Report of Death of Dr. Chalmers

PETROLEA, May 22.—It is reported here that a telegram to his tamily in Toronto announced the death in Bermuda of Dr. Chalmers, tormerly of Oil Springs. He was serving as medical officer to the militia units stationed on the island, to which post he was assigned about a vear ago. Dr. Chalmers was an outstanding figure in the medical profession in Lambton County for many years. He was especially successful in surgery, and during his 30 years of practic performed many major operations with marked success.

He was a public-spirited man, and was always active and aggressive in the public life of Oil Springs and adjacent municipalities. In politics he was a Liberal and in religion a Presbyterian. As a skilful and faithful medical practitioner he will be long remembered with gratitude by those to whom he ministered in their distress. He is survived by his widow and a family of one son and one daughter, who have resided in Toronto for the past three years.

Kansas City Star: In order to we his dog's life. Howard S. Lewis. of Hutchinson, made public announcement last week that he had changed the animal's name from Kaiser to Dennis. "I really was afraid some one would take a shot at him." Judge Lewis explained, and besides, the Kaiser's name's Dennis, anyway."

Prevailing retail prices of anthracite coal are unwarranted, and the supply for next season is adequate, is a statement made by the federal trade commission at Washington. The commission warns consumers against buying larger quantities of coal than usual this summer, saying there are symptoms now of such a buying panic as that which enabled speculators last winter to force prices above normal.

The people of Ontario are accustomed to accept their food much the same as they breathe the air. They read isolated items about food shortage, but such a thing as this affecting their own dinner table never enters their mind, and it is our responsibility and YOUR responsibility to bring home to the people of this Province a realization of the facts, as unless something is done, in another year they will be reading not about the hunger in Belgium, but the hunger in Ontario.

Accounts of the achievements of the Canadian soldiers at Vimy ridge and Levond it sends thrills through the hearts of the American readers, particularly through the hearts of those of us who live near the border. Our friends and neighbors are doing great deeds in the fight for distruction of despotism. They are our fellow Americans, in the larger meaning of the expression, and they pointing out the road to honor and fame which the soldiers of the United States may later have op-pertuuity to tread. The Canadian troops are establishing a high standof efficiency, sacrifice and courage; they are showing to mankind the possibilities that lie in the unshackled spirit of the New World. and how men who know what freedom is can fight for freedom. are proud of the Canadian soldiers, and we hope that in days to come the Canadians will be equally proud of the soldiers from this side of the border.-Detroit Free Press.

Meatless Days

Existing conditions in Canada and the United States warrant the immediate voluntary adoption of one or two meatless days a week by people not eugaged in hard manual labor. Beef, pork and other flesh foods are advancing in cost because the supply is unequal to the demand, and because grain prices favor the direct conversion of the grain into human food rather than into food for live stock. There is not enough meat in the world to go around and the men who are fighting our battles at the front require a great deal more than the men at home who sit in offices and generally follow sedentary occupations. Medical men agree that most people not under strenuous physical strain will be healthier if they eat less flesh, especially during the spring and summer seasons. In a time when the price of everything mounts considerations of economy are important. It may therefore be repeated that 11 cents spent in oatmeal, 12 cents on flour, 19 cents on bread, 24 cents on skimmed milk, 25 cents on beans, 25 cents on whole milk or 50 cents on cheese will provide the human body with as much energy as a dollar's worth of steak.

'Control of Garden Insects

The Entomological Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture will issue early in May Circular No. 9 on "Common Garden Insects and their Control." This publication includes an account of the more im portant insect pests of the vegetable and flower garden. It has been prepared for wide distribution at this time when everywhere throughout Canada efforts are being earnestly made to increase the production of vegetable foods, etc., in back yards, vacant lot and other areas near cities and towns. The remedial measures for controlling the common destruc-tive species and also formulae for the making of the chief insecticides are given. For easy reference the insects are grouped under the crop of flowering plants they infest. Gardeners will find this publication a most useful means for solving many troubles that will arise. Application for this Entomological Circular No. 9 should be made to the Chief of the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. Insects concerning which further information is desired should be sent with a covering letter to the Dominion Entomologist, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. Packages and letters so addressed up to 11 ounces in weight may be forwarded free of postage.

