MAKE COTTAGE CHEESE

Farmers and Townsfolk May Easily Have Their Own.

A Nutritive and Inexpensive Food—May Be Made From Sour or Skimmed Milk—Methods of Preparation Described.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

There are a great many kinds of cheese made in the world, but the easiest to make is cottage cheese.

A person living on a farm where there is a supply of milk can make not only for their own table but for market as well, while the towns-dweller who buys milk by the quart can use up small amounts left over in exactly the same way.

There is no need of wasting milk in the home just because it has become sour. It is true that small amounts of sour milk are often used when baking, but a person may not wish to use all of it in that way.

It is not necessary to use whole milk for making cottage cheese. Skimmed milk is quite satisfactory, and a small amount of cream may be added to the curd at the time of adding the salt.

There are two methods used in making cottage cheese, the "rennet method" and the "ordinary" or "heating method." We will speak of the heating method, as it is the one most commonly used in Ontario.

To make good flavored cheese it is necessary to have good clean flavored milk free from taints or odors. Have the fresh skimmed milk at a temperature of 65 to 75 deg. F. It can be allowed to sour naturally, or a small amount of good flavored sour skimmed milk or buttermilk may be added to hasten the souring and help control the flavor.

Allow the milk to stand undisturbed until it has nicely thickened when it will be ready for the next step of the process. Stir the coagulated milk to break it up evenly, then carefully heat it to separate the curd from the whey.

If only a small amount is being heated it may be placed in a double boiler. A larger quantity may be heated in a can or pail, while a cheesecloth is suitable for large quantities. If the water in the vessel surrounding the milk is kept between 140 and 150 deg. F. there will not be the danger of overheating or heating too quickly, which is often the case when the water is boiling.

There is usually a good separation of curd and whey when it is heated to a temperature between 90 and 100 deg. F. If the whey should not be clear when the temperature reaches 100 deg. do not heat higher, but allow the can to stand. The whey will likely become clear in a few minutes.

Avoid overheating the curd as it causes the cheese to be dry and crumbly.

Next, drain the curd. It may be hung up in cotton bags or it may be drained on cheesecloth placed over a rack or strainer.

When the free whey has drained away lift the cloth at one side and allow the curd to roll to the centre, then do the same with the other side. This will hasten the drainage. When sufficiently drained the curd should be salted, using about an ounce of salt to four or five pounds of cheese.

If the cheese were made from skimmed milk it will be necessary to add a little cream. About an ounce of cream for each pound of cheese will be sufficient.

After thoroughly mixing allow it to stand a little while for the salt to dissolve before putting it up in packages.

If a person were making a quantity it might be put up in pound packages by printing it with the butter-printer and wrapping in parchment paper. This is an inexpensive way of handling cottage cheese, but it is not as attractive as the little fibre containers coated with paraffine.

A person who is making butter on the farm might increase the returns from the dairy by making some cottage cheese each week, as there are many people who like cottage cheese but do not know where to get it. Cottage cheese is a food that is nutritious yet inexpensive and much more of it might be used.

Like all other foods, we find people who like it and those who do not, but in many cases the addition of some flavoring has made it acceptable.

Cottage cheese may be used in many ways. It may be eaten with cream and sugar, preserves or maple syrup, or an attractive dish may be made by making a nest of cottage cheese and placing a bit of jelly in the centre. Or it may be flavored by the addition of chopped nuts, olives or pimentos and moulded into any desired shape.

If a person has not a mould, a small box may be lined with waxed paper and the cheese packed in with a knife or spoon. When filled, fold over the ends of the papers and shake the cheese out of the box.

Cottage cheese salads are popular. A very simple salad is made by placing on a lettuce leaf a small mould or a heaping tablespoonful of cottage cheese then adding salad dressing; or a more fancy salad may be made by making the cheese into small balls and rolling them in chopped nuts. Cottage cheese may also be used as a sandwich filling by mixing it with chopped nuts, celery or dates or any other flavoring that may be desired.

Many recipes could be given for utilizing this dairy by-product, cottage cheese, but sufficient has been said to suggest its possibilities.—Miss Belle Millar, O. A. College, Guelph.

