Three Hills. There is a hill in England, Green fields and a school I know, Where the lark is fast in summer, And the whistling in trees grow. A little hill, a deer hill, And the glowing fields below. There is a hill in Spain, Heaped with a thousand slain, Where the shells by night and moonlight, And the ghosts that died in vain, A little hill, a hard hill, To the soul that died in pain. There is a hill in Jewry, Three crosses pierce the sky, On the hillside lies a dying, To save all those that die, A little hill, a hard hill.

—Edward Owen, in the London Times.

What She Did. 'I would not mind so much if I could only feel that I had accomplished something while, but it breaks my heart, Thursday, to think that I am sixty years old today and I've never done anything but putter around in this little town all my life. In spite of herself Miss Martha's eyes filled with tears as she patted Fushaleh's back tenderly. 'It is a comfort to talk to you even if you do not understand. I suppose you are perfectly contented just to be a nice old pussy cat, but I did so long to do some real good in the world. How happy I would have been to have more as a missionary, but father and mother needed me to care for them in their old age. Then brother Alfred brought his four motherless little ones to me, and I did my best for them. But that was all in my family and does not count. Of course I have always had a class in Sunday School, but anyone else could have taught that just as well. 'But I must not complain. If God had thought that I was worthy, he would have made it possible for me to do it. I try to fill my bit of a niche faithfully and cheerfully, and not murmur because I'm not given a bigger job. Now, Thasah, we must get to work, for there's lots to be done if it is a birthday.

'Dear me, if here isn't Dr. Graham coming up the walk. Don't you dare tell him I've been crying, will you, Thasah?' 'Good morning, Miss Martha. I hope you are not too busy to be here a few minutes. I got home last night from the conference, and I came right over this morning to give you some messages I brought to you. Mrs. Graham thought it would be better to wait until afternoon, but somehow I felt as if you ought to have them at once. 'I'm ever so glad to see you, Mr. Graham, but I cannot imagine who you have seen to send messages to me,' said Miss Martha. 'I hope they are nice, because it is my birthday, and somehow I do feel as if I need a bit of chirping up, so to speak. 'Well, now, I knew I needed to come to the good Lord put it into my head not to delay. When I was stopping at my cousin's in D., I met a Dr. Dawson, the finest surgeon in the city, or indeed anywhere in that vicinity. Best of all he is an earnest Christian. My cousin says his patients think there is no one like him. When I was introduced to him he grasped my hand eagerly. 'Can you tell me if Miss Martha Slocum is still living?' he asked me at once. 'She used to be my Sunday School teacher when I was a boy, and I owe more to her influence than to any other person living. She had the most perfect, unwavering trust in God I ever knew. Every day of my life I come into contact with suffering of all sorts, and I try to help the sufferers to love and trust their Heavenly Father as Miss Martha taught me. Tell her I have thanked God many times for putting me under her care. Sunday my cousin introduced me to the superintendent of his Sunday School. His face lightened up instantly when he heard that I came from Milton. 'I was orn and brought up there,' he said. 'Do you know a Miss Martha Slocum there? She was my Sunday School teacher for years. If I have ever done any good in the world or been of help to any one, I think it is due to her influence. She was the most Christianlike Christian I ever knew. She made religion so beautiful that it impressed all the boys in her class, and made them want to be Christians. Tell her I say God bless her—she has been a great power for good in many lives. 'Oh, Mr. Graham,' cried Miss Martha, 'God did send you. I was discouraged. I am sixty years old today, and seemed to me my life had been wasted, that I had never been of any real use in the world, and I had wanted to make my life mean so much. It does not seem possible that I can have helped them as they say I have, but I am very, very thankful I have. I read not long ago that next to living great things for one's self it is wonderful to be lived through, and it certainly is.