HIS CONSIDERATE WIFE.

it Is Too Bad That We Can't Hear Her

Side of the Story,
She never abuses us to outsiders.
When she is talking to other women she pretends that she doesn't care for the things she actually needs.

"I am ashamed," she says to us am ashamed for them to know how you treat me. No other man would allow his wife to wear the clothes that I have to wear. Other men tell their wives to buy things, but if I waited for you to tell me to buy something for myself I wouldn't have a new dress between now and doomsday.

"And yet I tell people that you urge me to buy things. I know I will have to answer for it, but I do it on account of the children. I don't want them to be humiliated by growing up in a community where people know how their mother is treated. Yes, that is all I have heard since I married—debts, debts, debts. I don't know what in the world you would find to talk about if you were out of debt.

"I could write to my people to get money to buy the things I need, but I am ashamed to let them know what you are. No, you can't see it-you can't see anything.

"I just wish you would point to one thing I have bought this season—just point to one thing I have bought. Oh, yes, that suit-that suit is all you can think about. I guess you wish I hadn't bought it. I guess you wish I didn't have anything at all to wear.

"Yes, I bought a pair of eight dollar shoes, but did you want me to go barefooted? You wouldn't care if I did. If there were any shame in you, you wouldn't treat me the way you do.

"What about that hat? Yes, that's what I say-what about it? Ought I to have gone without a hat? That is just the way you always are—when I try to say a word about anything you call attention to everything I ever have bought. It hurts you so much for me to buy anything that you never quit thinking about it—never quit wishing I had done without. There isn't another -Claude Collan in Fort Worth Star

BRITON AND TURK. A Surprise, a Fair Fight and the Way

the Battle Ended. There is a story of Gallipoli that deals with a fight in the open and exhibits the "unspeakable" Turk as a fair and worthy enemy. This is the story:

A young English officer, doing observation work alone, was suddenly confronted by a Turkish officer, simi-larly engaged. The Turk was as sured as the Briton, but came for ward, revolver in hand. The Englishman had no revolver. He stood his ground, his hands in the large pockets

Seeing that his adversary was unarmed, the Turk, much to the surprise of the Briton, threw down his gun and put up his fists in approved prize ring style. The Englishman put himself on guard, and the next moment the Turk flung himself upon him, and the pair began to fight desperately.

The men were about the same age, the same weight and had equal knowledge of the art of boxing. They minutes. By that time each was fair-ly exhausted, and they paused for u brief rest, only to continue their little private accounting when they had found their breath. Round after round the fight went on, while out in the gulf of Saros the ships fired auto-matically, and back of each of them the field artillery thundered. Neither seemed to be able to get any decisive advantage over the other, and at last Turk and Englishman rolled over on the ground and laughed and laughed. Just then the Englishman's hand touched something. It was the Turk's pistol. He picked it up and handed it to his enemy. The two young men shook hands, and each returned to his own lines.

Slipper Day In Holland. There is a curious festival called slipper day celebrated in Holland. Slipper day in the Netherlands is the one day in the year in which the Dutchwoman claims superiority over her husband. On that day she rules him to her heart's content, and he generally obeys good humoredly enough—that is, unless she is one of those ladies not unknown in Holland or in any other country who aspire to complete rule over their unhappy partners throughout the year.

Impertinence.
Mr. Todgers-Why have you sent Maria, the servant girl, away so suddenly? You told me yesterday that she was the best girl you ever had. Mrs. Todgers—She's an impertinent hussy. I wanted to borrow her rub-bers, and she said she was afraid I couldn't get them on.-Exchange.

Family Treasures.
"What's the trouble in the house hold?" "Mother gave away all of father's old clothes, and be retaliated." "As to bow?" "By throwing away all her old medtcine bottles."

IN WILD DOBRUDJA.

A Lonely Land That Has Never Been Civilized.