Unique "Angels."

Theatrical history is full of tales of "Angels." But surely no would-be star ever had a prettier story to tell than that of Mrs. M. A. Trestrail, first known to theatregoers as May Anderson. After playing with several road companies Mrs. Trestrail decided to make her home in Toronto with her two boys, and became director of dramatic art at the Canadian Academy of Music. When one of her young sons went to France, mother returned to the stage once more and played the dark mammy of Henry Miller's "Come Out of the Kitchen."

But now comes the pretty part of the story.

Her two boys have bought mother one of last year's New York successes, and she will be the first woman producing manager in Canada. New York theatrical magnates are paying tribute to the ability of various feminine stage managers whom they are now giving a chance. But thanks to the devotion of May Anderson's sons, their mother is going even one further than New York's latest fad.

Mrs. Trestrail is to play the Trans-Canada route from Halifax to Vancouver. It is interesting to note her play is also the work of a Canadian, Harvey O'Higgins, and his collaborator, Harriet Ford. It is the George Tyler comedy hit of last season, "On the Hiring Line," and is a satirical farce on the domestic servant problem. May Irwin starred in it.

No Rivals.

It was a geography lesson, and the teacher had been asking what some of the different counties in England were noted for. Looking at one of the little girls, she asked: "Tell me, Florence, what Rutlandshire is celebrated for?" For a moment the child was silent, then an inspiration apparently came to her. "Rutlandshire," replied the child, "is celebrated for being the only country in the kingdom that is the smallest."

All Complete.

Lady, at railway station, to porter: "Now, porter, are you sure I have all my luggage in the train?"
Porter: "Yes, ma'am—not even a Lady."
Lady: "Nothing left behind?"
Porter: "Nothing, ma'am—not even a copper."

"No Nation Can Rise Above The Level of Its Home Life"

RAISE the standard of living in the home and the standard of the nation rises with it.

Canada was one of the first countries to respond to the now world-wide movement to beautify the home. And there are no people in the world who are in a better position to afford and to appreciate the best and truest things in life than we in Canada.

Furnishings Mould Character

The important part that the furnishings of the home play in moulding character and developing a true pride in family and in race is better understood today than a few years ago.

How are children to be led to appreciate the solid, substantial things in life—the beauties of art, the love of good literature, the desire for culture—unless they have the proper surroundings in the home?

Improve the Home

Beautify the home with furniture that is designed on truly artistic lines. Make the home a place of cheerfulness, refinement and restfulness. Make it breathe warmth and heartiness. Make it truly hospitable, solidly comfortable—a home that inspires interest in all that is good and worth while in life—and it will mould character and develop true pride in family and in race.

To procure furniture that will elevate and make the house a home of which you can be justly proud does not call for extravagance. Good taste is more necessary than a large expenditure of money.

There are beautiful suites and individual pieces of furniture obtainable at moderate cost, which are true works of art, many of them being correct adaptations of the designs of the "old masters" who created the "Period Furniture" so much in vogue today.

A "Queen Anne" Room

As a suggestion, study our sketch of a "Queen Anne" bedroom. It shows the beautiful and refined effect obtained by the selection of an artistic suite of bedroom furniture.

Just two or three pieces of artistically designed furniture will raise the level of an entire living room. And by gradually adding other pieces and suites in the different rooms, you will, before long, work a magical transformation of the home.

A Finer and Greater Nation

Every advance in refinement and culture, every improvement in the home surroundings, every influence that raises the ideals of home-life, makes the nation that much finer and stronger.

We are living in progressive, prosperous times in a country with a glorious future, therefore, Canadians have every incentive and can well afford to beautify their homes with new and better furniture.

Miss Isabella Newell is again with the Wire Works, having been away for over a year.

Miss Alice Horlock, who recently came to Watford from Guilford, England, has joined the Wire Works staff.

Mr. Harry Thomas has been kept from his work for several days as a result of a fall while helping to erect some steel work. Mr. Thomas is reported improving.

Supt. W. L. Millar has closed a deal with James Holt for his house and two lots adjoining the Wire Works property. Mr. Holt, however, reserves the use of the house until next spring, when he expects to make a trip back to England with his family.

