New York, Oct. 14.—A London special says: Speaking at a luncheon given in his honor by the King's Royal Rifles yesterday, Gen. on account of a telegram which ras said he had sent ordering G White to surrender Ladysmith af a his (Buller's) attack on Colenso, Dec. 15, 1899, had resulted unsuccessfully. Buller described at length his own and Gen. White's difficulties. He said that at that time he prepared a line. that at that time he prepared a mes-sage telling White that his (Buller's) attack had failed, and he could not make another attempt to relieve him within a month in the then slow fight-

Buller said he read this telegram over several times, saying to himself: "That's a mean thing to send a fel-"That's a mean thing to send a fel-low," but he knew the responsibility was his, and that White could say, if he surrendered, that Buller advised it. The same telegram suggested that it might be necessary to surren-der, and in that case Buller made some suggestions as to what White should do, and how he should do it, thinking it would be a cover for a man whom it would be a cover for a man whom he believed to be in greater difficulties

Buller said the conduct of the fellows (meaning the newspaper men) who sat in cocklofts and attempted to besmirch the men who were on battlefields doing all they could for the cause of their country was nauseating. They knew nothing about armies or battles, and had never seen a real fight even at a distance

Wallace at First Presbyterian Anniversary.

Bel eves Prosperity is Injuring Religion -Excellent Sermon and Splendid Music.

"A persecuted church never dies anvil remains. It is prosperity, easy in Zion, and worldliness which are killing the church today. The time is coming when all of this worldliness shall be put under foot and the church will have to awake to the spirit of the cause of Christ."

These words were spoken by Rev. W. G. Wallace, M. A., B. D., of Bloor St Presbyterian church, Toronto, preached the anniversary services in the First Presbyterian church yesterday. His text was taken from Ephesians, 1. 23-"Which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all" and he went on to show that Christ is the head of the church, and of the effete east, "keep off the grass." that everything done by the church should be according to His will. subject was true religion.

"Is the church to-day fulfilling the purpose of its existance and doing what the Master intended it to do? "We notice that the church is gradually having a larger interest in missionary work. It is a good thing for there is much land to be possessed. But what about our own districts. If we stop to consider, we cannot help noticing that the moral muscle of the coming generation is not so strong as that of previous ones. Things that are held sacred and played with fast and loose. The moral convictions are and loose. The moral convictions are no so strong—in fact, the world seems to be gradually becoming worse.

"This is not as it should be. Christ is the head and His church is the body. Just as the head contains the life of the body, so should Christ be the life of the church. When that life comes, it increases our faith, and makes it more like what God would have us. The secret of that life is unity between the head and the body. Just as the body cannot live without the head, neither can the church live without Christ. We should be one in aim, purpose, hope and spirit,

They do not enter, into the spirit of Christ's teaching and the earnestness of his appeals to them. What we need is the breathing of God's Spirit more as that we God's Spirit upon us, so that we may be again brought back to life, and in this way have a deeper sense of the mission which God has provided for "The church is a growing thing. We should grow in grace, if not in num-bers. Under the caption, "An Easterner's Under the caption, "An Easterner's Impressions of the West," the Winnieditorially:-

A series of racily written articles descriptive of Western Canada have Here been appearing in The Chatham Planet for some time from the pen of Mr. J. W. Young, a staff correspondent of that journal, recently entour in this country. His first letter on "Ralph Connor at Home," in which he describes Winnipeg as seen from the standpoint of tenderfoot is especially interesting. He was greatly impressed at first sight with the sign "Citizens protect your boulevards," which is the up-to-date rendition of the mandate He was equally impressed with the gruesomeness of the advertisements of fittings of the dead in all publicity, which is dramatically opposed to east-some undertakers who display their ern etiquette, and probably to good taste. Quite as impressive to him was the great number of hotels in evidence for it is difficult for a tenderfoot to realize that a constantly growing population, and especially the gateway city to a new and rapidly filling country, requires an extraordinary The points of interest in Winnipeg of an orator, but he had a wonderful power in holding his congregation during his sermon. To meet the man you could well believe this. He is a man of ordinary height, but rather slight in build. His hair and beard are inclined to be dark. He looks a man in the prime of life, yet deli-cate—a man who might have written "Sky Pilot," or who might be the pastor of a mission church on the outskirts of a great city. His personality doesn't intrude into the conversation and you leave his presence feeling that you have met a great man, yet nothing more than a fellow being. No greater tribute can I pay anyone."

With a brief reference to the city's public and educational institutions, etc., and a passing criticism of the fire alarm system, he sizes up the situation thusl:-

"Winnipeg is really a charming city and its wide, clean streets, stately public buildings and many pretty resi-dences make it a very pleasant place indeed. It is certainly an odd city in many ways, bounded on all sides by prairie, situated hundreds of miles from any other large city, still you find all the advantages and conveni ences here of a great modern city. It just seems as if a huge portion of civ-ilization had just trekked off into the world beyond, and settled far from friends and kin. It is certainly a re-markable city in more ways than one. I believe nearly every nation, from the eastern Yankee to the Galician, live in Winnipeg. You see Italians, Hebrews, Germans, Doukhobors, Gali-cians thick as bees in a honey-comb.

His trip across the prairies and through the Edmonton country, amid "massive" fields of grain, comfortable homes, good roads and a general air of progress and prosperity were all a great revelation to him. The splendid observance of law and order even on the confines of the most remote settlements was a great surprise indeed to him. Frank Oliver, M. P., "the father of Alberta," Mr. Young considers one of the most remarkable men in the town of Edmonton, which, by the way, is rapidly assuming all the evidences of permanency. It is the greatest fur position to that staple that Chicago does to wheat.

But after all Mr. Young has but had a superficial bird's eye view of this country with its almost incalculable resources and limitless areas which it is impossible for the most facile pen to give any adequate idea of by means of information gained and scenes witnessed on a hurried trip.

The picture which is presented by Mr. Kruger as he sits in his villa in Holland, secure, wealthy, urging the Boers to continue an unavailing resistance, might be regarded as picturesque if the facts of contemporary history are disforted or viewed out of their proper | perspective, and the grim story of his past is unknown or forgotten. A cruelly strong light has recently been thrown upon that past in the course of a discussion of the attitude of the Boers to the natives.

In a recent debate in the House of Commons some apologists for the Boers made the singularly rash move of trying to defend the Boers' treatment of the natives, and Mr. Dillon, referring to the compound system, off Kimberley, challenged Mr. Chamberlain to instance anything in the history of the Dutch race which compared with this. Mrs. Sarah Heckford, a lady who has lived for many years in the Transvaal, and left Pretoria in June last to return to England, took up this challenge in a letter to The Times, giving her name and address, and carefully giving her authority for each of a series of instances of Boer cruelty to natives. It is unnecessary to pile up examples tending to the discredit of a brave and constant enemy. It is not impossible to appreciate, and, for that matter, admire, the many cially trying and probably to none more so than to the scrofulous and more so than to the scrofulous and consumptive. The progress of scrofula during a normal October is commonly great. We never think of scrofula—its bunches, cutaneous cruptions, and wasting of the bodily substance—without thinking of the great good many sufferers from it have derived from Hood's Sarsaparilla, whose radical and permanent cures of this one disease are enough to make it the most famous medicine in the world. There is probably not a city or town where Hood's Sarsaparilla has not proved its merit in more homes than one, in arresting and completely eradicating scrofula, which is almost as serious and as much to be feared as its near relative—consumption.

