of James Ray, who has cleaned up $14,000 in about three days from various banks in this district.

Manager White will not confirm or deny the story. He says there is nothing to say regarding the matter. It is known, however, that certain parties are very anxious to locate an individual who early in the week secured $2,300.

GOT ABOUT $8,000. [Special to The Advertiser.] Woodstock, Sept. 6.—Ingersoll, Ingersoll and Brantford fell victims to "James Ray," along with other towns. It has now become known that on Tuesday last the managers of the Imperial Bank branches at these places received letters by mail purporting to be from the manager of the Union Bank at Kildersley, Sask., stating that their client James Ray, was coming east to buy cattle, and would present letters of introduction and a demand draft for between $2,000 and $3,000, which would be all right. Next day Ray, landing here, presented his credentials and got $2,300. Next he went to Ingersoll and got a similar amount, and then went to Brantford. He is said to be a typical western rancher.

FARMER'S WIFE JUMPS WHEN HORSE BOLTS

Drops Line and Lets Animal do a Dash to Hamilton Road.

Considerable excitement was caused on Adelaide street at 11 o'clock this morning when a horse, hitched to a farmer's rig and driven by a lady, was frightened by an automobile. The horse started south on Adelaide at a mad clip, and the lady was unable to stop him. Finally she let go and jumped over the back of the seat of the swaying vehicle to the ground. It could not be learned whether the lady was injured. The horse was caught soon after.

BARGE IS BEACHED

[Canadian Press.] Leamington, Sept. 6.—The barge Chicamaugh, from Cleveland to Sheboygan, with 4,700 tons of coal, is beached and full of water west of Point Pelee. In mid-lake last night Captain George Mackie found the barge leaking so badly he had her towed ashore.

IS CATARACT POWER BEHIND NATURAL GAS?

Large Share of the London Free Press Owned by Cataract Company, and the Paper Has Been "Booming" New Commodity.

Is the Cataract Power Company and its allied interests, behind the natural gas company that has promised to pipe gas into London?

It is declared that the natural gas company will enter the cheap power production field. The declaration is made by a newspaper—the London Free Press—in which the Cataract interests control a large block of stock. Part of the paper is owned by the Blackburns—the rest by the Cataract interests. The Free Press might therefore be accepted as the official mouthpiece of the Cataract Company in London.

Boosting Natural Gas. Natural gas boosts in the Free Press have been the writing on the wall that has pointed to the interests of its part owners—the Cataract Company.

Hon. Adam Beck and the Ontario hydro-electric power commission, have carried the power monopoly battle into the territory of the Cataract Company. The Cataract Company is now alleged to be carrying the war into Hon. Adam Beck's own private district.

A Stock-Jobbing Deal. Natural gas is coming to London. For weeks the London Free Press has been harping on that theme. To the uninitiated the sound of the Free Press chanting has been akin to that of a stock-jobbing deal. To the initiated it has held a dual sound. It has been the warning trumpet to the hydro interests to duck for cover, or to cover its trail. The Cataract Company was after another hydro scalp.

Poor Old F. P. Wobbling. The Free Press has been straddling the hydro-Cataract fence. Naturally it has wobbled.

When natural gas was first mooted, it was by an alleged American concern. The complexion outwardly of the said, company has changed but little. Its internal workings have undergone a complete revolution, according to stories afloat in London today. The American end of the company is claimed to have been a "blind." It has been a Cataract undertaking from start to finish, say the wise ones.

Hon. Adam Beck, when questioned by The Advertiser, would say nothing about natural gas or the attitude of the Free Press.

City Forges Ahead Year by Year and Opportunity Calls

Co-operation of All Community Interests Will Advance London Even More—The Commissioners' Well-Reasoned Appeal.

[By Gordon Phillip, Industrial Commissioner.]

There comes a time in the history of important centres of population, when they assume metropolitan importance and dignity, and this epoch brings, along with man advantages, increased responsibility on the local and right-minded citizens. The constituted authorities at this time have their attention fully occupied in routine work of unusual proportions, and it is necessary, if the local and full advantage of its opportunities, that all public spirited ratepayers see that their growth is well balanced and carefully planned.

As a result of its internal expansion, a city grows by attraction, and the magnetic power which draws men and money, year after year, becomes more irresistible and grows proportionately greater, as each succeeding industry or enterprise provides more people to be fed, clothed and housed.

The Farmer's Importance. As transportation facilities, markets, attractions and educational and other advantages increase, the city's sphere of influence becomes wider and wider, and the primary creator of wealth—the agriculturist—becomes more susceptible to its call.

As a jobbing and trading centre it grows in proportion to the farmer's need.

Today, however, this is not sufficient if a city is to maintain its position against competitors or its trade. The larger the centre, the greater the attraction, and to hold its own in the race for commercial supremacy a city must also become a producer of wealth, or, in other words, make the goods it sells.

Big centres naturally attract trade, but the city which is content with the trade which drifts in from the surrounding country will wake up some day to realize that another and more attractive centre has captured the farmer and secured his trade, because it is able to offer greater markets, facilities and advantages, and choice merchandise he requires.

Importance of Population. In addition to affording greater attractions as a trading centre, the manufacturing city is making trade within its limits. The physical needs of its factory employees and their families—their food, shelter and clothing—are purchased by the money distributed through the weekly payroll. This means further addition to the population in the establishment of new stores and offices in the business centre, and increased trade to establish firms. More professional men are required, and the building trades require more men to build new houses. The public utilities, owned and operated by the city, are increased in value, and with the additional rateable assessment on land required for homes, etc., the city's borrowing capacity is increased, which means that more money can be expended in improvements, adding to the city's attractiveness, and in turn bringing in new people to make it their home.

It has been demonstrated all over the country that a city can add to its factories by the use of certain legitimate means. These are, briefly stated, organization and publicity.

Must Have Support. Organization has been found necessary for several important reasons. The securing of new industries is a movement for the good of the whole.

THE WEATHER.

TOMORROW—FAIR AND WARM. Forecasts.

Today—Moderate easterly winds; fine and a little warmer.

Sunday—Moderate to fresh southerly winds; shifting to westerly generally fair and warm, but a few scattered thunder-showers by night.

Table with columns: Station, High, Low, Weather. Rows include London, Victoria, Calgary, Winnipeg, Port Arthur, Montreal, Parry Sound, Toronto, Quebec.

In the Western Provinces a few light scattered showers have occurred, also light frosts in Northern Alberta.

Elsewhere in Canada the weather remains fine.

FIRE LOSS AT HOT SPRINGS IS NOW $6,000,000

Twenty-Five Hundred People Are Homeless—Help Is Being Rushed.

Water and Power Plants Gone and All Business Is Paralyzed.

[Canadian Press.] Hot Springs, Ark., Sept. 6.—Stunned by the extent of the damage wrought by last night's fire, which swept more than 50 city blocks here with an estimated loss of $6,000,000, the people of Hot Springs today took first steps toward rehabilitation.

Mayor McClendon accepted Governor Hays' offer of two companies of state militia and ordered a mass meeting of citizens for later in the day, when it will be decided whether the city will call upon the outside cities for help.

2,500 Homeless. It is estimated about 2,500 persons were made homeless by the fire. The majority of these are being temporarily camped in the vicinity of the Oakland race track and state fair grounds.

Grand avenue, leading from the burned area to the fair grounds today presented a distressing sight. Hundreds of families with little left but the bare walls of their homes were gathered along the roadway gradually working their way to the camp grounds. The militia will guard these people and guard the devastated district.

Lots of Water. There is no longer of a water famine. Continued on Page Eleven.

MARRIED COUPLE ELOPED TWELVE YEARS AGO NOW THEIR CHILDREN ARE TAKEN FROM THEM

Left Husband and Wife in England and Lived as Man and Wife in This City—Nemesis Pursues Them, and Finally Snatches Golden-Haired, Beautiful Children.

The culmination of an elopement from a little coal mining town in England of a married man and a married woman, 12 years ago, was witnessed in police court this morning when Elizabeth James, who is now living on Ottawa avenue, was charged with neglecting her two small daughters by Inspector Joseph Sanders.

William Griffiths was living in the little town and working as a miner in one of the coal mines. Mrs. James and her husband also lived in the same place. There she and Griffiths met, and a friendship, which finally ripened into love, was formed between the two. Both had heard of the wonders of Canada, and both decided to elope to this country and make a home for themselves. So one night they met and started for Liverpool, where they embarked for Canada, leaving behind their wife and husband.

Here for 11 Years. They landed in Montreal, and after roaming about the country arrived in London about 11 years ago, settling on Hill street. Griffiths, who went under the name of James, was a hard worker. Securing employment on the Grand Trunk, he worked steadily and soon had a comfortable and well-furnished home in East London. Things went well for a few months, when Mrs. James learned that her husband had followed her from England and was searching for her in Canada. He did not locate her, however, and things began to run smoothly again. Griffiths never heard from his wife, and he told the court this morning that he did not know whether she was alive.

Less than a year after their arrival in London a little girl was born to the couple, and six years later another one was born.

A Touching Picture. Both little girls, one 11 years of age and the other 5, golden-haired and blue-eyed, pretty as pictures, were in court this morning, and although the proceedings were in their behalf they clung to each other and sobbed aloud at the prospect of being taken away from the couple and given over to the Charities Organization.

The little family prospered, and all went well until a year ago. The husband is said to have started drinking, and at the request of the woman was placed on the prohibitory list. The woman also started drinking, and was likewise placed on the list. Then trouble, in volume began for the pair. They quarrelled continually, it is said, and complaint of the environment in which the children were living was made a short time ago to Inspector Sanders. He investigated with the result that a summons was issued for the woman, charging her with neglecting to properly care for her two children, both under the age of 10 years. The woman was also charged with a breach of the liquor license act, having been discovered under the influence of liquor.

Part in Anger. Before Mr. Sanders started his investigation the couple parted in anger, and both told the court this morning that they wanted nothing more to do with each other. "That is the ending of all such cases," said the court.

When the case was called this morning the magistrate asked the woman if she were willing that he make an order transferring the children to the care of the children's Aid Society. He intended doing so, anyway, he told her, but would rather do it with her consent. She was willing to have the organization take them, she said, providing they would not be given out for adoption. The court would not agree to this, even after the mother had agreed to pay for their maintenance at the home.

The father then asked if he would be allowed to take them and keep them. "I have always been a good father to them," said he, "and I will see that they are well treated."

Belonged to Mother. The court explained that although Griffiths was the father of the children, he had nothing to do with them because, according to law they belonged to the mother.

After making the order transferring the children to the society, Mrs. James told the court that she felt sure the oldest would return to her as soon as she became of age, which would be only a few years.

The father walked over to them and, after kissing "old" supplied them liberally with coppers and silver, and then walked from the courtroom with his eyes filled with tears.

The mother was allowed to take the children into an ante-room to bid them good-bye. The little ones sobbed loudly and clung to the mother's neck, refusing to be comforted, but after a short time they were taken in charge by Inspector Sanders and taken to the shelter home, refusing to be comforted by stories of the fine times they would have, and the coppers and silver in their possession.

GEORGE A. BARNES Y.M.C.A. DIRECTOR IS KILLED BY FALL

Former Londoner Dislocated Neck While at Work in Gymnasium.

[Canadian Press.] Mr. George A. Barnes, well known in connection with the local Y. M. C. A., and a prominent member of the League of Corps in 1908-9, met his death Friday night when he fell from a horizontal bar on which he was demonstrating different exercises to a class of boys in the new Toronto Y. M. C. A.

When he slipped and fell, for a moment no attention was paid to him, but as he did not rise, those present saw that something serious had happened. He was rushed to Grace Hospital. It was found that his neck had been dislocated, and death ensued within ten minutes after his arrival.

At Post a Few Days. He had only been engaged on his new duties for a few days, and his death caused great sorrow among the directors of the institution and his numerous friends.

When in London some years ago Mr. Barnes distinguished himself as a promising athlete. He was particularly a specialist at apparatus work, at which he met his death. Secretary Wilson and his many friends in the city express deepest sympathy to his parents who reside in Sherbrooke, Quebec.

Mr. Barnes had been connected with Y. M. C. A. work in St. Catharines, Stratford, and Sherbrooke, before going to Toronto.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

Miss May Robson, in Her Latest Comedy, "Mrs. Mat Plummer."

Miss May Robson, in the latest comedy success, "Mrs. Mat Plummer," by James Forbes, author of "The Chorus Lady," "The Travelling Salesman," etc., will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House for two nights only, beginning Monday.

This comedy of pure humor and consistent action has been lauded as one of the funniest plays of the century, and Miss Robson, as one of the best exponents of eccentric characters, is particularly clever in depicting the changes in mood, naturalness, repose, and harmony, with the consistency of action. Miss Robson is one of the few actresses who are really funny, and it will be a treat for anyone in favor of wholesome comedy. The narrative of the play cleverly develops a number of exceptionally funny situations and dialogue, that are bright without distracting from the general trend of the story, nor confusing from lack of clearness.

Miss Robson produces laughter with the very spirit of laughter, by the unctious of her expressions; in fact, the personality of the actress disappears, and the verified picture of the lovable mother, with all her measures of humor, are strongly developed. Seats now on sale.

Fiske O'Hara in the Delightful Romance, "In Old Dublin."

Fiske O'Hara will be the attraction at the Grand, commencing Wednesday, for five performances—four nights and special matinee Saturday, in Augustus Pitou's production of "In Old Dublin." It is a tale of love and intrigue in the Emerald Isle in the beginning of the last century, and tells how Neil Powers, a young marine architect, and Rose Stratton, of New York, meet, and fall in love. Neil is building a yacht for a Dublin banker, who, however, causes work to be stopped on the half-finished boat at the behest of his wife. The latter has been warned that if her husband finances the building of a boat to compete with that of the lord lieutenant in the great race for the Queen's cup, her chances of entering Dublin Castle society will be small. Through her guardian, Rose secretly furnishes the funds for the completion of the boat, and Neil wins the coveted trophy with his fleet Irish Rose. We then, having won fame and opened the way to fortune, asks for the hand of the plucky girl who came to his rescue, and all ends happily.

Mr. O'Hara introduces a number of splendid songs, "Peggy Gilroy," "Love at Last," "Rose, Rose, Rose," "O Bay of Dublin," and "The Minstrel Boy," which he sings with all the feeling and art that characterizes his work. Seat sale opens Monday at 9 a.m.

Mr. Lawrence Brough's All-Canadian Tour, 1913-1914.

Sir Francis Burnand's farcical comedy, "The Lady of Ostend," booked for Sept. 17 and 18, which will be Mr. Brough's vehicle for his outward journey, is said to be written in the happiest vein of the editor of Punch, not only from the viewpoint of dialogue, but also as regards the wealth of amusing situations. From start to finish "The Lady of Ostend" is reputed to be grotesquely amusing, after the style of "Charley's Aunt" and "The Private Secretary," and welded together in such a way as to compel the merriment of its audiences.

Maude Adams Coming. Charles Frohman's celebrated star will come to the Grand on Saturday, Sept. 20, for two performances.

"The High Road." Edward Sheldon, author of "The High Road," which comes to the Grand shortly, has already earned a life competence in playwriting, and he is only in his 28th year. "Salvation Nell" brought him a fortune, which "The High Road" and "Romance," his two successes of last season, seem destined to greatly increase.

"The Garden of Allah," the most wonderful dramatic success known to America, will be the attraction at the Grand, Sept. 25, 26, and 27, for four performances. The play is a dramatization of the novel of that name by Robert Hichens and Mary Anderson Navarro. A troupe of Arabs from the desert, including a Mohammedan priest, several aides to Rasulla, the famous bandit, and other noted figures of the desert, were brought over to America. Mme. Faddma, a famous dancer of the Ouled Nalles tribe of Arabs, was also imported. The play has given one of the sensations of the theatrical season.

"The Pink Lady." With all of its original freshness and beauty, the international comedy success, "The Pink Lady," will be welcomed here at the Grand, Tuesday, Sept. 30, for one performance, with the same talented corps of players that has made this enjoyable musical play so delightful to audiences in the larger cities of the United States and Canada.

PRINCE GEORGE TOWNSITE

The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway announce the sale by auction of the townsite of Prince George, situated at the confluence of the Fraser and Nechaco Rivers, in Central British Columbia, 450 miles northeast of Vancouver, and 467 miles east of Prince Rupert, British Columbia, or midway between Prince Rupert and Edmonton, Alberta. By reason of its central location, Prince George will be the natural distributing point for the extensive territory comprised in the Pacific province of the Dominion, and it has, therefore, long been the expectation of the general public that upon the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, Prince George will early become a large and important centre. Having purchased what was known as the Fort George Indian Reserve, No. 1, for the purpose of locating a townsite thereon, the Grand Trunk Pacific Development Company has caused the same to be surveyed FISKE O'HARA, who will present his new play, "In Old Dublin," at the Grand for four nights, commencing next Wednesday.

McCLARY'S STOVE EXHIBIT

Vast crowds of people calling at McClary's stove exhibit in the stove building at the Western Fair show a splendid appreciation of the McClary's Champion Interchangeable Gas and Coal Range.

In view of the fact that everyone expects to see natural gas used in this city in a few months, this range is of particular interest, in that it handles natural gas, artificial gas, coal, coke, or wood, equally as well.

Be sure to call at McClary's stove exhibit and see this range.

No Other Way

BY GORDON HOLMES.

Author of "A Mysterious Disappearance," "The House of Silence," Etc.

"I think it depends largely on your own action as to whether or not they shall become actualities. It was so now. Doris gazed at him with wide-open eyes, in which there flickered some shadow of alarm. Still, Clancy could, when he chose, win a woman's confidence to a degree that almost irritated some of his professional colleagues. It was so now. She evidently found it absurd to suppose that this alert, lawyer-like, highly intelligent man should lend himself to fantastic theories devoid of basis.

"Will you kindly explain what you mean?" was her very natural exclamation. "I hope you will not ask me for proofs, because I have not got them," he said earnestly. "I can only assure you that the detective bureau, which has been giving close attention to this matter since—forgive me for speaking plainly—since Mrs. Delamar's husband was found dead on a yacht off the New Jersey coast."

"My sister, Mrs. Daunt, had the impression that that man was bound up in some way with Mrs. Delamar," came the involuntary cry.

"She was right. Mrs. Delamar is really Mrs. Kyrie, and if you read next Thursday's newspapers, you will discover that she has been called on to explain certain highly suspicious circumstances in connection with her husband's death. Now, Mrs. Waverton—prayer excuse me, but that is your right name—I must warn you that you will be both shocked and relieved by what I am going to tell you. We have, as I said, inquired very closely into every phase of this matter; such, for instance, as the divorce suit, which seemed to have a bearing, remote at first, on the death of this man, and it is our deliberate belief that Mr. Claude Waverton was killed that night on the road near Palm Beach. Yes, yes, you cannot be other than astounded, but my words are chosen with a full sense of their gravity. We believe, I repeat, that he was killed. We believe that the man, Charles Scott, tutor in a Spanish family from the Argentine, who was supposed to have been killed, in reality escaped with slight injuries, and took

GUARD BABY'S HEALTH IN THE SUMMER

The summer months are the most dangerous to little ones. The complaints of that season, which are cholera infantum, colic, diarrhoea and dysentery, come on so quickly that often a little one is beyond aid before the mother realizes he is ill. The mother must be on her guard to prevent these troubles, or if they do come on suddenly to cure them. No other medicine is of such aid to mothers during hot weather as is Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the stomach and bowels and are absolutely safe. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont.

Paralyzed and Could Not Walk

"Fruit-a-tives" Completely Restored New Brunswick Merchant to Health

MR. ALVA PHILLIPS.

Bristol, N. B., July 25, 1911.

"I am unable to say enough in favor of 'Fruit-a-tives,' as it saved my life, and restored me to health, when I had given up all hope and when the doctors had failed to do anything for me. I had a stroke of Paralysis in March, 1910, and this left me unable to walk or help myself, and the Constipation of the bowels was terrible. Nothing did me any good and I was wretched in every way. Finally I took 'Fruit-a-tives' for the Constipation, and it not only cured me of that trouble, but gradually toned up the nerves and actually cured the paralysis. Under the use of 'Fruit-a-tives' I grew stronger and stronger until all the palsy and weakness left me. I am now well again and attend my store every day and all day."