Excessive Prices. Many people will be glad to note that the Dominion government has decided to give some attention to the undervalued price of the price of wheat. While the war has no doubt been responsible to some extent for the prices we are now being asked to pay for many articles of daily consumption, yet there is a widespread feeling that speculators are more to blame than the war. For instance: In Nova Scotia? We all know the wheat prices have not been as high in a generation or more and yet our Canadian flour, after paying these excessive freight rates, is selling today in England as cheaply as in Nova Scotia. Why is it? The shortage of this year's wheat crop can hardly be given in explanation of this peculiar condition of affairs. A Montreal man who has been looking into this wheat question says: 'Wheat comes to us from the western provinces and it is recognized that the production far exceeds the amount required for our consumption. I understand that this surplus must be exported as far as remunerative a price as possible, but one thing that I do not understand is that the bread made from the flour ground from our wheat is, I am informed, far cheaper in Europe than here, and of better quality. 'This same gentleman declares there is an egg trust and a potato trust in the country, and he believes these trusts are largely responsible for the high prices that are prevailing for these articles today. The Ottawa authorities should certainly get busy at once. In Newfoundland the Governor-in-Council was authorized to take possession at a reasonable price, of foodstuffs unreasonably withheld from the public. In Australia and New Zealand food prices were regulated by the State Legislatures. In New South Wales the Necessary Commodities Control Act was passed empowering the Governor-in-Council to declare maximum prices for necessities for the duration of the war, but in effect fixed prices. In Victoria the Price of Goods Act provides for the fixing of maximum prices by the Priors Board acting in conjunction with the Governor. A person who sells or offers to sell above the maximum price is made liable to a penalty of $1.50.

Greatest Rule of Health. With all their differences in regard to disease, its cause and its treatment, doctors are of one mind in regard to the one greatest rule of health, viz: Daily Movement of the Bowels. Unnumbered thousands of people suffer almost continually as the result of constipation who could be readily cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Merely Incidental. An aged negro was crossing-tender at a spot where an express train made quick work of a buggy and its occupants. Naturally he was the chief witness and the entire case hinged upon the energy with which he had displayed his warning signal. A grumbling cross-examination left Rastus unshaken in his story; The night was dark, and he had waved his lantern frantically, but the driver of the carriage paid no attention to it. Later, the division superintendent called the fireman to his office to compliment him on the steadfastness with which he stuck to his story. 'You did wonderfully, Rastus,' he said; 'I was afraid at first you might waver in your testimony.' 'Nessah, nessesah, Rastus exclaimed, 'but I done feared ev'ry minute hat 'ere durn lawyer was gwine ter ask me if mah lantern was lit.'

The tenant of a new house discovered that the doors had warped. The builder would not send a joiner to repair them, so the householder tried the ironing method and wrote: 'Dear etc.—The mice can run under most of our doors, but our cat cannot follow them. Will you please send a man at once to make room under the doors for the cat? 'You sit on your horse like a butcher,' said a pert young officer who happened to be of royal blood, to a veteran general who was somewhat bent from age. 'It is highly probable,' responded the old warrior with a grim smile. 'All my life I have been leading calves like you to the slaughter.'

A couple of Kentuckians meeting in a feud district, one asked the other: 'Look here, Bill, what did you do shoot at me for? I ain't got no quarrel with you.' 'You had a feud with Ben Walker, didn't ye?' 'But Ben's dead.' 'Well, I'm his executor.' Mineard's Liniment for a lic every-where.

NINGCO TEA

Billie. I remember when I saw him first, a striking little chap—a creature of his environment, victim I was going to say. When he came to our district first there wasn't much said about his past, and nothing whatever to his discredit. You know the kind—little snappers that have never had a chance; left orphan or worse in the pitiless grasp of London—London that great city, that metropolis of the world. It pays the price of greatness and pays hard. All that it pays must come out of those least able to pay; and the price of its greatness is poverty. Pitiless London, was it not? Well, not altogether so. The little lit of human driftwood was plucked from the mainstem, crushed in spirit, starved in body and soul, and cast like a bit of wreckage within reach of Dr. Bernardo.

We understood in how Billie came to us, and we understood the perpetual question in his large blue eyes—the dog-like devoted gratitude for the carers of a kind world. He was a little chap to tackle work on the farm for Barker, and so we were glad when fall came that Billie was sent to school. He was small of body for his few years, and was slow to learn, but he pegged along and was satisfied in doing chores at night. At Sunday school he came to life and was the despair of his teacher. Do what he might he would be sure to run a pin into the water next to him. Then the treating look of angelic innocence would have him from anything worse than an 'Oh, Billie, you mustn't,' a point on which opinions differed; for it seemed as if Billie must do it, or burst. Good food and fresh air soon worked wonders with the lad, and he took his place with the other boys when there was time to play; but for the most part he worked faithfully at the slow plodding work with the Barkers, and bade fair to be a farmer some day.

