60TH YEAR. NO. 23543. LONDON, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, JANUARY 11, 1923. THREE CENTS.

CITY WILL ASK LONDON BILL FOR THIS YEAR

PEOPLE ARE UGLY AS FRENCH ARMY SEIZE ESSEN CITY

Crowds Hiss and Jeer as the Troops and Tanks Parade Streets.

PROTEST TO STATES

But Otherwise No Action Taken to Stop Advance.

By CARL D. GROAT.
Special Cable to The Advertiser.

Essen, Jan. 11.—French cavalry, tanks and machine gun detachments occupied the center of the city of Essen at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Trains and trams were halted, and communications temporarily closed. Crowds of Germans in the street near the postoffice were in an ugly mood.

Officers of the invading army awaited orders to begin billeting their men in private houses and taverns in the outskirts of the city. Here and there a tank snorted through the streets and cavalry clattered along, but the poilus themselves chatted and smoked at ease without knowing where they were to go next.

German press photographers hurried out to snap the troops, while crowds hissed them, and declared the cameras should be smashed.

There was no trouble this morning as the horizon blue of the first poilus showed in the outskirts, and none was anticipated.

Will Protest to U. S.

The people of Essen are preparing a protest to the United States, and strict prohibition is to be enforced, otherwise life will go on as normally as the Germans call it.

The army that had marched before daybreak came rapidly on into Essen. Along the line of march, as the first cavalry passed, tanks that had lain in wait, rumbled into the procession. There were numbers of them on the road from Kettweg to Bredeny.

As the French troops swung eastward through the lifting fog, the columns passed German stolid teamsters, puffing on their pipes, driving out to farms or markets, displaying only mild curiosity at the sight of the advancing hosts.

The French cavalrymen were gay as they pranced through Kettweg, their picked chargers mincing over the heavy cobblestones. They chanted little snatches of French songs, and their pennants fluttered gaily in the morning sun.

Long Blue Line.

The long blue line on its eastward march wound around the steep, hairpin curves of sharp hills above the Ruhr River, then dropped down to the flats along the banks, and into Kettweg.

The path ran straight before them into Bredeny, the first of the cavalry that reached the outskirts of Essen was in three sections, with outposts ahead to stir the tanks to action, and pass the word to the countryside that the French were coming.

Automobiles filled with officers sped past the columns when the long lines reached the top of the hill at Bredeny. Then the line of march was along the Essen street railway line.

RECALLS AMBASSADOR.
Special Cable to The Advertiser.

Berlin, Jan. 11.—Germany has recalled her ambassador from Paris and her minister from Brussels, but does not intend the move as a diplomatic rupture, it was stated officially today.

The German charge D'Affairs will remain at Paris to act as ambassador and similar arrangements will be made in Belgium. The act of the Cuno government in withdrawing its representatives from France and Belgium came immediately after receipt of notification of France's intention to occupy the Ruhr, starting today.

Germany made this move as a protest.

WILL OCCUPY BOCHUM.
Associated Press Despatch.

Paris, Jan. 11.—Premier Poincare, in his statement before the Chamber of Deputies today on the steps being taken by France in the Ruhr district, said the government's plans provided for the eventual occupation of Bochum "if Germany falls to carry out the French demands."

The occupation of Bochum, which is the site of the iron and steel works of Hugo Stinnes, is said to be set for Saturday, although this is not officially confirmed.

MARTIAL LAW IN ESSEN.
Associated Press Despatch.

London, Jan. 11.—A Reuter's despatch from Essen, timed 4:20 o'clock this afternoon, says martial law is to be proclaimed in the city by the French occupational forces "almost immediately."

BELGIAN TROOPS FORWARD.
Special Cable to The Advertiser.

Dusseldorf, Jan. 11. — Belgian troops went forward into the Ruhr a few hours after the French today.

A contingent composed of two battalions of infantry, two squadrons of cavalry, a field battery, ten armored cars and ten escorting airplanes advanced from Mulheim to the north of Essen.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Quebec, Jan. 11.—The attorney-general of the province has been served with a copy of an application for a writ advising him of an application before the supreme court for a writ of habeas corpus to free John H. Roberts, now detained in the Quebec jail under the provisions of an act passed at the last session condemning him to serve twelve months in jail for having violated the rights and privileges of the legislature.

WENIGE DEMANDS DEFINITE ANSWER ON NEW CITY HALL

DO NOT FAVOR PLAN

Aldermen of Ward Two All of Same Opinion Concerning Matter.

He was at the city hall bright and early this morning to superintendent the drafting of a query to the city solicitor in this respect. The latter is being requested to state "Yes" or "no" whether the council has the power to sell the Spencer block and a portion of the federal square and devote the proceeds toward a new structure.

It would appear for once that all representatives from ward two, in the city council, are of the same opinion, more or less, about the wish of the people.

Ald. W. A. Wilson maintains strenuously that the construction of a city hall on the federal square this year, without another vote of the people, would be illegal.

While Ald. Leonard Douglass grants that the people do not want the hall on the present site, he is not quite clear whether their vote should be interpreted to signify that building operations should actually commence this year or not.

It is believed that Ald. A. M. Judd adheres to a similar view, but an opinion from the city solicitor will clear the air of all misapprehensions, it is predicted.

On the other hand, Mayor Wenige and a number of the councillors, including Ald. George Burdick, Edmund Hayden and John Colbert submit that work should proceed as soon as possible.

MOLDERS AT TORONTO ARE GIVEN INCREASE

Not Known Whether Recent Action Will Affect London Workers.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Hamilton, Jan. 11.—At a conference of Ontario stove foundrymen and members of the International Molders' Union at Toronto, the men were granted a wage increase of 16 per cent. Journeymen who received $5.40 per day of eight hours will, starting January 8, receive $6.

Local manufacturers when questioned by The Advertiser this morning refused to comment on the increase, and would not say whether plans were under way to revise the payrolls in London or not.

SEEKS TO PURCHASE LLOYD GEORGE SITE

An apparently well-founded rumor that the United Hotels Corporation will purchase the site of the proposed Lloyd George Hotel on Richmond street, and erect a modern hostelry this year, is current throughout the city.

According to well-authenticated information received by The Advertiser, the United Hotels people, of which George O'Neil, former manager of the Tecumseh House, is supervisor, will negotiate for the site this month, and construction will begin in the spring.

It was pointed out that the lease which the United Hotels have on the Tecumseh House expires this year. The probabilities are, it is said, that the lessees will take over the local hotel and run both it and the Lloyd George.

Those in charge of the unsuccessful proceedings to collect sufficient money to provide for the erection of the Lloyd George stated today that they knew nothing of the contemplated purchase by the United Others, however, in touch with the latter, claimed that the materialization of the project was only a matter of time.

It was said that the United intend building the Lloyd George according to their own plans, and without necessarily adopting architectural plans accepted by local business men.

One Londoner pointed out that under the control of the United Hotels, the city would be relieved of all work in connection with the solicitation of funds, and that it would be insured as good service and accommodation as can be found anywhere.

$75,000 FIRE DESTROYS MONTREAL SHOE STORE

Associated Press Despatch.

Montreal, Jan. 11.—Fire which probably did $5,000 worth of damage visited the boot and shoe warehouse of J. A. Pelletier on Notre Dame street last night. The flames of undetermined origin had flooded the third story and burst through the roof before the firemen could make their water lines effective.

The Only Photograph of the Kaiser's Wedding

"NOT A "WAR LORD" ANY MORE—MERELY A HUSBAND!

This is the only photograph taken of the former kaiser's wedding to Princess Hermine last Nov. 5th. The kaiser consented to be photographed after weeks of negotiation on payment of $10,000 by an American syndicate. The photograph itself, shown above, was taken by a Dutch village photographer who had no realization of his importance as he clicked the shutter. The German kaiser looks more like an old man beginning to weary of life than the arrogant war lord who sent forward his stupendous armies eight years or so ago to conquer the world "mit Gott." Below is the story of how the photograph was obtained.

CONSTANTINE IS DEAD, LONDON REPORT SAYS

Special Cable to The Advertiser.

London, Jan. 11.—Former King Consstantine of Greece died at Palermo today, according to the Central News.

A Rome report described the former monarch's death as due to cerebral hemorrhage.

When the world war broke out he became the storm center of a European maelstrom, both Germany and the Allies seeking to enlist Greece on their side. Constantine's wife was a sister of the German kaiser, and he himself was accused of pro-German leanings.

Finally "Tino" as he became known to the press of the woorld was forced from the throne, nd hd to leave Greece. Venizelos became dictator and the Greeks joined the Allies.

Constantine remained in exile until after the war. Eventually he returned to Athens in triumph, having been called back by a plebiscite.

Tino's ambition led to an attempt by reece to defeat Turkey and capture Constantinople, a revolution followed the defeat of Greek arms and Constantine again went into exile.

He had been spending the winter at Palermo.

Feels Like An Egg But Can't Be Beat

Found at last! The expression super-perfect for cheerful buoyancy of spirit!

Just a few rods from the market this morning, a ruddy-cheeked farmer, the joy of living plainly apparent in sparkling brown eyes, exclaimed to the world in general and a friend in particular who had approached, concerning the state of his health.

"How am I today? Say, Joe, I feel like a new-laid egg!"

Kaiser's Wedding Picture Cost Much Fuss and $10,000

This is the story of how Bert Garai, London, Eng., correspondent of a well-known picture syndicate, obtained the official photograph of the former kaiser's wedding at a cost of $10,000.

Since his exile in Holland, the former war lord put himself in voluntary exile, seeing no one but a few Dutch friends.

Press photographers and movie operators from all over the world literally besieged Amerongen and Doorn for the last four years, waiting for a chance to get a comprehensive photo of him. Knowing this, the kaiser made the girdle tighter, and in reality only one Dutchman succeeded in snapping him in 1919 by concealing himself in a hay car. The photos taken at such distance could hardly be recognized as the former war lord.

When about a year ago we were able to obtain a little private snapshot of himself with the late kaiserin, he made even stronger precautions against photographers. He can proudly state that no person really did photograph him with or without his knowledge or consent.

KAISER IS "CLEVER FELLOW."

The kaiser, as he is still called by everyone in Doorn and Potsdam, is a clever fellow. By outwitting everyone, he surrounded himself with people deal, resembled his former war lord so much that, on seeing him enter his office in Haus Doorn, where I awaited him, and not knowing him previously, I mistook him for the kaiser. Later I told him of my mistake.

My first interview with his court marshal, who was first instrumental in bringing the deal about, took place a week after the wedding. I had a letter of introduction to him from Count von Platen, the kaiser's court marshal residing in Berlin in the former crown prince's palace. Count von Platen is taking care of the kaiser's interests in Germany. I told him that I knew of the existence of such official picture and would like to buy same, paying in marks, thus benefiting the German people.

He agreed with my views, and gave me his card to see von Kagge, hofmarshal at Doorn, telling me that the matter would be in the latter's hands.

SEE KAGGE IN HIS OFFICE.

I saw Kagge next day in his office in Haus Doorn. The walls were full of pictures and paintings of the kaiser taken before and during the war. Not a single other picture or decoration could I discover, illustrating some German historical event or some art piece.

I offered him a large amount, but he said the kaiser had not made up his mind to whom and when he would release the picture. Then he gave me the name of the person with whom I should deal in the future, asking me to mention as little as possible that Haus Doorn had anything to do with the selling of the pictures should I be able to buy same.

I told him, however, that he had better release the picture quickly. I understood that a London press photographer obtained a picture with long-focus camera purported to be the kaiser. He promptly stated that this person was not the kaiser, but another of those clever camouflages to put something over on the camera men. Von Kagge intimated that this general, entering a car, as shown in the picture, was himself.

HOW THE WEDDING PICTURE WAS MADE.

The kaiser, realizing the profit made in circulating false pictures of himself, suddenly changed his mind and, figuring on increased expenditures in the future, decided to be photographed, the same way as he decided to write his memoirs and sell same at once.

The photo was made by a Dutch village photographer, quite an old man, knowing very little about press and publicity. He once photographed the kaiser during the wedding of Count Bentinck's daughter. He delivered the negative without keeping a print for a reference, and that picture was

LONDON AUTOIST IS GIVEN 30 DAYS IN COMMON JAIL

RECEIVES LECTURE

Folly of Being Careless Pointed Out by Magistrate Graydon.

After hearing a lecture from Magistrate Graydon as to the folly of being careless in the operation of such a dangerous machine as an auto upon a public highway, Henry B. Williams, 755 Adelaide street was sentenced to 30 days in the common jail on a negligent driving charge today. Williams crashed into a Salvation Army procession Christmas Eve, maiming some of the marchers.

The seven days he has already spent in jail on remand will be deducted from his term.

Magistrate Graydon pointed out that a person could hardly be compensated for the maiming of the body. Money was the nearest compensation, he added.

The court did not think that Williams was willingly reckless, but did think that if every precaution had been taken the accident would not have taken place. The driver had committed the sin of omission. He had omitted to exercise proper care, and had not been keeping a careful watch for objects in his path.

It was not the fault of the Salvation Army members who were parading on Dundas street that they had been struck down. They had a right to march and did not contribute in any way to the accident.

From several prominent citizens, highest recommendations as to the character of the driver had been received. He had never been in trouble before and did not have any bad habits. Policemen testified that he was not intoxicated when arrested.

One week's adjournment in the case of Hannah Smith, charged with taking Lillian, the nine-year-old daughter of John Irwin of Burbrook street, from the parent's possession, was granted. Only a few of the witnesses were in court.

Mrs. Smith, it is charged, aided Mrs. Herman, whose first husband was Irwin, to steal the child a few days before Christmas. Mrs. Herman is alleged to have reutrned to the United States with the little girl.

While Irwin was overseas, Mrs. Herman obtained a divorce in Nebraska and was given custody of the two children. When she brought the girl back to Canada, Irwin gained possession of the child as Canadian law does not recognize orders made th eAmerican divorce courts.

For two years the girl lived with relatives of Irwin on Burbrook street and was there until the day she was taken away. It is not known by the authorities here where she is at present. Her little brother, Reginald, 7, was never brought back to Canada and is believed to be in Florida.

PREMIER KING PRAISES WORLD LEAGUE WORK

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, Jan. 11.—"Three years ago today the League of Nations covenant was signed. It is fitting that this anniversary should not be permitted to pass without reflection upon the significance of that world instrument of peace to which Canada was one of the signatories," Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King declared in a statement issued last night.

"In the sphere of accomplishment within this brief interval of time," he continued, "the league has prevented actual outbreak of war in Europe. It has established a court of international justice and an international labor organization which in the fields of political industrial relations have served to substitute goodwill for ill-will in the settlement of international differences and the maintenance of industrial standards. Its humanitarian activities in the lands which have suffered most acutely from post-war afflictions have afforded notable examples of the possibilities of an ever-widening brotherhood.

"These stirrings of a world conscience in which lies the ultimate hope of enduring peace will be found in the growing public opinion of the league's 52 member nations with reference to the merits of international consultation and co-operation. The achievement of such an end is worth all possible effort in thought and action. That Canada has taken a worthy part in so great a cause may well be a source of national pride. It will become increasingly such as we further the work of the league and support its purposes, whenever and wherever opportunity may afford."

HAIR OF ANCIENT QUEEN FOUND IN TOMB OF KING

Associated Press Despatch.

Luxor, Egypt, Jan. 11.—A handful of long, gray, human hair, believed to be tresses of King Tutenkhamun's queen, was removed from the outer chamber of the monarch's tomb yesterday. The excavators exbefore his wife's decease, and that pressed the opinion that the king died she had these locks shorn from her head and deposited in the tomb with her husband's body. The hair was contained in an alabaster box.

Two chariot wheels, heavily studded with brilliant gems, were also taken out.

MRS. ARTHUR W. LINNELL,

Mrs. Elizabeth Taylor of Preston, past worthy grand matron of the Grand Chapter of Ontario, and a former member of Forest City Chapter, is conducting the installation ceremonies.

DEPLORES ANNUAL AMOUNT ALLOWED BOARD OF HEALTH

E. R. Seabrook Declares Present Appropriation for Department "Is Crying Shame."

WILL TAKE ACTION

Members to Endeavor to Secure Larger Grant For Present Year.

London is not devoting a fair appropriation toward the board of health, reasons E. R. Seabrook, retiring chairman, and just be appointed by the city council as a member of that body for 1923.

"It is a crying shame," states Mr. Seabrook, "that a city like London, with a population of 65,000, should set aside about $14,000 in 1922 for board of health activities and a city like Brantford, with a population of 30,000, spends $17,000 or $18,000. We have not been receiving an adequate sum by any means."

It is frankly acknowledged by the members of the board that a special effort will be made when the estimates are prepared this year, to obtain a larger proportion.

The inaugural session has been set for Tuesday night next. While Mr. Seabrook retired as chairman, other members of the board have urged that he retain this position again this year.

"In any event, we propose to further our activities," Mr. Seabrook promised. "We initiated many splendid reforms last year, and we intend to see that everything undertaken shall be carried out to the letter. As has been said, 1922 was a year of real accomplishment, the best in the last decade."

COMMEMORATES U. S. PEACE WITH CANADA

"No Forts, Guns or Soldiers to Guard Us," Declares Justice Riddell.

Associated Press Despatch.

Augusta, Me., Jan. 11.—A century of peace and goodwill between the United States and Canada was commemorated last night by Justice Riddell of the Supreme Court of Ontario, in an address at the annual meeting of the Maine Bar Association.

"I speak with the utmost candor when I say that I can conceive no reason why Americans should brood rancourously over the events of the revolution, or treasure enmity against the old land or her people, unless, indeed, it be that prejudice which a later generation owes to those which precede it," Justice Riddell said.

"Whatever there may have been in the Fourth of July addresses and political speeches, there has been little of this enmity displayed in act. We have lived together for more than 100 years in peace, without a fort, a gun or a soldier to guard us."

SALVATION ARMY LOSES TWO PETERBORO HALLS

Canadian Press Despatch.

Peterboro, Ont., Jan. 11.—The main building of the Salvation Army Temple here, together with the Young People's Hall, were totally destroyed by fire early this morning.

The buildings were valued at $75,000, and the contents valued at $25,000, all of which is a total loss. The insurance will not cover half this amount.

The fire was first discovered in the main temple, and it rapidly spread to the Young People's Hall at the rear. Zero weather made the fire difficult to fight. The cause of the blaze is unknown.

It is only a matter of a few weeks since the Young People's Hall was completed and dedicated.

DECLARES LONDON BILL TO BE USED THROUGHOUT 1923

SEEKING AUTHORITY

Public Utilities Desires Permission to Grant Long-Term Leases.

There will be a city of London bill in 1923 as in former years, despite all reports to the contrary emanating at frequent intervals from a local contemporary.

City Clerk Sam Baker points out that application has already been formally registered with the provincial authorities in an effort to seek such legislation as will be necessary to extend period of payment for the north London sewer debenture issue.

This can be obtained only through the medium of the Ontario legislature, it is announced after a careful survey of the situation, although Dr. Hugh A. Stevenson appears to hold the view that permission may be forthcoming from the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board.

The public utilities commission is also seeking authority to grant long-term leases and should the council view their request favorably, the only recourse will be through the provincial members, by use of the City of London Bill.

It is explained also that the utility commissioners propose to issue debentures this year, with the sanction of the aldermen. This also will entail the use of the bill, it is explained.

Just how the bill can be dispensed with is a difficult problem to solve and one that taxes the ingenuity of the city officials, hey say, adding that they can see no alternative if the councillors desire to proceed as arranged.

SAY SHERIFF CALMLY WATCHED KIDNAPPING

Special to The Advertiser.

Court House, Bastrop, La., Jan. 11.—Evidence, corroborating charges that parish officials were members of Northern Louisiana hooded terrorists, was expected today in the open hearing into the murders of Daniels and Richards.

Witnesses have also testified to a reign of terror in Moorehouse parish, created by "Raiding or wrecking squads," of alleged Klansmen. Captain J. K. Skipwith, exalted cyclops, and other officials of the Klan, are among thirteen men who have been identified as members of the black-masked squad.

The remaining 75 witnesses to be called will be asked to link the Klan organization more closely with the fatal kidnappings of Daniels and Richards, state officials said.

Evidence that Sheriff Fred Carpenter stood idly by while a masked mob kidnapped Richards, a week before he was murdered, was given late yesterday. Witnesses also told of deputy sheriffs participating in the reign of terror.

WILL REQUEST RANEY TO ESTABLISH COURT

Finance Committee Takes Definite Step on Juvenile Question.

DISCUSS CITY HALL

Legal Ruling on City Gas Refund Will Be Secured.

There is every indication that there will be a real juvenile court established in London before many weeks have elapsed. Something has at last been definitely accomplished.

While others rant and rave and opinion is sharply divided in many quarters, members of the finance committee last night recommended that Attorney-General Raney be requested to proclaim the juvenile delinquents' act as speedily as possible.

"There is nothing now to halt proceedings," Mayor Wenige informed The Advertiser, following the session. "The board of works has already adopted a similar motion, and formal ratification should be forthcoming from the council as a body Monday night next.

"Then if necessary I will take the entire council with me to Toronto to see Mr. Raney and to submit to him the names of certain London men, who are so big in the community that a salary would mean nothing to them. We will not submit the names of any of the so-called 'job-hunters.'"

Abandon Quarters.

The finance committee also recommends that the present quarters be abandoned, a motion to that effect, entered by Ald. W. A. Wilson, being passed with but little opposition.

During the discussion Mayor Wenige contended that the proclamation of the fact would follow the request. While stressing the point that he was not opposed to the court,, Ald. A. M. Judd submitted that the entire outcome hinged upon the appointment of a judge by the attorney-general.

His worship predicted that the city council could successfully co-operate with him, but Ald. Judd questioned whether anyone had ever been able to do this in the past. He understood there were several aspirants for the appointment.

Ald. Gordon Drake suggested that the entire council go to Toronto to urge the appointment of whoever might be selected. "If we can't get it that way we may as well close the town up," he asserted decisively.

Ald. John Colbert questioned whether the police magistrate would make the ideal person to judge children and also investigate their cases. Prevention rather than punishment was more to be desired, he reasoned.

Discuss City Hall.

The members viewed the Wenige salary, reorganization and efficiency recommendations, as contained in his inaugural address, in much the same manner as did their associates on the board of works. They considered that they were too numerous and extensive to be adequately considered at one session. At the instigation of Ald. Drake it was ruled that they meet with the other members of the council and thresh out the complaints, etc., at a special session. All the aldermen will be in attendance, the meeting to be, in fact, a committee of the whole.

As expected the city hall problem precipitated a lively discussion. Ald. W. A. Wilson adhering vigorously to his contention that they had no legal right to build upon the federal square without another vote of the people.

After an exhaustive debate, when no one changed his opinion, Ald. Wilson moved, and it was carried, that the city solicitor be asked if they had the right to use whatever money is available to construct new offices this year on the vacant land, "and we want an answer yes or no," chorused the councillors around the board.

Ald. John Greer urged that the councillors get busy first and decide whether they are going to build first, and arrange details later.

The famous "married woman" clause of the mayor's inaugural address was given certain consideration and referred to the special committee that will deal with all suggested revisions.

Will Get Legal Ruling.

Whether a suit in the courts to force the City Gas Company to refund $65,000 would be misdirected energy was the source of another brief but brilliant tussle, all hands participating. Mayor Wenige urged action. Ald. Drake remarked that it had been tried before without success. Ald. Judd questioned how it was to be achieved. He was willing to learn, but he felt that even Herculean efforts would be fruitless and a mere waste of finances.

Ald. George Burdick opened up a new channel of thought when he interjected the question as to what the city solicitor's opinion might be.

"I have never heard it yet," ventured Mayor Wenige.

"Then let's have it for once," admonished Ald. Greer.

"You can carry on as far as you like," warned Ald. Judd, "and, delighted as I would be to view success, I doubt it."

The committee, like the board of works, adopted the principle of the expenditure report every three months and the monthly report from the departmental heads. The members will also meet weekly in lieu of every second week, as previously.

The railway and motobus problems were also referred to the specials committees.

Shelves Utilities Request.

Members of the public utilities commission requested the committee for permission to enter into contracts that will extend for longer periods than one year, as at present. The request was shelved for further detail.

It appears that a certain big amusement company proposes to establish itself within the confines of Springbank Park, once an agreement satisfactory to both parties is consummated. A longer term than one year is desired evidently, while the commissioners have no power beyond that period. Sanction must be obtained from the province through the city council.

Alderman Judd expressed the fear that the council was gradually delegating its power so that in time there would be nothing much to do but foot the bills. He maintained that if authority was allotted in this instance, it should be specifically stated for what purpose. "We cannot be handing out our power at random," he asserted.

Financially Responsible.

"No, there has been too much of that in the past," concurred Mayor Wenige. "In many instances we are financially responsible when we have no power otherwise."

"Yes, we might find ourselves in the same position with the public utilities commission as with the school board," suggested Ald. Judd.

Alderman Drake came out boldly to oppose the encroachment of further amusement companies at the city's park down the river.

"If this keeps up there will soon be no more room for the general public," he pointed out. "It is a beauty spot now, but soon there will be no space for picnics. First thing you know we will find the whole place cluttered up with peanut stalls, cider wagons, home-brew, figure-eights, etc."

"Yes, we must have more detail," agreed Ald. Burdick. "Send it back."

Alleged dual voting for mayor is a subject in itself that already has created quite a stir among the new aldermen. The chief problem to present itself is how this can be avoided under the present system of things.

City Clerk Sam Baker states that many complaints were registered during the last election, not only in this instance, but in about 300 cases where residents were left off the lists.

Recommend Legislation.

As a preliminary move to right conditions, the finance committee, with Mayor Wenige, are recommending to the council that legislation be sought from the provincial government to permit the city clerk to exercise his discretion to a greater degree than at present.

The charge was made that many voted twice for mayor in the recent and other elections. Ald. Judd suggests that each person be compelled to take an affidavit at the polls that he or she has not voted elsewhere in the city.

Ald. Drake submits that it is time the city reverted to the vote at large in the municipal election, dispensing entirely with the present ward system of representation for the council. He also denounces the present scheme of assessment, whereby, he states, new assessors are placed in position each year.

City Clerk Baker believes that the situation would be greatly improved if every ratepayer would notify the city hall authorities when he changed his place of residence. This would safeguard against the majority of the discrepancies occurring on the voters' list, he maintains.

One-Man Cars.

Contrary to the big story in a local contemporary recently, below an attractive two-column head, the members of the finance committee, in session last night, did not move to bar one-man cars from the city streets.

Aldermen who would lead the charge, as gleefully announced, were strikingly prominent by their deadly silence when the transportation problems were introduced.

Somebody remarked that this "matter would have to be looked into," and the entire issue was hustled, bag and baggage, to a special committee. One-man cars were not even mentioned.

Ask Better Lighting.

The finance committee recommends better lighting facilities for London, and their opinion goes to the city council Monday.

Ald. Drake urged at last night's meeting that a special session of the entire board be called to discuss this problem only.

"There are sections of the city that are a disgrace," he asserted. "I know streets where they may as well have candles stuck in the trees. Put the lights down the middle of the road, and not on the side of the street, where they are of little use."

All data in connection with this situation will be submitted when the special session is held. Co-operation with the public utilities commission will be needed, it is also explained.

Mahaffy Plan Again.

The Mahaffy plan bobbed up again last night, accompanied by a request for street lighting. Ald. Drake moved that a report be submitted by the city solicitor.

"While the council of 1922 disapproved of this subdivision," he claimed, "the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board ruled otherwise. We must accept their verdict, and look after our residents if they choose to pay."

Thus is another move of 1922 abruptly upset for the time being at least.

Several requests for assistance were referred to the estimates, including the Northern Fire Relief Fund, the Armenian Relief Fund and the Sick Children's Hospital of Toronto.

Further superannuation for Andrew Dale, retired auditor, was denied after a brief discussion. All these questions had been forwarded from 1922.

Harbor Improvements.

London will co-operate with St. Thomas in an effort to persuade the federal government to take action with reference to needed improvements of the Port Stanley harbor. A special committee will be appointed for that purpose.

A request to place money received by the city for milk licenses to the credit of the board of health was denied. "Just a matter of bookkeeping," said the mayor, while Ald. Judd remarked, "Robbing Peter to pay Paul."

Fire Chief John Aitken was directed to receive tenders for summer clothing for his men. "When do they do this," questioned Ald. Greer. "Every year," said the chief. "That's better than I can do," remarked Ald. Judd. "Me too," agreed the mayor. "Get on the fire department and we'll get you some clothes," promised Ald. Drake.

Ald. George Burdick, City Treasurer Bell and City Clerk Baker were authorized to attend an executive session of the Ontario Municipal Association in Toronto Jan. 16.

Mayor Wenige was directed to represent this city at a convention of municipal representatives in Ottawa Jan. 23, to further the deep waterways project.

Seek Elective Commission.

London will be the headquarters for all those who desire elective police commissioners, if Ald. Gordon Drake wins the approval of his confreres.

Mayor Wenige, in his inaugural address, stated that several municipalities are seeking legislation from the province that will enable them to introduce this form of police administration.

Ald. Colbert expressed the opinion last night that London should make haste and co-operate with them in this respect. Ald. Drake urged that these municipalities be communicated with, and arrangements consummated for a conference here at an early date. This will be done.

Ald. W. A. Wilson is one member of the council who opposes such a move, contending that the present method is irreproachable.

Favor City Market.

The finance committee proposes to favor the city market with just as much consideration this year as the board of works.

While the members of the latter group want this portion of the downtown district paved, the members of the former body insist upon a general "rehash" of all problems affecting the market.

Ald. Gordon Drake, ward three, who, incidentally, seems to be strong on special general sessions this year, urges that the councillors all take a few hours off some day, when they can inspect the buildings. Then a special session of the council can be called to discuss the question in every phase.

Ald. Judd essays the remark that it will take a whole night to "get anywhere," while Ald. George Burdick warns the council not to overlook anything, including rentals, etc. "and hucksters," adds W. A. Wilson.

Latest Tips on Etiquette Revealed By Julia Hoyt to Advertiser Readers

Few women in America are qualified to write as authoritatively and deftly on the difficult subject of etiquette and entertaining as Julia Hoyt, stage and movie star. In private life Mrs. Lydig Hoyt is a leader of society in New York, Washington, Newport, Southampton, and several capitals of Europe.

Her articles, refreshing in their common sense, will appeal to every woman who entertains and is entertained. They deal with neither the obvious rudiments of "table manners" nor the ultra-refined niceties of royal court etiquette. What they do tell are the essentials of etiquette in daily social life, and the first appears in The Advertiser today.

First Twelve Days, in Indian Lore, Is Weather Plan For Whole Year

According to an ancient superstition held by the American Indian, the type of weather predominant during the first twelve days of January in each year is a fairly accurate indication of the weather for the ensuing year. With ten days of January, 1923, already gone, residents of Western Ontario doubt this superstition, and trust that these days of cold and storm are not prognostic of the first ten months of the year.

For instance, if the superstition is correct, the tenth month, or October of this year, will be featured by weather in this district such as prevailed yesterday, and storms will be in order. September, corresponding to Tuesday, will be a murky month, with dark days and drizzly rain predominating, if the Red Man is correct in his surmise.

Sunday was clear and cold, but it would be difficult to persuade the average Londoner that for this reason next July will be a real cold month. The fact that Monday was a mild January day may help to prove the legend by a warm August in Western Ontario this year; but Saturday, the coldest day this year, does not hold out much encouragement for an ideal June if the former sign is to be taken as a criterion.

New Year's Day was fair and cold, which leads the Indian to predict a fair and cold January. Cold breezes in February should predominate on this basis, because Jan. 2 was a cold day. On Jan. 3 it was windy in the early part of the day, thus predicting a typical March ushered in by strong breezes. Later in the day the weather was fair, indicating that March, 1923, will go out like a lamb.

April, if the legend holds good, will be a cold month in these parts, as Jan. 4 was a cold day. Similarly May will be an ideal month, because last Friday the weather was fair and the sun shone brightly.

Predictions for November and December of this year are being held in abeyance pending the action of the weather man on Thursday and Friday. On the whole those who reside in the district will be treated to unfavorable weather in 1923 unless the Red Man is mistaken in his superstition. Although the tradition has been passsed down through the years it finds few supporters, excepting a few citizens who are checking the weather off each day and using it as a basis for their predictions.

The Indian superstition was handed to The Advertiser by an old resident of the city for what it is worth. He asserts that as a rule it has held good in his experience. About the only way to prove it this year will be to "wait and see."

FIVE COUNTY REEVES SEEK WARDEN'S CHAIR

Opening Meeting on January 23 Will See Keen Contest Staged.

Now that the body of city fathers have settled into the stretch for the year's work, the Middlesex County Council will enter the limelight for a time. They meet in the County Court Building on January 23, and the most momentous question to be decided at the opening session will be the election of a warden for the coming twelve months.

There are no less than five likely candidates for this position. They are C. C. Henry, reeve of Metcalf; Bert Holman, reeve of Newbury; Allan MacPherson, reeve of Glencoe; J. E. Harrison, reeve of Parkhill, and William Ross, reeve of East Williams.

