CHAPTER XVII.
A CHANCE FOR ESCAPE.

"Well, well, we will not speak of it; but I will say: the quarrel—the misunderstanding—arose from no fault of his. The fault was mine, entirely mine, my dear young lady."

It was a cunning speech, and produced the effect he had intended.

"Looking back to that time—when we parted, friends no longer—my heart is filled with remorse and sorrow. Ah, Miss Marlowe, if we would all of us reflect that life is short, and that death may come to prevent forever any reconciliation between parted friends, how often—ah, how often the rash and foolish quarrel would be averted!" and, apparently overcome by his emotion, he turned his head away and softly blew his nose. "But we will not go back over this sad quarrel," he said. "I have come to see you this morning that I may see if I can be of any further use to you. I trust I may be. There are several things I find that I must speak to you about, much as I should wish to have you undisturbed."

"Will you please tell me everything I should know," said Doris. "I am ashamed that I should have left everything so entirely."

"No, no," he murmured. "Such a terrible bereavement as yours, so sudden, is so overwhelming that no excuse is needed." He took some papers from his pocket. "I will not trouble you more than I can avoid with business matters, my dear young lady; but there are a few things that I find I must speak to you about. First, I must ask you if there is anyone, any friend you would rather I went to who would take this trouble off your shoulders?"

Doris shook her head. "No; there is no one," she said, quietly enough, and with a firm voice. "I have no friend in all the world."

"Except—dare I say, except my humble self?" he murmured. "My dear young lady, what little I have done afforded me a melancholy satisfaction. I have felt all through that by serving you in some slight measure I have been making an attempt at some poor atonement for the error that separated my poor dead friend and myself. Will you allow me to call myself your friend?"

Doris turned to thank him, and he inclined his head gratefully. "Well, then, I have taken upon myself to see to all the arrangements, and have ventured to act just as if I were, say, your father. It was necessary that I should look into poor Jeffrey's affairs, and I have come to tell you the result. I am sorry to say, my dear young lady, that your guardian did not leave any wealth behind him. He died a poor man. Perhaps this will not surprise you?"

"No, no," said Doris. "Tell me everything, please. I do not know what to do—I am so alone."

"Yes, yes," he said. "About your future—forgive me if I mention such a subject—but I presume you will continue your profession."

A shudder ran through Doris's frame at the thought of again facing the crowded theatre.

"No, no!" she said, almost fiercely. "I shall never act again!"

As she answered, the scene of the first night of "Romeo and Juliet" rose before her, and she thrilled with the recollection of the inspiration which had come to her from her love for Cecil Neville. That inspiration had vanished forever now, and to act with a broker's heart would, she knew, be impossible to her.

"No," said Doris, in a low voice. "We were always poor, I think. There was always enough."

He nodded. "Yes, yes, I understand. There is some money; it is not much—about a hundred pounds, I think."

Doris listened with faint interest. If she had heard that she had been left without money, or heiress to a million, it would not have affected her in her present condition.

"Besides the money there are some papers. Nothing of any consequence, however—letters and documents relating to business affairs, engagements at theatres, and so on."

A faint flush came into Doris's face, then left it absolutely colourless. "Nothing more?" she said, with downcast eyes.

"Nothing more," he said, gravely, watching her closely, though he seemed occupied in turning over the papers. "Did you expect—"

"I do not know," she faltered. Then she raised her large, sad eyes. "You know that I am not Jeffrey's daughter?"

He inclined his head. "Yes, I know that; and I know what you expected—hoped, shall I say—that I should find something, some papers that would give us a clue to your parentage. Is that not so?"

Doris's lips formed the "Yes." He sighed and shook his head. "I regret there is no such clue. The secret of your birth, my dear young lady, is buried in my poor friend's grave."

"I shall never go on the stage again," she responded, firmly. Spenser Churchill put up his white hand to his lips to hide the smile of satisfaction her words called up on them.

"No?" he said, thoughtfully and significantly. "Yes, I understand, I quite understand; and I must say I think your decision is a wise one. It was different while your guardian was alive, to watch over you and protect you. You, great as your success has been, I think you are right in your resolve to leave the profession."

"I shall never go back," she said, quietly.

"Then—forgive me—may I ask what you intend doing?"

Doris let her eyes fall upon him almost vacantly for a moment. She had been lost in the memory of those few happy days and nights, and had almost forgotten his presence.

"What I intend doing? Oh, I don't know. I have not thought," she said, and her white hand went to her brow.

"I understand, I understand, and fully sympathise, my dear young lady; but, as your friend—you know you have allowed me to be your friend—it is my duty to ask you. This sum of money, alas! will soon take to itself wings, and—"

Doris roused herself. "And I must still live and eat, even after it is gone, you would say," she said, not bitterly, but, ah, so wearily. "Yes, I know."

"You could earn a large sum on the stage, of course," he murmured. She put out her hand as if to silence him.

"That is out of the question," she said. "I suppose there are other ways of earning money?"

"There are," he murmured, softly. "I am young and strong," she said. "Other women have to work. What do they do? Needlework—"

She looked at her hands with a smile that was like the glint of her old, light-hearted one.

He shook his head. "That, too, is out of the question," he said. "But there are still other ways, I believe—indeed, I have heard that you are very accomplished, Miss Marlowe."

"Am I?" said Doris, simply. "I believe that you are a musician, and that you speak several languages."

"Yes," she said, as simply as before. "Ah, how much I owe to him! I understand it better now—now that it is too late to thank him," and she turned her head away.

"A good musician and linguist need not take to her needle for her maintenance," said Spenser Churchill. "I have, of course, foreseen that the question would arise, and I have—pry forgive me, my dear young lady—been making some enquiries on your behalf."

He drew out a pocket-book and took a letter from it. "It happens that a friend of mine—Lady Despard—you may have heard of her; she is known for her charitable work—"

Doris shook her head. "I have never heard of her," she said, trying to speak with some interest.

"A sweet creature. A widow, alas! though young. Very wealthy, moving in the best society—ahem!—and fond of travelling. She is just going abroad, and requires a companion. I think—I am sure—that you would like her, and that if you could bring yourself to accept the position, which is so much below your genius—"

Doris shook her head. "I have never heard of her," she said, trying to speak with some interest.

"No! It is nothing. The heat—stay, please!"

He stood, regarding her silently, watchfully, with an anxious, sympathetic expression on his smooth face.

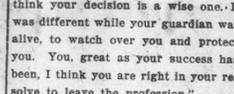

"This lady"—she went on, speaking every word as if it cost her an effort—"this Lady Despard. Will you ask her to take me?"

"But, my dear Miss Marlowe, had you not better consider—"

"I have considered," she said, interrupting him. "If she thinks I can be of any service to her—if she is going away from England at once—"

HOW YOU CAN TELL GENUINE ASPIRIN

Only Tablets with "Bayer Cross" are Aspirin—No others!

If you don't see the "Bayer Cross" on the tablets, refuse them—they are not Aspirin at all.

There is only one Aspirin, that marked with the "Bayer Cross"—all other tablets are only acid imitations. Look for the "Bayer Cross"! Then it is real Aspirin, for which there is no substitute.

Aspirin is not German but is made in America, and is owned by an American Company, all rights being purchased from the U. S. Government.

Genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" have been proved safe by millions for Pain, Headache, Neuralgia, Colds, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Neuritis.

Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets—also larger "Bayer" packages, can be had at any drug store.

Aspirin is the trade mark (Newfoundland Registration No. 761), of Bayer Manufacture of Monoacetic-acid-ester of Salicylic-acid. The Bayer Co., Inc., U.S.A.

"She is going abroad?" said Doris, with sudden eagerness. He inclined his head.

"Yes, to Italy. The change would do you good—is, indeed, absolutely necessary."

Abroad, out of England, beyond the chance of meeting Cecil Neville! A faint hope, for the first time since Jeffrey's death, rose in Doris's heart.

"But you need not decide to-day. You shall think it over," he said, taking up his hat. "By the way, if you should need me will you send word—at any time, and the very moment you would like to see me—to Barton Towers? I am staying with my friend, the Marquis of Stoylo."

Doris started, and the blood rose to her face. "Barton Towers?" she murmured, mechanically.

"Yes," he said, smoothly, as if he had not noticed her sudden agitation. "The marquis is an old friend of mine. So is his nephew and heir, Lord Cecil Neville. You may have heard of him?"

"Yes—I have heard of him," said Doris, in a low voice, which faltered, notwithstanding her effort to keep it steady.

"Yes; a charming young fellow," he went on, with a smile, "but a terribly unsteady one. But there; we must not be hard upon a young fellow in his position. Young men who are blessed with good looks and heirships to marquisates are apt to be unsteady; though I am glad to say that Lord Neville's wild days are nearly over. He is in Ireland at present; but when he comes back he is to marry Lady Grace Peyton."

Doris sat perfectly motionless, her hands clasped in her lap, her eyes fixed on the lovely summer scene framed in the window; but the view was all blurred in her sight, and a sound as of rushing waves rang in her ears.

"To marry Lady Grace Peyton!" she echoed, dully, as if the words possessed no sense.

"Yes," he purred. "It is a very old attachment. She is a most charming and beautiful creature, and I am not surprised that, notwithstanding his numerous flirtations, Lord Neville has remained constant. It will be a most suitable and advantageous match for both of them—My dear young lady"—he broke off, for Doris had sunk back, white to the lips, and with closed eyes—"you are ill. Let me call Mrs. Jelf."

But with an almost superhuman effort, Doris fought down the terrible faintness, and, stretching out her hand commandingly said:

"No! It is nothing. The heat—stay, please!"

He stood, regarding her silently, watchfully, with an anxious, sympathetic expression on his smooth face.

"This lady"—she went on, speaking every word as if it cost her an effort—"this Lady Despard. Will you ask her to take me?"

"But, my dear Miss Marlowe, had you not better consider—"

"I have considered," she said, interrupting him. "If she thinks I can be of any service to her—if she is going away from England at once—"

"She is," he said, softly.