I was away some time and when I went back home the war had been going on for over a year. Mother had a letter from Bill; she had been his Sunday school teacher, you know. There wasn't much in his letter, but you had to read between the lines to get the story. Billie didn't see anything heroic in it when he told of his disappointment in his failure to keep up with the others of his company when they made their charge. But around the letter from Billie (her face all rosy, as it always is when she wants to cry and darn't) we could see Billie dragging his gun by the muzzle and stumbling along on two things that would be his legs if he could only feel them, and both puttees running red where they had been punctured with bullets. We could see his tunic stained from the one he got in the arm. He was grateful and proud of the attention he got at the hospital—they were English and they cared for him. This was a different England that they brought him home to. The old England had robbed him of his parents, had dented him a home, and had cast him adrift to shift for himself; this England welcomed him back, nursed him, loved him—and gave him a country. Billie says that if his country would only save itself, and only prevent the poverty that made the black pall over his earliest recollections—if it will only renew itself there will be nothing to regret for his part in the war, and he would be ready to give what's left of him. Yes, Billie can come back home any time at all. When the war's over and we are welcoming the boys who come back, our brothers and fathers, we'll give nobody a prouder welcome than Billie.

A Good Indian. With all his faults, the American Indian in best estate has the mighty virtues of loyalty and courage. A touching example of the nobility of character that many of them are capable of is given in the late John Muir's 'Travels in Alaska.' Mr. Muir describes the coming of missionaries to the Stickeen Indians of Fort Wrangell and their success in Christianizing them. The tribesmen he says, were enraptured to accept the Christian faith by their own chief, but he told them he could not himself become a Christian, for this reason: 'I wish you to learn this new religion and teach it to your children, so that you may all go to your deity to that good heaven country of the white man and be happy. But I am too old to learn a new religion; and, besides, many of my people who have died were bad and foolish people, and if this word the missionaries have brought us is true, as I think it is, many of my people must be in hell; and I must go there also, for a Stickeen chief never dejects his people in time of trouble. To that bad country, therefore, I will go, and try to cheer my people and help them as best I can to endure their misery.'

Consider This Well. Under this heading the Christian Herald shows why it is found necessary to increase the subscription price of the paper. 'We have received several letters from some of our good friends of the Christian Herald timely expressing regret that the Christian Herald will raise its price early in November to $3.00 a year. We regret it very much ourselves, for, as a matter of fact, the situation which has been forced upon us is very much worse than was indicated in our announcement of raised price. We have now received what practically amounts to an ultimatum from the paper manufacturers to the effect that we will have to pay, even under the most favorable circumstances, $80.00 extra a year for paper. The increased cost of everything connected with the printing of a weekly paper is a serious matter, and to maintain old subscription prices is to do so at a loss. Many publishers have already made the advance.

Laugh and Grow Fat. 'Laugh and grow fat is an old saying laden with value for nervous people in particular. Drop the worry habit and use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and you will soon get the nervous system restored to good condition. Digestion will improve, appetite will return, and you will find such symptoms as headache and sleeplessness fast disappearing. Put your good resolutions on ice. It's hard to keep them for any length of time without spoiling. Flatter a man if you want him to have implicit faith in your judgment.

Rids Poisons From the Blood, Clears Up the Complexion Sallow Skin, Pimples, Pains and Aches Are Soon Gone When Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Are Used. The doctor feels your pulse and looks at your tongue, but at the same time he is reading your condition in your face. My wife with splendid results tells me that your liver is not doing its work, the pimples on her face, the itches are not properly purifying the blood, he realizes that the bowels are constipated and the system overloaded with poisons. You can apply this test in your own case and see if you are afflicted with any of the symptoms such as headache, pains and aches through back and limbs, spots of bitterness and indigestion. If you have not used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you will be surprised to find how easily they will rid your system of poisons, impurities and thereby remove the cause of pains, aches and skin troubles.