Now we are in the Dobrudja (which means "good pasture"), the name given to the wild, rolling,

(which means "good pasture"), the name given to the wild, rolling, God-forsaken plain which lies on the right of the river opposite the equally lonely and deserted Baragan steppe. Between these two vast stretches of open country the Danube winds and curves, sometimes shallow, sometimes deep, around sprawling, marshy islands, the two largest of which measure respectively fifty and forty miles in length and about ten miles in breadth.

It is difficult to describe utter emptiness, utter loneliness. All the objects and scenes and life with which one has become familiar on the voyage now vanish. The floating mills, the white villages, the bright costumes, the sounds and sights of human activity are no more to be seen or heard. The East and the atmosphere of the East holds this land in thrall. The political and military power of Islam may have retreated, but its ideals and doctrines remain, and the very air of the Dobrudja brings supineness, fatalism, a belief in the uselessness of combating anything, especially the silent, irresistible forces of Nature, the will of a passionless, remorseless Deity.

Along the muddy, sunken river banks, the rushes and stunted wilremorseless Deity.

Along the muddy, sunken river banks, the rushes and stunted willows are a brilliant green, and on the islands, glowing in great vivid patches behind the rushes, low scrub and tamarisk, there are wonderful flowers—melliot, the sweet-scented allower convolvations wild recess blue. clover, convolvulus, wild roses, blue veronica, chicory, snap-dragon. Up and down stream go tow-boats and and down stream go tow-boats and lighters and sailing vessels, manned by brightly-clad Turks, Roumanians, or Greeks. Here and there one of these ships may be seen stuck high and dry on a muddy reef, a derelict, driven to destruction by one of the sudden violent squalls so common on the lower Danube. But it is not the things near at hand which attract and rivet the attention; it is the vast, limitless solitudes beyond tract and rivet the attention; it is the vast, limitless solitudes beyond which seem to cast a spell upon the traveler. Look there to the left across the rising grassy desert of the Baragan. Parched under the burning summer sun the steppe drifts and rolls away, away far as eye can reach. The soil is yellow, and the whole landscape is touched by the same dead, dull hue. Out there is a desert, a desert whose monotony is broken only by a few yellow roads, or tracks, where the saffron dust lies a foot deep, to rise in blinding, choking clouds with the passing of every wandering bullock caravan, or choking clouds with the passing of every wandering bullock caravan, or sheep and swine-herd. Sometimes the grass gives place to maize, but both grass and maize are yellow—yellow grass covering a boundless, undulating, melancholy desert. Here and there at rare intervals are villand there, at rare intervals, are vil-lages, or rather clusters of rude, clay, wattle-roofed buts surrounded by tall, decrepit, wattle fences. Summer may be terrible here, but winter is still more awful when the snow covers the face of the earth, when the fierce Russian wind sweeps when the herce Russian who sweeps by with hurricane force, leaving men and beasts frozen stark in death; when the wolves muster to satisfy their hunger and the ravens croak over the jey fields. Civilization cannot tame the Dobrudja; civilization may him sullvaywand. civilization may bring railways and bridges, but the homes and thoughts and customs of the inhabitants are not more civilized to-day than they were in the days of the Roman conquest.

England's Awakening.

"This war has wakened England. It has made the working-man work at full-tilt for the first time in his life. He has been willing to do it, life. He has been willing to do it, because the product served a national purpose instead of the profit of another person. He has been physically able to do it, because an increased wage gave him better food. He has discovered how to do it, because the pressure of necessity has unlocked brain cells which in ordinary times would have required a term of education to co-ordinate. The war has turned the middle-class home inside out, and freed the respectable unout, and freed the respectable unemployed into usefulness. It has given new and more active forms of employment to women caught in domestic service and the parasitic trades of 'refined' dressmaking, millinery, and candy manufacture. Finally, the war has given a career to upper-class Englishmen. For the first time in their lives they feel they have found something active to do have found something active to do through noble sacrifice. The sigh of relief that went up at the discovery that life was at last worth living, if only because of its brevity, was echoed in the poetry of officers as it drifted back from the trenches."—

In spite of the war great progress is being made by the Western University. A two hundred acre site has been purchased for new buildings, which is unexcelled by any university in eastern Canada; a large legacy has been bequeathed, the Government and city grants have been increased, the faculties have been greatly strengthened, the Libraries and laboratories wonderfully improved and the Medical School has received a higher rating which makes it the equal of nearly all of the better institutions.