"Well, then, tell her, please, that I am ready—that I will go with her."

HENRY BLAIR

Why Resume War Taxes

(From the Los Angeles Times.)
War taxes in time of peace are no more necessary than is war bread. It is for ourselves to decide how rapidly the war debt shall be paid. Would it not be well for the present Congress to reduce the income tax and other war taxes to something near the rate in effect before the war and let us work on that basis for a couple of years? The acts passed at the present session are not immutable. Why not start with a burden made as light as possible and increase it as our industries get more firmly established? The next generation were to be freed from the hard necessity of daily labor would become decadent. That is the experience of every country known to history. A parsimonious father generally means a profligate son. That is one of the mysterious laws by which nature achieves her hidden ends; it is the law that has given birth to the adage that, in America, from the furrow to the furrow is but the distance of three generations. To assume the burdens of generations yet unborn is to impoverish ourselves and promote a posterity of weaklings.

Gideon Robertson and Tom Moore, president of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada. The miners of Nova Scotia practically refuse to attend the labor convention called by the government to meet in Ottawa in September as a protest against the alleged domination in that proposed gathering of the ultra-conservative labor element.

Regatta Committee Meeting.

Great Enthusiasm. Record number of Crews.

Last night's meeting of the Regatta Committee was the most largely attended for the season, and the most enthusiastic. President Hiscock presided. The collectors reported their work practically completed and that sufficient funds for the conduct of the programme would be forthcoming. The President informed the meeting that application had been made to him by the factories' crews for medals prizes in lieu of money awards. It was decided that medals be offered. The matter of qualification for amateurs brought on a lengthy discussion. It appears that some of the rowers are not conversant with the rules governing this race; and for their information the following is appended:

Qualifications, &c.

Amateur Race—(a) This race shall be confined to persons whose bona fide occupation for the two years immediately preceding the Regatta in which they row does not necessarily involve manual labour. (b) No person shall be eligible to row in this race who has competed for a money prize at a public athletic meeting held on or after the first day of January, A.D. 1900; (c) The names, addresses and occupation of all intending competitors in this race shall be lodged with the Secretary in writing not less than three weeks before the date fixed for the Regatta. (d) Objections to the eligibility of any competitor in this race must be lodged with the Secretary, in writing, not less than a fortnight before the date fixed for the Regatta.

Sections (c) and (d) are not in force this year, owing to the lateness in getting crews together, but those entering will have to prove their bona fides before an examining committee. There was also some discussion in connection with the Juvenile crews. In this race birth certificates must be furnished in each case, and intending competitors must not have attained their 17th birthday. It was decided to erect a special stand for His Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales and party, near the band stand. In connection with the Army and Navy race, it was decided that reserve firemen were not eligible, and a rule to govern this race will be drafted. Next Friday night a meeting will be held when crews will enter, and it is the wish of the committee that the Amateurs and Juvenile crews particularly attend the meeting early. The work assigned to the various committees is expected to be completed by next Friday night and a final meeting will likely be held on the night before the Regatta.

The number of crews offering show that interest in this year's Regatta, exceeds that of any previous year, the number of crew entries being practically the largest on record. These are composed of about ninety per cent. of men who have not rowed in races before, and as enthusiasm runs high amongst them, each race promises to be contested in a most spirited manner. The list of the crews now practising, all of which will doubtless enter, is as follows:

- Amateurs 4 crews.
- Press 5 crews.
- Football 4 crews.
- Truckmen 3 crews.
- Army and Navy 3 crews.
- Fishermen 4 crews.

LONDON GOSSIP.

LONDON, July 27th, 1919.

THE KING'S ROYAL YACHT.

His Majesty's favorite racing yacht Britannia is still in the berth at East Cowes which she has occupied since August, 1914, and the probability is that she will remain there until next year. At one time it was believed that the yacht would be commissioned this season. Orders for her fitting out were actually given, but subsequently they were countermanded.

LONDON'S WATER PAGEANT.

Full advantage promises to be taken of the Thames Embankment—both the Albert Embankment between Vauxhall and Westminster on the south bank, and the Victoria Embankment between Westminster and Blackfriars on the north—by the many sightseers who will crowd to witness the promised mercantile marine pageant from Battersea to Greenwich. The river terrace of the Houses of Parliament will be peers and members general and our legislators will have a special advantage over the ordinary citizen in that they will be able to retire to the committee rooms and the show under cover if the weather proves threatening. The suggestion is to be heard that if any of the city livery companies still possess the state barges which were accustomed to be used on festive occasions when the Thames was the recognized highway to the city they should figure in the coming pageant, together with the King's state barge, which was last used at Henley Regatta, the barge used by the Lords of the Admiralty, and one or two others which continue to be moored upstream. Down to the middle of the seventeenth century, when coaches and sedan chairs were becoming generally adopted, the Thames was the recognized medium of Metropolitan traffic, as many an allusion by Samuel Pepys in his Diary will recall; and it would be of interest if the Select Committee now considering the problem of London traffic were to recommend that some measure of relief of the present congestion might be obtained by reverting to this method of getting about.

A SMALLER NAVY.

The midsummer Naval promotions indicate clearly that the Government intends economies in the Navy, and will maintain a much smaller force in commission. During the war 30 new captains were promoted each half year, and 60 commanders. The new lists only name 20 new captains and 40 new commanders. Many of these, moreover, were noted for special advancement on account of war services. With fewer chances of promotion in their own service, Naval officers will look in increasing numbers for openings in commerce.

SMOKING IN THE HOUSE.

The detection of a member smoking in the House of Commons may not be the first incident of the kind in the annals of the British Parliament, but it is certainly very rare. Recently an effort was made by certain members to get this harmless little relaxation allowed to members attending grand committees, but without success, though it was permitted, I believe, on certain occasions before the war. It is interesting to note, however, that it has long been one of the privileges of the members of the House of Representatives in the United States to smoke during the sittings of the House. Lord Bryce in his book on "The American Commonwealth" describes how certain congressmen, "tired of sitting still, rise and stretch themselves, while the western visitor, long, lank, and imperturbable, leans his arms on the railing, chewing his cigar, and surveys the scene with little reverence." Later on in the same chapter, Lord Bryce remarks that smoking shocks the Englishman who visits the American Lower House in session, but adds that it does not shock him any more than the English practice of wearing hats in both Houses of Parliament shocks the American.

FLAGS.

The most striking thing about the peace demonstration after all the flags, I had not conceived that until coming into London at Waterloo Station. Most of the little country stations had their Union Jacks, but at Wimbledon the number began to grow unusual. Passing Clapham and Battersea one was aware of flags in places where they had never been seen before, such as on the top of gasometers and factory chimneys, where the placing of them must have meant much organization, work and danger. Nearly every mean street one glimpsed had a row of flags across it, and most of the back windows showed flags to the railways. The big blocks of flats and offices in Piccadilly and Westminster had flags almost in proportion, and nearly every back garden and court had a small flag of some sort. There was nothing like it even on Armistice Day. An interesting point was the prevalence of Belgian flags. Many of them were no doubt bought early in the war, and many also looked too new for that. The only flag that seemed too small for the place and the occasion was the flag over the Houses of Parliament.

M. CLEMENCEAU AND THE MOTTO.

Just before the signing began at Versailles, Bonar Law called Lloyd George's attention to the motto painted on the ceiling over M. Clemenceau's head. It ran, "Le Roi gouverne par lui-même." Lloyd George chuckled and pointed it out to Clemenceau saying, "You might have written that." "No," the "Tiger" answered, "I should have written 'I rule by myself.'" It is true. Clemenceau's power in France, at the moment, depends entirely on his own personality and his own achievements. He seems just as vigorous as ever and spoke with great force on Peace day. France expects that he will see all the Peace Treaties signed and then retire from office. But he is not worn out, and is fit to endure many months of diplomatic and political strife.

SURVIVALS.

The City of London "chop-shops" are almost curiosities now, and one by one they are dropping off. But there is still Pim's, which is famous for oysters and House of Commons waiters, and Simpson's, where they still guess the weight of cheese every day, but during the war the champagne was not served out to all the company at the expense of the house when a lucky guest guessed it right. Champagne had become too precious, and only the guesser and a few of his friends were rewarded by a magnum. Then there is the old George in the Borough, the only example of an old coaching inn left in London, and there an ordinary begins at one o'clock and is mostly attended by hop merchants. The Ship and Turtle is changed out of all memory. No longer do the turtles floating in their tanks adorn one side of the smoking room. Birch's little green shop at the top of Cornhill still survives, and has revived its old delicacies after the war, and in a long, narrow, plain, mournful room upstairs it still serves turtle soup, and turtle soup only. Fleet Street still has The Cheshire Cheese, and sometimes Americans are so scarce that even a Fleet Street man can get a share of what it believes to be a famous pudding or a famous pie.

COATS AND SKIRTS.

Well-dressed women are beginning to think about ordering a good tweed suit for wear in August and later. Ready-made suits for women are to be had at a price, but with tweeds, even more than other materials, it is much better to get the stuff from a good firm and have it made up. Tweed costumes are being made very short, very straight, and with a superabundance of pockets. No decorative buttons or stitchings are allowed. The woman who has worn uniform during the war now orders such things out when she desires civilian dress, and her example is followed. Pockets are used on the skirt as well as on the coat. Belts have become rather too common for them to be necessary. On the better-made suits collars are made so that they can turn up and button round the neck.

THE GOVERNMENT AND RUSSIA.

The Government's policy in regard to Russia, concerning which a full explanation may be given in Parliament this week, continues in accordance with the principles already laid down. These are not to extend operations in that country, but gradually to withdraw British troops as safety and honor allow. There has at no time been an intention to occupy even a portion of the country permanently, the only desire being to stand by those Russians who through-out the struggle proved themselves Britain's friends, and to assist to stabilize the state of affairs for the security of Russia as a whole. The task has been a tedious and thankless one, and it is with relief that the end will be welcomed. The withdrawal of the British troops from the Caucasus and the North of Russia will prove the beginning of that end; but the whole affair has been so productive of misunderstanding, not only at home but abroad, that the full statement of Government policy which is now indicated as assured, will be welcomed all round.