There wasn't much in his letter, but you had to read between the lines to get the story. Billie didn't see anything heroic in it when he told of his disappointment in his failure to keep up with the others of his company when they made their charge. But around the letter from Billie (her face all rosy, as it always is when she wants to cry and darn't) we could see Billie dragging his gun by the muzzle and stumbling along on two things that would be his legs if he could only feel them, and both puttees running red where they had been punctured with bullets. We could see his tunic stained from the one he got in the arm. He was grateful and proud of the attention he got at the hospital—they were English and they cared for him. This was a different England that they brought him home to. The old England had robbed him of his parents, had dented him a home, and had cast him adrift to shift for himself; this England welcomed him back, nursed him, loved him—and gave him a country. Billie says that if his country would only save itself, and only prevent the poverty that made the black pall over his earliest recollections—if it will only renew itself there will be nothing to regret for his part in the war, and he would be ready to give what's left of him. Yes, Billie can come back home any time at all. When the war's over and we are welcoming the boys who come back, our brothers and fathers, we'll give nobody a prouder welcome than Billie.

A Good Indian. With all his faults, the American Indian in best estate has the mighty virtues of loyalty and courage. A touching example of the nobility of character that many of them are capable of is given in the late John Muir's 'Travels in Alaska.' Mr. Muir describes the coming of missionaries to the Stickeen Indians of Fort Wrangell and their success in Christianizing them. The tribesmen he says, were enraptured to accept the Christian faith by their own chief, but he told them he could not himself become a Christian, for this reason: 'I wish you to learn this new religion and teach it to your children, so that you may all go to your deity to that good heaven country of the white man and be happy. But I am too old to learn a new religion; and, besides, many of my people who have died were bad and foolish people, and if this word the missionaries have brought us is true, as I think it is, many of my people must be in hell; and I must go there also, for a Stickeen chief never dejects his people in time of trouble. To that bad country, therefore, I will go, and try to cheer my people and help them as best I can to endure their misery.'

Consider This Well. Under this heading the Christian Herald shows why it is found necessary to increase the subscription price of the paper. 'We have received several letters from some of our good friends of the Christian Herald timely expressing regret that the Christian Herald will raise its price early in November to $3.00 a year. We regret it very much ourselves, for, as a matter of fact, the situation which has been forced upon us is very much worse than was indicated in our announcement of raised price. We have now received what practically amounts to an ultimatum from the paper manufacturers to the effect that we will have to pay, even under the most favorable circumstances, $80.00 extra a year for paper. The increased cost of everything connected with the printing of a weekly paper is a serious matter, and to maintain old subscription prices is to do so at a loss. Many publishers have already made the advance.

Laugh and Grow Fat. 'Laugh and grow fat is an old saying laden with value for nervous people in particular. Drop the worry habit and use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and you will soon get the nervous system restored to good condition. Digestion will improve, appetite will return, and you will find such symptoms as headache and sleeplessness fast disappearing. Put your good resolutions on ice. It's hard to keep them for any length of time without spoiling. Flatter a man if you want him to have implicit faith in your judgment.

Rids Poisons From the Blood, Clears Up the Complexion Sallow Skin, Pimples, Pains and Aches Are Soon Gone When Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Are Used. The doctor feels your pulse and looks at your tongue, but at the same time he is reading your condition in your face. My wife with splendid results tells me that your liver is not doing its work, the pimples on her face, the itches are not properly purifying the blood, he realizes that the bowels are constipated and the system overloaded with poisons. You can apply this test in your own case and see if you are afflicted with any of the symptoms such as headache, pains and aches through back and limbs, spots of bitterness and indigestion. If you have not used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you will be surprised to find how easily they will rid your system of poisons, impurities and thereby remove the cause of pains, aches and skin troubles.

NINGCO TEA

Billie. I remember when I saw him first, a striking little chap—a creature of his environment, victim I was going to say. When he came to our district first there wasn't much said about his past, and nothing whatever to his discredit. You know the kind—little snappers that have never had a chance; left orphan or worse in the pitiless grasp of London—London that great city, that metropolis of the world. It pays the price of greatness and pays hard. All that it pays must come out of those least able to pay; and the price of its greatness is poverty. Pitiless London, was it not? Well, not altogether so. The little lit of human driftwood was plucked from the mainstem, crushed in spirit, starved in body and soul, and cast like a bit of wreckage within reach of Dr. Bernardo.

We understood in how Billie came to us, and we understood the perpetual question in his large blue eyes—the dog-like devoted gratitude for the carers of a kind world. He was a little chap to tackle work on

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., OCT. 27, 1916.

Editorial Briefings.

The city of Toronto has raised $701,546 in a week for the Red Cross. Toronto not only fights but pays.