LOYALESTS LIKE IT.

Cape Town, Oct. 11-The Cape Times praises the enforcement of martial law in the newly-proclaimed districts. It says: "We believe martial law will be heartily welcomed by the loyalists throughout the newly-proclaimed districts, the more so as the nature of its administration will impose the minimum of inconvenience upon all who are jealous for the maintenance of the King's authority and the speedy terministion of the war.

"At the recent conference of Sir Corden Springs the Gordon Sprigg, the Cape Premier, with Lord Katchener, it was demonstrated that there was a due necessity for the extension of martial law to the Cape peninsula. This should have no terrors for the loyalists. It is the disloyalists who will quake with fear of the possible consequences of their nefarious conduct during the past two years."

FEMALE FIREBRAND.

EMMA GOLDMAN, "QUEEN OF THE

According to Czolgosz, She Inflamed His Mind Against Law and Order. Personally Quiet, but Publicly a Disturber-Her Checkered Past.

Emma Goldman, to whom the murder ous assailant of President McKinley has attributed his incitement to the awful crime, has appeared before the public many times as a firebrand. From one end of the United States to another, wherever the anarchistic fraternity rears its dangerous head, she is known as "the queen of the reds," in strange disregard of the fact that she and her associates are opposed to all rulers.

An unusual and interesting personality is that of Emma Goldman. She is an an-archist, an avowed enemy of law and order, and glories in the fact, yet about her is no personal suggestion of violence. Her speeches are incendiary in tone and significance, and, judging by her other utterances, it is not strange that one of her recent speeches should inflame the brain of Czolgosz. Nevertheless her earnest contention when interviewed is that the hearness person are recently related to the contention when the person of the content she has never propagated violence. She contends steadfastly and without emotion that she is only an advocate of "liberty" Her explanation of her peculiar theory as Czolgosz is interesting if not convincing. "I have never propagated violence," says "the little firebrand." "Where violence comes with anarchy it is a result of lence comes with anarchy it is a result of the conditions, not of anarchy. There is ignorance, cruelty, starvation, poverty, suffering, and some victim grows tired of waiting. He believes a decisive blow will call public attention to the wrongs of his country and may hasten the remedy. If a man came to me and told me he was planning an assassination, I would think him an atter fool and refuse to pay any attention to him.

"I honor him for the spirit that prompts him. It is no small thing for a men to be willing to lay down his life for man to be willing to lay down his life for the cause of humanity. The act is noble, but it is mistaken. No, I have never advocated violence, but neither do I con-demn the anarchist who resorts to it. Perhaps under the same condition I would have done the same."

Emma Goldman is a short, fairly well built woman about thirty-three years of Although she is generally known by her maiden name, she has been ried, but separated from her husband for number of years. She is not unprepos sessing in appearance, though any description of her as handsome or beautiful would be far from the truth. Her face is seful, with determined mouth and chin. From her low, broad forehead the brown hair is brushed smoothly back, and from underneath sharply marke eyebrows a pair of earnest gray eyes look directly at her interrogator. Intelligence and earnestness are the dominant ex-pressions of her features.

She is a Russian by birth and says with some show of pride that she is "Russian through and through." Most of her life, however, has been passed away from her native country. Miss Goldman's family are respectable, quiet folk, residing in Rochester, N. Y., and her revolutionary tendencies are not inherited. She was educated in Germany, but returned to Russia before coming to America. She came here about seventeen years ago and since then has been active y engaged in anarchistic propaganda. She says that she was an anarchist before her arrival in the United States.

Miss Goldman worked in a New York Miss Goldman worked in a New Lork factory for a time, preaching anarchy in her leisure moments. In 1893 came one of the great events of her life. She was arrested and tried on a charge of incit-ing to riot. Conviction and sentence followed, and for a year Blackwell's island, New York, held the most dangerous woman agitator of America. Imprisonment brought about for a time some slight modification of her openly expressed views, though it apparently did not curb her spirit. She is now, as she has always been, one of the insidious anarchists who, while not committing violence them-selves, have tremendous influence, in inflaming the minds of those disposed to violent acts. "The little firebrand" went to Europe for a time to study nursing. She attend ed the anarchists' congress in Paris she says, although it is alleged by the police of Europe that no such meeting ever took place. It seems, however, that Miss Goldman and European anarchism are out of touch, for she soon returned to America. Since then she has been lecturing for the good of the cause. It was one of her lectures, delivered in Cleveland, that in-spired Czolgosz with the idea of assas-inating the president.

"A human rat, dwelling in a cesspoo of life, and yet one of the most potent factors for evil existing in the city, she is at once the oracle and priestess of its most dangerous element and menaces all worthy interests so long as her vicious tongue is left free to preach the gospel of anarchy and death." Such is the man-ner in which a New York newspaper writer described Emma Goldman in 1893.

Her Eldest Mother. Little May was showing the pictures in the album to the visitor, and on opening the page containing the portrait of her father's first wife she said: "That's my eldest mother."

Always Room For More.

"The man who thinks he knows it all," says the Manayunk philosopher, "generally lives long enough to learn that even the biggest encyclopedia occasionally needs a supplement."—Philadelphia

* A few days ago we took a drive in best-broken and kindest horses of the town but he wore blinders. Sud denly a gentleman came up behind on the gallep. Before we noticed him our horse heard the clatter, and, frightened at what he probably sup posed a runaway, made a tremend ous leap and tried to run. We stop ped him; but if, in his sudden leap anything had broken, there would probably have been a smash-up, with serious consequences. This leads us to ask, is it not about time to abolish blinders? They were first invented or adopted by an English nobleman to cover a defect in the eye of a valuable horse, then were found conven-ient to put on the coat of arms of the nobility, and so came into fash ion. In Russia, where they are never used, a shying horse is almost un-known. No one would think of using them on a saddle-horse, on artillery and fire-engine horses they are rarely if ever used. We are glad to find that, as the result of our education al work, thousands of horses are now driven in Boston without blinders, and are able to know when their drivers are ready to start, and see the causes of noises which frigh-ten them; and so, many accidents are prevented, and, perhaps, lives saved. We know a young lady who, when a child, lived with her aged grandmother, who always, because she had no teeth, soaked her bread and butter in her tea. The child adopted the same custom, and this day always soaks her bread an butter in her tea, because her grand-mother had no teeth. Is it not quite as foolish and more harmful and dangerous to cover up our horses' beautiful eyes with blinders because an English nobleman tried in this way to hide a defect in his horse's eye a hundred years ago?