Napoleon at St. Helena.

St. Helena, the island whose specialty is the entertainment of deposed monarchs, has good economic reasons for its reported desire to have the Kaiser for a prisoner, says a bulletin from the National Geographic Society's Washington headquarters.

Napoleon was its most famous and best paying "guest" though not the only one. Dintzula, a Zulu king, was a more recent exile, sent there after he led a rebellion against the British in the Transvaal in 1889. While Napoleon was at St. Helena "profferting" at the expense of the Bonaparte household and the numerous members of the garrison sent to guard him, was reduced to a fine art by the island citizens. The withdrawal of the British troops from the island, Sir Hudson Lowe. Instead of living within the 8,000 pounds sterling allowed for the maintenance of Bonaparte and the half hundred members of his entourage the bills for a year amounted to three times that sum. Upon complaint of the governor, which Napoleon resented, the ex-monarch executed a bit of "play to the galleries" by ordering his silver sold, and his bed broken up for wood, which, when reported, in England, created so much criticism of the governor, already none too popular, that further remonstrances were not made.

Napoleon's Wants Few.

Napoleon's principal luxury was books, his diversions were chess playing, and digging in his garden. Like the former kaiser he spent many hours with the Bible. He professed no play, however, frankly admitting that he was making a study of certain Old Testament books to show that monarchies had divine sanction, and he also spoke of wanting to write a monograph on "The Campaign of Moses."

Since St. Helena is some 700 miles from the nearest land, Ascension Island, and 1,200 miles from the nearest African port, the extreme precautions taken by Lowe to prevent the escape of the man who once had ruled half of Europe created considerable amusement. Sir Hudson was greatly disturbed one day to find a newly arrived Corsican priest riding horseback in a coat similar to Napoleon's, believing the compatriot involved in a plot to deceive the guards.

Beans' Color Offended.

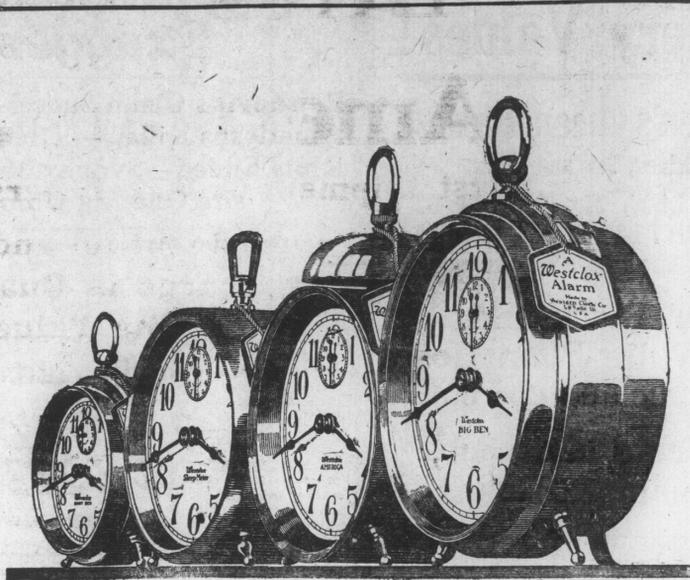

The French commissioner complained that the sight of a passing dog was enough to induce the governor to plant a new sentinel on the spot, but perhaps the most extreme of the many amusing stories of Lowe's solicitude was the occasion of his protest against Napoleon's planting some white and green beans in this combination of colors a subtle allusion to the white flag of the Bourbons and the distinctive green uniform of the general.

Living almost wholly within two rooms and his garden, Napoleon insisted on all the pomp and ceremony possible in such cramped quarters. Since his companions necessarily were much in his presence his insistence upon their standing sometimes brought them to the point of fainting. None might speak unless spoken to and all became extremely polite with the court life in a shanty involving all the burdens without any of the splendours of a palace.

Ignored "Keeper"

At first the exile rode horseback but soon abandoned this rather than have an English guard along. His seclusion is best attested by the fact that for five or six years' stay he did not exchange a word with the governor; and of the three commissioners—Russian, Austrian and French—sojourning there by the provisions of a treaty to assure themselves of his presence, one saw him through a telescope once, a second looked into his face for the first time when he was to be buried and the third saw him not at all.

Napoleon's days at St. Helena were not wholly devoted to killing time. He dictated his voluminous memoirs and military commentaries,

Westclox

GOOD looking clocks: and as good all through as they look outside. Westclox construction is the real reason for Westclox success. A handsome case can't count minutes. Good timekeeping must be bred in the bone.

There's a simple reason why Westclox keep better time and last longer. Every wheel turns on needle-fine pivots of polished steel. This largely defeats friction. There's less wear and tear.

We thank this process for Big Ben's popularity. It's a Westclox patent, of course. But all Westclox users benefit from it. Every Westclox alarm is made in this same way.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

THE JOY OF THE UNEXPECTED.

Last week my little niece was invited unexpectedly to an impromptu birthday party gotten up for a little neighbor. There were only three other children present and, owing to a hitch in an order, there was no ice-crowning feature of all children's parties. And yet I never saw my small niece more enthusiastic than she was over that party.

Why was it? I asked that question, and this was the answer evolved out of childhood's effort to express itself. Well, there were such cunning hints on their plates, and they played a new game that was lots of fun, and they had a balloon to bring home—and then the crux of the matter: "And you know, Aunt Ruth, I didn't know I was going anywhere at all till most lunch time and I was so surprised."

Let's Give Them More Such Joys To Remember.

How children do love the unexpected thing! My small niece has been to many more elaborate parties. It could have been nothing but the romance, the charm of the unexpected, that cast such a halo around this simple affair.

Look back on your own childhood. Won't many of the high spots that stand out in your memory picture, be such small things as this lit up by the charm of unexpectedness?

Parade Instead of a Job At Weeding.

I can instantly pick out half a dozen in mine. There was the holly-morning which I had expected to find prosaically in the backyard, when some friends who had heard who had a vacant store on the route of a big procession swept upon me and invited me to be part of the party to see the parade there. I had just time to make myself presentable before I was swept off. I have never seen such a wonderful parade since. And yet I know, from the nature of the occasion, that I must have seen half a dozen larger and more costly ones.

And then there was the evening when brother came home at 5 o'clock and said that he had tickets to the circus that very night and not only that, but that we were to go in town to dinner first.

That Wonderful Knock On The Door.

And the morning when I had actually gone to school and settled down to the hated routine and someone knocked on the door (how we always loved a knock on the school room door! It had such infinite possibilities in it) and behold the miracle happened—it was for me. Mother had a chance to take a long drive into the country and knowing how seldom I got such outings had come down to ask that I might be left off for the day. It was a heavenly June day and I'll never forget the mingled pride and excitement and bliss with which I sped out to the dressing room, got my hat and skipped down the stairs, leaving 40 evens youngsters behind—which I feared added to the enchantment (shame that it should have been and should so often be so).

And then—but you have your own memories. The purpose of mine is only to waken yours, and perhaps to waken you to an opportunity.

Just Folks

THE GREATER HAPPINESS.

I reckon when life is done And we look back across the years To see the goals which we have won And count our varying smiles and tears. The greatest joys that we'll recall Will not be those of skill or might, But children romping in the hall And little games we played at night.

The big things, when our life is through Will be the little ones of now; We'll prize those moments in review When never was a troubled brow. When eyes with love were all aglow And mother sang her lullabies; Those restful, happy scenes we know At night when moon and stars arise.

I fancy none of us will yearn To fight our battles once again; Or would unto this world return To triumph o'er our country men, But we might brave the ways of earth And live our many trials o'er, To hear our children's shouts of mirth And romp with them upon the floor.

We shall not value glory then Nor think of wealth as now we do; We'll prize those glorious moments when Contentment and delight we knew. And looking back across our years The merry scenes of home we'll see Through eyes bedimmed by crystal tears, And wish such joy again could be.

He'd Got Medals.

"You remember my brother Michael," said Pat; "he's turned out a fine athlete and has just won a gold medal for a hundred yards' sprint."

"Good for him," replied Dennis; "but do you know my uncle Maguire at Ballybentley?"

Pat was not quite sure that he had ever heard of him. "Well," resumed Dennis, "he's got gold medals for half a mile, five miles, and ten miles; three silver cups for swimming, a marble clock for wrestling, two silver belts for boxing, and a heap of prizes for cycling."

"Some athlete!" cried Pat. "Not at all; not at all!" exclaimed Dennis. "He keeps the local pawnshop."

A Smart Lad.

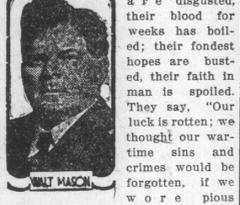

Lord Londonderry, who narrowly escaped being killed in an aeroplane accident recently, is fond of telling the story of a smart lad whom one of his keepers caught one day fishing in his private waters. "You mustn't fish here," he was told, "these waters belong to Lord Londonderry."

"Do they?" said the boy. "I didn't know that." And promptly laying aside his rod he took up a book and commenced reading. The keeper, therefore, departed, but returning the same way about an hour or so afterwards, he found the boy had started fishing again. "Didn't I tell you that this water belonged to Lord Londonderry?" he shouted.

"Why you told me that an hour ago," retorted the youngster. "Surely the whole river don't belong to him; his share went by long ago."

I bought a horse with a supposed incurable ringbone for $30.00. Cured him with $1.00 worth of MINARD'S LINIMENT and sold him for $85.00. Profit on Liniment, $54.00. MOISE DEROSCE, Hotel Keeper, St. Philippe, Que.

HARD TERMS.