The latest addition to the faculty is that of Professor W. Sherwood Fox, Ph. D., a former Canadian, now of Princeton University, one of the best classical scholars of the United States. He is an author of splendid repute and an excellent teacher. It is expected that two or ent teacher. It is expected that two or three other professors of similar standing will be engaged during the next few weeks, all of whom will be on a par with the best men in the other universities thus assuring students that they can nov receive in this Western Ontario Univer-sity a training of the very highest kind to be obtained anywhere.

PERFECT HEALTH DUE TO THE BLOOM

No Girl or Women Need be Constantly

Ailing and Unhappy Nature intended every girl and every woman to be happy, attractive, active and healthy. Yet two many of them find their lives saddened by suffering—nearly always because their blood is to blame. All those unhappy girls and women with colorless cheeks, dull skins and sunken lustreless eyes, are in this condition be-cause they have not enough blood, red blood in their veins to keep them well and in the charm of health. They suffer and in the charm of health. They suffer from depressing weariness and periodical headaches. Dark lines form under their eyes, their heart palpitates violently after the slightest exertion, and they are often attacked with fainting spells. These are only a few of the miseries of bloodlessness. Nothing can secure girls and women from the inevitable decline that follows agaemia except a generous supply women from the inevitable decline that follows anaemia except a generous supply of new, rich, red blood, and nothing has ever proved so successful in creating red, good blood as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Thousands and thousands of girls and women owe their good health and charming complexion to the use of this medicine. Here is one example of its power to cure. Miss Dorina Bastien, St. Jerome, Oue., says:—"Por ample ot its power to cure. Miss Dortna Bastien, St. Jerome, Que., says:—"For over a year my health was gradually failing, my blood had seemed almost to have turned to water, my cheeks were pale, my lips bloodless, and the slightest exertion left me breathless. I suffered frequently from severe headaches, my appetite failed, and my friends feared I was going into consumption. I had been doctoring but did not derive any benefit, and finally. I had to give up my work and I took a half dozen boxes more, when my strength had completely returned, my appetite was restored, my color returned, headaches had disappeared, and I was feeling better than I had been for years. I would urge every weak and ailing girl to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial."

These pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The reason for this enormous business is not hard to explain. It means that the discriminating consumer has learned by actual use that Lantic Pure Cane Sugar is superior to all others.

What Became of a Cargo of Cocoanuts

By CHARLES EDWARD BANGS

As the Ylang rounded the headland I noticed off to the starboard two hulks, red with rust, awash under the branches of the big trees that grew in a dense forest far out into the shallow water of the lagoon One steamer was wedged in between great boles, the tops of its masts showing oddly above the overhanging greenery. The other lay well over upon its side, like some portly marine monster that had taken shell ter there from the tropic sun. How any person not a positive idiot could have blundered into such a place passed my comprehension.

The repeated blasts from our whistle had roused the owner of the cocoanut grove that was to furnish us our cargo, and presently the white drill suit and pith helmet which we always associate with the white man in the tropics appeared in the stern of a boat which glided out from under the trees. Before our gangplank was fairly lowered a tall, rawboned young Englishman, distinctly of the "gentleman" type, came over the ship's side and introduced himself as Shackleford, the man with whom I had contracted to carry a load of nuts to Liverpool. "No, I haven't a black on the place," he explained in response to an inquiry of mine as we took our places in his flat bottomed boat, manned wholly by Chinamen, and started for his bunga low, whose corrugated roof blazed in the intense sunlight through a rift in the cocoanut grove. "It costs three times as much for Chinese labor, but for some reason I can't get a nigger to come near the plantation." "That's strange."

"Wait till tonight and you'll hear as horrible a row as you ever heard. Then you'll know. The mountains back there are alive with apes. That is why I put up a twenty-five foot high barbed wire

That evening we were sitting in the bungalow, sipping whisky and soda and swapping yarns about Penang, when a volley of barks, sharp as the rattle of musketry, made me spring up in alarm. Shackleford put down his glass and aw-hawed. "It's only those blasted haw-hawed. ages," he explained when he had managed to control his mirth. "Take down that rifle and come along."