People Who Never See Their Own Face "What!" exclaims the astonished reader *is it possible that there are any civilized persons on the face of the earth who are not in the habit their visages reflected from time to time in a mirror of some kind? Surely this can't be so." Wrong, quite wrong, gentle reader, for at the present time, strange as it may appear, there are hundreds of men and women in the United Kingdom who have not gazed into a mirror for years.

The convicts confined in His Majesty's prisons form members of this community. From the moment of a convicts entrance to a jail to the moment of his exit he is not permitted to have the use of a mirror, the smallest piece of glass being rigidly denied to him. To the woman convicts this absence of a mirror forms one of the chief hardships of confinement, and many a female warder can tell piteous tales of women who have actually fallen upon their knees and sobbed out intreaties for the loan of a morsel of mirentreaties have perforce to be disre garded-and it therefore comes about that many a female convict passes three or four years without being permitted to gaze upon her own features .- Tit-Bits.

When Cats Were Worshiped

A mummy cat is a very curious thing. Tons of these embalmed creatures were brought to England few years ago to be ground into bo manure. What an unromantic endir after 4,000 years' mummification. Some of these cats were bound with the ears standing crect, others laid flat. The cloths were adhering to the mummies, though in one load, supposed to contain 180,000 cats, very few complete specimens could be found. It is supposed that the cats were of the species known as Felis maniculata, a kind formerly found in North Africa, and trained by the ancient Egytians, from which we get our domesticated pussy. As early as 1600 B. C. tablets record that cats were kept in the Egyptian temples as objects of worship. Hence their conversion into mummies.

Canine Intelligence After the battle of Spion Kop, in South Africa, the writer was assisting at one of the ambulance attached to an irregular wagons While dressing the wounde we had noticed a nice liver-colored pointer lying down some fifty yards away. He waited patiently antil the last sufferer had been attended o and dispatched to the field hospital, then walked up to us, and with a whine held up one of his forepaws, which, on examination, proved to have received a bullet wound. Need-less to say the poor beast received the attention he so plainly asked for, after which he lay down quietly under our wagon. There are many witnesses who will vouch for the truth of the above story.-London young man who has a fin bird dog was overheard bragging to his best girl the other day about the wonderfully keen scent of the an-imal. "Why," he said, "I wanted to go to the northwestern part of the county on business, and fearing that the dog would follow me I chained him up. I had been gone two hours and was 15 miles from them when he broke loose and home when he broke loose and tracked me and found me merely by scent. What do you think of that?"

"Well, I think you ought to take a bath," replied the young lady. And then he went home and licked the dog .- Tit-Bits.

Literary Pretense.

F all of us who in these latter days have acquired some repute of knowledge of literature were to be tried before a jury of real experts, it is to be feared, writes Guy Carleton Lee, that the vast majority of us would win this sentence: "Guilty of having gained a reputation under false pretenses." Let us be candid with ourselves, since the confidence need go no further. Have we really made ourselves familiar with English masterpieces? It were damning to confess ignorance of Chaucer, for example; let norance of Chaucer, for example; let all who have read the "Canterbury Tales," to take but a portion of his works, mentally hold up their hands. The resulting show might not carry an election in the smallest election pre-

Perhaps we have taken an unfair test. Chaucer is difficult reading to any but the scholar, and the quaint old words are apt to interfere with any pleasure in the reading. Let us return, then, to writers of a later date, who language holds no obscurity of for How many of us have read "The Faery Queen" from beginning to end? Perhaps some few, to whom literature is a profession, not a recreation; but of the rest of us who so glibly discuss Ed-mund Spenser and his influence upon poetry, and who talk learnedly of the Spenserian stanza, the vast majority are utter strangers to the works of the poet they praise.

The early dramatists, again. Most of us are vaguely aware that Marlowe wrote plays called "The Jew of Malta" and "Tamburlaine," and a dramatic poem entitled "Doctor Faustus;" but our knowledge of him stops there. Massinger, because of the occasional pre-sentation on the stage of "A New Way us; but our acquaintance with him is strictly limited to that one work. Beaumont and Fletcher are by name "familiar in the mouth as household ly puzzled to quote a line written by these old collaborators. Ben Jonson we know by his epitaph; but by his works we know him not. Shakespeare—ah! there we are safe; all of us have read him. Have we so? Along comes some villainous prier-into-secret-places and questions us of our knowledge of the 'Sonnets:" and straightway we wish that we were dead or that Shakespeare had never been born to write twaddle Dryden, again. He is sometimes talked of nowadays; is he ever read? And the dramatists of the Restoration -Wycherly, Congreve, Farquhar, Van-brugh? And-to retrace our steps for the moment-Sidney and Harvey and Rochester and Herrick-oh, yes, we all know the quotation from the latter con-cerning the little feet which stole in and out; but, singular as it may appear, these lines were not the sole production of Herrick.

Pass on. Is Pope ever read nowadays? Who of us can ever give a list of his principal poems? It would be a good wager that ninety-nine out of a hundred among us, being asked to do this, would promptly exclaim: "The Essay on Man," and then continue: "Er-and-The Rape of the Lock,' you know-and-h'm-oh, well, and all the

But, the attorney for the defence may urge, these are not names of giants; knowledge of their works is not indispensable. Waiving this point, the prosecuting attorney sternly demands if we have never claimed acquaintance ferred to them with an air of easy chalance calculated-and intended-to impress our auditory with the fact that we were profoundly versed in their works. How many of us pretenders can honestly answer "No"?

"Now," says the prosecuting attorney, "I have but one more question to ask you. You have often sneered at Byron as out of date and monoto have you eger read 'Childe Harold's Pilgrimage," or that magnificent dramatic poem, 'Cain'?" And we answer desperately: "No; Byron is no poet; he is not literature; it would be waste of valuable time to read his stuff." And then the attorney for the de-ence, in despair at our admissions, yet still fighting his case, asks us to name the works with which we are familiar, that we may show that our reputation s deserved. Sure of our ground, we go trippingly on with a list of the "Tril-bles," the "Ladies of Quality," the "Richard Carvels," the but here our attorney hastly bids us leave the stand, and submits the case without

INSECTS SPREAD DISEASE.