ALVA PHILLIPS.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only remedy in the world that is made of fruit juices and tonics.

"Fifty cents a box, six for $2.50—trial size 25 cents. All dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives, Limited, Ottawa.

"Yes, we cannot guess who this man really is, because the name, Charles Scott, is surely an alias. We cannot penetrate the motive that led him to commit a daring fraud on society. But there is one object to which he is committed with strange tenacity—he is determined that, should you wish to marry again, you will not be tempted to accept the proposal of the man who mentioned in the letter that led to your well-meant attempt at reconciliation."

She clasped her hands in an unconscious attitude of entreaty. "Mr. Clancy, can you give me no shred of proof, other than your unsupported word, as to this amazing story?"

Despite her vehemence, for her sweet voice was shrill and full of anguish, Doris was slowly recovering from the shock and the detective knew that the success or failure of his mission hung on the next few words.

"Yes," he said, "I cannot expect you to accept everything on trust. Here is the envelope that it was posted at Saginaw and delivered in New York."

Doris took the letter, and Clancy saw that she did not fail to examine the envelope as he had suggested. Then she read, and her lips were set tightly, though the dropped eyelids hid the gleam of fire that leaped up in her eyes when she came upon that sentence wherein the man said that he had "died" for her sake.

She re-read the letter, word by word, but no word was uttered for a long minute, because she was thinking deeply and Clancy imagined that she was now furiously angry with the impostor to whom she had been so kind.

At last she lifted her head, and her glance met the detective's squarely. "What do you want me to do?" she said. "I want you to unmask this pretender."

"How?"

"In the first place, by coming to New York this evening, or early tomorrow; so that my chief, Mr. Steingall, or I, can communicate with you without loss of time; secondly, by keeping secret all that I have said, keeping it hidden at present even from your sister, or your lawyer, thirdly, by promising to come to Atlantic City, or to Saginaw, which ever place is deemed most suitable, and there carry out the plan that will be made known to you. I cannot be more precise, because we must be guided by conditions as they arise. Lastly, provided you will promise to fall in with our plans, on arriving in New York to your own telephone your address to the bureau. You will then feel certain that you are not being hoodwinked by some mad dreamer of dreams, named Clancy, but that there is a sound, reasonable and official backing to the amazing story, as you rightly term it, that I have laid before you today."

Doris arose. Apparently she had made up her mind with remarkable quickness and determination.

"Yes," she said, "I put myself in your hands. I do not see what else I could do. Once and for all, the cloud that has darkened my life must be dispersed. I thought it had broken. Now, if not blacker than ever, it has become a dense fog. You say it is not impenetrable, so I shall help you to dispel it."

Clancy bowed himself out. In the corridor he clicked his right thumb against his fingers.

"Got him!" he said to himself, and the accompanying noisy gesture sounded uncommonly like the locking of fetters on a felon's wrists.

The Smart Outer Coat

Smart little three-quarter coats just such as this one, are the thing of the day at the summer resorts where the best dressers gather for the later summer days; in fact, this one was worn by a New York society woman on a Newport coaching trip this week. The material of green and white check was set off with white broadcloth collar, cuffs, and belt and green buttons and loops. A green and white hat, with black velvet facing, and stylish button boots below the narrow skirt, made up the sum of the smartness.

NEWEST IN TABLE LINENS.

Colored breakfast linen is in favor. Square cloths which hang only a few inches over the edge of the table, and small napkins, about fourteen inches square, are either of colored linen or else are bordered with color. Some, in sets, show border wreaths of red roses, some show red roses with bright green leaves. They suggest breakfast sets of English china with its gay colors and stiff figures. They suggest breakfast sets of pink, blue or yellow flowers on tan or gray linen. One set, of tan linen with yellow roses, has a machine-hemstitched cloth and a dozen machine-hemstitched napkins.

OTHER CONDENSED ADVERTISE-MENTS ON PAGE FOUR.

Many Women Spend All Day in the Kitchen

- Hoosier Features
1. You can clean the metal flour bin without inconvenience of removing. No other bin has this feature. Easily filled, because the top is low. Holds fifteen pounds more than any other. Best and fastest sifter.
2. Can't-break, can't-leak, metal, dust-proof sugar bin.
3. You can't lose the new swing lids on the twelve crystal glass spice, coffee, tea, salt and cereal jars.
4. You can open all doors freely, no matter what you pile on the table, because it slides out.
5. Crumbs can't stick in the new metal self-closing bread and cake box.
6. Flavoring extract bottles have special shelf.

New and Exclusive

- 7. Pure aluminum table at no extra charge; only acid-proof metal; costs manufacturers ten times as much as zinc. Enormous output keeps sale price less.
8. Sixteen inches extension over base when you slide out table. Plenty of knee room for sitting.
9. Comes apart to clean; closes tightly when not used.
10. Pick your choice of white or plain inside upper section. All-metal table, or oak side arms.
11. Interior construction that is not equaled anywhere—will last a lifetime.

1 package Melagama Tea.

Don't Wait

You may have a Hoosier Cabinet delivered and set up ready for use immediately if you decide now.

A single dollar brings your cabinet—the dollar club membership fee that is part of the price.

This is your last chance this year to join. Four thousand Hoosier agents in 4,000 towns are organizing branches of the great national Hoosier Club. Half a million women now own Hoosiers. Five hundred thousand more are waiting to get them.

The Hoosier is the only "lifetime" kitchen cabinet. It is a wonder of economy and convenience, and is sold so universally that the price can be made lower than on any other furniture.

The Hoosier Company allots to each of its 4,000 agents a limited number of cabinets for sale on this liberal club plan this season, and our share is so nearly gone that a day may see dozens of women disappointed.

Only Complete Cabinet
Every modern labor-saving machine for the kitchen has been tested by the Hoosier Company to bring the Hoosier to its present perfect perfection. It is the only scientifically built kitchen cabinet, and the only one that is complete as a labor-saving machine.

Have You a Pantry?

Women take so many steps daily and are on their feet so much that they rarely realize how greatly walking is the real drudgery of housework until they see how many steps the Hoosier Cabinet saves.

Some think a pantry and cupboard give all the convenience they need, but you women who have pantries and cupboards need a Hoosier more than anything else to save you miles of walking back and forth preparing and clearing up meals.

If you could save half the steps and do more things sitting down, kitchen work would no longer be such a nightmare.

Here's Some Shooting

14 Poodles; A Teddy Bear. Mr. Charlton Puts a Shooting Gallery at Toronto Out of Business. Mr. Emmanuel T. Charlton, of 349 Cheapside street, is some rifle shot. Fully aware of this accomplishment, he marvelled not a little when after squandering two-bits' worth of ammunition at a Toronto Exhibition shooting gallery he had failed to come closer than an inch to the bullseye. Then he took a squirt at the plumb line of the rifle barrel and called for another shilling's worth of bird shot. Bing, bang! The little birds scooted for safety, the rabbits somersaulted under cover and the ducks and geese sang a swan song in chorus. The bullseye was weeping and wailing like a Japanese wind harp in an Oklahoma hurricane, whatever that may be like. Mr. Charlton doesn't say how many two-bits it cost him, but he brought home fourteen poodle dogs and a teddy bear, and he says he left another small menagerie of his little nieces and nephews in Toronto. Finally the shooting-gallery man wouldn't let him shoot any more. Call it a square game? Well, it's a crooked rifle," said Mr. Charlton, and after tipping off one or two marksmen in the crowd that had gathered to see the sharp-shooting by the man that London should have sent to the Bisleys competition, he went away. Half an hour later he came back, and found that the shooting gallery had gone out of business. Mr. Charlton denies that he intends to donate his collection to the Springbank Zoo.

I. O. O. F. PICNIC AT GLANWORTH GREAT SUCCESS

Five Hundred People From All Over the District Were Present. FAST BASEBALL GAMES

Tug-of-War Resulted in Easy Victory for Home Team. [Special to The Advertiser.] Glanworth, Sept. 6.—The annual picnic held in Brady's park under the auspices of the I. O. O. F. Lodge was a great success. Over 500 people from all parts of the district were present. Two fast games of ball were big features. First the Glanworth married and single men played, the score being 6 to 4 in favor of the former. Then Pond Mills played Belmont, the result being an easy victory for Belmont.

Results of Races. The results of the races and sports were as follows: Boys, 7 years and under—Charlie Kirk, Jack McPherson, Harold Vanslyke. Boys, 10 years and under—Harry Rose, Charlie Cousin, Gordon Kirk. Boys, 14 years and under—Chester Anderson, Arthur Kirk. Single ladies' race—Maggie Thompson, Irene McMillan. Married ladies' race—Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Wintermute, Mrs. Farquer. Free-for-all—Truman McPherson, Erle Taylor. Married men's race—W. A. Campbell, John McMillan. Men, over 50 years—J. H. Smith, James Thompson, Erle Taylor and Mr. Betterly. Fat men's race—George White, D. J. Ferguson. Three-legged race—T. McPherson, and James Johnston, Erle Taylor and Mr. Betterly. Putting the shot—W. A. Campbell, Mr. Charlton. Standing broad jump—Truman McPherson, Erle Taylor. Hop, step and jump—Erle Taylor, Claud Farquer. High jump—Truman McPherson, Andrew McGill. Foot vault—Mr. Charlton, W. A. Campbell.

The Tug-of-War. Perhaps the event of the day was the tug-of-war. Glanworth is proud of its team, and justly so, for with Neil as anchor-man, they were invincible. When Belmont, elated over the success of their ball team, and confident of an easy victory, tried to smash Glanworth's record, the result was a walkaway for the home team. The success of the affair was largely due to the untiring efforts of the various committees, consisting of Messrs. George White, Angus Taylor, D. A. McPherson, C. Vanslyke, John McMillan, D. D. Simpson, John R. Nichol, J. R. Smith, Wm. Simpson and James Johnston.

Mr. J. H. Smith, the village blacksmith, made a genial but a most efficient gatekeeper, where the proceeds of an optional entrance fee amounted to £10. In the evening dancing was indulged in to the music furnished by the Wright and Regan orchestra, with Mr. Oliver Elliot as master of ceremonies.

DEFENDS TANGO AND INTENDS TO TEACH IT HERE

Local Academy Director Will Bar "Turkey Trot" and "Grizzly Bear." EXPECTS NO OBJECTIONS

Some Londoners Have Already Made Application for Lessons. The Tango is to be taught in a local dancing academy this season, and already several Londoners have made applications for lessons. Whether a protest will be made is problematical at present, as members when interviewed refused to say anything about the matter. "Tango" is taken from "tangere," the Latin verb, "to touch," but Mr. James McCormick, of the Dayton-McCormick Academy, says there is nothing offensive or suggestive in the tango if it is danced properly. He and his partner have been in several of the large American cities this summer taking note of the latest dances and studying some of the intricate steps that have been inaugurated lately. As a result several new dances will be introduced in London this year, but the Bunny Hug, the Grizzly Bear and the Turkey Trot will be barred.

The last-named three dances, Mr. McCormick says are suggestive and will not be allowed in his academy, but the tango is one of the prettiest dances that he has witnessed in some time, and he feels sure that the dancers of this city will be pleased with it when it is introduced. That the idea is taking hold in London was apparent to a newspaperman who while wandering his way homeward about 11 o'clock Friday night, was startled out of his reveries when he noticed two girls, apparently about 18 years of age, attempting the intricate steps of some tango-like novelty on Park avenue between Dundas and Queen's. As the scribe is not versed in the latest dances, he could not say whether they were studying the steps of the Tango, the Bunny Hug or the "Springbank Squirm," but the girls appeared to be adept at learning the steps, and in time to a dance tune, hummed by themselves, they gilded merrily along the cement walk.

There were few people on the street at the time, and the girls stepped daintily from the centre of the block to Queen's avenue before they were disturbed. Expects No Objection. Mr. McCormick does not think that any steps will be taken to stop the Tango once it is introduced in London. "A number of London people are studying it at present," said he. "There is absolutely nothing objectionable in it unless the couple who are dancing want to make it so. The same thing can be done in a waltz or a two-step, but there has been no protest from anyone about those old favorites. Of course, the tango will not be abandoned when the Tango and other dances are introduced. They will be danced just the same as they were when the Barn dance, the "tribby two-step and other dances were introduced."

The Whites Have Left For Parts Unknown

Mr. and Mrs. Robert and All the Little Ones Leave Home Between Traction Rails After Having a Perilous Upbringing Under Trolley Cars.

Mrs. Robert White, well known to motormen on the London and Lake Erie Railway, has removed to parts unknown, and the traction men in whose hearts the noble sentiments of a tender and protecting interest had been kindled towards her, now pass by or rather over her deserted home with lonesome and regretful feelings.

Mr. Robert White never resented the kindly interest which the motormen took in his little brown spotted, and he used to sit on the fence and greet them by singing out his own name, "Bob White," as he was familiarly known to his friends. He fully trusted the traction men, who he regarded a little sport right between the rails where the road runs through an old gravel pit north of Union, to build his little home. For Mr. and Mrs. Bob White, as everybody, including Teddy Roosevelt and the other nature faddists, knew, were just ordinary but cheerful, happy-go-lucky quails. There Mrs. White hatched out a funny-looking little brood of nestlings that for a week or more past have caused the motormen to growl with anxiety for their fondness for climbing up and sunning themselves on the rails. The motormen have been wont to slow down, however, and none of the little quails met with a mishap notwithstanding the unusual position of their home. On Friday Mrs. White, Mr. White and all the little Bobbies left for parts unknown, and in a sense the traction men are glad because no longer do their hearts stand still for fear the adventurous birdlings will come to grief between the car wheels and the rails.

The party will be in charge of the party. They will change to the C. P. R. at Moose Jaw, and proceed to Ashcroft, from whence they will be conveyed to Rev. Dr. F. Fraser, a distance of over a hundred miles.

Case Still Drags Along.—Hon. Adam Beck, M. P., stated this morning that the case of the Rev. Dr. F. Fraser, pastor of the First Methodist Church, and Rev. James Kennedy, charge of the services. The floral offering were many and beautiful. The funeral was held at 11 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. T. H. Purdom, K. C., and James Gray. Interment was made at Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

Miller Aiken.—On Friday evening at 8:30 o'clock, at the corner of Dundas and Clarence streets, had it not been for the quick action of the driver of the truck in turning out, a collision would have occurred and probably several firemen and passengers of the car injured.

When the apparatus left the scene the alarm, but in spite of this the motorman drove his car into it, striking more than halfway over the crossing. A policeman on duty waved to the motorman to back up, and the siren on the truck was kept going until the motorman reversed and backed up to let the ladder truck pass.

Lights candles being used by children at play in a Chinese garden are thought to have caused the fire in a barn belonging to Mr. F. Campbell, 58 Thornton avenue, shortly after 11 o'clock Monday. The blaze was extinguished by the firemen before much damage was done. It is estimated that the loss will be between $75 and $100.

CITY FORGING AHEAD

Some of the problems of the city of London have entered upon a new phase of their history. Every year of the past is being eclipsed by those of each succeeding year, and it would seem that nothing can stop the momentum of expansion which has been attained. That this growth should be well balanced and rounded along the best lines of modern civic development is the problem which confronts the people of London today, and a larger and more important one than ever before. It is not that the city is not being developed, but that it is not being developed in the best manner possible.

Loss $4,000,000 In Hot Springs Fire

High Wind Swept Small Blaze Into Shack District and Thirty Blocks Now in Ashes—Dynamite Helps Check Flames.

Hot Springs, Ark., Sept. 5.—More than thirty blocks on the eastern edge of the business district of Hot Springs had been swept clear tonight by a fire which at 9 o'clock threatened to eat its way toward Central avenue, the main business thoroughfare. A high wind was blowing, and the Hot Springs and Little Rock fire departments, the latter hurried to this city aboard special trains, had made but little headway in checking the flames. At 9 o'clock Sydney Dillon, commissioner of public utilities, estimated the loss would reach at least $4,000,000.

Started in Dwelling.
The fire originated in a negro dwelling on Church street, near Malvern avenue, just east of the Army and Navy Hospital, shortly after 3 o'clock this afternoon, and spread quickly to the south and east. A number of small dwellings, dry as tinder as the result of an extended drought, were easy prey for the flames, which, within a few minutes, were beyond control of the local fire department.

From this region the fire spread in a manufacturing section, then to a pretentious residence and hotel district, and at 9 o'clock the shifting wind threatened to carry the flames to the main business section. A supreme effort was made to divert the fire toward the suburb of South Hot Springs when it was apparent that efforts to control it would be unavailing.

City Plants Destroyed.
At 9 o'clock this effort appeared to be meeting with some success. Among the buildings destroyed were the city's light, water and power plants, the county court house, the Park, Jefferson, Princess and Moody hotels, the city high school, Iron Mountain Railroad station and shops, Ozark Sanatorium, People's Laundry, Crystal Theatre, and Bijou Rink, besides a hundred or more smaller buildings and many residences, some of them among the best in the city. No fatalities have been reported.

At times early in the night the gale reached a velocity of forty miles an hour, and three times the shifting wind currents changed the course of the fire. Twice it was headed for the main business district, the last time shortly after 9 o'clock, when by the free use of dynamite the combined forces succeeded in diverting the course of the fire toward South Hot Springs.

HUNDREDS HOMELESS.
Hot Springs, Sept. 5.—Under personal direction of Governor Hays, the task of providing for those made homeless by the fire, which last night destroyed property valued at millions of dollars in the eastern section of Hot Springs, began at daylight today.

Several hundred volunteer firemen were working to blot out the ruins in fear that the smoldering embers might be fanned into flames again should a wind arise.

It had not been determined early today whether the militia would be called on to assist in relief measures.

Under orders of Mayor McClendon all saloons are closed, and so far there has been no disorder. Two hundred and fifty citizens, sworn in as a special police force at a mass meeting held last night while the fire was at its height, continue to patrol the fire-swept area this morning.

Definite figures as to the monetary loss will not be possible until late today.

DYING PRISONER CLAIMED THAT CONSTABLE KICKED HIM

Story Is Corroborated by His Wife, But Absolutely Denied by the Officer—Inquest To Be Held—Man Was Arrested for Being Drunk.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Berlin, Sept. 5.—Coroner Dr. H. G. Lacker this afternoon opened an inquiry into the death of Joseph Griffin, a married man, 50 years of age, who died at the hospital at midnight Thursday.

Before his death Griffin made a sworn statement that he had been ill-treated and kicked by Constable Meehan when he was taken into custody three weeks ago.

The jury this afternoon viewed the remains and adjourned until Monday. Doctors Bowby and Lacker conducted a post-mortem examination. A discoloration below the abdomen was the only mark to indicate that he had been injured.

Wife's Story.
According to Mrs. Griffin, Constables Farrel and Meehan came to the home on Foundry street, and at her request, placed her husband under arrest. The man was intoxicated and was becoming unruly. According to the woman, Meehan kicked the prisoner in the abdomen as they were leaving the house. The prisoner was taken to the cells and removed to the jail until he was in condition to appear in court. At the jail he became dangerously ill and was removed to the hospital, where he died after two weeks.

Constable Meehan denies the allegation. At the inquest, he will testify that he did not kick the prisoner or ill-treat him. Griffin had been arrested on a previous occasion, and the constable believes that because of this he held a grievance.

James Anderson Had Arm Torn Off

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Petrolia, Sept. 5.—James Anderson, an employe of the Lambton Packing Company, had his hand and part of his arm torn off today. The belt of one of the corn-cleaning machines came off, and he attempted to replace it without slackening the machinery, which goes at terrific speed.

The machine caught the tips of his fingers and dragged him over the shafting, and literally twisted his arm off. He was thrown over the shaft and had a very narrow escape from being thrown out of the window, which was open. As it happened on the third floor, this would have meant instant death. He did not faint and was at once rushed to the hospital.

CHURCH WAS BURNED.