The Wire Works recently made a proposal to the Reeve and several members of the Council that the town continue the water main down the company's lane, a distance of 250 feet and place a fire hydrant at the end. In case this was done, the Company agreed to erect a fire hose house over the hydrant and equip it with 300 feet of standard fire hose which would reach to any building on the premises and would also be available at all times for loan should a conflagration in another part of the town require more hose than the town possessed. The Company contended that they were not amply protected if the nearest hydrant was on Wall street and the fire hose kept four blocks away, citing for example the case of the fire they had in February, 1916, when the hose never got to the fire because of heavy roads. The Wire Works also expected to take a connection off this pipe line to supply their shop needs for which they expected to pay regular meter rates. The consumption of the shop is estimated at 500,000 gallons per year, which would no doubt make the Wire Works the town's banner customer. The cost to lay this main now while the ditcher is here would be less than $600 and the revenue to the town would offset it in three or four years. But the Council turned the proposal down flat, so it looks like the Wire Works will continue to use its own well and the town will be without a revenue from this source.

LAMBTON'S 149, I. O. D. E.

Mrs. R. H. Stapleford was the cheery hostess at a most successful "At Home" held at her residence on Front street on Monday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock under the auspices of Lambton's 149, I.O.D.E. Mrs. Rogers helped to welcome the guests and Mrs. Crichton poured tea in the dining-room at the pretty table which was decorated with huge golden chrysanthemums on a cluny lace centre. As the early dark came on pale yellow candles were lighted and the rooms made more attractive in their soft glow. Mrs. Millar and Mrs. Morningstar assisted in the tearoom and Blanche Stapleford, Marjory Swift and Louise Dodds made themselves indispensable both at the piano and in passing tea. The proceeds amounted to $23.

Lambton's 149, I.O.D.E., will hold a dance in the Armory New Year's Eve. Particulars later.

I. O. U.

By CORONA REMINGTON

"I tell you, son," Mr. Losmond continued, "if you don't stop fooling around that Blake girl you'll marry her sure; then I'll disinherit you."
"But, father, I'm not in love with Miss Blake, and wouldn't marry her if she were the only girl in the world."
"Well, that may be all right, but there's something I want you to do for me. I want you to go to California to your Uncle Will Bennett's and stay on his ranch for awhile and learn something of country life. I wrote to him about it, and he said he'd be glad to have you."

Jack thought a moment. His father was evidently set upon his going, and, anyhow, a trip to California would not be so bad; so why not? After brief mental calculation he replied:
"I'll be ready next Wednesday."

"Good! That's settled. I'll write to your uncle and tell him when to expect you."

A few days of bustling preparations and Jack found himself ready for the trip. When Wednesday morning arrived he boarded the through sleeper for San Francisco, and seated himself with a light heart as he idly watched the hurrying, scurrying crowds outside waving goodbyes to the slowly moving train. He sat immersed in thought for a few moments, but his attention was soon distracted by the gruff voice of the Pullman conductor speaking to the passenger in the opposite seat:
"Well, lady, you can't stay here unless you have got the money to pay for it—you'll have to go in the day coach."

"But day coaches don't go all the way to San Francisco, and I'm alone, and I'd have to stop at hotels on the way," the passenger protested.
Beneath a perky little touque Jack saw a most bewitching face that wore an expression of much perplexity. The young man promptly sided with the distressed little creature across the aisle, and, drawing a card from his pocket, touched the conductor on the arm.

"Please give this to the young lady," he said, "and ask her to permit me to lend her the necessary money—it would be a pleasure."
Without waiting for the message to be repeated, the girl glanced at the card and addressed Jack directly:
"It's so good of you to offer, Mr. Losmond, I—I don't know what to do about it, but guess I'll have to accept. Here's my card. I'll return it as soon as I reach San Francisco."