Prison labor is said to be useful in city work. It would be equally useful on an industrial farm, and would benefit the laborers and their families much more.

The American father who is proud of the son who gave his life for the cause of the Allies shames those fathers in Canada who still hold back sons who are fit and free to go.

The Germans refer to the 'tank' battle cars of the British as cruel engines of warfare. And they must be shocked to the soft-hearted conquerors of Belgium and the victors of the naval fight in which the Lusitania was sunk.—New York Times.

Look Out For the Boy.

Someone has estimated that eighty-five per cent. of America's great or eminently successful city men were born in the country. Whether this is an entirely correct estimate or not we are not prepared to state, but it is nevertheless a fact known to all that a very large proportion of the few men who go to the top in city business were born on the farm. We sometimes wonder how many of these would have been great successes had they remained in the country and put the same thought and energy into scientific agriculture that they have into their chosen walks of life. Surely some could have been made into good farmers and satisfied farmers. It would be a pity to spoil a good store-keeper, a bustling manufacturer, a successful physician or an eminent professor by making a second or third rate farmer of him, but the fact which stands out is that all these men have been wooed away or driven from the farm and few really great farmers are known. The pity of it all is that the basic industry of this continent is not considered of sufficient importance to attract the great men in their earlier days to make it a life-work. True, after they have amassed a fortune in other business, they like to play at farming. Their return to the farm is generally to make the farm a 'sink-hole' for some of their surplus wealth. They make it a hobby.

When one stops to think of it agriculture can ill afford to lose all the leaders. It is all very fine to talk of the way men born on the farm strengthen city industry, and how the men and women from the land keep the race strong and viable, but has it not been carried a little too far? Very good use could be made of the brains and ability of more leaders in the field of practical agriculture. Can the farm afford to lose so many? How can a change be brought about? It is the duty of every parent to give the best he can to his children as a start in life. They should be encouraged in whatever calling for which they show special aptitude. But why forget the farm? Too often farming is painted a rather dull picture for the boy, while education and trades are held up as the ideal occupations. Education is all right and every boy should get all he can. But why not put the best side of farm life forward to the boy and then if he decides on a city occupation, do not stand in his way. Give the farm a fair show with the other futures for the bright boy, and perhaps a few men will grow up on and stay with the farm. Agriculture is a calling worthy of the best brains of the country.

The Fall Weather Hard On Little Ones.

Canadian fall weather is extremely hard on little ones. One day it is warm and bright and the next wet and cold. These sudden changes bring on colds, cramps and colic, and unless baby's little stomach is kept right the result may be serious. There is nothing to equal Baby's Own Tablets in keeping the little ones well. They sweeten the stomach, regulate the bowels, break up colds and make baby thrive. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at six cents a box from the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Acknowledgment.

The following letter was received by one of the ladies of the Red Cross Society:

'I wish to thank you and through you the ladies of the Wolfville Red Cross Society for the most kind gift of sixty pairs of socks to my platoon (No. 10, 8th Batt.)

If you and those associated with you could have been present it would have repaid you for all your trouble to have seen and heard the expressions of gratitude of the men.

Good as the issue of clothing is to the Canadian soldiers it is impossible to get the class of footwear that you so kindly sent. The gift itself, too, and the thoughtfulness that prompted it was heartily appreciated by the men. It made them feel that their efforts were appreciated and that they had strong friends behind them.

Again thanking you and the other ladies I remain sincerely yours,

When the Wounded Return

England was soon in sight. It did not seem good to see the coast line from the hospital ship. Very soon we had landed and were on the Red Cross train. We did not know where we were going. What did that matter when people waved their hands and cheered us in such a way? We lay back in the train and were content. What would we not go through again for this? Our thoughts of past horrors seen began to fade away. The sun had begun to shine for us 'At last!'—(A wounded soldier in T. P.'s Journal of Great Deeds.)

To one who knows the sound of hearty cheering, how easily is the above understood. (It is called, I believe, from the diary of a wounded soldier.) Well do I know the sound of whole-hearted British cheering; it is exhilarating, it makes the blood course joyously through the veins, diffusing a wholesome glow over the whole of one's system! It puts new life and energy into the jaded and weary. How welcome will the sound be to the poor, wounded soldier but newly returned from the horrors of the battlefield, his body sorely wounded and racked with pain! At the sound of the whole-hearted cheers and cries of welcome 'thoughts of past horrors seen' begin to fade away, a feeling of content comes over them. They have done their duty to King and country, and though full of pain and maimed, maybe, for life, think 'it was worth it all to be welcomed by such cheering and waving of hands' by a crowd who understood and realized the dangers and horrors the lads had gone through and who showed their appreciation and honor of them by the most expressive and impressive of all welcomes—a real, hearty cheer.