Boston, Sept. 5.—The "Bullfinch Place Unitarian Church," one of the oldest church edifices in the city, was gutted by fire early today, causing a loss estimated at $50,000.

Smooth Swindler Gets $2,500 More

James Ray is Cleverest Faker Bankers Have Met in Some Time.
Toronto, Sept. 6.—As a result of the operations of a smooth swindler giving the name of James Ray, Ontario banks are out $11,000 in two days. The police in five towns are diligently searching for Ray, but so far he has eluded all pursuers.

Ray operated successfully at Galt, Berlin and Guelph on Thursday, getting $8,500 by means of a forged letter of identification. Then he jumped to Lindsay and calmly did the same trick again, securing $2,500 without the slightest trouble.

The Guelph bank manager is certain that Ray is a former employe of the bank.

Western Crops Are Nearly All Saved

Farmers Are All Well Pleased With the Yield.

[Canadian Press.]
Regina, Sask., Sept. 5.—Seventy per cent of the wheat, sixty per cent of the oats, and seventy-five per cent of the barley crop of Saskatchewan has been cut, according to the estimate of the provincial department of agriculture.

In many districts, the work of harvesting has been completed and threshing is now in full swing, while throughout all the agricultural areas ideal weather conditions prevail, and the task of the season is being carried rapidly to completion. Warm days with occasional showers have been general.

At Shelbyville, to cite one of the districts in which a particularly heavy crop has been cut, wheat will average 30 bushels to the acre; oats 75, and barley 50. That the slight frosts experienced in various localities on Sept. 1 and 2 have not caused damage in any instance is apparent from a perusal of the bulletin. Absence of damaging frost has enabled the cultivators of garden crops to save their produce, and the yield will be an excellent one.

Knows No Reason For Girl's Suicide

Remains in Detroit Morgue Were Identified by James L. Parker.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Detroit, Sept. 6.—The young girl who committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid on the porch of Mr. Ruth's home on Thursday night, has been identified as Olive B. Parker, 17 years old, of 33 Sylvester avenue, Detroit.

Her father, James L. Parker, made the identification. He was unable to give any motive for the suicide of his daughter, the youngest of nine children.

"She left the house about 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. That was the last her mother saw of her," said Mr. Parker.

Several hours after the time her father said she left home, the girl rapped frantically at the door of Mrs. T. A. Ruth's home, at 104 Piquette avenue.

"I have just taken poison," the girl cried. "I am burning; I want water." First aid failed to save the girl. She was taken to Grace Hospital unconscious and died there an hour later.

Late Thursday night a woman called up the hospital. She screamed and dropped the receiver when told the girl who had taken poison was dead.

Parker said his daughter had no love affair that he knew of. She had not seemed despondent, he said. No one seems to have any theory as to how Miss Parker came to her position of self-destruction.

Guard Asylum After Thaw Has Escaped

[Canadian Press.]
Beacon, N. Y., Sept. 6.—The authorities at the Matteawan Hospital for the Criminal Insane have begun the erection of a second fence, with a large gate at the point where Harry K. Thaw escaped on July 17, by dashing out when the gate was opened for the milkman. As teams enter the gate it will be locked, then the iron gates will be opened, and the inmates such an easy escape as Thaw made. The fences are 14 feet high, with sliding gates.

AN ALL-AROUND NEWSPAPER.

It is generally conceded that the Chicago Record-Herald is the great family newspaper of the Central West. What has given it this favored position in the home? The explanation will be found, not in any single feature, but in the all-around excellence of all its departments, so that it appeals alike to men and women, young and old, gay and serious—the whole family.

The superior news-gathering facilities and high-class literary features of the Record-Herald have been the main factors in its wonderful success. Besides the full service of the Associated Press, it receives the foreign cable service of the New York World and Herald, and Washington telegrams from New York, and Washington—also correspondents in all large cities. It has its special correspondents in every town of the Central West, who report all important news by telegraph. Complete and reliable market reports and financial news can always be found in its columns, with all other news of the business world. Its sporting department also is of the best.

But man and woman cannot live by news alone. The true distinction of the Chicago Record-Herald comes with what it gives over and above the news—in such features as S. E. Kiser's daily column of humor, George Fitch's witty essays, the daily stories and pictures of "Jones's Daily Magazine," the breezy articles by Miss Sarah Bernhardt, and the admirable art talks entitled "Learn One Thing Every Day." This newspaper's criticisms of the drama, music and books are unsurpassed by any in the country. Choicest of all these extra features is the Sunday Magazine of the Record-Herald, a real magazine, full of good stories and pictures by the best living authors and artists—a feast of entertainment for the whole family. The Chicago Record-Herald has earned its pre-eminence by sold all-around excellence.

AT THE FAIR GROUNDS.

Farmers and live stock owners in general will be given valuable information, relative to the insuring of live stock, at the Fair grounds this year. A tent or booth will be located immediately to the east of the main entrance to the reconstructed horse stables. Mr. Finley Marshall will be in charge and will gladly furnish complete information. Mr. Marshall is Inspector of the General Animal Insurance Company of which Mr. Robt. Ness is president and Mr. R. A. Leduc is manager. The General Animal Insurance Company have placed this tent on the grounds for the benefit of live stock owners.

WHITE SLAVER MAY BE JAILED FOR 20 YEARS

Son of American Commissioner General of Immigration Found Guilty.

MANY OTHER CHARGES

The Jury Was Out Three Hours and Took Eight Ballots.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
San Francisco, Sept. 6.—Farley Drew Caminetti, son of the commissioner general of immigration, was found guilty late yesterday on one count of the indictment charging him with violation of the Mann white slave act.

The jury was out three hours and took eight ballots. From the first the vote stood 10 to 2 for conviction and finally the two recalcitrants agreed to compromise by finding a verdict of guilty on one of the four counts charged.

Bail in the sum of $10,000 was furnished. Sentence will be pronounced Wednesday, Sept. 10, the date set for sentencing Maury I. Diggs, jointly indicted with Caminetti and convicted on four counts.

Six Indictments.
Caminetti and Maury I. Diggs, former state architect of California, were jointly indicted on six counts, and Diggs was found guilty on the other two. Because of the special circumstances surrounding Caminetti's individual part in the flight from Sacramento, Cal., to Reno, Nev., with Marjorie Warrington and Lola Norris, the Government elected in the second trial to press only four counts.

The first two counts charged that he transported and aided in transporting two girls to Reno, Nevada, and each count carried a maximum penalty of five years and a federal penitentiary and $5,000 fine. Thus, Diggs is liable to 20 years' imprisonment and $20,000 fine, and Caminetti to five years and $5,000 fine.

The verdict corresponds with the contention of the Government, which was that Diggs was the self-constituted boss and major domo of the party, and Caminetti more or less of a passive and obedient agent.

Not Guilty.
The second two counts charged that Caminetti "persuaded and aided in persuading, inducing and enticing" two girls to go, and here again one count applied to each girl.

The finding of the jury was that Caminetti was guilty on the single count of transporting and aiding in transporting Lola Norris to Reno for immoral purposes. It did not consider his responsible for Marjorie Warrington's elopement with Diggs and it refused to believe that Miss Norris had been enticed into going.

Other Charges.
There remain over the heads of both Diggs and Caminetti indictments charging conspiracy to violate the Mann law, in view of the conviction of the stronger charge of actual violation, the weaker indictments will not be pressed. Conspiracy carries a maximum penalty of two years' imprisonment.

Diggs, however, has still a third indictment hanging over him. With Charles B. Harris, of Sacramento, his former attorney, he is accused of subornation of perjury. Nellie Brown, a friend of Marjorie Warrington, testified during the Diggs trial that Harris and Diggs had coached her in testimony, which she in turn was to give in the case of Warrington for use on behalf of Diggs.

The perjury trial will be called before Judge Van Fleet on Wednesday, the day of the sentences.

A. O. F. IS SOLID AND DEPENDABLE

Oldest Fraternal Society for the Care of Sick and Protection of the Home.

RATES ARE FIXED AND SURE IN ALL RESPECTS

A Worldwide Reputation, With Courts in All Civilized Countries of the Globe.

The Ancient Order of Foresters is the oldest fraternal society instituted for the care of the sick and providing protection to the home, and having the experience of time, it knows what to charge for its benefits and also what to give.

It can provide any protection a man should desire for his home for a moderate, adequate payment. The society in London provides medical attendance and medicine free. It gives $4 per week for one year when sick, also $2 per week or another year if required; $100 insurance and $50 for death of wife.

It has courts established all over the world and members may transfer thereto. It issues regular contract policies of insurance of $250 to $2,000, a straight lift, a pay life or endowment, with loan and cash values.

There is no assessment system, the rates being fixed and sure in all respects.

There are also juvenile branches for the boys and girls and companion branches for the wives and lady members.

The society knows no creed in religion, no code in politics. It gives protection at cost price and security in old age.

EXPERTS DIFFER AS TO DRAINAGE IN NEW DISTRICT

Engineer Ashplant Thinks an Outlet Down Egerton Street Is Necessary.

CONFERENCE SUGGESTED

Complaint of 50 Per Cent Increase in Salaries Lodged by Ald. Richter.

In order that the storm sewer question may be placed in shape to enable the plans to be submitted to the electorate as soon as possible, the finance committee Friday recommended that Engineer Chipman, the expert who drew the plans for the scheme, and City Engineer W. N. Ashplant get together and thresh out the question whether there will be an easterly outlet of the system down Egerton street to the river. In the Chipman plans such an outlet is not contained. City Engineer Ashplant has submitted a report to the council saying that it is necessary. In view of this expert difference, the members of the finance committee decided that everything would have to be settled before the question went to the people. A conference of the two engineers, either in London or in Toronto, was recommended and that as soon as possible.

Another engineering question that came before the committee was the question of salaries in the city engineer's department. Engineer Ashplant recommended an increase in the maximum of draughtsmen from $800 to $1,000, the creation of the office of surveyor-draughtsmen at a maximum of $1,200, and of the office of "engineering assistant" at a maximum of $1,600. The minimum for this last office was placed at $1,200. Nothing was done with the engineer's proposal, the question being left over for further consideration. The finance aldermen objected to the question being sprung now, claiming that the striking of estimates would be the proper time to bring the proposal forward.

"The salaries in the engineering department have jumped 50 per cent. in the past two years," declared Ald. J. G. Richter, as he voiced his disapproval of the recommendations. "It's altogether too much of a good thing."

Some comments on the way the engineering department was now conducting its work, as compared to what was done under the regime of ex-City Engineer George W. Wright, were also made.

No Report on Railway. The question of street railway schedules, routes, etc., was again brought up, but there being no report in by the engineer, it was laid over. A request was sent on to the engineer to hurry up the final reports.

Dealing with the request of the London Health Association for the $15,000 voted to the Byron Sanatorium by the electorate, the committee decided to pay over $5,000 at once. The entire issue of debentures covering the sanatorium grant has not yet been disposed of.

The bill of the Provincial Board of Health for placing the Anderson avenue dump in sanitary shape was considered.

The city has no option but to pay the bill, but the charges, amounting to $450, will be charged against the property-owners.

City Clerk S. Baker brought to the attention of the board of the city of Toronto, where sanitary repairs made to buildings, etc., are charged against the property concerned, and the cost spread over a period of five years. Something of a similar nature may be tried here in reference to Anderson avenue.

Tenders for city printing and advertising were instructed to be called for at once.

These Two Devices Give
The Meister-Touch
"Most Human of all"

Great pianists like de Pachmann, Scharwenka and Carreno—they have the meister touch—the genius and ability to get the much-talked-of "singing tone" out of a piano.

To reproduce this tone is impossible on any but the

New Scale
Williams Player Piano

As a counter-balance to your lack of professional training, the expression control in this great instrument is designed to give the real Meister-Touch.

The two opposing diaphragms shown in illustration breathe the tone out like a singer—make the touch flexible and give the tone shading and really human expression. With the Meister-touch you can emphasize any note or chord, or the entire melody—or only the accompaniment.

We will make a generous allowance in exchange for your old piano. 2D

Don't laugh too much at my chivalrous attachment, or think the rational portion of my letter unworthy of a reply.

If this is fond, and a little extravagant, it is the fondness and extravagance of a good woman, not at all ashamed to show her feelings for her preux chevalier. It is not the gushing affection of a sentimentalist. We like Wellington the better for receiving such letters, as we presume to like the lady for writing them. The great man on his part, spent no little pains over his correspondence with Lady Shelley, and in 1825 he was earnestly advising her about her eldest son, who was ambitious of entering the army. The boy must understand, says the duke,

"That there is nothing learnt but by study and application. I study and apply, more, probably, than any man in England could do. I would impress all this upon his mind; and, moreover, tell him that there is nothing like never having an idle moment. If he has only one-quarter of an hour to employ, it is better to employ it in some fixed pursuit of improvement of his mind than to pass it in idleness or listlessness."

Alas! this delightful friendship was to suffer a grievous interruption. In January, 1847, Wellington wrote to Sir John Burgoyne, inspector-general of fortifications, a long letter on what he conceived to be the defenceless state of the country:

"Owing to a general feeling of uneasiness among all classes in England," says the editor, "Sir John Burgoyne did not regard the duke as a person of the high authority of the writer on such subjects, he thought that his country's interests would be best served by making the duke's views known to as many influential persons as possible. Among those to whom the letter was shown was Lady Shelley, who, with the most patriotic intentions, exerted herself to make its contents generally known."

The duke's confidential letter was, in fact, communicated to the press, and there was a general hubbub. It passes the belief how Lady Shelley, who had ventured on so terrible a liberty with a person of the character and in the position of Wellington, who, whatever his own feelings in any situation, was ever a loyal servant of the Government. His astonishment was almost as great as his indignation, and poor Lady Shelley had to put up with some very scathing epistles from the duke, who passed in an instant from "Ever yours, most affectionately" to "Your obedient ship's most obedient and humble servant." Long afterwards, Lady Shelley wrote:

"When eventually the duke's memorandum got into the newspapers through the action of Mr. Puck, the duke was very angry, and punished me severely by the cruel manner in which he reproached me in society for my indiscretion. I could not complain of this, as my conscience told me I had done wrong, and was unworthy of the confidence I had so long enjoyed, in failing to appreciate the duke's noble patriotism. He had persuaded himself that I had through my personal interference that this famous document had appeared in the papers. He made me feel the deepest humiliation in being no longer worthy of his confidence. I kissed the rod, and felt that I deserved to be dashed from the pinnacle on which our friendship had placed me."

Ultimately, the duke made friends again, but the pair were never on quite the same footing.

"The threads of an intimacy once broken are not easily joined. Once more I heard the friendly voice, but it seemed to come from afar. Alas! when confidence has received a shock, nothing can revive it!"

Early in the volume we get a full view of Scott, in a yet Sir Walter. Lady Shelley visited Abbotsford, and received from the host the compliments that seem to have been showered on her wherever she went. He had seen her riding in Paris with Wellington, and there are reasons for believing that it was Lady Shelley he was thinking when he wrote of the brilliant horsemanship of Di Vernon. "I am quite sure," he said at table, "that the author of the Scottish novels must have seen Lady Shelley ride ere he described Di Vernon." From this it will be perceived that the authorship of the Waverley Novels was still unacknowledged. Internal evidence had already convinced some of those who knew him best that Scott was the writer; others doubted, assigning the curious reason that he, who was perhaps the most indefatigable worker of his day, was seldom seen to work at all. One of his friends afterwards informed Lady Shelley:

How to Absorb an Unlovely Complexion

[Phyllis Moore, in Town Talk.]
The face which is admired for its beauty must have a smooth, satiny, pink and white and youthful looking. The only complexion out of an aged, faded, or discolored one, is a natural one, not a painted, complexion—is ordinary mercerized wax. This remarkable substance literally absorbs the dirt and grime from the face each day, the clear, healthy, girlish skin beneath gradually peeping out until within a week or so it is wholly new in evidence. Of course, such blemishes as freckles, moth patches, liver spots, blotches and pimples will procure an equal measure of practical benefit. Use like cold cream every night, washing this off mornings; you'll find it a veritable magic. Another valuable natural treatment is a wash lotion to remove wrinkles which can be readily prepared. Dissolve one ounce powdered sassafras in half pint witch hazel. Bathe the face in this and you'll find it "works like magic."

Studebaker
"SIX"
$1800

One of The Most Remarkable Cars Ever Seen in Canada

We urge you to see immediately the $1800 Studebaker "SIX" Touring Car.

The advantages of this "SIX" are so marked, that it may truly be said for the first time to open up to men of moderate means all those luxuries of motoring which have hitherto been found only in the most expensive cars.

The most conspicuous qualities of this "SIX" are its even flow of power, its wonderful smoothness and flexibility, and its ability to do all work with effortless ease and a minimum of wear.

The sensation which this "SIX" has already created among the well-informed has a solid basis in the efficiency which it shows under all road conditions.

Buy It Because It's a Studebaker

Standards of Luxury

The Studebaker "SIX" is, of course, electrically lighted and started. It is furnished with full six-passenger body containing two exceedingly comfortable auxiliary seats, which may easily be folded out of the way.

The finish is rich and lustrous, requiring twenty-four operations, and weeks of drying and aging for the painting alone. The rich upholstery enables the occupants to tour long distances without fatigue.

The Studebaker "SIX" is also completely equipped. Speedometer, electric dash light, electric horn, detachable, demountable rims, with extra rim furnished, and Studebaker Jiffy curtains, which can quickly be slipped in place from inside the car, are evidences of the care Studebaker has for the owner's comfort.

Innumerable little refinements, all of which go to make up the owner's satisfaction, are exceedingly well worth your attention. Both in beauty of line and every finished detail, the Studebaker "SIX" is a very attractive car.

Mechanical Advantages

The motor design of the Studebaker "SIX" is characteristically clean, simple and efficient. The cylinders are cast en bloc, warranting perfect alignment and rigidity, and the pump and magneto are set on a cross shaft in front of the motor, where they operate silently and at the same time leave the valves completely accessible.

The four large crank-shaft bearings of this motor insure long life and even running. So finely, too, is the crank-shaft proportioned, that it will balance perfectly in any position. In the rear axle beautiful design is to be found. The axle shafts are of nickel steel, and the whole assembly is what is known as a full-floating axle. All the weight from the wheels is carried on the housing, and thus the axle shafts are relieved of all road shocks.

The springs are long and very resilient, so that any roughness of the road is always cushioned.

LADY SHELLEY'S DIARY
FIRST VOLUME REVIEWED

Charming Picture of Private Life of the Duke of Wellington.

"The Diary of Frances Lady Shelley, 1818-1873." Edited by her grandson, Richard Edgumbe. Vol. II. (Murray, 10s 6d net.)

In reviewing the first volume of Lady Shelley's "Diary" (now, by the way, in its seventh edition), we claimed for it a very special value as giving to the world a new, life-like, and altogether charming picture of the Duke of Wellington in his private life. The "Iron Duke"—that very name inspires the nervousness—has never fascinated mankind as the "Little Corporal" has done. To write nowadays of Napoleon with any approach to authority it would be necessary to have read at least two hundred books about him; but of really intimate and knowledgeable works concerning Wellington there are probably not a dozen in existence.

At a stroke, however, Lady Shelley obliged us all to form quite a fresh set of opinions concerning the great man whom she so genuinely and romantically worshipped, and herein lay at once the charm and the importance of her book. No one who has not read these two volumes can know Wellington as he himself chose to be known among the very friends of his heart. Lady Shelley describes her hero as

"Not only the greatest but the most agreeable man whom I have ever met. He possesses a fund of anecdote, a very retentive memory, and a candor in expressing his thoughts which heightens the charm of his society." He tells us exactly what one wants to know, and never indulges in what is commonly called "small talk."

Nowhere does the diarist make the least secret of her deep and reverent affection for him. After one of the duke's visits to Maresfield, she writes:

"Unless you could see into my soul, it would be impossible for you to understand the happiness I felt at receiving you under my own roof, and the unspeakable delight with which I now think over every moment of your stay."