As she smiled her thanks two fascinating dimples appeared, then disappeared so rapidly that Jack could not be sure that he had seen them after all. He hoped she would smile again. After the conductor had gone he wanted to talk to his fair neighbor, but Miss Westell seemed to consider the matter closed, for she soon buried herself in a book and the morning passed uneventfully. When luncheon was announced, he decided to wait until the girl should arise, in the hope of being able to offer to escort her to the dinner, but Edith Westell showed no signs of moving. Suddenly it occurred to him that possibly she had no money to pay for her meal, since he had only handed to the conductor enough to pay for her Pullman fare. He addressed her in his most engaging tones:
"Beg pardon, Miss Westell, but won't you take lunch with me? I'd be charmed if you would."

She puckered up her forehead for a second, as if debating, then:
"Since I'm nearly starved and it's my only chance of getting something to eat, I guess I'd better accept your kindness, though it does seem dreadfully unconventional; but I'm ravenously hungry."

"Let's forget conventions until we reach San Francisco," he suggested.
"But I think it would be better for me to borrow more money, and pay for my own lunch," she replied.
"I'm afraid I can't lend you any more," he returned with mock seriousness.

The girl looked up and caught the twinkle in his dark eyes and smiled despite her attempt at being dignified.
"Well," she said, "I'll have to accept this time. Let's go at once, please; I'm famished."
Mr. Losmond ordered the meal and watched the girl sitting opposite him with fascinated interest. Her face wore an expression of eager anticipation.

"You seem to be interested in things," he remarked.
"Having had nothing to eat since last night, and possessing an abnormally good appetite, I naturally am."
"Too bad," he sympathized. "I never dreamed what you'd run your breakfast."

"No, I—I'm running away, and that's how I came to be short of money." She blushed at her own confession.
"You seem remarkably calm for one who is running away," he laughed.
"But I really am, all the same. My parents believe I'm safe and sound in New York."

"I should think they'd have missed you by now and be wiring all over creation," he put in.
"Oh, no. I took care they shouldn't get alarmed so soon, by telling them that I was tired of everything and was going to bury myself at a friend's house for a whole week, and didn't want them to try to find me or to communicate with me in any way. At the end of that time I promised to let them hear from me, and they agreed, because they say that I've never gotten into any mischief; so I'm a 'trusty' and they let me do as I like as a rule—about things that aren't very important," she ended a little bitterly.

"I admit I'm puzzled to know why you're running away from such lenient parents," he said.
Miss Westell blushed at this and looked out of the window. Finally she spoke:
"I don't know why I'm telling you all this, but I guess it's because you lent me the money I needed. I'm running away because my mother and father want me to—to marry a man I don't want to marry, and I know that if they keep on talking and he keeps on talking to me, I'll marry him in spite of myself."

"I think you were perfectly justified in running away," he assured her, while beneath the table he gripped his napkin as if it were some one's neck.
"Do you really mean it? It's so good to hear you say it," she confessed.
During the rest of the trip they were almost constantly together, reading to each other or exchanging anecdotes of their past lives, and when at last the day of arrival came, Jack and Edith left the train together, he carrying her bag and guiding her through the crowd. With a thrill he realized how very "husbandly" he must look. He glanced hastily around for his uncle, soon to see him and his daughter looking eagerly about.

Louisa saw Jack first and sped toward him, her face rippling with smiles, but to his astonishment she rushed straight up to Miss Westell and threw her arms around her, bubbling greetings and welcome. Losmond held his breath in amazement.
"You old dear, whatever brought you here?" Louisa asked excitedly, and went on without waiting for an answer. "And here's Cousin Jack. Why didn't you tell us you were going to bring Edith with you? I didn't even know you knew her."
"Is he your cousin?" Edith inquired.
"What a surprise!"
Then turning to Mr. Losmond she explained: "Louisa and I went to college together, and were the very chums of chums."
Now Jack began to understand. Louisa towed Edith away and seated her in the back of the waiting machine, leaving Mr. Bennett to take care of his nephew.

"I didn't know you knew the little Westell girl. She's a great favorite with us," Bennett said as they settled themselves on the front seat of the car.
"Sure! We've known each other for ages. Haven't we, Edith?" he called daintily over his shoulder.
"I should say so, Jack," she smiled, with a gurgle of ill-suppressed laughter.
"In fact, we're—the man went on, his heart thumping.

er dreamed but what you'd run your breakfast."