The Germans are disgusted, their blood has boiled; their fondest hopes are busted, their faith in man is spoiled. They say, "Our luck is rotten; we thought our wartime sins and crimes would be forgotten, if we were so pious grins; we thought our protestations of sorrow and regret would cause the allied nations to wilt, already yet. Instead of which they soak us, demand our stock and store; upon the field they broke us, in peace they break us more. And so the German barter his future for his past; we are the modern martyrs, ach himmel and dogdast." We hear the German whining, who swaggered every hour, when on his helm was shining the sun of pomp and power. If he had been the victor, if he had done us brown, doggone his ugly picture, what terms would he lay down? Would he be strong for mercy? He's not that kind of gent; but, swollen up and puffy, he'd take our bottom cent. He'd shoot us full of bullets, and give us grievous hurts, and eat our best spring pullets, and swipe our Sunday shirts. With Germans for our masters we'd know what hard luck is; envied by disasters, we'd sadly sigh, "Gee whiz!" We hear the Germans grumbling and beefing at his lot; he thinks the terms are humbling, and all that kind of rot.

From Fireman to Millionaire.

New York, July 14.—When the giant liner Imperator docked at Hoboken last night, there climbed out of the stokehole a coal passer, who has suddenly come into an income of $480,000 a year. He is E. L. Perkins, 30 years old, of Eastland, Texas, a sailor in the United States Navy. In 1913 Perkins bought an eighty-acre farm three miles northeast of his home-town, and planted corn on it. During the war he enlisted in the Navy. Just before the Imperator sailed from here for Brest to load troops, Perkins, who had been assigned to her fire-room force, received word from his father that a 6,000-barrel gusher had been located on his farm. Three drillers started to bore seven other wells, and they figure the eight might apout his income up to a million dollars a year.

PEACE THOUGHTS.

Monday and Tuesday next are the days set apart for public celebrations of the great peace which came through the submission of Germany and her Allies to the terms of the Associated Powers. It is exceedingly fitting that the first day of the rejoicing—August 4th—should be the fifth anniversary of the declaration of war upon Germany by the British Government. And as on the very day that the Empire stood shoulder to shoulder in its steadfast determination that the infamous doctrine of Might over Right, should not prevail, so is it in keeping with the spirit of that determination that we celebrate the breaking down of autocracy in its last great stronghold in civilized lands, as well as the salvation of the world from being enslaved by a nation professing Christianity but following the ways of savagery and barbarism. Peace has been published and liberty proclaimed, and races long held in bondage have been set free to follow their God-given privileges, among which are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. By the coming of peace the foundations have been laid for an international structure which gives promise to guaranteeing future freedom from the alarms of war to a world sick and weary of a bloody struggle, in which millions of the best of humanity were sacrificed to the Moloch of one man's ambition for conquest.

But those who died have not died in vain. Upon the altar of their sacrifice will be raised countless invisible temples to their memory, for in the heart of every human being who is today sharing in the blessings of peace, there will be a shrine set apart to the memory of those who died for freedom.

The thoughts of all, particularly on Monday and Tuesday, will ever turn to those who made peace possible, to the soldiers, the sailors, and the nurses who will never come home again. The fruits of their sacrifice are ours, and it would be shame to us, if we, in the enjoyment of those things for which they gave all, should for one short moment forget them. Year after year as the Empire commemorates the events connected with the war, the names of those who remain over there, who went out into the sunset glow of the West, will receive a new fragrance, an added preciousness, as we more and more come to realize how much we owe them.

There is much cause, even now for anxiety, but in spite of that our national celebrations are quite right and proper. They are the natural ebullitions of patriotism and joy, ebullitions suppressed during the trying period of conflict, but now that the object has been attained, must be given vent. But not in too extravagant a manner. Anything but that which is strictly necessary to sober and reasonable rejoicing is to be condemned. We are not yet healed of the welts and weals of the war. There is the legacy of sorrow which it has left; there is still distress and bodily suffering which call for all the means of alleviation that can be applied to them. There is the contrast between joyful and sorrowful, light and heavy hearts: between the war rich and the war poor: between prosperity and penury: between the homes and those who mourn for their loved ones, and those who had the pleasure of welcoming back their sons from over there. All these have to be considered in our celebrations and the enthusiasm so toned down that no heart pang will be endured by any of those sorrowing ones who have suffered, no wounds of grief reopened to flow afresh.

Forgetting the Unfortunate.

Plans for the celebration of peace are being made now and everybody is enthused with the idea of making the two days a time of joy, happiness and enjoyment. No doubt every person enjoying health and strength will be able to participate in and enjoy that time, but there are two sets of people for whom no arrangements have yet been made. These are the inmates of the Poor Asylum and the Penitentiary. It is only fair that something should be done for these unfortunate people. Why could not all prisoners in the latter institution now serving sentences under six months be given their liberty in celebration of the signing of peace? It has always been the custom to release prisoners on any great event such as this, and surely no one will raise his voice against a move of this sort. It would be strange on our part if we could enjoy ourselves without hindrance, while these poor creatures lay behind prison doors or in the Poor Asylum. If this is to be a time of thanksgiving, let all have the opportunity of giving thanks.

Increase for Police and Firemen.

It has long been felt that the Police and Fire forces were not receiving sufficient salaries, and immediately upon assumption of his present office, the Minister of Justice, Hon. A. B. Morine, K.C., set enquiries going and appointed the Deputy Minister, Mr. Summers, and the Inspector General of Police, Mr. C. H. Hutchings, a commission to examine into the matter of pay of the police and firemen. The report of this commission, presented on June 14th, stated that the present rate of wages are entirely inadequate, and the members of the Police and Fire Forces cannot live decently and respectably, and maintain their independent positions with the present pay. We find an average increase in the cost of provisions between 1914 and 1919 of 105 and 110 per cent.

Mr. Morine then submitted copies of the report to the members of the Executive Council, recommending, at the same time, that certain increases be made. At last evening's Council meeting it was decided that the recommendations were just and they were then agreed upon. The new schedule is as follows:

Superintendent	$1,500.00
Secy. and Accountant	1,200.00
District Inspector	1,300.00
Head Constables	1,100.00
Sergeants	950.00
Acting Sergeants	900.00
Constables:
20 years upwards	850.00
15 to 20 years	837.50
10 to 15 years	825.00
5 to 10 years	812.50
3 and 4 years	800.00
2 years	787.50
1 year recruits	700.00

Fire Department:
Superintendent	$1,400.00
District Chief	1,300.00
District Inspector	1,100.00
Sergeants	950.00
Engineers	850.00
Constables	850.00

Needless to state, the expedition with which the matter was taken up and decided upon, is highly pleasing to the police and fire forces, and, therefore, the country generally. Both these branches of the public service have for a long time been badly paid and, it seemed, unappreciated, and now that their worth has been recognized the channel through which went the forces that brought this about will always be held in highest estimation by everyone concerned, directly or indirectly. Hon. A. B. Morine has proven, once more, his deep concern for all with whom he comes in contact.

N. I. W. A. MEETING.—A meeting of the N. I. W. A. was held last night, and was largely attended. Considerable routine business was dealt with.

Inter-Denominational Education.

SOME NOTABLE OPINIONS.

That Inter-denominational Education is popular, is proven by the enthusiastic resolutions passed at the concluding meetings of the Methodist and Church of England Educational Campaigns. Not a dissenting voice was raised at either meeting, and the various speakers were most enthusiastic in speaking for and supporting the resolutions. The Telegram reporter interviewed several gentlemen prominent in Church and State matters, yesterday, and from them obtained expressions of approval and support. These are:

Hon. Sir Edgar Bowring:—"In my opinion there is nothing calculated to do more good for Education in this country than the amalgamation of the different religious bodies."

Rev. Dr. George Bond, President of the Methodist Conference, says:—"I believe, in Education for the greatest possible number, with the greatest possible equipment, the best possible teachers, and the least possible expense to those obtaining it. Therefore, I believe in any scheme which, by mutual and equitable arrangement and co-operation among the churches, will secure for our young people in this city, at all events, and, I hope, throughout the bounds of the country, eventually, free, inter-denominational, and compulsory education. Meanwhile, let us all throw together and work together for higher, and also for elementary, schools in St. John's. This very campaign is an education in itself of the value of united and coordinated effort."

Rev. Dr. Edgar Jones, Rector of St. Thomas's:—"The Church has everything to gain and nothing to lose by Education, and the better the system the greater the gain. My congregation is with me in supporting Inter-denominational Education."

Mr. W. R. Warren, Chairman of Division A—The winning Division of the late Campaign:—"Money talks; and having got the money, we have the right to talk—amalgamation."

Rev. Dr. Curtis, President Methodist Board of Education:—"The Methodist people are, and always were, in favor of Inter-denominational Schools. In educational matters union is strength and division is weakness. It should be an easy matter for men whose principal aim is efficiency in Education, to make such arrangements between denominations as would conduce to that efficiency."

Hon. W. B. Grieve, of the Campaign Committee:—"You cannot separate secular education from religion. The lessons of the late war teach us that the basic principle underlying our success was an absolute belief in God. Earnest men, willing to collaborate and compromise in minor details, should be able to overcome the difficulties which stand in the way of Inter-denominational Education."

Mr. W. S. Monroe, Chairman of Division B:—"Religion must not be separated from the schools, and Christianity and Education must go hand in hand under any form of amalgamation that will be arranged."

Parade Notes.

Col. Rendell has charge of marshaling the parade. Inspector General Hutchings is expected home today, and will be requested to co-operate. First will come the Navy led by mounted police, then the Military, Brigades, Boy Scouts, Bands, captured enemy trophies, including four heavy field guns drawn by sixteen horses; motor cars with wounded soldiers, V.A.D.'s and nurses, members of the Executive Council, Judges, Mayor and members of the City Council. Floats, representing all nations; funmakers, clowns, minstrels, on foot and mounted, decorated cars, and vehicles of every kind and description and the general public. The Kaiser will also be there—don't miss seeing him.

Naval reservists and troops are requested to assemble at the junction of King's Bridge and Military Road at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning. Captured enemy arms will be parked by 10.30 at the same point.