An Important Circular Issued-Mosqui

The Canadian Director-General Public Health at Ottawa has just received from Surgeon-General man, of the United States M man, of the United States Marine Hospital service, a copy of an imper-tant circular sent to all the medical officers of the service throughout the United States. The circular has an interest to all classes of Canadian citizens. It reads as follows: "Your attention is directed to the import ance of insects as factors in conveyance of disease. There is no longer doubt as to the relation the mosquito to the malarial' dis-eases and to filariasis. According to Simond, plague is transmitted from the rat to man by the flea. The in-fection of typhoid fever, and to certain extent, cholera, may be conveyed from the excreta of flies. Ac cording to the recent work of the Army Commission, the mosquito plays an important role in the transmission of yellow fever. You are therefore directed to give particular attention to this subject, so far as it relates to the work of the service in quarantine and the prevention of the spread of communicable diseases You are advised to carefully guard patients suffering from said disease from the bites or annoyance of insects above mentioned, and to this end to place mosquito netting over the sick bed. Excreta must be treat ed in a manner to prevent their be-coming food or breeding places for insects. Hospitals where communic able diseases are treated should be thoroughly protected with fly screen at all windows, doors, and other openings, particular attention being paid to the kitchen, dining-room and protection of the food. Should mosquitoes, flies, or other insects gain entrance to the wards they be at once destroyed. The best methkilling insects in a large room is by sulphur fumigation. Formaldehyde cannot be depended upon, as it frequently fails to kill insects. Pyrethrum powder when burned an enclosure only stupefies mosquitos and flies, and when used these sects must be subsequently collected and destroyed. "You are also directed to guard against the breeding of mosquitoes about maritime hospital reservations, quarantine stations, and camps by the methods now in vogue. Collections of water in buckets, barrels, cisterns, and the like are fav-orite places for the breeding of mosquitoes. Such collections should be carefully covered, or, if the cover is not practicable, petroleum should be poured on the surface and replenished from time to time. All collections of stagnant water, pools, ditches, and the like about the reservation should be drained, or, if impracticable, petroleum used as abové. Approximately one ounce is sufficient in still water for 15 square feet of surface, and ordinarily application need not be renewed forone month. Concerning the cultivawho is blind, entered the General Hos-pital for surgical treatment. Dr. Battisby. They especially in regions where malaria especially in regions where malaria and yellow fever prevail. In vessels coming from these regions measures as above indicated should be taken with a view to the destruction of possible mosquitoes or their larvae."

Mountain Air. The reason why mountain air is more healthful than low air is that mountain air is cleaner than low air. The chemical composition of the atmosphere differs but little. On Pike's Peak the relation of oxygen to ni-trogen and other constituents of the atmosphere is the same as at the level of the ocean. The favorable effects, therefore, of a change of air are not to be explained by any difference in the proportion of its gaseous constituents. One important difference, however, is the bacteriological one. The air of high altitudes contains no microbes, and is, in fact, sterile, while near the ground some one hundred feet above it mi-

In the air of Chicago and other crowded places not only does the microbe impurity increase, but other impurities, such as the products of combustion of coal, accrue also. Several investigations have found traces of hydrogen and certain hydrocar-bons in the air, and especially in the air of pine, oak and birch for-ests. It is to these bodies, doubt-less consisting of traces of essential oils, to which the curative effects of tertain health resorts are Thus the locality of a fir forest said to give relief in diseases of the respiratory tract. But, all the same, these traces of essential oils and aromatic products must be counted, strictly speaking, as impurities, since they are not apparently necessary constituents of the air. As recent analyses have shown, these todies tend to disappear in the air as a higher altitude is reached, they disappear altogether.

Fleas Are Great Fighters.

Fleas, taken as a whole, are very quarrelsome and are great fighters. When several are confined in a glass together, they fight incessantly, do-ing most of their battling by standing most of their battling by standing on their hind legs and striking their opponents with the others. In a big battle a half dozen of them may be seen rolling over and over each other, losing legs and antennae and at last giving up their lives in the struggle. There is a record of the struggle. There is a record of a flea which lived ten days after such an encounter with no antennae, three plates of his side broken in, one eye gone, and with only four legs, and these cut off at the first joints.

ANE is a good girl, but she has no sense. She is always telling people that I am "out" when I am "in," and "in" when I have told her that I am "out." That was what made the trouble about the bazar.

He is Mr. Marchant, the great author. My name is Molly, and I have kept house for him and the boys ever since I was a child. Now I am four-

"Mrs. Cattley to see you, miss."

'Of course you told her I was out?"

Jane jerked her thumb in the direction of the door, and I heard a rustle outside. Mrs. Cattley is the sort of woman that always wears crackling

"No." she called, in a loud voice. "Jane told me that you were in." I maye Jane such a look! Then I slipped the butcher's book under something, and got up with my best smile. "Jane generally does the wrong thing," I explained. "I was so afraid that she had sent you away. Do sit down."

"Umph!" she said. Of course I knew that she did not believe me, and she new that I knew.
"Bring some tea, please," I told Jane. She walked out, grinning all over her face, and I made up my mind to speak to her when Mrs. Cattley was gone. "Put your cap straight before you come in again." She shut the door with a bang. "You've no idea what a trial

"Long before," I agreed. She turned red, and I looked innocent. "So, of course, you know exactly how to manage them." She can never get a serrant to stop.

"Things were very different when I was a girl." I hoped that she was different in those days; but I did not tell her so. I have a good deal of tact, father says. "You never had any trouble with servants, I suppose?" (I have heard that they did not keep any.) "None whatever." She put up her eyeglasses and stared at me as if she wanted to be contradicted. Fortunately, Jane knocked at the door.

"Come in," I called; but she only opened it a little way and beckoned. "We ain't got no loaf sugar," she whispered. Her whisper is rather loud. "Hush!" I shut the door hastily.
"You must go to Scales' for a pound."

She shuffled from one foot to the other. She always does that when she is uneasy in her mind.

"Then go to the new shop round the He doesn't know us, but-"E'll let us 'ave it," said Jane, promptly; and off she went.

"I beg your pardon for leaving you,",
I apologized, when I returned. "Jane requires so much telling."

"I should not keep her a month." "I am sure you would not," I agreed. Mrs. Cattley pursed her lips and looked at me very hard. Then she sighed, as if she thought me too bad for words.

"I came to see you about the bazar," she said; "but perhaps I had better speak to your father." "Oh, no!" I said, hastily. "You can

"The rector insisted upon my being

"I suppose you can make fancy hings? When I was your age—"
"I hate making fancy things," I interrupted. I like making them really;

but they cost such a lot for material. "I presume you can sew?" she enquired sarcastically.
"I never do sewing." I do nearly all the mending of the house really; but it wasn't likely I was going to tell her.

"I am afraid that the wish is lacking," she said severely. "Of course, if you choose to be the only persons who do not give anything. do not give anything, you must please yourselves. At the same time I think it my duty to warn you that people so much. Must you really go?" She said she must. So we embraced one another, and she went. When I embrace Mrs. Cattley, we put our cheeks alongside and a little way off, and kiss the air. It is the proper way with her!

"I won't give her a thing," I said to myself, as soon as she had gone. "The horrible, spiteful old creature!" I said the same thing to Mrs. Serplis, the new curate's wife, when she called next day. They are no better off than we are; but she is a dear. "I shall say I forgot," I told her; but she shook her "You don't know the artfulness of that woman, Molly." "What has she done?" "She is telling everybody that, according to your account, your father is 'getting over his difficulties.' That is how she puts it. She doesn't believe it she says; but they'll see what sort of a present he gives to the bazar."