Further business for the inaugural meeting will be the appointment of finance, highway improvement, education, jail and county buildings, printing, agriculture, house of refuge, and petitioning committees.

Fickle Weather Fools the "Probs"

Quick Changes in Temperature Prove Disconcerting to Citizens.

Snow made a merry dance in the streets at noon today. With a wind from the northeast, the weather took on somewhat the aspect of a blizzard, in decided contrast to the mildness which prevailed during the early hours.

Those who make a point of including the weather in their conversation commented today on its remarkable fickleness. With fair and cold forecast for Thursday, it would seem that the old standby, "the probs," were no longer a reliable source of information, since it turned out snowy with a temperature that was not particularly low, although the wind was keen and biting.

Apparently henceforth, or until Madame Weather assumes a more reliable course, they who go abroad must trust either to luck or their own intuition as to the state of the atmosphere and the temperature.

CITY HORTICULTURISTS ARE NOW 2,209 STRONG

The letters were received by H. P. Poole, Herrin real estate dealer; R. O. Greer, former mayor of Herrin, and George Harrison and George Nelson, farmers.

MERCHANTS CALMLY STAMP EVERY CHECK

SAY SPOTTERS WORK

Only One Dealer Admits Tax Will Fall On the Buying Public.

Almost unheralded and certainly unsung the new receipt tax was ushered in at the new year. Whatever forebodings there may have been, being sheltered behind a more or less vague feeling that things are never quite as bad as they appear, and that in any case everyone would be in the same boat when the time came.

Now the blow has fallen, the law is in force, and it has even been hinted that the up-to-date legislature has the ubiquitous spotter on the job.

London's merchants, however, take it calmly, if resignedly. They realize that the national debt is both large and heavy; that it has to be paid off in some way, and that for the time at least this is one of the ways in which it must be done.

Bear War Tax.

The majority of the merchants interviewed yesterday were retailers already laboring under the 4½ per cent war tax, levied with the intention of reaching everyone, but which most retailers regard as actually reacting to an unfair extent on themselves, owing to the fact that the manufacturer can more or less protect himself by "passing the buck" to the next link in the chain of distribution, whereas the retailer, bounded by competition and the need for keeping a tight grip on the trade, is forced to shoulder this tax himself.

The new imposition is being met with a strict regard to the spirit of the act, yet withal with a little resentment. Many of the storekeepers expressed the opinion that it savored of class legislation, and that it would never be the source of a sufficiently large revenue to justify the expense incurred in collecting it.

See Change In Act.

One dealer felt that an increased income tax would be a much fairer and more equitable way of distributing the burden; another thought that an increased postage would meet the needs of the situation, and many thought that the act would be drastically changed just as soon as the next session was inaugurated in Ottawa.

Insurance companies seem to be more seriously hit than almost any other profession, partly because they are already contracted to give money and receipts at a fixed rate for a long period, leaving them to pay whatever extra tax might be imposed, and also because of the very large number of receipts they handle.

Here, too, however, the stamps are being stuck on loyally, necessitating a good deal of extra work, and costing a good deal of money.

Want No Checks.

In some of the local stores the owners find that customers are not at all insistent on having a receipt nowadays, and that payment by check is becoming very common.

One hotel keeper has instituted a new method of getting away from the inconvenience of this tax. Whenever any departing guest asks for a receipt this calculating Boniface offers to do so only if the guest will pay for the tax stamp. He explains, however, that it is an extremely rare thing for anyone to ask for such a thing.

Pay rolls, which, if signed, are taxable for each such signature, is a side of the question that has little effect in London. Most of the larger employers of labor are using pay envelopes and requiring no signature.

There was one refreshingly candid businessman among those interviewed who said quite plainly that the consumer—the ordinary man in the street—would pay the tax.

"Why," he declared, "it just means this: We have greater overhead expenses: it costs us just that much more to do business, therefore, it is only logical that eventually it will reach the consumer, who in the long run has always paid every tax that has ever been levied."

STATES CO-OPERATION NEEDED AT CITY HALL

Mayor Wenige Does Not Favor Splitting Up Assessment Department.

The municipal assessment department should not be split in two sections, income and property, according to Mayor Wenige.

While his worship champions the appointment of a new commissioner and a general reorganization of the office, he fails to view with the same assurance as certain members of the council, the suggestion to subdivide the duties under two heads.

"Co-operation is what we require," he stated today, "as I see it. There are slack periods in the income phase of the work when the staff could co-operate with the other duties."

Members of the council are collecting data and information, preparatory to the special meeting of the council, when this and other problems will be threshed out.

TO PROVIDE HYMN BOOKS FOR WESTMINSTER MEN

For some time lately the men out at Westminster Hospital have suffered from a shortage of suitable hymn books for their services, a want that will be remedied by the Y. M. C. A. in a few days when James Grant, chairman of the hospital committee will present a hundred new books.

These books, which are absolutely undenominational, are an entirely new edition, exceptionally well bound, and in fine, large, clear print that should make them very acceptable.

CITY FREE OF SICKNESS.

London is in a fairly healthy condition, comparatively speaking, reports Dr. W. S. Downham, medical officer of health. An outbreak of chickenpox, confined mostly to children, has been noted throughout the community. Otherwise the town is in far better circumstances than in other years.

WORST STORM IN YEARS.

Moncton, N. B., Jan. 11.—Monctonians today are digging themselves out of the worst snowstorm in many years. The storm set in yesterday morning and did not let up until about 4:30 p.m. Drifts are piled ten and twelve feet high.

WHY SUCH A THING AS ETIQUETTE?

By JULIA HOYT

By JULIA HOYT.

My experience, both in and outside of "society," has taught me that most people use the word "etiquette" to mean merely the knowledge of how to eat, talk and act correctly.

But etiquette is much more than just knowing the correct thing to do. It is good manners, it is courtesy, and it is an instinctive consideration for others—three qualities necessary not only to success in "Society" but to success in all human intercourse.

Etiquette really means civilization—life as we live it today, as distinguished from what it was in the days of the primitives.

Just try to imagine what our life would be like without etiquette! It would mean, for instance, more difficulty in boarding trolleys and subways, in driving automobiles. We'd all still be eating with our hands only, and goodness knows what other things we would be doing!

In my opinion etiquette not only makes the wheels of life run more smoothly, but also acts as a safeguard to all human relationship. Nearly all human beings are born with a certain native common sense, which usually prompts their actions. That is, we seem to know instinctively that when we are introduced to people we must greet them, or that we must treat old people with more consideration. Unfortunately, however, this instinct does not always tell us what to say to those we meet, or exactly how to show respect and courtesy to our elders, and for that reason we must all learn the fundamental rules and some of the niceties of etiquette.

More Important for Women.

In spite of the fact that we often "get by" because our friends are lenient and are willing to take the "will for the deed," there is always the correct and incorrect way of doing things. And almost invariably that correct way is the common sense way, too.

"I'm pleased to meet you," or "I'm charmed to meet you," is not the correct thing to say, and when a person who knows better hears this he knows that although you may look the part, you are not really a well-bred person.

There is no doubt that the bulk of the responsibility of etiquette falls to the woman, for she is expected not only to know the right thing to do as hostess and guest at every imaginable function, but to assume the responsibility of a well-bred future generation.

Man has less to worry him in the matter of etiquette, yet he must not overlook the possibility, that at least once in life, he may be asked to be best man at a wedding or god-father at a christening—and on such occasions knowing the accepted thing to do is a great relief; it turns a duty into a pleasure.

Those Who "Don't Care."

There is no doubt in my mind but that everyone naturally not only wishes to be well-bred, but to be thought well-bred. No one wants to make social blunders; secretly we are all humiliated by them—even the people who like to pretend that they do not care about etiquette. Incidentally, I believe that this seeming indifference is only a pose to hide their lack of knowledge, for usually the very people who assume it are careful about at least some detail of behavior.

$400,000 Etiquette Fee.

We never know what Fate has in store for us. There was the case of the famous Maria de Barrill, who, before the loss of her fortune and her consequent death, held the reins of all New York society. It seems that a very wealthy woman wanted very much to get into New York society, and, therefore, offered Maria de Barrill $400,000 to coach her in etiquette and later introduce her. It is a fact. Now, there is nothing amazing about the fact that this woman had to buy her way into society—for that is done often—but I am thinking how humiliating it must have been for this woman to ask Mme. de Barrill to teach her the etiquette she could and should have known years before!

In my article, however, I shall try to cover those problems of etiquette which are continually arising, not merely in the lives of those alleged to be "in society," but in the lives of the average man and woman. For it is from the common sense and character of the great body of intelligent and educated citizens that what we call the rules of etiquette have sprung. Among these topics will be "The Formal and Informal Dinner," "The Guest in Your Home," "The Afternoon Tea," "The Debutante," "The Dance," "The Engagement and Wedding," "The Invitation and Acceptance," and many others.

never published. It was arranged that this man should deliver the negatives and, in fact, develop same in Doorn.

It was made at 3 p.m. on Nov. 5, after the departure of the guests. Not even his Dutch and German guests were aware of the presence of this man, and his identity was strongly guarded. The photographer, being paid for the job, hoped to photograph some of the guests, and he bluntly asked the kaiser, after the pose, for permission. The kaiser, however, curtly informed him that all guests had departed and his job for which he was hired was completed.

CAREFUL ABOUT HIS POSE.

He took great care about his pose. He is dressed in the uniform of a German field marshal, wearing rows of decorations, fingers bejeweled, one hand placed on his sword, the other, and shorter one, in the arm of the new kaiserin. Hermine is wearing the diamond and pearl necklace, costing millions of marks, which he specially ordered for her shortly before the wedding. The kaiser's moustache is still upright and not drooped, he wears short whiskers only, and his facial expression shows very little change from his pre-war and wartime pictures, beard excepted.

ISSUE WRIT AGAINST WOMAN AT TORONTO

George G. McCormick and Joseph Stone Seek to Collect $502.51.

SUE DELAWARE MAN

Firm of D. W. Howden Claims Sum of $219.30 for Alleged Goods Sold.

Three more writs have been issued for actions to be heard at the next regular sittings of the Middlesex County Court.

George McCormick and Joseph A. Stone, executors of the estate of the late Thomas McCormick, are seeking to collect the sum of $502.51 from Mary McWaters of Toronto. This amount, they claim, is for installments of principal and interest due this estate under a mortgage dated June 4, 1920, made between the defendant and the plaintiffs, and registered at the registry office for East Toronto on this date.

The local firm of D. H. Howden is suing I. Pincombe of Delaware to recover the sum of $219.30, alleged to be due them for goods sold and delivered to the defendant by them. They have a further claim of $35 for the costs of the action. Meredith & Meredith are acting for Howden's.

M. M. Dillon of Windsor is the defendant in an action brought against him by the advertising firm of McConnell & Fergusson. The plaintiffs claim Mr. Dillon owes them some $284 for advertisements inserted by them in different newspapers in connection with the Associated Tile Manufacturers of Ontario, with which firm the defendant is, or was, connected.

Samuel Liberson, through his solicitor, G. W. Weekes, has entered action in the Supreme Court of Ontario against Edwin W. Pattison, a former partner of his in the Union Meat and Provision Suppliers, of 171 Maitland street, to restrain the defendant from continuing in this line of business at 466 Ottaway avenue, as he is at present.

Mr. Liberson claims that when their late partnership was assumed, Mr. Pattison agreed that upon any dissolution of the same he (Pattison) would not further engage in the same business within that part of the city between Dundas street and the south branch of the River Thames.

The plaintiff now asserts that this partnership was dissolved about the beginning of October, 1922, and Mr. Pattison, contrary to his previous agreement, then started a meat and provision store on Ottaway avenue.

Mr. Liberson is now seeking an injunction restraining his erstwhile partner from continuing to operate such a business at this address, and he further claims $50 to cover the costs of the action.

The next local sitting of the Supreme Court will start February 5.

SENTENCE CITY YOUTH FOR THREE ROBBERIES

Special to The Advertiser.

St. Thomas, Jan. 11.—With a criminal record surpassing that of the average "hard-boiled old-timer," George Fournier, a London youth appeared before Magistrate Maxwell this morning and calmly admitted three charges of theft.

He also acknowledged that he had stolen extensively in London and vicinity, and had spent three years in the St. John's Industrial School, Toronto. He is being returned to that institution today under special guard as on his last trip there he is said to have made a determined attempt to escape from the train.

A series of robberies committed in London and Lambeth in December last were traced to the lad. He stole from three places in this city in one night, opening a bedroom window in one man's house and taking a gold watch and chain from beside the sleeping owner.

DOCTORS TO EXAMINE PORT HURON PASTOR

Rev. Robert Crouch Is Not Likely To Be Extradited.

POULTRY SHOWS ENDS

Sarnia Exhibition Is Marked by Large Attendance—Big Entries.

Special to The Advertiser.

Sarnia, Jan. 11.—That the Rev. Rowland Crouch, former Free Methodist minister at Port Huron, who was arrested yesterday on charges of rum-running between Port Huron, Sarnia and Seaforth, Ont., will be examined as to his mental state, was the information given out by the American police yesterday afternoon when questioned. It is alleged that Crouch was some years ago an inmate of an asylum, and mental experts will be called in to ascertain his present state of mind. Examination of the case against the former minister reveals that extradition to Canada for offences against the Canadian liquor laws is unlikely on the evidence available. Edward Allan of Seaforth, who made admissions to the police concerning the part played by the former minister was released from the American jail this morning, but will probably be charged by the Canadian authorities on his return to Seaforth.

Success marks the exhibition of the Sarnia Poultry Association which closed today. The attendance was good and exhibits were better than usual in quality. Geo. Stephenson of Sarnia carried off the Bank of Commerce cup for the best bird in the show, a Black Orpington cock. He also carried off first and second prize in the English class, his White Orpingtons winning first prize and his Black Orpingtons taking second. Sarnia fanciers are conspicuous among the winners of the special prizes, George Stephenson, F. D. Smith, T. H. Robinson and J. R. Henderson carrying off prizes in the white ribbons events. J. R. Henderson, Sarnia, won first place for the best display in the show with White Wyandottes, E. J. Wright, Strathroy, with Brown Leghorns, was second and A. E. Dowl, Thedford, was third with Black Leghorns. The Dr. Racey cup for the best collection of White Rocks was awarded to G. D. Smith of Sarnia. E. J. Wright of Strathroy won the Duncan Ross cup for the best collection of the Mediterranean class. The Canadian Poultry Review medal for the best pen went to W. Buxton of Sarnia. His prize winner was a White Leghorn hen. J. R. Henderson, showing White Wyandottes had the best pullet on exhibition.

WILL TEST LEGALITY OF LIQUOR EXPORT

Ontario Government to Appeal Decision of County Judge Coughlin.

Special to The Advertiser.

Windsor, Jan. 11.—That the Ontario government will appeal the decision of County Judge Coughlin by which export of beer and liquor is declared legal was confirmed here yesterday in advice received from the Ontario Licensing Department.

Any attempt to bar the passage of beer over highways of the province will be met by an application to courts to restrain provincial inspectors from seizing consignments of beer that have been approved by federal officers.

According to Samuel Griggs, manager of the Walkerville Brewing Company, the Provincial Licensing Department cannot hold up shipments of beer for export for which clearance papers have been issued.

If this is done the county judge will be asked to restrain the officers.

Several shipments of beer that were conveyed to the docks of exporting companies at Petite Cote by motor trucks today passed unnoticed by the officers.

Where this beer was consigned to was not disclosed.

THREATENS OFFICER'S LIFE IF GANG IS PROSECUTED

Special to The Advertiser.

Windsor, Jan. 11.—A letter containing threats of death if he arrested another member of "their gang," was received today by Sergt. Archie Birtwistle, in charge of a detachment of Royal Canadian Mounted Police at Ford. The letter was postmarked at Detroit and was signed in an undecipherable scrawl above the word "Rabbi."

The letter referred to the arrest by Birtwhistle of several men found importing moonshine whiskey into Windsor, the men later being convicted and fined sums of from $200 to $1,000.

Sergt. Birtwhistle intimated that he would take no notice of the letter.

YOUNG DETROIT GIRL MISSING FROM HOME

Dorothy Smith, 19, Disappears During Absence of Relatives —Search Futile.

Detroit, Jan. 11. — If the whereabouts of Miss Dorothy Smith, 19 years old, 2356 Eighteenth street, are not discovered by night, grave fears for her safety will be entertained by her family and the police. She disappeared during the absence of her sister from their home early last night.

She took none of her clothes with her, nor her Christmas presents, including a gold watch. She had no money. She has been ill, and weighs but 90 pounds. Owing to her illness she had been unable to attend school and is backward from an educational standpoint. A physical infirmity never permitted her to play with other children, and as she grew, the same care has been exercised. She had no friends of either sex and led an exceedingly retired life, never venturing from her own doorstep after dark.

Her sister and Miss Olive Chapoton, a friend, keep up the house, aided by a brother of Miss Chapoton's. Because of the girl's extreme nervousness, she is seldom left alone even in the early evening. She reported on two of these evenings that someone had been prowling about in the backyard. Investigation failed to disclose anything.

The police have searched all surrounding sheds and vacant lots, and the hospitals have been checked without results. She has no relatives she could visit, and no friends except one family in the immediate neighborhood.

She is described as being 4 feet, 10 inches tall, with fair complexion and blue eyes.

Miss Chapoton shot a prowler last September when he attempted to peer into the windows. He was arrested and sent to the Detroit House of Correction, and since has been released. The police, however, do not connect him with the girl's disappearance.

"MOVIE CZAR" WORKS FOR DRUG C.EAN-UP

Special to The Advertiser.

It was learned today that the meeting between the head of the federal liquor and narcotic law enforcement forces and movieland dictator, who has just returned from an extensive personal investigation of conditions surrounding the lives of American film idols, took place recently in New York.

In view of Haynes' departure for the Pacific coast on January 13 in company with Colonel D. G. Nutt, chief of the narcotic division of the prohibition unit, the conference is regarded as of unusual significance.

UNION WILL NOT HELP JAILED MINERS' WIVES

Special to The Advertiser.

Edmonton, Alta., Jan. 10.—That the union does not intend to care for the families of striking miners now in jail awaiting trial was the declaration of Vice-President William Ryan of District 18, U. M. W. A., and officials of welfare board. The board sought a conference with Mr. Ryan in order to find out in just what position the strikers' families would be placed in relation to relief measures.

The union apparently takes the stand that as soon as a striker gets arrested his strike rations and strike pay cease. Cases of distress will be dealt with by the board as they arise. Everything remains quiet around the Edmonton coal mines today.

Temple Street, Busy Yet Unknown, Forgotten Even by Wise Postman

Who knows Temple street? Who knows where it runs from, and where it ends, how many houses it contains, and how many stores front it?

Just to show how very forgotten is this humble little pavement, here is a true story related today by one of London's well-known shopkeepers, whose store opened on to this street in question, at least tthe backdoor did.

As it happened all the mail came to the front entrance, until at last a girl that was in his employ had a letter addressed to her from someone who knew only of the door on Temple street.

Well, that letter took a couple of trips in the official mailbag with the postman, who had been on that beat for more than twenty-five years. He even indulged in quite a heatedsee. Now, did you know that? argument with the other fellows in the postoffice, declaring with outraged dignity, that having tramped that particular beat for a large part of his lifetime, he was surely entitled to know it better than anyone else.

Finally someone found a street directory, which so far convinced him that he carried the letter on its third round, this time to its right destination.

Now the question is where in all London is such a meagre thoroughfare as to escape even the eagle eye of a postman.

Well, it's on the east side of market square and it runs from King about forty or fifty yards north, and as a rule goes by the general term, market square.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND FIGHTS DRUG TRAFFIC

Special to The Advertiser.

Montreal, Que., Jan. 10.—That the whole strength of the Anglican Church will be behind those attempting to eradicate commercialized vice and the drug traffice in Montreal, following the exposures of Dr. Haywood, superintendent of Montreal General Hospital, was the unequivocal statement of Right Rev. J. C. Farthing, Bishop of Montreal, today.

In an episcopalian indictment of conditions, supporting the assertions of Dr. Haywood, his lordship implied that the police had not waged as active a fight against vice and drugs as they might, because, he pointed out, both had flourished and increased.

The bishop called on all decent-minded citizens to co-operate in the fight for extermination, adding that any judicial or civic authority who condoned the continuance of the traffic should be dismissed ignominiously.

HEAR EVIDENCE IN CASE AGAINST HON. RANEY

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, Jan. 11.—John T. Smith's action against the attorney-general of Ontario for a declaration that Ontario is not a prohibition province, and therefore that the importation of liquor is legal, which is being heard in the non-jury court by Mr. Justice Orde, reached the argument stage today, all the evidence having been put in. Counsel will address the court tomorrow.

John T. Smith, plaintiff, told the court today that in May last he had attempted to import liquor into Ontario, but was informed by Montreal liquor firms that they could not send it. The letters to and from the Montreal firms were produced.

Witness admitted that the letters were written under the advice of his solicitors in this action. Mr. Smith denied that others were sharing in the expense of the action, as suggested.

Asked by Mr. Justice Orde if he had been in the habit of drinking liquor, Mr. Smith, who is a real estate man, replied in the affirmative, adding: "I have been accustomed to a good British liquor, manufactured in the old country, but I cannot obtain it now."

For the defence, Hon. N. W. Rowell, filed federal orders-in-council, the provincial prohibition acts, other than the O.T.A., "as evidence" and "not as legislation." Mr. Rowell pointed out that each provincial act corresponded substantially with the O.T.A., excepting that "the native wine clause" existed in none but the Ontario temperance act. He claimed that the Dominion act was intended to prohibit the importation of liquors, the sale of which was prohibited by the province, adding: "It would not be right for a province to create a monopoly in the manufacture of liquor."

"Isn't that as a matter of fact what has happened?" suggested Mr. Justice Orde.

GERMAN COAL HEADS DEFY FRENCH ARMIES

Associated Press Despatch.

Essen, Jan. 10.—The decision of the Rhenish and Westphalian Coal Syndicate to transfer its headquarters to Hamburg constituted the first actual defiance by "big business" interests of the threatened French seizures in the Ruhr valley.

The syndicate, which represents the organizing brains of the Ruhr coal industry, functions primarily in controlling the production and allotment of German coal, in which capacity it is intimately identified with the whole range of Germany's industrial activities.

Transfer of its headquarters, it is stated, is for the purpose of removing the executive organization out of the reach of the French.

WILL COURT-MARTIAL IRISH REBEL LEADERS

Free State Government Will Place Ernest O'Malley on Trial Today.

Associated Press Despatch.

Dublin, Jan. 11.—Ernest O'Maille or Malley, commandant-general in the irregular forces, who was wounded and captured in a raid on Nov. 4, is to be court-martialled tomorrow, it was learned yesterday.

O'Maille was taken by a raiding party searching for Eamon de Valera. It was he who officially surrendered the Four Courts on behalf of the republican garrison after the memorable siege which ended on June 30 last. He later escaped from Mount Joy prison, resuming his activities with the irregulars.

In a report to Liame Lynch, the republican chief of staff, O'Maille, declared he refused legal aid, and added: "Another bit of lead won't do me any harm."

Lynch replied by expressing the hope that "the enemy," referring to the Free State, would not be "so mad as to execute you."

CLAIMS KLUX KLAN TWO-SIDED AFFAIR

Former Chief Tells of Virtuous and Murderous Sides.

Bastrop, La., Jan. 11.—The Jekyl-Hyde character of the Ku Klux Klan has been definitely established in the opinion of Atty.-Gen. A. V. Coco, who is conducting the open hearing into the Mer Rouge kidnapping horror.

"Yesterday's developments," said Mr. Coco, "definitely fixed the Klan's position in the present investigation of the outrages in Morehouse Parish, and there is to be no escape for the persons who were really responsible for the gross insult to law and order in this section of the state.

"The testimony offered, while only a small part of the mass of evidence we intend to offer, revealed in a positive way that Klan leaders were involved in a most active manner in the strife which led up to the shocking tortures and killing of two Mer Rouge citizens.

"The positive testimony offered by a former Klansman as to the two-sided feature of the Klan movement—the white-hooded and virtuous side and the black-hooded and raiding and murderous side—leaves no doubt as to the dual nature of the invisible empire.

"The Klan, not only in Morehouse, but in Louisiana and the nation at large, will have to seriously consider the narratives that were unfolded at yesterday's sessions in the open hearing. The Klan is on trial, and the Klan will have to answer. I dare say, also, that Capt. J. K. Skipwith, exalted cyclops in Morehouse, realizes that the state has in its hands considerable evidence bearing on his activities in Morehouse, and if Dr. B. M. McKoin were in the courtroom, he doubtless felt that his toes were being stepped on at regular intervals."

It was a smashing blow that reverberated throughout the dens of the Invisible Empire and stipped the masks from the dragons, wizards, goblins and terrors of the Klan that was delivered yesterday.

From one of the former members of the Klan, a man who had been a "captain" in the punishment squad, and who had received orders from the exalted cyclops of his organization to take out men, "whip" them within an inch of their lives, take them over the Arkansas line, and order them never to return," the inmost workings of the masked fraternity were exposed.

James T. Norsworthy, a giant, weighing nearly 300 pounds, and a prosperous planter, is the former klansman whose testimony put the order on the defensive and knocked into a cocked hat the propaganda that has been sent out by members of the order aimed to convince the public that the organization is being persecuted for outrages with which it has no connection whatsoever. It put the Klan here definitely on the defensive, and as a result, it seems certain that Capt. Skipwith will be arrested within a few days. Already he is known to be under surveillance.

Calmly, seemingly unafraid of vengeance by the Klan, although warned that he may be assassinated any minute, Norsworthy, on the stand, told of acts perpetrated by the Klan and of the reason for his resignation. The testimony he offered involved not only Capt. Skipwith, but Larry Calhoun, deputy sheriff; A. L. Smith, plantation owner; Dr. B. M. McKoin and many others in the operation of the Klan.

FRENCH DISCOVER COMMUNIST PLOT

Special Cable to The Advertiser.

Paris, Jan. 10.—Communist plans for a Europe-wide revolt against capitalism were bared today when police arrested six prominent "Red" leaders. Flying squadrons of police, still searching for five other communist agitators, unearthed documents showing the arrests probably broke up a well organized campaign to stir workers of Europe to revolt. The agitation against French occupation of the Ruhr, voiced at a meeting in the Rhineland, was to be used in the attempt, evidence showed.

Deputy Cachin, prominent Communist, is wanted by the police, and the chamber is to be asked to raise his parliamentary immunity so he can be arrested. Semard, secretary of the railwaymen syndicatists, is in hiding; Marrane, secretary of the Communist Federation; Goudeau of the Telegraph and Telephone Workers' Syndicate, and Monosseau of the General Confederation of Labor, are in jail. Their homes were searched, as were offices of L'Humanite, Communist Daily, and many papers and posters seized.

Theseshowed the revolution was to include workers of Germany, Belgium, Holland, Czecho-Slovakia and France. Agitators hoped to get the revolt under way coincident with strikes and possible trouble in the Ruhr.

INMATE AT PRISON FARM QULLS REVOLT

Joe Thompson Overpowers Man Who Attempted to Assault Guard.

Special to The Advertiser.

Toronto, Jan. 11. — Through the prompt action and great physical strength of J. L. Thompson, a prisoner, an incipient riot among some of the prisoners at the Toronto municipal farm was promptly quelled last Thursday night, and the life of Guard Robert Maguire was saved.

Thompson quickly overpowered John Klum, one of the deportable inmates, who struck the guard a fierce blow in an attempt to escape, and later attempted to gouge out his eyes during the brief, fierce melee which ensued..

The disturbance, which for a few moments threatened to develop into serious proportions, occurred during a concert which was being given by the Y. M. C. A. for the inmates of the institution. Upwards of a hundred persons were gathered in the large concert room listening to the entertainment. The prisoners were in their various gangs, according to the regulations of the jail, the drug addicts being in one group, the deportable in another, and various other offenders in the order in which they are kept.

Suddenly Klum, who was committed to the farm on a charge of vagrancy, and who was awaiting deportation to the United States, walked over to the group of drug addicts. This was an act entirely contrary to the rules of the jail and Guard Maguire told him to go back to his place.

"I'll stick right where I am," replied Klum, sullenly. The guard touched his arm to take him away, when like a flash, the prisoner jumped and struck Maguire a heavy blow, knocking him senseless on the floor.

Then Klum pounced on him and called on his fellow inmates to join in the revolt: "Come on, men," he said. "Let's get them." As he spoke he attempted to gouge out Maguire's eyes, but at that instant "Joe" Thompson, as he is known, and who was committed to the jail farm in connection with the famous Slater-Nukol case, sprang on to Klum like a tiger. Thompson is an unusually large man, and with a power and celerity which was fortunate for Maguire as well, perhaps, as for that of others present, he quickly overpowered Klum.

During the brief fight there were signs that other prisoners to whom Klum called would join in the uprising, and make their getaway, but the way in which Thompson handled the prisoner, and the sudden appearance of Guard Sockfield, who had just come in the door, the revolt suddenly subsided, and Klum found himself helpless and in the grip of Guard Sackfield, who immediately locked him up.

WILL NOT PERMIT JESS TO BOX IN NEW YORK

New York, Jan. 10.—Jess Willard will not be permitted to box in New York State, because the state boxing commission believes him to be over the legal boxing age limit of 38, it was stated last night.

Willard recently arrived in New York with the avowed intention of seeking a bout with Jack Dempsey, champion heavyweight.

"Aside from the question of age, he is not fit for a ring bout," said Chair-Boxing Commission, "and I do not believe Boxing Commission, "and Ido not believe he could fit himself."

FIND BODY OF WOMAN LIFELESS IN BATHTUB

Gruesome Discovery Is Made When Police Raid London, England, Shop.

Special Cable to The Advertiser.

London, Jan. 10.—London police today broke into the house of James Maltby, a tailor, to which they had laid siege for four days, lacking a search warrant, and found in a bath tub the body of Mrs. Alice Middleton, missing since August 16.

Maltby committed suicide by shooting himself as the police crashed in.

A mysterious crime reminiscent of the notorious Dr. Crippen and his woman victims was revealed. Evidence was discovered showing that Mrs. Middleton had lived with the tailor since her disappearance. Hitherto evidence had been found against Maltby, who had professed ignorance of her whereabouts.

Lived as Hermit.

The police had difficulty obtaining a warrant to enter the house in Regent Park, North London, where the gruesome discovery was made. The water supply of the house had been cut off. The tailor lived like a hermit for months, slinking out at night to buy canned goods and to carry in water in buckets.

A crowd of over a thousand gathered today as the police began to break their way in. The first officers rushed into the house and a shot rang out. Maltby was not dead when the police reached the room in which he had shot himself, but he died before a doctor arrived.

It was reported that human remains were found in different parts of the house. The body of Mrs. Middleton lay in a bath tub. Mrs. Middleton's husband, a captain in the merchant marine recently reported to the police that his wife was missing. He said she had announced intention of going to live with Maltby.

House Barricaded.

The tailor was debt ridden, the gas and electric lights had been cut off from his house as well as the water supply. The house in Regent Park district had been barricaded since October to keep out bailiffs.

When police first went in search of Maltby, he talked to them from a window, refusing to admit them or to come out. He denied knowledge of Mrs. Middleton. A siege of the house by the police followed till warrants authorizing them to break in arrived.

The report that other remains had been found in the house was unconfirmed this afternoon. Mrs. Middleton's body, nude and in an advanced stage of decomposition, was doubled up in the bath tub, in which there was a little water.

PREDICT NEW LEAGUE TO PLAY SMALL CITIES

Sarnia Officials Working on Class "D" Organization to Replace "Mint".

Special to The Advertiser.

Sarnia, Ont., Jan. 10. — While George B. Dawson of this city is busy leading the battle of the Saints against the "Big Four" of the Mint League, President Lou Bergsman is in Detroit "on business."

The business that is attracting the Saint leader is thought to be in connection with the new Class D league which is likely to spring up next year to replace the Mint in the city freeze-out. No official statement has been issued, but it has been pretty broadly hinted that all that holds it back now is Frank Navin's consent to the Windsor, Pontiac and Mount Clemens territory.

George H. Maines, former president of the Mint League, is showing an active interest in the new scheme, but he is stated to have refused the presidency of the organization, if it is formed.

Sarnia, St. Thomas, Kitchener and Windsor are the Ontario cities mentioned. Pontiac, Port Huron and Mount Clemens are the American cities. One of the Ontario teams will be dropped, Kitchener likely.

Frank Navin, president of the Detroit Tigers, is reported to look upon the proposed league with some favor, and if Mr. Bergeman secures his consent to open in the new territory, a new international minor league will be in action next year.

A schedule commencing on May 24 and ending on Labor Day is proposed.

Chatham, Jan. 11. — Crossing the river from a point on King street to Grand avenue, Miss Ruth Cowan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Cowan, had a narrow escape from drowning when the surface crumpled under her feet. The young girl managed to hold on to the broken surface of ice and scrambled to safety, frightened and drenched, but none the worse for her exciting experience.