Parade commences 11 o'clock sharp. Motor cars with wounded soldiers will be given precedence in the parade, and will assemble Tuesday morning from Ordnance Square down Government Street in readiness to come up and enter the eastern Government House gates immediately after the captured enemy trophies.

All floats and motor trucks will assemble Tuesday morning between Circular Road and the eastern gates of the Government House to enter immediately after the Government and City representatives.

All decorated motor cars will park along Circular and King's Bridge Rd. to enter the Government House grounds immediately after floats, etc. All motor car drivers are requested to keep at least ten yards apart to avoid accident.

Prizes will be given for the best decorated float or motor truck; for the most beautifully decorated motor car; also for the most original car decoration; and for the best decorated vehicle of any description; for the best clowns or minstrels, also special prizes for the best decorated Ford and Overland cars.

Don't forget to send in your names early if you can possibly arrange to take one, two, three or more wounded soldiers in your car to the parade. An effort will be made on return of Inspector General Hutchings to have all the city fire engines, and firemen join in the parade.

As Then, So Now.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir,—I have before me a print of the landing in St. John's of King Edward as Prince of Wales. In front of the arch erected in his honor at the old gates of the Queen's Wharf, stood along the north side of Water Street a Guard of Honor from our Volunteers. Opposite to them was a long line of Freemasons in their regalia. The citizens, generally, rose to the occasion and the different societies lined the route from the Queen's Wharf to Government House. It remains to be seen whether we will be less loyal in the reception of His Royal Highness who is now getting ready to visit us in response to the invitation extended to him from here. It ought not to be impossible to find amongst our civilians a sufficient number entitled to constitute a Guard of Honor at the landing. The Freemasons and other societies who participated in welcoming the heir to the throne in those days are not without successors or representatives here today, and there are loyal subjects of His Majesty to be found who could line the long route all the way up Water Street and beyond. If they fail to extend the whole way the line could be continued by the school children of the city. In less than a fortnight from now St. John's is again to be honored as the first place in the Overseas Dominions to receive a visit from the popular and gallant young soldier Prince who is to be our King, and I doubt not that the citizens are prepared to do their part now as their forefathers did in days of yore. We are, however, on this occasion laboring under a disadvantage, for in the past, royal visits were prepared for by an organization extending over some months, while at present nothing has been done except to begin the building of Government arches and the practicing of crews for our annual regatta. As His Royal Highness sails on Tuesday next here it is high time for citizens to awake and get to work unless we want to be put to shame by our Canadian neighbors. We cannot afford to lose the reputation which we have held as the most Ancient and Loyal Colony of the British Crown.

Yours,
NEWFOUNDLANDER.

Exploiting Our Coal Areas.

GOVERNMENT MAKING INITIAL SURVEY.

In consequence of certain reports received from scientific and practical coal men, the Government has decided to undertake an exploratory survey, by diamond drilling, on the Crown Lands near Howley Station; and, to that end has entered into a contract with the Smith and Travers Company, Ltd., of Sudbury, Ontario, for the boring of not less than three thousand lineal feet. If the results justify further boring, about five thousand feet in all will be done, in order to determine with greater certainty whether mining should be undertaken. The boring will take place under the superintendence of an engineer appointed by the Government; and, we understand that the gentleman who had charge of the work at South Branch, for the Reid Newfoundland Company, Mr. Hatch, has been selected to superintend this work near Howley. Generally, too, Mr. Forbes of the Reid Newfoundland Company will advise Mr. Hatch.

A large portion of machinery, tools, and equipment, necessary for boring, is already at South Branch, and the remainder is to be shipped here from the United States as quickly as possible. The representative of the contractor left by train last night to start the transportation of the machinery, and the work is to be done with diligence; and it is hoped that by the end of this season a very large portion of the mining operations may be completed. Work will continue during the winter. Some road making at Howley will be necessary, and this has also been undertaken by the contractor. It is said by engineers that the indications are that coal in quantities sufficient to warrant commercial operations can be hopefully expected in the region where work is about to commence.

Public opinion will heartily endorse the action of the Government in deciding upon this further exploration, as the discovery of abundant coal is almost a vital necessity to the industrial development of this Colony.

Our Baseball Column.

PLAGIARISED AND OTHERWISE.

The baseballers had a special meeting last night to make arrangements for the proposed intertown series for the R. G. Reid trophy. Major Tompkins who so successfully controlled the City pets in past seasons was again unanimously elected manager, and the selection of the home team will be in the hands of Major Tompkins, Mr. Fred V. Chesman, and the four managers of the League clubs, viz.—Messrs. Hiltz, Hartnett, and French. Two teams will be picked—A and B—and will receive their tryout at St. George's Field on Thursday evening when an exhibition game will be played. It was decided that the big championship game between the Cubs and Red Lions will be played on Wednesday evening, immediately after which the city nines will be picked. Next week's game will therefore be as follows:—

WEDNESDAY.

League fixture, Cubs vs. Red Lions.

THURSDAY.

Exhibition Game, A team vs. B team.

In order not to interfere with the big Peace programme there will be no game on Tuesday evening.

INTER-TOWN GAMES.

While no definite word has yet been received from Grand Falls, it is thought that their team will journey there on Monday the 11th, play their first game Tuesday night, take in the Regatta, playing their remaining games on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, and returning to Grand Falls the following Sunday's express. We understand that the series this year will consist of 7 games, four of which are to be played here and the remaining three at Grand Falls on their big Annual Sports' Day on September 4th. Since the return of so many of their good players from overseas the "paperman" will present the strongest aggregation, and the series for the championship of Newfoundland should be an exciting one. We understand further that some of the admirers here of the Bell Island nine are endeavoring to get them to enter the lists, in which case Regatta Week will witness some classy games of ball.

The outcome of Wednesday night's Cubs-Red Lions game will doubtless decide the championship. Still "there's many a slip" etc.

Oh! here's to the Lions, the baseball team that plays a game that's snappy. If they don't snag that pennant flag darn soon, we'll all go batty.

The way some ball players that you'd think were afraid of getting tired running if they knocked out a home run, or 'praps it is they don't smoke "Gems".

Now come the melancholy days—the saddest of the year. The manager he ups and says "We'll win the flag next year."

It is likely that ex-Lieut. Sebati Foran will be string pitcher for the papermen when they come to town Regatta week.

If their batting averages were their temperatures, our local pitchers would be always cool.

THE VITAL QUESTION.

There's a question that has flattered on my lips for many days; and though I've tried to ask it, my tongue somehow defers. The sight of your fair smiling face, your ruby lips so red, your golden hair, your rosy cheeks, a spell o'er me has spread.

It binds my speech, my pulse beats fast and slow by turns, and yet—al though I try my best to speak, the best I do is sweat. I'd give a million dollars just to ask you one small question: but I can't murmur, much less speak—perhaps it's indigestion. Well—here goes, I will be a sport, although it gives me cramps—Now listen—Tell me, honest, dear, WHO'LL BE THIS SEASON'S CHAMPS?

ARTICLE XXIV.

In his letters Mr. Kelson made references to the escapes of the town of Trinity by fire. The same may be said with regard to all the principal towns in this island. I have already referred to the conflagrations that all but wiped out the city of St. John's on several occasions, and also Harbor Grace and Carboner. In glancing over some old records, I came across the address of the Hon. Assistant Judge Des Barres to the Grand Jury of the Supreme Court held in St. John's on the 26th April, 1846, and it looks to me as if the learned Judge had been visited by a conflagration, probably the most destructive in our history up to that time. The Grand Jury, of which Nicholas Stabb, Esq., was chosen Foreman, were as follows: Hon. Lawrence O'Brien, Hon. John Kent, Thomas Glen, Thomas Rowe, Dugald McKellar, W. Le. Messurier, T. G. Morey, J. J. Rogerson, E. Bowring, H. P. Bowring, S. Mudge, John McWilliams, Walter Dillon, Gilbert Clapp, and Edward Morris, Esquires.

Judge Des Barres' Charge.

His Honor then delivered a succinct charge to the Grand Jury. He said it was arranged that Mr. Justice Lilly should preside during the term, but he regretted to say that, from indisposition he could not do so, and the discharge of the duties, consequently devolved upon him—the Chief Justice being absent on the Northern Circuit. It appeared, and he was sorry for the fact, that the calendar exhibited a more than usual number of charges of petty larceny, all again juvenile offenders, on which indictments would be sent up to them by the proper officer, as also against other persons charged with receiving property from these parties. His Honor had no doubt that calm and impartial matters would meet that and the public in the opinion of their capacity and ability to detect guilt, as well as to acquit innocence. There was a presentment which His Honor could not refrain from bringing under the special notice of the Grand Jury, relative to the want of a safe for the security from fire of the public records, private deeds and official documents, deposited in the Registrar's Office. This is a subject of vast importance, involving a large amount of property, for if fire should unfortunately occur, which may Providence avert, and consume these papers, the consequences would be incalculable. His Honor had hoped that, as the matter had formerly been brought under the attention of the Court by the Grand Jury, some members of that body holding a seat in the General Assembly, would have exerted his influence to obtain the necessary means to construct a safe, yet he regretted that it seemed to have escaped their notice. However he trusted that even yet something might be done to provide against so dreadful a calamity as would befall the public by the destruction of the public records and deeds by fire.

TO FIRE COMPANIES.

The fire Engines of all the Wards will be taken out and exercised on Tuesday next the 5th May, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when the Working Companies and all others liable under the Act, Wm. 4, Cap. 3, entitled "An Act for the establishment of Fire Companies," are requested to attend or they will incur the penalties therein provided.

(By order)

EDWARD MORRIS,
Secretary.

Not five weeks afterwards the fire did occur and St. John's was in ruins.

Toussaint's Fire.