"She was talking about it in Joynt's, the butcher's, when I passed this morning. Of course I did not listen-" "Of course not," I agreed.

'The hateful woman!" I cried. "She

"But I could not help hearing what she said. Old Mrs. Wilkins heard her say the same thing in Staize's, the costumier's; and Mr. Cattley asked Char-lie about it, and said he did so hope it was true." "I don't think he is to blame," I said.

"My dear, he is to be pitted—poor fel-low! But anyhow you see___" she shrugged her shoulders and held up her felt like crying, but Mrs. Serpl stroked my shoulder.

"Couldn't you get some fancy materials? I'd soon run you up something."
"They cost such a lot."
"I know they do," she sympathized.

"I wish we had something to-lend you. But there's the doctor's bill-where we came from; he's been waiting such a time—and the rates just come in." Sne sighed. "I hardly know what we shall ourselves, Molly." I sighed, too, and we did not say anything for a few minutes; then she found it was time to go, and we said good-bye. When she says good-bye, I put my arms right round her. It is the roper way-for her! After I had thought the matter over, I made up my mind to save the money out of the housekeeping, by giving up jam and things that are not really necessary; but the boys grumbled dread-fully. Boys want such a lot to eat, and they don't know any better, poor little chaps! They said something about it, too, when father was playing with them, and he gave me four shillings extra. "Buy the little beggars some goodies, Molly," he said. "Yes, yes, dear! I know you do your best; and a wonderfully good best it is. But you get too much for me, dear. I really don't want bacon for breakfast, and—" I put my hand over his mouth. "Don't," I said. "Oh, daddy, don't!" Mother always saw that he had things.

However, I promised that they should have some nice cakes. Mrs.
Serplis helped me to make them one afternoon, so they came rather cheap. You see, she was one of a large family. I saved one-and-three out of the four shillings. That made five-and-six altogether. expected to make it up to nearly half a sovereign the next week; but father was worried because he had not quite enough for the gas bill. It will run up, though I am ever so careful. So I gave him part of my housekeep-ing money toward it, and tried to put off some of the bills; but the tradespeople were not very nice. "Seein' as ev'ryone sez as 'ow yer father's doin' better," the butcher told me, "I was expectin' as 'e'd pay orf some of the back owin's. I'm a man wot's got to live, I am." I suppose he has; but he need not do it so disagree-

Then there were the boys' boots Bob's were right out at the toes, and they'd been capped twice and soled half a dozen times. Tommy's wer nearly dropping off his feet. He cam Tommy's were home crying because the boys at school teased him about them. Boys do not mean to be unkind, but they never think. The shoemaker was very pleasant, and said if I paid for one pair I ant, and said II I paid for one pair I might owe for the other. I could not expect more than that, because he has a large family, and they are very poor. If we had a lot of money I should like had given handsome presents." In the list I found: "Mr. and Miss Marchant." I really did not know what to do, so I consulted Jane. Jane is not much use to consult, but Mrs. Serplis was not well, and I felt I must talk to some-

"Yer carn't give nothink, w'en yer ain't got nothink to give," Jane said, when she had nearly bitten the end off her apron. "You always put things so clearly!"

I told her. It was meant to be sar-castic, but she took it for a compli-"An' if yer ain't got nothink to give yer carn't git nothink."

"That is exactly my difficulty."

"The question is, ain't yer got nohink?" She looked at me meaningly.

"What?" I asked. She fidgeted about. think?" "I've got three-an'-six."

I shook my head.
"Wot does them boys want with

"Oh, Jane! They must have something, poor little fellows."
"Greedy little pigs, I call 'em!" Jane does not get on with the boys, because they say her hair is red. It is not red really, but carroty.

"If you cannot speak properly of them, Jane," I said, "you had better hold your tongue."
"Alwus goin' without things for 'em,"

"More fool me!" She bit her apron ly. "'Owsomever, that ain't savagely. "No; but you said there was something I could give."

"I didn't say no sich thing." "Well, you looked it." "Wot if I did?" Jane can be very obstinate. I am not obstinate; but I am firm.

"What did you mean?" I insisted.
She fidgeted about more than ever.
"For goodness' sake, stand still!" "I was thinkin' of-the doll's dress." I sank down on a chair. "The doll" dress! Oh, Jane!" "In course, I didn't suppose as 'ov yer would, but— Don't look like that, Miss Molly. Don't, there's a dear!" "I-I shall be all right in a minute. ft-it isn't that I mind, only-oh, Jane! I laid my head down on my arms and Jane put her hand on my shoul-der. It may not be a soft hand, but it is a very kind one.

"I know, dear," she said—and I think she was crying-"I know as yer mother made it, an' no one couldn't 'ave done it lovelier; but-"What would she think, if—if—" Jane wiped her eyes fiercely. "She'd rather yer done it a thousand times than she'd 'ave people look down on the master." I got up from my chair quickly. You are quite right, Jane. I shall send it to-morrow; and-thank you." Then I ran upstairs and locked myself in my bedroom. I bathed my eyes before I came down, so that no one should notice. Jane was very nice, and did not grumble, even when I gave the boys a penny each to spend. I thought it would please mother if she knew.

The next morning I took out the doll's dress, and did it up ly, and sent Jane round with it. It was a very beautiful dress-white satin worked all over with tiny little silk flowers and leaves. It must have taken mother a long, long time; and 1 know that she would never have done it if she had not been very fend of me. Even Mrs. Cattley could fault with it, and she wrote to say that she should be surprised if it did not fetch-at least a couple of pounds. People could not say things of father after that: so I was glad. At least, I tried to be glad; but I did not seem very bright somehow. Father asked several times if anything was the matter. He always notices. I told him "Nothing;" but I was afraid that he did not believe me. So I tried my hardest to be cheerful, because he is so quick at guessing anything, and I did not want him to be worried about the

I played with the boys more than usual; and Mrs. Serplis helped me to make them some soldiers' clothes. They were very pleased with them; and when they caught me moping, I said it was only toothache, and they must not tell father, because I did not want to go to the dentist and have it pulled out. So they did not say anything. They are good little fellows, if they are

If Jane does silly things sometimes, she never means any harm. That is why I like her, and will not let the boys tease her about her hair.

After I had had some tea, I went to sleep again upon the sofa. At least I sleep again upon the sofa. At least I should have gone to sleep, only the boys came in from school and jumped on me. They were playing that I was on me. They were playing that I was an elephant, when father came in. Then they made believe that he was a tram-car, and climbed up on his shoulders. He said they might have tea with us, if they were extra good. After tea he read two chapters of Robinson Crusoe aloud. Then he gave them some chocolates that he had bought, and Jane took them up to bed. When they had gone he came and

"Nothing, daddy," I said.
He walked up and down the room two or three times. Then he came back and put his arm round me. "Tell me, little mother?" he begged.
So I told him. He blew his nose very hard several times; but he did not speak till I had done.