"No, I—I'm running away, and that's how I came to be short of money." She blushed at her own confession.

"You seem remarkably calm for one who is running away," he laughed.

"But I really am, all the same. My parents believe I'm safe and sound in New York."

"I should think they'd have missed you by now and be wiring all over creation," he put in.

"Oh, no. I took care they shouldn't get alarmed so soon, by telling them that I was tired of everything and was going to bury myself at a friend's house for a whole week, and didn't want them to try to find me or to communicate with me in any way. At the end of that time I promised to let them hear from me, and they agreed, because they say that I've never gotten into any mischief; so I'm a 'trusty' and they let me do as I like as a rule—about things that aren't very important," she ended a little bitterly.

"I admit I'm puzzled to know why you're running away from such lenient parents," he said.

Miss Westell blushed at this and looked out of the window. Finally she spoke:
"I don't know why I'm telling you all this, but I guess it's because you lent me the money I needed. I'm running away because my mother and father want me to—to marry a man I don't want to marry, and I know that if they keep on talking and he keeps on talking to me, I'll marry him in spite of myself."

"I think you were perfectly justified in running away," he assured her, while beneath the table he gripped his napkin as if it were some one's neck.

"Do you really mean it? It's so good to hear you say it," she confessed.

During the rest of the trip they were almost constantly together, reading to each other or exchanging anecdotes of their past lives, and when at last the day of arrival came, Jack and Edith left the train together, he carrying her bag and guiding her through the crowd. With a thrill he realized how very "husbandly" he must look. He glanced hastily around for his uncle, soon to see him and his daughter looking eagerly about.

Louisa saw Jack first and sped toward him, her face rippling with smiles, but to his astonishment she rushed straight up to Miss Westell and threw her arms around her, bubbling greetings and welcome. Losmond held his breath in amazement.

"You old dear, whatever brought you here?" Louisa asked excitedly, and went on without waiting for an answer. "And here's Cousin Jack. Why didn't you tell us you were going to bring Edith with you? I didn't even know you knew her."

"Is he your cousin?" Edith inquired.
"What a surprise!"
Then turning to Mr. Losmond she explained: "Louisa and I went to college together, and were the very chums of chums."

Now Jack began to understand. Louisa towed Edith away and seated her in the back of the waiting machine, leaving Mr. Bennett to take care of his nephew.

"I didn't know you knew the little Westell girl. She's a great favorite with us," Bennett said as they settled themselves on the front seat of the car.
"Sure! We've known each other for ages. Haven't we, Edith?" he called daintily over his shoulder.
"I should say so, Jack," she smiled, with a gurgle of ill-suppressed laughter.

"In fact, we're—the man went on, his heart thumping.
"Jack, how dare you!" the girl exclaimed.
"All right, dear, we'll keep it till later if you'd rather."
"This is too wonderful! I'm simply knocked off my feet," said Louisa breathlessly.
"I am, too," said Edith.
"I am, too," said Jack, blissfully.

PAN-AMERICANISM.

Chief Apostle Wants Co-operation of Canada.

John Barrett, the unique, the irrepressible, the lovable, finally has retired from the directorship of the Pan-American Union after 25 years devoted to the public service. 14 of them spent in the upbuilding of the Pan-American Union. He is succeeded by the capable Dr. L. S. Rowe, a former assistant secretary of the Treasury, later in charge of Latin American affairs for many years. Mr. Barrett resigned for the reason, which he frankly states, that if he remained much longer at his present post he would find himself "in danger of going eventually from the beautiful Pan-American Union, which he loves with the affection of a parent for its favorite child, to the lowly poorhouse." Mr. Barrett says that after spending a month with his aged mother at the family homestead in Grafton, Vt., and a brief trip to Panama to assist in the inauguration there of the new Pan-American College of Commerce, he will establish connections in large American and possibly some Latin American cities as a general counsellor and adviser in Pan-American and other international affairs, based on his long official experience.