Now, only a few days ago I read in a N. S. paper, a letter from a returned wounded soldier wherein he said 'not only did we get no welcome when we returned to our native land but were insulted on the streets by being called 'tin soldiers!' I won't comment on the implied insult excepting to say that I fully believe the young girls who uttered the words 'tin soldiers' were only thoughtless, as youth sometimes is, and that if they realized and fully understood the horrors of war and what the brave lads had been through would have been amongst the first to give them a smile and a kind word of welcome; but the pathos, disappointment and may be scorn conveyed in the words 'not only did we get no welcome home.' Poor lads! We give them a rousing 'send off' which is quite right, and they receive, a hearty British welcome when they reach Old England's shores. And on their return from France, either on leave or wounded, they receive cheers and kindnesses from every one of Britain's people. There is a crowd at every stopping place along the railway, eager to cheer or to shake by the hand our brave lads who are on their way either two or from France. Ladies are there with refreshments at all hours of the day and night, and young girls and children are all so eager to help 'Tommy,' saving their pennies to purchase fruit, cakes, chocolates and cigars, which they hand round to their heroes.

The highest lady in the land is not too high and great to shake the hand of a wounded Tommy, for is not her husband, son, grandson fighting side by side with the humblest of them? Aye! Duke's son and cook's son fighting side by side! From now on train load after train load of our wounded soldiers will travel the lines on their way to their own little town or village.

The trains may halt for a few minutes at your station. Will you let them glide again from sight without giving the lads a welcoming cheer? without a kindly word or shake of the hand—when the poor fellow is still possessor of a hand? Or will you look on in silent pity, doing and saying nothing because they are not the boys of your own town? Rouse up and give them a cheer! I've no doubt they will all receive a welcome of some kind when they reach their home places if such be small towns or villages; but such is not enough, it is being welcomed only by their own people, their relatives and townspeople, I mean, whereas they should be welcomed heartily by all. Whether they live east or west, near or far, are they not our brave Canadian soldiers who fought side by side with our own town's boys? We are proud of our lads in khaki. Proudly and bravely do we wish him God-speed ere he departs for the dangers across the seas and we should be proud to welcome him when he returns, wounded and perhaps maimed for life in the cause of Right and Justice. For the horrors he has been through give him a cheer, he deserves it.

In Britain, countless are the numbers of widows and mothers bereaved in this war, who are devoting their time to cheering and welcoming the wounded. A sympathetic word, a smile, a handshake from girl or matron is balm to the heart of many a poor war-scarred hero. It helps to efface the horrors he has gone through and witnessed, and in thus brightening the lot of the wounded soldiers the bereaved woman herself is comforted. The glad light in our poor soldier's face at a kind word is reward enough. The kindhearted girls who continue to be at the station when a train-load of our wounded lads for a few minutes will feel amply repaid for their kindly greetings and maybe a handshake here and there, by the look of gratitude and admiration on the faces of the ones who so kindly welcome them. But there are some bashful young fellows who

The increase in the price of printing paper has become so serious that publishers are getting together to devise measures to meet the situation. Many have already increased their subscription rates and some have been forced to suspend publication.

We are advised, however, by the publishers of The Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal that for the present, anyway, there will be no increase in the price of that paper, and we are permitted to offer The Family Herald and Weekly Star along with THE ACADIAN for the small sum of $1.75, that is one full year's subscription to each paper.

This offer is good only until Nov. 30, 1916, as it may be found necessary to make a change then. The publishers of The Family Herald and Weekly Star, notwithstanding the enormous increase in cost of production, have decided to spend more money than ever improving the paper, and to give their great army of readers greater value than ever. A full year's subscription to THE ACADIAN, and The Family Herald and Weekly Star will cost only $1.75 provided orders are received before Nov. 30, 1916. Send your subscription to this office.

Death's Harvest.