"I am glad you have told me, dear." he said at last, "but I knew."
"You knew?"I cried. "Who? When?"
"It was Cattley. He—he is a good fellow."

I nodded. "He came to me this morning and told me about it. He wanted his wife to let him buy it and send it back to you, but she would not. That woman -!" He kicked the footstool sud-denly. "I can't say things about a wo-"I can." I sat up on the sofa. "She

Where They Differ.

"Men are dreadfully brusque some-times," sighed Belinda. "The other night my brother and I went to the house of a friend to a reception. It was a hot night, and the house was crowded, and there wasn't anything to do but to stand around and talk to the people one could reach, while the people one really wanted to talk with could only be seen at a distance and over a sea of intervening heads. In addition the croquettes were cold and the ice cream warm, so when we finally got away both my brother and I said: 'Thank Heaven,' quite fervently, and went to a hotel and had supper. "The next day all of my friends whom I met asked: 'Didn't you have a lovely time at the Blanks last night?' and I invariably replied, 'Delightful.' Then we went on our separate ways. When they asked my brother the same question he answered with a frankness that appalled and embar-rassed me. 'No, I did not. I had the stupidest time of my life; and, say, they'd better get another chef the next time they entertain, for the supper was awful.'

"Here," said Belinda, "I trace a strong point of difference between men and women. The average girl has too much pride to let it be known that she has gone to an entertainment and has still failed to be entertained. I saw one pretty, guileless looking creature sit alone one night at a dance for nine straight dances, then I had compassion on her and sent my escort and a couple of other men to ask her for the remaining twosteps and waltzes. She danced four times in all, yet the next time she saw me she said she'd had a real delirious time at that ball, a delightful, neverto-be-forgotten time, and, she added modestly, that she had been quite a belle. A man under the same circumstances, though they had been of his own making, asked if he had enjoyed himself, would have replied emphatic-ally and vulgarly, 'No, I didn't. 'I had

"Why, I know of one lord of creation who told some friends that his honeymoon had been very tiresome. and of another who in bidding his host good-by after a yachting trip remarked that he had had a pleasant time, all things considered, but that all water journeys were more or less of bores. Imagine a woman doing anything so tactless. Why, if it had been a girl instead of a man in the latter case, though she had been seasick for the entire two weeks, though the salt water and air had ruined her prettiest gowns, taken the curl out of her hair and the rose from her complexion she would have staggered off the yacht declaring faintly that she'd had the time of her life, and that she'd like to go again to-morrow. That's the feminine idea of true politeness."

BAITING THE ENSIGN

UNHAPPY LIFE OF THE GERMAN ARMY CANDIDATE OFFICER.

The Petty Miseries and Humilictions to Which the Unfortunate Youngster Is Subjected by His Superiors In Public Places.

In Germany the prestige of the uni form is often bought at the price of petty miseries and humiliations. Hazing, when conducted in the intimacy of the military school, among youths of the same age, has at least the saving quality of privacy, but the baiting of the unhappy candidate officer, which is a feature of the German service, carries with it the added humilia ion of being made to amuse both superior officers and the outside public.

The young candidate officer is obliged by the regulations to live with the officers, to take his meals with them and to pass all his leisure hours in their society. At the end of the day, tired out with the fatigues of a service still new to him, the poor fellow would rather go to bed. But no, he must follow them to the casino or the beer halls. "Come, come! A young fellow of your age to be tired! You

"At your orders, Herr Lieutenant," he is bound to reply. "I mustn't."
"You're all right. You're going to be one of us. Only you must not get tired."

"At your orders, Herr Lieutenant." "Perfectly. You will come to the beer garden with us. We will pick up the others. We will show ourselves. Do you know, my boy, you don't show yourself enough, I have heard it remarked. You isolate yourself too much. It is not permitted in an ensign. When you get to be captain or major, you will go out when you please, but for the instant you must me out with us."

"At your orders, Herr Lieutenant." Entering the beer garden the officers join a group of friends, coolly abandoning the candidate to his fate, which is to find a chair and sit in a corner alone. No one notices him. He lights a cigar and sups a mug of beer. As no one addresses him and as he has not the right to open his mouth except to reply, "At your orders," he is silent. He finishes his second cigar. Suddenly one of the officers, pitying him, may hold up his mug of beer, saying, "To your health, ensign." He knows his etiquette. He rises, straightens up, and, as if moved by clockwork, raises his own mug to his lips and empties it at a single gulp.

Half an hour passes. Then a captain, it may be, will begin in a sympathetic tone, "I say, ensign, how old are you?"
"Twenty years old, Herr Captain."

"Donnerwetter! You are old."
"At your orders, Herr Captain." "My faith, here's to your health, ensign."

The unfortunate youth rises, straightens up, empties his mug and falls to his seat again, in the midst of the most profound neglect. Suddenly he is roused from his dreams by a well known voice. "I say, young man, how old are you?"
"Twenty years old, my commandant."
"Thunder! You are old."

"At your orders, Herr Commandant." "Well, here's to your health, ensign." Up, gulp and down again. commandant has been chatting quite familiarly with the ensign," renarks some one. "Ah?" says some one else. "What did the commandant ask you?" says a third, as if overcome with curiosity. "He asked me my age, Herr Lieutenant."

"I have often wanted to ask you the same question. How old are you?"

"Twenty years old, Herr Lieutenant." "You are very old." "At your orders, Herr Lieutenant."

"My faith, to your health, ensign."
Up, gulp and down again. At last he Imagines the hour of deliverance is at hand. It is time be ought, by the regulations, to be in bed. He starts to pay for his drinks.

"Where are you going, ensign?"
"I must go in. I have not permission."
"Go on, but no, my friend. Stay with us, quiet and comfortable. You don't need any permission so long as you are with us. We'll take you back." "At your orders, Herr Commandant.

Waiter a heer." Still higher officers at the lower end of the table, pretending to notice for the first time the silence of the young candidate, express the desire to hear, him speak. How otherwise would they be able to judge his abilities?
One of his lieutenants begins with him.

"When do you go to the school of war, nsign? "Oct. 1, Herr Lieutenant."

"Do you know where you are to go?"
"At your orders, Herr Lieutenant; I shall probably be sent to Hanover."
"Thunder, what luck!"
"At your orders, Herr Lieatenant."
"My faith here's to your health!" "My faith, here's to your health!" Up, gulp and down again. Silence.
"When are you to be named officer."
"In eighteen months, Herr Lieutenant."

"How old are you?" "Twenty years old, Herr Lieutenant."
"Thunder and hall, but you're old!" "How old did you say you were?" in-terrupts still another as if burning with "Twenty years old, Herr Lieutenant. 1 am very old." oh-perfectly!"