TRIAL OF "SCOBIE DAN" IS SET FOR SATURDAY

Special to The Advertiser.

Kincardine, Jan. 11.—"Mrs. Kay is worse today," stated Dr. J. Ferguson, Kincardine coroner, to The Advertiser this afternoon. "She had a bad night of it last night, with a high temperature and considerable restlessness. Her condition is very precarious."

Mrs. George Kay has been hovering between life and death at her home here since Saturday afternoon, when she was shot by Dan "Scobie" MacDonald, who visited the Kay home with a rifle to wipe out a grudge he had held against them for many years. MacDonald shot and killed her husband at the same time.

The inquest into the death of Kay will be held by Coroner Ferguson here tonight, while MacDonald's preliminary trial on charges of murder and shooting with intent to kill will be on Saturday.

Mr. O. E. Klein, Walkerton lawyer, has been engaged by MacDonald as his counsel for the defense in the charges of murder and shooting with intent to kill which are against him. Mr. Klein will represent MacDonald at the inquest tonight of George Kay, and will defend him on Saturday at his preliminary hearing before Magistrate McNab in Walkerton.

FACES SECOND TRIAL ON MURDER CHARGE

Special to The Advertiser.

Toronto, Jan. 11.—Charged with the murder of his wife, Robert Stevenson was placed on trial for the second time in the assizes today before Chief Justice Sir William Mulock and a jury.

At the previous trial, presided over by Mr. Justice Lennox, the jury failed to agree on a verdict after some hours' discussion, and the case was traversed from the fall assizes.

Stevenson appears to have borne his confinement in jail since last April quite well, clean shaven, and attired in a dark mixed suit. He listened attentively as the evidence produced at the first trial was heard once more.

Following the evidence of Robert Hooper, uncle of Stevenson's little step-daughter, Norah Draper, 13-year-old step-daughter of Stevenson, was called by the crown. The little girl, neatly attired like her sister Vera in a dark red dress, blue overcoat and hat, betrayed a little sign of nervousness as she entered the witness box and faced the well-filled courtroom. She answered the questions of crown and defense in a voice just audible. Stevenson exhibited a slight restlessness as witness recounted how he had struck her mother with an axe, and then injured both her and her sister with an axe and shotgun.

As the girl told of the attack, Stevenson, who had been resting with his right arm on the side of the rail, removed his arm from that position, and placed his hand to his forehead. "After I had run out of the house," said the girl, "he rushed at me with a gun. I cried to him not to shoot, but he said it was too late, and fired."

POISONED LIQUOR KILLS THOUSANDS

U. S. Prohibition Bureau Issues Figures to Show Danger.

Special to The Advertiser.

Washington, Jan. 10. — Poisonous liquor took a death toll of about 1,000 in 1922, newspaper clippings collected by the prohibition bureau indicate.

In the same period, it was estimated that about 400 people were blinded by drinking bootleggers' liquors; in addition the health of many hundreds was said to have been ruined by bad liquor.

The bureau, while emphasizing that its figures were purely estimates, announced that it is planning to organize a division which will keep a close tab on the number of persons killed or injured by poisonous liquor. In this way, the prohibition department would be in a position to send special squads of agents into districts where a large number of deaths are reported.

According to the clippings, the number of deaths in New York State during the year was close to 200, an increase over the previous year. The Cleveland coroner reported 62 such deaths during the first seven months of the year.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Montreal, Jan. 11.—Chief of Provincial Police Lorrain has, it is stated, opened a searching inquiry into the mysterious fires which for some time past have been occurring in this province. With this end in view, he has addressed requests to all persons who have received threatening letters, to parish priests, superiors of convents, and others throughout the province to send such letters to him. He anticipates they will be of great use to him in his investigation.

France Moving Back.

Once more armed men march in Europe.

After the war the world conferred. It did so at Washington, at Genoa, London, Paris, Lausanne.

There seemed to be a chance that this old war-sick world might get down to a basis of reason and common sense, even if we couldn't go the whole distance to goodwill and a bit of love thrown in.

But today French troops march toward Germany.

The men and women of all nations longed to have a chance to straighten their backs that had been bent down with war debts and bills for armies and navies. They had higher things in mind, and even hoped that the time was coming when they could cease to toss their treasure into the maws of war.

Britain has gone thoroughly into the matter, and Britain cannot agree to the policy of France. To Britain it looks too much like playing with fire. Britain does not want war now, and she did not want it in 1914.

Meanwhile the world looks on and wonders if France is determined to pull the world back to the hell-hole from which it was lifted on Armistice Day, 1918.

Where the Country Leads.

What must have been the feelings of the fire sufferer in Northern Ontario who opened up a bundle and found one tuxedo coat, worn out, two dress shirts with the bands off and a pair of dancing pumps?

What must the people there think as they sort out piles of boots as high as a man's head, and find them with holes, some of them big enough to push a man's finger through?

Is it any wonder that there was a tendency to indulge in profanity? These are not imaginary cases, but positive facts, vouched for by the chairman of the relief commission, George Matthews of Brantford.

We gave much, but not wisely. We shipped off clothing, bedding, boots and shoes and food all together. As soon as it was possible to get trains through there was a commencement of dumping all this stuff in the fire-swept zone. The intention of the people was to aid, but there had not been business methods applied to the work of sorting.

Mr. Matthews has the advantage of being a businessman, and he is seeking now to systematize the work of caring for Northern Ontario. He told Londoners very plainly on Wednesday that the size of the task confronting the committee was not appreciated by the public because they could not grasp it.

The giving from the rural sections of Ontario has been far more intelligent than that carried on in the towns and cities. The farmers have donated large quantities of feed for both man and beast, and all of it has been of such a nature that it has been 100 per cent efficient. Then, too, through the Women's Institutes in rural districts, there was excellent direction in the securing of material and the making of garments that the women knew would be acceptable. It is a sincere tribute to the Women's Institutes that they should function so acceptably when an occasion arose that required a great and concerted effort.

There is something there for some of our much-organized urban centers to think over. The cities are organized—no question about that. In some respects they are organized to the point of suffocation, and a person would have to search diligently to find another reason or excuse for launching a new movement. There were certain forces, such as the Red Cross, that had all the machinery required to operate, and their efforts, because of training, were effective at once.

But the fact stands out that both for giving intelligently and well, and getting right at the needs of the case, rural Ontario has led the procession right through in regard to giving relief to the fire sufferers of Northern Ontario.

Be Sure of This Move.

How are we to know just when we do arrive at a form of civic government that will satisfy us? Mayor Wenige of London, in his inaugural, suggested that it was time for London to look around and move on toward a commission form of government. Some Canadian cities have made changes, and are still at it.

Guelph took the city manager plan, and also a two-year term for aldermen, and no election for a mayor. The thing sounds very well, but after Guelph had it set up and running they were not particularly pleased with the thing. So just a few weeks ago they knocked off one wheel, and decided to elect their mayor in future. There is considerable criticism at times of the powers given the manager; some hold he has too much rope, while others want still more margin for him.

Chatham has about the same plan as Guelph, but, according to reports, there is not entire satisfaction. The city manager has his hands tied too closely, and there is not, according to the Chatham News, enough co-operation between aldermen and various civic officials. Then, too, the complaint is lodged that every second year, when there is no mayoralty contest, the election limps along in a heartless sort of way.

The fair conclusion is that the new plans being tried out have not been able to shake off the objections that used to herd along with previous systems. Municipalities get something new, and after the first flush of enthusiasm has worn off they stand back to watch the performance, and cheers and groans are evenly mixed.

What does this mean? Simply this, that London should have a good big "think" before any change is made in the form of government. Our system is not perfect by any means, but it is easy to kick up a big rumpus and realize afterward that we have not advanced very far.

When Taxation Annoys.

No good purpose can be served by trying to disguise the fact that there is a great deal of dissatisfaction regarding the number and variety of taxes that are being imposed in Canada. The business community realizes that taxes must be levied because the revenue must be forthcoming. There is no desire to hedge in this matter or to evade responsibility.

The manner in which the taxation works out is vexatious and unfair in several cases. A London wholesaler gave an example in this way: A retailer buys from us $2,000 worth of goods, for which he gives us his note for three months; as soon as we put that in the bank it calls for 80 cents in stamps. The retailer cannot pay the amount when due, so he sends along his check for $1,000 and his note for the rest, which calls for another similar outlay in stamps. This is being done, particularly with many of the western customers, and there is a piling up of stamp taxes all on the same bill of goods. It could not have been the intention of the act in the first place that this should be done, but in actual operation that is what is taking place.

Again, the printed receipt calls for a two-cent stamp to be affixed. Many of the larger concerns keep a carbon copy of all receipts sent out, and use a printed form. The tax catches them and of course they pay, but there is no tax on a letter written in which it is intimated that a certain sum of money has been received and placed to the credit of the person receiving the letter.

It would be much better to put on a flat tax that would raise the amount aimed at, and do away with so many little taxes, each of which opens up a leak that the business world finds very hard to control.

Representations incorporating many such items are being made to the government at Ottawa, and they are of such a reasonable nature as to warrant consideration and action.

Dresses That Kill.

Dresses made from monkey fur are the rage in some places, and have appeared in New York.

Ten monkeys have to be killed to provide the fur for one such outfit, and it is further recorded that the skin is at its "best" when taken from a mother monkey with babies.

An outraged public conscience stopped the slaughter of birds in order that decorations might be provided for women's hats.

Wearing an outfit that spells the death of ten monkeys, preferably mother animals, is a slap in the face for civilization.

A style or a fad that needlessly brings death or suffering to an inferior kingdom than our own should be put in the garbage cans of an outraged feeling and carted off.

Note and Comment

Dr. Coue says our good ideas rise up and overcome our bad ideas—proving that there is such a thing as minority rule.

London realtors are making merry at a dinner tonight, and they will have everything from subdivision soup to nuts on the monthly payment plan.

Every few days some U. S. paper has a long editorial on taking revolvers from criminals. There are so many stray guns in that country that it would take an army of occupation to seize them all. As long as factories keep on grinding them out, thugs will keep on finding it very easy to secure them.

We sometimes complain that the Progressives try to instruct their members how to vote in parliament after electing them. It's hard to see where there's much difference between that and invading Ottawa with delegations from every section of the country seeking to tell parliament what to do. Leaving Ottawa alone is something we have not yet accomplished.

The principal of a Chatham school says there are too many in the classes there. London says the same, and so does St. Thomas. The only place where there seems to be room is out in the country, where attendance in many districts is away low. If we are going to have an evening-up process it looks as though some of the city folks might have to move out where they belong.

The Los Angeles Times quotes the district attorney as saying that "this promiscuous shooting of husbands must stop." The Times says it is a matter of daily occurrence in the land of the free for some wife to pump bullets into her husband. In many cases, the Times claims, the motive is fear that some other woman is closing in and will march off with the breadwinner, leaving the wife to get out and shuffle for her own meat and crackers. In a sarcastic mood, the Los Angeles paper advises applying for divorce, as it is so much easier and faster than shooting.

Judging by comment in outside papers, the impression must prevail that labor conditions are worse here than elsewhere, probably because the city made proposals to the Ontario government for assistance. The city had planned certain outside work, and, following the plan of last year, asked the provincial government to pay the excess of what this work would cost in normal times. We have men in London who would be glad of a chance to go to work, and so have the other municipalities of the province. The idea that London is any worse off than other centers is erroneous.

IN LIGHTER VEIN

Describes It.

Wife—"John, how could you say that my new ball gown looks like the deuce?"

Hub—"No offence, my dear, the deuce, you know, is the lowest possible cut."

Merry Little Sunshine.

Visitor (to ailing friend)—I just dropped in to cheer you up a bit and I'm very glad I did it, for I met the doctor going out and he says you are worse and may not recover.

Hard Earned.

Miss Hardinut—Don't you think married women should earn their own living?

Mrs. Longwed—They do. And if you had to coax, wheedle, flatter and make love to a rough-bearded old tightwad for every cent you got you'd know it.

Reconstructed Nature.

They stood in an art gallery in front of a cubist painting said to represent a landscape.

"What do you think of it?" one asked.

"It's a horrible example," said the other, "of how nature would look if some people had their way about it."

Must Be of Some Use.

"Girls are no account, anyway," exclaimed Paul in disgust. "I never saw such a bunch."

"Oh, I don't know," Freddy countered gallantly. "Girls must be good for something."

"Well, I don't know what it is then," Paul insisted. "If they're good for anything I never heard of it. And anyway, why should you stick up for them?"

"Well," replied the chivalrous Freddy, "we ought to go easy on them. Half of our parents are women."

Tommy Was Puzzled.

Tommy was at the office with daddy for the first time in several months. It was always a gala event for Tommy, for daddy was the boss and he could do most anything he wanted to. And then everybody made a fuss over him and brought him things, and he had a general good time.

"Hello there, Tommy!" one of the clerks greeted him. "My, but I'm glad to see you! And how you have grown since you were here last time!"

"Mamma says I'm getting to be quite a big boy," Tommy admitted.

"I'll say you are!" the clerk enthused. "I wonder how tall you are now anyway."

"Well, mamma measured me the other day, but I've forgotten just what it was," Tommy informed him. "I'm either three foot seven or seven foot three—I'm not sure which."

Was He a Pagan, Then?

During the riots in Londonderry, when the old Roman city was divided into hostile camps of belligerent Protestants and Catholics, an associate of mine who went there to report the developments for the Times was arrested, first by one camp and later by another. Each time he was released, and he was finally given the freedom of the city. When asked how it happened, he replied that, being charged with espionage, he was closely questioned; but his fate was decided by his answer to one leading question, which both parties asked:

"Are you Catholic or Protestant?"

"Neither—journalist."

Your Health

By Royal S. Copeland, M.D.
Commissioner of Health, New York City,
U.S. Senator-Elect from New York State.

CONTINUOUS or occasional bleeding from any part of the body is a symptom which cannot be disregarded. Its particular importance depends on the source of the trouble.

Any trouble with the body which affects the blood may produce conditions favorable to bleeding from the kidney. Anaemia, scurvy and malaria have this complication sometimes. Congestion of the kidneys is a symptom of various diseases of the heart, lungs and liver. The congestion may become so great as to be followed by actual bleeding.

Haematuria is indicated by a change in the color of the urine. This may become slightly smoky in appearance, or it may be bright red. At other times the urine is very dark, and may contain strings or clots of blood.

The presence of blood in the urine does not prove conclusively that the kidney is the seat of the trouble. It may be due to bleeding from the bladder or from the ureter—the tube from the kidney to the bladder. If the blood comes from the kidney it will be mixed intimately with the urine, and all the urine will be the same. When the blood has its origin in the bladder it may appear only at the end of urination.

There are certain signs which point to the kidney as the source of the blood. The first of these is pain over one or the other kidney. In the small of the back on one side will be, when pressed, tenderness or actual pain, constant or occasional.

Of course, there may be pain in the kidneys or the region of the kidney from some other cause than disease of that organ. For instance, bladder trouble may have pain here. Then when it is accompanied by blood in the urine, the combination may lead to a wrong conclusion.

Not all cases of kidney trouble with haematuria have other symptoms than the bloody urine. There may be a growth in one kidney or quite marked inflammation without pain.

Injury of some sort, stone in the kidney and tuberculosis of this organ are generally accompanied by pain.

In tropical countries there are parasites which reach the kidney and produce conditions causing bleeding.

No matter what may be the cause of the bleeding or the exact location of the trouble, the victim should lie down and keep quiet. The family physician will take charge and direct the treatment.

Of necessity the nature of the treatment depends on the underlying condition. If it is an injury, cold applications, especially an ice-bag applied over the small of the back, may stop the bleeding.

If there is some disease of the blood or an inflammation of the kidney, attention must be given the original disease. This will take study and probably require a long time to overcome.

Never neglect any unusual or persistent symptom. I do not believe people should be unduly apprehensive about themselves, but it is unwise not to get advice if there is no apparent reason for some new disturbance. To say the least, it consoles the mind and prevents worry to learn what the trouble is. Nine times out of ten there really is nothing to worry about.

ANXIOUS: Q.—Will you please tell me what will make by eyelashes grow?

2. How can I restore a natural color to my face?

A.—Apply 1 per cent yellow oxide of mercury to your eyelashes before retiring. This will help to improve their growth.

2. You should make sure that your physical condition is good. Be out of doors as much as possible, practice deep breathing and get regular hours of sleep in a well-ventilated room.

L. A. P.: Q.—I am 48 years of age, and for the past four years I have been troubled with black specks floating before my eyes. I have had my eyes examined and glasses fitted. Please tell me what this trouble is due to and whether it will finally destroy my sight.

A.—Auto-intoxication, eye-strain and kidney trouble all cause this symptom. It is not liable to destroy the sight, but it would be advisable to have a thorough physical examination to locate the cause of your trouble, and then have proper treatment prescribed.

L. E. S.: Q.—I was operated on some time ago, and ever since I have been suffering from a severe pain around the incision. Please tell me what to do.

A.—Consult the surgeon who operated on you and have him find the cause of the trouble if possible. The pain may be due to adhesions.

A READER: Q.—Please tell me what to do for enlarged face pores. They are very conspicuous.

A.—To make enlarged pores less noticeable, apply hot and cold compresses, each for ten minutes, night and morning. Follow this treatment by gently massaging them with a good cold cream.

MRS. H. V. Q.—Kindly let me know whether anti-flexion of the uterus would cause head noises, poor circulation and headache.

A.—There are many symptoms which would occur as the result of such a condition, and headache is one of the most common.

L. E. Q.—I am 70 years of age, and am suffering from cancer. Will you please tell me what will stop me from vomiting?

Already Dated.

In certain London railway stations the proprietors of the lunch counters have a custom of dating eggs for the reassurance of doubting customers. That is, they mark on the shell of a boiled egg the date on which it was laid.

A party arrived at one station shortly before midnight, and, following the habit of all American travelers, made at once for the lunch counter. They demanded eggs, and asked that they might be furnished with some of that day's laying.

"Sorry, sir," said the clerk. "Today's eggs is all gone, but"—glancing at the clock, while pointed to a quarter to 12—"if you'd not mind the date, I could give you some of tomorrow's."

TO THE EDITOR

ATTITUDE OF FRANCE.

Editor Advertiser—

Sir,—I and a lot of others have read with a great deal of interest Lloyd George's articles in The Advertiser. He says France has a huge army. What else does he expect? She has no further guarantee against further outrage. It is all very well for Lloyd George and others to talk idealism, and what the world ought to do, but how will he bring it to pass? Does he realize that even now in French villages, children start up in bed of a night at the sound of a farm wagon passing over the cobblestones, and fancy it is those terrible massed batteries again. We have all read of the case some time ago of a woman who had been outraged and abandoned, failing to get redress in the courts, threw acid over the man who outraged her. France is in the same position.

Her huge army is the acid, and the world will only have her tinpot politicians to blame if she throws it. If France enforces her demands the British Empire may remain neutral, but there is one thing I am quite certain of, not one of the millions of returned soldiers will lift a hand or say a word to stop her. The Daily Story

NEEDED.

By CORONA REMINGTON.

"My dear, I'm so glad you've come. I don't think I could have lived another day without you. Minnie had croup all night, and baby's had colic for a week. I tell you what, an unmarried sister is absolutely essential to bringing up a family."

"Glad I can help you with the kiddies. It's always fun to be with them, but I hated to leave mother, Peggy; she's not a bit well, and she needs me."

"She seems to depend on you for everything, doesn't she? I'm afraid you've spoiled her, Catherine, since I left home."

"Oh, no, not that. She's just getting to the point where she likes someone to lean on a little, and I'd like to know why she shouldn't. Certainly we leaned on her long enough."

"Yes, and you know Jim's wife called up to ask if you couldn't come over and help them a while. They're getting ready to go to Newport, and you know how it is."

"But Jim's wife's an in-law. She's not my own kith and kin, and it seems to me I have my hands full as it is. How I wish I could help everybody."

"You do almost. I never saw such a girl. There's the baby crying now. Could you run up and get her, dear? It seems to me I've been up and down those stairs so many times I can hardly make another trip."

It was a busy time for Catherine Morton. All day and half the night she was on the jump. Then both the children seemed to have outgrown every stitch of clothes they possessed and something had to be done. Under her skillful fingers little rompers and dresses took shape like magic.

"You are the most wonderful girl," said Peggy admiringly. "What would I do without you?"

"But I want to slip off tomorrow if I can. Sunday at church the minister asked some of the ladies to help him with special work he's doing in the slum district, and I volunteered for tomorrow."

"I guess you'll have to go if you promised Dr. Reynolds, but goodness alone knows how I'll get along without you tomorrow of all days, when Tillie comes to clean, and one has to keep behind her every minute or she won't half do the work."

As Catherine flitted from one little task to another she was glad. She was glad that she could help, glad that her sister depended upon her, glad that there was no one to fill her place, but it did hurt her to realize how much there was that she could not do. She could not be with her mother and Peggy at the same time, for instance, and while she was helping the minister the babies would be needing her, and always while her hands were full there was something else beckoning to her. At times she would get dreadfully tired, but hers was the nature that never stopped when there was something to be done. She would go on and on, quite ignoring the little warning twinges that mother nature telegraphed through her body.

It was at this juncture that Dr. Summers drifted across her horizon. After several years of close and constant contact with whining, sickly women, he fell hard for Catherine's unbounded good health and cheerfulness.

"I don't believe you know you have a body," he would laugh.

"I don't except when I'm hungry," she flashed back at him.

"When are you going to marry me?" he asked when he had known her less than a month

"Never, Tom. I'm not going to marry anyone."

"Why do you persist in saying that?"

"Because I mean it," which was a perfectly logical answer.

"And now you're trotting off to your sister's to play nurse to a whole bunch of kids that aren't your own."

"Oh, but they need me," she answered reproachfully.

"I daresay, and—oh, but what's the use of trying to get you to see things my way?"

"Tom, you aren't vexed, are you?" penitently.

"No, of course not, dear. How could I get vexed with you?"

And Catherine had departed, promising to write every day. At first Dr. Summers heard from her regularly, then came days without a line. As time went on his irritation grew into anxiety, and his worst fears were realized when he received a telegram stating that Catherine was very ill. Without waiting to instruct his assistant about his patients, he took the next train out, and found her on the verge of nervous prostration.

"Overwork," he told Peggy none too genially. "If you make yourself a sheep the wolves will eat you."

Peggy did not quite understand the reference, but decided that Dr. Summers was not an altogether pleasant person.

It was weeks before Catherine was up and out again. The doctor spent his time running back and forth trying to take care of her and his patients, and it was with no little relief that he tucked her into his car to take her home one bright Sunday morning.

"Thank heaven, I'm going to get you back where I can take care of you, and I thought the trip would be fun together. Only sixty miles."

"Yes, I'm glad to be getting back. I know mother needs me."

"Mother, thunder! Somebody'll always need you, but there's only one person on earth who'll need you always, and who can't get someone to take your place, and that's me. If you could only understand, dear. I need you every minute and every day. If I could only get the croup or need some little rompers made for me, or could do anything that would appeal to your mother instinct!"

"Do you know, Tom, I've been thinking a whole lot lately, and I've come to the conclusion that I've been doing a little needing myself, and I guess it must be you I want, because when you're around——"

But Tom Summers smothered her sentence with a triumphant kiss.

CRERAR DECLARES PLAN OF WHEAT BOARD WRONG

EXPLAINS STAND ON "BROADENING OUT"

Special to The Advertiser.

Brandon, Man., Jan. 11.—Free from the responsibility of political leadership, Hon. T. A. Crerar last night told the U. F. M. convention just what was on his mind in the matter of a wheat board and broadening out.

"I seem to be on thorny ground," he said, when he passed from the former topic to the latter. "I have been accused sometimes of being an autocrat; nothing is further from the truth," he went on. "The hope of democracy rests in a free and untrammeled expression of opinion and in the interest taken in the business of the state by the individuals who are agreed on certain principles, and who should march hand in hand. In no other way can the policies in which we believe be furthered." A resolution thanking him for his services passed immediately at the conclusion of his speech and hoping that he would continue to represent Marquette, Mr. Crerar said he was meeting his constituency committee today and his course would be determined thereafter.

Says Principle Wrong.

Dealing with the wheat board, which Mr. Crerar did extensively, the former leader declared that the compulsory principle was morally wrong. Apart from that, the furthering of the west's desires in the matter of lower traffic would only be accomplished by pressure from all parts of the Dominion. To secure this there must be co-operation between east and west.

The attitude of the west towards compulsory marketing was misunderstood in the east, and this absolutely militated against co-operation to secure the aims of the west. Legislation must be for the good of the Dominion as a whole. He was convinced that the idea of the west that it would secure better prices for grain by compulsory marketing was but an illusion. It was much more essential to cut down the cost of production, which could be secured by a lower tariff. To a question, Mr. Crerar said he would touch on alternatives in the marketing debate today.

The speech was marked by great earnestness. It held the audience so that there was hardly a sound in the huge gathering, his points not even being punctuated by applause. In the face of the stand taken by Mr. Crerar, it is just a question whether the demand for a wheat board will be indorsed by the convention today.

Burnell Chosen President.

The United Farmers of Manitoba re-elected Col. Burnell as president, and spent practically the balance of Wednesday afternoon discussing the lake freight rates and policies. The lake freight resolutions were not finally adopted, Hon. T. A. Crerar suggesting that one dealing with coasting regulations be referred back to the committee for better drafting, and another asking for lake rates to be placed under the control of the railway commission being also sent back as unsuited to the views of the convention. The political discussion came in a sense out of a clear sky.

A couple of resolutions dealing with broadening out, which might have been thought provocative of discussion, passed comparatively simply. Next a resolution was introduced by A. J. M. Poole, one of the district directors, asking for a conference of organized farmers of the Dominion.

The resolution sponsored by A. J. M. Poole, member of the central board of directors, recommending that a national convention of farmers be called, aroused the delegates to vigorous debate. Opinion expressed showed the delegates divided on the advisability of calling such a convention without some definite indication of the proposed purpose of such a meeting. It must be determined. Was it to be political or economic?

Bird Urges Caution.

Mr. Poole pointed out that the resolution suggested no departure from the policy of the U. F. M. It was merely reiteration of the organization's stand declared in 1918, which had favored inauguration of a convention which "shall deal with matters affecting the Dominion as a whole, or other matters beyond the scope of the provincial association work and which may be expected to secure for agriculture the place it should have among the interests of Canadian life."

Rev. T. W. Bird, M. P. for Nelson, advised the delegates to proceed cautiously with this question. It was one, he contended, upon which the Progressive party might be divided. The different provinces held diversified views on the formation of a national Progressive organization, for that was what the step meant. He informed the assembly that at the caucus of the Progressive members in Winnipeg the present question had been thoroughly discussed. The method of organization would be decided by provincial bodies.

The resolution passed at the Progressive caucus was then read, to the effect that the members regarded the Progressive platform broad enough to embrace individuals in all walks of life and suggested that a federal conference be held in an effort to co-ordinate the Progressives in the various provinces.

Robert Forke Speaks.

Robert Forke, leader of the Progressive party, voiced himself along similar lines. In reply to numerous queries as to the basis upon which it was suggested to effect national organization, W. R. Wood, secretary of the U. F. M., pointed out that of necessity the primary aim of creating such a body would be to seek to bring about a common understanding among the different provincial farmers' organizations, and to co-ordinate the strength of the Progressive movement.

It was inevitable that politics would be injected into the deliberations of such an organization, but that was no argument in favor of opposing the idea.

The resolution on political organization submitted by L. M. Mellors and R. F. Chapman was unanimously passed without discussion, as follows:

"Whereas the United Farmers of Manitoba were forced to take political action in order to obtain their proper representation in the House of Commons, and whereas, in order that our representatives might be left entirely free to study and promote legislation in accordance with the principles of the new national policy, we organized to finance and elect a member of parliament in each of the constituencies in Manitoba;

"And whereas these constituencies financed, nominated and elected their representatives under a form of organization which we consider the most democratic and representative it is possible to devise at the present time, leaving as it does the control of the political machinery in the hands of the people in the constituencies;

"Therefore, be it resolved that the convention strongly indorse our present organization for political action and stand opposed to any attempt to change the present status of our organization or relationship between the constituencies and their members of parliament."

Motion Given Acclamation.

Following the unanimous adoption of a resolution placing on record the appreciation of the U. F. M. of the work done by the Progressive members during the last session of the house, the following motion was also given acclamation:

"Whereas one of the chief causes leading to the organization and development of the Progressive party of Canada as it stands at the present time was the manifest evils of political partyism, therefore be it resolved that we reiterate our objection to an amalgamation of the Progressives with any political party, believing the best interest of the country will be served by an independent course, supporting all good measures regardless of the source from which they emanate."

"That the lake freight be put under control of the railway commission" was a motion that had been handed in by J. S. Hayward and W. Harvey. Opening discussion, R. A. M. Peterfield asked the convention to go slow in the matter. He did not think that the railway commission had previously given such satisfaction that it was desirable to extend its powers.

Josiah Bennett brought down the house with: "Let the railway commission go the blazes. We don't want anything to do with them."

The matter was referred back to the resolutions committee.

URGE FRENCHMAN PRESENT METHOD TO JAIL INMATES

Coue Invited to Pay Visit to Sing Sing and Clinton Prisons.

BUYS "ROSARIES"

From the North American Newspaper Alliance.

Special to The Advertiser. Copyright.

New York, Jan. 11.—An invitation to present his method in person before the inmates of Sing Sing and Clinton prisons was presented to M. Coue today by State Senator William Love of Brooklyn, chairman of the senate committee on penal affairs.

It was announced by representatives of the Coue committee that a San Francisco broker has purchased 2,000 silk knotted strings to use in the repetition of the "Day by day in every way I'm getting better and better" phrase.

He has sent these "rosaries" to the prisoners in the St. Quentin Penitentiary in California. Both of the morning clinics yesterday were universally successful, as the others that have preceded them, only minor ailments, however, coming in for attention. No sensational "cures" were effected.

One of the most interesting features of the morning's clinic was the appearance there of Miss Helen Hawley, of No. 306 West 92nd street. She asked M. Coue for a personal message that she might send to her bed-ridden mother, Mrs. W. R. Haynesworth, the wife of a banker in Seattle, Washington. M. Coue was visibly pleased and spoke to her at length. His message was sent by the young woman by telegraph and will be read to her mother while she lies in bed.

Christian Science when used for healing the ill is nothing more than a limited form of autosuggestion, according to M. Coue. M. Coue told a reporter for the World today that he had never read "Science and Health," of which the late Mary Baker Eddy was the author.

"My method takes in all religions," he said. "It enables people to heal themselves. Christian Science, as I understand it, limits the healing powers to the healers themselves.

"Of course they accomplish their healing by autosuggestion. Call it religion or what you will, it is the faith that you will get well that heals, and that is autosuggestion. No, I don't expect to read 'Science and Health.' It is not necessary."

TRUCK LOST THROUGH ICE, LOADED WITH CHAMPAGNE

Canadian Press Despatch.

Montreal, Jan. 11.—An automobile truck, which fell through the ice on the river between St. Anne de Bellevue and Vaudreuil on Dec. 20, was recovered last night by men who were employed at the work by the owner of the car. It was found that the automobile contained 100 bottles of champagne, which were found in the rear of the truck apparently in good condition. Chief Surprant of Ste. Anne, had been informed that the car had fallen through the ice that the two men occupants had managed to jump out in time to prevent their falling into the water. Nothing more was seen of the owners. Chief Surprant declined to give any information as to the owner of the car.

SAYS FRANCE'S OBJECT TO COMBINE TWO FIELDS

Associated Press Despatch.

Oberhausen, Germany, Jan. 11.—"There are no other important iron ore and coal deposits in the world lying so near each other as the French ore fields and the Ruhr coal region, and France's whole policy of occupation is based on combining these two districts," said Dr. Arnold Voltmann, director of the Good Hope Mining and Machine Works, here today.

The Good Hope properties, employing some 50,000 men, lie just off the edge of Duisburg, and thus constitute a virtual doorstep for France's entry, Dr. Voltmann said.

He intimated the opinion that passive resistance to the French on the part of German labor might result in a wholesale shutdown of the great industrial plants of the Ruhr Valley.

VETERANS WOULD HAVE PENSIONS SIFTED IN CITY

At the general meeting of the G. W. V. A. a resolution was unanimously passed that a representation should be made to the proper quarters that the royal commission appointed by the government to investigate pensions and conditions of the soldiers' civil re-establishment should include London in the list of cities in which it will sit.

In the list of cities as given out some time ago London was omitted, although it is headquarters for No. 1 Military District. This was cause of surprise to local authorities.

DIBS AND DABS —BY HARRY MOYER

STATE TIME NOT RIPE TO DISCUSS MEMORIAL

Prominent Citizens Urge Matter Be Pushed in the Spring.

Persons interested in the erection of a war memorial monument stated today that its construction this year depended on whether business conditions improved or not.