We regret to announce the death of Mrs. Margaret S. Currie, wife of Mr. Thos. Currie, which took place last Sunday evening at her residence on Main street. Mrs. Currie was the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. and Margaret Logan, of Milford, N. S., and was only 29 years of age. She taught school for five years in Truro and in Jan., 1912, was married to Mr. Thos. Currie, mining engineer, of Truro. She is survived by her mother, a son and three sisters: Mrs. McDonald, Mrs. Madril, of Milford, and Miss Irene Logan. Mrs. Currie had been a sufferer for over three years. She bore her sickness with quiet patience and fortitude, and it was at one time hoped that she might permanently recover, but she experienced a sudden change for the worse about a fortnight ago, and since then sank rapidly. The deceased was a person of bright, cheerful, unselfish disposition, and leaves many sorrowing friends.

The funeral took place on Wednesday and was conducted by Rev. R. F. Dixon, Rector of St. John's church. The remains were forwarded to Milford for interment.

Men for the Navy.

INTERVIEW WITH THE HON. J. D. HAZEN, K. C., MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES AND NAVAL SERVICE.

Canadians have won undying fame upon the battlefields of Flanders and France. An equal opportunity for distinction upon sea is now offered. A Canadian Naval Overseas Division which will be attached to the Grand fleet is being organized and five thousand men are being called for. The new force will be as distinctly Canadian as are the four divisions now fighting on the Somme. They will be Canadian in pay, Canadian in organization and assistance from the Canadian Patriotic Fund. The sailors from the Dominion will wear a special Canadian badge no matter where or in what unit of the navy they are serving. The organization and maintenance of the division is under the direction of Hon. J. D. Hazen, minister of naval service, who is taking an enthusiastic personal interest in the matter and is making a special plea for recruits for this service.

Who was first broke out, explained Mr. Hazen, the Canadian Government asked the British authorities how we could best help and suggested raising recruits for the navy as well as a land force. At that time all naval reserves had been called out and the Admiralty had a surplus of men. We were informed that they needed no men for the navy and we could best serve the interests of the empire by raising land forces. All our efforts were accordingly so directed.

Since then the naval building programme has been greatly accelerated. The many new ships which have been put in service, have had to be manned and there has been an increasing call for sailors. In addition when conscripts came into force in the United Kingdom recruiting for the navy stopped. New channels to supply the necessary men had to be found. Today the Imperial Navy, which has swept the seas, bottled up the German fleet in the Kiel Canal and has guarded the whole of the empire, requires men. The navy at all costs must be maintained at full fighting strength.

As soon as Canada was made aware of the change in the situation in regard to the navy we offered to form an overseas division of the Royal Naval Canadian Volunteer Reserve and lend them to the Admiralty for service in the Imperial Navy. The Admiralty were pleased to accept the offer and asked if possible that five thousand men be sent of which one thousand would be required by the end of the present year.

Every recruit Canada gives to this force will mean the saving of one soldier for the British Army for if the necessary men are not secured conscripts at present serving in the army will have to be transferred to the navy.

Explaining the arrangements for pay Mr. Hazen said: "The pay of men in the Imperial Navy is very much less than that in force in the Canadian Navy, and consequently the Dominion Government decided that in order to put the Overseas Division of the Royal Naval Canadian Volunteer Reserve on the same footing as the Canadian Expeditionary Force, they would give them similar pay. However, it was pointed out that it was not desirable on a man of war to have men serving on board side by side receiving different scales of pay. The men of this Overseas Division will only themselves receive the same pay as their shipmates in the Royal Navy; the balance of their pay will be retained in Canada until their return, although a portion of this balance will, if so desired, be forwarded monthly to the wives or dependents of the men, the remainder accumulating until their return."

All recruits as soon as enrolled will be given their uniforms and sent to either one of the Naval Depots in England for training. They will be sent overseas as ordinary seamen and those who wish to serve in the stoking ratings will be entitled to volunteer for such service. The question of their advancement to higher ratings will be left in the hands of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty and should they desire to make promotions in this overseas division, the Canadian Government will increase the men's full Canadian pay to the equivalent rate of pay in the Canadian Expeditionary Force for the relative rank.

The Dominion has been divided into six areas for recruiting purposes, each area being in charge of a Naval Recruiting Officer who by permission of the Department of Militia and Defense will be allowed to utilize the militia recruiting machinery, and it is hoped that by this means the whole of the Dominion will be reached.