And when the company breaks up this last officer will say to the others: "A good sort of chap, our ensign. It's a pity he is so impertinent."

The next morning, after drill, the doyen of the lientenants will call him saids and

The next morning, after drill, the doyen of the lieutenants will call him aside and make a little speech.

"I say, ensign, a lot of complaints have been addressed to me this morning in regard to your conduct last night at the beer garden. I give you a friendly tip, because you know it can't continue. I'm told that you talked entirely too much, that without being in any way invited told that you talked entirely too much, that without being in any way invited you gave your opinion on a lot of subjects and that you pushed yourself into notice continually. You are still much too young, ensign, to permit yourself to have a personal opinion on this thing or that thing. You are still much too young, remember that!"

"At your orders, Herr Lieutenant."

Brought This Woman Near to Death's Door-Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Made her Feel Healthy and Young Again.

There is cause for rejoicing among women on account of the marvellous assistance given to them at the trying times of life by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. By instilling into the blood that vital principle which goes to create new nerve force, this celebrated food cure gives energy and vitaliance. ed food cure gives energy and vitality to every organ of the body, and ensures strength and regularity to the peculiarly feminine organism. This portion of the anatomy is a mass of nerves, and health and regularity depend almost entirely on the condition of the nerves. For this reason Dr. Chase's Nerve Food proves of incalculable value to women from maidenhood to that time of life when changes come to the femali functions.

Mrs. Charles Keeling, Sen., Owen Sound, Ont., writes:—"It is a pleasure to tell what benefit I have derived from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I 55 years of age, and for about five years my life was one of great sufferng from nervousness, weakness and extreme physical exhaustion. I could not sleep, and hot flushes would pass through my body from feet to head. I consulted many family physicians and two other doctors, but they told me that about my fime of life I was likely to be troubled that way. I continually grew worse, and despaired of ever being cured. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food came to my notice, and as we have Dr. Chase's Receipt Book I have confidence in the doctor. I was so surprised at the help I received from the first box that I bought three more. They built me right up and made me fee healthy and young again. They have proved a great blessing to me and I hope this testimonial will be of help to some weak, nervous wo-man.suffering as I did."

THE FLYING MACHINE

tte Limitatious and Also Its Wide Pos-

We can already calculate approximately the proportions, the strength and weight, the supporting efficiency, the speed, and the power required for a projected flying machine, so as to a projected hying judge of the practicability of a de-sign. Indeed, the mathematics of the subject have been so far evolved that engineering computations may eventually replace vague speculation in the domain of aerial navigation. But after the problem has been worked out to a mechanical success, the commercial uses of aerial apparatus will be small. The limita tions of the balloon have already mentioned; such craft will be slow, frail and very costly. We are now sufficiently advanced in the design of flying machines to perceive some of their limitations. They will be comparatively small and cranky, require much power, carry little exweight, and depend for their effective speed, on each journey, whe ther they go against the wind or with it, so that they cannot compete with existing modes of transportation in cheapness or in carrying capacity. It is true that high speeds may be attained, and this may serve in war, in exploration, and in sport;

but the loads will be very small, and the expenses will be great. But flying machines will develop new uses of their own; and as mankind has always been benefited by introduction of new and faster modes of transportation, hope that successful aerial naviga-tion will spread civilization, knit the nations closer together, make all regions accessible, and perhaps so equalize the hazarco of war as to abolish it altogether, thus bringing about the predicted era of universal peace and goodwill.-Cassier's Maga-

Mr. Herbert Speecer.

Mr. Herbert Spencer, the philoso-pher, has turned not long ago his 82nd year. For some time he has been seldom seen in his old haunts at the Athenaeum Club, London. Be ing more or less of an invalid, he lives a retired life at Brighton. His occasional visits to the theatre have also practically ceased, though he enjoyed a comic opera. Equally abandoned by Spencer are now the prolonged games at billiards, at which says an exchange, he was an adept, and rather proud of his skill. On one occasion, however, at the Athen-acum Club, Herbert Spencer found his master in a very young man, who beat him thoroughly. When his defeat was to be no longer disguised feat was to be no longer the philosopher leaned on his cue and delivered the following speech to continuous antagonist: "A cerhis fortunate antagonist: "A cersibly a desirable accomplishment, but the extraordinary ability, sir, you have just displayed can only be the fruit of a misspent youth," which shows that even a Herbert Spencer has read a little every day philosophy now and then to enable him to live his life.

Argyll's Funny Slip. Women are sometimes accused of lacking a sense of humor, but a casual slip of the tongue on a recent Thursday, while the Duke of Argyll was addressing a drawing-room meeting at Lowther Lodge, was instantly and warmly appreciated.

The Duke had said that after the Boer war it would be an excellent thing if Boer and Britain were to

"We want the Briton to marry Boer girl," said the Duke, "but want him to have an English as well."

The peel of laughter which greeted this ambiguous declaration set the Duke to correct himself, which, blushing, he did, endeavoring to explain in great haste what he meant. The explanation intensified the merriment. It is the joke of the season, and won't be forgotten for

How One Million is Spent

Not less than one million dollars is annually spent by people seeking an absolute cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis and Consumption. Numerous are the emedies, but the one standing preeminently above all others is Catarrhozone. It cures these diseases because it is sure to reach them. Catarrhozone is inhaled into the lungs, throat and nasal passages, and bathes every part of the diseased membrane with its germ-killing, healing vapor. You simply breathe Catarrhozone and it cures. A New Calendar.

French intolerance of any arrangement that is merely practical and not at the same time based upon logical and abstract principles is a familiar na-tional trait. Their devotion to the decimal system in all things is only one manifestation of this. They have long chafed at the depiorable lack of system presented by the calendar, and M. Camille Flammarion has at last matured a means of having done with it. It will be remembered that there was a a means of having done with the will be remembered that there was a revolutionary proposal once to inaugurate a week of ten days, and a year to consist of months newly named after characteristic meteorological conditions—Windy month, Foggy month, Eprouting month, etc. But M. Flammarion has been working on another tack. The principles to which the new calendar must conform are these:—

(1) The new calendar must be uniform year after year, i.e., the same day of the week must always correspond to the same day of the month. (2) The the same day of the month. (2) The year must commence at the vernal equinox (March 21). "It may be remarked in passing," says a critic of The New York Sun, to this, "that this is well enough for the northern hemisphere, but that September 20 is the logical epoch for the other half of the globe. The flowers of the Argentine and New Zealand begin their year in our autumn." (3) There must be either New Zealand begin their year in our autumn." (3) There must be either twelve months of 30, 30, 31 days, or, more logically, thirteen months of 28 days. On the whole, M. Flammarion prefers the first arrangement. "By dint of desiring simplicity," he says, "we ought not to fall into monotony." Moreover, as he also says, the number twelve has the great advantage of lendover, as he also says, the number twelve has the great advantage of tend-ing itself to division by six, four and three—an admirable advantage not pos-sessed by the metric system with its ra-dix of ten.