They considered it unwise to agitate for the enterprise at this time, owing to the stringent demands that have recently been made on the public purse. Col. William Coles declared, however, that with the approach of summer and expected impetus to industry the time might be ripe to solicit contributions. He thought the best place for the monument would be on Dundas street, between the Federal Square and the present municipal offices.

"An imposing memorial would be ideal on that spot," said he. "If necessary, the street car tracks could be removed to the side. It is the widest street in town, and would lend the same effect as the Victory monument in Lower Broadway, New York. Fifty thousand dollars would be the least that would be required."

"I don't think it possible to construct the memorial this year," states Col. C. M. R. Graham. "Victoria Park would be the logical location. There is no doubt but that the statue will be raised, but conditions prevent work on it this season. At least $75,000 would be needed. Other Canadian cities have either erected a monument to their war dead or contemplate doing so. It will be a great asset to the city. The larger and more impressive the monument the better."

ACCEPT SAMPLE PLANS FOR MUNICIPAL BUILDING

London is accepting two sets of sample plans of a new city hall from a Toronto firm of architects. The city will be under no obligation, it is stressed.

Apropos of the same situation, Ald. George Burdick, Ward 4, voices strong disapproval against any suggestion that the council indorse competitive plans should a new administration building be commenced this year.

"It will be a distinct waste of money," he reasons, "Why spend $25,000 or $30,000 for this purpose, when we have a competent man in the city hall, Building Inspector A. M. Piper, who is qualified to draft plans and specifications that we will require."

Churches to Hold Social Gathering

Large Delegations of Methodists Expected to Attend Banquet.

Large delegations from all Methodist churches in the city are expected to attend the social gathering and banquet which will be held in the First Methodist Church Sunday school rooms tonight.

Held with the purpose of drawing together the various churches of the denomination, the meeting will be featured with the address of Rev. E. W. Neil, secretary of the Methodist Council Extension Board of Toronto, whose subject will be "Extension Work in London."

William Heaman, lay president of the local Methodist Council, will act as chairman for the occasion, and brief addresses from local clergy and laity, as well as excellent music, are also included in the evening's program.

RESCUE U. S. SUBMARINE DISABLED BY FIRE AT SEA

Special to The Advertiser.

Savannah, a radio despatch to the navy department stated. No casualties were reported, and the extent and the cause of the fire was not given.

The Savannah, one of the ships ordered to rescue the S-19, will tow the craft to Bermuda.

The submarine was en route from New York to the West Indies.

MANY LEAVE CANADA TO WORK IN AMERICA

Immigration Officials Worried as Exodus Exceeds Inflow.

Special to The Advertiser by a Staff Correspondent.

Ottawa, Ont., Jan. 11. — Further conferences between federal and provincial authorities on the important and pressing problem of immigration are in progress at the capital today. The purpose of the deliberations, it is said, is to secure from the provinces some general idea of their needs, to enlist their co-operation in "follow up" work and to secure all possible suggestions for the carrying out of an aggressive policy.

While activities of the Salvation Army along the lines of assisted immigration have received the blessings of governments, and while approval has been given to the extensive schemes of the Canadian Colonization Association, the federal authorities do not favor any extensive general policy of government assistance.

It is not probable that the full deliberations of today's conference will be made public. It is a matter of general knowledge that high wages in the building trade in the United States coupled with the fact that work there is more or less of an all-year-round character has depleted Canada of bricklayers, plasterers and other classes of artisans, so that the door may be opened wider to these classes in the future.

Customs figures show that during the first nine months of the present fiscal year outgoing settlers effects exceeded in value those incoming. It is therefore fairly obvious that means must be found to stop rural immigration before rural immigration will be a real success. This is a problem, not for the immigration department but for the whole governments to solve.

RACE TRACK OFFICIAL DIES AT NEW ORLEANS

Associated Press Despatch.

New Orleans, La., Jan. 11.—A. Barret Dade, one of the best-known racing officials on the American turf, and for many years starter at race tracks in Canada and in New Orleans and Kentucky, died early today of pneumonia.

Mr. Dade came south late in November to act as starter at the Jefferson Park meeting, but he was ill when he arrived, and was advised by physicians to confine himself to his room. He rallied about a week ago, and hopes for his recovery were felt, but later complications set in with pneumonia, and his death resulted.

Mr. Dade lived at Henderson, Ky., for many years, but he was a native of Virginia.

FIVE DELEGATES GATHER FOR IMMIGRATION PROBE

Stewart Outlines Aims of Government in Calling Conference—All Agree Efficient Agricultural Settler Most Needed—Believe Railways Will Aid Problem in Spring.

SASKATCHEWAN DECLINES INVITATION

Special to The Advertiser by a Staff Correspondent.

Ottawa, Jan. 11.—The immigration conference, to which the provinces had been invited by the federal government to send representatives, assembled here yesterday, but owing to the absence of certain delegates only very modest progress was made. The conference did not meet till the afternoon, when five provincial delegates were in attendance. From the west there came two Scots, F. M. Black, provincial treasurer of Manitoba, who was formerly treasurer of the United Grain Growers, Limited, and R. G. Reid, minister of municipal affairs in Alberta.

Quebec sent L. A. Richard, the deputy minister of colonization; Nova Scotia, W. B. McCoy, secretary of immigration, and New Brunswick, Harvey Mitchell, deputy minister of agriculture. Manning Doherty, who is to speak for Ontario, has delayed his advent till today, and Premier Oliver of British Columbia is also expected to put in an appearance. Accordingly, the real work of the conference has been reserved for today.

Prince Edward Island, which is more afflicted with emigration than immigration problems, has not thought it worth while to send a delegate, and Saskatchewan, which ought to be more interested in immigration than any other province, is said to be abstaining out of malice prepense. The theory is that the Dunning government are trying by their abstenance to press their views on the natural resources question upon the King ministry.

Refuse Responsibility.

Their attitude is that until the province is given full control of its natural resources it should accept no responsibility for any immigration work. However, Mr. Stewart, the minister of immigration, was willing to make the best of the delegates who were on hand, and in a short opening address outlined the objects of the government in calling the conference.

One of the principal aims in view was to obtain from each province some rough estimate of: (a) The number of immigrants whom they could comfortably handle each year; (b) the classes whom they particularly desired to secure, and (c) the countries from which they wished to attract them. Some of the delegates pointed out that these questions could not be answered off-hand and would require careful consideration and possibly consultation with their colleagues and departmental officials.

Mr. Stewart also suggested that in the event of the federal government spending considerable sums on assisted passages for farm and domestic help, the provincial governments should undertake some responsibility for the collection of the refunds which were due. He also intimated a desire to explose the possibilities of some organization being set up by the provinces in co-operation with the federal government which would perform the same sort of service that had been achieved for returned soldiers by the soldiers' settlement board. A desultory discussion on these points took place before the conference adjourned.

Delegates Agree.

There is general agreement among delegates that there is a general demand for efficient agricultural help, but it seems likely that special inducements will have to be offered to attract it to our shores. The population of the greater part of Europe is so poverty-stricken that it has not the means to pay for the comparatively high fares now demanded, and it seems very doubtful whether the state of our treasury will permit the offer of financial assistance to intending immigrants on any large scale.

It is hoped that by next spring the steamship companies will see fit to make reductions in at least their steerage rates, and fresh concessions may be made by the railways.

The immigration department is anxious to devise means to secure full lists of lands available for renting purposes, but the wisdom of creating a large body of tenant farmers is doubted in some quarters. The Canada Colonization Association, which seems to be in a very sickly condition if not in deep travail, had made some progress towards compiling such a list with the co-operation of municipal councils and other bodies, and it is hoped to bring them to a more complete state.

Prove Successful.

One question which will provoke acute discussion will be the policy in regard to immigrants from the great mid-European plain, who were brought in so freely in the first decade of this century and have proved such successful settlers from the material point of view. It is significant that the Manitoba Free Press recently carried a strong editorial urging the desirability of seeking settlers in these reservoirs of healthy peasantry, and western opinion on the whole is inclined to view the Poles and Ukranians as very useful assets in a country in its pioneer stage. Objection to their advent in large numbers are mainly social, and the Free Press points out that the development of better communications and the firm establishment of national school systems in the prairie provinces have minimized the chance of particularist racial enclaves being created.

The main object of the current conference is the co-ordination in the field of immigration of the activities of the provincial and federal governments, and even those provinces which are not directly represented have indicated their willingness to give their co-operation in any schemes promoted by the federal government.

PROMISES TO DEMAND POLICE INVESTIGATION

Special to The Advertiser.

Montreal, Jan. 11.—Alderman Lyon W. Jacobs, B.C.L., president of the law commission of Montreal and member of the Montreal police commission, stated today in regard to the Haywood-Montreal police controversy:

"The matters discussed by Dr. Haywood are undoubtedly important and deserve consideration.

"I do not think that Dr. Haywood intended to cast any reflection on the police department as a body. If I am rightly informed, the doctor specified one detective in his statement made before the Canadian Club. If it be established that the charge made against this detective is true I can assure you this man will not be permitted to stay on the force. The department will not tolerate those whose conduct will cast reflection on the honor of the police department of Montreal.

"The police force is composed mainly of honorable, efficient, hard-working married men who give the citizens the best protection possible. The force is undermanned at present. Men work seven days a week and are often compelled to be on duty during the night and spend the greater part of the day in court.

"In an organization of 1,000 men it may be possible that errors will occur, but on the whole our police force is as efficient and well disciplined as any on the North American continent. In Chief Belenger and Chief of Detectives Lepage Montreal has two able and worthy officers whose work is devoted to the best interests of our citizens.

"I know Dr. Haywood personally, and I feel sure that the statements he made were in the public interest and were made after due deliberation and careful observation. I will personally demand a public investigation of the entire matter should any specific charge be brought against the police department."

MANY VALUABLE BIRDS LOST AT POULTRY SHOW

Special to The Advertiser.

Port Hope, Jan. 11.—Several of the poultry exhibitors at the recent show in Guelph had the misfortune to lose many of their prize birds through an epidemic of cold, which seemed to go through the whole show. Captain W. J. Colwill, of this town, was among the biggest losers, thirty-five of his best Bantams, valued at $150, having succumbed to the epidemic.

The management of the show did everything possible to combat the epidemic. A spray was used not only on the floor and fixtures, but on the birds themselves. If it had not been for their foresight and untiring efforts the loss would have been a great deal higher than it was.

COUNCIL TO CONSIDER "SHAKE UP" PROPOSAL

Session to Discuss Mayor's Plan May Be Held Next Week.

Members of the city council will assemble in special session probably not earlier than next week, to consider at length the several recommendations from Mayor Wenige, in connection with a proposed "shake-up" at the city hall.

What the outcome will be is only a matter of opinion at this moment, however, but it can be seen that there are about two members of each committee who are commencing to shape up as out and out opponents of anything that his worship may advance. In view of this apparent state of affairs, an invigorating tussle is anticipated.

It was first proposed that a joint committee of the finance committee and the board of works first consider the entire issue and bring in a report to the council.

Alderman Gordon Drake opposes this, claiming that from his seven years' experience he has learnt that small sub-committees are practically useless. He urges that all questions as to salaries, changes in policy, and proposed reorganization, be referred to the council, to meet at the call of the mayor, as a "committee of the whole."

This will be done.

REFUSES TO MEDDLE IN BUSINESS OF CITY

Canadian Press Despatch.

St. John, N.B., Jan. 11.—Representatives of the Investment Bankers Association of the United States and the Bond Dealers Association of Canada waited on the provincial government executive yesterday afternoon respecting their request that arbitration be resorted to between the city and the New Brunswick Power Company for the purchase of the power company's plant. Their argument was similar to that employed at the meeting with the St. John common council in the morning.

Premier Foster maintained the same attitude he had taken in a letter to H. R. Hayes, chairman of the public service committee of the Bankers Association. This letter was written on Dec. 22 last.

In it he tells the brokers plainly that the city has a perfect right to erect a civic distribution system in competition with that of the power company. The premier pointed out that "the investors of the New Brunswick Power Company, when they purchased their stocks or bonds, did not secure with such securities the exclusive right to distribute light and power in the city."

Consideration of the arguments presented was promised. It is not thought likely, however, that the provincial government will interfere in the matter.

EVEN FEES TO C. OF C.'S ARE TAXED UNDER LAW

Canadian Press Despatch.

Montreal, Jan. 11.—A ruling has been made by the Dominion government to the effect that membership fees in boards of trade, chambers of commerce and similar trade organizations of a public character may not be treated by a company or corporation as part of their business expenses, and are therefore within the reach of the government for income and other taxation purposes.

Attention was drawn to this ruling at a regular meeting of the council of the board of trade when a member of the board wrote complaining of the injustice of such a ruling.

A large gathering of the ladies of Chalmers Ladies' Aid and Women's Missionary Society assembled at the home of Mrs. A. Webb, 1 Shirley avenue, this week, when the Ladies' Aid honored Mrs. A. The address was read by Mrs. Dye, while the presentation was made by Mrs. H. R. Legg.

The Women's Missionary Society also did honor to Mrs. A. J. Chapman of 225 Grey street, who had been their efficient president for three years, presenting her with some beautiful cut-glass, and also an address. Mrs. R. McMullen read the address, while Mrs. D. McPherson made the presentation.

Both Mrs. Webb and Mrs. Chapman were quite taken by surprise, but in a pleasing way thanked the ladies for their kindness and their hearty co-operation in the work. The remainder of the evening was pleasantly spent in games and music, and dainty refreshments were served.

Putting to Rout Baby's Arch Foe

Child Welfare Association Confident Mortality Figures Annually Decreasing.

When all reports are compiled for the year 1922 the London Child Welfare Association is confident that the infant death rate will be at least as low, or even lower than that for 1921. The 1921 figures showed a decrease in infant mortality in this city in some three years from 116 in 1,000 to 87 in 1,000. In other words, 29 more babies were saved from preventable deaths than the year before child welfare work, with nurses and clinics, was definitely established.

Reports for 1922 will be presented at the quarterly meeting of the association, which will be held Tuesday afternoon next, Jan. 16, at 3:30 o'clock in the London Institute of Public Health. Owing to the fact that exceptionally interesting information is to be presented, the executive is hoping for a very large attendance of all interested.

On account of the meeting Tuesday the monthly conference of the women's committee has been withdrawn for Friday.

"This organization is composed of four gifted soloists. Their program was of unusual merit, combining solos, duets, trios and quartets. Their voices blended perfectly, and their selections of the lighter and humorous were as heartily encored as the heavier and more artistic numbers, where their voices showed to greater advantage.

Yendell--Wylie Wedding Interests Large Circle of London Friends

A pretty winter wedding of interest to a large circle of friends took place Wednesday afternoon at a quarter to five in the First Methodist Church, when Velma Ellen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Wylie, was married to George Willard Yendell, only son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Yendell, St. George street. Rev. E. W. Jewett performed the ceremony. The church was decorated with palms and ferns, and as the bridal party entered Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus was played by A. D. Jordan. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a smart gown of cinnamon color marvello. The skirt fell in sunburst pleating and was caught at the waistline with two oriental ornaments. The bodice was of batik silk, in rainbow shades. The sleeves were elbow length and gloves of cinnamon shade were worn. Her hat was a French mohair toque to match her gown, and she also wore brown satin sandals and a corsage of Ophelia roses and lily of the valley. Miss Irene Parkinson acted as bridesmaid and wore a graceful frock of cocoa shade canton crepe. The circular skirt fell in an uneven hem line, and the bodice, which was long, was embroidered in silk. Her smart hat was a combination of cocoa shade silk straw and taupe taffeta, with beille feathers falling gracefully on one side. She wore a corsage of Columbia roses and violets, and cocoa shade gloves and shoes completed her costume. Mr. Jack Wylie of Calgary, brother of the bride, acted as best man. Mrs. E. Wyatt sang "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden" during the signing of the register, a number which was sung by Mr. Harold Jarvis at the wedding of the groom's parents. Mrs. Wyatt also sang "O Promise Me" before the ceremony. The groom's gift to the bride was a barpin set with diamonds and sapphires, and to the bridesmaid a string of pearls. Only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom were present. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Yendell left on a honeymoon which will be spent in Detroit, Chicago and St. Paul. After their honeymoon they will take up their residence in the St. Julien apartments, McMillan avenue, Fort Rouge, Winnipeg. The bride donned for traveling a handsome seal coat, the gift of her parents.

IT'S SMART—THAT'S WHY.

New York, Jan. 10.—Gauntlet gloves in the brown and black color combination add the finishing touch today to a tailored suit in either shade. In some seasons the combination would be dowdy. This season it is smart because—it's smart. What better reason?

System Run Down Blood Out of Order

Many people become run down, but don't know just exactly what their trouble is, when, as a rule, it is improper circulation of the blood.

All they need is a good tonic to build up the system and put the blood into proper shape.

Burdock Blood Bitters

It regulates the stomach, liver and bowels, purifies the blood and tones up the entire system.

Mrs. H. Poole, Port Dover, Ont., writes: "My system was run down and my blood out of order, and I suffered a great deal from pains in my head which made me feel very miserable. A friend told me to try Burdock Blood Bitters, so I got a bottle and before it was used I found it was doing me good. I kept on until I had taken three, and now I feel like a different woman.

My husband also took it and it has built him up."

Come for Hints To Run Chapter

Tillsonburg Daughters of Empire Visit Campbell Becher I.O.D.E. Meeting Today.

A very nice compliment has been paid the energetic Campbell Becher Chapter, I. O. D. E., of this city, of which Mrs. F. J. Greenaway is the regent. Mrs. Malcolmson of St. Catharines, provincial organizing secretary of the I. O. D. E., some time ago suggested to a newly formed chapter in Tillsonburg the advisability of paying a visit to the Campbell Becher Chapter to witness the conducting of business and to receive other suggestions. Today three visitors from the chapter are coming over to attend the nomination meeting, which is being held this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Roy Cunningham, 1024 Waterloo street.

Mrs. E. B. Smith, municipal regent, Mrs. Becher and Mrs. G. L. MacDonald, local organizing secretary, have been invited to be present and meet the Tillsonburg guests.

SAYS TIME ESSENTIAL BUT SADLY-WASTED GIFT

Giving an interesting address Tuesday evening at Ealing Mothers' Club meeting on "The Value of Time," Mrs. H. W. Paddell drew attention to the obvious fact that time is required for everything, and one of the most essential things in the world. "Yet," she said, "we waste time more than anything else. All need leisure moments, too, and these should be used to the best possible advantage."

Mrs. Alexander, a former teacher of the school, spoke on the same subject. "By being orderly," she said, "we save a great deal of time." She urged the mothers to teach their children to be tidy and neat, and the importance of keeping the boys and girls occupied.

A delightful reading was given by little Miss Nancy Tandy, and solos by Mrs. Self, accompanied by Mrs. Childs, were greatly enjoyed.

The treasurer's report shows that $25 had been realized from the bazaar held recently by the club. A social hour closed the meeting.

MADE IN AN AFTERNOON.

As the diagram plainly shows, this house dress is very easy to make; in fact, it could be finished in an afternoon.

Gingham, chambray or percale trimmed with a contrasting material would make a very pretty morning frock, one that will tub well and that's easy to iron.

Two shades of chambray at 20c per yard would make the garment cost about 75c.

1,000 GERMANS PROTEST AGAINST FRENCH ACTION

Associated Press Dispatch.

Essen, Jan. 11.—A mass meeting of 10,000 persons was held last night and adopted a resolution by acclamation in protest against "the French violation of the treaty of Versailles."

The speakers included Food Minister Luther and the meeting was composed mainly of the better class of residents. The speeches were freely interspersed with the singing of "Deutschland Uber Alles."

Fashions by Wire

Special to The Advertiser. Copyright.

Paris, Jan. 10.—The petal effect which attained such a vogue several months ago is finding a new expression today. Jeweled petals, or cabochon jewels in the form of petals are used for half-girdles with which many gowns are ornamented in front. Petal-shaped amethysts for example, outlined in gold form one girdle of this sort.

USE GOWN FABRIC FOR BANDEAU

Paris, Jan. 10.—Sometimes the bandeau in the evening coiffeur of today is made from a bit of the gown itself. An evening costume with a bodice of green and silver brocade was supplemented with a bandeau of the brocade.

THOSE LOP-SIDED FASHIONS

London, Jan. 10.—The one-sided cape has come to join the one-sided sleeve. Not so long ago there were gowns with but one sleeve. Now there are capes with a long panel of fur forming a wide sleeve at one side, and no fur, but only the cloth, forming the sleeve on the other side.

NEW COMB HUGS HEAD.

London, Jan. 10.—While high and jeweled combs are much worn at evening functions, a new hair ornament is coming into favor. This is a semi-circular comb, topped by large knobs of colored stones. The comb hugs the head closely and is set around the top of a low knot just above the nape of the neck.

AQUAMARINE AND SILVER.

New York, Jan. 10.—Aquamarine and silver is beautifully combined in the long chains which have appeared here recently. Silver beads or several strands of beads in cut steel form the necklace, into which is set at wide intervals big aquamarines, cut and polished to diamond-like brightness.

HIGH BOOT EDGES IN.

New York, Jan. 10.—Efforts of the shoe manufacturers to bring back the high boot for winter wear has been partly successful so far as the Russian boot is concerned, at any rate. In an afternoon's stroll along fifth avenue today one would see perhaps half a dozen women in dark red or black patent leather boots of the crushed and nonchalant Russian type.

The Abigail Becker Chapter, I.O. D.E., at a meeting held this week at the home of Mrs. Harry Young, decided upon a most patriotic field of service for their very own, giving aid to girl prisoners in the jail, especially in the way of rendering them assistance when their term is ended, and they must face the world again handicapped. Miss Florence Wilson was made convener of the committee, which will keep in touch with all girl prisoners.

The nomination of officers for the coming year resulted in the return by acclamation of the 1922 executive as follows: Regent, Mrs. T. C. Duncan; first vice-regent, Miss Florence Wilson; second vice-regent, Mrs. Davidson; secretary, Miss Catherine Fraser; treasurer, Mrs. Ben Brick; Echoes secretary, Miss Isabel Macbeth.

The members of the chapter will entertain the military patients at Byron Sanatorium at a card party in the near future.

DISCUSS SPEEDING UP NEXT ANNUAL MEETING

Municipal Chapter, I. O. D. E., Also Appoint Returned Soldiers' Relief Committee.

The tea room at the motor show in the armories in February this year will be in charge of the Overseas Chapter, I. O. D. E., of which Mrs. A. H. Clinger is regent, according to announcement made at the January meeting of the Municipal Chapter, held Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. E. B. Smith presided, and plans were discussed for improving arrangements with regard to the annual meeting, in order to get all business, including reports, carried through in one day.

A suggestion approved was that the meeting should be called very early in the afternoon and wind up with tea at 5 or 5:30. Another suggestion to be further considered was that two sessions be held, morning and afternoon, with luncheon as a pleasant interlude.

The definite decision reached was to limit reports to three minutes, and to have ballot sheets printed, in order to facilitate transaction of business.

With Mrs. Cl. T. Campbell, honorary treasurer, as convener; Mrs. B. J. Dunlevy, regent of the recently reorganized C. E. F. Returned Chapter, I. O. D. E.; Mrs. A. H. Clinger, regent of the Overseas Chapter, and Mrs. F. H. Butler, regent of the Seventh Regiment Chapter, were asked to act as a committee of the Municipal Chapter in looking after needy returned soldiers and their families.

The regent of the Municipal Chapter will again represent the London I. O. D. E. on the chamber of commerce.

On request from the Grenfell Mission for representatives of the order to act on the executive, Mrs. E. B. Smith and Mrs. Allan McLean were asked to do so.

Christmas greetings were acknowledged from the staff officers at the barracks. A resolution of sympathy was passed for Miss Joan Arnold, former national president of the I. O. D. E., in her bereavement in the loss of her mother. A letter of condolence will be forwarded to her from the Municipal Chapter.

Maynard was elected as secretary in her place. Mrs. Leichliter, who was first vice-president, also retired, and as yet no successor has been appointed.

Following the business part of the meeting a Scripture reading and devotional exercises were taken by Mrs. Leichliter.

Mothers and Their Children

"Playing Bear" for Health.

If there has been a circus in town recently, or if they have visited the zoo, the children may be easily interested in "playing bear" by getting down on hands and feet, keeping the knees fairly straight, and reaching well forward with the hands to make long steps. The head of course must be kept up so that the bear can see where he is going. Children will play this game gladly, not knowing that this is a splendid exercise for the head and spine.

Trains N. Y. Boys To Pick Pockets

Twenty Police Raid Thieves' School, But Master Escapes.

Associated Press Despatch.

New York, Jan. 11.—Tired of a school which teaches only prosaic things, three boys, now under arrest, left and enrolled in a school kept by a master of pickpocketing, thievery and general robbers, the police report. The boys practiced what they learned on subways and elevated lines, the police assert, but all they got for their work was food, a pair of boxing gloves now and then, and a few clothes.

The trio landed in the police net when 20 officers surrounded an apartment house on the east side while two detectives made the arrests. The detectives mainly wanted to catch the "Fagin" who ran the pickpocket school, but he escaped.

AINED IMAGINATION ACHIEVES AMBITIONS

Think Success and Various Projects Will Attain Completion.

WILL BREAK HABITS

Coue Method Employed With Constructive Value, Will Carry One to Goal Desired.

By LAURA MATTHEWS
Special Correspondent with Coue for The Advertiser.

Overcoming your dislike for a certain task is another way in which you can employ your imagination. Suppose you have a very strong dislike for looking over your morning mail and dictating your daily letters. Every day you dread that task more and more, and pass off the less important ones to your stenographer to answer. You have frequently told yourself that you could not write a good letter.

Begin by formulating positive thoughts. You remember when you did write good letters; you secured a position once because you wrote a better letter than the other applicants. Or perhaps you have admired the type of letter a certain man dictates. Tell yourself that you can write a letter just as well as he can. Tell yourself that until you actually believe it.

Then visualize yourself dictating a good letter, and once the concept of a good letter is before you, you can put it into execution because the concept originated in your own mind. It is in this respect that the method proves its sterling worth. If you were taking a correspondence course in self-confidence, and they should tell you to repeat to yourself over and over again that you can write a good letter, you would only develop an unjustified concept and would believe yourself capable of doing something which you knew nothing about. But with this new use of the imagination the success of your suggestion lies entirely with the mental images which you succeed in making. If you can form a conception of the letter you can later write it. If you cannot conceive an idea of what that letter should be then you can never write it, I care not how much confidence or will power you possess.

Imagination Supreme.

You can overcome your dislike for the man you work with if you will b... use your imagination. Why do you dislike Smith? He jars on your nerves, he irritates you, and in order not to show your dislike for him you become reserved, you steel yourself against all contact with the man. You are like an awkward horseman who rides against his horse instead of with him.

First you must stop resisting him. Put your will out of the situation. Ride with your horse. Project your imagination into his mind and try to honestly see how he feels and thinks. A quality of all the truly great is that they are able to enter the mental processes of the man who disagrees with them. All great people have had not only developed but also trained imaginations. Only imaginative people can ever become great.

Conceive of your mind free from your prejudices against Smith. Your reason tells you that it would be good for you and the firm if you could be on harmonious terms, but you tell yourself that you simply cannot get along with Smith. You have tried to, but you have failed. That is you have willed to but your imagination never seconded it because there came up to your mind familiar pictures of your past difficulties. But you will find that the instant that you are able to conceive of amicable relations with Smith, that they will translate themselves into realities with lightning-like rapidity. Never say, "I will get along with Smith," because any exertion of will merely makes for resistance, which in turn produces nerves and irritability. Simply say, "I can get along with Smith," and you will find yourself doing it.

Habits Can Be Broken.

I would hesitate to take up the hackneyed subject of bad habits were I not certain that with the shift of emphasis from the will to the imagination, that any habit can be broken.

Take, for the purpose of illustration, the after-dinner cigar. The old, popularly-accepted idea of breaking such a habit was something like this. On your way home you would flay yourself unmercifully for being such a slave to that after-dinner cigar. You knew it offended your wife. You were a brute, a spineless, all-round, good-for-nothing chap. All this time your imagination is calling up a picture of yourself in your smoking jacket and slippers, enjoying that cigar. You nurse that picture all during dinner, while you audibly assert that tonight you are not going to smoke that cigar. You are fighting the situation with your will, but you know all the time that you cannot get along without that cigar. Why? Because you cannot conceive of yourself doing without it. Always remember that your mental image is going to realize itself, whether you wish it or not.

This proves that will can do nothing in the way of breaking a habit unless it be directed and led by the imagination. Never scold yourself or berate your own powers. Tell yourself that you are master of yourself, but that just for the fun of it you are going to postpone that cigar until tomorrow morning before breakfast. Then map out in detail the image of yourself passing the evening without that cigar. There must be no effort of the will, because your imagination and your will cannot dominate you simultaneously. Let your imagination embroider that picture until it becomes something that lives with you. Perhaps you will find that you cannot imagine yourself that first evening without that cigar. Then you will know that you cannot do without it that evening. Never force yourself to attempt the impossible. Put aside all effort and smoke the cigar, but work away on the image of yourself passing the entire evening without tobacco. It may take you several evenings to complete that image, but when it is thoroughly conceived your habit is broken. All that remains to be done is to carry out the orders of your subconscious mind and realize the image of yourself doing without the after-dinner cigar.

Need Constructive Value.

Volumes are written these days about how to develop self-confidence by telling yourself that you are capable of doing such and such a thing. This method works in those cases where one happens to be what one wishes to become, but there is little of constructive value, because there is no basis upon which to build. Suppose a man said to himself every day for 20 years, "I am only a wall-paper hanger today, but I am going to become an interior decorator." What good would it do him unless his imagination were constantly giving him pictures of how he would plan the decoration of such and such a room if the matter were left to him? Every time he papers a room, if he can imagine how that room should be treated as to woodwork, furnishings, etc., then he is on the way to becoming an interior decorator, but it is his imagination and not his optimism or his mere thinking that makes him so.

Self-confidence should be an accumulative force from within, arising from the consciousness of having done something well, and not merely a plaster applied from without to bolster up your real inabilities. Optimism with right thinking can make possible good work, but the only kind of self-confidence worth the having is that which comes from experiencing the satisfaction of good work.

Suppose you have a new business project. You have pictured in your imagination every move that you are going to make. Even though your friends doubt the feasibility of your plan, if your imagination has pictured it to you, it is possible for you to do it, though it might be impossible for everyone else. This thought should give you the greatest sense of security, because it assures you that your project is going to work out for you.

Sometimes Leads Astray.

We are all able to call to mind, however, flagrant instances of the wisest people being led astray by their imagination. Often the same imagination which has made a man will ruin him. Take for example, Henry Ford and his peace ship. It was the same faculty which had given him a vision of a medium-priced car within the means of nearly every working man that led him to attempt to bring peace to warring Europe. Why did his imagination serve him correctly in the first instance and not in the second? To determine this we must analyze what must have been his mental processes in the first instance, and how they differed from those of the second.

To begin with, he was on terra firma in working with machinery. He conceived of a car stripped of all non-essentials, made in parts and assembled at a cost within the reach of the average man. His imagination gave him detailed accurate images of every part of that machine. Therefore, he was able to create that machine and make of it what he wished, a universal car.

With the peace ship project he was not on familiar ground. Instead of accurate, specific and concise pictures of the detailed workings of his peace expedition his imagination presented him only with vague, general notions of how wonderful it would be to bring Christmas peace to the boys in the trenches. Had he known warfare and foreign conditions as he knew machine parts he would never have had these hazy images. They would have been so clear and accurate that they would have convinced him of the futility of trying to bring an immature and undesired peace to hearts not yet ready for it.

Unfallible Source of Power.

Your imagination is an infallible source of power on which you should learn to lean with the utmost sense of security. If the thing is possible for you to do, then you can imagine it. If it is impossible your imagination cannot give you images of yourself doing it. If it can deliver up to your conscious mind the images of yourself doing that desired thing, then it needs only the order of your conscious mind to put it into effect. Unfortunately, this applies to all kinds of images, good or bad. But the man with the clear conception of the value and importance of this great truth will so train his imagination to serve him for his own good and the advancement of his ambitions.

Where you have in the past permitted your unguided imagination to lead you into bad habits, you can now employ that same imagination to reverse the trick, and help you to free yourself from your old grooves of thinking and living. The image of yourself as a slave to a habit will change to a picture of yourself in complete control of your memory. The image of yourself as a half successful man will change to the picture of yourself carrying out to their complete fruition your various projects.

You will find if you go back in retrospect over your past failures and successes that it was after all your imagination and not your will power that led you. Only then it was an untrained, unharnessed imagination. Now you will be able to harness, train, guide and direct that power within you until you will no longer follow where it leads, but rather you will so guide it that it will take you unerringly to the goal which you wish to attain.

EMILE COUE'S OWN STORY

SAYS AUTOSUGGESTION WILL BE PHYSICIAN'S GREATEST AID

Emile Coue of Opinion That Self-Mastery Is Destined to Play Great Part in Medical History—Passes Experimental Stage.

By EMILE COUE.
Article VI.