"I have had the pheasant stuffed that you killed"—the duke was no great shot, but improved under Sir John Shelley's tuition—"and have added it to other delicacies which ornament my dressing-room. I forgot to show you, among my other treasures, the chair on which you sat the first time you dined with us in 1814."

wanted to know my name. Mr. Speaker, I scorned to equivocate, I told them my name was Waters."

The following letter, a copy of which was given to Lady Shelley in Ireland, was written by a jailer's wife at Galway to the ladies' maids at a place called Woodden. It is certainly too good to be lost:

"Mrs. Murphy's compliments to the ladies of Woodden. If the maids like to see Sergt. Black hanged, she will be happy of the honor of their company at breakfast tomorrow. I will have the pleasure of conducting the ladies to the gallows. Mrs. Murphy will take care the execution shall be deferred till the ladies arrive."

During a pause in conversation at dinner, Monckton Milnes said:

"As the Babylonian is revived in the Hebrew, I should like to see a revival of Nebuchadnezzar in Disraeli, now that he is the representative of the 'grazing' interest."

As before, Mr. Edgumbe has done the work of editing extremely well.

THE ARTISTIC CANADIAN GIRL.
Innately Appreciative of Aesthetic Decoration.

It is generally conceded by everyone who visits our country that there is no possible doubt as to the high artistic temperament of our Canadian women. They furnish abundant evidence of their tastes, their dress and their ambitious ambition for refined accomplishments. As a needlewoman in fancywork of all kinds the Canadian girl has no superiors in any part of the world, and furthermore she never allows herself to lag in the rear of the procession, but insists on keeping up-to-date and up-to-the-minute in all ideas and qualifications that go to adorn her person or her home. This fact has been singularly exemplified since The Advertiser began its grand distribution of Imperial Patterns for beautiful embroidery. Thousands of ladies, thousands of mothers, thousands of housewives, thousands of girls, have practically manifested their interest in the proposition by personal application and by mail, all determined to take advantage of the unprecedented offer of our $10 worth of designs for 68 cents and six coupons. This universal demand on the part of women readers of The Advertiser for the most stylish embroidery patterns abundantly proves that cultivated taste and artistic nature of the genuine Canadian woman.

MAY ASK BAIL FOR HARRY THAW IMMEDIATELY

Immigration Officer Says Thaw Will Be Deported for Certain.

WOULD BAIL HIS ENEMY Lawyers Are Jubilant Over Defeat and Hasty Flight of Jerome.

[Canadian Press.] Montreal, Sept. 6.—An application for bail, it is believed, will be the next move by the lawyers for Harry K. Thaw, who yesterday succeeded in securing from Justice Cross and Gervais a writ of habeas corpus returnable in Montreal on Sept. 15, and an order preventing the immigration officials from deporting Stanford's White slayer.

The legal contingent from Montreal Thaw's case, accompanied by "Gentleman Roger" Thompson, the chauffeur who drove the rescue car from Matteawan, now out on bail, on a charge of bringing a lunatic into Canada, returned on a special train today.

While the Thaw lawyers will not give out an inkling of their intentions, it is thought that they will, with the same quietness as was observed when the habeas corpus writ and prohibition order were secured yesterday, appear in the court of King's bench either today or Monday and make their appeal for bail. In legal circles here the belief is held that the Thaw case is now safely launched on its long trip to the privy council, and that the Thaw family has put up all the money required for its transportation.

Will Be Deported. E. Blake Robertson, assistant superintendent of the Dominion Immigration department, who passed through Montreal on his way home to Ottawa, said: "Thaw will be deported; he sure of that."

Mr. Robertson said in all probability the sustaining of the writ would be opposed on the ground that it was either knowingly or unknowingly under false pretences.

Pressed for a statement, N. K. Laffamme, of the Thaw counsel, said: "We asked Jerome, and there will be no depositions. That's enough for the present."

Would Bail Jerome. [Canadian Press.]

Cootecook, Que., Sept. 5.—Rousseau, one of Jerome's bondsmen, who in his capacity of hotelkeeper has been serving Thaw's meals, said today that Thaw had told him in all seriousness that he (Thaw) would like to have gone on Jerome's bond, and that he was ready to stand the loss should the bond at any time be forfeited.

"He told me that yesterday when I served his dinner," said Rousseau, "and again this morning when he heard the Jerome case was going over."

EXTENDED THE OPTION

London Leaves Debenture Business in Same Hands.

City finances are in better shape than they have been recently. Friday the finance committee indefinitely extended the option on $140,000 worth of debentures held by Wood, Gundy & Co., Toronto. The company's option on the debentures was for a month. The new one is terminable on a week's notice. Out of the $164,500 debentures in the city's last issue, the Toronto company has already disposed of $150,000. The remainder of the allotment will be sold, it is expected, within a short time.

Brent, Noxon & Co., Toronto, who applied for a block of the debentures, were referred to the Wood, Gundy Company, selling agents.

SHOT WHILE HUNTING.

[Canadian Press.] Oak Point, Man., Sept. 6.—Phillips Shore, aged 14, was accidentally shot dead yesterday while hunting.

PEOPLE RESENT WHITNEY'S IDEA OF RIGHT GOVT.

Recent Remarks Savor More of Russian Tyranny Than Canadian Democracy.

Remarkable Adoption of Leading Planks in the Rowell Platform.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Toronto, Sept. 6.—In a week marked by much political activity owing to the East York by-election three significant meetings of non-political organizations have been held. The remarkable feature is that in all three meetings political issues now before the people of Ontario were discussed, and in every case the reforms advocated are included in the Rowell program of social legislation. The three gatherings referred to are the labor men's deputation to Sir James Whitney, the annual meeting of the Tax Reform League, and the yearly assembly of the Dominion Alliance council.

Two Leading Planks. Tax reform and workmen's compensation, both leading planks in the Rowell program, were what the labor men asked for. Sir James Whitney promised a compensation bill for next session, but labor leaders will tell you frankly that they would have had much more confidence in the justice of the impending bill had it not been for the six years' delay by the Whitney Government. Such hesitancy, they claim, does not show very live citizenship on the part of the government.

Unpleasant News. Only for the labor men, but for the reformers at their convention, was the Prime Minister's refusal to give any encouragement as a change of attitude towards tax reform. His opposition seems to be constitutional and chronic. The most famous phrase of the week was the quite remarkable sentiment expressed to the labor men by Sir James Whitney. "The sensible way," he said, "is to let the government interpret what is best for the people and what the people want."

People Resent Attitude. For a day or two "the people" could scarcely realize that the Prime Minister of what is supposed to be a democratic province, could have given utterance to such a reactionary opinion, but as the realization of its import grows, general resentment is expressed.

It is likely to be a traditional sentence in the history of Ontario politics, and will long be quoted as an example of a Tory expression as late as the second decade of the twentieth century.

"JOKER" MAY BRING TROUBLE TO BOARD

City Wants Interswitching Dispute Settled by Railway Commission.

Forcing the hand of the railway commission to take steps to end the interswitching trouble, is the purpose of a little "joker" that is scheduled to go through the council on Monday night. This "joker" takes the form of a recommendation to allow the C. P. R. to cross Nightingale avenue.

Under existing conditions the Grand Trunk has refused to allow the C. P. R. running rights over the interswitching, to tap the new McCormick plant. By crossing Nightingale avenue, the C. P. R. will have its own entrance. The Grand Trunk also desires permission to cross this street to put a switch into the McCormick property to facilitate freight shipments. Neither the city nor the commission will stand for the double crossing—the switches coming from different directions, but crossing the road side by side, according to the present plans.

This means that action will be taken by the commission to arrive at some solution of the problem, and it is believed that the secured will be a settlement of the entire interswitching problem, as well as a better working agreement between the C. P. R. and the G. T. R. not only for interswitching, but for factory switching along the right-of-way of the Grand Trunk's interswitching line from its own property to that of the C. P. R.

SENSATIONAL EVIDENCE AT PROBE INTO WRECK

Engineer Had to Stop Because Fireman Could Not Keep Up Steam.

[Canadian Press.] New York, Sept. 5.—A cable from London today says: The unanimous protest of the press against holding the board of trade inquiry into the Aisling disaster behind closed doors had its effect, and the investigation yesterday was reopened in public session. The evidence was sensational, although it only concerned the stationery men employed on the stationery.

Nicholson, the engine driver, told the inspector that his locomotive had failed for want of steam, and that the failure was due to unsuitable coal. The locomotive was hauling 243 tons up a steep incline to Aisling, although the usual limit was 220 tons, and his request at Carleton Place for an auxiliary engine had been refused.

Metcalf, who was fireman on the stalled locomotive, also told of the coal being so small that he could not keep up steam. He revealed the fact that by running back to the signal box after the collision he stopped a freight train which was approaching from the south.

MOTORMAN SUES GRAND TRUNK RY. FOR HIS INJURIES

Man Who Drove Car in Interswitching Accident Wants $1,000.

W. E. PHOENIX ALSO SUES Requests Sum of $3,000 for Being Struck on Level Crossing.

Mr. Frank Swadling, of this city, the street railway motorman who was injured on the night of July 24 when his car, containing thirteen passengers, crashed into a string of moving freight cars at the interswitching on Dundas street, has issued a writ against the Grand Trunk in the supreme court for $1,000. Negligence on the part of the company is alleged. Messrs. Gibbons, Harper & Gibbons are representing the plaintiff.

Milk Dealer Sues. Messrs. Gibbons, Harper & Gibbons, acting for Mr. W. E. Phoenix, of Oak street, have issued a writ in the supreme court against the Grand Trunk Railway for $3,000 and costs. Mr. Phoenix is a milk dealer, and was driving south on Burwell street one afternoon last spring. In crossing the Grand Trunk tracks he was struck by an express train, and badly injured. His wagon was demolished and his supply of milk spilled. In his statement of claim Mr. Phoenix states that the express was running at a high and unlawful rate at speed, and also that the crossing watchman employed by the defendant company failed in his duty by not warning him of the approach of the express.

Writ Against Repair Company. A special sitting of the county court has been arranged for Sept. 10, at which non-jury cases will be dealt with. The first case to be entered is an action by Messrs. C. S. Hyman & Co., of this city, against Mrs. Dagmar Grayson and Arthur Grayson, proprietors of the Rapid Shoe Repairing Company, for $224.75, and interest from May 12, 1912. The amount is claimed to be due for stock supplied. Messrs. Gibbons, Harper & Gibbons are acting for the plaintiffs, and Mr. H. D. Petrie, of Hamilton, for the defendants.

SWISS ARE DOING SOME FINE SHOOTING

Camp Perry, Ohio, Sept. 6.—The most important of the international matches to date was opened on the 300-metre range here today, the international team match with free rifles, 250 shots, 40 standing, 40 kneeling and 40 prone. Teams representing Canada, the United States, Switzerland, France, England, the Argentine Republic and Sweden took the firing line. Inasmuch as the Swiss shooters have been holding first place in all the 300-metre shooting, they are looked upon as having the best chance to win.

The match will be concluded by evening. The first, second and third prizes are respectively $1,000, $500 and $300. The following is the line-up of the Canadian team: Lieut. A. J. Blackburn, Major W. L. Dymond, Sergt. Alexander Martin, Col. J. Duff Stuart, Lieut. George Mortimer.

IN THE POLICE COURT

When William McMullen, a member of the prohibitory list, was arrested Friday night on a charge of a breach of the liquor license act, he thought that he would get off with the usual fine of $10 with the option of 21 days in jail. He was sadly disillusioned when he appeared this morning, for another charge of supplying liquor to Cornelius Doxstader, an Indian, was registered against him. And to substantiate the charge against him was a quart bottle of whiskey which had been found in the possession of Doxstader, and which he said had been supplied by McMullen. On the charge of a breach of the act by being under the influence of liquor, McMullen was fined $10 with the option of 21 days in jail, and on the charge of supplying liquor to an Indian he was fined $50 with the option of a month in jail.

Caught With Goods. Doxstader has made frequent appearances in court, and always refused to divulge the name of the man who supplied him with the liquor, but as he was caught with the "goods" this time, he was fined $50 with the option of a month.

Standing in front of the Savoy Hotel on Clarence street Friday night was a young woman. A fresh young man accepted a dare from a companion to walk up to her and make himself acquainted. She turned him down flat and called a policeman.

The Cost of "Washing." When he appeared in police court this morning he paid a $5 fine and $1 costs.

Peter Fairburn made all kinds of promises and excuses when he appeared in court Friday morning on a charge of being drunk, and the excuses and promises were so effective he was allowed to go. As soon as he got out he proceeded to fill up again, with the result that he was soon in the toils again. He attempted to make some more excuses this morning, but the court would not listen to them, and fined him $10 with the option of 21 days in jail. Five drunks who made their first appearance this morning were allowed to go with the usual warning.

MRS. PANKHURST COMING. [Canadian Press.] New York, Sept. 6.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the English militant suffragette leader, has arranged to sail for this country on Oct. 4, according to advices received here. She will speak in Madison Square Garden on Oct. 21.

PETROLEA. Petrolea, Sept. 6.—Farmers all through this district are making great progress with their fall work as a result of the splendid weather. Hundreds of people from Petrolea and vicinity will attend London fair next week, and many of the choicest products of Lambton farms are being shown. Mr. H. Rotby has returned from Toronto.

James Anderson, who had his arm amputated in a corn cleaner yesterday, is resting quietly in the local hospital.

PARKHILL. Parkhill, Sept. 6.—The farmers of this vicinity are busily engaged getting in their fall wheat. As the land works up splendidly and the weather is fine they are making rapid progress. Mostly all are having their season's crops threshed, and they are turning out a great yield.

Mr. Angus Morrison, of the Centre road, has left for a visit to Detroit. Mrs. John Morrison, of the Centre road, is visiting there also.

Mrs. T. C. McIntyre, of West Williams, who has been sick for some time at her sister's home, Mrs. Geo. Morris, of Parkhill, has been taken to her home on concession 12, very much improved.

Mrs. C. A. Furbush is spending a week with relatives at London. Mr. Hugh Brown, of West Williams, held a very successful auction sale of his farm stock and implements recently. Mr. Brown has rented his farm for a term of years, and is moving his family to Parkhill into the house he purchased from John S. McDonald.

DRESDEN. Dresden, Sept. 6.—Miss Margaret McDermott, of Feverham, is a guest of her sister, Mrs. John Francis.

Mrs. Evelyn Fox is spending a week with her aunt, Mrs. Jas. Adams, of Lambeth.

Mrs. W. Ford has returned from a month's visit at Toronto and Flora, J. Ryeveart, Winnipeg.

Mrs. N. Perry was in Chatham recently.

Word was received here yesterday of the death from typhoid fever, at Toronto, of Capt. Watkinson, a former Salvation Army officer here.

Mrs. E. Hazlett, of Windsor, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. R. Brandon.

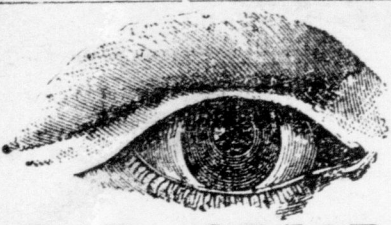

Mrs. R. W. Tyrrell is spending a week at Leamington.

Mrs. R. Watson, of Chatham, is here this week.

Grain Trade Is Getting Away for Lack of Facilities.
[Canadian Press.]
Quebec, Sept. 6.—The Quebec board of trade has sent a letter to Premier Borden pointing out that the remedy for the lack of grain through United States ports is to be found in the completion of the Trans-Continental Railway and the enlargement of the elevators at Montreal, Quebec and Halifax, rather than in the costly and slow alternative of deepening the Welland Canal. The Trans-Continental Railway, it is argued, can handle grain all the year round, while the canal is only open for seven months.

Renfrew Pastor to Preach.—The pulpit of First Presbyterian Church is to be occupied tomorrow by Rev. E. B. Horne, M.A., now of Renfrew, and formerly of Watford. Mr. Horne is favorably known to many in the city.
In the First Methodist.—Rev. Dr. Flanders, pastor of the First Methodist Church, will preach twice next Sabbath. In the morning on "A Friend Indeed," and at night on the subject, "A Stony Pillow." Mr. George McCormick, president of the choir, has returned home, and expects to have a full choir next Sunday.

Mr. Belcher's Subjects.—Evangelist Belcher will speak on an important subject next Sunday night at the York Street Mission Hall, "Shall We Know Each Other in Heaven?" He will also answer the following questions: What is heaven? What is a glorified body? Can a disembodied soul speak, see and remember? what say the Scriptures?
Rev. J. H. Boyd Returns.—Rev. Jas. H. Boyd, pastor of the Adelaide Street Baptist Church, has returned to the city after a month's vacation, and will occupy the pulpit of his own church tomorrow. The title of his evening sermon is "The Attractive Power of the Uplifted Christ." Mr. Robert Winter, a young organist from Toronto, will preside at the organ.

A Family Reunion.—Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Bussey, Buffalo, N. Y., and Miss Genevieve Thomas, Newark, N. J., motored from Lucan with Mrs. William Downs on Sunday, Aug. 31, to spend the day with Mr and Mrs. J. T. Showler, 27 The Ridgeway, meeting there also Mr. T. W. Showler, Arkona; Mr. E. T. Showler and children, Toronto, and a number of friends resident in the city. A very pleasant reunion was enjoyed, and snapshots taken of four generations. The United States party returned to Lucan in the evening to spend Labor Day.

A Heavy Fall Trade.—Bradstreet's trade report says: London reports to Bradstreet's say that firms there continue active, and a heavy fall trade is expected. Extensions are being made in existing factories, and negotiations are under way for the establishment of a new manufacturing firm. Great preparations are being made for the Western Fair and exhibits will be larger this year. Construction to replace destroyed buildings is being rushed through. Produce markets have been well supplied.

Dr. Spurgeon to Preach.—Rev. Wm. Spurgeon, D. D., of England, will preach tomorrow in Talbot Street Baptist Church both morning and evening. Dr. Spurgeon is already well known in this city, having preached in Talbot Street Church a few months ago, and also gave his famous lecture on Charles Haddon Spurgeon, the noted

Prompt Work Prevents Fire.—While coming in from the east on a Grand Trunk passenger train on Friday night a young newspaperman noticed the coping on Leonard's factory burning. The train did not slacken until it reached the Grand Trunk depot, and jumping from it without his bag, as it crossed Clarence street, he ran to the central fire station and notified the men of the fire. The apparatus turned out and in a short time reached the foundry, where the blaze was extinguished before it gained any headway. The loss will amount to about $10. It is thought that the fire started from a spark from the cupola.

ROWAT'S COFFEE Pleases people who like the obnoxious pictures which have been found in the possession of men arrested by the police in this city, said Magistrate Judd in commenting on a practice which is becoming altogether too frequent to please the court.

POLICE CRUSADE OVER CARRYING OF VILE PHOTOS

Too Many Men Secure Independent Pictures in London, Says Mr. Judd.

Officers Search Stores Without Tracing Source of Vicious Views.

"I cannot understand why any man in his right mind would carry some of the obscene pictures which have been found in the possession of men arrested by the police in this city," said Magistrate Judd in commenting on a practice which is becoming altogether too frequent to please the court. "Some of the pictures that I have seen frequently are disgusting, and I would like to know if they are being sold in this city," he continued.

Although the police have made a vigorous search for such pictures in different stores of London, they have been unable to find any place where they are sold, and are inclined to think the pictures are either brought to London from the United States, or are sold from there through the mails.

A Prison Offence.
The sale of such pictures through the mails leaves the firm which sells them in that way liable to a heavy fine and a term in prison if a conviction is secured. In a number of magazines an advertisement calling attention to the fact that snappy pictures in a plain envelope can be secured for ten cents, catches the eye of many young boys who are unaware of the offence they are committing when becoming a party to the sale of such pictures through the mails. Some of the pictures are not as bad as one might be led to believe by the suggestiveness of the advertisements, but on the other hand there are some that are simply disgusting, and not fit to be shown to even a hardened moral reformer.

Watching One Magazine.
A certain issue of a magazine edited and published in New York, which it is believed contains many salacious stories, is being watched by the police, and it is quite likely that a charge of sending objectionable matter through the mails may be registered against the firm.