Armed with the rifles, we made our way to the edge of the grove nearest the spur of the mountain. As we approached a chorus of snarls greeted us, and in the clear starlight I saw a host of infuriated apes hurling themselves against the barbed wire fence.

For a time the brutes paid little heed to our fusillade. Then, under the leadership of a huge gray ape, they broke and made for cover.

The great grizzled brute was the last to retire, and at the edge of the jungle it turned and gibbered at us in a way that made my flesh creep. It seemed to voice the fathomless hatred of the whole jungle world for the usurper man. The next morning on our way back to the steamer I asked Shackleford

"Oh, I fancy the fool captains could not steer straight," he replied lightly.
"Longstreth—that's the chap I bought the grove from-said that both ships were loaded with cocoanuts. He would not talk much about it, though-too sour to talk about anything."

Later, to satisfy my curiosity, I row-ed over and had a look at the hulks, and as I examined them I noted two facts that kept me speculating for days. Before either steamer went into its present position the boats had been hastily slashed away, and there wasn't a single cocoanut to be seen in either

That night I spent ashore again with Shackleford, and when I returned to my ship the following morning I found it in an ominous state of excitement. Usually the Chipese portion of it occupied the forward part of the main deck, eating and sleeping in the cor ners among the steam winches. lascars had always claimed the forecastle head, where their tall, gaunt bodies and swathed heads seemed an inseparable part of the ship. Now, however, race and caste were forgotten, and turbans and pigtails mingled promiscuously in groups that whispered eagerly in a dozen corners. At sight of me they quickly dispersed, but with those two rusty hulks oming up yonder as object less took prompt measures to forestall a possible mutiny. Summoning the first mate, a half caste from Calcutta that I had picked up in Penang when MacPherson died of cholera, I locked the door behind him, left my revolver on the table, where he could meditate upon its use as we talked, and then asked him a few pointed questions. He turned white under his inky skin but soon pulled himself together and began to lie to me. I knew it by the way his eyelids flickered. The bay was too hot for even a Chinaman to live on; the lagoon was full of sharks; the typhoon season was coming on-these and a dozen other reasons for leaving at once slipped from his oily tongue and left me more puzzled than

After that experience I spent no nore nights ashore, but watched coninually for the slightest hint of rebelion. Early the next morning when the cocoanuts began to arrive on the big bamboo rafts I noted with a grin of satisfaction that all hands set to work packing them juto the hold with an alacrity which they had never beore manifested in my service.

Taking on cargo occupied a week, and during that time I never left the ship's deck farther than the cabin.

The following evening we put out to sea, the men working like demons to get away before night shut down Shackleford laughing all the while at their eagerness to be rid of what he declared to be "the finest spot east of His Chinamen-I shall never forget that last glimpse of themsquatted upon the empty bamboo rafts their cues wound about their unshaved heads, the sweat still stream ing down their naked bodies to the flimsy cotton pantaloons corded about their waists, and viewed our departure out of their narrow eyes with feature as impassive as those of a stone Buddha. What did they know about the two rusty hulks, the gray "thing" that haunted them, and what had they told my crew? I wondered. Worn out with a trying week, I turned in.

A shock hurled me from my berth, and as I groped about in the darkness for the key of the door the sound of crashing timber and of branches trailng across the cabin window made me guess my surroundings. Springing on deck, I turned instinctively to wheel, and there, bowed over it like an old man and clutching the spokes with hairy hands, was a huge gray pe—the very monster Shackleford and I had failed to bring down the night of the raid upon the cocoanut grove!

At sight of me it relinquished its hold upon the wheel and sprang at me, baring its teeth in sudden rage. Whipping out my pistol, I began to fire and back away and brought it down with a shot in its gaping mouth just was reaching out its horrible corded arms to seize me. As it collapsed with a gasping shudder at my very feet I sprang backward from sheer repulsion and in doing so fell into the lagoon through a hole in the railing that the thick branch of a tree had carried away.