It may be interesting at this point to move forward a little and take a glance at the future of autosuggestion. I have no doubt in my mind that the principles of autosuggestion are now firmly established and that a sound basis for their practical application has been prepared. That application is bound to become more and more generalized as the principles become more widely known, especially among medical practitioners. I cannot too strongly insist that autosuggestion, so far from being in conflict with medical science, is perfectly in harmony with it, and is destined to develop into one of the most powerful curative elements at the disposal of physicians.

There was a period of considerable activity in psychological research at the end of the last century, when Charcot and the famous Salpetriare schools took the lead in proclaiming the curative possibilities of idea or suggestion. Liebault and Bernheim at Nancy were also in the vanguard of the same movement.

Then followed a spell of skepticism and materialism. Thought was declared to be nothing but a secretion of the brain, and conscience a mere mass of sensations condemned to be the plaything of circumstances. Our ills were irreparable, because inherited, and it was of no avail to fight against the legacy of the past. This conception colored the philosophy of the day, transformed poets into pessimists and made doctors fatalists. Psychology seemed to be severed completely from philosophy. Ideas were considered to be effects, and incapable of ever being causes.

Doubt and pessimism gained the minds of the intellectual classes and percolated into the masses.

Past Experimental Stage.

But the reaction was at hand. Soon a new and brighter and saner philosophy emerged, with Bergson and others, to reveal the amazing natural forces at our own command which had been so long ignored or neglected. If I mention myself here it is simply to say that I have done nothing more than to demonstrate the possibility for everyone of utilizing for his own physical and moral well-being the force of the subconscious revealed by the diffused, abstract notions of the new school of philosophy. Others will carry on the work, but I think I may say that the basis of a new practical philosophy with definite therapeutic application has now been laid. It is admitted that the human mind is a much greater force than was believed formerly. Facts—cures obtained by suggestion and autosuggestion in cases even of organic diseases have come to prove the importance of the idea in the treatment of bodily ills.

From the purely experimental stage, the doctrine of autosuggestion is ripe enough to enter the domain of universal application. Already, in Paris, it is being carried forward to the crest of a big scientific movement, which bids fair to grow rapidly under the leadership of a group of enthusiastic members of the medical faculty, philosophers and savants. An institute for the teaching and practice of autosuggestion has been founded, and I hope to see others created in other cities in all parts of the world. One will soon be in existence in New York. At the Paris institute a corps of trained men and women, some belonging to the medical profession, like my disciple, Dr. Pierre Vachet, professor at the École de Psychologie, and Dr. Veriot, constitute a permanent teaching staff whose mission is to spread, by explanation and experiments, the knowledge of the so-called mysterious forces which we all possess, and to show patients how to use them to the interests of their own health.

Autosuggestion, then, is becoming more and more an experimental science and an element of the first order in the domain of therapeutics as well as in those of sociology and education. The creation of institutes such as that of Paris will, I am convinced, be a powerful stimulant to the study of the wonderful resources of our subconscious self.

Applied psychology, the vast developments of which is only just beginning, will teach us to know ourselves better, to possess ourselves more completely, to control the supreme powers with which nature has endowed us and to use them for the development of our character and of our physical, intellectual and moral well-being.

All Will Benefit.

The subject far outstrips the individual; society as a whole will benefit by man's self-mastery. The doctor has been called "the last of the magicians." But we can all be much greater than the magician by merely utilizing the stupendous moral power and cerebral energy latent within us. Revivify intelligence paralyzed by doubt or ignorance, regenerate the physical organism, strengthen the moral fibre. Such are the aims to be attained, precluding an ennobling of human nature, the consequences of which cannot easily be calculated. By means within reach of all we shall secure an advancement of humanity, and it will be possible for everyone to feel within him or her the growth of that sublime force which elevates morally and physically.

Perhaps one day the dreams of Utopists may be realized and humanity will shake off the chains of materialism which yet holds us from what we think to be supernatural knowledge, but which, in reality, is already in us, only waiting to be discerned. Who knows? Perhaps prisons may become unnecessary when we have learned how even evil and evil-doing can be overcome by suggestion. Backward children will be made normal and the wayward ones taught through their subconscious to become good and useful citizens.

People are still ignorant of the immense benefits to the individual and to society to be obtained by autosuggestion employed for curative and educational purposes. But the light is spreading. And it will not be long before the new science has its place definitely among psychological, sociological and medical studies.

Perhaps the study and practice of autosuggestion is destined to make swifter strides on this side of the Atlantic than in Europe. I do not know. I do know, however, that hundreds of American men and women have not hesitated to cross the ocean in order to probe my system at Nancy. Today I find myself among a host of friends and followers, all keen to help to propagation of the idea of autosuggestion. Converts of such energy must necessarily be a tremendous power, so that I am quite prepared to see the science pushed forward and developed more extensively in the dynamic atmosphere of the New World than in my own country.

'Wizard of Nancy' Rolls His Own

Coue is an inveterate cigarette smoker. He never uses matches, however, preferring the "briquet" or trench lighter, a small gasoline container with a flint spark attached. In addition to "rolling his own" he is familiar with and smokes several well-known brands of American cigarettes, and since his arrival has acquired the cowboy trick of lighting a match with his thumb nail—a feat of which he is very proud.

CAPTAIN BLOOD

By Rafael Sabatini

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

PETER BLOOD is wrongly convicted of treason against the English king. He and JEREMY PITT, among others, become the slaves of COLONEL BISHOP, a Barbados planter and uncle of ARABELLA, between whom and Peter Blood an interesting friendship springs up. A Spanish ship conquers the island, but is captured through the strategy of Blood, who heads a boarding party of slaves. DON DIEGO, commander of the vessel, who was given freedom of the ship, attempts to betray Captain Blood and his fellows, but fails. Blood sails to Tortuga, headquarters of buccanners, where he joins with LEVASSEUR, another adventurer.

Levasseur's Heroics.

IT would be somewhere about ten o'clock on the following morning, a full hour before the time appointed for sailing, when a canoe brought up alongside La Faudre, and a half-caste Indian stepped out of her and went up the ladder. He was the bearer of a folded scrap of paper for Captain Levasseur.

Its contents may be roughly translated thus:

"My well beloved,—I am in the Dutch brig Jongvrouw, which is about to sail. Resolved to separate us forever, my cruel father is sending me to Europe in my brother's charge. I implore you, come to my rescue. Deliver me, my well-beloved hero!—Your desolated Madeleine, who loves you.

The well-beloved hero was moved to the soul of him by that passionate appeal. His scowling glance swept the bay for the Dutch brig, which he knew had been due to sail for Amsterdam with a cargo of hides and tobacco.

She was nowhere to be seen among the shipping in that narrow, rock-bound harbor. He roared out the question in his mind.

In answer the half-caste pointed out beyond the frothing surf that marked the position of the reef constituting one of the stronghold's main defenses. Away beyond it, a mile or so distant, a sail was standing out to sea.

Cursing in his soul the association into which he had entered, Levasseur was already studying ways of evasion. Blood would never suffer violence to be done in his presence to a Dutchman; but it might be done in his absence.

Within the hour the Arabella and La Foudre were beating out to sea together. Without understanding the change of plan involved, Captain Blood, nevertheless, accepted it, and weighed anchor before the appointed time upon perceiving his associate to do so.

All day the Dutch brig was in sight, though by evening she had dwindled to the merest speck on the northern horizon. The course prescribed for Blood and Levasseur lay eastward along the northern shores of Hispaniola. To that course the Arabella held steadily through the night, with the result that when day broke again, she was alone. La Foudre, under cover of the darkness, had struck away to the northeast with every rag of canvas on her yards.

Dawn found La Foudre close on the Dutchman's heels, not a mile astern, and the sight of her very evidently flustered the Jongvrouw. The Dutch ship veered, showed them her rudder, and opened fire with her stern chasers. The small shot went whistling through La Foudre's shrouds with some slight damage to her canvas. Followed a brief running fight in the course of which the Dutchman let fly a broadside.

Five minutes after they were held tight in the clutches of La Foudre's grapnels, and the buccaneers pouring noisily into her waist.

The Dutchman's master, purple in the face, stood forward to beard the pirate, followed closely by an elegant, pale-faced young gentleman in whom Levasseur recognized his brother-in-law elect.

From the quarter rail Mademoiselle d'Ogeron looked down with glowing eyes in breathless wonder upon her well-beloved hero. He saw her, and with a glad shout sprang toward her. The Dutch master got in his way with hands upheld to arrest his progress. Levasseur did not stay to argue with him; he was too impatient to reach his mistress. He swung his poleaxe that he carried, and the Dutchman went down in blood with a cloven skull. The eager lover stepped across the body and came on, his countenance joyously alight.

But madamoiselle was shrinking now in horror.

He laughed, as a hero should, with the tolerance of a god for the mortal to whom he condescends: "He stood between us. Let his death be a symbol, a warning. Let all who would stand between us mark it and beware."

It was so splendidly terrific, the gesture of it was so broad and fine and his magnetism so compelling, that she cast her silly tremors and yielded herself freely, intoxicated, to his fond embrace. Thereafter he swung her to his shoulder, and stepping with ease beneath that burden, bore her in a sort of triumph, lustily cheered by his men, to the cabin of his own ship, where mademoiselle was confronted by her angry brother.

"Don't you perceive your wicked folly in the harm it has brought already? Lives have been lost—men have died—that this monster might overtake you."

He might have said more but that Levasseur struck him across the mouth.

Mademoiselle suppressed a scream, as the youth staggered back under the blow. He came to rest against a bulkhead, and leaned there with bleeding mouth.

With blanched cheeks the girl stood by the cabin table, and cried out to Levasseur to stop. To obey her, he opened the door, and flung her brother through it.

Composing himself, he turned again with a deprecatory smile. But no smile answered him from her set face. She had seen her beloved hero's nature in curl-papers, as it were, and she found the spectacle disgusting and terrifying.

He crushed her to him brutally, deliberately hurtful because she resisted, and kissed her whilst she writhed in his embrace.

Someone knocked. Cursing the interruption, Levasseur strode off to open. Cahusac, his lieutenant, stood before him. He came to report that they had sprung a leak between wind and water, the consequence of damage sustained from one of the Dutchman's shots. In alarm Levasseur went off with him.

"We must run for shelter there, and careen her," said Levasseur. "A storm may catch us before we make land."

"A storm or something else," said Cahusac grimly. "Have you noticed that?" He pointed away to starboard.

Levasseur looked, and caught his breath. Two ships that at the distance seemed of considerable burden were heading toward them some five miles away.

For the remainder of that day Levasseur's thoughts were of anything but love. He remained on deck, his eyes now upon the land, now upon those two slowly-gaining ships. And then, toward evening, when within three miles of shore, he almost fainted from relief when a voice from the crow's-nest above announced that the larger of the two ships was the Arabella. Her companion was presumably a prize.

Levasseur put off in a boat accompanied by Cahusac and two other officers, and went to visit Captain Blood aboard the Arabella.

"Our brief separation has been mighty profitable," was Captain Blood's greeting. "It's a busy morning we've both had." He was in high good humor as he led the way to the great cabin for a rendering of accounts.

The tall ship that accompanied the Arabella was a Spanish vessel of twenty-six guns, the Santiago from Puerto Rico with a hundred and twenty thousand weight of cacao, forty thousand pieces of eight, and the value of ten thousand more in jewels. A rich capture of which two-fifths under the articles went to Levasseur and his crew. Of the money and jewels a division was made on the spot. The cacao it was agreed should be taken to Tortuga to be sold.

Then it was the turn of Levasseur, and black grew the brow of Captain Blood as the Frenchman's tale was unfolded. At the end he roundly expressed his disapproval. The Dutch were a friendly people whom it was a folly to alienate, particularly for so paltry a matter as these hides and tobacco, which at most would fetch a bare twenty thousand pieces.

But Levasseur answered him that a ship was a ship, and it was ships they needed. Perhaps because things had gone well with him that day, Blood ended by shrugging the matter aside. Thereupon Levasseur proposed that the Arabella and her prize should return to Tortuga there to unload the cacao and enlist the further adventurers that could now be shipped. Levasseur meanwhile would effect certain necessary repairs, and then, proceeding south, await his admiral at Saltatudos, an island conveniently situated.

To Levasseur's relief, Captain Blood not only agreed, but pronounced himself ready to sail at once.

At sunset that evening the wind freshened; it grew to a gale, and from that to such a hurricane that Levasseur was thankful to find himself ashore and his ships in safe shelter.

CHAPTER XV.
The Ransom.

IN the glory of the following morning, sparkling and clear after the storm, a curious scene was played on the beach of the Virgen Magra.

Enthroned upon an empty cask sat the French filibuster to transact the business of making himself safe with the Governor of Tortuga.

A guard of honor of about a half-dozen officers hung about him. Before him, guarded by two half-naked negroes, stood young d'Ogeron, in frilled shirt and satin small-clothes and fine shoes of Cordovan leather. Near at hand, and also under guard, mademoiselle, his sister, sat hunched upon a hillock of sand.

Levasseur addressed himself to M. d'Ogeron. He spoke at long length. In the end—

"I trust, monsieur," said he, "that I make myself quite clear.

A PANIC IN THE OLD ORCHARD.

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

In panic he alone is fit
—Old Mother Nature.

When people are so terribly frightened that they hardly know what they do they are said to be in a panic. There was a panic in the Old Orchard the afternoon after the night in which Welcome Robin had been given such a dreadful fright by Black Pussy the Cat. Terror the Goshawk was the cause of it. Terror is one of the fiercest of all the Hawk family. His home is up north, but often in winter he is driven down from there by lack of food. He is one of those whom the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows dread most in winter.

Despite the ice which still clung to all the trees and made them look as if they were made of silver, the little people who gathered in the Old Orchard had been very happy. Farmer Brown's Boy had kept the food shelves there well supplied with food, and there had been plenty for everybody. Welcome Robin was the only one who had not been cheery and bubbling over with good spirits. That was because he had had so little sleep the night before.

At the time the panic started Welcome Robin was over on the new shelf on a window sill of Farmer Brown's house. It was fortunate that he was there instead of on one of the shelves in the Old Orchard. He was sitting there with his head drawn down between his shoulders worrying about what he should do that night. He was afraid to go back to Farmer Brown's shed for fear that Black Pussy would try to catch him there. He dreaded the thought of flying way down to the cedar swamp. So he sat there worrying.

Suddenly there was a warning scream from Sammy Jay over in the Old Orchard. Such as chattering as there was! It was astonishing how suddenly folks disappeared. Tommy Tit the Chickadee dived through the little round doorway of a bird house which he happened to be close to. Drummer the Woodpecker dived into another. Yank Yank the Nuthatch dodged under the shelf on which he had been feeding. Seep Seep the Brown Creeper flattened himself against the trunk of a tree close up under a big branch. Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel and Chatterer the Red Squirrel each whisked around a tree trunk. Sammy Jay flew as he seldom had flown before straight for the cedar tree at the back of Farmer Brown's house.

Sammy was just barely in time as he plunged in among the thick branches of the cedar tree. A great, broad-winged, gray bird with hooked bill and terrible claws, who had appeared so suddenly that to Welcome Robin he seemed to have come from nowhere, just missed Sammy. He checked himself with his great wings just in time to avoid crashing into that tree. Then he swung around and alighted on one of the tall posts of Farmer Brown's hen yard. There he sat motionless, his keen eyes searching the Old Orchard for some sign of the other little people he knew were there.

It was Welcome Robin's first view of Terror the Goshawk, of whom he had heard dreadful stories. It has all come so suddenly that Welcome had not moved. It was fortunate he had not, for had he flown it is more than like that Terror would have caught him. Now fear kept Welcome as motionless as Terror himself. Being over on the shelf on the window sill of the farm house he was comparatively safe, although he did not know it. Had you been there you would not have known that there was a single living little person in all the Old Orchard.

MY THIRTY YEARS IN BASEBALL

By JOHN J. McGRAW.

How McGraw, Batting Left-Handed, Learned to Hit Into Left Field — The Curve That Couldn't Be Pitched— First Professional Days With the Olean Team.

ARTICLE 6.

I got my first idea of learning to place hits when but sixteen years old, the idea being forced upon me through a lack of small change. Fifteen cents in those days was a lot of money. At the time there was no way of my knowing that I was building up the most valuable asset that any left-handed hitter could possess. My idea was purely commercial.

I was playing on the school team at Truxton, N. Y., where I was born. Always I was a left-handed hitter. The open lot on which we played was bounded on the right field side by a schoolhouse with many windows. In right centre there was a church. As a left-handed hitter naturally hits into right field, I broke several window panes. In addition to several threatened thrashings my father had to pay 15 cents for each pane of glass broken. Other fathers in our town had to do likewise. Mighty few boys in that time, or in our set, ever had that much spending money at one time.

A. F. KENNEY,
boss of the Olean New York team, McGraw's first manager.

To avoid this wrath of my old dad and to save as many 15 cents as possible, I studied how to change my position at bat so as to hit the ball into left field. In time I got to where I could hit in that direction just as well as into right.

The mastery of that art of hitting into either field while a boy is responsible, I think, for my batting and run-getting record in the major leagues. Often I have wished that I could devise some such compulsory method to make our present left-handed hitters shift from one field to the other.

You can easily understand, for instance, what confusion Babe Ruth would cause the opposing outfield if he could bat either way. They would never know where to play for him. This ability to shift is also invaluable in working the hit and run play. Willie Keeler had the art down pat. You can readily understand, therefore, why he and I worked the hit and run play so successfully for years on the old Baltimore club. But I am getting a little ahead of my story.

I started out as a pitcher. This will serve as an answer to many who have asked why I always made pitching my life study.

During the world's series one baseball writer quoted Bill Donovan as saying: "McGraw turned out to be the best pitcher in the series."

Though intended as a pleasantry, I took that as a downright compliment. Even to this day I feel as if I could pitch, though I never did, in the big league. Pitching was my first love and I have never got away from it. To me it is the most fascinating art in the world. It really is an art too—not merely science.

During the summer months up at Truxton I worked as butch boy on the accommodation train. I sold glass pistols filled with candy, magazines, bananas, chewing gum—all the things that the butch boys still handle out in the sticks. I was one of the smallest butch boys you ever saw. I didn't weigh more than 105 pounds.

In those days people scoffed at the idea of anybody making a baseball curve. It was but a few years ago, in fact, that many sceptics were really convinced.

In the smoking car, where I kept my stuff, there were many conversations and arguments about baseball. Very few believed that anybody could pitch a curve.

"What are you talking about?" said a man from my town to his companion, "there—he pointed at me—"is a little fellow who can pitch a curve."

"Bet you $10 he can't," the other came back. "At least, he can't prove it to me."

"I'd like to take a dollar of that myself," I chimed in. I was pretty fresh in those days.

The argument grew warmer and warmer until the money was finally put up. The conductor in the meantime had come along and got in it.

"I'll put up three stakes, twenty feet apart," I suggested, "and I will stand at one end of the row and the catcher at the other. I'll bet I can make the ball go on the right hand side of the middle stake and the catcher will catch it on the left hand side of the end one. That would be a curve, wouldn't it?"

"Yes, it would prove it all right," the man declared, "and I'm betting $10 that you can't do it."

I had a ball and glove in my kit. So, at the next town the conductor held the train while we all got out on a vacant lot near the depot. All the passengers went with us. A man from the train said he would catch the ball for me.

As cocky as you please, I got out there, wound up, and, sure enough, I pitched an outcurve that went inside one stake and outside the other. The ball didn't break more than four inches to do this. I could easily put an eight-inch bend on it in sixty feet.

Well, my backer won the $10 and gave me $1 of it. The other man admitted that a curve ball could be pitched.

On account of my pitching and hitting on the school team I was made a member of the Truxton Grays, all home boys who played teams within a radius of twenty-five miles. I was very much younger and very much smaller than the other players. Still, I won two or three games, and this reputation caused the East Homer team to offer me a job. East Homer was five miles away, and I had to walk there and back. But I got $2 for each game that I pitched or played in. I stepped right out and won my first game.

"I want you to pitch again Saturday," the manager said to me.

"All right, I agreed, "but it'll cost you $5, and, what's more, you've got to send a hack to take me there and back."

The manager argued over this, but I was obdurate, and he finally gave in, after trying to make me compromise by paying the hack fare one way.

A. F. Kenney, a Truxton man, who managed the Olean, N. Y., club of the Iron and Oil League, had been watching me and giving me advice. After my success with the East Homer team Mr. Kenney offered me a job with the Olean team at $60 a month and my board. That's when I really started to play ball. I jumped at the chance.

My dad tried to persuade me to remain at home, but I talked him out of it.

"Why, dad, I'll be making $3,500 a year before you know it," I said, and he finally gave in.

My fondest hope was realized. The height of my ambition was to be a professional ball player like those I had read about. And, sure enough, here I was, a professional. Gee, how good that word professional sounded!

And, with that job came the beginning of the end of my career as a pitcher. Manager Kenney put me on third base. I played six games there and we lost every one of them. I could field the ball all right, but on the throw I couldn't hit the first baseman or anywhere near him. I was quite a bust in my start as a third baseman. I was benched—and by my friend from Truxton too! I was certainly heartbroken. That benching, though, was the making of me, and often I have thanked Mr. Kenney from the bottom of my heart. I didn't then, though.

I was getting ready for a jump—there was no rule against it in those days—but a good laugh caused me to stay over another day or two. Al Smathers' team from Bradford, Pa., came over to play Olean and Smathers had $6 bet on the result.

In the fourteenth inning of that game, with the score a tie and two out, Egan, Olean's pitcher, singled over third. A stray dog dashed out of the crowd, grabbed the ball and ran away with it. All the players started in pursuit, but the harder they chased the faster the dog ran, thinking it fine sport. In the meantime Egan ran around the bases and the umpire allowed the run to count.

To this day Smathers has never got over losing that game and the $6.

Bench warming grew irksome to me. The next night I packed up quietly and slipped away into new fields.

INTERMEDIATES SEND OUT S.O.S. FOR PLAYERS

GIRLS IN SHAPE

The juniors will work out tonight from 5 to 6 o'clock at Westminster Rink in preparation for their opener here with St. Thomas on Friday night, while Coach Walden will "listen-in" for replies to his S. O. S. call for more intermediate players, broadcasted yesterday at the usual weekly meeting of the hockey sub-committee.

He may look for his answer down at the Manufacturers' League games tonight, as the bill brings some good teams together. It won't be an easy task, though, for sometimes they perform vastly different in the O. H. A. to what they do in their own circuit, and, moreover, the Woodstock ice surface is going to look like one of the Great Lakes all frozen up to some of the locals.

Who's To Fill It?

Who will fill the hole left vacant by George Arthurs, who, besides having a couple of cracked ribs, is going to bloom out as a black-faced Thespian at the Kiwanis show Friday night, will be known tonight some time. McGeoch would have filled in nicely, but it was not thought advisable to weaken the juniors any against St. Thomas, especially in view of the dope going awry at Glencoe.

Coach Ferguson has issued a lusty call for the juniors to work out tonight. He will work practically the same squad that journeyed to Glencoe, and he wants these players especially to get on the ice promptly.

The seat sale for the junior opener starts at Brisco's today, and the reserved seat plan for the new bleachers will be used.

Girls Practice.

The girl hockeyists, who open with St. Thomas on Saturday night, will work out Friday afternoon at Westminster to get them used to the boards and the bright lights. They start at 3:45 and finish up at 6 o'clock. Coach Legg has his squad pared down, and has listed those he wishes to turn out for Friday night. These are: Reynolds, Wells, K. Milne, L. Milne, Curnoe, Fortner, Dawson sisters, McLeish, Ram, Forsythe and McCuaig.

With St. Thomas having already won an intermediate game on local ice, the next big novelty of the hockey season is the opening of the girls' hockey, and it is expected that the old Westminster will bulge with the crowd Saturday night.

BRENNAN AND JOHNSON BATTLE.

Floyd Johnson, the promising young heavyweight, meets his toughest opponent when he comes to grips with Bill Brennan, whose great fight against the champion, Jack Dempsey, has won for him much public prominence. Johnson and Brennan meet in Madison Square Gardens early in January. The winner is certain to be in line for a bout with Dempsey, so both men are certain to put forth their best efforts. Here's how the men will face each other in the ring, Brennan at the left, Johnson at the right.

GOSSIP OF THE RING

When he last found a chance to leave his flourishing real estate business in Los Angeles, California, to visit around New York, Jack Dempsey took quite an interest in young Floyd Johnson, the Iowa heavyweight who is to fight Bill Brennan Friday night. Through the goodness of his heart, it is said, Mr. Dempsey gave some elementary instructions in the manly art of knocking them cuckoo to the young Iowan. It is needless to assume that Mr. Dempsey did not teach Mr. Johnson too much.

James J. Corbett made the mistake of teaching a neophyte too much while he was training for the Fitzsimmons bout at Carson City, Nevada. There came to the camp of Corbett a husky young boilermaker who could assimilate plenty of Corbett's wallops without suffering any apparent inconvenience. Corbett used to maul him around day after day, so that the boilermaker was called the human punching bag. Of course, the punching bag did not hit back—not at the time.

Some years later the human punching bag had become champion of the world and Corbett got a match with him in an effort to win back the title that was lost through the solar plexus punch. Early in the fight Corbett felt sure that the human punching bag would be quite as easy as he was in the Carson training days. Corbett was hammering him methodically. The pompadoured one was just figuring upon a string of theatrical engagements to celebrate his regaining of the championship. He was picturing an electric light sign which would read "James J. Corbett, Champion of the World," when the boilermaker knocked him out.

The boilermaker's name was James J. Jeffries. Corbett had made the mistake of teaching him too much.

When Dr. Louis C. Wallach, an enterprising New York dentist, took up professional boxing as a side line his friends had many misgivings. It is recorded that one member of his family objected strenuously, saying: "A dentist, that is a business. Pants is a business and vests is a business; but a box fighter, that is not a business."

Nevertheless, Dr. Wallach spent only part time with his patients. The rest of the working day he devoted to the study and the practice of the art so dear to the late Marquis of Queensberry. Subsequently the name of Leach Cross began to have some meaning in cauliflower and finaficial circles. It may have been that Dr. Wallach felt that he could make trade for himself under the name of Leach Cross by knocking molars loose in the ring and putting them back in the office under the more dignified monicker of Dr. Louis C. Wallach.

It has been some time since Leach Cross retired from the ring and settled down to a quiet life under his more sedate cognomen of Dr. Louis C. Wallach. The other day we read that following the announcement of Mr. Jack Dempsey that he was about to build a quarter million apartment out in Los Angeles, Dr. Louis C. Wallach (the erstwhile Leach Cross) had already broken ground for an apartment house which would represent an investment of a million dollars.

Which would indicate that box fighting is a business when it is indulged in by a businessman.

* * *

Still, the success of Dr. Louis C. Wallach does not mean that every young businessman can do as well in the ring. There is the sorrowful case of Benny Leonard, the lightweight champion. Benny, we are told, after making a trifle over a million out of the same box fighting business, is practically in destitute circumstances. His finances are so low that he has been forced to take up musical comedy to stave off actual want. It was a choice between the stage and having the sheriff call for the family phonograph and player-piano. All winter Benny has been riding in his limousine to save subway fares.

Benny's trouble seems to be that he had no side line such as dentistry or pants and vests to bring him in a little between ring engagements. His pugilistic activities brought him in very little over a million in the last ten years or so, and few lads who are reared in a Harlem flat can save much out of an annual income of $100,000 what with the increased cost of living and rapacity of the income tax collectors.

In fact, the case of the lightweight champion is the saddest case of a deserving young men beaten down and baffled in the struggle for existence that we know of. There should be state or national relief bureaus for the relief of such cases. A few hundred thousand dollars might put Benny right back on his feet.

* * *

When they stage fights in Mexico City they do not limit the rounds. The duration of the fight depends upon the endurance of the boxers or the spectators. The other night Jimmy Dundee, who is no relation to Guiseppe Carrora, better known as Johnny Dundee, was knocked out in the fifty-first round and lost the title of lightweight champion of Mexico.

It is recorded that both of the boxers were quite fresh when the fifty-first round started. This is not surprising. Some of our fistic entertainers could go that long and not show signs of weariness if the law would allow them. Our own Johnny Dundees do not even muss each other's hair when they box. If the Boxing Commission only had the power to take the round limit off it might be interesting to see how a six-day boxing contest between Leonard and Dundee would turn out.

* * *

There is no doubt that the boxers could stand it, but quite a few of the customers might die of ennui during the bout.

Kitchenerettes Are Beaten 7-1

Kitchener, Jan. 10.—Kitchener got its first taste of ladies' league hockey tonight, when the Preston Hurlbut team defeated the local ladies at the auditorium, 7 to 1. As the score indicates the visiting team had a decided margin on the locals. The visitors were fast and light, and could shoot well, and they worked in closer on the goal than the locals did. The fans saw a clever performer in the person of Miss O'Neill on the Preston team. She is a pretty stickhandler, has speed, and accounted for four of the Preston goals.

The teams:

Kitchener—Goal, Rathman and McCarthy; defence, Gross, Bowman; centre, F. Muldoon; wings, Moodey, M. Muldoon; subs, Mueller, G. Muldoon, Zimmerman.

Referee—Wm. Cumming.

INGERSOLL CURLERS OPEN SELDON EVENT JAN. 15

Ingersoll, Jan. 10.—Local curlers will open their annual competition for the Seldon trophy on the 15th of this month. The schedule has been adopted and upwards of twenty rinks will compete. The trophy, which has been an important factor in developing interest in curling, was donated to the club by the late Thomas Seldon a number of years ago. The club's membership is large and intense interest prevails.

WILL NOT SEND HOCKEY TEAM TO OLYMPIC

Event Slated for Next January in Switzerland Too Early.

Winnipeg, Jan. 10.—Canada will not be represented in the Olympic hockey tournament in Switzerland next January to defend the honors won by the Falcons of Winnipeg, according to Secretary Fred Marples of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

Mr. Marples states that he has received word that the Olympic committee has refused to change the date of the tournament to later on in the year, when Canada would have a representative team to send, and under the circumstances does not expect the Canadian hockey body will send representatives.

The subject will be discussed by the association during the Allan Cup finals here next spring.

MAJOR CLUBS HAVE NO TERRITORIAL RIGHTS

Two-Club Cities May Witness Date Wars If Clubs Wish.

By JOHN B. FOSTER.
(Copyright.)

New York, Jan. 10.—Some of the major league folks have just awakened to the fact that the most recent agreement which they have drawn up between them has not got a word in it about territorial rights. The old agreement provided that in cases where there were two major league clubs within a five-mile radius, one could veto certain proposed actions by the other. Apparently some of the American League clubs have thought that they still could do that same thing.

However, the new agreement simply says that the eight cities which now comprise each league should continue to constitute that league. That left each club in the same cities totally independent so far as control of its actions by the other was concerned.

It is true that some actions must be submitted to the league of which the club in question is a part, but they do not have to be submitted to the club of the other league in the same city any longer. There is no rule that because one club is within five miles of another it cannot run its own ground as it pleases.

In the matter of games, however, it is provided that clubs cannot change them unless the presidents of the two leagues give them the right to do so. The Giants seem to have sized up this situation, and if they wish to gather in as many games as possible on dates when the Yankees also play in New York and can get permission of the big league bosses, there is nothing in the agreement which gives the Yankees the right to stop them. Whatever the debate, conditions are not coming to the point of war in the major leagues this year or next, although the exhibit of brotherly love is not as prominent as it was, but there are too many bills to be paid for at present. Ban Johnson's announcement Tuesday that there would be no conflicting games scheduled in New York City does not go counter to the most recent agreement, for if the Giants, for instance, asked that they be allowed to play off a postponed game some Sunday, and the presidents of the two big league should say ahead, it will take them on the world from the Yankee management would have no effect.

The International League is the first of the minors to announce it will take no players from the majors subject to draft, although it will take them on optional agreement.

AUSTRALIANS PREPARE FOR DAVIS CUP BATTLE

New York, Jan. 10.—After making a courageous but losing battle to win the Davis cup, in an effort that required its team to travel half way around the world, and spend the greater part of last year reaching the heart-breaking climax, Australia is preparing to again attempt to regain the international trophy this year. Norman E. Brookes, one of the wonder court men of yesteryear, is already organizing his team, and it will have new blood. He has discovered two youngsters said to be marvels.

They are I. D. McInnis, 20, and J. Clemenger, 22. In addition to them, Brookes is grooming Norman Peach, who defeated Gerald L. Patterson, star of last year's Davis cup team which lost in the challenge round to the United States.

WATT'S COLTS BEAT VETS FOR SLEEMAN TROPHY

Defeat Hamilton's Ontario Tankard Quartette in Final.

Guelph, Jan. 10.—The Sleeman Trophy, emblematic of the first competition in the Guelph Union Curling Club bonspiel, was won this afternoon by Lou Watt's rink of "Colts." This Union Club rink composed entirely of young curlers taking part for the first time in any open competition, defeated Phil. Douglas' Ontario tankard quartet of the Hamilton Tigers in the final game by a score of 19 to 2. The "Colts" played a fine game from start to finish, as they had done all through the bonspiel, and allowed the crack Hamilton rink to score only on one end. The win was a splendid one in every respect, and will prove to be a great impetus to the young curlers in the city. Mr. Douglas heartily congratulated Skip Watts and his young rink at the close of the game, and freely admitted that he had been completely outplayed.