Magistrate Judd has promised to fine the next man convicted of carrying ob-

First Family Air Boat--It's in the John D. Rockefeller Family

Harold McCormick, the young Chicago millionaire, who married John D. Rockefeller's daughter, Edith, has the only family hangar and owns the only family air-boat now in captivity.

The hangar has been built close to the shore of Lake Michigan at the McCormick summer home at Lake Forest, and from here McCormick goes out daily in his hydroplane, usually taking family guests and friends.

The ladies visiting at the McCormick home or living in the swell neighborhood think nothing of going out of a morning for a combined air and water jaunt. Everybody wears bathing suits, because when the air-boat comes down into the lake and shoots through the water at 50 to 60 miles an hour, the spray flies in sheets over all hands.

THE WHITE LINEN NURSE A REMARKABLE STORY

[From Public Opinion.]

A quite extraordinary story by the author of that clever tale, "Molly Make Believe," begins in the Century Magazine for August. It is called "The White Linen Nurse—How Rae Maigregor undertook general heartwork for a family of two."

The first part gives a most vivid glimpse of the mind of a nurse and of what her work means to her. Here are some quotations from the story, which must tell their own tale.

"That's what's the matter." "For three hustling, square-toed, rubber-heeled city years the White Linen Nurse had never even stopped to notice whether the season was flavored with frost or thunder. But now, unexplainably, just at the end of it all, sitting innocently there at her own prim little bedroom window, staring innocently out across indomitable roof-tops, with the crackle of glory and diplomas already ringing in her ears, she heard instead, for the first time in her life, the gaily dare-devil voice of the spring, a hoysenish challenge flung back at her, leaf-green, from the crest of a water-scared hill."

Then when another nurse said to Rae: "You look like a trained nurse," she cried out: "Why, that's just exactly what's the matter with me. My face is worn out trying to look like a trained nurse."

And later to the matron she explained: "With my judgment? Great heavens! that's the whole trouble! I haven't got any judgment! I've never been allowed to have any judgment! All I've ever been allowed to have is the judgment of some flirty young medical student or the house doctor or the senior surgeon or you?" "Don't you see that my face doesn't know anything?" she faltered, "except just to smile and smile and smile and say, 'Yes, sir,' 'No, sir,' 'Yes, sir.'"

"You're a wonder."

And yet both the senior surgeon and the matron said that she was the best of nurses.

"Was it you who threaded that needle for me?"

"Are you the nurse that helped me last week on that fractured skull?" asked the senior surgeon.

"Was it you who threaded that needle for me?"

"Excuse me for not recognizing you," he apologized gruffly, "but you girls all look so much alike!"

"Yes, yes, sir!" she cried joyously; "that's just exactly what the trouble is; that's just exactly what I was trying to express, sir; my face is all worn out trying to look alike. My cheeks are almost sprung with artificial smiles. My eyes are fairly bulging with unshed tears. My nose aches like a toothache trying never to turn up at anything. I'm choked with the affectation. I tell you, I just can't breathe through a trained nurse's face any more. I tell you, sir, I'm sick to death of being nothing but a type. I want to look like myself. I want to see what life could do to my face like mine if it ever got a chance. When other women are crying, I want the fun of crying."

"I Like It Because I Like It."

To another nurse she was even more explicit—

"And when it comes to nursing? Hal Helene Churchill, you can lead your class all you want to with your silk-lined manners and your fuddy-duddy book-talk; but when genteel people like you are moping round all ready to fold your patients' hands on their breasts and murmur, 'They will be done, why, that's the time that little 'Yours Truly' is just beginning to roll up her sleeves and get to work."

With real passion her slender fingers went clatching again at her harsh linen collar. "It isn't you, Helene Churchill," she taunted, "that's ever been to the superintendent on your bended knees and begged for the rubles nursing because you think it's pious to like it; but I like it because I like it!"

From brow to chin, as though fairly stricken with sincerity, her whole bland face furrowed startlingly with crude expressiveness. "The smell of ether," she stammered, "it's like wine to me. The clang of the ambulance gong? I'd rather hear it than fire-engines. I'd crawl on my hands and knees a hundred miles to watch a major operation. I wish there was a war. I'd give my life to see a cholera epidemic."

Why She Was Jilted.

But her love for nursing led to her being jilted.

"You mean that he didn't want you to be a trained nurse? You mean that he wasn't big enough, wasn't fine enough, to appreciate the nobility of the profession?"

"Nobility nothing!" snapped Rae Maigregor. "It was me scrubbing strange men with alcohol that he couldn't stand for, and I don't know as I exactly blame him," she added huskily. "It certainly is a good deal of a liberty when you stop to think about it."

"It's comic," she mused, "how there isn't a man in the world who would stand letting his wife or daughter or sister have a male nurse; but look at the jobs we girls get sent out on! It's very confusing."

"What's a silly bean or two up in Nova Scotia to a girl with looks like you?" asked another nurse. "You could have married that typhoid case a dozen times last winter if you'd crooked your little finger. Why, the fellow was crazy about you. And he was richer than Croesus. What queerred it?" she demanded bluntly. "Did his mother hate you?"

Did His Mother Hate You?

"Did his mother hate me?" she gasped. "Did his mother—hate me? Well, what do you think? With me, who never even saw plumbing till I came down here, setting out to explain to her, with twenty tiled bathtubs, how to be hygienic though rich? Did his mother hate me? Well, what do you think? With her who bore him—her who bore him, mind you—kept waiting downstairs in the hospital anteroom half-an-hour every day on the raw edge of a rattan chair, waiting, worrying, all old and gray and scared, while little, young, perky, pink-and-white me is upstairs brushing her own son's hair and washing her own face, and altogether getting her own son ready to see his own mother! And then me obliged to turn her out again in ten minutes, flip as you please, for fear she'd stayed too long, while I THE WHITE LINEN NURSE—TWI a stay on the rest of the night? Did his mother hate me?"

Nurses and Other Women.

"Did his mother hate me?" she persisted mockingly. "Did his mother hate me? Is there any woman from here to Kamchatka who doesn't hate us? Is there any woman from here to Kamchatka who doesn't look upon a trained nurse as her natural-born enemy? I don't blame 'em," she added chokingly. "Look at the impudent jobs we get sent out on! Quarantined upstairs for weeks at a time with their influenza, diphteria, theritic bridegrooms, while they sit downcast brooding over their wedding teaspoons! Hiked off indefinitely to Atlantic City with their gouty bachelor uncles! Hearing their own innocent little sister's blood-curdling death-bed delirium! Snatching their own new-born babies away from their breasts and showing them, virgin-handed, how to nurse them better! The impudence of it, I say, the disgusting, confounding, humbling—going things perfectly, flippantly, right, for twenty-one dollars a week—and washing—that all the achin' love in the world don't know how to do right just for love!"

Furiously she began to jerk her victim's shoulder. "I tell you it's awful, Zillah Forsyth," she insisted. "I tell you I just won't stand it!"

"Parson, actor, young sinner, old saint—I ask you frankly, girls on your word of honor, was there ever more than one man in ten went through your hands who didn't turn out soft somewhere before you were through with him? Mawking about your sweet eyes while you're weeping, your optic nerves trying to decipher the dose on a poison bottle! Moaning over your wonderful likeness to the lovely young sister they're trying to strangle with your finger-tips when you're struggling to brush the teeth!"

When she poured out her hot words to the senior surgeon he said:

"If you are going to fuss like this over cases hopelessly moribund from the start, what in thunder are you gobs trying to do some fine day when, out of a perfectly clear and clean sky, security itself turns septic, and you lose the

Where Are the Hostesses?

"There are a dozen houses in Mayfair and St. James—perhaps half a dozen—which can make or mar a season from this point of view, by giving or withholding the kind of entertainment in which the many circles that form London society may touch one another and revolve round the same sun," says Mr. Filson Young in the London Saturday.

"Entertaining in the way I have described requires hostesses of a certain age and dignity, and with a social gift for carrying a great many people in their minds, and keeping in touch both with the new and old inhabitants of the social world. And people like this are disappearing. What happens to them I do not know; but there is now hardly anyone in London old enough to entertain in the way I have described. The hostesses grow younger and younger. For a season or two, when their daughters come out, they unwillingly play the part of the fond parent, and stand publicly protesting that they revert to their own youthful condition, cultivate their own special friends, wear larger and larger hats and smaller and smaller dresses, and remain at whatever age is fashionable. Just at present nearly all the hostesses in London are between 20 and 35; and people whom I see as kind elderly ladies now look at me coyly from under large shady hats, and are to be seen with some special faithful male friend at operas or picture shows, thrilling once again to the dawn of emotion, and discovering anew what a wonderful thing life is. It would be absurd to ask such people to stand at the head of a staircase for four hours, saying the right and tactful thing to everybody. It would be cruel to snatch them from their new-found joys; cruel to take them away from the freedom and independence which they seem to be tasting for the first time, and require dull, domestic, and social duties of them.

"Society is becoming less and less patient of formality of any kind. In its speech, and in the things which really amuse it, the tendency is to become more free and easy, more impulsive, more impromptu. People prefer to meet in small gatherings at short notice, and do whatever amuses them most."

British Make Efforts to Exterminate It—Human Leopard Organization.

A subject of grim interest is dealt with in a dispatch from the governor of Sierra Leone, which has been published by the British colonial office as a white paper. For some years past, the dispatch states—possibly for centuries, it observes in another place—certain districts of the protectorate have been infested by a secret organization, called the "Human Leopard Society," the principal rites of which seem to include human sacrifice and the eating of human flesh.

Several cases of murder committed by the society had at various times come before the circuit court and convictions obtained, but the full extent of the society's operations was not brought to light until last year, when the district commissioner received information that from 20 to 30 murders had been committed since 1907.

Having resolved to exterminate the organization, the Government caused last year extensive arrests to be made, with the result that no fewer than 336 persons were got hold of on the information supplied by some members of the organization, who turned King's evidence. It soon, however, appeared that no corroborative evidence against the majority of them could be secured owing to the fear the society inspired among the natives, so that only 42 were committed for trial and the rest were discharged. Later on 66 other persons were arrested, so that the total number convicted amounted to 108.

Law Made More Drastic.

Before their trial a previous act dealing with the same subject was amended, the society being declared unlawful and the authorities being armed with extensive powers of search and arrest. A special tribunal was also appointed, consisting of three members, with the native assessors, such as ordinarily sit in the circuit courts. This tribunal was to try the 108 prisoners and have the power to recommend expulsion in case the evidence could not prove sufficient to justify conviction.

In the course of examination before this court—an examination which was conducted "with the utmost care and patience"—some of the evidence offered by the defendants proved worthless, in consequence of which the charges were not persisted in in the case of 71 persons; of the remaining, three died before the actual trial, so that only 84 were pressed against.

The result of the trial was that nine were convicted of murder, ten others of lesser offences, and the remaining fifteen were acquitted. Of those convicted, seven were executed, and two were sentenced to imprisonment for life. Of those acquitted eleven were subsequently expelled from the protectorate.

The Society Not Killed.

In spite of this drastic action the governor does not venture "to assert that the criminal organization has been broken up." He thinks that "the blind belief of the natives in the efficacy of the 'medicines' concocted by the society, the power and authority enjoyed by the possessors of these medicines, the fact that periodic human sacrifices are considered to be necessary in order to renew the efficacy of the medicines, and a tendency on the part of some natives to cannibalism pure and simple—all these causes will contribute to the survival of this baneful organization."

Any member of an unlawful society or any person who takes part in its operations is now liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding fourteen years.

The fact that Tammany on Aug. 21st "turned down" Mayor Gaynor for a re-nomination, seems to worry the occupant of New York's city hall very little, as gleaned from the photograph, showing William J. Gaynor, who for the past four years, has ruled the metropolitan city. Out at St. James, Long Island, where the mayor has his big farm, and where he spends most of his leisure moments, he forgets politics and city affairs, and gives himself up to the life of a farmer, devoting himself to his land and his stock. Though not definitely announced, it is almost certain that the mayor, regardless of the "turn down" by Tammany, will make the fight for re-election by running on an independent ticket. In this event, New York will be treated to one of the most interesting mayoralty campaigns in the past decade.

The New Mohair Street Suit

Of all the new fall fashions for street wear the most generally accepted by the fashionable dresser is the new mohair, or the several sorts of new mohair and wool combinations. And here is a fall model that shows how prettily the stuff is made up in the latest designs, for mohair though it is, it is extremely soft and pliable. The simple skirt is correctly slashed in front to let the dainty buttoned boots peep through. The Oriental sleeves and girde, and the vest of fine tulle are most modish.

PROBLEMS OF THE FAIR SEX SOLVED BY CYNTHIA GREY

[Correspondents are requested to make their inquiries as brief as possible, and to write on one side of the paper only. It is impossible to give replies within a stated time, as all letters have to be answered in turn. No letters can be answered privately.]

Going in Mourning.

Dear Miss Grey:—Will you kindly answer the following questions or me?
1. Is there any way I can have a white beaver hat colored black?
2. If there is no way I can have it colored would it be quite proper to wear it trimmed with black this winter, as I am in mourning only a few weeks?
3. Is there any way I can blacken white kid gloves?
4. Will you kindly send me a recipe for elderberry wine?
Thanking you in advance,
CINDERELLA.

A.—1. I do not believe it can be done at home. It would pay you to take the hat to a professional dyer.
2. As wearing black is really optional nowadays you might wear your hat trimmed with black velvet or lace.
3. I fear that to try dyeing the gloves would make them too stiff and harsh for wearing. Best lay the white ones aside for a few months to wear again when coming out of mourning.
4. Here are two recipes, one for a large quantity, one for very much less:
Add to three gallons crushed berries 3 1/2 gallons water, 1/2 cupful raisins, 2 ounces of whole allspice, 1 dozen whole cloves, 1 ounce ginger root, 4 ounces sticks cinnamon. Boil all together 1 1/2 hour, then strain. To every gallon of the liquid allow 3 1/2 pounds sugar. Put into a cask and when near cold drop a piece of toast, spread with yeast cake softened in a little tepid water. When fermentation has ceased close the cask tightly. It will be ready for use in three months' time.

To one quart juice add three quarts of water, 5 pounds sugar and boil 20 minutes. When cool toast a piece of bread, cover over with a bit of dissolved yeast cake and lay it on top of the wine. Let it stand a couple of days. Skim and put in a jug with 1 cup of raisins. Let stand nine days, then close tight for three months, when it is fit to use.

Is a Constant Reader.

Dear Miss Grey.—As I am a constant reader of your answers to questions in The London Advertiser, I thought you would not mind answering a few for me. First of all, I will ask you to excuse me for using a pencil. I see by your answers to other's questions that you know something to reduce large pores. Please send me. Also send Miss Billie Burke's recipe for cold cream, if you have it.

Thanking you in advance, I remain, yours respectfully,
MAC.

A.—1. Bathe the nose frequently in a little of the following lotion: Rosewater 1/2 oz., alcohol 1/2 oz., precipitate of sulphur 1/2 oz. Or in place of this, bathing with witch hazel has also been found good.
2. This is the formula which you ask for: White wax 1/2 oz., spermaceti 1/2 oz., lanolin 1 oz., sweet almond oil, 2 ozs., coconut oil 1 oz., orange flower water 2 ozs., tincture of benzoin 3 drops. Put everything except the orange flower water and the benzoin in a double boiler and heat until they become liquid. Do not let the mixture boil, as that will spoil it. Take from the fire and add the orange flower water, in which the benzoin has previously been poured. Add this only, a few drops at a time, to the warm oils, beating well until it is perfectly cool light and fluffy. This makes quite a large quantity of cream.
You are very welcome to the information. Call again.

Succotash Recipe.

Dear Miss Grey.—Please give me a recipe for succotash in your department of the Advertiser, and oblige.

A LONDON READER.

Answer.—Succotash is made of green corn, Lima beans or butter beans. The corn, when cut from the cob, should be a third more than the beans. Just cover with boiling water and stew together until tender, stirring now and then. Then pour off nearly all the water, add a bit of milk and stir for an hour, watching to prevent burning. Stir in a large lump of butter and a teaspoonful of four moistened with milk and pepper and salt to taste. Boil up once, and serve in a deep vegetable dish.

Tea-Table Talk

"I suppose you are dreading the Fair next week? You always have so many visitors," said the Woman in Brown, to the Woman in Gray, as they sat at the table in the dining room. The latter named smiled brightly as she poked two green tickets into the conductor's box. "Not a bit. You see nearly all my visitors are from the country, and really, I must confess that the stuff they bring me more than makes up for the little trouble I have for a day or two."

"How's that?" asked the Woman in Gray, opening her eyes widely.

"Well, last year, for instance, Uncle John and Aunt Jane came for two days, and they brought me a box of eggs and 5 pounds of butter, and two jars of pear marmalade, and a bag of potatoes, and one of apples, and a peck of tomatoes."

"And on Thursday another cousin, Alfred, and his wife, came to stay a day and a night. They are from the Niagara district, and brought me two of the loveliest baskets of peaches I ever saw. And to cap it all, dear old Aunt Ann arrived with two plump chickens tied in a newspaper."

"The Woman in Brown paused for breath. "Well, I never," said her companion, "I wish I could waste my relatives and friends who come in Fair time to do something like that."

"It's little wonder, is it, that I rather look forward to Fair week, and the company I shall have," laughed the Woman in Brown, as she rang the bell. And without a doubt every woman in the car who had overheard the conversation eyed her enviously as she descended from the car at the next corner.

On Wednesday last there appeared on the Sporting Notes to Page of The Advertiser, a number of letters written by London girls and young women to one of the popular members of the local ball team during the season just closing. Doubtless you read them, and doubtless, too, you also laughed to yourself and said within your heart, "Those silly, silly girls."

But is it a laughing matter? Get your copy of Wednesday's issue and read them again. Did you ever before scan such a budget of slangy, ungrammatical, feminine gush? No, I apologize to Minerva, the writer of one note. The first two adjectives do not apply to hers, but there is not the slightest doubt about the "gush." And then to sign herself "Minerva"—truly, how are the mighty fallen! But one wonders what object these girls have who write notes to popular heroes, such as baseball-players, for instance. Certainly if a letter was ever traced back to the writer, it would be very embarrassing for her, to say the least.

But I need not speak as if silly sentiment was confined entirely to girls. Older women have attacks of it at times, and find even more foolish ways to express it. Do you remember the time when Harry Thaw was first imprisoned? The guards in the jail, it is said, stated that heaps of flowers, boxes of candy, books, and home-made dainties, were brought or sent continuously to Thaw's cell by women who probably never heard of him until the shooting of Stanford White. In many instances notes of sympathy, and hopes for his release accompanied the gift. And not only in the case of Thaw, but during the imprisonment of some of the most notorious criminals, especially if the least glimmer of romance was connected with either themselves or their crime, have women—often highly respectable ones, too—obeyed their foolish impulses, and showered these attentions upon the prisoner.

"Do they do the same for women confined on similar charges?" one wonders, and the answer comes back emphatically, "No."

And one reads about it, and hears about it, and ponders over it, but without explaining or understanding, why women, good and sensible in many things, are given to this folly of "hero-worship," where honor is surely not due.

Half an Hour With the Cook

Readers of this page are requested to contribute recipes or helpful hints along culinary lines for publication in this column, the desire being to make it one of mutual benefit. Original recipes, or any found to be tried and true, will be especially appreciated.

"Practical Housekeeper" sends us the following hint. It is well worth remembering:

Jelly Hint.
When making jelly, before turning it out of the molds into a saucer, I wipe off the latter with a damp cloth. I have found this very good, as the jelly will slip over the centre of the dish and not stick to one side of it, as it does when no dampening is done.

Spiced Grapes.

For spicing, wash and stem the grapes, rejecting all that are imperfect. Pulp the grapes by hand, dropping the pulp into an agate kettle. Heat gently over a slow fire and stir frequently until the seeds readily separate, then press through a coarse sieve. To this sieved pulp add the skins, then measure. For four quarts allow a half pint of good cider vinegar, three pounds of granulated sugar, one ounce of whole cloves, a half ounce of cassia buds and two ounces of stick cinnamon. Tie the spices in a bit of cheesecloth, put into a kettle with the vinegar and stir until the sugar is dissolved. Add the grape mixture and boil until almost as thick as marmalade, then bottle and seal.—Mary T. St. Thomas.