An entirely separate and civil project of international character, however, to which he will contribute his spare time and which will most appeal to public interest, will be the carrying to early completion of the organization, already initiated by him, of a great popular and practical "League of American Nations and Peoples," which will probably be known either as the "League of the Americas," or the "Pan-American League." Its purpose will be to organize effectively for Pan-American progress, prosperity and peace that large and rapidly growing number of men and women in North, Central and South America who realize the immense possibilities for the good of the Americas which will result from their economic, social and intellectual co-operation, free from political, governmental or official control. This league will in no sense be a special agency of the United States for advantage over the other American countries or antagonistic to Europe or Asia, Mr. Barrett says, but a natural and logical co-operative effort of Western Hemisphere peoples, from Canada to Chile, for Western Hemisphere good.

A new and important feature will be the active participation of Canadians, who heretofore have been treated to a degree as outside of the Pan-American family. It will not rival in any way or clash with the work and prerogatives of the Pan-American Union, as a great international office which is strictly official and hence limited in its popular activities. It will co-operate with and enlarge upon the work of the powerful Pan-American Society of United States, whose headquarters are in New York city and of which Mr. Barrett had the honor to be the founder several years ago.

One day a friend advised me to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery so I sent to my druggist for a bottle and when I had taken half of it I felt a great deal better. When I used the bottle I sent for two more, and when I finished the third bottle I was completely cured. ## Saved Lives of Husband and Wife

THERE is a pathetic instance of a little Toronto family, sadly handicapped owing to the War. The young husband suffered a serious head wound at Passchendaele. Months later, he was invalided home to his wife and two little sons. But the trouble was not over. Violent convulsions followed. Finally the dangerous operation of removing a bone splinter from the brain was performed, and the man is recovering. Just as happiness seemed within their grasp, the wife developed tuberculosis. Never of rugged health, anxiety and care had exhausted her strength. If her life was to be saved, complete rest was imperative. But the money—

To-day, thanks to those who back up the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives, she is there, gaining daily under careful treatment, and before long the family will be re-united. Contributions may be sent to Sir William Gage, 84 Spadina Avenue, Toronto, or to Geo. A. Reid, Treasurer, 225 College Street, Toronto.

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. Some Insulating Materials and Their Appreciation.

Cork Dust and Dried Forest Leaves Are Better Insulators Than Wood Shavings or Sawdust—Even Temperature in the Hive Important.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THE results of the relative non-conductivity of some bee-hive insulating materials are given below as the result of tests, 100 being the standard:

Very fine black regranulated cork (dust form), 100.

Chopped straw, 86.

Coarse black regranulated cork, 85.

Forest leaves (well dried), 84.

Granulated cork, light or natural color. This is the grade usually used as packing about imported Malaga grapes for instance, 84.

8-20 grade granulated cork (natural color). It looks similar to preceding one but it is a little coarser in grain and lighter in weight, 80.

Sawdust, very dry and from well seasoned and clean lumber, 68.

Excelsior—grade used in packing boxes, 60.

Planer shavings, 60.

The lesson of this table is that the fine black cork dust is the poorest conductor of heat or the best insulator so far as the resistance of the passage of heat is concerned, and planer shavings is the best conductor of heat, and therefore the poorest insulator of the nine substances tested. The fact should be emphasized that these results do not tell us anything about the substances except their power to conduct heat. It may be that if they were tried out as insulation for bee-hives we would arrange them differently than as given above. There are other properties besides conductivity of heat that figure in practice, and a consideration of these is my second purpose as announced at the beginning.

A good insulating material necessarily is a poor conductor of heat, but all non-conductors are not necessarily good insulators in practice, or, at any rate, not always desirable or satisfactory. Next to non-conductivity is low moisture absorption or the ability to keep comparatively dry in weather conditions. Experts in bee-keeping say that high moisture content in the hive is fatal to the bees since it causes dysentery among them. Let us assume that the air in a hive is very moist, say at a normal temperature, and the temperature goes down several degrees owing to inadequate protection or insulation about them, and see what happens. The result is exactly the same condition we all have often observed on the outside of a water jug filled with cold water and set in warm air. Moisture congeals on the outside of the jug, and it becomes cold and clammy and the water drips from it and makes everything else it touches wet. Likewise the dew is formed. The physical reason for these phenomena is the fact that cold air cannot hold in the invisible or vapor form as much moisture as warm air can.