Previous to this game the Hamilton rink disposed of the Plattsville quartet in one of the best games of the bonspiel, and they were picked as the winners of the trophy. This is the first time in several years that the famous Sleeman Trophy, which is one of the finest trophies of any kind in competition in Ontario, and which was donated by Mr. George Sleeman of this city, has been played for. It was very gratifying that it is remaining in Guelph.

In the Guelph tankard competition they are down to the semi-finals, and it will be a late hour tonight or tomorrow morning before the winners will be known.

Just Between Us

By C. H. B.

The bane of London hockey is already appearing—players trying to double up in three or four leagues at once. Several times now London's chances in the O. H. A. haven't been enhanced by O. H. A. players taking part in one or more city tilts each week all season, and it goes on all down the line. The Garrison League is the first to feel the pinch this year, as several of their dates fall on O. H. A. dates, and smart managers who went out and signed up the O. H. A. material, find themselves without teams. Sometime, when all local leagues exclude O. H. A. players from their games, a lot more players will be developed, and the O. H. A. end might benefit, too.

It takes more than the loss of one finger to make Bill Tilden lose his grip on the tennis title.

The hockey dopesters all have their gangway signs out for their favorite teams; sometimes it's Sudbury, another time it's Kitchener, Stratford or Preston, some of them go east of Toronto, and some even dip down into the wine peninsula, but from this angle it looks like Wiarton Redmen for finalists, anyway, if not winners.

The Redmen have been knocking at the door with practically the same team since 1910 or 1911. The strain has naturally worn a few of them down, but the same old bunch of wily vets, who started their career by bumping Collingwood out in a sudden death at Kitchener over a decade ago, are about due to crown their years of persistent trailing with a title. They are strengthened this year by the addition of Jamieson and Gildner, last year of Kitchener's champions. By a curious stroke of fate, Wiarton lost their chance last year through young Gildner, who learned his hockey on Colpoys Bay, scoring the winning goal after three hard games. This year they've laid this jinx by coaxing the youngster back to his old home town.

They've battled through the finals twice and the semi-finals for a dozen years now, with pretty nearly the original team. Lack of capable subs has always beaten them when the pace got the hardest. This year they've got these two new youngsters and Allan Ashley and "Socks" Miers, two of the trickiest and headiest players in the game, as subs, and it certainly look like the answer.

GIRLS' CITY LEAGUE CAGERS OPEN SEASON

S. and I. Imps, London Life and Silverwoods Are Winners.

Three fast games opened the London Ladies' Basketball League last night at the Central Collegiate gym. A. E. Silverwood, chairman of the board of education, who was largely instrumental in getting the use of the collegiate gym for the games, made the opening speech.

The three games played were real games from start to finish, and the fans were on their toes at every moment. The S. & I. Imps and the Checkers provided the opening game, with the London Life crew and Chalmers Church second and Silverwoods and Y. W. C. A. third on the bill.

The S. & I. Imps trounced the fast-going Checkers by 7 to 2. Q. Harris was the best basket-getter for the Imps, while Billy Graves did some fine defence work. For the Checkers H. Baker and A. Johanson were the best.

The line-ups:

Checkers—A. Johanson, L. Authwell, A. Martin, G. Shield, H. Baker, F. Stewart.

Imps—Q. Harris, E. Bamford, B. Graves, E. Bamford, Miss Thomas.

In the second game the London Life team trounced the Chalmers crew by 22 to 0. With J. Gibbert and H. Stone the stars for the insurance squad, V. Cook and L. Gueft were the bast for Chalmers.

The line-ups:

London Life—H. Stone, J. Gibbert, G. Widdicombe, G. Hynd; J. Dicks.

Chalmers—C. Cook, J. McEtchern, L. Gueft, A. Foster, E. Cross.

In the third game Silverwoods defeated the Y. W. C. A. 7 to 2 in a fast game. H. Meaden and H. Roff were the best for Silverwoods, while E. Gibbert was in the limelight for the "Y."

The line-ups:

Silverwoods—H. Meaden, H. Roff, E. Haylock, G. Thompson, G. Byrnes.

Y. W. C. A.—E. Gibbert, R. Tinger, E. McGugon, E. Wolfe, V. Jacobs.

Saw $3,000,000 in Horses on Romp

When the thoroughbred is having his winter's rest he is not such a delicate animal after all. A New York racing reporter on a trip to Belmont Park found about $3,000,000 worth of thoroughbreds turned out in a blizzard to play. They wallowed in the snowdrifts with evidence of enjoyment such as feigned by the humans who make up the Coney Island Snowbirds' Club.

Now and then the herd of highly domesticated horses would dash about through the center inclosure of Belmont Park like a wild herd. The racing reporter brooded over one feature of this. Absolutely restricted by human control, the horses weaved in and out of the herd without an accident, such as would surely happen when horses bunch on a track restricted by their jockeys.

If you think that the thoroughbred on the track is a beautiful animal, you should see him at play in a natural state. Belmont Park in snowtime has many pictures that Rosa Bonheur would love to paint.

Hospital Wins Over C. O. T. C. Six

Garrison Hockey League Provide Great Struggle.

Westminster Hospital defeated Western University C. O. T. C. last night at the Garrison rink, 4—3, after a great struggle. Only the good work of Sutter, former O.H.A. goalie, and Dr. Young on the defence, saved the Hospital, as the "white bands" combined well and had a good deal more of the play.

The line-ups:

Westminster Hospital — Sutter, Dr. Young, Dr. Horne, Berry, Burgess, Huld, Wright, Warner.

C. O. T. C.—Creasy, Blackwell, Hall, Coldman, Mathews, Mowery.

CHAMPION BOWLER LEADS.

Chicago, Jan. 10.—James Blouin, the world's champion bowler, today had a lead of 433 pins over Joseph Falcaro of New York, challenger, with only twenty games of their schedule unplayed.

OTTAWAS SPU[illegible]

Sweep Canadiens Off Feet With Rush After Bad Start.

Hamilton, Jan. 10.—St. Patricks turned the tables on Hamilton in an N. H. L. fixture played here tonight, winning by a count of 7 to 6, after forty seconds of overtime play in a game that was chuck full of excitement, and the record crowd went home somewhat disappointed, but satisfied that they had seen a real battle from gong to gong. Wicked shooting on the part of "Babe" Dye was the life-saver for Toronto. For although subjected to a rather rough voyage the right wing player from the Green and White paid strict attention to business, and while Hamilton players were serving penalties for bumping him about, he was out there beating Vernon Forbes with shots that the diminutive goalie could not see. Hamilton also presented a rather weak defence. Reise and Corbeau did not use their bodies to advantage, and although Forbes was in good form he could hardly be blamed for the shots that beat him.

The game, despite the fact that several penalties were handed out, was anything but rough.

The teams:

St. Patricks—Goal, Roach; defence, Cameron and Stuart; center, Adams; wings, Dye and Noble; subs, Denlord, Andrews, Scott, Randall.

OTTAWAS TRIM CANADIENS.

Ottawa, Jan. 10.—Coming back in the second period and literally sweeping the Canadiens off their feet, Ottawa Senators tonight carried off the honors by a 6 to 2 score. The home team started the third period with a goal scored against them and began a determined attack on the citadel of the Frenchmen. After two minutes of play Denenny drew the teams even and Broadbent followed shortly afterward with another. From the second goal scored for Ottawa till the end, Senators were never in serious danger. Shortly after the game opened the fans settled down to see the Canadiens take the edge from the home team. Their attack was better and they gave the home defence a wonderful time. The continual rushes of the Canadien defence featured, and these two came down time after time, only to be turned by the defence or by a snappy piece of work by Benedict.

The most effective man on the ice was Cy Denenny. He was never in trouble and gave a great exhibition of rushing and shooting.

The teams:

Canadiens—Goal, Vezina; defence, S. Cleghorn and Couture; center, O. Cleghorn; wings, W. Boucher and Joliat; subs, Berlinquette, Malone, Pitre and Bell.

Referee—Pulford.

TRAG CROWD SEES THREE FAST CHURCH GAMES

Askin, St. Andrew's and Hamilton Road Are Winners.

A big crowd saw three fast games in the Church League at Westminster Rink last night. Askin Street trimmed King Street to the tune of 5 to 1 in the first. The game was closer than the score indicates, good goal-minding C. defence work on the part of the boys holding down the efforts King Street sextet. Bill Lightfoot was all over the ice during the last two periods, but was checked hard.

The line-ups:

The St. Andrews vs. Knox affair was airtight from the start, and it was anybody's game until the final tingle of the bell. St. Andrews' only counter, however, rung up during the second frame, proved sufficient for a win, and the game ended 1 to 0. Maur, in goal, Southcott and Wilkinson starred for the winners, while Reid, Land and Gordon showed up well for Knox.

The line-ups:

St. Andrews—Goal, Maur; left defence, Southcott; right defence, Wilkinson; center, McKillop; right wing, Smith; left wing, Black; subs, Shawwood and Craig.

First Presbyterian, though presenting a makeshift line-up, put up a strenuous fight, and more than once threw a scare into the Hamilton Road outfit. Arscott and Philmore nosed one each past Hynd from mix-ups near the goal in the first period. In the second stanza the Prebyterians came back with a counter, when Howie nursed the puck along the boards and sizzled one past Biggs, and for a time it looked as if they would tie the score. Woosley cinched it in the third, though, and there was no further score. Both goalkeepers showed up well, although Hynd had about three to Biggs' one to stop.

The line-ups:

Pucklets.

The fans have found out that the Westminster Rink is a sort of friendly place. It's possible to renew acquaintanceships by voice.

* * *

The size of Westminster and the old Jubilee doesn't present such a big contrast, but, for some reason or other, the "new arena" looks very small and the fans must find it hard to restrain themselves from leaning over and giving their favorite players encouraging pats on the back.

* * *

The Manufacturers' League this year looks the best it ever has, with some big upsets due the next few weeks. The fact that McCormicks, largely a new team, could hold the highly-touted Perrin crew to a 2 to 0 score either shows that some of the known material isn't any too superior or else some of the fancied outfits haven't struck their stride yet.

* * *

Kitchener starts out the season with strife and all sorts of rumors, but when the ice comes they forget it all, and now the seniors are leading their group, and the intermediates look like the team to beat in the Trolley group, the group most likely, on the dope, to send a team in the O. H. A. finals.

There's likely to be an epidemic of sore eyes in Galt if they keep blinking at that score.

* * *

All games in the Public School League have been postponed until Friday afternoon. The one game played, it has been said, will be protested on the ground that one of the players performed without skates.

* * *

The first goal ever scored in a professional hockey game in Canada was notched by Beverley Findlay of the Canadian, who was afterwards killed in the railway yards at Fort William.

* * *

The first game of six-man hockey ever played in Canada, at least in anything above the scrub leagues, was at the Canadian Soo. While the Soo and Pittsburg were playing a series, injuries to players cut down the list of available men, so that the two had to go on for one of their schedule fixtures with six men a side. It was a cracking fine game. The Toronto papers, then campaigning against the entry of the professional game, heaped ridicule upon the Soo and Pittsburg teams for their "bob-tailed hockey," little thinking that it would in a few years become the recognized brand of hockey as best for both professionals and amateurs.

* * *

The first game with the no off-side in centre ice rule was played in Port Arthur about ten years ago. A Port Arthur sports writer, hearing the fans complain about so many stops in the game for off-sides, and describing the game of the day, as more bell ringing than hockey, figured it out that play would be faster and more interesting if not stopped so often. Through his paper he started to urge play without calling off-sides in centre ice, but penalizing a player who loafed in front of the puck. Finally, the league officials decided to give the plan a trial, and it worked well, but the local team, being in association with others who would not adopt the rule, it could not be made permanent. The idea got to the coast through the newspapers and was taken up and developed by the Patricks.

* * *

It would be interesting to watch to see who becomes the last survivor of the original professional league. Now that Didier Pitre is on the spare list for Canadiens it seems to be between Lehman and Lalonde, although there is no saying but what either might be deprived of the honor were Fred Taylor, one of the greatest of them all, to take a notion to essay a comeback.

GUELPH TRIM SHELL OF OLD MIDGETS, 7-2 SCORE

Guelph, Jan. 10.—The Guelph O. H. A. juniors took the Stratford Midgets into camp here this evening in easy fashion in a group game, the score being 7 to 2. The Midgets came down with just six men, and with this handicap they put up a plucky fight, but the locals played their best game of the season, and won as they pleased. Only the wonderful work of Gingras in goal for the Midgets saved them from a worse defeat.

For the Guelph team Lawrence Goyer was easily the star, and his stick-handling was a treat, while every shot was a dangerous one. Ahearn and Grant also played well. Smith and Sproat were the pick of the Stratford team, but they were just a shadow of the old Midget team.

THEY CALL HIM TY COBB'S DOUBLE

Gene Valla of the San Francisco Club of the Pacific Coast League, who is likened by many sport writers as a sure double for the famous Georgia peach, Ty Cobb. Valla plays left field and batted .333 for the Frisco seals, and the owners of the team expect to get a bigger price for him than they did for Willie Kamm and Jimmy O'Connell, who come up to the big leagues this coming season.

WOODSTOCK JUNIORS SURPRISE KITCHENER

Win Game 3-1 With Steady Battling and Back-Checking.

Woodstock, Jan. 10. — Woodstock juniors, showing championship form, tore into the fast Kitchener juniors and defeated them 3 to 1 in a lightning-fast game before 2,000 people here tonight. The local team battled the visitors from gong to gong, back-checked into submission and displayed a variety of stick-handling and puck-chasing that gave them a well-deserved victory. The two aggregations cut out a terrific pace at the outset, and it was maintained most of the way. There was a little rough stuff, but the game was for the most part clean. The large crowd in attendance went wild at the locals' victory.

The visitors, with Werny Schnarr as the outstanding performer, had about an even break on the play in the first frame, and they had more shots on goal than Woodstock had. The period ended without a score, largely because of the brilliant goal-tending of both teams' goalkeepers.

In the second stanza Woodstock opened the scoring, Binkley counting from close in. Schnarr evened for Kitchener on a pretty piece of combination with Hamel with three minutes to go. The third period was Woodstock's. McCarthy scored on a beautiful solo rush and shot. As the game drew to a close play became dazzlingly fast. With fifteen seconds to go, Jimmy Smith notched Woodstock's third.

Schnarr scored for Kitchener, while Molson was also prominent, and Fries in goal turned in a fine exhibition. Lynch gave a wonderful exhibition of goalkeeping for Woodstock, and every other man on the team displayed great hockey.

The line-ups:

By FAIR PLAY.
(Copyright.)

New York, Jan. 10.—This Jess Willard is a big guy all right. As the writer stood beside him in the lobby of McAlpine today listening to him talk, it was like standing under the Woolworth tower with some one broadcasting wireless on the thirty-ninth floor. He is the same old Jess, soft spoken, smiling, just a little backward. But there is more of him than there used to be: If Jess got into a gym and set to work with an invention qualified to sweat off all his surplus beef in one session that gym in the course of time would make the Johnstown flood look like a leak in a hot water bag. Jess says he weighs 265 pounds—count 'em. Well, maybe he does, but if he does then Babe Ruth could step on an ice cream cone and not flatten it. Two hundred and sixty-five pounds and then some is the way we appraise Jess' avoirdupois. It is pretty clear that he has not broken his back training to date. But there is one point. Willard's weight doesn't seem to consist of much blubber. Most of what he carries looks to be honest.

The impression the writer got looking over this behemoth was that if Jess could train just enough to withstand Dempsey's wallops, and he might be able to do this, that he might win back his title simply by letting Jack beat himself. Willard is so big that with anything in the way of scientific training he stands a chance of getting into a condition where any fighter now before the public would get arm weary in punching him.

As for Williard's wallop, don't think he can't hit. We saw him uppercut Jim Flynn one night, and Flynn rose like a dirigible balloon and landed flat in the opposite corner of the ring.

Pal Reed of Massachusetts is a parson's son and a Sunday school teacher, and Tommy Loughran of Philly is the pride of St. Monica's, a Roman Catholic Church. Their fight in Newark the other night demonstrated that religion, whatever its brand, is not bad medicine for a fighter. This Pal Reed has certainly got a wallop. He landed on Tommy's chin in the fourth round and Tommy slipped face downward to the floor for the count of nine.

After that Loughran jabbed Reed out of the decision.

INGERSOLL SEES RURAL TEAMS PERFORM AGAIN

Ingersoll, Jan. 10.—Close scores and strenuous checking, with speed and combination at times which indicate promising development in scientific hockey, were features of three games played tonight in the South Oxford Rural League. Thamesford, Dunn's Corners and Putnam were the winners of the games, which were exciting from start to finish.

In the opening game Thamesford defeated Dickson's Corners by a score of 2 to 0. Dunn's Corners brought out a well-balanced team, and won from Barner in ten minutes of overtime by a score of 1 to 0. Dunn, the youngest player on the winners' line-up, gave a fine exhibition of stick-handling. In the final game, which was strenuous throughout, Putnam defeated Crampton by a score of 2 to 1.

The three games were handled by John Cross of Ingersoll.

TIGERS PUT PARKDALE DOWN LOWER IN RUCK

Paddlers Beaten 4-2, Put Up Best Performance Yet.

Toronto, Jan. 10.—The senior O. H. A. game here tonight went to the Hamilton Tigers by a score of 4 to 2. Parkdale C. C. were shoved farther into the ruck of the O. H. A. race by this defeat, and, though according to the difference in goals, it was their best performance of the season, their opponents were not forced to extend themselves, and took no chances on injuries.

The Tigers presented a fast-skating and hard-checking forward line, and one that measures up to the required standard.

The teams:

Parkdale — Goal, Koster; defence, Applegath and Chisholm; center, Barnes; wings, Mogan and Nettlefield; subs, Ashton and Burt.

Referee—Beattie Ramsay.

The line-ups:

THREE CAGE GAMES BILLED AT C. C. I. GYM TONIGHT

Tonight at the Central Collegiate gym, there will be three fast games of basketball, commencing at 7:30 p.m., Pirates vs. Elks, Ahmeeks vs. Normal School and L. C. I. Girls vs. Normal Girls.

The Elks and Pirates are rivals of long standing, and each club expects to be at its best. The Ahmeeks are heralded as this year's C. S. E. T. League find, while the Normal School cagers are out for victory over the Presbyterians. Miss Holland has her collegiate girls all ready for the game against the school "Marms." This promises to be an interesting battle. A. T. Taylor will handle the Pirate-Elk game, while the other officials have not been named yet.

OWEN SOUND JUNIORS TRIM LITTLE RED MEN

Wiarton, Jan. 10. — Owen Sound juniors won a fast O. H. A. game from the junior Redmen here tonight by 6 to 1. Owen Sound secured four goals in the first frame and two in the second, and Wiarton got one in the second. There was no scoring in the third period. Weiland was easily the star for the visitors, while Symon and James were most effective for the Redmen. The line-ups:

BRANTFORD THIEVES STEAL $2,000 COUPE

Special to The Advertiser.

Brantford, Jan. 11.—Reports were made to the police today of two attempted auto thefts, one of which has so far been successful. Thieves broke into the garage of C. L. Messecar, 145 Sheridan street, at an early hour today and stole a coupe valued at over $2,000. No trace of the car could be found up till noon today, though the police speedily got on the job as soon as they were informed, and police stations in all parts of the province were notified to be on the watch for the stolen car. The coupe is a new one, 1922 license number 216-120.

An unsuccessful attempt was made to get away with a touring car owned by Edward Hutton, 117 Albion street, at 4:30 o'clock this morning. Inmates of the house were awakened when they heard the car being pushed along the land from the garage to the street. Mr. Hutton ran out and the thieves, who had some difficulty in getting the machine started, jumped from the car and made their getaway. No damage was done to the car. Nothing has been seen of the men since, but it is believed they were the same gang which stole Messecar's coupe.

K. V. Bunnell and W. G. Buskard occupied the bench at the police court this morning, when two cases were brought up. A man, arrested at an early hour this morning on the arrival of a G. T. R. train here, was charged with being drunk and paid a fine of $10 and costs. He had over $1,500 on his person and was going back to the old land on a pleasure trip. Fortunately he had not lost any of his money. Cruelty to animals was charged by Veterinary Inspector Dr. Cutcliffe against A. Henderson, a Burford farmer, but the charge was laid over for a week while further investigation is made. It was first thought the farmer was purposely driving a lame horse, but it was suggested a stone had gotten into the hoof as the animal was being driven to Brantford.

TORRENTIAL RAINS FLOOD STREETS OF LETHBRIDGE

Lethbridge, Alta., Jan. 11.—This is not a June 10 crop weather story. It is a January 10 winter weather story that tells of rain throughout the Lethbridge, MacLeod, Pincher Creek and Crows Nest Pass districts. Rain started falling at 7 o'clock yesterday morning in the region between Lethbridge and the mountains. At times the gutters of Lethbridge street ran two inches deep.

SCHAEFER HOLDS LEAD.

Chicago, Jan. 10.—Jake Schaefer, the former title-holder, seemed virtually assured of another chance at Willie Hoppe's 18.2 balk-line billiard championship today, by virtue of the 350-point lead he held over Roger Conti, French champion, after the second 500 block last night of their 1,500-point match.

STUDENTS PRESENT DELIGHTFUL CONCERT

Western University Organizations Entertain Byron Sanatorium Soldier Patients.

Soldier patients at Byron Sanatorium were entertained last night in the community auditorium at Byron, to a concert presented jointly by the Glee Club and the Little Theatre Orchestra of Western University.

Some thirty-five members of these two organizations participated in the program, which was received enthusiastically by the audience.

The following selections were introduced by the chairman: "O Canada;" the "March Militaire," by Schubert; the "Cavatina," by Raff; "Fifth Hungarian Dance," by Brahms, and the "Rida March," by Verdi.

Spontaneous applause greeted the Gleesters at the close of each number.

Popular selections were sung during the intermission, in which the soldiers joined with the heartiness which marked the old sing-songs in Flanders. J. Parnell Morris, the conductor of the Glee Club, rendered a solo, which was well worthy of the approval to which it was responsive.

Comic interpretations by "Bev." Baker, among which were "The Frenchman and the Flea Powder" and "Whitcombe Riley's Bear Story," greatly pleased the patients.

Major Snelgrove introduced the artists.

The students were entertained to a dainty lunch by the Byron Sanatorium entertainment committee, J. Curtis, V. D. Rose (stage director), J. Broderidge, F. MacKenzie and R. C. Arthurs.

Western "U" students who contributed to the program were: Misses M. Dawson, E. Treziski, Rose Sanders, V. Rowntree, Helen Patterson, R. Scanlon, G. Auden, C. Campbell and D. Lewis, B. Baker, Max Epplett, Bruce Wiley, Walt Rennie, M. Auden, L. Gray, S. Kingsmill and B. Letcher.

CONDEMNS FACULTY'S CHANGE IN METHODS

Dr. G. W. Ross Declares Present Policy Detrimental to Efficiency.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, Jan. 11.—Resuming the investigation of conditions governing the medical faculty, the committee of the Ontario Legislature now probing Toronto University management, yesterday afternoon heard the evidence of Dr. G. W. Ross, who contended that two schools of thought were contending for the control of the department. The struggle seemed to be essentially a deductive one, as he only knew of its existence as a result of occurrences which had come manifest to him while a member of the medical teaching staff.

An obscure influence, he stated, was at work, and had resulted in changes in laboratory methods, in departmental mergers, in the dismissal of men who were under the retirement age limit, and in the retention of men who were over it. One practical effect of the change in policy, which he and others upon the staff had disapproved, had been that the general laboratory work was removed further from the medical students, and was performed by ultra-scientists who were not practicing physicians. He regarded the withdrawal of these laboratory demonstrations from the observations of the students as tangibly lessening the efficiency of the medical course.

The committee is to continue its session tomorrow.

COAST LEAGUE GETS LANDIS' CONFIRMATION

Prexy McCarthy Makes Threat of Independent Action.

Chicago, Jan. 10.—Baseball Commissioner Landis has written President William H. McCarthy of the Pacific Coast League, confirming the report that the major leagues have adopted an increase in the optional players limit. In reply to McCarthy's inquiry, he said the National Association through Secretary Farrell had notified the majors of a resolution of protest, adopted by the minors before the major league action.

The resolution of the minors, the commissioner wrote, was regarded by the majors as a violation of the major-minor agreement which provided that all such amendments be acted upon jointly. The majors, thereupon, voted that in transferring a player to a National Association club, agreement with that club should be made, providing that the transferred player be subject to the draft.

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 10.—The Pacific Coast Baseball League will assert its right to act independently, "if the major leagues violate the agreement with the minors in regard to the drafting of players," Wm. H. McCarthy, president of the Coast League, said today.

MUST PROVE LABORER CAN'T DRINK $100,000

New York, Jan. 11.—Why should a laborer have $100,000 worth of liquor? That is what District Attorney Wallace of Queen's County wanted to know. Instead of finding out he has to answer why the laborer shouldn't have it.

The laborer is John Aloise, who has obtained an order directing the district attorney to show cause why $100,000 worth of whiskey, seized by federal agents, should not be returned to him. He says it is for his private use.

DISSOLVES QUEBEC HOUSE.

Quebec, Jan. 10.—Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, lieutenant-governor of Quebec, formally dissolved the fifteenth legislature of the province in an official proclamation issued this afternoon.

"METROPOLITAN AREA" PROVES BIG SUCCESS

D. J. McLean, Superintendent of Postal Service, Praises Border Cities' System.

D. J. McLean, district superintendent of postal service, who has just returned from conferences with postoffice officials in Detroit and Windsor, is well pleased with conditions in those two cities.

Mr. McLean was particularly impressed with the "Metropolitan area," inaugurated in the Windsor postoffice recently. Now, letters posted in Windsor, Sandwich, Walkerville and Ford, addressed to any one of the four municipalities may be despatched for two cents instead of three cents as formerly.

Postmaster J. P. Casgrain is elated with the success of the new system up to date, Mr. McLean said, and the residents of the border cities are more than pleased and are taking advantage of the drop letter rate.

For a long time the need has been felt in Windsor for such a system, and the postoffice department at Ottawa readily indorsed the movement when the recommendation that the two-cent rate be adopted was made by the Windsor officials.

ALLEGED ILLICIT STILL FOUND IN SANDWICH RAID

Special to The Advertiser.

Windsor, Jan. 10.—A still and other appliances, alleged to be used for making illicit liquor, were found at the home of Peter Berthiaume, a farmer living on the third concession, Sandwich East Township.

When his farm was raided by a detachment of Royal Canadian Mounted Police, under Constable F. H. Ingram, last night, Frank D. Cummeford, excise officer, Walkerville, who accompanied the officers, seized 100 gallons of mash for making whiskey, the police said. The case is to be heard Friday in the police court at Ford.

WHAT IS THE SECRET OF THIS MEDICINE'S WONDERFUL POWER?

Hundreds of men and women say they are amazed at its wonderful effects on disorders of the Stomach, Kidneys, Liver, Bowels and Blood. How does it wipe out disease?

"I started to believe my case was impossible to cure," says Mr. John Veine, Woodside, N. S. "After years of suffering from stomach trouble, got relief in short order," says Mr. James Archibald, Halifax, N. S. Hundreds of others who tossed about on Beds of Pain are now well.

Marvelous Banishment of Pain and Disease

If you have suffered agonies from rheumatism and neuralgia during the past months; if dyspepsia has gnawed at your vitals and tortured you from day to day; if kidney and liver troubles threaten to end your life; if poisoned and impure blood has shown its effect in boils, pimples and skin eruptions; if sleeplessness and nervousness have made you miserable and despondent; if headaches, sideaches and backaches give warning of approaching disorders; constipation, rheumatism, or stomach disorders have you in their grasp. If you have tried everything under the sun to get relief, and have failed, don't you think it is time you gave Dreco a chance to lift you out of the slough of misery and set you again on the path of perfect health and the full enjoyment of life, which is every man's and woman's God-given right?

Dreco seems to be the most talked of medicine today. Almost everywhere you go — in homes, offices, shops, factories, clubs and meeting places of all kinds, you are almost sure to hear someone tell of the wonderful results secured by this "Miracle Medicine," as it has been called. Scores who doubted the powers of this marvelous reconstructant and invigorant have been prevailed upon to give it a trial, and are now singing its praises.

Dreco is made entirely of natural herbs. It contains no minerals or anything to hurt the system.

Here are just a few signed statements, selected at random, from the many which are being received daily from men and women everywhere. Read them carefully and see how true they ring.

Spent Almost $1,000.

Nova Scotia Man Tells of Wonderful Relief Dreco Gave Him.

"I started to believe my case was impossible to cure, as I have spent almost $1,000 on my stomach and bladder," says Mr. John Veine, Woodside, N. S. "After talking with the Dreco expert at Kinley's, Limited, I decided to give Dreco a trial. What a happy day that was for me. The first bottle did me more good than anything I had ever taken before. I noticed a big improvement in just a few days. The pain in my bladder is gone; it had been there for years. My case was of long standing, but Dreco seems to be just what I needed, as I feel so much better in every way.

"My stomach and liver were in bad shape. Things I'd eat would sour in my stomach. I had to be very careful with my food, otherwise I was troubled with terrible gas. I always had a bad taste in my mouth. I was bilious and spots would float before my eyes. I was troubled with constipation. I did not sleep well and my nerves always seemed to be on edge.

"Dreco has made a new man of me. I have gained four pounds. That's why I so highly praise and recommend Dreco, for anyone suffering as I did should give Dreco a trial."

Dreco, the great herbal remedy, acts on the stomach and aids it in digesting the food, stops the formation of gas, relieves constipation, strengthens the kidneys, rouses the liver and relieves biliousness, headaches, bitter taste in the mouth, heartburn, coated tongue, and purifies the blood, thereby banishing rheumatism.

Such praise as this, told in the straightforward, honest language of a man, cannot but convince even the most skeptical that here is a medicine for which the world has long been waiting.

Read This Remarkable Story.

"My stomach troubled me for years. Gas would form after meals, and things I'd eat would sour," says Mr. James A. Archibald, 61 Queen street, Halifax, N. S., a trackman in the employ of the government.

"My liver was in bad shape, spots would float before my eyes, and I used to get terrible dizzy spells. I would get up in the morning feeling just as tired as before going to bed. I never felt rested. I was nervous and didn't sleep well. My appetite was very poor.

"You can imagine how happy I am since taking Dreco, and I am free of these troubles. I never have gas in my stomach now, I can eat whatever I want, my bowels act regularly, I sleep well and feel like a new man. I am highly pleased with it."

No, it is not a miracle; just another case where science steps in to save a human being after all hope has been abandoned.

Dreco is credited with hundreds of cases similar to the above. Cases where everything else had failed, and this new medicine discovery was tried as a last resort.

Dreco is not a cure-all; it is not a miracle worker, but there are very often cases of organic disorders that will not yield to a rational scientific treatment. That's why so many are telling grateful stories of the good this medicine is accomplishing. Try a bottle yourself and see. Do it today.

Dreco is being specially introduced in London by Standard Drug, Limited. Call at their store, 168 Dundas street (near Richmond), and ask for Mrs. Sell, the Dreco expert, and let her explain the merits of this great remedy. There is no charge, and she will tell you honestly if she believes Dreco will benefit you. Dreco is also sold in Standard Drug, Limited, branch stores at 252 Dundas street, 664 Dundas street, 344 Richmond street. Dreco is also sold in St. Thomas by Standard Drug, Limited, and in Woodstock by Standard Drug, Limited.

INDUSTRIALS ADVANCE ON NEW YORK MARKET

Street Largely Given Over to Series of Specialty Movements.

By STUART P. WEST.
Special to The Advertiser.

New York, N. Y., Jan. 11. — The stock market today was given over largely to a series of specialty movements. In the industrial list these were nearly all upward. In the railway section the individual moves were most of them down.

Nash Motors had a spectacular jump, opening up 12 points on the sale of 1,200 shares, and subsequently continuing the advance. This was due to an accumulation of buying orders influenced by statement that the company is earning $23 a share in a market in which offerings were exceedingly scarce.

Post Cereal was bid up again on talk of a recapitulation plan. The story was that the recent holders would be offered 2½ new shares for each share of old. The move in Beechnut Packing was set down as a pool operation, the motive back of which was the possibility of a further dividend increase later on, in connection with the advance in Owen's Bottle, the street had a report, for which, however, there was no confirmation whatever that a stock dividend was impending.

Other strong specialties included May Department Stores, Associated Dry Goods, Public Service of N. J., American Safety Razor and Austin Nichols. Railway shares, some of them, were freely sold, while the industrials were moving forward. An overnight drop of six points in Delaware and Hudson reflected the belief that directors when they meet later in the month will cut the dividend from the present nine per cent. The reason for this apprehension is found in the fact that the company has not been meeting its fixed charges this year, and, judging by the balance sheet of a year ago, which showed an excess of $3,332,000 liabilities over assets, is in no position to pay out dividends which have not been earned.