TO THE CUCKOO.
Hail beautiful stranger of the grove!
Thou messenger of spring!
Now heaven repairs thy rural seat,
And woods thy welcome ring.

What time the daisy decks the green,
Thy certain voice we hear:
Hail, thou a star to guide thy path,
Or mark the rolling year?

Delightful visitant! with thee
I hail the time of flowers,
And hear the sound of music sweet
From birds among the bowers.

Sweet bird! thy bowen is ever green.
Thy sky is ever clear:
Thou hast no sorrow in thy song,
No winter in thy year!

O, could I fly, I'd fly with thee!
We'd make with joyful wing,
Our annual visit o'er the globe,

THE RUINED NAPOLEON OF THE BALKANS

New and recent photographs of General Savoff, the commander-in-chief of the Bulgarian army, and his beautiful and charming daughter. After having accomplished the difficult task of driving the Turks from Europe back to Asia, a feat that had been unsuccessfully tried by various nations in the past centuries, this modern Napoleon is blamed for the present unlooked-for losses of the Bulgarians and, disgraced and discredited, he may be court-martialed for the defeat of the army which but a little while ago he led to such wonderful success.

COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF SAVOFF OF THE BULGARIANS AND HIS BEAUTIFUL DAUGHTER.

Graphic Description of Great Exeter Cathedral Two Memorials of Interest to Canadians
(Written Specially for The Advertiser.)

As I am not an architect, archaeologist, and scarcely an antiquarian, the gentle reader will please anticipate no technical terms.

As to the age of this fine most of these cathedrals have no registrar's certificate. Like Topsy, they seem to have just "grown."

This was a holy place long before William the Conqueror smote the Saxons, but it will suffice to say that the square-set Norman towers, each 145 feet high, with their symmetrical rows of narrow arches, were erected by Bishop Warelwast, a nephew of the Conqueror, beginning in 1112.

The next great builder was Bishop Peter Quivil, 1280-1291, who formed the design of running transcripts through the twin towers of Warelwast by digging out the solid stonework to the height of nearly 70 feet, and erecting tremendous arches to support the upper halves. Bishop Grandisson finally completed the nave and the whole building was dedicated Dec. 18, 1291.

A little later, the magnificent screen of statuary glorified the west front. There are 65 figures comprising prophets, apostles, saints, Saxon kings, Danish monarchs, probably the latest figure is that of Edward III, or, the Black Prince. Father Time has played sad havoc with most of them. But visibility was everything, and they show it. They are a rough-and-ready lot, with bold eyes, much hair, and hands cleaving to their swords.

Exeter differs from other cathedrals in its comparative shortness, breadth, and its variety of ornamentation. The patterns of the windows seem to exhaust every phase of angle and curve. Some of the glass is very beautiful, though not remarkably ancient.

The windows did not survive the stormy days of the reformation and the commonwealth, at which era the whole cathedral was divided into two parts by a solid brick wall—into "East Peter's" and "West Peter's." In the latter part Cromwell's chaplain, Stukely, exercised his "independent" ministry; in the former the Presbyterians sang psalms over the bones of Bishop Quivil and by the tombs of the famous Devonshire, de Courtenay's, Stapleton's and other blue-blooded beings.

In 1662 this "comfortable" arrangement was put an end to, and Bishop Seth Ward practically finished the edifice—though the stonemason is never far away from these huge structures.

Monuments.

The cathedral must have more than five hundred monuments and mural dedications. I mention a few names connected with different centuries. Between 1100-1400, Bishops Bartholomew, Brantingham, Briere, Chichester, Quivil, Grandisson, d'Apulia, Earl Courteney, Stapleton, etc.

1400-1600—We have the chantry of William Sylke, born 1429, a D. C. L., his effigy has been sadly hammered, and his nose is missing. There are other honored names of the days of Henry, Elizabeth and James.

1600-1700—In the choir aisle are magnificent sculptured tombs, with life-sized figures of Justice Doddridge (the sleepy judge), and his lady. These are a study of feature and the minutiae of costume are scrupulously reproduced. There is a striking portrait of Bishop Cotton, a clever and ruled scribe.

1700-1900—As time rolls on the military records accumulate, an eloquent testimony to the blood shed by the sons of Devon in defence of or extension of the Empire. The grim records of Badajoz, Waterloo, the Crimea, and the long slaughter lists of the Boer war, with the decaying standards above, suggest many scenes of heroism and suffering.

Two Canadians.

There are two monuments of particular interest to Canadians, a brass tablet by the north door testifies to the worth of Bishop Holden, the apostle of the region west of Hudson Bay.

In the south choir is the monument to Governor Simcoe, by the great sculptor Flaxman. The inscription is to John Gages Simcoe, colonel of the Twenty-second Regiment of Foot, died Oct. 26, 1806, aged 54. There is a reference to his founding the city of Toronto, but not to his being governor-general. A touching foot note adds that during the erection of the monument his eldest son fell in the breach at Badajoz in the 21st year of his age. There is a beautiful portrait of Simcoe in relief, and two exquisitely hewn figures, an Indian and a British soldier, are the supporters.

A Curious Clock.

Against the north wall and under one of the towers is the famous astronomical clock, a very ancient horologe. This clock, like the cathedral, was not made in a day. This old timekeeper was at work long before Galileo discovered that the earth moves round the sun. On this aged dial we have the Ptolemaic theory that the earth was fixed and sun and moon go round it. There is no hand to point to the hours, the sun, shaped like a golden fleur-de-lys, travels round to each hour in turn, the right-hand side representing the twelve hours of the day, the left the twelve hours of night. The moon, by an ingenious arrangement, points to the day of its age. And the earth stands still at the centre. The face is painted in blue and gold, and is five or six feet square, and at the bottom, the motto, "Fereunt et Impendant," stanes out in gold. Another dial has (A.D. 1760) been added on the top to show the minutes. The clock strikes the quarters, and the hour "Great Peter" away up in the tower, and weighing 14,000 pounds, literally gives tongue, and has been doing so since 1486, when Bishop Courtenay brought this ancient bell from Llandaff. Peter is in the north tower, but he has eleven companions in the south tower. The whole glorious chime, weighing some 30,000 pounds, is now easily rung by one man, who manipulates certain cords in a wooden case, three feet square, from the floor of the cathedral.

The Library.

It is an interesting one, for besides the books, there are invaluable manuscripts, as the Exon Domesday Book, from which "the tale of land, nor cow, nor swine, was omitted, in Wilts, Dorset, Somerset, Devon and Cornwall," is here. In the words of Artemus Ward, as an assessor and census taker, William the First had "no livin' ekal." Here also is a list of the relics the Saxon Athelstan gave to the church at Exeter. Here A. D. 1050 is the charter of Leofric, first Bishop of Exeter. Here is one of Ethelred, the Unready, of A. D. 969. And here another, A.D. 1018, of Canute. Here, too, are some fragments of clerical vestments of the thirteenth century. Here, too, are mediaeval works on astronomy and mathematics, and a book of Bishop Grandisson of 1350, containing "a short account of events from the beginning of the world."

But as there are over six thousand manuscripts, one must needs stop.

These cathedrals are certainly steeped in legend, story and suggestion, and are a powerful antiseptic, if one may use such a simile, against time's decay.

They preach eloquently and tell us that:

"Only the actions of the just Smell sweet and blossom in the dust."

THE REWARD

BY BERTON BRALEY.

He passed Love by for money and got the cash he sought,
For gold he gave up Friendship—which can't be sold or bought,
He bade good-bye to pleasure, he said farewell to fun,
He only wanted cash in hand—and cash was what he won.

He had no heart for laughter, no time to dream or dance,
Adventure had no charms for him, he scoffed at fair Romance,
The Joy of Living called to him, but, ah, he wouldn't hear,
What did he care if grass were green and skies were blue and clear

He knew that profits mounted up, that interest was high,
But gold of dawn or sunset seemed worthless to his eye,
For all the fun and frolic, the sorrow or the pain,
The wonder of the busy world, its struggle, stress and strain,
Were nothing much but noise to him, and so he toiled along
And never knew the face of joy or listened to her song.

For all his greed of heart and hand, his trail of wrong and fraud,
What punishment shall come to him whose money was his god?
Behold, he hath his punishment and more he needeth not,
He gave his very soul for Gold—and Gold is All he got!

CURING SHAM ILLNESSES

How Malingerers Have Been Found Out—Amusing Stories Told by Doctors.

Some amusing stories illustrating the wiles of malingers were told to the doctors in the Forensic Medicine Section of the Medical Congress in Old London recently.

Sir John Collicott related how a woman was judged by a house surgeon to wear a back splint for an alleged stiff right knee. He removed the splint and directed her to sit down and take off her right boot, meanwhile eagerly playing her with questions as to what exactly happened at the moment of the accident. As a result she forgot the present and lived in the past, removing her boot in the usual way as she spoke, crossing her legs and bending her knee.

Dr. A. Cure for "Helplessness," the case of a woman who was admitted to hospital when he was a student. She was brought in by the police on an ambulance, and stated to have been knocked down by an omnibus, her lower limbs being apparently helpless. She remained in hospital some few weeks and no one suspected that the case was not genuine.

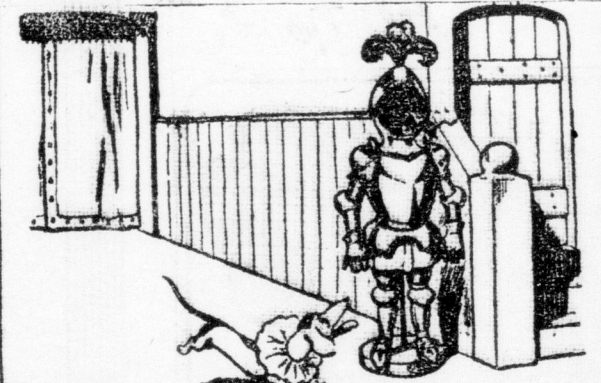

But the chaplain found that she had previously been in other hospitals for similar accidents, and under similar "Mighty Bismarck!" Hans cried loudly, "what has in that armor got? 'Twas my great, great, great grandsire's—now it's haunted like as not."

"If you please," a voice said mildly, "not a ghost is here, you'll find; But a somewhat battered Dackel, whom a mouse has left behind."

"How amazing!" Hans commented. "Do you know I see a trace, Quite a striking look of grandsire in my dear chum Dackel's face!"

Mrs. WILLET ELLIS, London, Ont., writes: "My little girl had Diarrhoea so bad that nothing would stop it, in fact she got so bad she passed nothing but a thickish blood. I even stepped raspberry leaves, but all to no purpose, until a neighbor told me to try Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, which I did, and with such good results that after four or five days she was quite normal again. I would not like to be without it. I used it when we were in Saskatchewan too, for we could not get on without it out there."

MAGNIFICENT WORK

ment had failed to provide free medical attendance for the thirteen millions who had been promised that both. They engaged the doctors with their assistance, secretly and openly. They fomented the agitation. They did all they could to strengthen the suspicions of the medical men, and when they thought we had no doctors they were pleased. Then they began to come in, and then the Tories said: "Oh, but look at their quality." Then the day came nearer and the doctors came tumbling in, until today we have eighteen thousand doctors on the list, practically all the doctors who are engaged in that class of practice. We have on the register nine thousand chemists who are prepared to supply on Government terms the drugs prescribed by the doctors. (Cheers.) Every week half a million workers are attended free by these doctors. They can claim free medical attendance and the best of drugs. Before the act hundreds of thousands died who do not die now. That is what they could not pay. Now that nightmare has been chased out of every cottage in the land. (Cheers.) Our opponents said: "You promised that every man should name the doctor of his choice at the expense of the state." So I did, but that meant if the doctor was willing, I could not compel a doctor to attend a man, and if I did the medical attendance would not be worth much. I promised a free choice of doctors among those who are willing to accept the very generous terms given by the Government. I can tell you that in all the cases where the doctors themselves submitted their accounts before the act for examination there is not one of them who is not making more money under the insurance act.

18,000 Doctors Working the Act.
We have 18,000 doctors, some of them exceedingly able men, most of them good. They are looking after 500,000 sick workers, male and female, every week free of charge. (Cheers.) I never know how much doctors can do for you, but of one thing I am certain—they can warn and ward off danger. When the boat in which you are sailing rocks about they can tell you when the rocks are near, and they can tell you when you need not head, or whether it means that you are rushing towards the cataract, and they can help you ashore before you reach the rapids. And anyone who knows the lives of the working people knows that they are only too well that one great reason why workmen's lives are on the average shorter than those who are not in such circumstances is that they are too late to recover strength, when timely help from an expert hand would have saved them from doom. (Cheers.) This year £5,625,000 will be spent on this year's medical benefits. The doctors' pockets £4,375,000, the chemists' £837,500, and an additional £212,500 will be divided between them. That is to help the chemists, and the doctor in order, and it is a little dodge of our own. (Loud laughter.) Will anyone dare say that the industrial classes of this kingdom are not receiving freely and without payment medical attention such as they have never received before in the whole history of this country? (Cheers.)

The Sicknes.
I come to the second benefit—the sickness benefit. Here 270,000 workers are in receipt, most of them of 10s a week, the women of 7s 6d a week, because they pay less, and persons of fifty smaller sums. (Cheers.) The bill now passing through Parliament for these older people will receive exactly the same benefits as those who are younger in years. (Cheers, and applause.) I would like to tell you how many have had the thirty bob. (Laughter.) Half a million. (Cheers.) The country is all right. (Laughter and cheers.) This and every other payment is being made to the act about 90 per cent. Before the act about 70 per cent of these would have had other resources, but over 150,000 of them would have been practically without any prospect, except the pawnshop and the parish, to keep them, their wives, and their families from starvation. And this is the act that conferred benefit on no one! (Laughter and cheers.)

The Sanatorium Benefit.
I come to the third benefit which has already materialized—the sanatorium benefit. Before the act came into operation there were only about 5,000 beds available throughout the whole of the United Kingdom for all classes in the sanatoria. Most of these were occupied by persons who could afford to pay for them. You may therefore take it that barely 2,000 places would be available in new great institutions for the cure of the working classes. The first thing we did was to set aside £1,600,000 for the building of new sanatoria. The money was voted and put in the bank to be available for grants in aid of local authorities, committees, or associations that were prepared to build. I need hardly say you cannot do that in a day or even in a year. (Cheers.) But we have secured a large number of temporary buildings, and what is the result? Those who suffer from consumption have been divided into three classes—those who are treated in their homes, those who are treated by dispensaries which have been set up everywhere under the insurance act, and those who are fit for treatment in sanatoria. In all, under the insurance act we have already treated 24,000 consumptive workers. Of these, 13,000 have been placed in these sanatoria. (Cheers.) It is a deadly fight between man and disease. One must be killed, either the man or the tubercle which is in him. Those who are treated at home get not only medicine and medical treatment, but they also get good nourishment which they could not afford to purchase—a pint of the best milk supplied to them every day, and other specially strengthening foods. Drugs do not cure a man without suspensions, wages boards, labor exchanges, or mines regulations, and other acts. They have accomplished their part, but not all. There is much more to be done before undeserved poverty and privation is chased out of this proud country. The surest and most searching reforms must all take time to work out their beneficent purpose. All I claim for the insurance act is this—that whilst reform is working its way suffering is averted and alleviated by means of this act. More than that, this act is tracking out and exposing social sores. Take this one proof which I put to you. There is no social or economic evil in the land which ultimately does not pass into the doctor's hands. Intemperance, under feeding, bad housing—whatever the wrong is it somehow or other works its way out in disease. The surest way to find them all out and grope their causes. It will force the state to take official cognizance of them, and will nothing but gold, gold, gold, diamonds, diamonds, diamonds. Surely a fortune could be realized if the attaches were dishonest. But, as a matter of fact, fully 95 per cent of these valuables are returned to their owners. Careless, careless, careless.

WOMEN'S CARELESSNESS

At the Grand Central station, through which from 35,000 to 10,000 persons enter the city every day, two men are kept busy receiving, classifying and delivering articles abandoned in the trains. And every day the trains of this company last year were several pairs of crutches and a wooden leg. For sheer negligence this puts the item of abandoned false teeth in the Metropolitan Police Court. To such an extent are umbrellas abandoned that the custodian made the remark that he could invariably tell by looking over his book of receipts whether a certain day a rain or fair from the number of umbrellas brought in.

On the Jersey Central, which brings 20,000 passengers a day into New York, 6,000 articles were left in car seats last year. There were overcoats, dress suits, golf sticks, and several hats every day—which is very remarkable. Others left chickens, parrots, melons, muffs, mechanics' kits, and in many cases shoes that the wearers had discarded to ease their feet and had walked away without them—which was even more negligent than leaving their hats. Most of these articles have been traced to their owners—the size of rubbers showed it without a doubt, but eyeglasses and umbrellas were of newer design and the contents were indicated by packages containing such things as bread, butter, eggs, lard, pickles and cans of pig powder.

At the lost and found department of the elevated road and subway in New York an average of 100 abandoned articles are taken care of every day.

Stealing Automobiles and Fixtures.
Recently the older chauffeurs of New York city organized under the name of the Gasoline Engine Protective Association, their purpose, according to a resolution adopted, being "to eliminate joy-riding and drunkenness and to put the profession on such a footing that the chauffeur will not be discriminated against because of his calling."

What a commentary on the status of a vast army of skilled workmen—of eight million in this country—discriminated against because of his calling!

Yet it is absolutely justified. There are probably 15,000 of these men in Greater New York, the majority of them of good character, but many more because of the acts of a by no means small minority.

The negligence of the machine owner and the public has developed the greatest field of criminal operations ever known in America. Not in any field has specialization in crime developed the efficiency that it has in this. So tempting are the opportunities that have come before them, and many have developed crookedness from the inside because of the opportunities found there.

There are four classes of automobile crooks—the chauffeur who robs his employer right and left; the man who steals his machine; the sneak thief who pilfers the accessories from the car; and the taxicab driver who cheats on the meter of fares, steals whatever belongings may leave behind, often robs drunken fares, and occasionally carries unprotected women to lonesome places and relieves them of all they've got.

And this is all directly due to negligence. The owner is negligent either directly in leaving unguarded a machine, or in retaining in his employ, as he too often does, a chauffeur whom he knows to be dishonest or a drunkard or a dope fiend.

Owners to Blame.
We wonder why an owner keeps a chauffeur whom he knows to be dishonest. It happens usually with the first machine; then he (the owner) becomes sophisticated. Usually he has made a lot of money in some up-state town. The neighbors have expensive toys, yet an inexcusable mark of social standing. Our friend's wife must keep up with his neighbors. Very well. He gets a car. He has heard that this is a necessary evil, he concludes. So he submits to it. This is where his negligence comes in. He doesn't take the trouble to determine that he need not submit to it. The chauffeur comes with good references and seems to fill every need. He keeps the machine in first-class shape, makes good mileage and avoids collisions. Immediately he arrives, the chauffeur locates the car and arranges with them for a "rake-off." When the bills come in the owner grins and bears it. He is willing to be "done." It's a mark of a gentleman. But after he has had one or two machines he learns to audit bills carefully, and so changes drivers frequently, for these gentlemen "mean" about expenses.

So easy has this game become that if a chauffeur were a good sport, he wouldn't take the graft!

The chauffeur becomes a promoter of crime in others. He does things with the machine that no old-fashioned coachman would have dreamed of. He will carry a passenger's rifle, for instance, with his employer's fig. Joy-riding with such an enormous amount of property is such an enormous extent that partial reforms were brought about. Many garage managers were warned not to let the cars go boards a car, does the strap-hanging act, and leaves his valuables unguarded.