Not till then did the full significance of what had transpired dawn upon me. Crew there was none, but apes from the surrounding trees and the two rusty hulks that had so pu me and that now lay on either side came swarming upon the steamer till they covered everything-winches, forecastle head, the empty davits, the spare anchors, the very rigging-with gray, writhing mass that struggled and fought and screamed in a wild rush for the cocoanuts, which could easily be reached through the main hatch, left open to prevent overheating. Swimming round to the rudder, now completely out of water above the madly racing screw, I climbed up beyond the reach of sharks and listened to the appelling pandemonium till the last cocoanut must have been removed from the hold, when the brutes gradnally dispersed through the forest.

Afraid to venture back on deck at daylight I mounted a piece of the round house that had been swept overboard and made my way on the in-coming tide up the channel which led to the plantation. On the edge of the grove I paused in incredulous wonder, and then the truth came home to me. Under a fierce attack of the apes the wire fence had at last given way, and the cocoanut grove was in ruins. Shackleford's bungalow I found in a state of pillage so complete that only the four upright posts remained, and the flimsy huts occupied by the Chilaborers were scattered about as if struck by a typhoon.

Not far from the ruins I found Shackleford's beautifully stained meerschaum pipe trampled into the earth by a host of passing feet, and protrud-was hastening down the newly beaten to my left attracted my attention, and, rushing over, I found Shackleford and his Chinamen neatly trapped under the barbed wire fence. "You see," Shackleford explained when I had pried up the edge of the deadly netting, which they were unable to raise with their bare hands because of the inch long barbs, "we were poking the bally brutes off the fence with sharpened bamboos and having no end of fun when their weight doubled the whole thing over and shut us into as fine a little fort as a fellow could wish for. Ha, ha!"

Shackleford, followed by a score of bedraggled Chinamen, crawled out stiffly from his involuntary but lucky imprisonment and looked ruefully at his blood spattered clothes. "They ripped and tore at the netting like a lot of mad devils," he continued, "and the blood from their lacerated feet came through on us like a shower of warm rain, but none of us was hurt except Ah Cong over there. He was a bit careless and let his pigtail stick out through the netting. Lucky thing I had a knife, you sour old heathen!" turning to a grizzled Chinaman whose cue had been severed close to his head, "or that big ape that got hold of the end of it would have pulled it out by the roots." And Shackleford laughed uproariously as he reached for his pipe, examined the coloring with the eye of a connoisseur and then began to dig the dirt out of the bowl. "But I don't understand what made the brutes all quit and go tearing away toward the bay," he added thoughtfully as he opened his tobacco pouch.

For answer I led him down to the third derelict and showed him the emp-

THROWING A BOOMERANG.

Easy to Learn and Is More of a Knack Than a Science.

The boomerang is thrown overhand. Grasping the small end in his right hand, the man moves his hand backward as far as he can over the shoulder; then he brings it forward with all the force possible, letting the boomering slip from his grasp when his hand is well forward in front.

Throwing the boomerang is more of a knack than a science. It may be learned by any American or European who gives the time and patience for pracice. However, only native Australians acquire marked ability in making the boomerang turn exactly where they wish. The natives are not averse to using the boomerang as an American policeman uses his night stick. The native has the advantage over "cop." He can deal an effective blow without being near the victim.

One of the most interesting implements used by the native Australian is the woomera or spear thrower. The spear thrower resembles a rubber plant leaf with its edges turned upward. At the pointed end there is a barb or hook against which the native places the butt of his spear. In this way he can get considerable additional power for throwing the spear because of the increased purchase. .

BEAUTIFUL LINES.

Fashioned of black chiffon velvet, cut to fall in naturally graceful folds, and a long, square train, this handsome frock also takes a shoulder drape of silver lace, which is held by a huge rhinestone garniture. The butterfly effect of the lace is especially effective.

SAVE YOUR IRISH CROCHET.

This Lace Is Coming Into Vogue Again With Spring.