The St. Paul stocks also were actively sold.

WALL STREET

New York, Jan. 11.—(Noon). Pool operations in special stocks were vigorously carried on throughout the morning, strength of these issues infusing stability to the general list. Operations for the advance was aided by lower money rates, and the higher quotations for the principal European exchanges. Motor accessory, equipment, tobacco, food and merchandising shares were all bought at steadily rising prices. Railroad shares appeared unaffected by the liquidation of Delaware and Hudson, which extended its loss to nearly seven points. Canadian Pacific moved up a point, and most of the other active issues advanced fractionally. Some of the outstanding gains around noon were Nash Motors, up 12; Postum Cereal, up 5, and Hartmann Corporation, Woolworth, Austin Nichol, Loose Wiles, Pierce Oil, preferred, California Petroleum, International Paper and United Drug all up 2 to 4½ points. Associated Oil, Pacific Oil, the Pan-American issues and Remington Typewriter were heavy, the losses running from 1 to 2 points. Call money opened at 4 per cent.

EASTERN SUBSCRIBERS REFUSE TO MAKE PAYMENTS

Winnipeg, Jan. 10.—Refusal of subscribers in Eastern Canada to make any further payments of funds to the Western Canada Colonization Association was revealed at a meeting of directors of the organization held in Winnipeg Dec 12, according to a statement made today by George F. Chipman, editor of the Grain Growers' Guide.

Mr. Chipman was named a member of the operating committee of seven which was to have actual charge of carrying on the work of the association. This committee, Mr. Chipman explains in his statement, has never been called upon to function, and the members only attended one meeting of the directors in a consultative capacity. When they discovered the financial organization of the parent company had not been completed, they declined to accept further responsibility.

STANDARD EXCHANGE

Special to The Advertiser.

Toronto, Jan. 11. — Price changes on Standard Mining Exchange today were not of startling proportions, the larger gold issues, however, imparted an air of quiet strength to the list, which offset some minor recessions, turnover exceeding 143,000 shares.

Hollinger moved ahead to a well maintained price of $12.50, for net gain of five, while McIntyre was inactive. Lake Shore at $2.89 was up two. On odd lots Dome hardened to $43.50, Teck Hughes was mildly reactionary, selling off to 91ffl, for net loss of two. Later, however, it rallied to 91½, and closed with that price bid and 92 asked.

Clifton fell off from an unchanged price of 25 to 23¾, but later recovered to 24, off 1, while a similar loss was recorded on closing sales by Hattie at 26, and Vipond at 68.

Kirkland Lake was strong throughout the day following report of new vein encountered at mine. On close of 40½ it was up 1. Issues showing fractional gains on closing sales for day included Argonaut, Baldwin and Dominion Kirkland.

ARREST POSTMASTER FOR EDMONTON THEFT

Special to The Advertiser.

Edmonton, Alta., Jan. 11.—George Armstrong, Edmonton postmaster for the past six years, was arrested at his home by the city police at 4 o'clock this morning, on a federal warrant, charging him with the theft of $50,000 from the mails in the summer of 1919.

The theft at that time created a great sensation, as it was declared the money was taken from the Edmonton postoffice as it was being transferred from one branch of the Merchants Bank to another one, and was all in bank notes of small denominations.

Armstrong was mayor of Edmonton for two years in 1911 and 1912.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, Jan. 11. — The action brought by Prof. James A. Craig, formerly of the chair of oriental languages in the University of Toronto, against the board of governors of the university and Sir Robert Falconer, for a ninjunction restraining them from dismissing him from that post, or in the alternate for $50,000 damages, has been dismissed by Mr. Justice Orde, who holds that Professor Craig was given ample notice of his retirement, and that he had suffered no actionable wrong. The costs are payable by Prof. Craig.

The action against Sir Robert Falconer, the judgment pointed out, clearly cannot be based on breach of contract, because there was no contract between him and the plaintiff.

BUSINESS IMPROVING ON MARKET SQUARE

Many Dealers Attend, and Trading Is Quite Active.

Not since the holiday season has the local market displayed so much activity as that which was evident at this morning's session on the square. The weather was not of the best—and neither is the accommodation at London's shopping mart. A most disagreeable snowstorm swept across the open space, covering both dealers and wares with a thick blanket of snow. And the wonder is that so many braved the elements to cater to the needs of London citizens when so little protection is afforded from wind and snow.

However, for a mid-week market, a great improvement was noted. About a dozen loads of hay were in, and they met a ready sale at $12 to $13.50 a ton. The demand is good, and a large number of loads have been delivered here this week.

Two loads of oats were sold, the price being $1.35 per cwt.

An unusual offering locally for some time was a load of wheat, which sold at $1.17 a bushel. This price is said to be a little high, but as there has been no wheat in, this load was eagerly sought after.

Wood continues to be one of the main features. The sale was a little slow, and the prices just a trifle lower, from $4 to $5 a cord being paid.

Several loads of fresh pork were brought in, and were disposed of at 17c per pound for fronts and 20c for hinds.

There was quite a variation in the prices of eggs. There was apparently no fixed quotation, and the buyer could procure them all the way from 55c to 75c for the strictly fresh variety, and now that the spring pullets are coming through with their quota it is expected that the prices will recede somewhat. There is every indication of cheaper prices at the present time.

In the vegetable line there was a good showing. Carrots, turnips, parsnips and cabbage were there in abundance. The following prices were quoted: Carrots, 60c to 75c per bushel; turnips, 40c to 50c; parsnips, 85c to $1; cabbages, 60c to $1 dozen; celery, $1 to $1.25 dozen, with some extra large bunches at $1.75.

CHICAGO.

Chicago, Jan. 11.—Wheat scored a moderate advance in price today during the early dealings, firmness of quotations at Liverpool and possibly of more radical moves in the reparations crisis being factors that strengthened values. Dry weather southwest threatened damage to winter wheat was also a bullish influence. Offerings were light except from traders in a position to realize profits. The opening, which varied from unchanged figures to ⅜c higher was followed by gains all round.

Corn and oats paralleled the action of wheat. After opening a shade off to quarter up the corn market made a moderate general advance.

Oats started unchanged to ¼c lower, and later rose for all deliveries.

SECRET SERVICE IN RUSSIA
BY SIR PAUL DUKES.

ZORINSKY LEARNS 'TOO MUCH' AND BECOMES A NUISANCE

After Assisting Mrs. Marsh to Escape Into Finland, the Writer Returns to the Land of the "Reds" Under Another Name.

CHAPTER VII.

I found a new atmosphere developing in the city which is proudly entitled the "Metropolis of the World Revolution." Simultaneously with the increasing shortage of food and fuel and the growing embitterment of the masses, new tendencies were observable on the part of the ruling Communist party. Roughly, these tendencies might be classed as political or administrative, social and militarist.

Politically, the Communist party was being driven in view of popular discontent to tighten its control by every means on all branches of administrative function in the country. Thus the people's co-operative societies and trade unions were gradually being deprived of their liberties and independence and the "boss" system under Communist bosses was being introduced. At the same time elections had to be strictly "controlled," that is, manipulated in such a way that only Communists got elected.

As an offset to this, it was evident the Communists were beginning to realize that political "soundness" (that is, public confession of the Communist creed) was a bad substitute for administrative ability. The premium on ignorance was being replaced by a premium on intelligence and training, and bourgeois "specialists" of every calling, subject to rigid Communist control, were being encouraged to resume their avocations or accept posts with remunerative pay under the Soviet Government. Only two conditions were required, namely, that the individual renounce all claim to former property and all participation in politics. These overtures were made particularly to members of the liberal professions, doctors, nurses, matrons, teachers, actors, and artists, but also to industrial and commercial experts, and even landlords who were trained agriculturalists. Thus was established a compromise with the bourgeoise.

No People So Heroic.

No people in the world are so capable of heroic and self-sacrificing labor for purely altruistic motives as a certain type of Russian. I remember in the summer of 1918, when the persecution of the intelligentsia was at its height, drawing attention in an official report to the remarkable fact of the large number of educated Russians who had heroically stuck to their posts and were struggling in the face of adversity to save at least something from the general wreck. Such individuals might be found at times even within the ranks of "the party," but they cared little for the silly politics of Bolshevism and nothing whatever for the world revolution. Credit is due to the Communist at least to this extent, that they realized ultimately the value of such humane service, and, when they discovered it, encouraged it, especially if the credit for it accrued to themselves. The work done by heroic individuals of this type served largely to counterbalance the psychological effect of ever-increasing political and industrial slavery, and it has therefore been denounced as "treacherous" by some counter-revolutionary emigres, and especially by those in whose eyes the alleviation of the bitter lot of the Russian people was a minor detail compared with the task of restoring themselves to the seat of power.

The third growing tendency, the militarist, was the most interesting, and, incidentally, to me the most embarrassing. The stimulus to build a mighty Red army for world-revolutionary purposes was accentuated by the pressing need of mobilizing forces to beat off the counter-revolutionary, or "White," armies gathering on the outskirts of Russia, particularly in the south and east. The call for volunteers was a complete failure from the start, except in so far as people joined the Red army with the object of getting bigger rations until being sent to the front, and then deserting at the first opportunity. So mobilization orders increased in frequency and stringency and until I got some settled occupation I had to invent expedients to keep my passport papers up to date.

A Treasured Relic.

My friends the Finnish patrols had furnished me with a renewed document better worded than the last and with a later date, so I left the old one in Finland and now keep it as a treasured relic. As a precautionary measure I changed my name to Joseph Krylenko. But the time was coming when even those employees of the Extraordinary Commission who were not indispensable might be subject to mobilization. The Tsarist police agents, of course, and Chinese and other foreign hirelings, who eavesdropped and spied in the factories and public places, were indispensable, but the staff of clerical employees, one of whom I purported to be, might be cut down. So I had somehow to get a document showing I was exempt from military service.

It was Zorinsky who helped me out. I called him up the day after my return, eager to have news of Melnikoff. He asked me to come round to dinner and I deliberated with myself whether, having told him I expected to go to Moscow, I should let him know I had been to Finland. I decided to avoid the subject and say nothing at all.

Zorinsky greeted me warmly. So did his wife. As we seated ourselves at the dinner table I noticed there was still no lack of comestibles, though Elena Ivanovna, of course, complained.

"Your health, Pavel Ivanitch," exclaimed Zorinsky as usual, "glad to see you back. How are things over there?"

"Over where?" I queried.

He Knew Already.

So he knew already! It was a good thing for me that I had devoted a deal of thought to the enigmatical personality of my companion. I could not make him out. Personally, I disliked him intensely, yet he had already been of considerable service and in any case I needed his assistance to effect Melnikoff's release. On one occasion he had mentioned, in passing, that he knew Melnikoff's friend Ivan Sergeievitch, so it had been my intention to question the latter on the subject while in Finland, but he was away and I had seen no one else to ask. The upshot of my deliberations was that I resolved to cultivate Zorinsky's acquaintance for my own ends, but until I knew him better never to betray any true feelings of surprise, fear, or satisfaction.

Disconcerted, therefore, as I was by his knowledge of my movements, I managed to divert my undeniable confusion into an expression of disgust.

"Rotten," I replied with a good deal of emphasis, and, incidentally, of truth. "Absolutely rotten. If people here think Finland is going to do anything against the Bolsheviks they are mistaken. I never saw such a mess-up of factions and feuds in my life."

"But is there plenty to eat there?" put in Elena Ivanovna, this being the sole subject that interested her.

"Oh, yes, there is plenty to eat," and to her delight and envy I detailed a comprehensive list of delicacies unobtainable in Russia even by the theatrical world.

"It is a pity you did not let me put you across the bridge at Bielo'ostrof," observed Zorinsky, referring to his offer to assist me in getting across the frontier.

"Oh, it was all right," I said. "I had to leave at a moment's notice. It was a long and difficult walk, but not unpleasant."

"Both of Us?"

"I could have put you across quite simply," he said, "both of you."

"Who, 'both of us'?"

"Why, you and Mrs. Marsh, of course."

Phew! So he knew that, too!

"You seem to know a lot of things," I remarked, as casually as I could.

"It is my hobby," he replied, with his crooked, cynical smile. "You are to be congratulated, I must say, on Mrs. Marsh's escape. It was, I believe, very neatly executed. You didn't do it yourself, I suppose?"

"No," I said, "and, to tell the truth, I have no idea how it was done." I was prepared to swear by all the gods that I knew nothing of the affair.

"Nor have they any idea at No. 2 Gorohovaya," he said. "At least, so I am told." He appeared not to attach importance to the matter. "By the way," he continued a moment later, "I want to warn you against a fellow I have heard Marsh was in touch with. Alexei—Alexei—what's his name?—Alexei Fomitch something-or-other—I've forgotten the surname."

The Policeman!

"Ever met him?"

"Never heard of him," I said, indifferently.

"Look out if you do," said Zorinsky, "he is a German spy."

"Any idea where he lives?" I inquired, in the same tone.

"No, he is registered under a pseudonym, of course. But he doesn't interest me. I chanced to hear of him the other day and thought I would caution you."

Was it mere coincidence that Zorinsky mentioned the Policeman? I resolved to venture a query.

A German Spy.

"Any connection between Mrs. Marsh and this—er—German spy?" I asked casually.

"Not that I know of." For a moment a transitory flash appeared in his eyes. "You really think Mrs. Marsh was ignorant of how she escaped?" he added.

"I am positive. She hadn't the faintest notion."

Zorinsky was thoughtful. We changed the subject, but after a while he approached it again.

"It is impertinent of me to ask questions," he said, courteously, "but I cannot help being abstractly interested in your chivalrous rescue of Mrs. Marsh. I scarcely expect you to answer, but I should, indeed, be interested to know how you learned she was free."

"Why, very simply," I replied. "I met her quite by chance at a friend's house and offered to escort her across the frontier."

Zorinsky relapsed, and the subject was not mentioned again. Though it was clear he had somehow established a connection in his mind between the Policeman's name and that of Mrs. Marsh, my relief was intense to find him now on the wrong tack and apparently indifferent to the subject.

As on the occasion of my first visit to this interesting personage, I became so engrossed in subjects he introduced that I completely forgot Melnikoff, although the latter had been uppermost in my thoughts since I successfully landed Mrs. Marsh in Finland. Nor did the subject recur to mind until Zorinsky himself broached it.

"Well, I have lots of news for you," he said as we moved into the drawing-room for coffee. "In the first place, Vera Alexandrovna's cafe is rounded up and she's under lock and key."

"Was a Nice Girl."

He imparted this information in an indifferent tone.

"Are you not sorry for Vera Alexandrovna?" I said.

"Sorry? Why should one be? She was a nice girl, but foolish to keep a place like that, with all those stupid old fogey's babbling aloud like chatterboxes. It was bound to be found out."

I recalled that this was exactly what I had thought about the place myself.

"What induced you to frequent it?" I asked.

"Oh, just for company," he replied. "Sometimes one found someone to talk to. Lucky I was not there. The Bolsheviks got quite a haul, I am told, something like twenty people. I just happened to miss, and should have walked right into the trap next day had I not chanced to find out in time."

My misgivings, then, regarding Vera's secret cafe had been correct, and I was thankful I had fought shy of the place after my one visit. I was still thinking of her when Zorinsky thrust a big blue sheet of oil paper into my hands.

"What do you think of that?" he asked.

The paper was a pen-sketch of the Finnish Gulf, but for some time I could make neither head nor tail of the geometrical designs which covered it. Only when I read in the corner the words "Fortress of Cronstadt, Distribution of Mines," did I realize what the map really was.

"Plan of the minefields around Cronstadt and in the Finnish Gulf," explained Zorinsky. The mines lay in inner and outer fields, and the course was shown which a vessel would have to take to pass through safely. The plan proved subsequently to be quite correct.

"How did you get hold of it?" I asked, interested and amused.

Original Mine Map.

"Does it matter?" he said. "There is generally a way to do these things. That is the original. If you would like to make a copy of it, you must do so tonight. It must be returned to its locked drawer in the Admiralty not later than half-past nine tomorrow morning."

A few days later I secured through my regular admiralty connections, whom I met at the Journalist's, confirmation of this distribution of mines. They could not procure me the map, but they gave a list of the latitudes and longitudes, which tallied precisely with those shown on Zorinsky's plan.

While I was still examining the scheme of minefields, my ocmpanion produced two further papers and asked me to glance at them. I found them to be official certificates of exemption from military service on the ground of heart trouble, filled up with details, date of examination (two days previously), signatures of the officiating doctor, who was known to me by name, the doctor's assistant, and the proxy of the controling commissar. One was filled out in the name of Zorinsky. The other was complete—except for the name of the holder! A close examination and comparison of the signatures convinced me they were genuine. This was exactly the certificate I so much needed to avoid mobilization, and I began to think Zorinsky a genius—an evil genius, perhaps, but still a genius!

"One for each of us," he observed laconically. "The doctor is a good friend of mine. I needed one for myself, so I thought I might as well get one for you too.

Doctor Is Busy.

"At the end of the day the doctor told the commissar's assistant he had promised to examine two individuals delayed by business half an hour later. There was no need for the official to wait, he said; if he did not mind puttting his signature to the empty paper, he assured him it would be all right. He knew exactly what was the trouble with the two fellows; they were genuine cases, but their names had slipped his memory. Of course, the commissar's assistant might wait if he chose, but he assured him it was unnecessary. So the commissar's assistant signed the papers and departed. Shortly after the doctor's assistant did the same. The doctor waited three-quarters of an hour for his two cases. They did not arrive, and here are the exemption certificates. Will you fill in your name at once?"

What? My name! I suddenly recollected that I had never told Zorinsky what surname I was living under, nor shown him my papers, nor initiated him into any kind of personal confidence whatever. Nor had my reticence been accidental. At every house I frequented I was known by a different Christian name and patronymic (the Russian mode of address), and I felt intensely reluctant to disclose my assumed surname or show the passport in my possession.

The situation was one of great delicacy, however. Could I decently refuse to inscribe my name in Zorinsky's presence after the various favors he had shown me and the assistance he was lending me—especially by procuring me the very exemption certificate I so badly needed? Clearly it would be an offense. On the other hand, I could not invent another name and thus lose the document, since it would always have to be shown together with a regular passport. To gain time for reflection I picked up the certificate to examine it again.

A Prearranged Plot.

The longer I thought the clearer I realized that, genuine though the certificate undoubtedly was, the plot had been laid deliberately to make me disclose the name under which I was living! Had it been the Journalist, or even the Policeman, I should not have hesitated, certainly not have winced as I did now. But it was Zorinsky, the clever, cynical and mysterious Zorinsky, for whom I suddenly conceived, as I cast a sidelong glance at him, a most intense and overpowering repugnance.

Zorinsky caught my sidelong glance. He was lolling in a rocking-chair, with a bland expression on his misformed face as he swung forward and backward, intent on his nails. He looked up, and as our eyes met for the merest instant I saw he had not failed to note my hesitation.

I dropped into the desk chair and seized a pen.

"Certainly," I said, "I will inscribe my name at once. This is indeed a godsend."

Zorinsky rose and stood at my side. "You must imitate the writing," he said. "I am sorry I am not a draftsman to assist you."

I substituted a pencil for the pen, and began to draw my name in outline, copying letters from the handwriting on the certificate. I rapidly detected the essentials of the handwriting, and Zorinsky applauded admiringly as I traced the words—Joseph Krylenko. When they were done I finished them off in ink and laid down the pen, very satisfied.

"Occupation?" queried my companion as quietly as if he were asking the hour.

Occupation! A revolver shot at my ear could not have startled me more than this simple but completely unexpected query. The two blank lines I took to be left for the name only, but, looking closer, I saw that the second was, indeed, intended for the holder's business or occupation. The word "zaniata" (occupation) was not printed in full, but abbreviated—"zan.," while these three letters were concealed by the scrawling handwriting of the line below, denoting the age "thirty," written out in full.

"I managed somehow not to jump out of my seat. "Is it essential?" I asked. "I have no occupation."

Must Invent One.

"Then you must invent one," he replied. "You must have some sort of passport with you. What do you show the guards in the street? Copy whatever you have from that."

Cornered! I had put my foot in it nicely. Zorinsky was inquisitive for some reason or other to learn how I was living, and under what name, and had succeeded effectually in discovering part at least of what he wanted to know. There was nothing for it. I reluctantly drew my passport of the Extraordinary Commission from my pocket in order that I might copy the exact wording.

"May I see?" asked my companion, picking up the paper. I scrutinized his face as he slowly perused it. An amused smile flickered around his crooked mouth, one end of which jutted up into his cheek. "A very nice passport indeed," he said finally, looking with peculiar care at the signatures. "It will be a long time before you land in the cells of No. 2 Gorohovaya if you continue like this."

Grand Master H. A. Clements Officiates at Impressive Ceremony.

RECEIVES HONOR

On Wednesday evening the officers-elect of the four city lodges of Odd Fellows were installed into their chairs by the district deputy grand master, Bro. H. A. Clements, P.G., assisted by the following: Grand marshal, P. Pawley, P. G.; Grand Warden J. Coutts, P.G.; Grand Secretary F. James, P.G.; Grand Treasurer G. Heckman, P.G.; Grand Chaplain A. Lemery, P. G.; Grand Inside Guardian T. Alger, P.G.

The attendance was very large and the interest was sustained throughout. It can only be said that every one of the grand officers completed his work to the satisfaction of all present, showing an awakened interest in the ceremonies of the order. The installing staff was received by Bro. F. Barned, N.G., of Dominion Lodge, No. 48, with the honors due them.

Addresses were made by the D.D. G.M., the members of his staff, and the new officers, all of which reflected an optimism for the future.

Warren McRoberts was presented with the jewel of a past district deputy grand master by H. A. Clements, D.D.G.M., as a recognition of the excellent work done by him in the office he has just vacated. The address was read by the district secretary, Bro. J. McKenzie. Bro. McRoberts responded feelingly, and declared that although he had completed his term of office, he did not intend to drop interest in the work.

Bro. W. G. R. Bartram, the deputy grand master, gave a most interesting address on Odd Fellowship, making many valuable suggestions for improving the work of the lodges, and extending the influence of the order. He laid special emphasis on the means of retaining members and increasing interest, and expressed the desire to see this district holding an important place in the ranks of the order, when he succeeds to the chair of grand master.

Bro. A. Borland presented H. A. Clements, D. D. G. M., on behalf of Forest City Lodge, with a past grand's jewel, and to Bro. J. McKenzie, also of Forest City Lodge. Bro. F. H. Dixon, of Chorazin Lodge, was presented by the D. D. G. M. with a past grand's jewel. All the recipients expressed their thanks in feeling terms.

Bros. H. Spratt of Beacon Lodge, No. 201, Port Colborne; B. F. Brickenden of Dominion Lodge, and Joseph Simmons of Chorazin Lodge, were presented with veteran jewels.

At the conclusion of the evening's ceremonies the members enjoyed "eats," provided in plenty, with fraternal speeches, songs and merriment.

DECIDE TO COMPLETE BOYLE MEMORIAL

Building Committee Will Ask Powers to Advertise for Tenders.

Propose to Replace Empress Avenue School, Alleged To Be "Fire Trap."

The building committee of the board of education decided yesterday afternoon to ask the board for power to advertise for tenders for the four-room addition to Boyle Memorial School, which will complete the original plans. Plans for the addition were presented by the architect, and the total cost of the work was estimated at $30,400. Of this amount the board has $8,400 available, the amount remaining in the treasury. The board will ask the city council to issue debentures for $22,000 to cover the estimated cast of building, $19,000, and equipment, $3,000.

The inspector reviewed the need for additional accommodation at the school, a need, which, he said, has been urgent for some time. There were nine rooms occupied now, all overcrowded.

It was pointed out that when the main section of the school was constructed pains were taken to build so that the section could be added at each end, and would not involve needless expense. The heating plant installed was large enough to heat the entire building when completed. The pipes were extended to the end walls. In the same way large windows were placed at each end, which will now be replaced by doors.

The trustees were unanimous that a new school would be necessary to replace the Empress Avenue School. Trustee Mrs. J. A. Hunt referred to the present structure as a "fire-trap."

Trustee S. F. Lawrason said a new school had been promised, and the people wanted it, and it was up to the school board to give it to them. "I would rather delay the addition to the Boyle Memorial School, if that were possible, than put off the need of the West London people," he said.

It was decided to bring the matter before the board at the next meeting, on Thursday, Jan. 18, and it is altogether likely that sanction will be given for the preparation of estimates. It is not likely, however, that the school will be built this year.

The "extras," in connection with the Trafalgar School, now in process of construction, were brought up—glazed bricks for the lining of corridors and for use as baseboards, and the installation of an endless hoist for the removal of ashes from the basement. Both were lengthily discussed, and the latter was "shelved" for a time, as Trustee S. F. Lawrason wanted to look into the matter more carefully. The "hoist" proposed would cost $975, with an additional $175 for motor and belt. The hoist installed in the Collegiate, it was stated, had cost $2,100.

According to the communication from the brick company, the "salt glazed" bricks would cost an additional $700 over the cost of the brick originally proposed. This brick was unmarkable, however, and the extra cost was thought to be well worth the extra cleanliness forthcoming. The committee will recommend to the board that these bricks be purchased.

Three metal signs recently placed in the corridors of the public utilities building were ratified for payment, the account amounting to $18.

The question of free water for the 18 or 20 school rinks caused some discussion. Trustee Lawrason pointed out that the board might install equipment to use the water from the city side of the meters, and later the public utilities commission might retract the present privilege. This matter will be taken up with the public utilities immediately with a view to making some permanent arrangement if possible.

Recommendations will be forwarded to the board that the offer of Hyatt Bros. of $100 be accepted for the barn on the Trafalgar school property, and that the request of the Riverview Mothers' Club for the use of the Victoria school auditorium for an entertainment to obtain money for a piano be granted.

Just what sort of boiler to install in Trafalgar school has not yet been determined, and the question was brought out, given an airing and hung up again. During the session it was very evident that Trustee Lawrason is decidedly opposed to "extras" in the construction of schools. More than once he questioned one or another of the trustees who were members of last year's board about things that had to be added after plans were approved, and he stated emphatically that everything should be so well gone over before calling for tenders that no "extras" would be necessary. In the absence of Chairman B. N. Campbell, Ex-Chairman E. Smith occupied the chair.

Essex Secretary Gets Increase

Special to The Advertiser.

Windsor, Jan. 10.—Albert F. Healy was chosen chairman of the Essex Utilities Commission at an organization meeting this afternoon.

Opposition by Mayor Wilson of Windsor to a suggestion that the salary of Secretary Braid be increased to $3,000 precipitated a discussion that continued for more than an hour. The meeting finally decided to give the secretary an increase of $600. His previous salary was $2,400.

Engineer J. C. Keith was instructed to engage experts to prepare plans for the joint filtration plant that has been approved by all interested municipalities.

Ruscomb Woman Points Gun At Man Who Dug Holes in Front of Her Home

Special to The Advertiser.

Windsor, Jan. 11. — When Mrs. Emma Newbury, 35 years old, found Edward Trepanier digging holes in front of her home at Ruscomb, which threatened to impair parking facilities for her motor car, she aimed a revolver at his head and threatened to shoot him if he did not stop.

Trepanier fled to Windsor, where he charged Mrs. Newbury with threatening his life. She pleaded guilty in police court and was fined $20 and costs.

"He sassed me, and I only wanted to frighten him, judge," said Mrs. Newbury.

"There are altogether too many guns being pointed for one purpose or another these days," the magistrate replied. "I should send you to jail, but your family probably would suffer more than you. Although I am not inclined to be lenient, I will let you off with a fine."

Her bright brown eyes and cheerful face
Are so pleasant to recall;
She had a loving word for each,
And died beloved by all.

Life and Character Reading.

JANUARY 11.

People born on this date abhor flattery, but are exceedingly appreciative of the commendation, which they feel they have rightly earned. They are magnetic, and draw people to them by the working of the natural law, but they dislike any special demonstration of affection.

These people make the very finest teachers in the world, due to the fact that they are kind and gentle and are able to secure and hold the love of their students. Their pupils have a great desire to progress sometimes, for no other reason than to please their teacher.

The sign governing this date is Capricorn, and the governing planet is Saturn. The astral colors are silver-gray and black, and the birthstone is a white onyx.

WANT HORNS REMOVED FROM ALL THE CATTLE

Canadian Press Despatch.

Brandon, Man., Jan. 11.—A resolution strongly indorsing dehorning, and asking the federal government to take steps for legislatnon controlling the matter, was adopted at the annual meeting of the Manitoba Cattle Breeders Association here yesterday.

Harry Talbot, president of the Canadian Live Stock Exchange, advocated the amendment of the criminal code to make the shipping of horned cattle a criminal offense, but there was a feeling among delegates that this would be too drastic, and others doubted the ability to enforce such action.

JURY AT KINCARDINE SIFTS SLAYING OF KAY

DR. FOOTE TESTIFIES

Declares He Found Eight Bullet Wounds in Man's Body.

Special to The Advertiser by a Staff Reporter.

Kincardine, Jan. 11.—"We find that George Kay came to his death at his home, Nelson street, Kincardine, on Jan. 6, 1923, from bullet wounds." This was the verdict returned last night after fifteen minutes' deliberation by the coroner's jury, who were appointed to find when, where and how George Kay met his death last Saturday.

Donald P. McDonald, commonly known as "Scobie Dan," is in Walkerton jail, the self-confessed slayer of Kay. The verdict returned by the jury was indefinite, but no more indefinite than the evidence given here before Coroner Ferguson tonight. As a matter of strict fact, the jury brought in a verdict which contained more information than the evidence did.

No evidence was given to show that the Kay home is on Nelson street. Further, no evidence was introduced to show that Kay met his death in his home. The nearest to this was the evidence of Dr. Foote, who stated he was called to the Kay home about 1 o'clock Saturday, where he found Kay lying dead in an upper bedroom. He may have died any time within several hours, according to the doctor.

Eyewitnesses Not Present.

The reason for the indefiniteness of the evidence at the inquest is that the three eyewitnesses of the crime to which McDonald has confessed are not in a physical condition to give evidence.

Mrs. Dotha Kay, wife of the murdered man, is lying near death in her home as a result of a gunshot wound received at the same time that her husband was killed. Little Mildred Kay, the 7-year-old child, who saw her father and mother shot down, is in a very nervous state, and is not allowed to be questioned or to see any one. Mrs. Stout, a third eyewitness of the tragedy, is ill in bed, recovering from a serious operation. For these reasons the crown did not present its main evidence.

Stenographer Quits.

"I found eight small, round or oval wounds in the body of George Kay," testified Dr. W. S. Foote, physician, who performed the post-mortem. The first bullet found by the post-mortem entered the left side of the face and fractured the base of the skull. The second bullet found penetrated the back of the left shoulder. The third entered on the left side below the shoulder blade, and punctured behind the lungs and the heart and shattered a rib. "This wound caused death," stated the doctor.

"I can't take it, I can't take it," exclaimed the woman stenographer, Miss McDonald, who was taking the evidence at the inquest when Dr. Foote began to give detailed information about the wounds. She was replaced by a male stenographer.

Mrs. Annie Rutherford said she was just sitting down to a late dinner about half past twelve on Saturday when D. McDonald came to the door of her house and handed her a rifle and some shells.

Her son, Murrel Rutherford, said McDonald came to his house Friday night to borrow his rifle, a .22 Remington pump gun. The gun was empty when loaned and Rutherford gave him no shells with it.

"I never asked him what he wanted it for; he had it before," stated Rutherford.

"I think I asked him if he wanted it that afternoon, and he said no. There was no conversation about what he did with it," concluded the witness.

Admitted He Fired Shots.

Robert Ross, proprietor of a local poolroom, said Donald McDonald came into his place some time between 1:30 and 2 o'clock.

"Fred Anderson came in and said, 'George Kay has been shot.'

"I did it,' spoke up McDonald.

"I said, 'You what!' McDonald said, 'That's right, I shot him, Bob' After a moment McDonald continued, 'You know that affair that happened eight or nine years ago; I gave him a chance to square himself, but he wouldn't and I shot him.'"

Ross concluded, "McDonald stayed ten or fifteen minutes after that."

This evidence of the confession was confirmed by Clifton Perrin, who stated McDonald said, "He (Kay) tried to do me dirt nine years ago and I plugged him for it today."

Joseph Shelton, driver of the police car, said, "After we had been at the house of George Kay I asked McDonald, 'Scobie, what's happened that you done that for? He replied, 'I done it, and I am not sorry for it; I got even with him. My life hasn't been worth living these eight or nine years, and I fetched a paper for George to sign and he wouldn't.'"

"Unless you want any further evidence we don't propose to bring it out at the present time," stated Mr. Malcolmson.

Dr. Foote Recalled.

Dr. Foote was recalled and stated: "I was called to the home of the late George Kay slightly before 1 o'clock on Saturday, Jan. 6. I examined George Kay and found he was lying in a bedroom upstairs on his right side toward the front of the bed near the door."

"Was he alive or dead?" asked Mr. Malcolmson.

"He was dead," said the doctor. "He apparently had not been dead very long; the body was warm."