Harbor Grace, or rather the principal business portion of it was entirely destroyed by fire twelve years ago. As there are many at home and abroad who remember the terrible calamity, but very few, if any, who can name the people who occupied the houses previous to their destruction, I think it will interest their descendants and the public generally if I name them. As I said before it was Mr. Kelson's references to the fires in Trinity that induced me to run off on this cut. The great fire in Harbor Grace, known as Toussaint's, occurred on the 12th of April, 1858. I cannot remember the fire, but I can remember when the town was being rebuilt, immediately after its destruction. On the South Side of Water Street were destroyed the premises of Dr. Allan, N. & J. J. Jilard, Messrs. Puntun & Munn, John Fisher, Capt. Munn, Capt. Taylor, James Hippisley, Capt. Drysdale, Rachel Green, Doyle & Hunt, Ridley & Sons, Rutherford Bros., Capt. John Stephenson, Charles Walker.

On the North Side—Richard Woolfrey, Mrs. Malloy, Richard Lahey, John Byrne, Patrick French, J. C. Toussaint, Robert Walsh, Misses Prendergast, James Drysdale, Wm. Burke, Mrs. Dixon, Pierce Maher, Mrs. Donovan, Catherine Degan, Garrett Condon, Wm. Fitzgerald, Matthew O'Neill, Mrs. Cooney, Mrs. Gushue, Peter Murphy, Mrs. Maddox, Dillon, Thomas Walsh, Mrs. Rohan, Pak Strapp, Mrs. Finn, John Mulrally. There is one house still remaining on Water Street, Harbor Grace, which escaped by the conflagration, and that is the house owned by Mr. Shea at the junction of Victoria and Water Streets. This house was built by an Englishman named Jacob Moore, about 1830. He was a blacksmith by trade, and had an Irish foreman, one of the most skillful workmen that ever came to the country. It was he who made the fastenings which cut down the post upon which the body of Downey was gibbeted. The authorities thought that it could never be cut down.

Some Shipping Losses.

On the 5th of March, 1846, the schr. Inverness, George Rex, master, belonging to Messrs. J. & W. Kent of St. John's, which sailed from Trinity on a sealing voyage was lost in the ice during the early part of that month. Master and crew saved.

Capt. Davis, of the ship Goodwin, arrived at Boston on 8th April, 1846, from Liverpool, reports that on the 1st April, lat. 43.26, long. 57, he fell in with a boat belonging to the brig Juno, of and from Greenock for St. John's, Newfoundland, wrecked among the ice, on the 8th March, in lat. 46.30, long. 47.30, and took from the Capt. John Gibbs (master), Adam Curran (mate), Peter Buron (2nd mate), Alexander Burke and John Griffey (seaman)—the survivors of the Juno's crew of 12 persons. The others perished in the boat. Those taken on board the Goodwin were frozen and in an exhausted condition, having been 21 days exposed in a small boat, and for a length of time without any water and a small supply of provisions. John Griffey (or Gaffney) died one hour after being taken off the wreck. But I must get on with Mr. Kelson's letters.

A Winter Packet.

Trinity, Jan. 23, 1812.

I send this by the ship mentioned in my last, which now leaves Trinity at a season later than any vessel was ever before known to do, and will undoubtedly be the last opportunity I shall have of writing you this winter. The Gannet sailed on the 10th inst., and had a very fine time of the land for two days, which I hope carried her far enough off before the east and southeast winds came up, of which we have lately had a prevalence. With regard to seals we have not yet heard of anything having been done, and if we judge from the winds and weather we had, the fishery in this part of the country does not at all promise to be productive. In the List of Remains beef, which turns out to be pork, a few tins of beef by the first vessel (should this reach you in time) will be particularly acceptable. You will please be particular in stating in the Spring whether you have received all my letters from No. 1 to 38 inclusive. My next will in all probability contain particulars of the completion, launch, etc., of the schooner Mary, a prettier craft than which and better adapted for the ice, I am certain there will not be in the island. I remain, Sir,

Your humble servant,

WM. KELSON.

William Spencer is shipped for the new schooner to the ice on the same terms as last year, and if it was not for his taking up nearly the whole of his wages in goods, it certainly would not do to give him so much, but as he has had it since he has been in your trade, we must continue it, or else part with him. There is much less difficulty in procuring a crew for him than for most of the icehunters.

Held Up.

By this List you will see the exorbitant wages I have been obliged to submit to, as I am of opinion that the profits of the trade must be thereby greatly lessened. I will advise you to direct me in time how to act next year, in case they should stand out in a similar manner. The List of Bills, too, I am sorry you will find amounting to a large sum, but you may perhaps carry on business many years and not meet with the like again. It was singular for such a quantity of seals to be taken and fish to be such a high price the same year.

First Doctors-- Then a Skin Specialist-- Then a bottle of D.D.D.

I will consider it a favor if you will allow me to add my testimonial to the many hundreds you no doubt have in praise of the great results effected by D.D.D. Prescription. I was a sufferer for two years with eczema on the legs and ankles. I tried three or four different doctors and none of them did me any good. I got tired of trying their remedies. I then went to a skin specialist but he was no better than they. I was reading the Sunday paper and happened to see your ad. I am very glad that I did.

I secured a trial bottle of D.D.D. and it did me so much good that I sent for a dollar bottle, also a cake of soap. That is all I used, and I am perfectly well. I have advised several others to use it and the results have been the same. You are at liberty to use my name for I consider D.D.D. the best remedy in use.

No Resting Place.

A human Shuttlecock is spending his time on the Pacific Ocean. Paul Freeman arrived in Australia from Canada in 1909 and worked for a time on a mining claim in Queensland. Last year he was arrested under the War Precautions Act and ordered to be deported. The military authorities put him aboard the Sonoma, and there he has been ever since. San Francisco would not permit him to land. He returned to Australia, and again he was refused permission to land. Once more the United States refused him, and now Australia has refused him again, and a military guard surrounded his cabin on the vessel during the time she was in port. He left again with the vessel, an unwelcome guest, for no one has paid the fare for his extended tour.

Women in Regattas.

That the first eight-oar match ever rowed by women on the Thames will not be the last goes without saying, and the two crews that contested the half mile of river between the ancient riverside church at Bisham and the finish at Marlow Bridge have their place in the history of Thames Regattas as the beginners of a new and interesting chapter. The two crews represented, respectively, Newnham College, Cambridge, and the London School of Medicine for Women, which is a part of London University. Although defeated, the latter crew will perhaps receive special credit from the historians of rowing, for it rowed a fine race, for which it was able to make only a limited preparation. Newnham has for some time been interested in rowing, but would have lacked a competitor if young women of London University had not accepted the match, although their only chance for practice was on the Regent's Park lake in four-oar boats. Until the day of the Thames race the crew never rowed in an eight-oar boat. They made the race possible and were outdistanced only by a length at three-quarters. — Christian Science Monitor.

"Earthquake Milne."

Professor John Milne, the eminent authority on earthquakes, who died at Slide Hill House, Newport, Isle of Wight, on July 31, 1918, was not only our greatest authority on earthquakes, but he was also an expert on mines. Born at Liverpool in 1850, he saw much of the world in his early days, and, passing through the School of Mines, became a mining engineer in Newfoundland and Labrador, where he went as geologist with Dr. Perkes' Arabian Expedition. He also made a long stay in Japan, where he married a native lady, and during a period of twenty years in the service of the Japanese Government. Professor Milne established the seismic survey of the country, with nearly a thousand stations. He also undertook for the British Association a seismic survey of the world, and in consequence became known as "Earthquake Milne." In Japan he used to say "you have earthquakes for breakfast, earthquakes for lunch, and earthquakes for tea." There were 30,000 of them every year, but only about 100 were noteworthy. Scientific records were considerably improved by the Professor's invention of a machine which no earthquake could escape. At his home in the Isle of Wight, this delicate machine took note of every earthquake, no matter in what part of the world it occurred. Professor Milne was devoted to his wife, a member of an aristocratic Japanese family, and no photograph of house or friends would be taken but what she must always be included in the group or view. He resided for about 18 years in the Isle of Wight, which he facetiously called "the hub of the universe," and Slide Hill House was visited by kings, princes, and learned societies. King George, who was accompanied by his brother, the late Duke of Clarence, once went to the Professor's earthquake establishment in Japan, and his observatory at Slide was visited by the Prince of Wales during his stay at the Royal Naval College, Osborne.

Household Notes.

Witch hazel is excellent for sunburn.
Never leave onions in the refrigerator.
Cinnamon toast is an agreeable luncheon dish.
A little potato may be added to mashed turnip.
Young raw cabbage makes one of the best of salads.
Spinach is excellent served with broiled lamb chops.
Cabbage salad, raw, goes very well with lima beans.
Stale bread is always to be preferred for sandwiches.
One teaspoonful of sugar is the equivalent of one lump.
For filling pincushions, dried coffee grounds are excellent.
Always empty the water out of a kettle before refilling it.
Cellars cannot be kept too clean—especially in hot weather.
Slices of fresh cucumber are a very good tonic for the skin.
Potato salad should be made of cold boiled, not baked potatoes.
Try eating watercress with nothing but salt of French dressing.
Iced tea is improved by some slices of orange as well as lemon.
The stove will keep its polish if it is rubbed daily with a newspaper.
The pantry shelves are best covered with white oilcloth, cut to fit.
Use borax in tepid water for washing silk handkerchiefs. Iron dry.
A paint brush is excellent in removing dust from carvings on furniture.
Canned cherries and strawberries are quite as good for pie as the fresh fruit.
Four melted lard between the frame and casing of a window that sticks.
If buckle cherries are tough-skinned, they should be cooked before eating.
A garment may be much improved if worn buttonholes are worked over neatly.
Salad should be on the table at least once a day all through the summer.
Whenever possible, lettuce should be dressed with lemon instead of vinegar.
One chicken, boned and made into a gelatine, is enough for twelve helpings.
All hot-weather menus should be composed so that there are few heat elements.

About Houses.