Jewelers Take Chances.
Jewelers take great chances in displaying immensely valuable stocks in windows with just the thickness of a glass between the precious stones and the thief. In fact, from the 15th of September last to the 31st of January—the great holiday gift season—a regular epidemic of window-smashing occurred in Chicago. The crooks would simply steal a car, one of them being an expert driver; then, when the police were out of the way, would dash up to a window, smash it, grab the merchandise and get away, and then abandon the car.

Jewelers have sustained heavy losses through the negligence of drummers. For instance, on one occasion such a one sent his truck worth $200 away with the wagon of an expressman whom he did not know—and never saw it again. Later it turned out that the expressman "specialized" in jewelry. A drummer's mistake is never to be made again. It is worth taking pains to get to town, seeking for a chance to "switch" checks in the baggage-room or "sneak" them. Not long ago a jewelry drummer left a grip with $7,000 worth of jewelry in it with the head porter of a hotel, while he went with another grip to meet buyers. When he came back it was gone.

And so the drummer has been warned by the insurance companies never to leave a trunk in a baggage-room overnight; always to see to it that it goes on the same train with its owner; to get a grip on the floor in a jewelry store while he is displaying valuables from another on the counter or elsewhere. Above all things, he is warned against talking—talking shop to anyone but the men with whom he is sent to do business. Talking is a fatal propensity in any case. It leads to much crime. Here's an example:

A little shoemaker from Naples had located the best side of New York. Here he had worked and saved from day to day until he had accumulated $1,000. With this he intended going back to Italy, buying a little house and being happy the rest of his life. But his great happiness made the little shoemaker garrulous. He told his plans to his assistant, a Sicilian. The assistant went to his boss' companion, told them of the shoemaker's savings, and the little Neapolitan received a demand for the $1,000 under pain of death. The gang got the money and the cobble continued to work and save, with the hideous farm ten years away.

Highwayman a Bluff.
Cowardice no less than negligence is responsible for the continued existence of the highwayman. As a matter of fact, that gentleman is a great bluff. He is held up by a highwayman the best thing is to resist him. If you do, in 98 cases out of 100 he'll run away. Always remember that this man wants your money and not your blood. It is the greatest importance to him that he avoid violence. He may use his gun to threaten, and if he discharges it, it is only to intimidate. Shooting will create an alarm, and the thief greeds above all things, and bloodshed will increase any possible sentence against him by many years. A curious fact is that a highwayman will run away under resistance from a man who is not only a man from a man. She not only has more nerve, but is more terrible in her fighting than the male of her species. Joseph Taylor, the head of the auto bandits, was recently arrested with his crew in the city, and who always operated at the point of a pistol, told me that it was his absolute order to his men that if anybody offered resistance, not to shoot, but to back away.

The calmness in the presence of a burglar is often very effective. The best thing to do with such a one who enters your house at night-time is not to show fear, but to reason with him. Tell him like a human being. You might say to him, "some of those articles belong to my wife and can't be duplicated. They were given to her by her mother or sister, and have small value except to her. Leave them alone and I will give you money instead." Or you might say: "Yours is a nerve-taxing business—you've got to be keyed up all the time—now I've got some good old rye down in the dining-room. Let's go down and have some. Such talk is very disconcerting to a burglar—in fact, any talk is. He doesn't know at what moment it may attract attention. He wants silence. In most cases such a perfect calmness will result in the retreat of the man without spoils, or at least with only a small part of the plunder he came to get.

Fires and Carelessness.
Only a few days after the Equitable fire I was in the office of a friend of mine down-town. He had only one room and employed no help. He was talking about the great fire, the fearful loss of property, and loudly cursing the fellow who had thrown the fatal match. He held up a paper which he had been reading and pointed to a picture of a man who had lit a cigar, tossed the charred match into the waste-paper basket, and as we went out locked the door. Before I got to the elevator my friend remembered that he had left something behind and returned to get it. As we opened the door we were greeted with a cloud of smoke. The basket was ablaze and flames had already caught the lower end of the wooden desk. We quickly put the fire out.

PRINCE ARTHUR IS A ROYAL GOOD FELLOW

In Both Meanings of the Adjective—He May Be Next Governor-General.

TALLEST IN FAMILY

Early Ambition Was to Be a Watchmaker—Saw Service in the Boer War.

THE rumor that Prince Arthur of Connaught will succeed his father as Governor-General of Canada continues to gain credence. And his recently announced engagement to the Duchess of Fife, the wedding to take place in October, lends a romantic interest to the story. And then we are told he is to be made a Duke with the title of the Duke of Canada. All of which are good reasons for our wanting to know something of this clever young man, who may soon be the vice-regal occupant of Rideau Hall.

To begin with he is just a young man. He will not be 21 till January 13th next. Observe that he was born on the 13th of the month, a fact which has not escaped in the way of his rapid advancement.

Prince Arthur is a favorite with the British public. Crowds know all his open, handsome face, with its blue eyes, and his tall, straight figure—he is the tallest member of the Royal Family—and they keep a special cheer for him. He has always been popular—at Eton, at Sandhurst, in the regiments to which he has been attached, and during his many royal missions abroad. He is a sportsman, interested in all athletics, a fine "shot," and an excellent horseman. He has proved his worth as a hunter of big game during visits to Canada, East Africa, and Russia. In this country he won golden eagles; the people here quickly found that he had "no side."

Service in Transvaal

WHEN the regiment was ordered to the front Prince Arthur, as the youngest subaltern, was left, to his intense regret, at the cavalry depot. In 1902, when a full lieutenant, he went out to join his regiment in South Africa in charge of a draft of recruits. His service in the Transvaal was cut short by a severe attack of dysentery, which necessitated his being invalided home. To make himself a thoroughly efficient officer he has undergone instruction courses at the signalling and musketry schools. He has served with the Royal Horse Artillery and the Scots Greys.

As a member of the Sovereign's Household he has played many parts. During the illness of King Edward in 1901, he acted as the King's spokesman, and in 1902, when the King was in Rome at the baptism of the infant heir to the Italian throne, in quick succession he acted as the King's envoy to the funeral of the Dowager Duchess of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, and at the opening of the new Protestant cathedral in Berlin. On that occasion the Prince was invested by the Kaiser with the Order of the Black Eagle. He also went to Berlin as the royal envoy at the wedding of the Crown Prince.

An Interesting Mission

ONE of his most interesting missions was to Japan in 1906, as the bearer of the Order of the Garter to the Emperor, who personally invested him with the Order of the Chrysanthemum, although never before had the Emperor invested a recipient. As a compliment to the Prince six choogishes of Kyoto performed the famous Cherry Dance out of its due season. Prince Arthur was amused when one said to him in quaint English, "You very nice."

Representing King George, Prince Arthur went on a mission to Rome in April of 1910 to congratulate the King upon the fiftieth anniversary of Italy's independence. He also visited Munich to present the Order of the Garter to the Prince Regent of Bavaria, and in the summer of 1911, he was the Czar's guest at Krasnovo Selo, where he took part in a four-mile ride of the Russian cavalry commanders and a hunting party to shoot elk in the forest by night.

Prince Arthur had a great success as a special pleader in the cause of science when, as chairman of the appeal committee, he raised £25,000 to purchase the site for new chemical laboratories for University College, London.

By FRANCIS A. CARMAN.

MEMBER of his profession, Premier of his Province, Premier of the Dominion, creator of the education system of his Province, draughtsman of the Canadian Pacific Railway contract, a leader among the builders of Canada—these are the mountain peaks in the career of the last surviving Father of Confederation.

It is curious to find a dispute as to whether so well known a family as that of Sir Charles Tupper was of United Empire Loyalist stock or not. But such a dispute there undoubtedly is. The Parliamentary Guide says that the family is of German origin, settling first in Guernsey and later in Virginia, and subsequently, at termination of American Revolution, removed to Nova Scotia with other loyalists. On the other hand, the Rev. Edward Manning Saunders, of Halifax, in his sketch of Sir Charles in "Three Premiers of Nova Scotia," states that the great-grandfather of the future Canadian Premier, came to Cornwallis, N.S., in 1763.

We are accustomed in this day to explain a great deal by heredity, and there is no difficulty in discovering such an explanation for Sir Charles Tupper's torrential gift of language. He was not only son of the paragonage, but he came of a race of preachers. His ancestor, who emigrated to America, Thomas Tupper, conducted worship among the settlers on Cape Cod, and built a chapel for the Indians, in which for many years his family kept up missions to the aborigines.

The father of Sir Charles was one of the leading Baptist preachers of the Maritime Provinces, and gave his son an example in the untiring industry which has ever characterized him by finding leisure amid the pressure of his pastoral duties to acquire a reading knowledge of thirteen languages.

A Meteoric Beginning

THE opening of the career of the young politician was meteoric in brilliancy and dash, though by no means in duration. After a brilliant course at Horton Academy, Wolfville, N.S., he graduated in medicine from Edinburgh University in 1843, at the early age of 22. He returned to Nova Scotia, and was in practice at Amherst, Cumberland County—the county which later gave him his name—when he was summoned from the country practitioner's carriage to enter the field of politics. After he had become well acquainted with his practice by nine years of arduous study, he made his first as virtual, though not titular, leader of the Conservative party in Nova Scotia.

The circumstances of this first speech were characteristic of his tempestuous and headlong methods in politics all through his long career. There was a bye-election for the Nova Scotia Assembly in Cumberland in March, 1852, and one of the Liberal candidates was the mighty "Joe" Howe. Dr. Tupper, then in his thirty-first year, nominated at one of the Conservative candidates at the joint nomination meeting. At this date—after the long career of the "Cumberland War Horse"—it seems impossible to believe that he was ever nervous over the task of speaking. But so it was. "Our young doctor," we are told by Saunders, slept little the night before the meeting, and was unable to take any breakfast that morning. But his nervousness was not made evident to the public—or his opponents—event then.

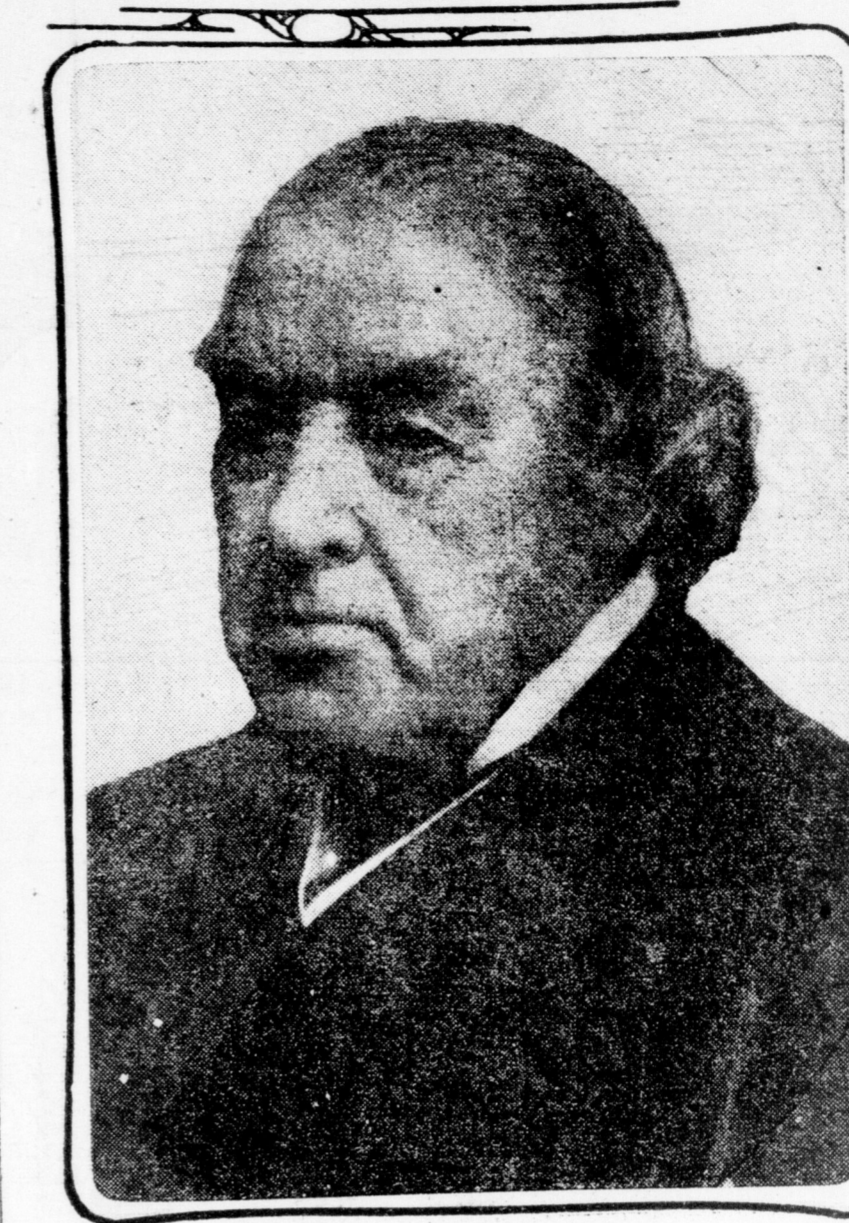

Got Under Howe's Skin

YOUNG Dr. Tupper had completed his formal task and was about to enter on his criticism of Mr. Howe's record when that experienced and famous politician ascended the platform. Dr. Tupper proposed at once to give way to the nominator of Mr. Howe.

"Go on with your speech, doctor," replied Mr. Howe, and Dr. Tupper went on.

"But," says Saunders, in telling the incident, "as Mr. Howe saw that the vehement utterances of the young man were damaging to his cause, he interrupted him, saying, 'The candidates should speak first.' This touched the match to the powder. 'Hear the candidates,' shouted the Liberals. 'Hear Dr. Tupper,' shouted the Conservatives. Over this difference of opinion confusion reigned for more than an hour, and the matter was settled by a committee, whose report was that the candidates should speak first, to be followed by Dr. Tupper and others."

Tupper had won his spurs. At the next general election he was asked and consented to accept the Conservative nomination against the veteran Howe. At the nomination on that occasion the other candidates spoke briefly at the outset, and then the field was left open

Sir Charles Tupper

People Like a Fighter

THERE was no doubt that the confident bearing of the young politician had had a great deal to do with his victory. The people like a fighter; and especially a fighter who is sure of himself. Dr. Tupper knew his strength, and he did not leave his confidence behind him when he went in the Conservative caucus at the opening of the Legislature. The shattered state of the party fortunes led to a "heart-to-heart" talk among the fortunate members. After the older men had spoken, the Conservative leader, Hon. J. W. Johnston, formerly Premier, called upon Howe's conqueror for his opinion. Dr. Tupper at once laid down two fundamental principles on which the party policy should be changed. The first was that care should be taken to change the hostile attitude of the party towards Roman Catholics—then numbering about 80,000 out of a population of about 330,000—and to adopt the policy of "equal political rights to all without regard to race or creed." The second was that the party should cease its opposition to the building of railways by the Government.

Government Defeated

DR. TUPPER carried his fighting qualities into the Assembly. When the first session opened the Opposition had only fifteen members out of fifty-four, and at the end of a month the Opposition forces had risen to twenty-two, due very largely, it seems, to Dr. Tupper's vigorous onslaughts on the Government. Nor did this end the attrition of the Cumberland physician's attacks. Two years later this Government, which assumed office so powerfully buttressed—owing partly to Dr. Tupper's tactics and partly to the antagonizing of the Roman Catholics by Joseph Howe—was defeated and Mr. Tupper became Provincial Secretary in the Cabinet of Premier Johnstone.

Dumfounded Ross

TUPPER and Sir George Ross met in a campaign in a bye-election in the old constituency of Cardwell in 1878, Dalton McCarthy being the Conservative candidate and victor, and Boulton being the Liberal candidate. "Tupper," says Ross, in telling of the incident in his recent book, "met me two nights in the riding, and with his usual force repelled my attacks upon the Conservative party, and left me wondering if I really had any definite opinions on public questions or was even remotely qualified to be a party politician."

His Nickname

WHEN asked how he gained the title of Buffalo Bill, he replied: "It was in 1867, the time that the end of the Kansas Pacific track was in the heart of the buffalo country, and the company was employing about twelve hundred men in the construction of the road. As the Indians were very troublesome it was difficult to obtain fresh meat for the workmen, and the company therefore concluded to engage the services of hunters to kill buffaloes. Goddard Brothers, who had the contract for boarding the employes of the road, made me a good offer to become their hunter. They said that they would require about twelve buffaloes per day. They used only the hindquarters and the hump of the buffalo."

"BUFFALO BILL" CODY MADE OVER A MILLION

Although His Great Show Is Now Reported to Have Become Bankrupt.

SHOT HIS FIRST INDIAN

As a Boy of Eleven—How He Came to Earn the Name of "Buffalo Bill."

WHAT boy's heart—boys up to the age of fifty, who mean—did not sink as the owner of it read that Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show had been forced to close up shop, and that the sheriff was in possession? But it is a relief to know that Colonel William F. Cody, "Buffalo Bill" himself, is not seriously affected by the disaster to a once great show, which still bears his name. He retired from the business a couple of years ago, having acquired a neat fortune of over a million dollars. A few weeks ago there was a rumor that he was dying in Knoxville, Tenn., but happily it was not so. He is only 67 years of age, too young to pass in his checks yet.

This most picturesque figure of American frontier life of course had the education of the schools. Three weeks of regular school training was all he ever had, and his wide knowledge of the world was gained by travel. His early life as a child was spent in the freighting business. He crossed the plains many times as a boy. He filled every post of occupation in the border life. He has been freighter, mule driver, pony express rider, trapper and hunter, stage driver, scout, ranchman, mine owner, justice of the peace, member of the Nebraska Legislature, an actor in a border play written by himself, and in the meantime the most successful showman of modern times.

His First Indian

WHEN he was a boy of 11 he killed his first Indian. He and a party of other wagon drivers were being pursued by a band of Indians who had broken up their caravan. The whites were making their way along a river bed to a fort. Here is how he tells it: "Being the younger of the party, I became somewhat tired, and while noticing I had fallen some little distance behind the others. It was about ten o'clock, and we were keeping very quiet and hugging the bank closely, when I happened to look up to the moonlit sky and saw the plumed head of an Indian peering over the bank. Instead of hurrying ahead and warning the men in a quiet way, I instantly aimed my gun at the head and fired. The report rang out sharp and loud on the night air, and was immediately followed by an Indian whoop, and the next moment about six feet of dead Indian came tumbling into the river. I was not only overcome by astonishment, but was badly frightened, as I could hardly realize what I had done. I expected to see the whole force of Indians come down upon us. While I was standing thus bewildered, the men who had heard the shot and the whoop, and seen the Indian take a tumble, came rushing back. 'Who fired that shot?' cried Simpson. 'I did,' replied I, rather proud, as my men came up. 'Yes, and little Billie has killed an Indian stone dead, too dead to skin,' said one of the men, who had approached me rather than the rest. From that time forward I became known as an Indian killer. This was, of course, the first Indian I had killed, but it was not my last for the next eleven years of age."

He served as a scout in the American Civil war, and subsequently in the same capacity against the Indians who made life miserable for settlers in the South-Western States.