"How long had he been dead?"

Several hours was as close an estimate as the doctor could give him.

"Who sent for you, and why did you go to the Kay house?" asked a juror.

"I was called on the telephone, and what appeared to be a child's voice asked me to go. No reason was given."

"Then the Gifted Musician Called!"

Neither Janes nor his wife were real musicians. She could play a little and he liked music, but they weren't expert judges of it.

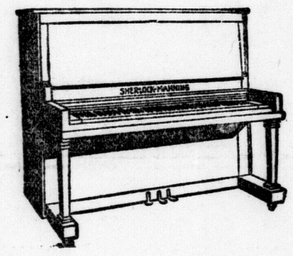

They had bought a Sherlock-Manning Piano. They liked it—but they weren't just sure that they had chosen wisely.

AND THEN THE GIFTED MUSICIAN CALLED

"A Sherlock-Manning," he exclaimed, in tones of genuine pleasure, as he ran his fingers over the keys. "My, but you have a good piano!"

The Janes were delighted. After all, they had chosen wisely, the verdict of this man of music proved it—and they were proud of their choice.

Curtain Rises On Time At Kiwanis Presentation

Rollicking, Happy Time Guaranteed at Grand Theatre When "Jollies," the Real Hit of the London Season, Is Staged.

Hark ye men with tardy wives! The Kiwanis Jollies starts at 8.15 sharp on Friday and Saturday nights, and if your better three-quarters are fond of delaying their advent to the theatre, see that on this occasion—if on no other—they make their "get-away" at an early hour in the evening.

The rising curtain will go up on time as above in spite of high winds, earthquakes, dog-fights,or further low marks in European exchange, or any other untoward incidents that may be prevalent at the time.

As mentioned elsewhere on this page, the Jollies is "the" show of the season and to miss any little part of it will be a distinct loss to anyone.

There is nothing more displeasing than to be interrupted by people coming late to the theatre. The good men of this community are especially requested to impress this fact on their wives or prospective wives, whichever the case may be, and see to it that the ladies have their eyebrows waved and their ears sufficiently well-concealed to let them leave the house in time to be in their seats at the Grand when the first curtain ascends.

The Kiwanis Jollies is divided into two parts: the first is a rollicking comedy playlet entitled,'The Inside Inn' which has a real plot running through its course. This is enhanced by the excellent harmony attained by the chorus and the antics of Ken Murray, as a darkey porter; Sam Amero, in the role of "Buttons" the bellboy, and Neil Stryker as the owner of a road show, all of whom are widely known as mirth provokers of the first water.

There will be ladies, too—any number of them—a stenographer, a French maid, a village gossip, and many more types from real life.

Mrs. Gladys Cornell, Miss Helen Holt, Miss Lyla Proctor, Miss Muriel Jackson and Mrs. Jean Parker, all of whom are singers of repute will take an active part in this section of the presentation.

In the second part of the "Inside Inn," a real old-time Bowery dancing scene will be enacted in which many local men and women will demonstrate their terpischorean and histronic abilities in an "honest to goodness" Bowery atmosphere.

The second act—the minstrel show proper—will be ably handled by George Fox as interlocutor. There are going to be eight end men, all with previous experience, and the quantity and quality of the jokes they have on hand will keep the audience in a happy mood for months to come.

Following is a complete list of all those in the Jollies:

The ladies—Miss Kathleen Heard as "Billie Barton"; Mrs. Muriel Jackson as "Peachie"; Miss Blanche Roberts as the village gossip; Miss Gladys Burns as "Trixie," the senographer; Miss Helen Holt as "Vivette," the French maid.

The men—Neil Stryker as "Willie Dunn," proprietor of the theatrical troupe; Ken. Murray as "Jazz," the porter; Sam Amero as the bellboy; Harry Morgan as the sissy hotel clerk.

Lady soloists in the comedy playlet, "The Inside Inn." Act I.—Mrs. Gladys Topping Cornell, Miss Helen Holt, Mrs. Jean Parker, Miss Muriel Jackson, Miss Lyla Proctor.

The ladies in Act I.—Miss Blanche

St. Clair, Miss Lillian Santo, Miss Elda Cossey, Miss Pearl Mants, Miss Crissy Wright, Miss Viola Williams, Miss Alma St. Clair, Miss Dorothy Dickerson, Mrs. William Storie, Miss Gerry Hadden, Miss Elsie Crocker, Miss Alice Baker, Miss Marguerite McLeish, Miss Dorothy Nichols.

Chorus—Alfred Henderson, Gordon Bridgeman, Walter Downham, Roy Williams, Harry Morgan, Roy Lyons, George Dicks, Ed. Hayden, Ernie Sherlock, Bill Murray, George Fraser, Ed. Gairns, Frank Gray, Jack Pollock, Norman Curtis, Jack Tennant, Paul Quick, Fred Ross, Bill Gough, Sid Jones, Bob Darragh, Leonard Hindson, Frank McLachlin, Gordon Thompson.

TORONTO PROFESSOR LIQUEFIES HELIUM GAS

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, Jan. 11—Liquefaction of helium gas was accomplished in the laboratory of the University of Toronto by Professor John Cunningham McLennan today. The feat had never been performed before outside of Holland.

This achievement is another step towards the solution of many problems connected with refrigeration. The experiments were begun two years ago, following the discovery made by Professor McLennan that helium could be obtained in large quantities from the natural gases in Canada, especially in the district near Bow Island, about 200 miles to the southeast of Calgary.

Helium was liquefied in small quantities for the first time in 1908 by Professor Kammerlingh Onnes of Holland, but at the time little helium was available, and it was exceedingly expensive, costing at the rate of about $1,500 per cubic foot.

In 1919 Professor McLennan designed and operated a plant at Calgary for the extraction of helium from natural gas, and showed that it could be produced at a cost considerably less than ten cents per cubic foot.

The experiments which terminated so successfully today are regarded as the beginnings of an attempt to utilize industrially a gas that constitutes one of Canada's natural resources.

Helium is non-inflammable, non-explosive, and possesses 92 per cent of the lifting power of hydrogen, making it a most suitable filling for airship envelopes.

QUESTIONS THE MOTIVES OF MURDER WITNESSES

Marion, Ill., Jan. 10.—Counsel for the defense in the Herrin massacre trial attempted today to show that testimony of some state's witnesses was given in hope of receiving a reward of $100,000 for evidence helping to convict the five men accused of murdering Howard Hoffman.

Wm. Goodman, one of the state's star witnesses, was called to the stand today for further cross-examination.

"Did you not testify you saw Otis Clark in the mob on the 22nd of June, because you hoped to get a reward of $1,000?" counsel for the defense asked.

"That isn't true," the witness replied. Several other state witnesses were quizzed along the same lines, and all gave him negative answers.

What Press Agents Say About Coming Events

Pauline Harvey, the prima donna with Tom McKnight's girl and music show, "Everygirl," has a big following in Canada, who have watched her development with interest. For eight years she has been before the public constantly, several seasons as the fairy queen in pantomimes, in which her wonderful soprano voice has given rare pleasure.

In "everygirl" she has four of the best songs of her career, and her recent study for opera has given her voice an addded quality and fullness.

In addition to her numbers, she has been given important parts in several of the sixteen different scenes or eptsodes into which the piece is divided. In the much-talked-of harem scene she appears as Fatima, the sultan's first wife, and demonstrates her ability to handle the most delicate comedy situation with an artfulness and charm that marks her as a comedian of distinction.

"Everygirl" will be the attraction at the Majestic Theatre all next week, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. It is a musical play, the story being of a firl in the flapper stage of her development. The composite life of most any girl is embodied in "Everygirl," and a musical revue in two acts and sixteen episodes, describing the various phases of her girlhood, has been contrived by the authors, George Gwynn Garrette and Tom McKnight.

Among the caste of Canadian favorites are Hudy Davis, Pauline Harvey, Dorothy, Babs and Edith Mackay and many others of note. Tom McKnight, who is a versatile author-actor-manager, was formerly with Henry W. Savage and Mort Singer, and has produced some of the biggest musical shows of the decade. His home is in Toronto, and he has been director of the Robins Players at the Royal Alexandra Theatre during many of their summer engagements in that city. His experience as a dramatic director has stood him in good stead while making the production of "Everygirl," as there are several bits of dramatic intensity and quite a few thrills in the life of "Everygirl" as it has been mirrored in the stage presentation.

BARTHELMESS IN CUBA FOR "THE BRIGHT SHAWL"

Richard Barthelmess, the screen star, called on Alfredo Zayas, president of the Cuban republic, while he was in Havana, filming the exteriors of "The Bright Shawl" which will follow "Fury," as his starring vehicle. Mr. Barthelmess was received in the $2,000,000 home Cuba provides for its president. This call was considered to be an unusual honor to be paid to a screen star, for the president had been in ill health, and was denying himself to all visitors. However, upon learning that the story dealt with the early struggle for Cuba's independence, the president was most anxious to co-operate to see that everything was portrayed true to history.

"President Zayas is a scholarly executive, who shows himself deeply concerned with the affairs of his republic," said Mr. Barthelmess. "My interview with him was most pleasing. He is interested in the screen as a great art, and inquired most solicitously as to how we were faring in getting historical backgrounds. When I told him that we were that day working in the Cathedral square, using an old building, he was especially pleased.

"'That house is the oldest there is in Cuba,' he told me. 'It was the first stone place built here, dating back to 1552. When the French pirates burned Havana, that was the only building to withstand the flames.'"

Riviera Garden Lovely Setting

Triumph of Realism Achieved in "Enemies of Women."

Vieing in its remarkable beauty with one of the most gorgeous spots on the Cote d'Azur, after which it was fashioned, is a scene in Cosmopolitan's forthcoming super-special, "The Enemies of Women," from the famous story by Vicente Blasco Ibenez.

This scene, designed by Joseph Urban, the celebrated scenic artist, is a replica of the magnificent gardens of the Villa Maryland, Cap Ferest, near Nice, said to be the most beautiful villa on the Cote d'Azur. The whole floor of the gigantic studio was converted into a garden, making one of the largest and most magnificent sets ever filmed. Huge palm trees and grape arbors cause it to strikingly resemble the original. At one side is an artificial lake six feet deep. It is in this scene that Prince Lubimoff, played by Lionel Barrymore, who is featured in the production, decides to dissipate the remnants of his once great fortune on a party, the extravagance of which makes his previous efforts as a host seem tame. When the party grows wildest scores of beautiful women in evening clothes, are tumbled into the lake for the entertainment of the host. The scene of revelry is described as one of the most fascinating ever filmed.

POSSIBILITIES OF RADIO SEEN IN NEILAN RELEASE

Marshall Neilan has, it is said, demonstrated the great possibilities of the radio in his latest First National film, "Minnie." It is a picture of what we may expect in the future. Neilan's screen story shows a man working on an invention to transmit power by radio. For fifteen years he has worked on the idea, spending his own money and that of his friends. These friends begin to feel that their money has been wasted and finally when the man feels that all his efforts have failed he becomes so exercised that he takes a hammer and smashes what he believes to be the integral part of his big mechanism. Presto! The thing works! The trucks begin to move around the field. The water pumps bring forth a huge supply of water from the earth. There is joy everywhere. Power can be transmitted through the air. Everybody becomes rich. And poor forlorn little Minnie, daughter of the inventor, is transformed with wealth and opportunity and fine clothes, like the ugly duckling that became a beautiful swan, from a homely little hotel drudge to a lovely and graceful creature who at last finds real happiness and romance in life.

INCOME TAX REVEALS MORE CONCERNS LIABLE

Toronto, Jan. 10.—A new group of citizens has been added to those liable to civic income tax as a resul tof last year's legislation.

Unincorporated companies, partnerships and retailers must in future pay income tax, if their income exceeds their business assessmbent and statutory exemption.

Law partnerships have been taxed on income for some years, but other partnerships have escaped. As a result, Toronto's assessment department is sending out 100,000 income tax notices this year as compared with 85,000 last year.

Border Rum-Runners Threaten To Kill Officer if He Arrests Any of "Gang"

Special to The Advertiser.

Windsor, Jan. 11.—A letter containing threats of death if he arrested another member of "their gang" was received yesterday by Sergt. Archie Birtwhistle, in charge of a detachment of Royal Canadian Mounted Police at Ford. The letter was postmarked at Detroit and was signed in an undecipherable scrawl above the word "Rabbi." The letter referred to the arrest by Birtwhistle of several men found importing moonshine whiskey into Windsor, the men later being convicted and fined sums of from $800 to $1,000. Sergeant Birtwhistle intimated that he would take no notice of the letter.

Dwight Seymour, 35, bond salesman living at Detroit Athletic Club, was arrested there this afternoon on a larceny warrant sworn to by a fellow-member of the club, Paul Strasburg, who also lives at the institution.

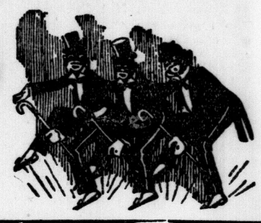

The warrant charges larceny by conversion. Detectives who made the arrest say Strasburg told them Seymour had purchased $4,000 worth of stock for him which he failed to deliver. Strasburg is head of the Strasburg Dancing Academy and is known in yachting circles here as an enthusiastic speedboat owner and pilot.

With Darky Humor to Beguile Kiwanis Show Will Raise a Smile

Oh, listen lads and lasses—
Here's a tale I've writ for you,
It's full of punk and awful rhyme,

Kiwanis minstrels, sixty strong,
With darky jokes and merry quips,
Are here to cheer the goodly throng,
And bring the laughter to their lips.

They're at the Grand on Friday night,
And twice the next day, too,
So take your sweetie all bedight,
And watch her giggle, guggle, coo.

Three hours of fun will be the treat—
From best resources we are told—
So put some action in your feet,
And get those tickets 'ere they're sold.

Go not there, O reader dear,
For requiems or accents drear;
They're out to joke and sport a while,

So if you want to shake your teeth,
And bend your ribs as ne'er before,
Just ditch your pain and woe and grief,
And gang your friends around the door
Which leads to this good show supreme
That's bound to make you laugh in glee
And rise aloft and howl and scream—

Proceeds of Great Show For Poor Boys of London

Funds Raised To Be Spent in Bettering Welfare of Under-Privileged Lads, Who Are Handicapped by Lack of Normal Home Conditions.

The big show—THE show of the season—will grace the boards at the Grand Opera House next Friday and Saturday nights and Saturday afternoon. What show? Why, the Kiwanis Jollies, the Minstrel presentation de luxe, which is being put on with the intention of aiding these lads and giving them many of the opportunities of their more fortunate fellows that the local Kiwanis Club has taken this means of raising funds for their particular benefit.

In assuming this undertaking the businessmen who compose this club are living up to the motto of the international Kiwanis: "We Build," in so far that they are laying the foundation of character in the hearts of these lads by supplying them with many material and social needs, which are all-important to their development into responsible and valuable citizens.

Right in this city there are scores of boys who are being befriended by the Kiwanis Club. The Kiwanians work right with these youths, and their advice and help is of the homely and unassuming kind. The boys know that these men regard them in the light of younger brothers, and are proving a real help to them in lending a helping hand along the stony road of life.

The co-operation of the citizens at large will prove a material help to the Kiwanis Club in this endeavor, and Londoners can show their appreciation in no better way than by turning out in such numbers as to warrant the minstrel show being a huge success, that the Kiwanians may "carry on" in this splendid plan.

to raise money for the betterment of the under-privileged boys of this city—those youngsters who, through no fault of their own, are handicapped in some or many ways in the battle of life.

You have all seen them—little fellows who are orphans perhaps and have no parents or "big brother" to lend them a helping hand—they are deprived of that home atmosphere which is so essential if they are to grow up into good citizens and worthy members of society, and it is

Special to The Advertiser.

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 11.—Ship crews on the Pacific are no longer under suspicion of marking Chinese chow dogs for Chinese "chow mein" the moment they appear aboard ship. Instead, as the result of investigations by the admiral, Oriental line steamship men are asking themselves whether the Chinese are deliberately poisoning the pups bought in the Orient for shipment to Canada and the United States.

Of more than one hundred dogs purchased by passengers on the company's ships in recent ships scarcely one has survived. They seemed hale and hearty when bought, but after a few days at sea became ill.

It was suggested at first that the Chinese stewards were living like lords on puppy dog flanks, but this suspicion has now been dispelled with the performance of an autopsy on one of the dogs, with the discovery of a quantity of ground glass in its stomach. Shipping men think the Chinese may be fearful the industry, which is a lucrative one, may be transplanted to this country, and are simply guarding against it by poisoning the animals.

LOCAL INTEREST KEEN IN RAILWAY MEETING

Maintenance-of-Way Bylaws Expected To Be Altered On G. T. R.

In Mr. Hessel's opinion, there is little likelihood of the wage question being introduced at the conference, as it is now thought of as a closed book on Canadian railroads.

After months of untiring efforts on the parts of the union officials, the controversy was settled early in December, when an agreement was concluded between the wage sub-committee of the Railway Association of Canada and the men's committee of the United Brotherhood of Maintenance-of-Way Employees and the Railway Shop Laborers, providing that, retroactive to November 1, the rates of pay for employees covered by the agreement were increased on an average of two cents an hour.

Approximately 40,000 Canadian railway employees, who come under the category of maintenance-of-way men, benefitted by the new arrangement.

Maintenance-of-way employees in the London division of the G. T. R., numbering about 700, are taking a keen interest in the meeting of the Grand Trunk joint protective board to be held in Montreal Jan. 16 for the purpose of changing the maintenance-of-way bylaws of the road to conform with the new constitution adopted at the Detroit conference a few months ago.

H. H. Hessel of this city, o well-known figure in international maintenance-of-way circles, will attend the meeting as a member of the board, and as a representative of the men in this district.

This special conference called by Chairman George H. Cummings will be one of the most important gatherings of maintenance-of-way men held in Montreal for some months, Mr. Hessel stated this morning. The chief item of business will be the revision of the bylaws, although developments by that date may necessitate the consideration of other important questions, the local official said.

MULCAHY MAY RETIRE FROM IRISH COMMAND

Associated Press Despatch.

London, Jan. 11.—Richard Mulcahy, minister of defence in the Free State, will soon relinquish the command of the Irish National Army, according to a Dublin despatch to the Daily News. The correspondent asserts that Mulcahy will be succeeded as chief of staff by Gen. W. Murphy, but that he will retain his place in the cabinet.

Plan Acclamation Route For Mayor Wenige In 1924

Man-On-the-Street Suggests Intimate Reforms To Be Added To "Slashing" Program Proposed by New Chief Magistrate.

In all municipal political platforms many citizens believe there is a woeful absence of reference to the really vital concerns of mankind.

The pre-election promises of those who would woo local favor deal only with vague, far-off reforms, such as juvenile courts, reduced civic expenditures, and so on. What bachelor cares about a juvenile court? What citizen making under a thousand a year cares about expenditures. He isn't taxed much anyway.

What Mr. Man-on-the-street longs for are intimate reforms which touch his personal needs; smooth the path of his daily comings and goings; bring solace and comfort into his immediate sphere of activity.

For the benefit of Mayor Wenige and his "smashing" platform, therefore, the man on the street wishes it to be known that he wants more consideration. The mayor, like Brann, is a provincial smasher of shams. Let him then take heed of the common citizen's complaints. He will find appended a few suggestions which, should he embrace them in his platform and secure their enforcement, would entitle him to re-election next year by acclamation.

Round-up Barbers.

A law forbidding all barbers informing customers that their skin is in a frightfully unhealthy condition, and that they have hideous scalp diseases, which will induce total baldness within a year.

A law preventing stenographers from calling clerks by their first names while insisting that the aforesaid clerks refer to the aforesaid stenogs as "Miss So-and-so."

A law requiring that all telephones be equipped with a device by which a subscriber can immediately electrocute any operator who rolls the "r" in "three," or in any way gets fresh with unmarried males.

A law prohibiting restaurants from putting "old fashioned strawberry short cake" on the menu, and then serving a slice of sweet sponge cake, surmounted by a layer of whipped cream and four dry strawberries.

A law demanding on penalty of decapitation that local police remove from their faces that expression of sublime contempt with which they gaze on citizens who ask them the direction of the Grand Trunk station.

A law permitting any telephone subscriber, after having been given the wrong number twice and perfunctorily asked to excuse it please, to yank the instrument from its mooring and hurl it across the street.

A law providing for the legal murder of any person accosting an acquaintance and remarking, "My, but your looking poorly today?"

Curb Spinsters.

A law prohibiting spinsters from relating how they turned down the handsome Mr. So-and-So because of the wicked glitter in his eye.

A law providing for the immediate arrest of salesmen who tell of recipes for home brew, whiskey parties and bootleggers.

A law providing for the extermination of sweet young things who, when shown the latest arrival in the family of their girl friends remark, with subtle originality, "Isn't he just too cute."

A law making it imperative for railroads to equip their cars with windows which an ordinarily strong and healthy man can open, or to permit a passenger to place his foot through any window which resists his efforts.

A law necessitating the postoffice to furnish pens with which it is humanly possible to write, and to change their public blotters at least semi-annually.

A law conferring legal right upon a citizen, during a hot spell, to execute, in whatever manner he chooses, any person who asks him, "Is it warm enough for you?"

A law compelling on penalty of reading the entire dictionary, all persons, English and other, to pronounce the word "often" "Of-en" and not "Of-Ten."

CABINET TO CONFIRM GREAT BRITAIN'S STAND

Meet to Discuss Important Question Since Law Became Premier.

London, Jan. 11.—The British cabinet went into session this morning to consider the most important issues that have arisen since Bonar Law assumed the premiership, but it is authoritatively stated that the results of the meeting are not likely to alter the semi-officially announced British policy in dealing with France over the present Rhineland situation. The cabinet, it is understood, will confirm Great Britain's desire to maintain the entente cordiale despite the present differences with France over the methods of obtaining reparations from Germany.

Official notice of withdrawal of the U. S. forces from the Rhine was received today at the foreign office and laid before the ministers in Downing street, but the British policy of maintaining troops in the Rhineland is not expected to be changed by the United States action. The British military at Cologne, it is pointed out, are doing everything possible to assist the French forces in carrying out Premier Poincare's plans.

The British policy is being shaped with a view to such future developments as will again make possible a solid Franco-British front, and nothing, it is said, will be done in any way to embarrass the French during the critical days lying before them in the Rhineland. The British members of the ambassadors' council, the Rhineland commission, and the reparations commission will not be withdrawn, and Sir John Bradbury, the representative on the latter body, will return to Paris within a week.

ONE MILLION PEOPLE TO FIND NEW HOMES

Lausanne Conference Decides Exchange of Populations Necessary.

Associated Press Despatch.

Lausanne, Jan. 11.—One million human lives are vitally affected by the decision reached by the Near Eastern conference yesterday. One million Moslems and Christians who live either in Turkey or Greece, must give up their farms in the country and their homes and business places in the villages, towns and cities, and move on to find farms, homes and occupations elsewhere.

In the interest of future peace between Turkey and Greece the Mohammedans who dwell in the Hellenic peninsula must henceforth reside in Turkey, and Greek Christians who dwell in Turkey must emigrate to Greece.

That peace in some form will be signed at Lausanne seems more probable in consequence of today's developments. It is reported that the Mosul oil dispute will be settled outside the conference, and earnest efforts are being made to find some satisfactory formula concerning judicial guarantees for foreign residents in Turkey, which will be acceptable to the Turks.

As an exception to the general arrangements for the compulsory exchange of populations, the Greek colony in Constantinople will be allowed to remain there. The compulsory exchange will be carried out as humanely and justly as possible under the direction of a special commission, which will appraise the values of all individual properties and endeavor to effect a reasonable exchange of families and communities.

The stupendous nature of the problem of readjustment of populations is realized by everybody, and it will be especially difficult for Greece, whose national life has been disorganized by the presence of almost a million Greek and Armenian refugees.

Had Bad Pains In Her Heart
Nerves Were Very Bad

Mrs. John Case, R. R. No. 4, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "I wish to say that I have been bothered very much with my heart and nerves. I doctored with two different doctors, but did not find much relief. I would have such bad pains in my heart, at times, I would be almost afraid to move or breathe, and at night I could not sleep. If the pains in my heart were gone, my nerves would be so bad I could not lie still and would only get a little sleep by being tired out. My stomach was also very bad and I could eat but very little, and then only certain things or I would have so much distress which always made my heart worse.

I had been suffering for nearly two years until one day I was talking to our druggist about the way I felt. He advised me to give Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills a fair trial. I have now taken five boxes and am feeling so much better, I am able to do my own work, and can eat anything I wish. I cannot praise
Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills

SAYS REDUCED INCOME DANGER TO HAPPINESS

Rev. Agnew Urges Newly-Weds to Adjust Living to Pay Envelope.

NEED ADAPTABILITY

Stresses Love as Foundation Upon Which to Build Attractive Home Environment.

Two paychecks before marriage and one after constitute a danger to the home happiness of many young people getting married at this stage of the world's history, according to Rev. J. A. Agnew, who Tuesday evening addressed the Wortley Road Mothers' Club on the subject of "Home and School."

The young couple under the circumstances, he pointed out, must adjust themselves to a much reduced scale of income, the girl who has been independent before her marriage requires great common sense and adaptability to accomplish this without family jars.

"If she is a sensible girl," said the speaker, "she will overcome the difficulties arising from new conditions, keep well within the family income, and the home will be built up in harmony."

As environment for young life, the home, said Mr. Agnew, should be made the most attractive place in the world for children. This could only be possible where it was founded on love.

Church Welds Together.

For the education of the children and development of character, he continued, the home and school, very closely related, were incomplete without the church to weld them together.

Mrs. W. S. Lowe presided, and in connection with the business, it was decided to hold a series of sewing teas to make up into garments, for the Child Welfare Association, a bale of flannelette, which the club had purchased. Mrs. R. Wray and Mrs. A. Jarvis were appointed a committee to arrange for the teas, Mrs. Lowe offering her home, 140 Duchess avenue, for the first to be held Tuesday evening, January 16.

The program, apart from Mr. Agnew's address, was presented by the pupils of T. A. Willis' class, grade 6, and took the form of a sketch, "King and Jester," which proved most interesting to the audience of eighty or more women present.

Refreshments were served at the close.

BOYLE MEMORIAL CLUB.

The January meeting of the Boyle Memorial Mothers' Club took the form Tuesday evening of "Child Welfare Night," when Miss Bertha Smith, superintendent of child welfare nurses, gave a stirring address on the work and statistics to demonstrate the extent to which the infant death rate has been reduced in London since the nursing service was inaugurated three or four years ago.

She also gave a demonstration of the standard layette of the association, which includes the "bare necessities" in hygienic little garments for the baby. Very much interested were the club members in the undercloothing for the little folks cut down from old underwear that had done duty for adults. Patterns for the layette were explained.

Some time ago, when the purchase of a car to facilitate the work of the nurses was under consideration, Mrs. J. S. Tennant held a benefit tea for the fund, on behalf of the Boyle Memorial Club, at her home, Quebec street. Since the car proposition has been dropped for the present, the proceeds of the tea, $10.50, were turned over to Miss Smith to be used for buying milk, or whatever was most needed in her work.

Several of the members of the club had attended the meeting the previous evening addressed by Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst on the subject of social hygiene, and were so enthusiastic in their interest that it was decided to send a medical speaker to present the subject at the February meeting of the club.

Miss Alice Miller gave a couple of readings appropriate to the theme of child welfare, and Miss Ardell Tennant an instrumental.

EMPRESS AVENUE CLUB.

The great desirability of more modern methods of dealing with child delinquents in London was emphasized by Superintendent W. E. Kelly, of the Children's Aid Society, in an address delivered Tuesday evening on the subject of the work of the aid at the regular meeting of the Empress Avenue Mothers' Club.

"For lack of modern methods," said Mr. Kelly, "We are losing children day by day in London, to become wasters instead of producers, children, who, with better care, would be held for good citizenship."

An illuminating description was given of the broad work of the society outside the shelter, the efforts that are put forth to reconstruct homes and establish them on a firm foundation, in order that children may be reared in their own homes wherever possible.

"When this is out of the question," he said, "There is no better place to which they can be taken than the shelter." In the past year, he stated, he had dealt with 1,312 children outside the shelter.

The Empress Avenue Club, of which Mrs. C. M. Linnell is president, decided to do sewing in the immediate future for families of which Mr. Kelly supplied the names.

The miscellaneous program for the evening included a solo by Miss Madeline Schreiber, reading by Jean Coleman, and instrumental duet by Herbert Bird and Lorne Botterill.

RIVERVIEW CLUB.

A delightful exchange of club courtesies was enjoyed at the very largely attended meeting Tuesday evening of the Riverview Mothers' Club, when the members of the Aberdeen Mothers' Club were guests of the occasion, providing the program.

Mrs. C. R. Walker, president of the Riverview Mothers' Club presided at the business part of the meeting, extending a gracious greeting to the sister club. It was decided to ask Mrs. F. W. Hughes, president of the Women's Canadian Club, to address the February meeting, and also to ask the Ridout Street Methodist players to put on a play, which has been meeting with great success, on behalf of the club in the near future.

Mrs. H. Winnett gave an inspiring address on the new year's spirit, one point emphasized was that there can never be happiness in any relationships where there is misunderstanding.

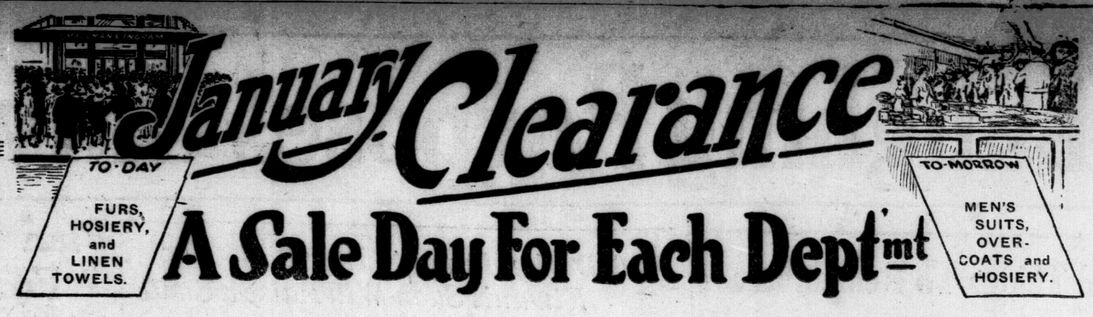

Mrs. Bartlett, president of the Aberdeen Mothers' Club, took the chair for the program, introducing Miss Viola Leff, a clever young reader; the Misses Cook, who gave a vocal duet, and Miss Edna Wardell, pianist. Miss Wardell and Mrs. Clifford played the accompaniments.

An opportunity to get acquainted was afforded over the coffee cups after the formal program and business.

BLAMES GERMAN CRUELTY FOR BROTHER'S DOWNFALL

McDonald Sisters, of Kincardine, Tell How Prison Camp Treatment Resulted in Change of Donald McDonald's Disposition—Avoided Companions and Had But Little to Say.

Kincardine, Jan. 11—"It's too awful to talk about," said Miss Mary McDonald to The Advertiser yesterday. She and her sister Annie sat downstairs in the Kincardine town hall while the inquent was being held upstairs into the death of the man whom their brother has confessed to shooting. The two sisters sat pale-faced and with quivering lips worrying over their brother, who has not been the same ever since he came back from overseas.

Now a neighbor lies dead, and that neighbor's wife possibly dying as a result of the shooting which their brother has admitted. Tomorrow they are going over to see their brother in the Walkerton jail.

"At first we did not want to see any newspaper reporters," the sisters explained, "but so many terrible things have been printed that now we want you to get everything straight. My brother has never been the same since he came back from overseas, said Miss Mary McDonald.

"He has not been the same man at all," supplemented her sister Annie. Together they told their brother's military history. His full name is Donald Paul McDonald, aged 31 years. On March 4, 1916, he enlisted in the 160th Bruce Battalion, going overseas in October of that year. He went to France in February, 1918, with the 18th Battalion.

Then on August 28, 1918, began what his family blame for the present tragedy. This was the date he was taken prisoner by the Germans. He suffered many terrible things in the German prison camp before he got back to England on December 5, 1918, said the sisters.

He never said much about it, but we know he told one of the boys that he had to hold out his hand while they pulled the fingernails right out. Just after he was captured, a German soldier hit him in the face with the butt of his rifle when he attempted to walk on a smooth bit of road. We think this is what broke his nose.

He never said much, but he had many scars when he came home from the Giessen prison camp. McDonald's family would like if any of the men who saw him just after he got out of prison camp would communicate with them. He has been very quiet ever since he came home, said Miss McDonald. He did not go out with the boys, because he thought they did not like him any more. They like him though, and were awfully good to him, but we could not get him to see it.

Donald used to be very restless at times, particularly on nights connected with his military career, on the anniversary of when he was captured, or of armistice night, or of the big drives. We would hear him going up and downstairs all night. Then switching to the tragedy of Saturday last, the sister said there was absolutely no bad feeling with the Kays, no reason at all that we can see.