"Villa" formerly meant a farm and not a house.
Board and lodging in Japan is said to have been obtainable for 23 a year.
Paper-hangings for use on walls were introduced into Europe from the East in 1675.
A Persian Carpet has been in use for over 200 years in the main hall of the Shah's palace in Teheran.
Coffee-houses were shut up in 1675 by King Charles II, who denounced them as "seminaries of sedition."
New Houses, prior to the war, covered some 1,163 acres in London and suburbs on an average every year.
The Ex-Kaiser's Palace in Berlin at one time kept 600 housemaids and 1,800 liveried footmen in employment.
An Onyx Staircase in the mansion of a New York millionaire cost over £60,000, and is said to be the finest thing of its kind in the world.
Householders, generally, are said to be very careless. In London, some time back, police found, in one year, that over 28,000 doors and windows were left open nightly.
Mosaic Floors were known to the Egyptians 2300 B.C. In Babylon, floors laid with small pieces of different coloured stones in regular patterns, were said to date from 1100 B.C.
"Jerry-built" Houses were erected as far back as the days of the Athens earthquakes. They were attractive buildings outside, but the faulty stones and rotten blocks soon caused a rapid falling away of material from the marble exteriors.
Inns were originally very few in number. In the time of Edward I, there were only three "houses of call" in London; in 1582 forty only were legally permitted in the Metropolis, but just after 1600 there were 400 inns in the City of London.

No Luck for "S" Ships.

A great many people are unaware of the various superstitions that sailors believe in. For instance, several years ago an English sailor was fined for refusing to go to sea in a vessel in which he had shipped, simply because he had dreamed that it would be lost.
A very common belief is that if anyone is killed on a voyage, the ship will never have any luck. For the mark of blood is on the bow, they say.
The name of a ship counts a lot with a sailor. For a great many sailors won't sail on a ship whose name begins with "S" whilst the letter "O" is another initial which is disliked. And a female name is preferred to a male one.
A ship soon gets a bad name if accidents begin to occur to her. As it is always difficult to get a crew for a vessel of this kind, it is often the case of a ship taking over another name, which is not at all an easy process, and is often more difficult than changing one's own.
In the building of a ship, a piece of silver, or generally a coin is placed under the heel of the mast to ensure safe voyages; this is supposed to be a safeguard against any mishaps occurring on a voyage.
Another superstition of a similar kind is to put a piece of stolen wood into the keel to make the ship sail fast at night.
Seamen consider it most unlucky to lose or tear their colours or to sew sails on the quarter deck.
Sunday is supposed to be as lucky a day as Friday is the reverse.
Fishermen always prefer starting on a Saturday to any other day.
The albatross superstition is so

Strikes That Disregard the Public

(Christian Science Monitor.)

It takes a strike to teach people thoroughly dependent they are upon another, as they all go about various activities in the great mechanism called civilization. No small group of workers can refuse to do their job without, to some extent, affecting the willingness, or ability, or circumstances of others; and when the strikers are the workers whose job it is to keep some public service in motion, their mere whim to work or not to work involves the comfort and financial status of thousands. Such strikes as those of the ferry workers in New York and of the Boston Elevated Railway, indicate nothing more clearly than the completeness of community dependence upon such workers for the orderly carrying out of the daily program of industry. Mere authority counts for nothing in strikes of this sort. If it did, the authority of the public, expressed through its chosen agents, who are the agents of the strikers as well as of the rest of the community, would, without doubt, interfere to prevent the innocent public from incurring loss and inconvenience merely that one class of workers may win the demanded wage increases from the company which employs them. It is because clear, however, that in proportion to the public helplessness in these situations, there is a moral responsibility upon the strikers to see that the innocent portion of the community shall suffer the least possible inconvenience and loss. Otherwise, the action of the strikers becomes something far different from a protest; it becomes, in short, a hold-up.

There need be no enemy of Labor unionism to deprecate such strikes. Perfectly good union men were fairly incensed at the stubbornness of the New York ferry operatives in calling their strike at such a moment as to hold several thousands of Staten Islanders waiting in the rain about the city ferry houses, unable to get to their distant homes at the close of a hard day. Labor union leaders are reported to have used their influence to break the strike forthwith, simply to assure the service for lack of which these innocent thousands were being needlessly made to suffer. And there are good union men who make no secret, in private talk, of their condemnation of the Boston carmen for indifference to the public concern in the strike just ended.

At present the attitude of strikers in industrial difficulties of this sort in America appears to be dictated by a headstrong readiness to use the power of organized numbers for a selfish purpose, regardless of the question as to who is likely to be affected. Of course, such a conception of the possibilities of Labor union is short-sighted, as all pure selfishness is short-sighted. Labor union leaders are, as a class, already perceiving this, and are in many ways and cases doing their best to bring it home to their followers. For in the long run, the public will not accept such impositions by any organized class without something more conclusive than remonstrance. The public is slow and inchoate in thinking, but it is much more definite and much swifter in emotional feeling. If Labor unions persist in ignoring public interest, they may well consider what is likely to result on that day when the public, moved to swift and definite emotion by a cumulative sense of injury, responds to Labor union inconsiderateness by taking matters into its own hands. Even the sympathy for the union man of one sort for the union man of another sort, is hardly likely to persuade the one to stand passive under positive injury from the other.

Carry the analysis far enough, and even Labor unionism will be found in conflict with itself unless the cause of a striking body is just and its methods fair to all concerned.

The wide waist without any indication of corseting is still most fashionable.

The Submarine Officer and Venus.

(From the Manchester Guardian.)
Everyone knows of "votive" ships dedicated to the Virgin or to saints in commemoration of sailors saved from sea peril that hang in foreign churches. A very interesting example of a votive offering from an officer saved at sea appears shyly in the annual report of the National Art Collections' Fund. An unnamed colonel of the Egyptian Expeditionary Force wrote on the 17th of last November to the hon. treasurer of the Fund the following letter:
I enclose a "special donation" of six guineas, the exact disposal being left to the committee. It is a votive offering from a submarine officer. When about 4.30 a. m. of the 13th August, after being about nine hours in the water, I saw Venus rise like a sun and shine over her beloved. Cyprus, I swore I'd send something if I ever got picked up, and here it is.
Man is unfair to woman, as usual, as the offering goes to Apollo.

Many of the tailored blouses have a decided masculine touch. Since Paris is again taking its morning walk in the Bois, there are many charming walking costumes being designed.

The Story of Jerusalem.

In the early days of December 1917 the eyes of the whole world were watching the progress of a British Army which was fighting its way up the Holy Land towards Jerusalem.

It might truly be said that watching multitude as it was said of Daniel two thousand five hundred years ago, that "his windows, being open in his chamber toward Jerusalem, he kneeled upon his knees three times a day and prayed."

And why?
To the Jews, all over the world, Jerusalem is essentially "The Holy City," the centre alike of their worship of God and of their national life.

To the Christian nations, all over the world, Jerusalem is "The Holy City," where the Lord Jesus Christ taught that He was the Son of God, where He worked His miracles, where He was rejected as their King by the Jewish people; and out side the walls of Jerusalem He died on the Cross for the sins of the whole world.

Even to the Mohammedans, all over the world, Jerusalem is a sacred city. They too have made their pilgrimages to it. That is why the whole world with its windows open toward Jerusalem, watched the progress of that British Army.

Through all the long centuries of its history, the possession of Jerusalem has been constantly contested. Among these "conquests of Jerusalem" six seem to stand out with greater significance for their importance on her destiny.

The first of these conquests was when King David "took the stronghold of Zion" from the Jebusites and dwelt in the Castle and built the city round about.

The second was the conquest by Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, who burned the House of God and the palaces, broke down the walls, and carried away all the people into a captivity which lasted for seventy years.

The third was the conquest by the Roman Pompey which resulted in the setting up of Herod the Judean King, under the Roman power, a combination which was the cause of our Lord being sent for judgment from Pilate to Herod, a most unusual attention from the Roman governor to the King, which resulted in Pilate and Herod becoming friends on the day of Christ's death.

The fourth conquest was the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans under Titus, when the Jews were dispersed into all the countries of the world, where they still remain.

The fifth conquest was that of the Caliph Omar in 637, and it was to wrest the site of the Holy Sepulchre from the hands of the infidel Turks, that the Crusaders fought.

Through all the centuries since then, the Turk has held almost unceasing dominion over Jerusalem. But the time came at last for breaking the evil rule of the Turk.

The sixth of these great conquests of Jerusalem took place when, on the 9th of December, 1917, the Turks surrendered Jerusalem to the victorious British Army.

What a wonderful event this is! How wonderful that God did not allow the evil passions of the enemy to wreck any of the Holy places, dear to the whole world, which looked on. How wonderful that our British Army should have the honour, among the Allies, of taking Jerusalem and planting the Flag of St. George of England on the site of that first Temple which Solomon built to the honour of God.

The story of Jerusalem has a world-wide interest. No wonder that north and south and east and west, the windows of the world are open toward Jerusalem.—Ex.

The Percussion Cap.

It was some time after the discovery of powder before the first gun was invented, supposedly by a monk named Berthold Schwartz, about 1325. The combination of gun and gunpowder soon became popular but they had some inconveniences attached to their use. After the gun was loaded it was necessary to apply a lighted match to the vent hole to set off the charge. It was difficult to aim and fire with precision. Rain and wind made the use of the gun almost impossible. For five centuries there was comparatively little improvement in firearms. The first great advance was the invention, in 1825 of the percussion cap. This was rendered possible by the discovery of substances which would ignite or explode on being subjected to friction or a blow. Chief among these substances are fulminate of mercury and chlorate of potash. Chlorate was discovered about 1786 by Count Berthollet. Chlorate, like saltpeter, contains a large amount of oxygen which it is ready to give up. It gives up its oxygen much more easily than saltpeter, however, as any blow or friction will start trouble if the chlorate is mixed with an inflammable substance. A mixture of sugar and chlorate, or of sulphur and chlorate make violent explosives. After these chlorate mixtures were discovered it was found that by placing some of the substance in the pan of a gun and allowing it to be struck by a properly constructed hammer, the gun could be fired with more certainly than with the old flint lock. Afterwards fulminate of mercury was discovered. This substance was soon found to be suitable for making percussion caps, and it is today used for this purpose to such an extent that it is one of the most important of explosives, in spite of the fact that it is used only for other substances and never used by itself. It is a grayish powder, extremely sensitive to shock or friction, and very dangerous to handle. When it is ignited or exploded it always goes off with extreme violence. For this reason it seems to be particularly suited to act in starting the explosion of relatively inert substances such as T. N. T.—Scientific American.