Some of the moisture held at high temperature must appear as drops of water at the lower temperature, or in other words there is a rain, and a rain in a bee-hive is a serious matter, but it can be prevented by controlling the temperature inside the hive. Herein exists one of the most important uses of the insulation about the hive. Other reasons why an insulation should not absorb moisture are that moisture increases the conductivity of the insulation for heat and also makes it more liable to deterioration and decay. A good old maxim regarding success says, "Keep your powder dry." With equal emphasis it may be said: "Keep your insulation dry if you would protect your bees well and give them a fair chance to succeed."

Of the substances listed in the foregoing list granulated cork, forest leaves (if dried for one year ahead) and planer shavings are the poorest absorbers of moisture. Sawdust usually is too green and dirty to be very dry at the very best, and decays in rapidly, and chopped straw unless very well ripened and cured may be objectionable in the same way as sawdust. Then, too, rats and mice are apt to bother it seriously. The insulation must be odorless, else the bees may leave the hives. It must be readily available and reasonably cheap, and in these particulars forest leaves, chopped straw and planer shavings are foremost. It also should be easy and agreeable to handle and pack in position, and not subject to spontaneous combustion.

Thirdly, the main reason for insulating the hives, especially in the winter season under outside conditions, is to conserve the bees own warmth so that they can live comfortably and not have to eat an extraordinary amount of food in order to maintain a normal temperature. The bees get their warmth and energy from the food eaten, and it is the function of the hive and the extra insulation to keep this heat from being wasted in cold weather in the surrounding atmosphere. A second reason is to maintain an even temperature in the hive, and this pertains both to summer and winter, or to any season in fact. The insulation assists in preventing extremes of temperature in the hive as a large body of water does to the adjacent land areas. Another reason, and not the least because mentioned last, is that a good insulating material the hives provides a drier, and therefore a healthier and in all respects a better atmosphere for the bees than could be possible otherwise. Surely these are sufficiently good reasons why a hive should be protected by an efficient insulation. Flax chaff and a fine excelsior known as wood wool may also prove good insulations for bee-hives.—R. R. Graham, O. A. College, Guelph.

Music in Schools.

From recent developments in Western Canadian educational circles, it would appear that the bonds of hope will soon be cast aside. Saskatchewan provides that music shall be an optional study in the High Schools of that province. This provision states also that credit will be given for a musical education received elsewhere. The candidate presenting official evidence of having obtained a certificate in piano or theory may be exempted from examination in algebra or agriculture, Latin or Greek. This shows what the world is coming to. Imagine music being accepted in place of algebra as part of the training necessary for a second-class certificate in the old days!

For Sea-going Craft.

For sea-going craft a window has been invented containing a disk of glass which is revolved by an electric motor, throwing off rain or spray that falls on it and affording clear vision at all times.

Straw Braid Trimming.

A very odd trimming is seen on some of the new satin models. It is a bristly straw braid sewn to the frock in a conventional design very much after the manner of old-fashioned braiding. The effect is extremely novel. By combining embroidery done in heavy black silk threads with this straw braid great elaboration is obtained.

CATES—MANNING
A pretty autumn wedding was solemnized in the presence of over forty guests at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Manning, Mapledell Farm, Plympton, on Saturday, November 6th, when their eldest daughter, Ellen Frances, was united in marriage to Mr. William Charles Cates, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Cates, Warwick, the Rev. S. Muxworthy, B.A., officiating. The bride was given away by her father and took her place under an arch of white chrysanthemums to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march which was beautifully rendered by Miss Margaret Muxworthy. The bride carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses and was becomingly gowned in white crepe de chene with the customary bridal veil. The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful pearl pendant and to the pianist a sterling silver serviette holder. After a dainty repast the young couple left for a trip to points east, the bride traveling in navy tricolore with hat to match. Upon their return they will reside at their home near Forest.

Then have on hand our "REXALL REMEDIES" which you can use until the family doctor comes. Having these things on hand may prevent serious results from blood poisoning and not allow pneumonia to "take hold." Have remedies in the household on which you can "rely."