Have von heard the news? Irish crochet is coming back into favor for all sorts of things-lingerie blouses. neckwear and even frock trimming. It isn't used exactly as it used to be, but any one possessing one of those lovely large, round Dutch collars or a set of collar and cuffs is fortunate in that she can turn the collar and cuffs into something entirely different without cutting the lace.

For chemise tops and nightgown yokes the Irish crochet is indeed lovely. Two of those old time "choker" collars could be utilized to set in the back and the front of either garment. If you do not possess such things as choker collars watch the little lace shops, which deal in such articles. You may be able to strike a bargain. A round collar can be set in as a round yoke in a nightgown, with cuffs to match as finishes for the short ki-mono sleeves. Sometimes cuffs can be used as shoulder straps on a chemise, with the round collar set in as a motif. On blouses the Irish lace collar can be used in a bolero effect, for a vest, revers, bib or little coatee, depending entirely on the cut and shape. On frocks the uses of Irish lace are legion. On such fabrics as linens, organdies and voiles for spring and sum-mer wear Irish collars can be used to outline deep pockets, in bib effects, to define panels and apron fronts, to edge deeper collars and in the same ways as they are used on blouses. If you have some fine piece of this once popular lace stored away get it out and start to bleach it in the frost so that you will have it all fresh and to use when spring sewing starts in.

New Blouses.

Some of the latest blouses are singularly soft and graceful. A few fashioned from black net over white are made with a few perpendicular tucks. the sleeves full to the wrist, with a frill falling over the hand. Even the crepe de chine blouses are, many of them, made with a pointed piece falling from the wristband over the hand, the blouse itself opening in a V form at the neck, the edge with an open hemstitch about an inch wide. Brown is a fashionable blouse color, and brown chiffon tucked and worn over gold net is altogether charming. Vivid coloring, even in the embroideries, is not now the first fashion. The soft silk ones are wrought in dull shades, but are all the more effective for their subdued hues,

What Privileges They Had

A charitable lady was reading the Old Testament to an aged woman who lived at the home for old people, and chanced upon the passage concerning Solomon's household.

"Had Solomon really seven hundred wives?" enquired the old woman, after reflection.

"Oh, yes, Mary! It is so stated in the "Lor', mum," was the comment, "what

Quick Hauling to Market

UST think of the time the Ford saves a busy farmer in hauling milk to the cheese factory-vegetables, butter, eggs and poultry to market—fruit to the railway station. One fruit grower, last season, made four trips a day to the railway station, a total of 144 miles, and carried as high as 72 crates of 11 quarts each on a trip. He couldn't have made more than one 36 mile trip a day with a team.

The Ford soon pays for itself in the time it saves the farmer. With help so scarce, every farmer needs to make use of every precious minute of his time. To him the Ford car is a real necessity. Indeed, some farmers tell us that it is doubtful if they could carry on their farm work under present labor conditions if it wasn't for the time the Ford saves them.

No farmer need be without a Ford. In fact, the average farmer could afford one if it were double the price. It is as easy to drive as a horse, three times as fast, and costs less per mile to run, Why not order one today?

Lambton Deanery

The Spring meeting of the Deauery, of Lambton, was held in Christ Church, Forest, on Thursday last, morning, afternoon and evening. All parishes were represented except the southern most in the county, but the attendance from the others were expectionally large, this others were exceptionally large, this with a fine program made the meeting one of the best in the history of the deanery.

Among those present and taking part were Rural Dean Davis, Rev. F. Newton and Mr. Gabler of Sarnia, The latter gave a very interesting address on "Production" from the Sunday school teachers' viewpoint. Canon Davis had many interesting reminiscences of parish life, while Mr. Newton gave a very suggestive devotional address on "Natural Dependance" at the Communion Service in the morning.

The Rev. J. W. J. Andrews of St. Thomas, Sec. of the Missionary Society of Canadian Church in Huron Diocese spoke to a large gathering in the afternoon and Rev. Dr. Haslan of Kangra, at the evening service. The Doctor's many reasons for not calling on fellow citizens of the Indian Empire "common or unclean," backed by many apt stories from his own experience, left a profound impression upon his hearers. In an unforgetable way for over one hour and a half he unfolded the fascinating characters of India.