When Umpires Wondered.

AMAZING PUZZLES DURING CRICKET MATCHES.

The way of a cricket-ball are indeed passing strange, as Tom Emmett, the famous Yorkshire player, once realized when, sending down an extra fast one to Mr. Lucas, the ball went clean through the stumps without either dislodging the balls or disarranging the wicket.

For once Tom's copious vocabulary failed him. All he could ejaculate was:

"Well—of all the blooming miracles I ever saw—!"

Even more strange was the experience of W. Caffin, an old-time cricketer of fame, who, playing for All-England Eleven v. Twenty-two of Ipswich, threw in a ball from long-off, which passed through the stumps at the bowler's end, then travelled to the other wicket, and, passing through the stumps, also dislodged the balls there.

Here is another amusing incident in which Tom Emmett figured. He was being severely punished by the batsman a few years ago at Park Avenue, Bradford, and after a very big hit he ran towards the wicket bent on revenge, intending to send down one of his fastest.

Umpire got it in the ribs.

Just as he was delivering the ball he slipped. The ball caught the innocent umpire, who was standing at square-leg, in the ribs, and completely upset him. Everyone laughed except the bowler and the umpire. The mention of "wides" was dangerous all that season if Emmett were near.

Once when playing for Surrey against Middlesex, Mr. E. M. A. Jephson had a piece clipped off the side of his bat. The splinter flew back against the stumps, knocking a ball off, and he had to go, for the umpire's decision was "out!"

Equally hard was the luck of Mr. E. M. Dowson. The bowler sent an "express" down, which rose up and caught Dowson on the mouth. He fell back on the top of the wicket. And as if to add insult to injury, the umpire gave him marching orders.

An even harder case to decide was that one in which Giffen, the well-known Australian, figured, a few years ago at Lord's.

He was in the act of making a late cut when the wind, which was rather strong at the time, caught the end of a sash he wore round his waist and whisked off the balls.

The perplexed umpire was beaten for a moment, but in the end he said "Out!" This incident has been the cause of many an argument since that afternoon.

An Oxford player, called E. Winter, was once more fortunate than the three players just mentioned. He was trying to cut a ball and brought the bat down on the top of the wicket, with the result that the stumps were knocked almost horizontal. Still the balls did not fall, and the umpire said, "Not out!" The fact was, the balls were driven into the stumps with the force of the blow.

In Albert Park, Melbourne, a fast bowler delivered the ball, which took the middle stump near the ground, drove it clean out of the soft soil, and the stump whizzed round twice in the air and stuck upright in the ground again in the hole it originally occupied!

Wounded Him in Five Places.

The same bowler struck the wicket in another over, and the wicket-keeper had the novel and painful experience of being wounded in five places as the result. One ball struck him over the left eye, the other on the right ear, one stump struck him on the thigh, the other on the wrist, and the ball hit him on the chin.

It is not often that a first-class player refuses to abide by the umpire's verdict, but G. Giffen—often called "the Grace of Australia"—once did.

He was playing for South Australia against Victoria at Adelaide, and in making a stroke he fell. The bowler appealed for leg before wicket, and Giffen was given not-out.

As he rose he knocked off the ball, and the other umpire gave him out for hitting his wicket.

Giffen refused to go, on the ground that he had been given not out and so the ball was dead before the ball fell. He stayed to make seventy-six more runs, the Victorians playing on under protest.—Pearson's Weekly.

Up to the Measure.

For some time past, perhaps no man in this country has been subjected to more abuse by the Opposition organs than Michael P. Cashin, Premier of Newfoundland. The stereotyped attacks of those individuals are but the discharge of the pus of a festering grudge, because he has been successful through life as a citizen, a fisherman, a business man and a politician. Let us now take a brief sketch of the life of our present Premier. He was born and bred amongst fishermen, as his father was before him, and he never assumed to be anything else, as he has always associated and worked with them from his earliest years. He has sprung from a family whose name for hospitality has, for three quarters of a century, been a household word, and few there are in this country who have not heard of the whole-hearted welcome which the poor, needy and the wayfarer have received from the Cashins of Cape Broyle—where the gate was always open to the stranger. The Opposition press would have it appear that they are solicitous for the welfare of the fishermen, and that their whole object in life is to protect their interests and encourage them in their noble avocation, asserting, and with truth, that no person is so qualified to legislate for the benefit of our fishermen as the man who has a practical knowledge of his calling—and surely no man has more so than Michael P. Cashin, himself. Through life he is in entire sympathy with the fishermen in whatever line of duty he is working. He understands the problems of the fishermen, because he worked himself as such. He has no desire to treat others unfairly, and so is held in the highest respect by fishermen generally as their well-wisher and friend. When he speaks in the House of Assembly in the interests of the fishermen, he is well equipped by facts to prove his assertions from practical experience. Mr. Cashin is a blunt man, very straightforward and unflinching, extremely unobtrusive and never speaks unnecessarily in the Assembly, but when he does speak, talkative to some purpose, full of common sense and large experience; a clean living man and a friend of all who need assistance. His speeches reveal the man. There is logic in the thought—majesty in the ideas, beauty and grace in the diction. He is possessed of an unblemished character and a disinterested love of country. His keen judgment and foresight, coupled with his inherent tact, has been of much value to his party in former Governments, and his services have been much appreciated by the general public. There is no amount of praise which we could put forth that would equal that of his present opponents of the press, provided he gave their masters leading and remunerative positions in the Government of which he is the head, and granted the newspapers which to-day so unfairly and maliciously abuse him, patronage to a sufficient amount of Government printing. He should no longer hear of his faults, which would be counterbalanced one hundredfold by his honesty, patriotism and manhood. M. P. Cashin has been successful in whatever sphere of life he has entered, either in the fishing boat, on the fishing stage, as a commercial man or a member of the House of Assembly. The best proof of success is the fact that he has succeeded. From the fishing boat to Prime Minister requires more than ordinary ability, and this ability has been fully recognized and publicly expressed in the past even by those who so maliciously and unjustly abuse him at the present day, and if it should be in their ability again if it should be in their interest to do so. Even his greatest political enemy, (for he has none in private life), dare not accuse him of anything that is not manly and above board. It may be that upon certain occasions he has to strike quickly in the various changes in the political life of this country, but he would be very dense and careless indeed if he did not, knowing well that the "other fellow" was watching with eagle eyes to take advantage of his indifference. But as a general rule through life he believes, as far as possible, that there is a straight line in politics as well as in his geometry, and has lived up to that standard socially, morally and in every other way. The day for mud-throwing and coarse vituperation has passed in this country to be effective, and no longer will the people be cajoled and tricked either by the plausible platitudes or the unwholesome and disgusting abuse of a section of the press, whose object is discerned by a discriminating public, who are well aware that they are actuated by a policy of smash and ruin, so long as they attain power and accomplish their ends. Until the present heterogeneous conglomeration of irreconcilables and misfits can produce a more accomplished and experienced leader and lieutenant than those already out for inspection, it is not likely that the intelligent people of this country will take their spasmodic outbursts seriously, but, with a wave of the hand, consign them to that political obscurity in which nature, lack of ability and inexperience have intended them to hide their heads. Up to the present the political abortion has neither a local habitation nor a name. It is a real rag-baby in- to which a few political aspirants are

Big Drug Firm Wins Agency for Famous Tanlac.

M. Connors Will Have Exclusive Control in St. John's and Throughout Newfoundland.

"The retail Tanlac agency for St. John's has been awarded to M. Connors, also the wholesale distributing agency for Newfoundland," was the statement made by the Tanlac Representative when seen yesterday. "In awarding exclusive control to this well-known firm," he said, "I am only carrying out our established custom of confining the sale to but one or two thoroughly responsible and centrally located firms in each city where Tanlac is placed on sale. In this connection I will say that no matter where you hold your office in the United States or Canada, you will find the Tanlac stores to be the leading and most reputable drug-gists in the town.

"Just such firms as this," he continued, "are always anxious and willing to co-operate in promoting the sale of Tanlac, not only because of its superior merit, but because of the prominence and valuable publicity they receive from its sale as well."

"This firm has given an initial order for an entire carload of Tanlac (12,720 bottles), and a large shipment will be delivered and ready to be placed on sale to-day."

"This is without doubt the largest order ever given in St. John's for a single medicine, but having heard through absolutely reliable sources of the remarkable and rapidly growing demand for Tanlac in other cities, the management did not hesitate a moment in placing their order for this amount. I confidently believe that every bottle of it will be sold and the order duplicated before the close of the month."

"As a matter of fact, the sale of Tanlac throughout the country has not only been phenomenal, but unprecedented."

"In the comparatively small city of Knoxville, Tennessee, the Kuhlman-Chambliss Drug Company has sold and distributed 125,100 bottles of Tanlac; Memphis, Tenn. dealers and jobbers, have sold and distributed over 432,708 bottles; in Seattle, Wash., over 80,000 bottles have been sold in one month; Denver dealers have sold 75,648 bottles in eight months; Dallas, Texas, dealers over 242,330 bottles in two years; Houston, Texas, 215,268 bottles; and Fort Worth, Texas, dealers have sold 122,204 bottles in less than a year."

"A little over two years ago Tanlac was placed on sale in Vancouver and Victoria, B.C., and to date, over 40,000 bottles of the medicine have been sold."

"While these figures may appear exaggerated and beyond all reason, the fact remains that they are absolutely true and correct and open to investigation. We challenge anyone, whether individual, dealer or competitor, to show where we have made the slightest discrepancy. And anyone doubting these statements is free to write to any or all of our agents in these cities and they will gladly substantiate the above figures."