His Nickname

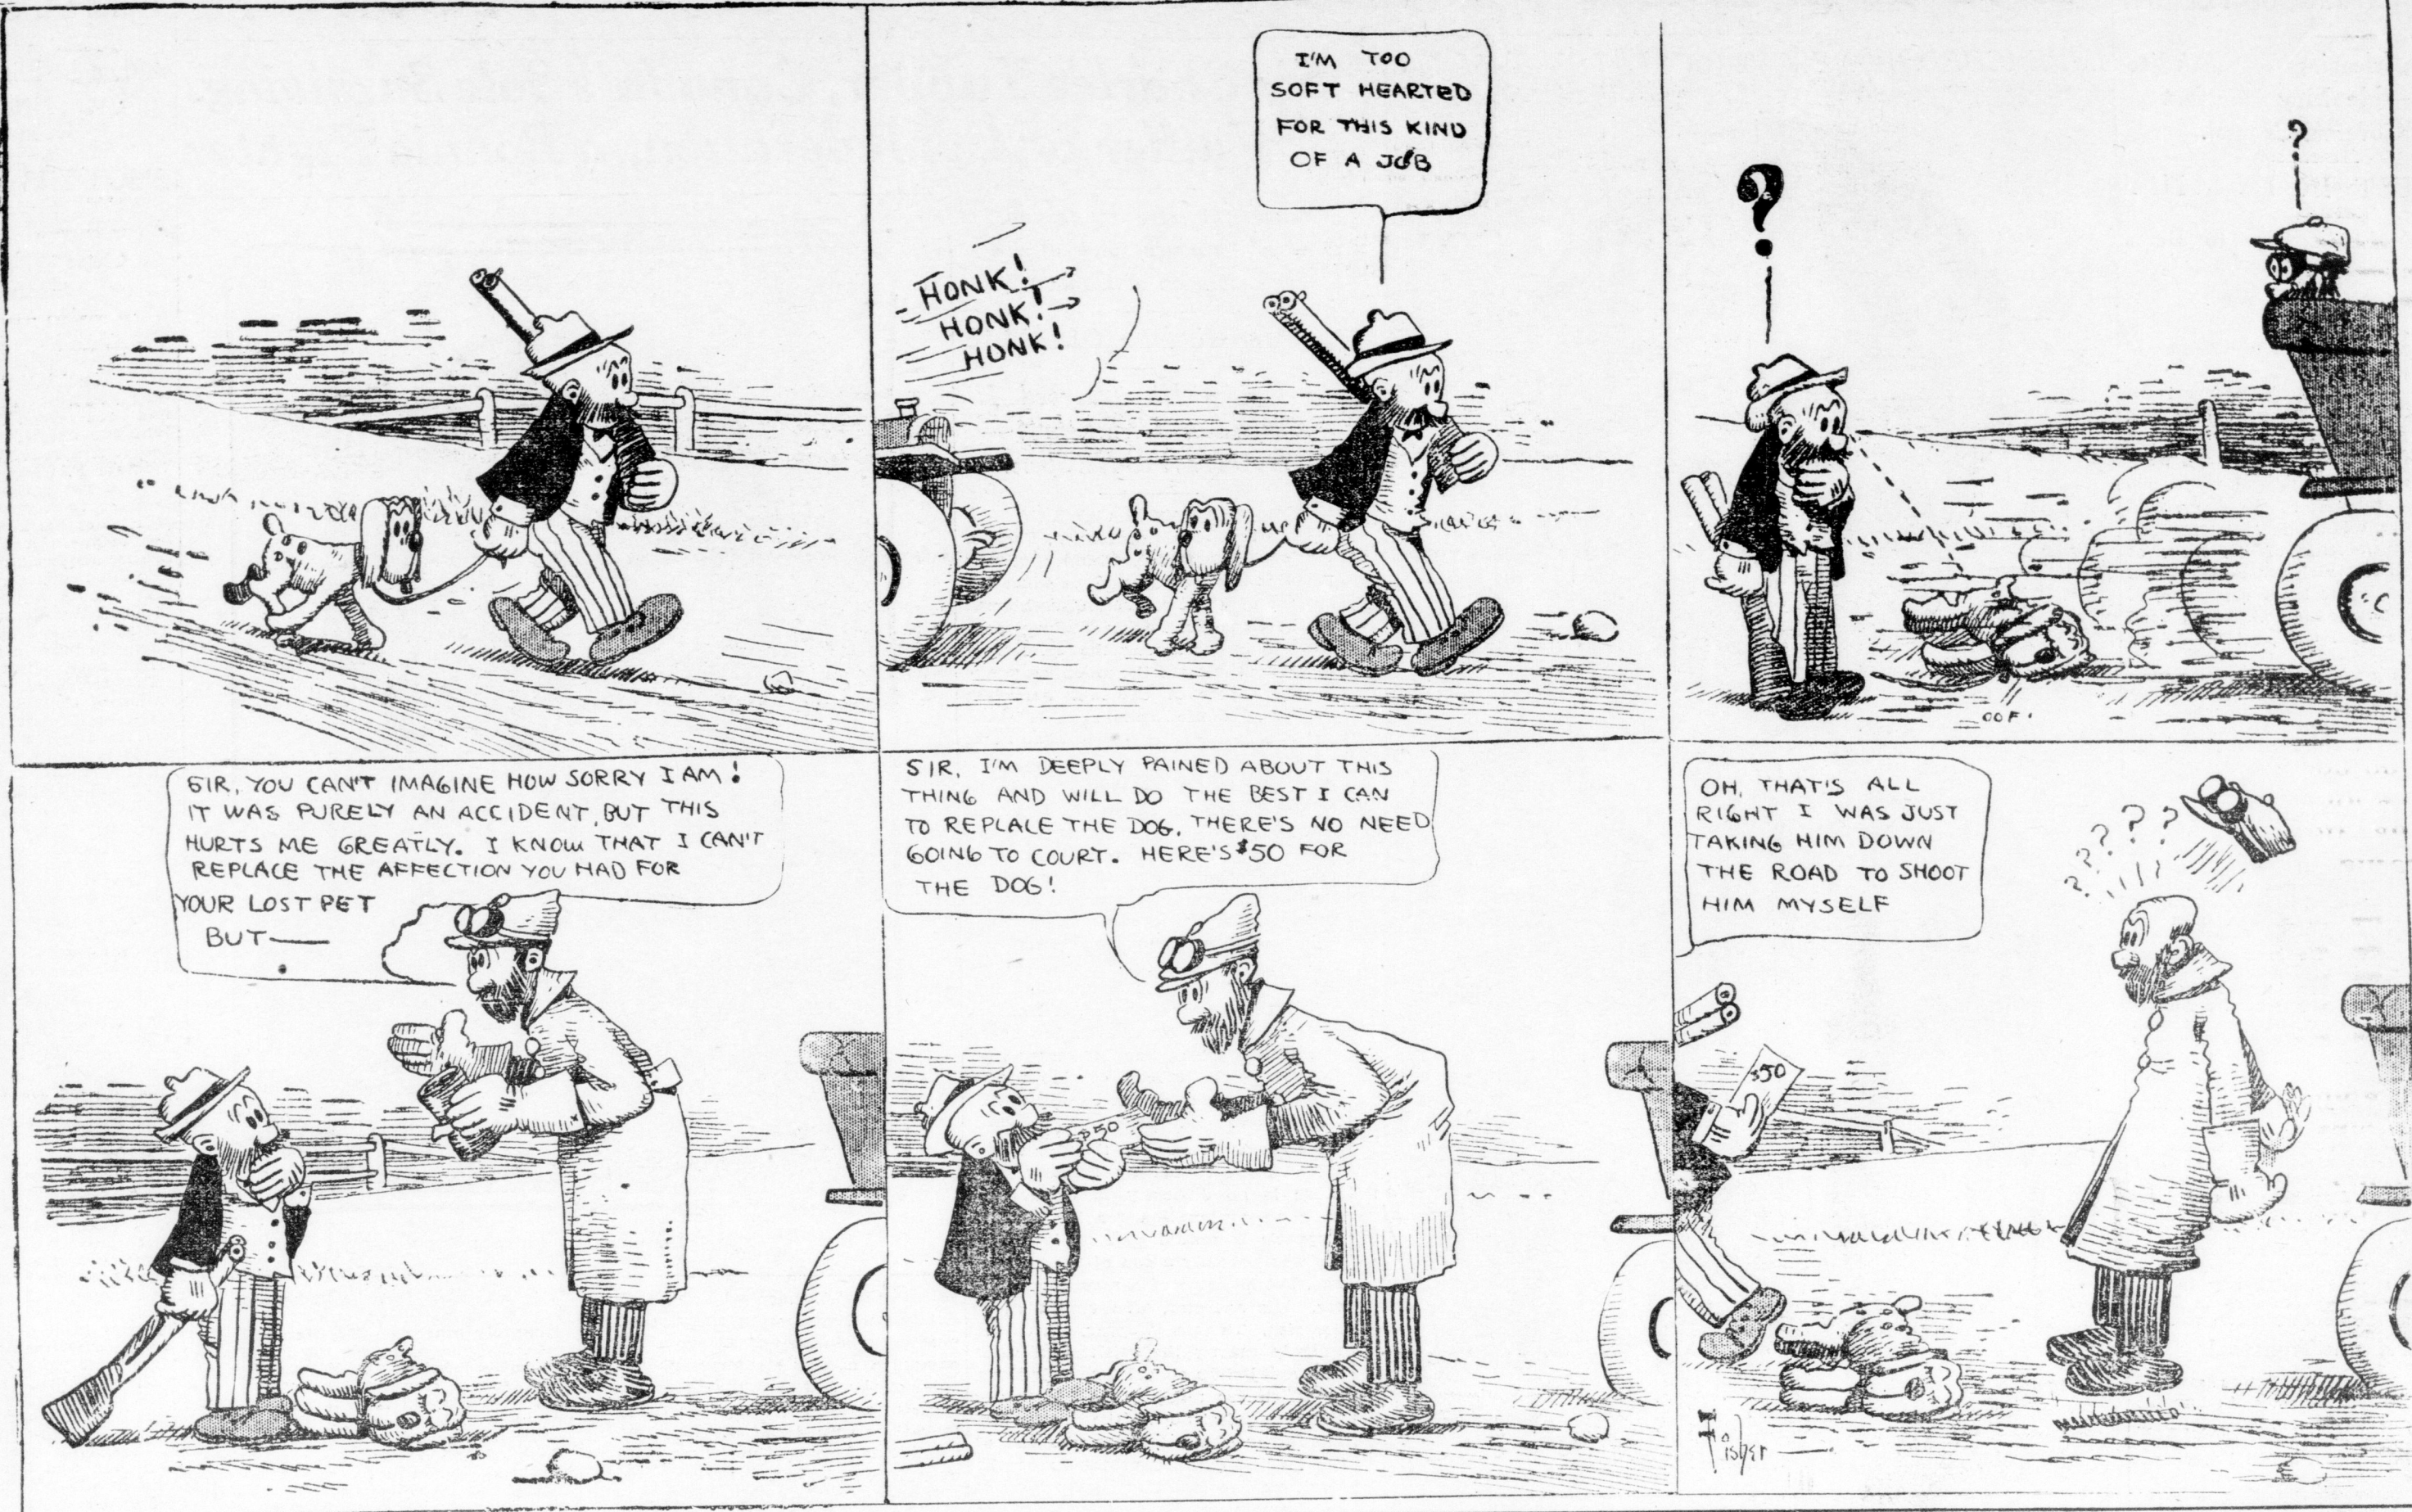

WHEN asked how he gained the title of Buffalo Bill, he replied: "It was in 1867, the time that the end of the Kansas Pacific track was in the heart of the buffalo country, and the company was employing about twelve hundred men in the construction of the road. As the Indians were very troublesome it was difficult to obtain fresh meat for the workmen, and the company therefore concluded to engage the services of hunters to kill buffaloes. Goddard Brothers, who had the contract for boarding the employes of the road, made me a good offer to become their hunter. They said that they would require about twelve buffaloes per day. They used only the hindquarters and the hump of the buffalo."

"As this was to be dangerous work, on account of the Indians, who were riding all over that section of the country, and as I would be obliged to go from five to ten miles from the road each day to hunt the buffaloes, accompanied by only one man with a light wagon, for the transportation of the meat, of course, I demanded a large salary. They could afford to remunerate me well, because the meat would not cost them anything."

"They agreed to give me $500 a month, provided I furnished them all the fresh meat required, and I immediately began my career as a buffalo hunter, and it was not long before I had acquired considerable notoriety, and was given the name of Buffalo Bill. "During my engagement as a hunter for the company—a period of less than eighteen months—I killed 4,280 buffaloes, and had many exciting adventures with the Indians."

A New Type of Woman; Problem of Younger Daughters Educated Beyond Their Parents

Theme of a Popular Novel—The Salamander—Her Hunger for the Great Life of the Cities—What Will She Do?

The novelist is no longer content to let his story tell what he has to say; he tells you what to expect and what he is after. He gives a lengthy foreword or an introduction, and the fact that he does so is an indication of the increasing use of the novel to tell more than a tale.

Owen Johnson, whose story, "Stover of Yale," had so remarkable a vogue, calls his new story "The Salamander," and it is running through the pages of McClure's Magazine.

It deals with all the great problems which are arising from the entry of girls and women into every activity in the great city. Salamanders pass through fire. So do these, and happy those who escape unscathed.

A New Type of Young Woman. Mr. Johnson is the son of the editor of the Century, who is just retiring after a most honorable career in the editorial chair. Mr. Johnson's story deals with a curious and a new type of modern young woman, the product of changing social forces, profoundly significant in the present unrest and prophetic of the range of developments to come.

That "coming out," to which every active-minded girl looks forward, has today a wider stage than her grandmother ever knew. And the tragedy and pathos of those "coming outs" lie in whether legitimate yearnings for romance and happiness, and insight and activity are met in legitimate ways; or whether, losing the true trail, she finds herself in a far country, and seeks vainly to attain her ends by devious paths, and so fails to arrive at all. All things are here—can she win them without pain or fire? The Salamanders.

Mr. Johnson does not think the type of young girl he described is an ephemeral manifestation or even a detached fragment of our society. "The Salamanders," he says, "are neither irrelevant nor the product of unrelated forces. The rebellious ideas that sway them are the same ideas that are profoundly at work in the new generation of women. Be sure that the young girl of today, from the age of 18 to 25, whether facing the world alone or peering out at it from the safety of the family, whether in the palaces of New York, the homesteads of New England, the manors of the south, or the throbbing cities and villages of the west, whatever her station or her opportunity, has in her discipline and native imagination a little touch of the Salamander.

The Salamander, in the last analysis is a little atom possessed of a brain, thrown against the fragile luxury of New York, which has impelled her to it as the flame the moth.

She comes roving from somewhere out of the immense reaches of the nation, revolting against the compromise of an inherited narrowness, passionately adventurous, eager and unafraid, neither sure of what she seeks nor conscious of what forces impel or check her.

She meets them all—the men of New York, the mediocre, the interesting, the powerful, the flesh-hunters, the brutes, and those who seek only an amused mental relaxation.

From Window to Window. "This curiosity, that leads her to flit from window to window, has in it no vice. It is fed only by the zest of life. Her passion is to know, to leave no cranny unexplored—to see, not to experience; to flit miraculously through the flames, never to be consumed.

In the past, the great obstacle to woman's complete and equal communion with man has been her economical dependence on him—that, while she has not been necessary to man, man has been necessary to her. Hence her forced acceptance of his standard of her position and her duties.

In one generation, by her portentous achievement of economic independence, woman in a night, like Wolfe on the Plains of Abraham, has suddenly elevated herself to a position of aggressive equality. Those who see in the feminine movement no further than a question of political expediency perceive no more than a relatively unimportant manifestation.

What Has Happened. "What has happened is that the purely masculine conception of society has been suddenly put to the challenge. Man's conception of religion, of marriage and the family, of property rights as against sentimental rights, of standards of conduct and political expediency, imperfect and groping as they have been, will in the future progress according to a new alliance between man and woman. And this world revolution has come, day by day, month after month, in the spectacle of young women, bundle in arms, light of purse, rebel in heart, moving in silent thousands toward the great cities.

Educated Beyond Their Parents. "Between the old generation of authority and this present generation of logic has come a feminine revolution startling in the shock of its abruptness. Yet a social revolution that obliterates in an hour the landmarks of ages frequently resembles a cataclysm of nature—gathered together, waving farewell to the past with the last six inches of earth. What has broken out in these last half-dozen years has been accumulating without beginning—for ideas can have no beginnings.

Another troubling phase began in the period of marvellous material opportunity, the fungus growth of fortunes great and little. The suddenly prosperous patriots began to plan for their children those opportunities which had been denied them, seeking to educate them beyond what they had known—a process ever tinged with tragedy and disillusionment.

What now results, with the thousands of young girls who have learned of magazines and novels, or who have gone out from the confining narrowness of little towns to a broader education, not simply in books but in the experience of life, of a certain independency of the opportunities beyond?

"At about the age of eighteen she returns from college to town or village, to the mediocrity of the home from which she has escaped; and at once the great choice of life presents itself to her. What she has learned—more, what she has absorbed from every newspaper—has awakened her curiosity and given her a hunger for the great life which is throbbing somewhere far away, in great cities, in a thousand fascinating forms.

When She Returns Home. "To remain, to take up a mild drudgery in the home, means closing the door on this curiosity. Marriage to such men as remain means, at best, the renunciation of that romance which is stirring in her imagination. Why should she have been educated if but to return to a distasteful existence? The parents, by the very education which has thrust their daughter so far above their simple needs, have destroyed their old authority.

"She spurns the doctrine that it is woman's position to atone and to immortalize herself. New means are arising which her logical revolts—equality of burden with men, equality of opportunity and of pleasure. She wants to live life to its fullest now, in the glory of her youth. She wants to breathe, not to sulk. She wants adventure, she wants excitement and mystery. She wants to see, to know, to experience.

She Packs the Bag. "And one final day, inevitably, she packs her valise, as her brothers may have done before her, and, despite commands, entreaties, tears, she stands at last on the platform of a shivering, creaking train, waving farewell to the old people, who stand bewildered, straining their eyes after the fast-fading handkerchief feebly fluttered by the daughter whom they have educated for this.

Capricious, inconsistent, harum-scarum, dabbling with fire—yet she is not the free agent she so ardently believes. Back of all the passionate revolt against the old commonplace in life, back of all the defiantly proclaimed scorn of conventions, there are the hushed echoes of the retreating first generation, the old memories, and doubts that return and return; and these quiet, suspended sounds constantly turn her aside, make of her a being constantly at war with herself, where will and instinct are ever opposed without her perceiving or comprehending the warfare.

What Will She Do? "We see clearly two generations—the older order of broken authority passing sadly away; the new, who are bravely seeking a logical standard of conduct beyond that of blind obedience—if yet the time be arrived when humanity is ready for this—that coming generation in which woman will count for so much.

The where for the first time she will construct and order—where will it go? Backward a little, or forward? Will those who have proclaimed tomorrow, still teach what they have proclaimed—that what is wrong for the woman is wrong for the man, and that if man may experience woman may explore?

Attacking British Land Monopoly

Chancellor of Exchequer Will Regain His Campaign on Oct. 11.

Mr. Lloyd George will open the land campaign, the Press Association announces, at Bedford, on Saturday, Oct. 11. Earl Beauchamp, first commissioner of works, will preside at the meeting.

The task of Mr. Arthur Acland's land committee—an unofficial body appointed with the approval of the cabinet, and working with a view to providing the authentic information necessary as the basis of legislative proposals—has not yet been completed, but it is confidently expected that the chancellor opens his campaign.

On one important branch of the subject, that of rural housing, Mr. Hume, president of the board of agriculture, is conducting inquiries from which very valuable results are anticipated. At various times during the past year or so Mr. Lloyd George has given indications in his speeches as to the subjects he has in view, as the following extracts from his speeches show: You have got to free the land that is to this very hour shackled with the chains of feudalism.—At Woodford, July 5, 1912. The first essential condition to every social reform, every real improvement in the lot of the people, is a thorough, complete change in our land system. Housing, wages, food, health, the development of a virile, independent, manly, imperial race—you must have a free land system as an essential condition of these.—At Aberdeen, Nov. 23, 1912. Hundreds of thousands, if not millions of people in rural districts are living under conditions of housing and wages which ought to make this great empire hang its head in shame.—At the National Liberal Club, Jan. 21, 1913.

We are now about to march against the central position where land monopoly is entrenched. The struggle will be a fierce one, but we will win, and then the road will be free to a Britain where a man who is willing to give honest labor of brain and hands may feel assured that whatever vicissitudes may befall him he will not be forsaken nor will his seed be forced to beg bread.—At Sutton-in-Ashfield, Aug. 9, 1913.

The chancellor has made it plain that the remedy is not to crush the land with the weight of fresh taxation or the increase of urban burdens. "Is Jim the matter in his matrimonial firm?" "No, I think he is the floorwalker."—Baltimore American. "Have you asked your father's consent to marry that young man?" "More than that. Mother and I have dared him to refuse."—Detroit Free Press.