The new months must be named. He The new months must be manufacture: The first month is to be called Truth (30 days), the next Science (30), then Wisdom (31), Justice (30), Honor (30), Goodness (31), Love (30), Beauty (30), Humanity (31), Happiness (31), Progress (30), Immortality (31).

Twelve months, as above, make fifty-two weeks of seven days each, or 364 two weeks of seven days each, or days. The first day of the year is a holiday, and has no number—it is the day zero—it belongs to no mouth.In leap years there are to be two zero days zero number one, zero number two. Such a calendar, he says, need not be printed on pasteboards that must be printed on pasteboards that must be changed every year. "It can be engraved on ivory, bronze or sliver."

The error of this calendar is one day every 3,000 years, and he proposes to leave the discrepancy to be dealt with by our remote descendants. He advocates its adoption because it is "rational, perpetual and universal, not arbitrary. illogical and variable."

arbitrary, illogical and variable.' But that even France herself is ser iously contemplating any action in the matter there is no present sign.

So we are to have an "American" Bible. The changes, some of them at least, which were proposed by the Amerlean committee in 1885 and which the English revisers did not see fit to accept are not to be allowed to be forgotten. They are to be embodied in a new American standard revision of the Bible. Dr. Howard Osgood, a survivor of the original American committee, has given an outline as to what these variations from the English text will, in the given an outline as to what these variations from the English text will, in the main, amount to:—

"The revision under King James, 1611," he writes in The Sunday School Times, 'followed a hundred years of repeated revisions. That revision was an admirable work of high scholarship in Hebrew, Greek and English. But so great has been the change in the meaning and usage of words that some translations, accurate in their day, now misrepresent the Hebrew and Greek, as well as the English, of three hundred years ago. 'Prevent' then meant to go before, meet; now it means to hinder.' Let' then signified to hinder: now it means to permit. 'Lust' then, as in German now, meant pure pleasure, desire, joy; now it breathes file phission.

"The revision of 1685 removed many of these dark and twisted words, but it also left a large number which the American company of revisers have greatly reduced, though they have not been able to get them all out. Why should we be compelled to read in the Bible the strange spellings bewray, 'ciel,' 'grisled,' 'holpen,' 'hough,' 'sith,' 'strake,' 'strowed, 'victual' and ffany similar? There is one word occurring of ten which has one meaning in bur land. 'Corn' in England is grain of all kinds, especially wheat, oats, barley, etc., but with us the word is never so used; it means to us Indian corn, and that alone. Our statesmen are arrayed in hosen, but there are few of them who would know their trousers under that name. Farmers, with us, do not speak narish, or of fraying away birds, or of sending a feller to lay the forest low. We do not take our shoes to be clouted, nor do we cast clouts to the poor. To fine, with us, is to impose a penality, but in the Bible it means to refine; while to impose a fine is in the Bible to amerce.

"We do not use 'an' before strong aspirates—an heart, an house. The usage in the Bible is a strange medley—a hard and an hard, a harp and an harp, a hole and sa heap. There has been an endeavor to conform to our usage of 'an' only before words beginning with a vowel s reading for the point of view:

"You are very wise, you English; we love you now, you know, though we did not at one time because you used to send us people you did not want, and also people who had you not want, and also people who patronized us badly; you called us 'colon-lai,' with an emphasis on the word which made it coldly insuiting, and you had a way of mixing up Melbourne and Sydney, and Victoria and New South Wales in a manner which hurt the feelings of both States, or colonies, as they were then. But at last you are being really nice to us. We lent you soldiers, not because you needed the numbers, of course, but te show you that we remembered our relation to you, and had an affection for you. You were touched by this act, for our men showed themselves worthy, and colonial and Britlish blood mingled on the veldt, and Tommy and Cornstalks shared crusts, or the more precious tot of rum, and tobacco.

"You remember these things, and you realize that the late Queen was our Queen as well as yours, and to open our Federal Parliament you sent us Royalty. We appreciate this act; it touches us that you treat us as a real sister, not as a rather impossible stepsister, and in return we wish to tell you that joily Prince George and charming Princess May have done more with their tact, grace and friendliness to make us thoroughly British than you will ever believs or understand. Very few of us had ever seen so brilliant a scene as the opening of our Federal Parliament: none of us had ever seen so brilliant a scene as Royalty receiving the various dignitaries whom we chose as our representatives. We will never forget either scene, those of us who were lucky anough to see them."

"It's a most interesting memento," he explained very plausibly, "one to which I shall give a prominent place in my collection of curios. It's a Duke rode in Toronto."

"You don't say," quoth Henry Richards, deeply interested.
"How did you get it?" questioned

"Well, you see," explained Mr. Philp with exceptional earnestness, "it was this way. The horse cast the shoe and of course there was a big scramble for it. Our bass drummer came out ahead and carried off the trophy. His exultation was but momentary, how-ever, for I relieved him of it clandes-

The young men heartily congratulated the bandmaster on his trophy ere they parted with him.

"I wonder if that shoe is really off the horse that the Duke rode?"
"Of course it is," declared Billy

"Really off the Duke's horse?" questioned Mac still dubiously.

There is no No. 2 or 'anything of the sort, but the original Bostonians, with all the old favorites; who have made the organization and "Robin Hood" famous.

Music lovers have mingled amicably together in securing seats for the Bostonians, who will appear here on Thuesday, October 17th, 1901. Chief among the new comers with this company this season, and who have created a sensation with the musicloving public are the handsome tenors Albert Parr and Vernon Stiles; the distinguished basso, Albert Kinckley; and the vivacious young contralto Adele Rafter, whose liquid voice and personal charms have made her one of the most talked about figures on he comic opera stage.

George Frothingham, the well known comedian of The Bostonians, is one of the few singers, who has been content to accept a position among a brilliant group of entertainers and remain a star in a stock company rather than tempt fortune in touring alone. Mr. Frothingham is pleasantly remembered through his long connection with this company, and in gro-tesque he has no superior. As Friar Tuck, in Robin Hood, and the lovelorn sailor in The Serenade, he con-stantly provokes laughter by his whimsical methods. Mr. Frothing-ham will be heard here in the coming presentation of "Robin Hood."

The fortieth anniversary of the opening of Christ Church was celebrated yesterday. Bishop Baldwin assisted by Rural Dean McCosh, Rev Mr. Sims, and Rev. Colles, occupied the pulpit.

The Bishop took his text from the tenth chapter of the Epistle of Paul to the Hebrews-"By the which will we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all."

Our store closes daily at six o'clock except on Saturdays.

The daily rotation of sleep, work and food satisfies no man's nature. A programme that leaves no room for home life or social relaxation is not right—is far from right—is all wrong.

The thing that keeps a man really alive is ambition Call it what you likeenergy, force, nerve, vim, push, life or go. No man can retain his ambition many years if he works all the time that he is not eating or sleeping.

These are some of the reasons why we close at six.
